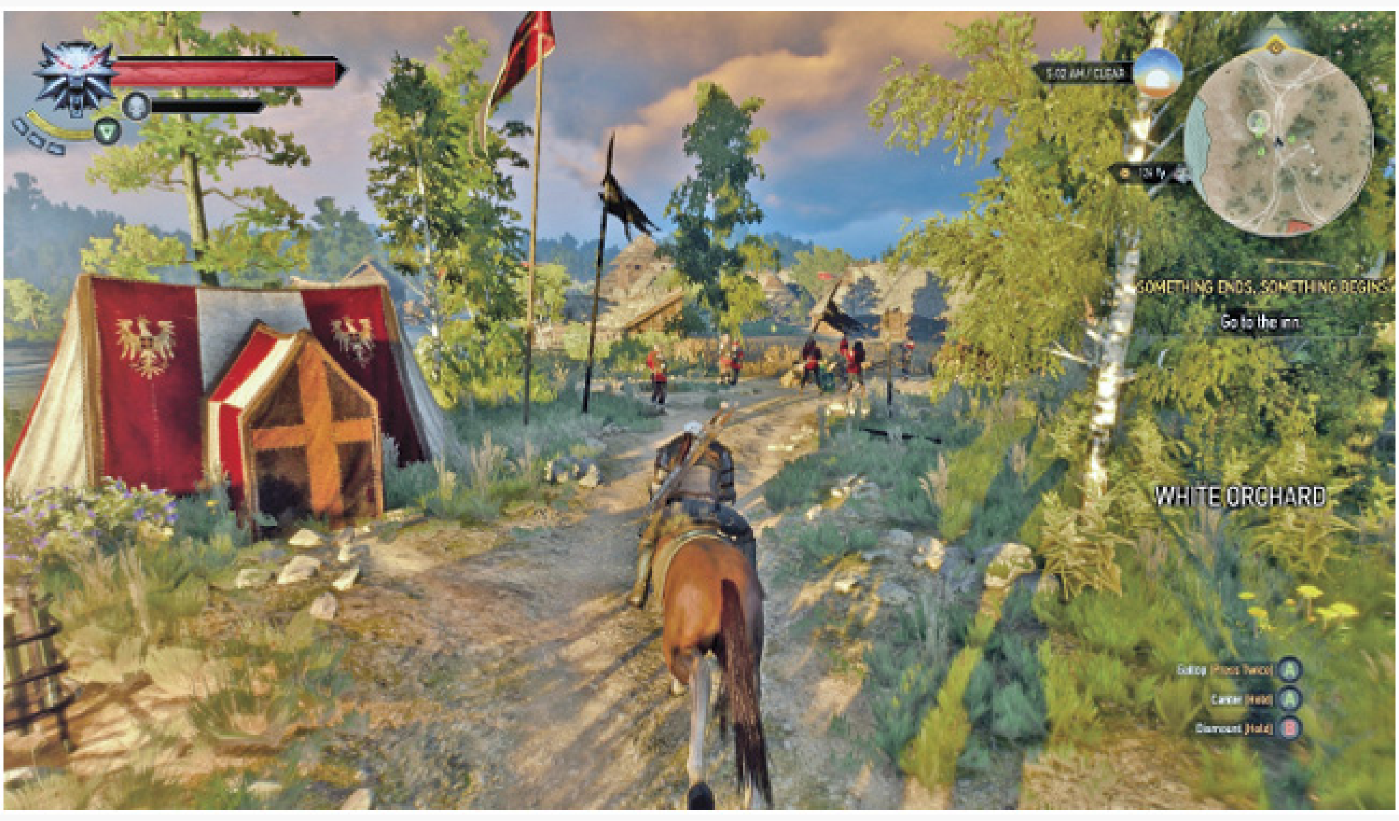
▶ Ending III (III): The Redanian tents are here, as the troops go from hut to hut, looking for nonhumans and mages alike. As you head past one cottage, a small boy flags you down. Soldiers have half his family bound up in a nearby hut. Enter and slaughter the four Redanian soldiers inside (if you wish). Then ride to the tavern, which bears Radovid's propaganda.



SOMETHING ENDS, SOMETHING BEGINS
Go to the inn
WHITE ORCHARD

Enter the tavern and continue to the table where the hooded woman is sitting. You inform Ciri that the deed is done. She asks if the emperor believed you. You don't care either way. You talk of your next contract, and present Ciri's fine new blade. She'll have plenty of opportunities to wield it... as a Witcher!

DECISIONS, DECISIONS

This quest now concludes. After the Credits roll, you can continue to complete some, but not all Secondary Quests, though the Main Quest has now finished.

Main Quest: Endings

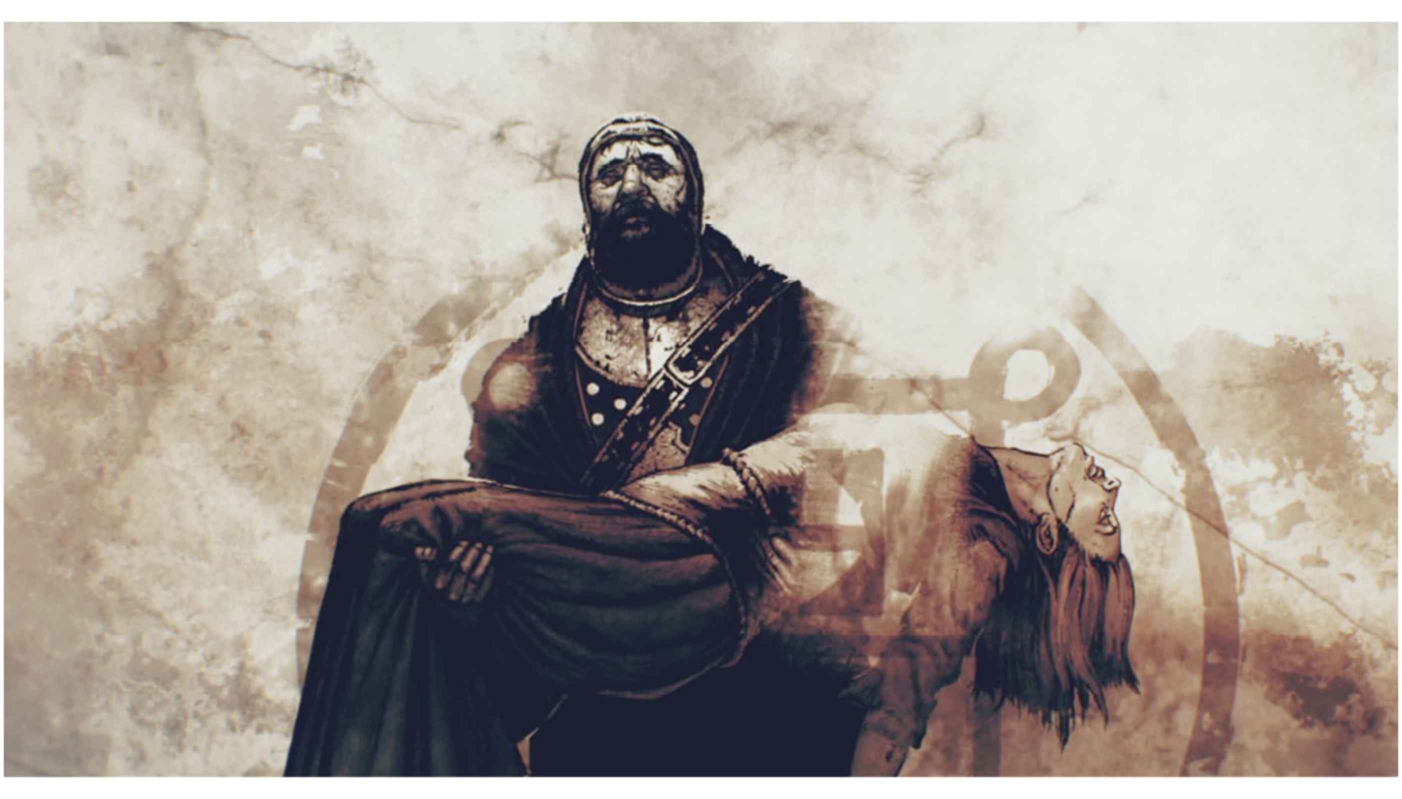
Character Endings

Congratulations, Witcher! You've made it to the end of your main adventure. Before you continue your explorations after the Credits roll, be aware of all the different endings that you can obtain, and how to obtain them. Some of these ending scenes play out prior to the very end of the Main Quest.

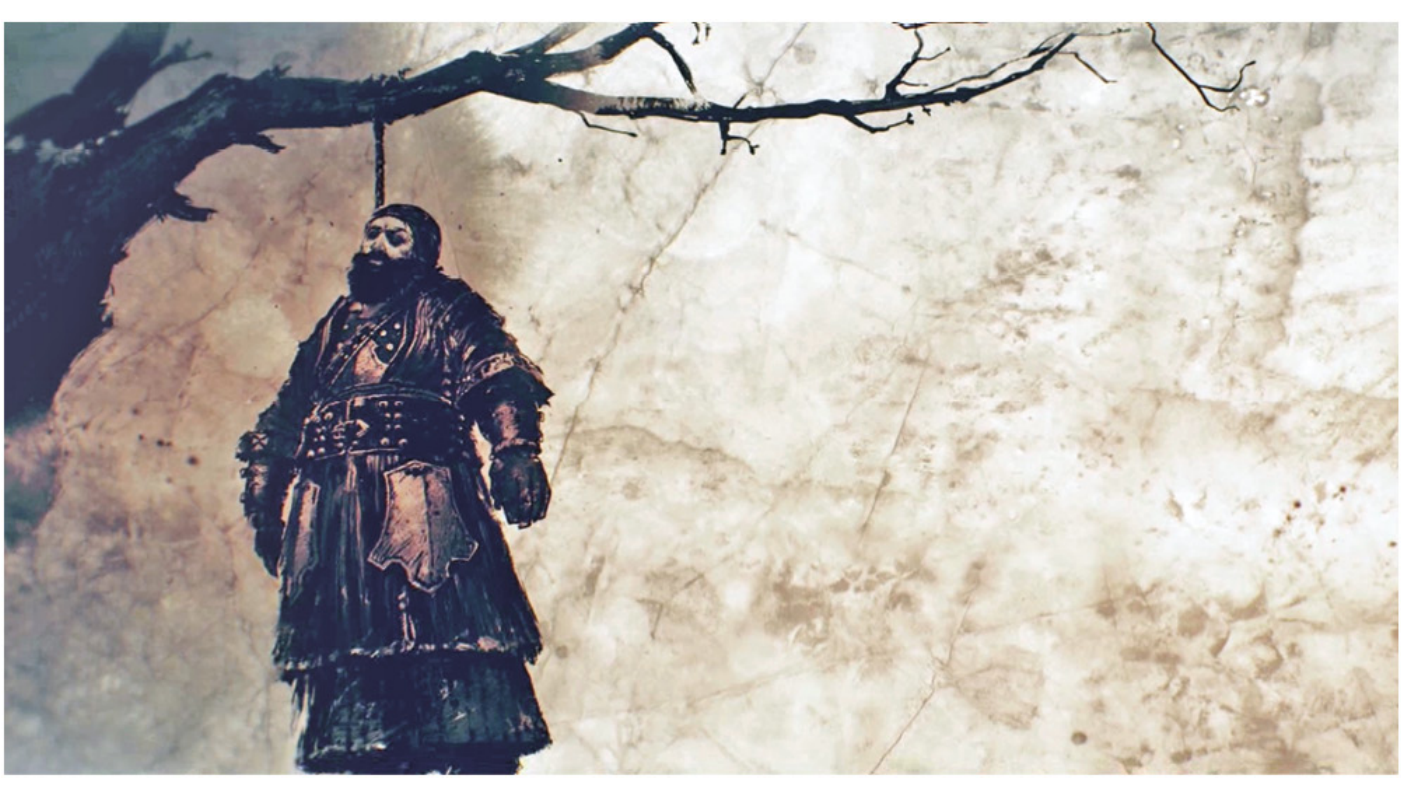
The following details the fates of characters prior to the end of the Main Quest.

CONCLUSION 1: THE FATE OF THE BLOODY BARON

A Changed Man: The Baron takes his wife Anna to the Blue Mountains, if you killed the tree spirit during Main Quest: The Whispering Hillock, and completed Main Quest: Return to Crookback Bog (since the Baron's wife Anna was turned mad by the crones).

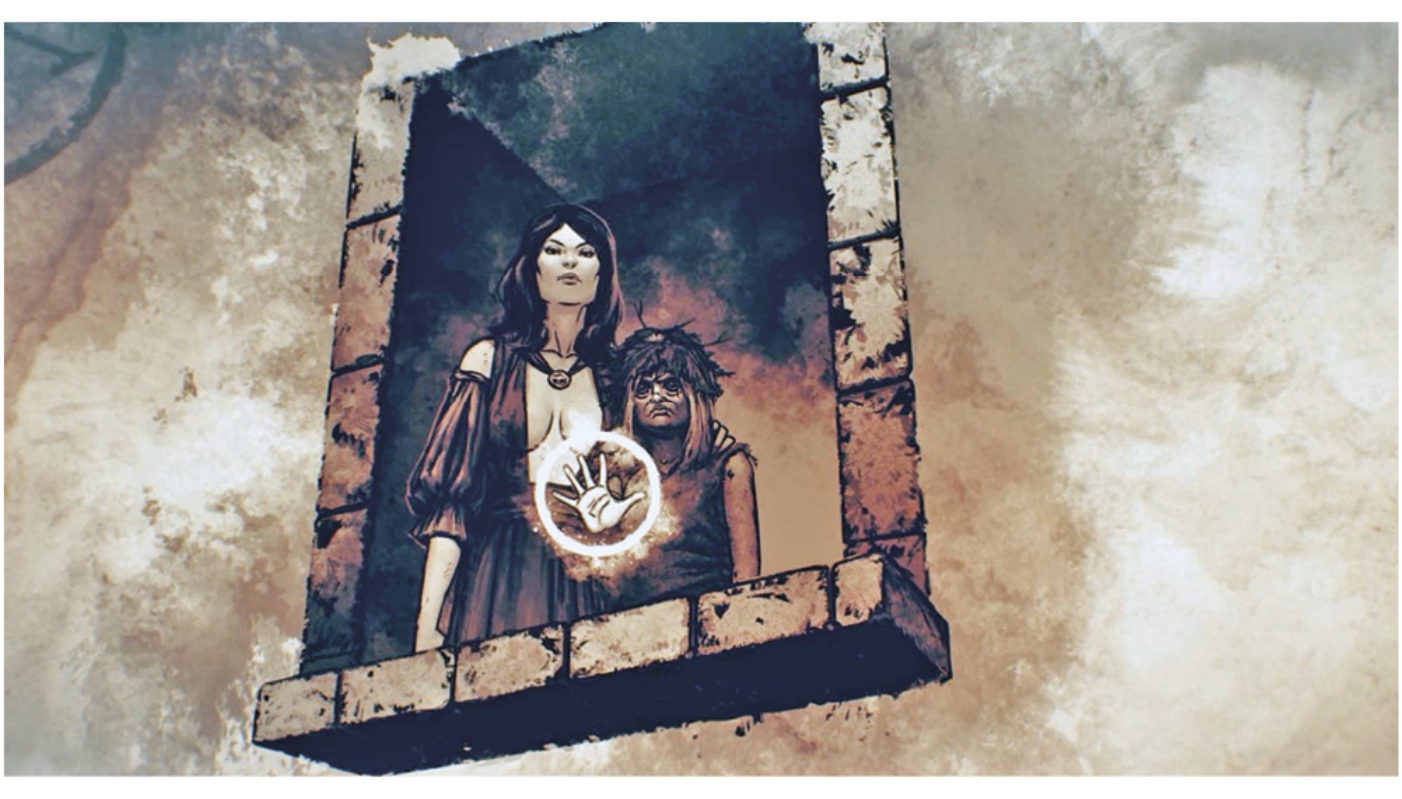


The Hanged Man: The Baron hangs himself, if you freed the tree spirit during Main Quest: The Whispering Hillock, and completed Main Quest: Return to Crookback Bog (since the Baron's wife Anna was turned into a grotesque hag and died).

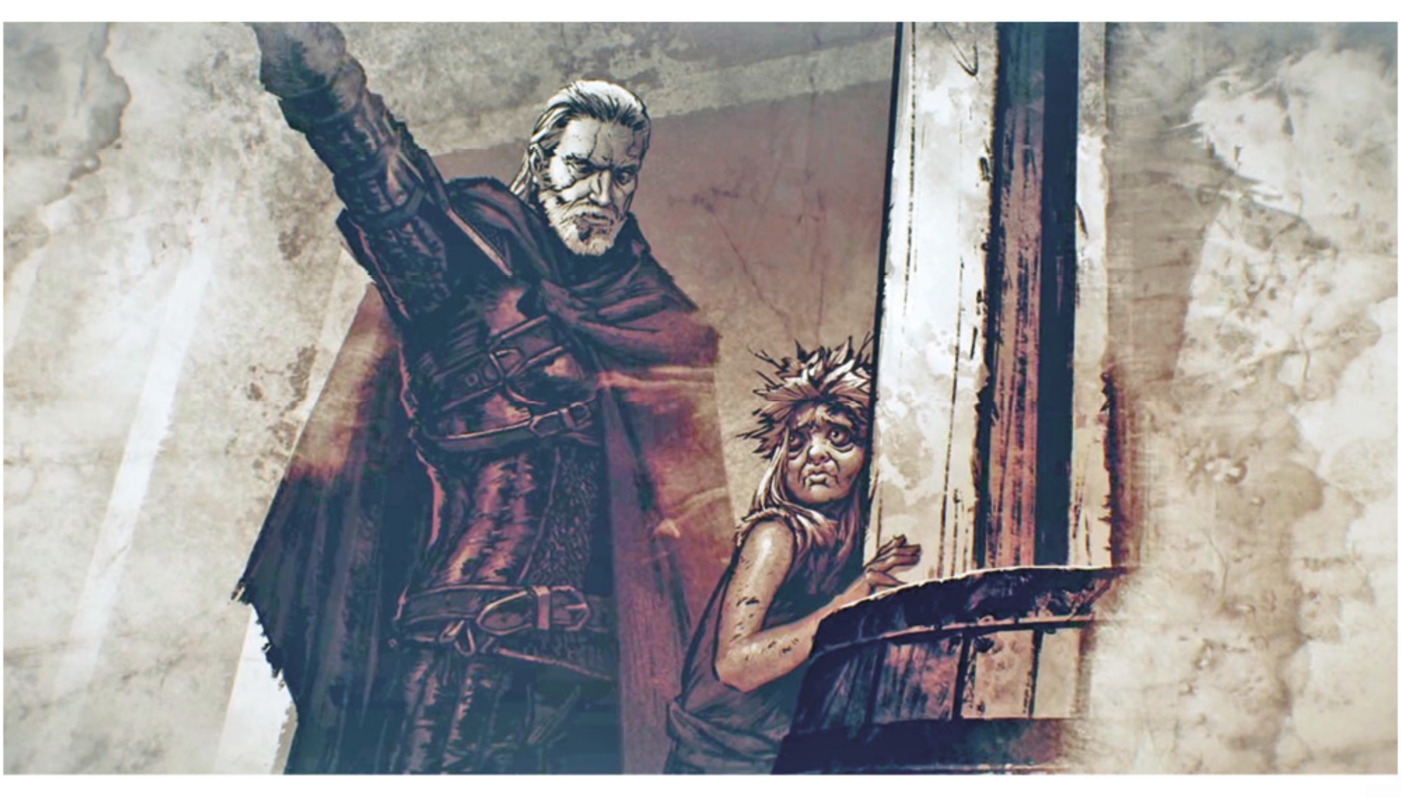


CONCLUSION 2: THE FATE OF SARA THE GODLING

In Godling We Trust: Sara stays in the dream house of Novigrad, if you chose to make a deal with her during Main Quest: Novigrad Dreaming. You can visit Sara and Corrine in the house, where they live together.

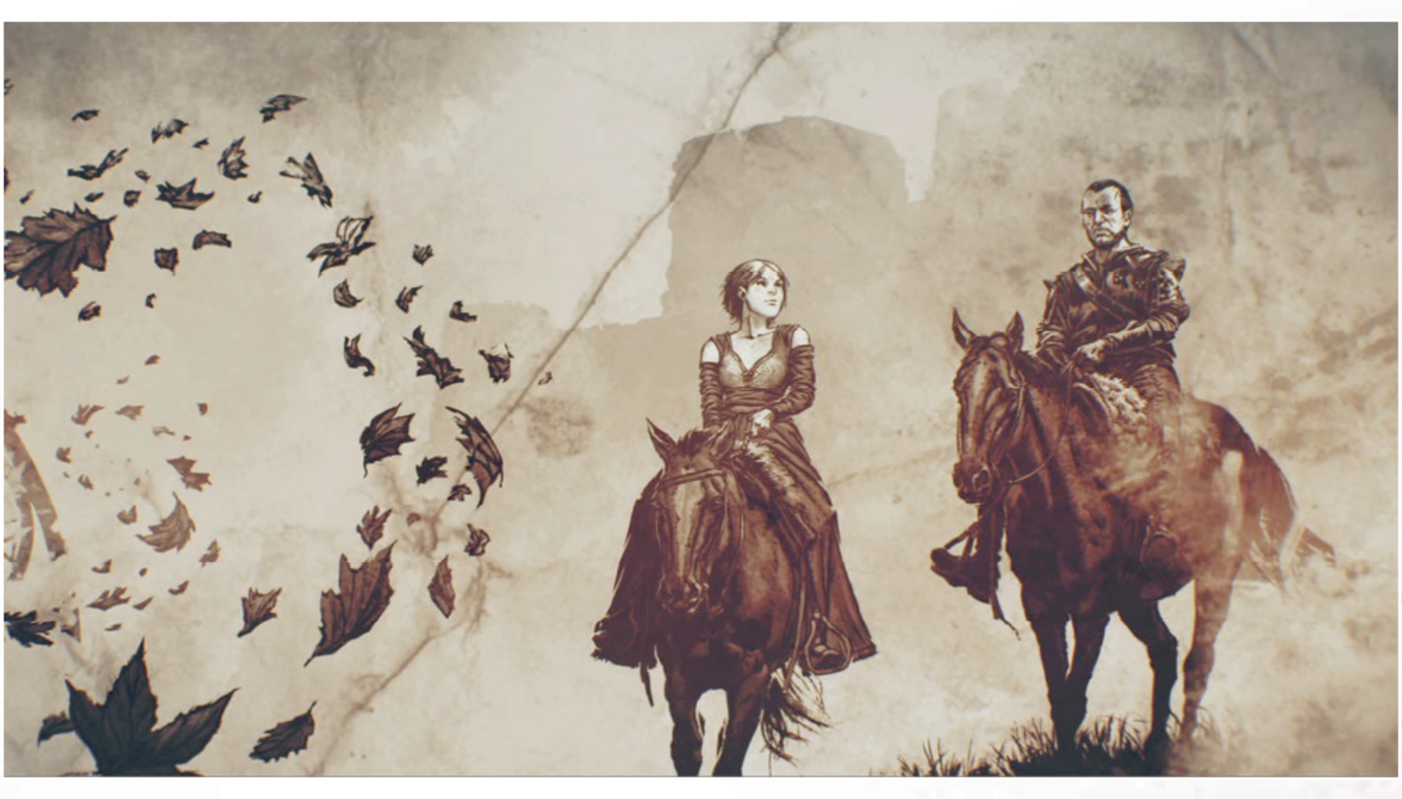


Banishment: Sara is cast out of the dream house of Novigrad, if you chose to throw her out during Main Quest: Novigrad Dreaming. She appears during Main Quest: Bald Mountain, having met and befriended Johnny.

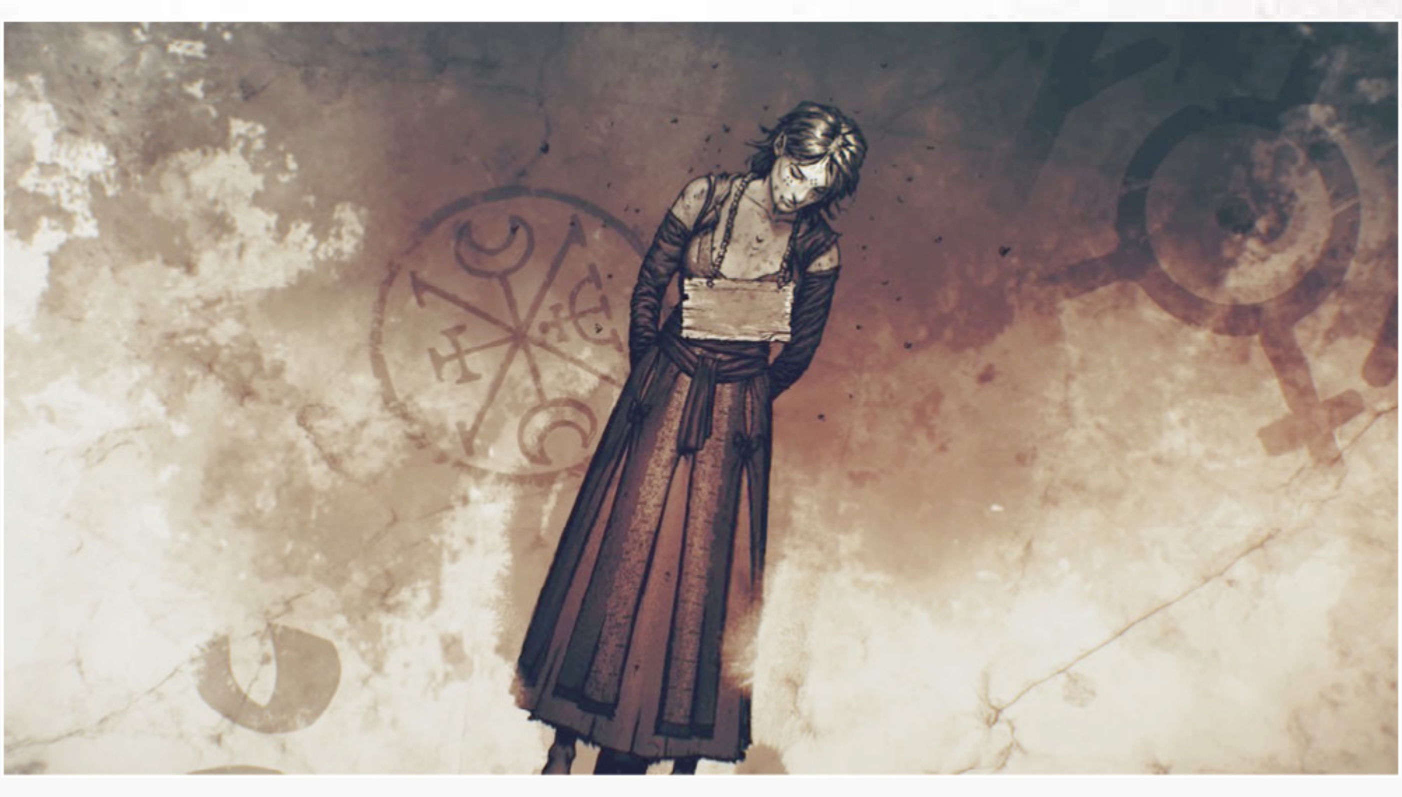


CONCLUSION 3: THE FATE OF KEIRA METZ

A New Friend: Having fought in the Battle of Kaer Morhen, the sorceress befriended the Witcher Lambert, and took him with her on her further adventurers. An odd couple to be sure, if you chose to convince her to head to Kaer Morhen during Secondary Quest: For the Advancement of Learning.

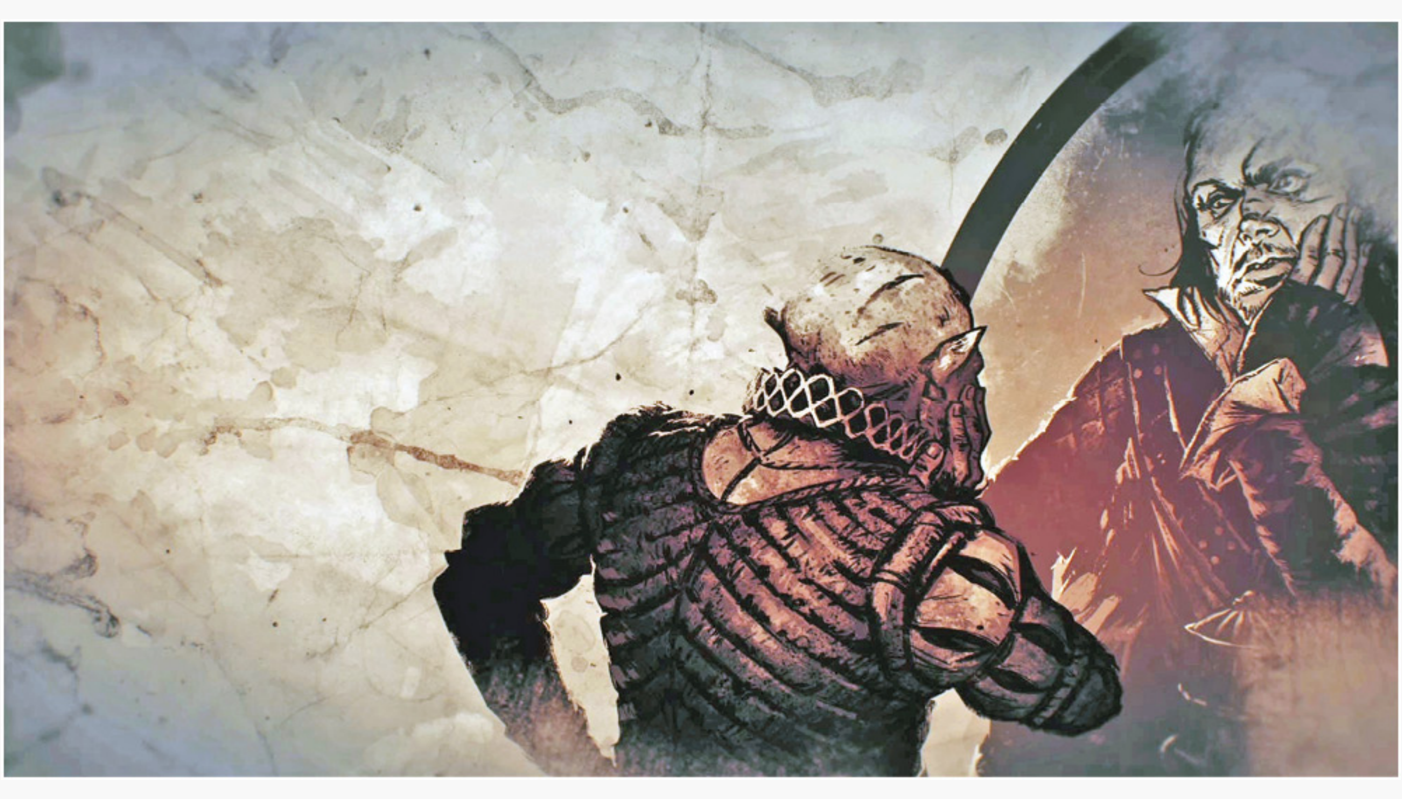


A Savage End: Headstrong but very, very wrong in her opinion that she could change Radovid's mind about her magical abilities. She was made an example of and put on a stake in Hierarch Square, if you chose to agree she should go to Radovid during Secondary Quest: For the Advancement of Learning.

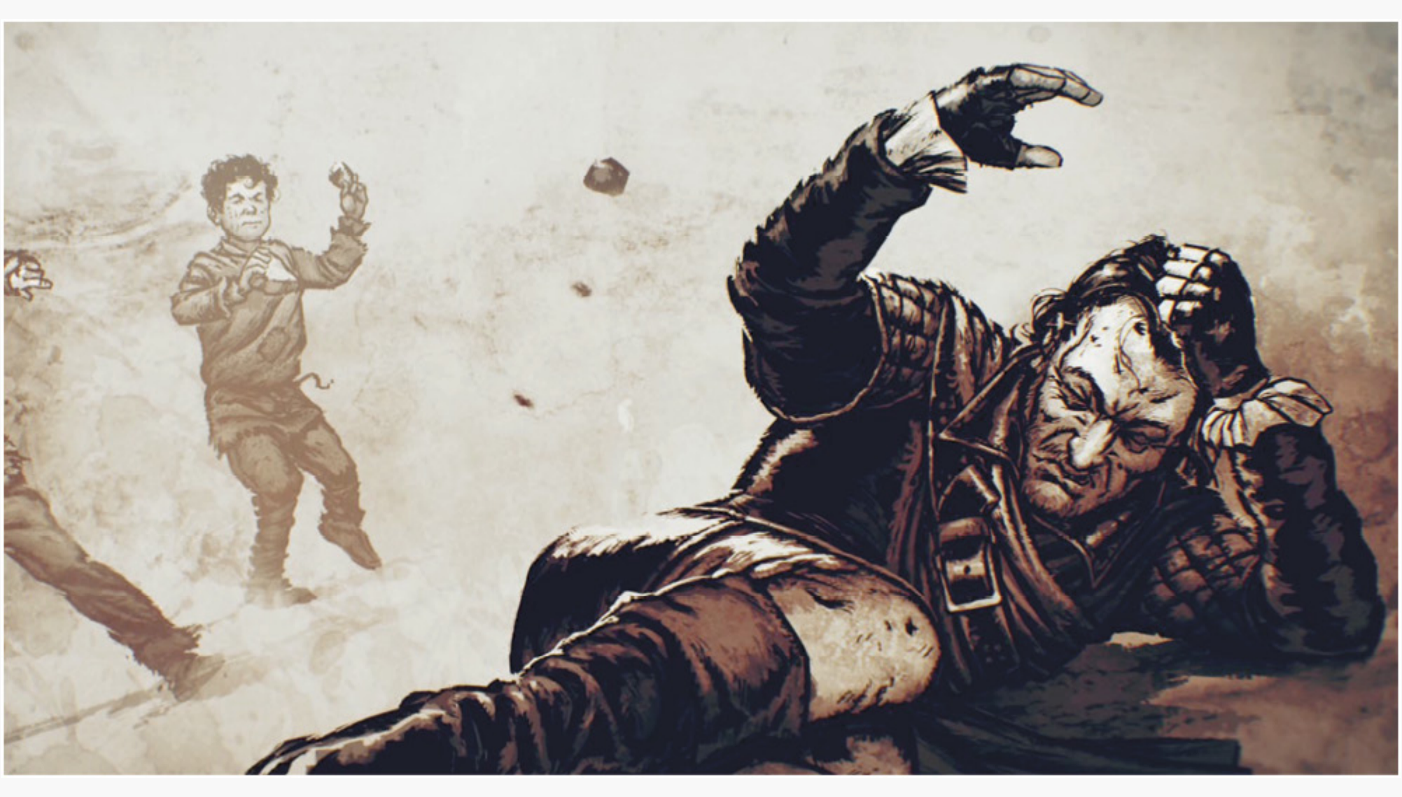


CONCLUSION 4: THE FATE OF WHORESON JUNIOR

A Changed Man: The doppler named Dudu successfully impersonated Whoreson Junior, and the whoremonger turned over a new leaf as his businesses flourished, if you elected to kill the real Whoreson during Main Quest: Get Junior.

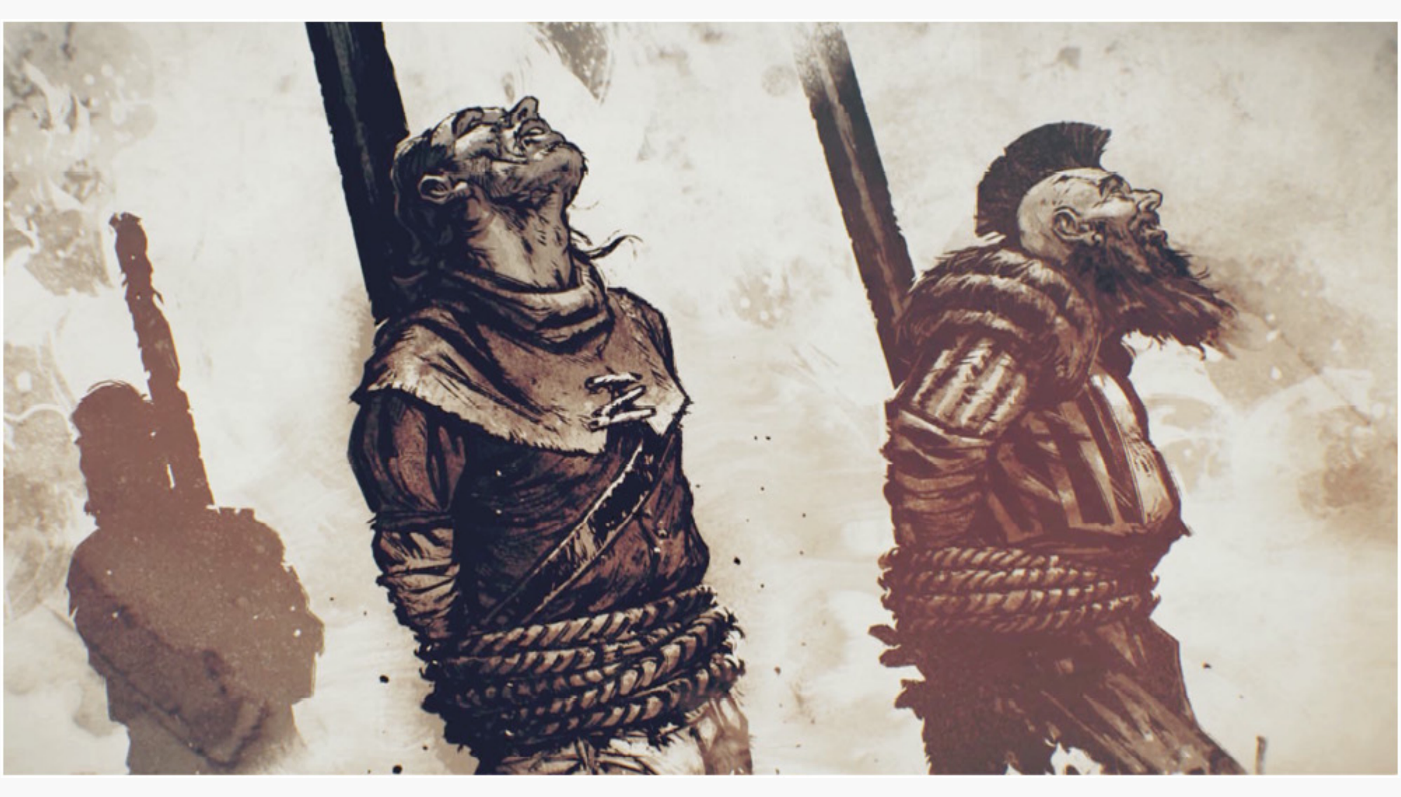


A Pitiful Wretch: The subsequent weeks and the wrath of the Big Four took its toll on the wretched Whoreson Junior, who fell from power into the effluent gutters of The Bits, if you elected to spare him during Main Quest: Get Junior.

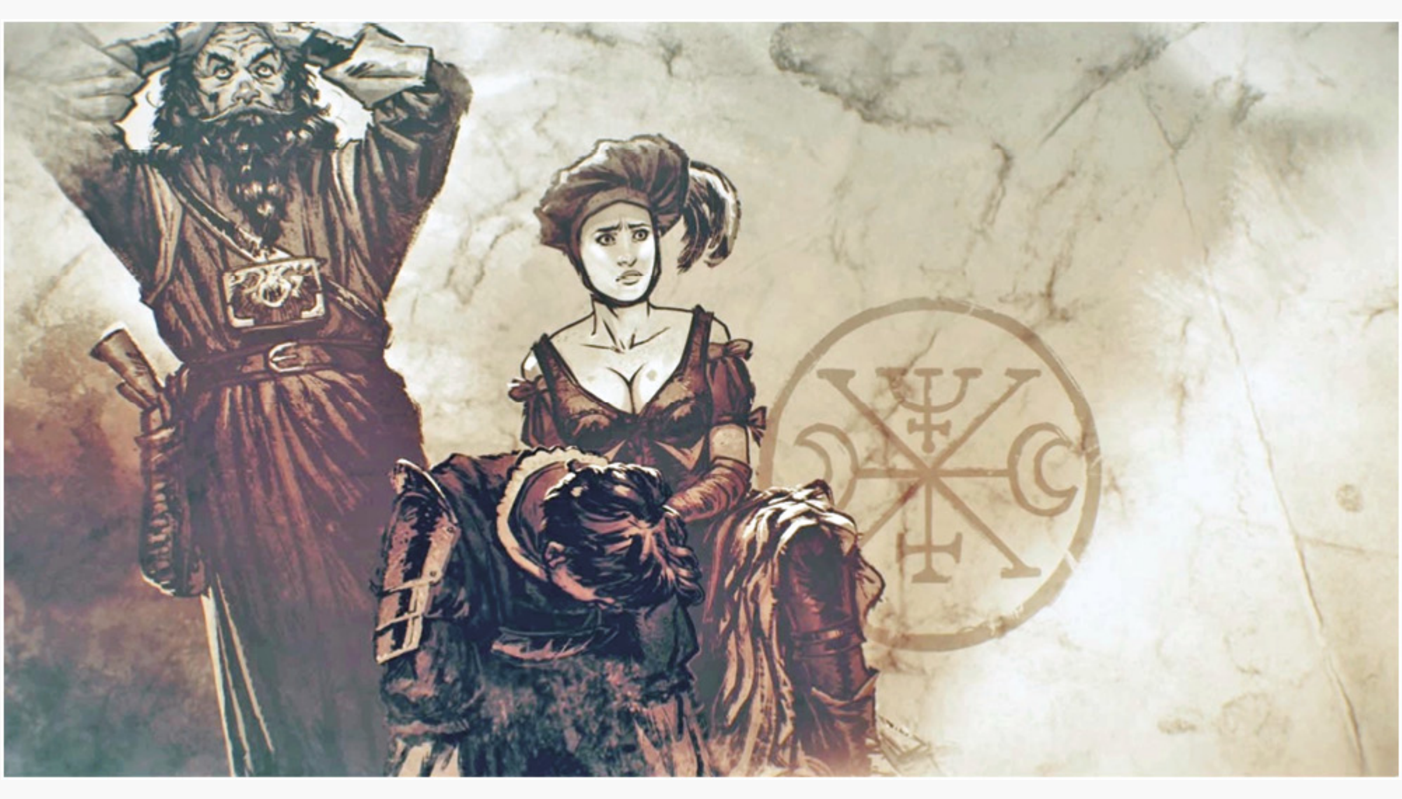


CONCLUSION 5: THE FATE OF MAGES

All Aboard to Kovir: With Radovid's purge of the mages thwarted by you and Triss—having successfully completed Secondary Quest: Now or Never—the king turns his attention to nonhumans instead. But sorcery is safe. For now…



On Stakes in the Square: With Radovid's purge of the mages left unstopped by you or Triss—having ignored Secondary Quest: Now or Never—the king and his witch hunters turned Novigrad into a death trap for those of a magical disposition.

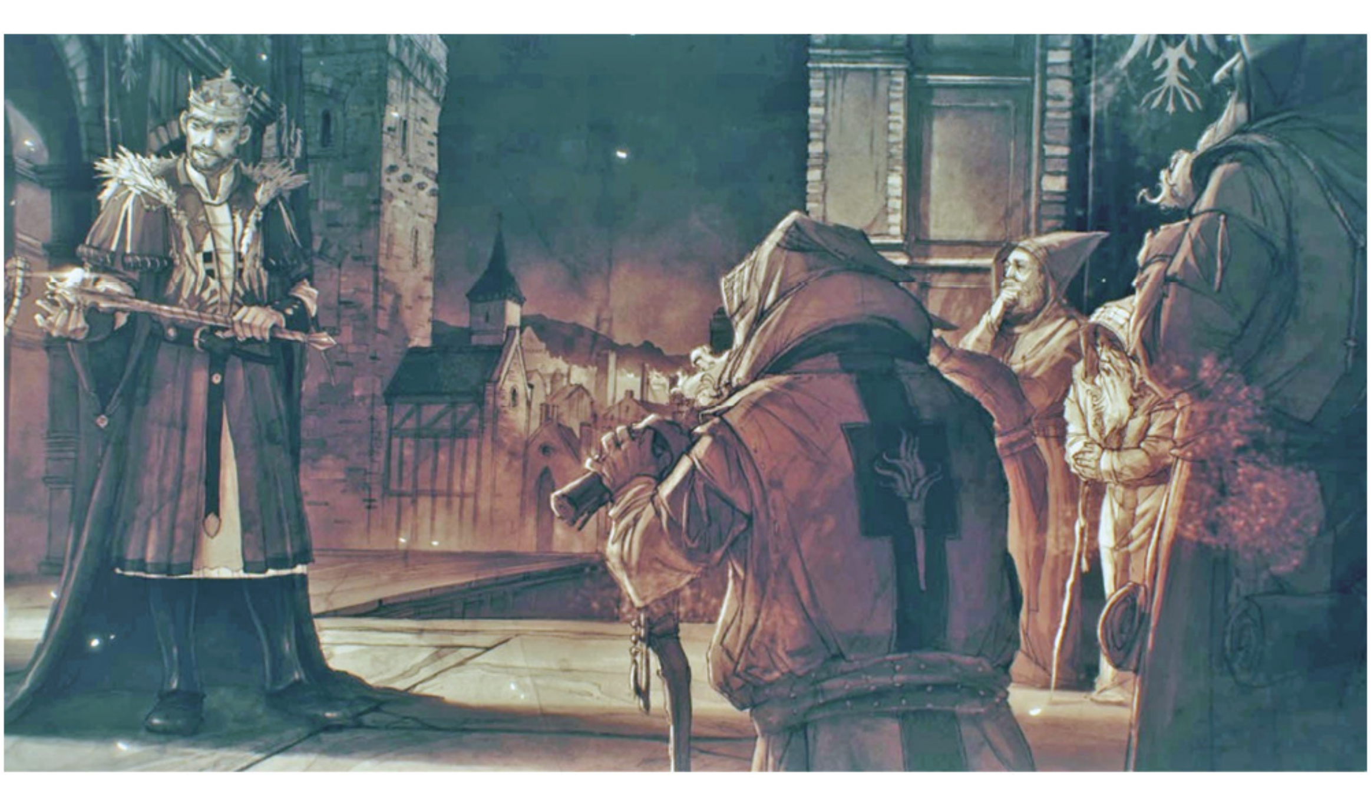


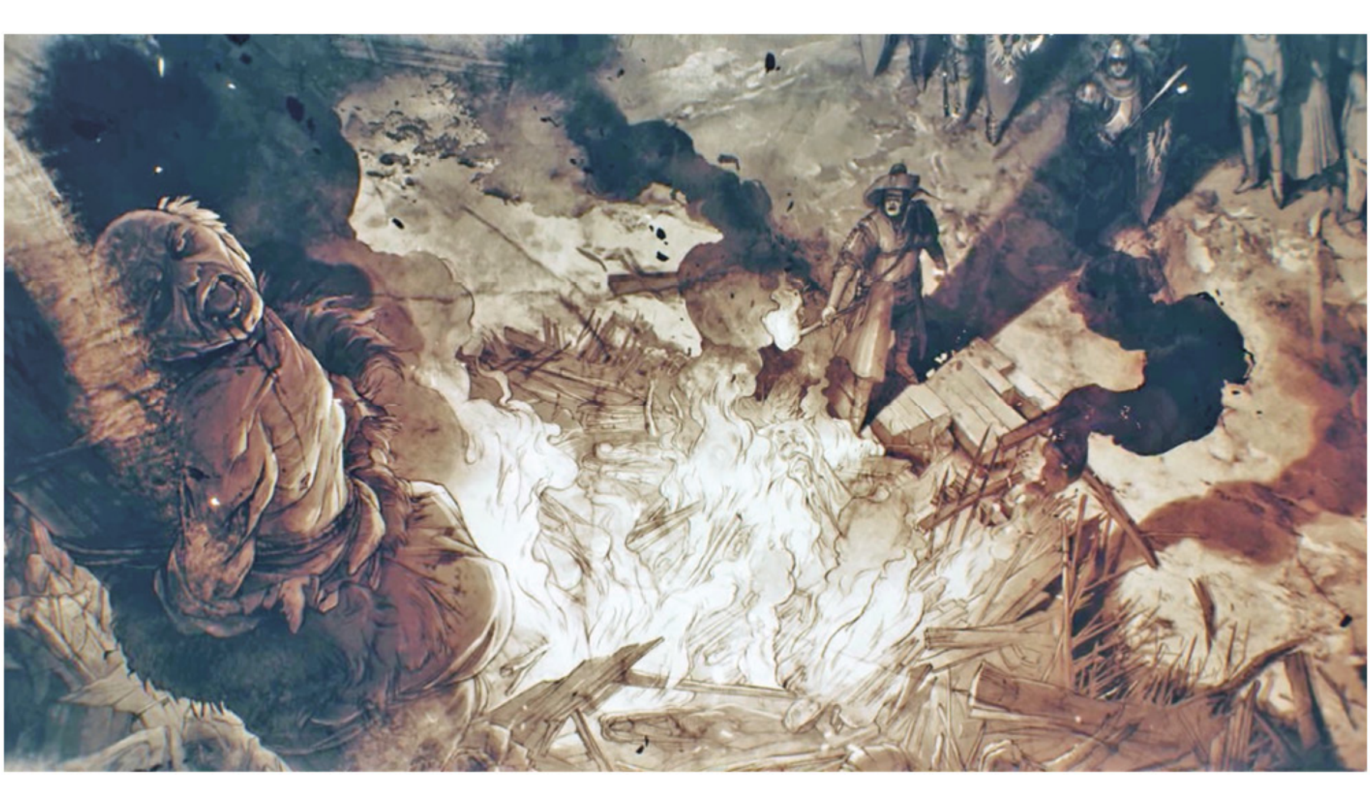
Final Endings

The following details the fates of characters after the end of the Main Quest.

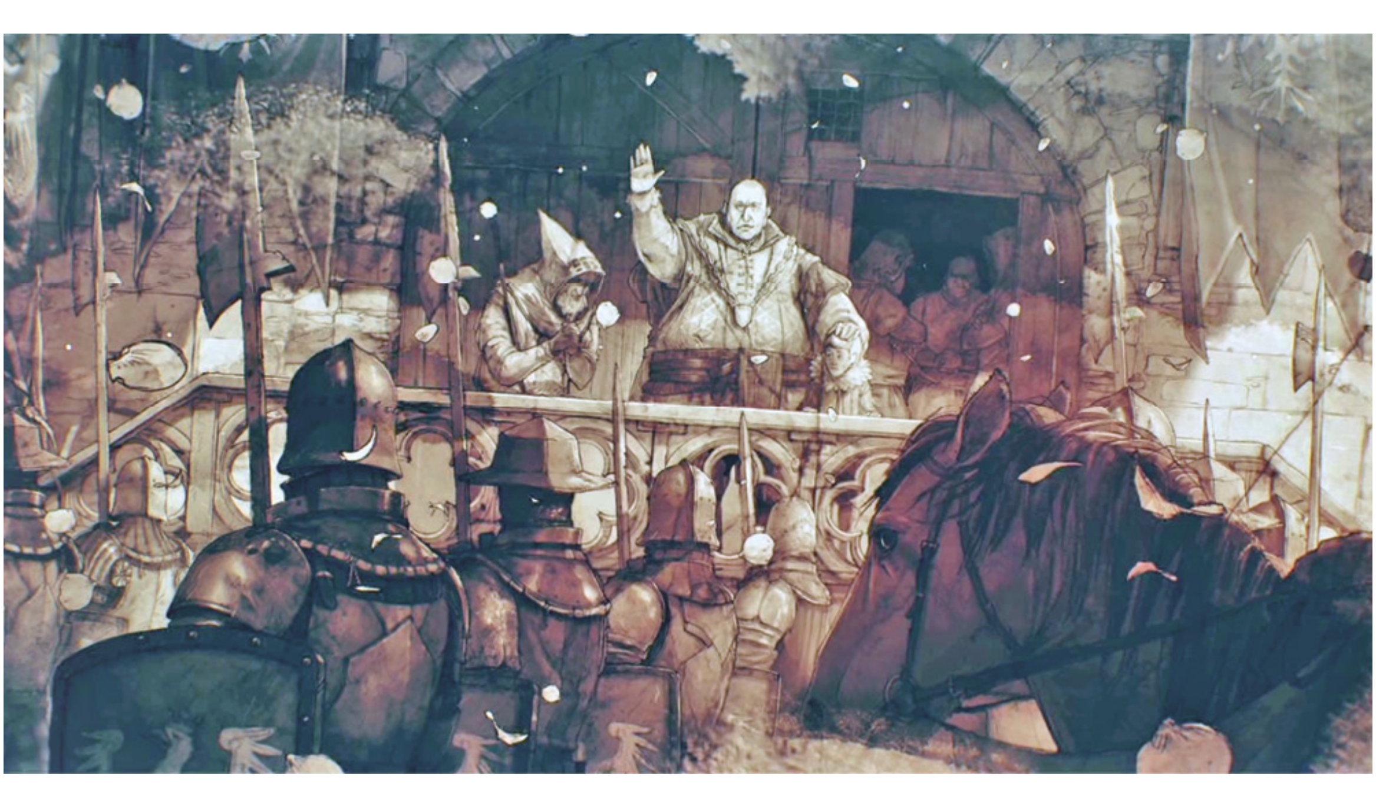
CONCLUSION 6: THE RULER OF NOVIGRAD AND VELEN (NO MAN'S LAND)

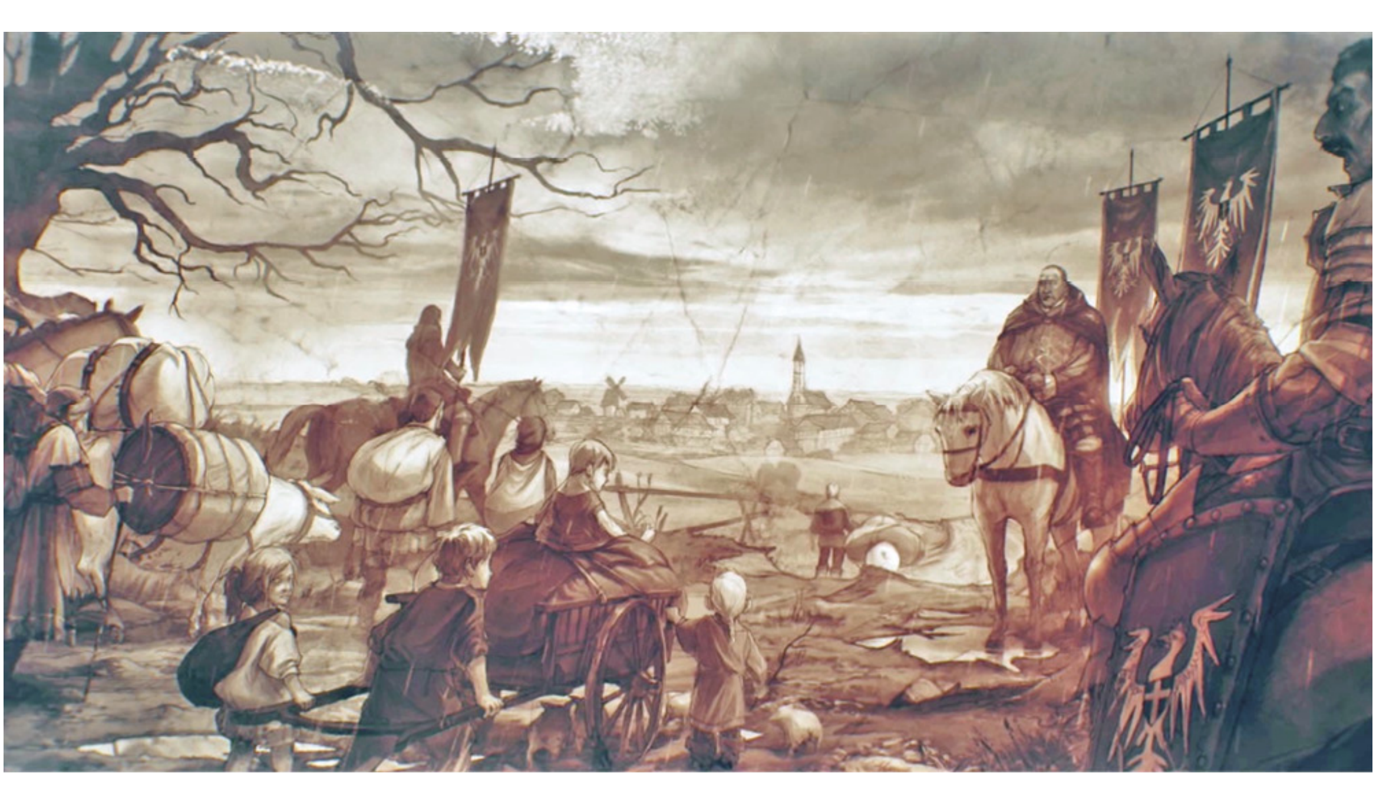
Radovid: A tactical genius, he handily defeated the Nilfgaardians to the south, and Radovid became ruler if you ignored all of the Assassins' Quests, and did not complete Secondary Quest: Reason of State. Radovid's subsequent witch hunt resulted in the murder of thousands of pellars, herbalists, and nonhumans.



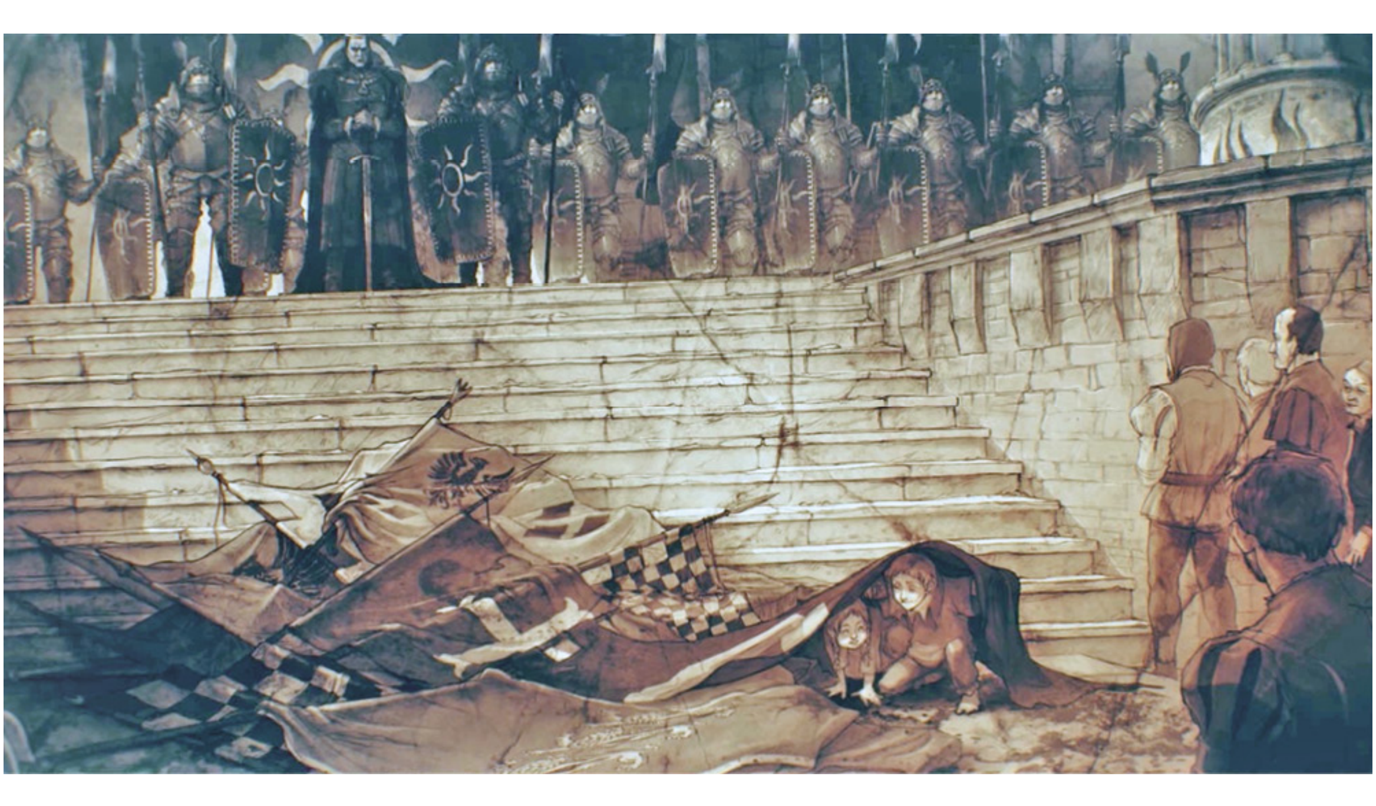


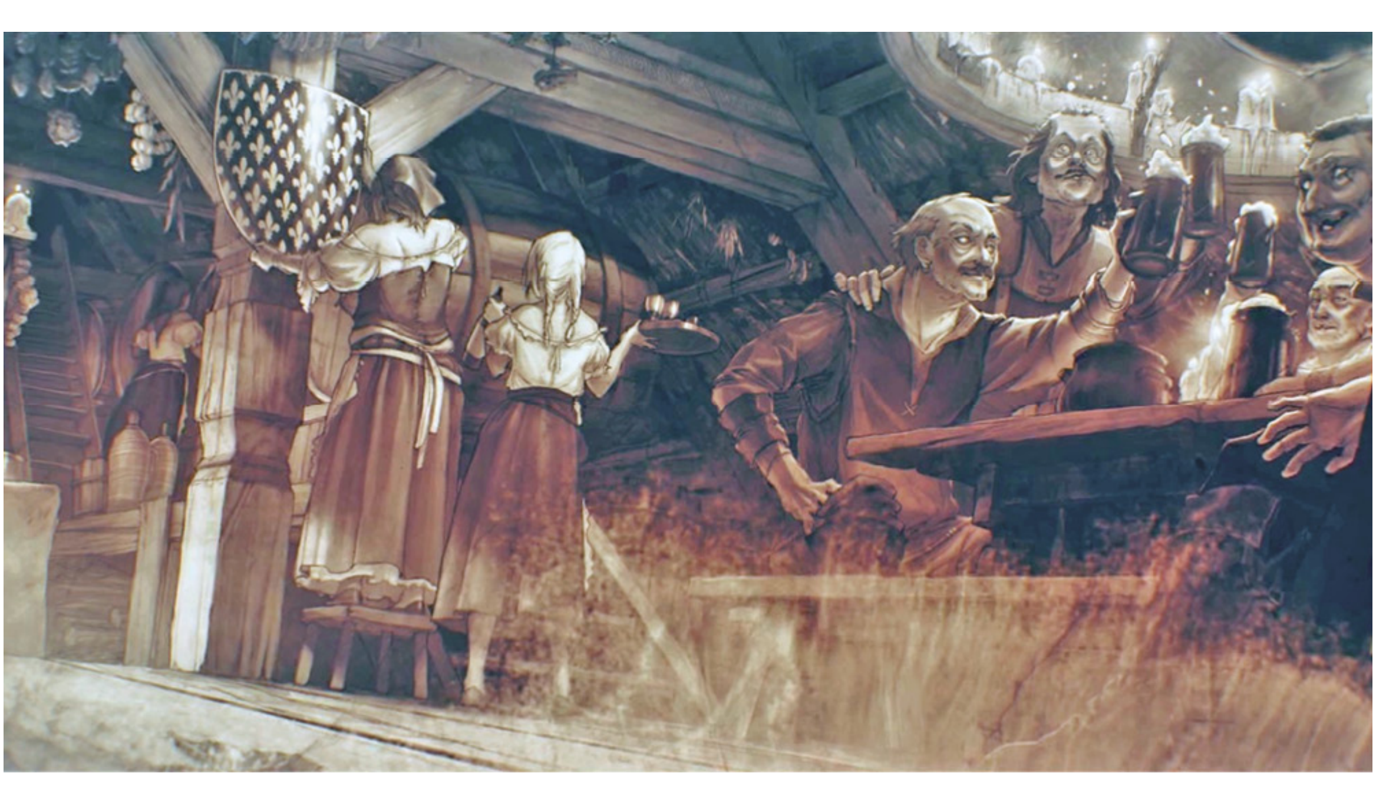
Dijkstra: The emperor was repelled in the field, Radovid fell victim to assassins, and a shadowy force took up the reins of power, if you completed all of the Assassins' Quests, Secondary Quest: Reason of State, and sided with Dijkstra. A consolidation of his rule and industrialization followed (for the good of his subjects, but contrary to their will).





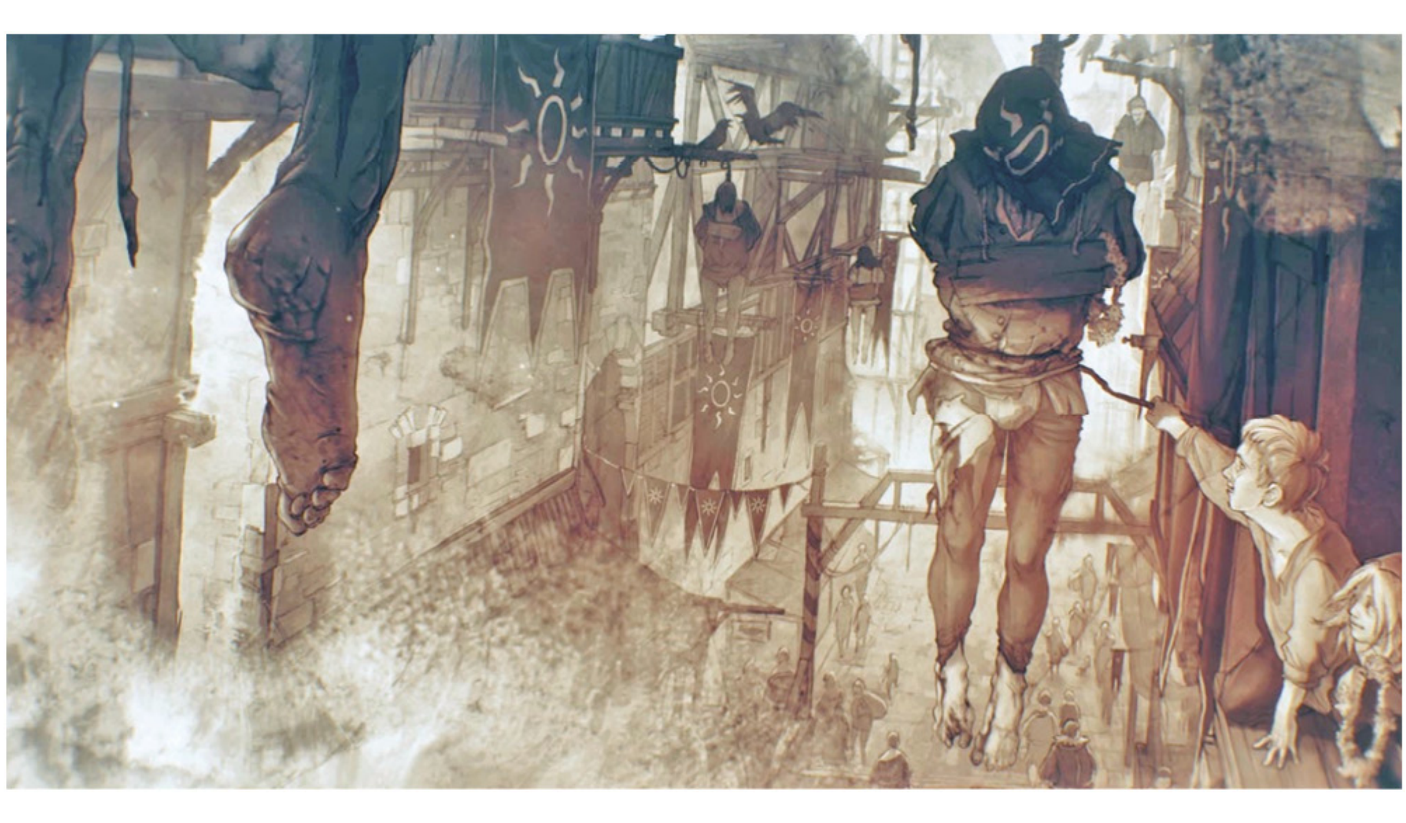
Emhyr var Emreis: With Radovid falling to an assassins' blade, the Northern Realms fell to the Emhyr's countless legions, if you completed all of the Assassins' Quests, Secondary Quest: Reason of State, and sided with Vernon Roche and Thaler. Emhyr redirected his forces, while the Temerians got their country back.



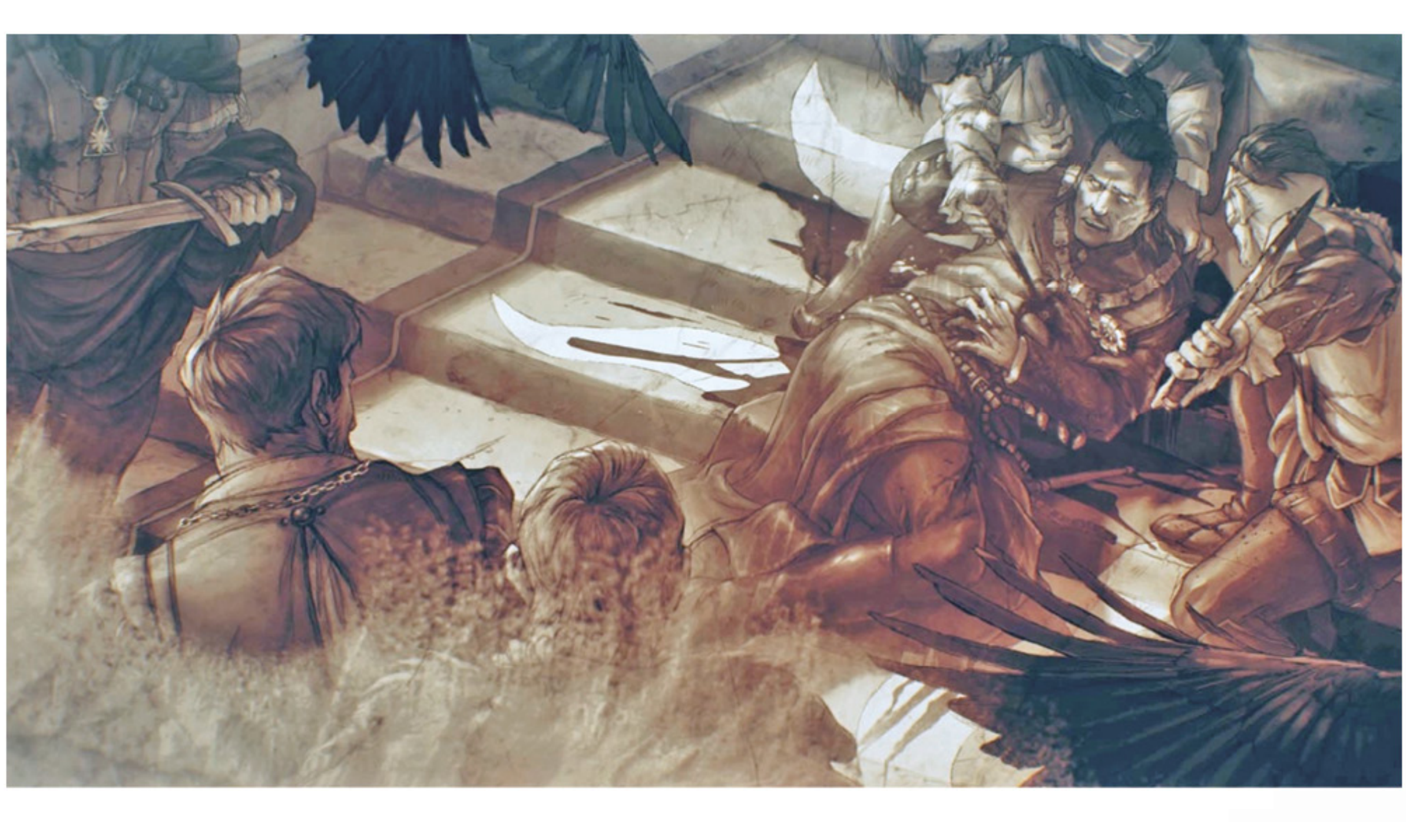


CONCLUSION 7: THE FATE OF THE EMPEROR

Emhyr var Emreis lives!: After Radovid's forces were dealt with, Emhyr turned to those who had conspired against him (soldiers and aristcrats alike) and showed no mercy. This occurs if the Ruler of Novigrad and Velen is Emhyr var Emreis.

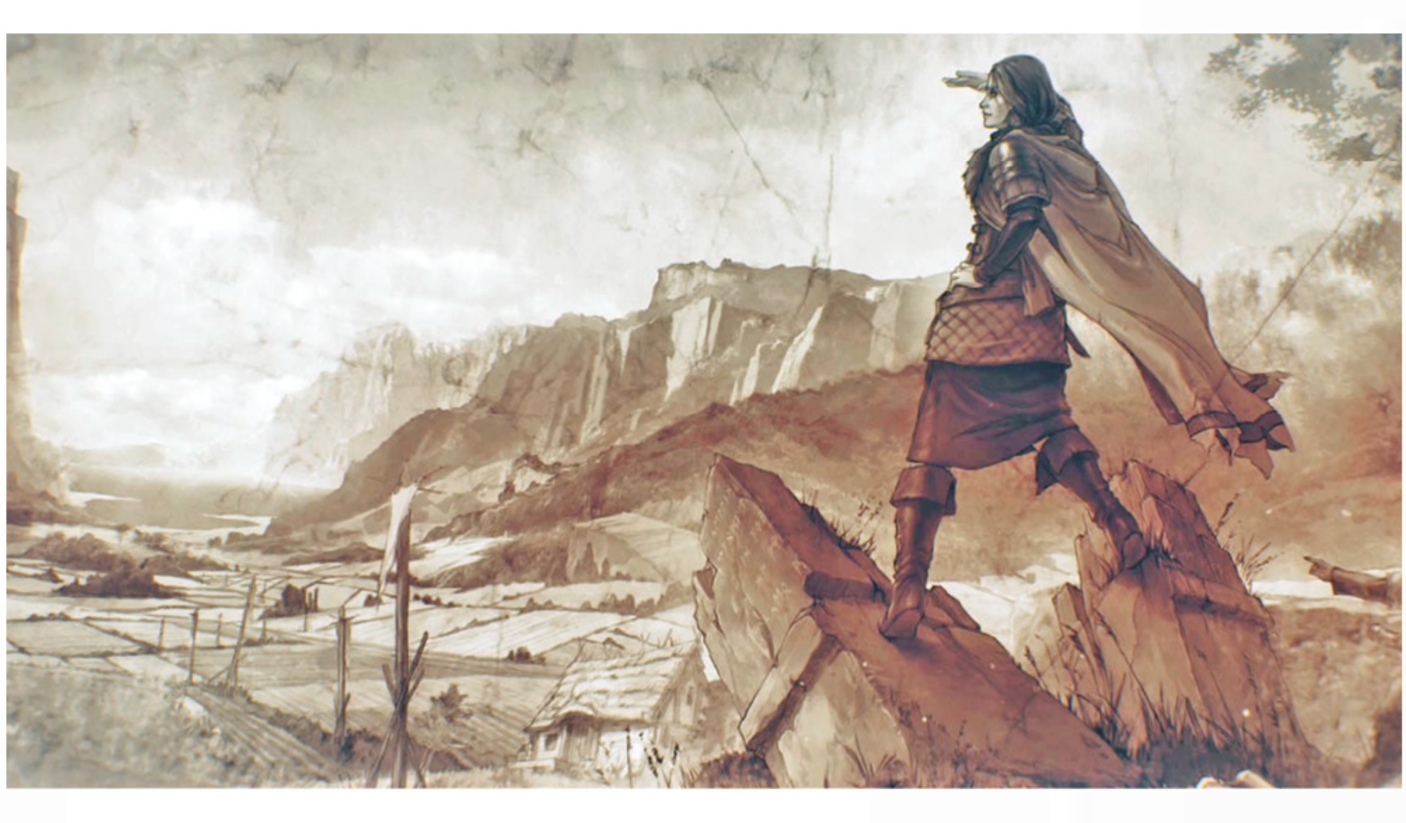


Emhyr var Emreis dies!: Boundlessly obedient as long as victory continued, Emhyr's subjects attacked after his string of humiliating defeats, and slew him on the steps of his palace at Vizima. This occurs if the Ruler of Novigrad and Velen is either Radovid or Dijkstra.

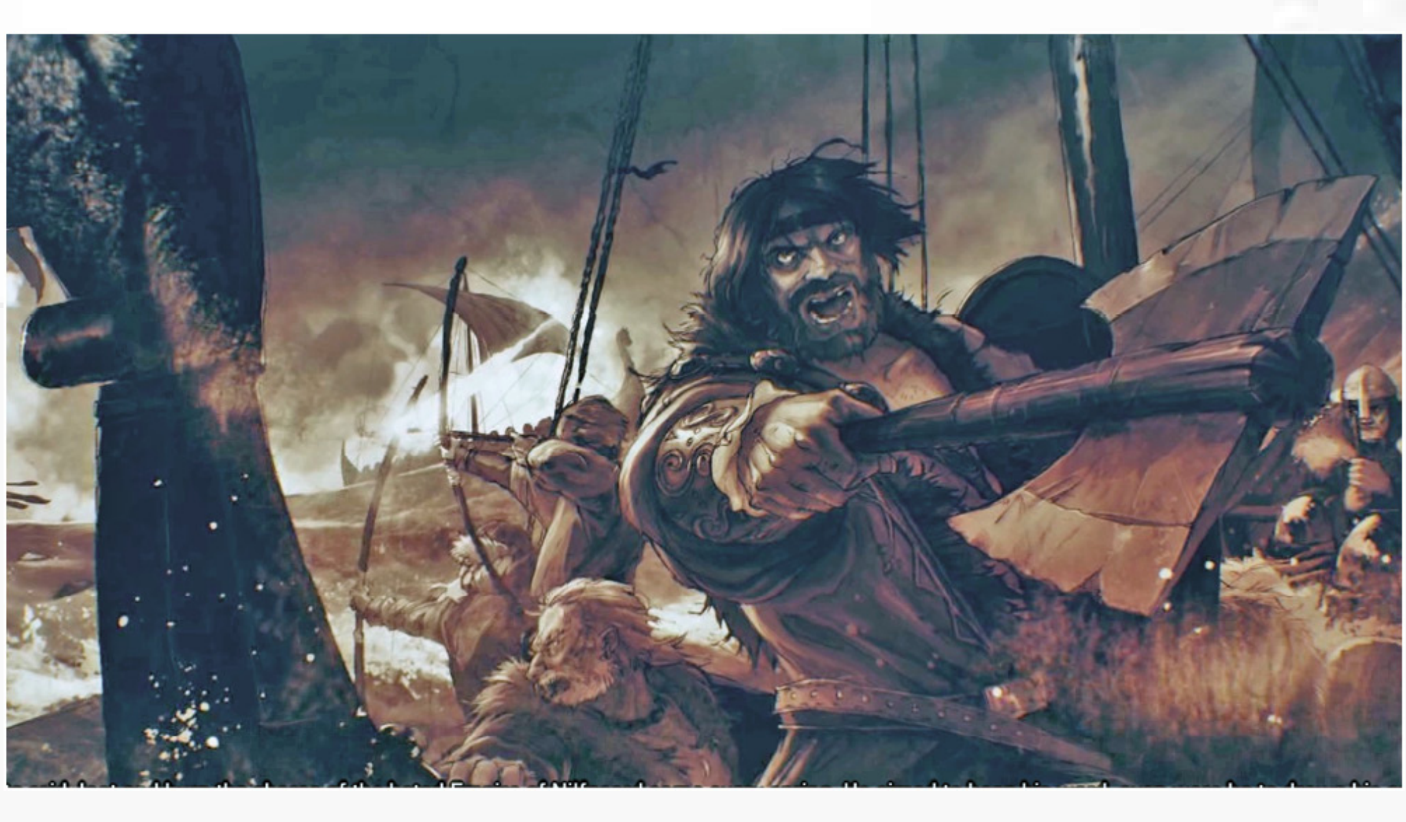


CONCLUSION 8: THE RULER OF SKELLIGE

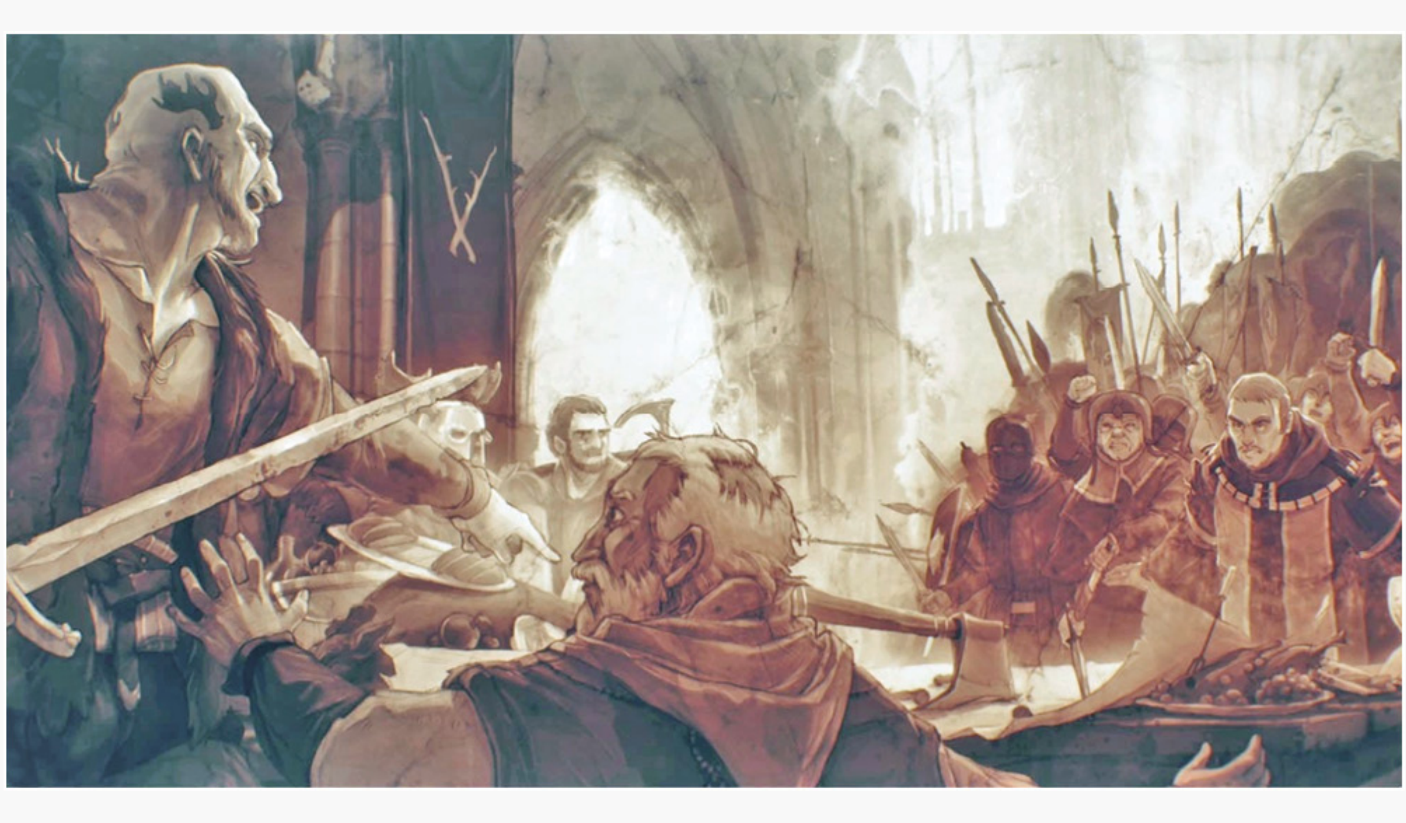
Cerys an Craite: There was no raiding of foreign shores, as Cerys turned to care for her own people and lands. Skellige prospered greatly, albeit with its fangs of yore dulled. This occurs if you completed the Clan An Craite Quests and sided with Cerys during King's Gambit.



Hjalmar an Craite: Despite the war on the Continent ending, Hjalmar vowed to loot and burn the shores of the hated Empire of Nilfgaard every spring, even if he was to drown his own people in blood. This occurs if you completed the Clan An Craite Quests and sided with Hjalmar during King's Gambit.

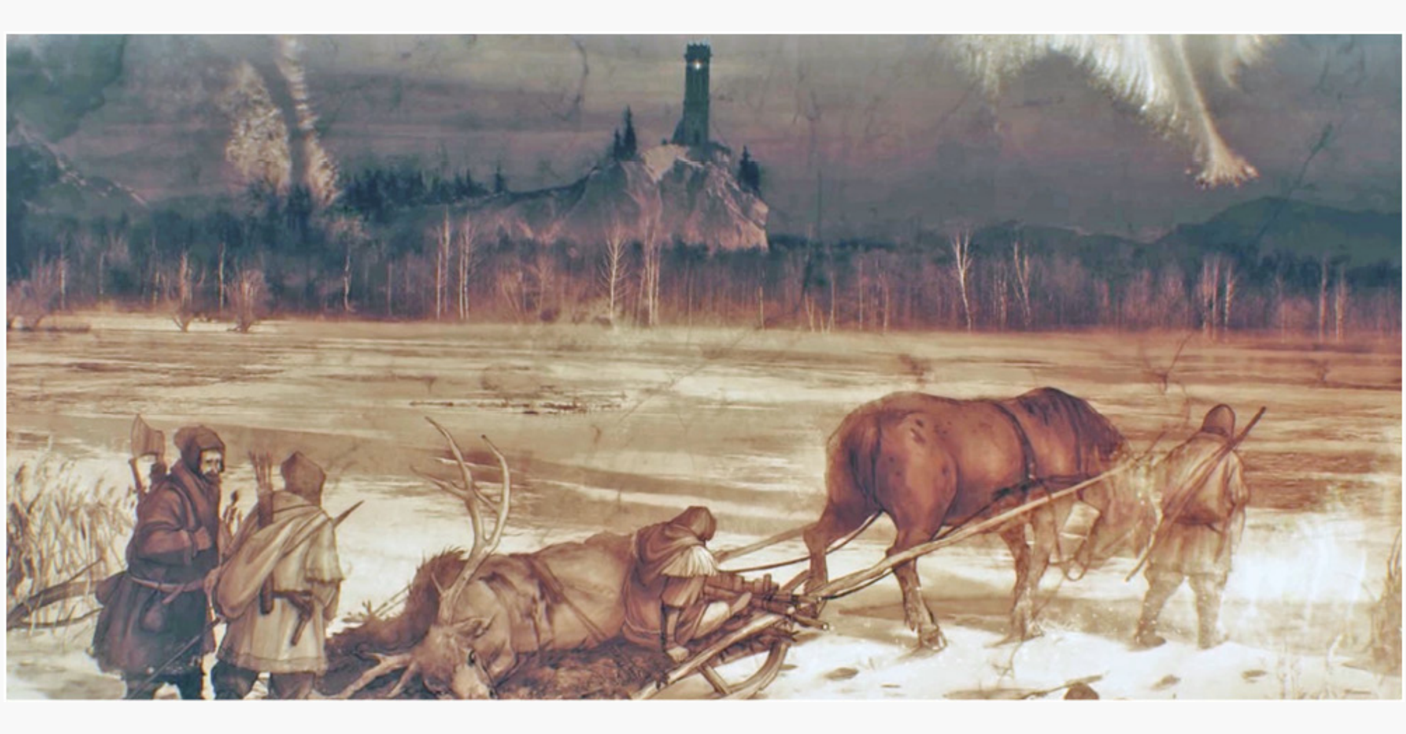


Svanrige Bran: The young king was no puppet. Tired of the Jarls' incessant feuding, he transformed the isles into an absolute monarchy like those of the Continent. This was an achievement thick with the blood of his countrymen. This occurs if you ignored the Clan An Craite Quest: Secondary Quest: King's Gambit.

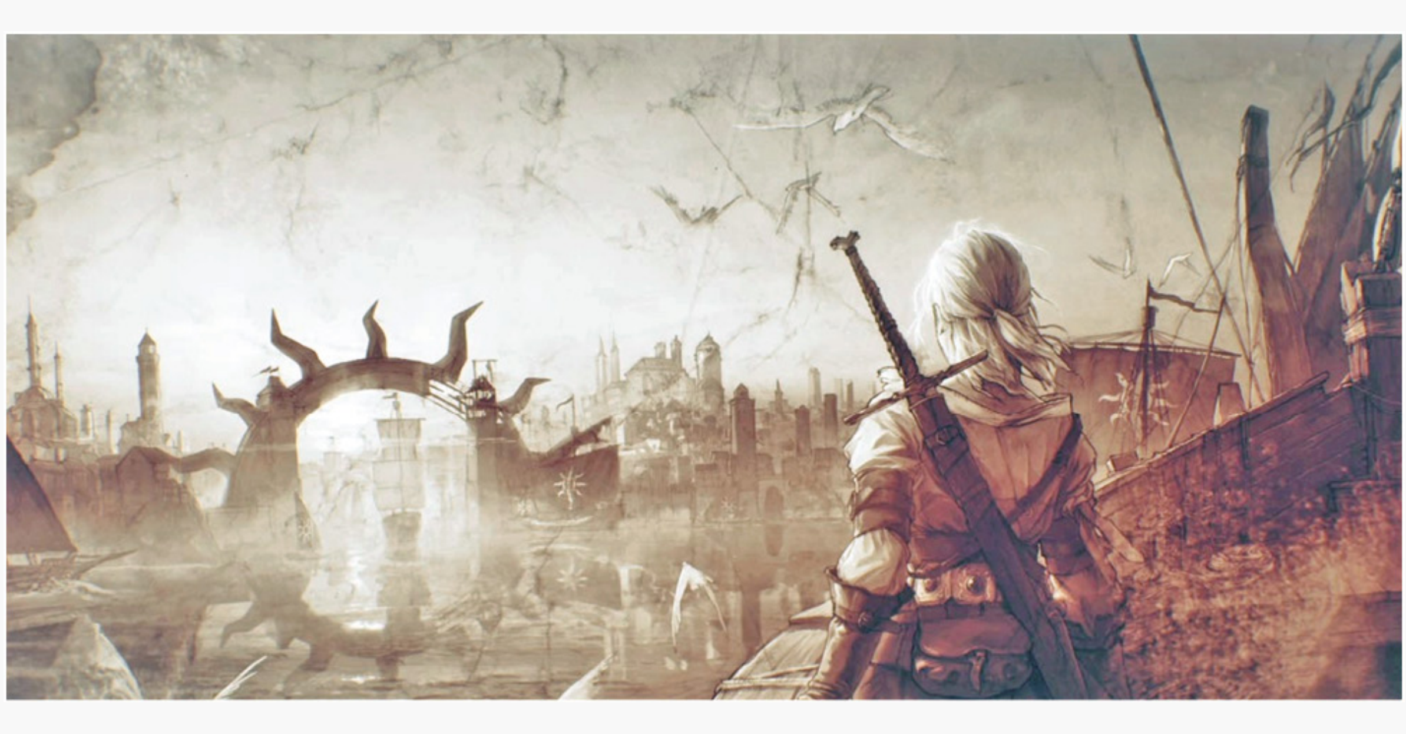


CONCLUSION 9: THE FATE OF CIRI

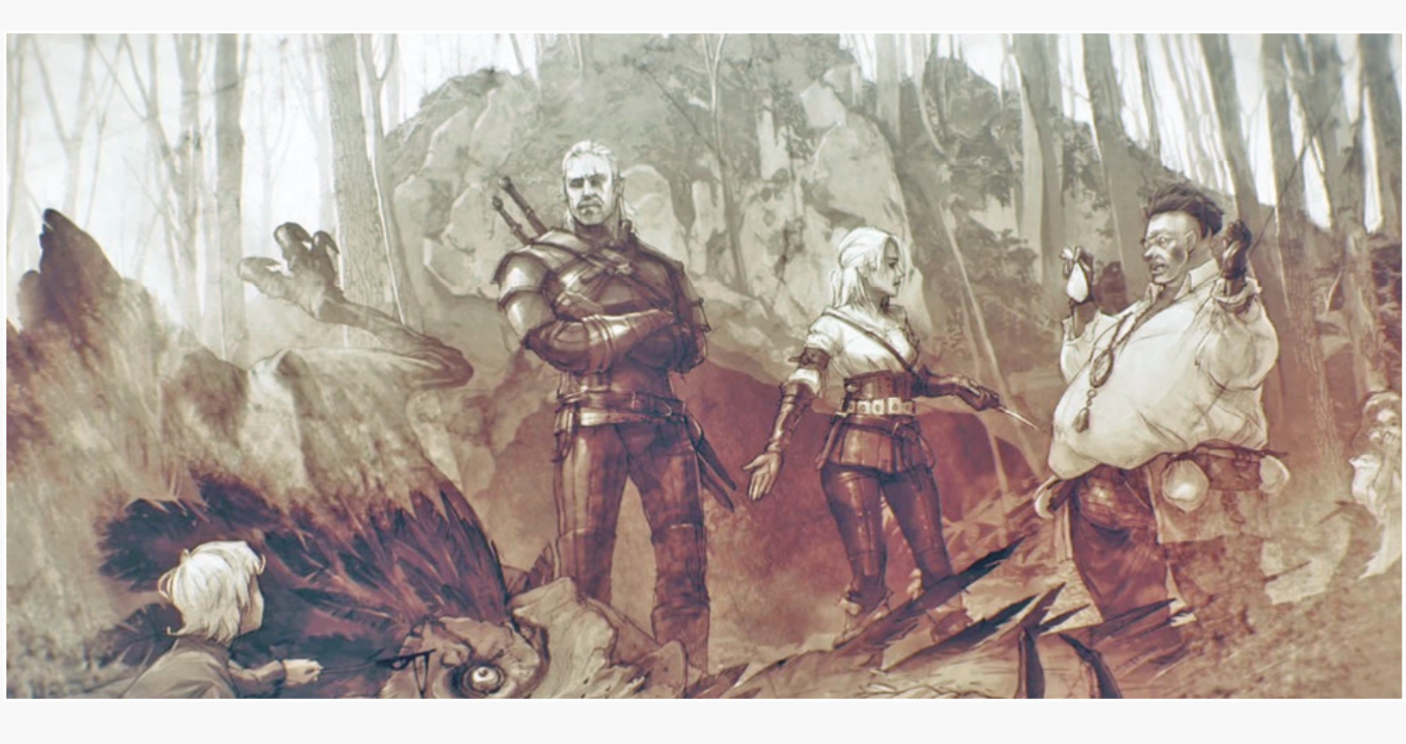
Ciri is Dead?: Since the memorable events on Undvik, Ciri is yet to be seen. Which hardly means she's never to return. This occurs if you completed Epilogue: Something Ends, Something Begins I (more negative choices than positive ones during Main Quest: Blood on the Battlefield, Main Quest: Final Preparations, and Main Quest: Battle Preparations).



Ciri is Empress: Returning to her paternal home of Nilfgaard, Ciri had the requisite qualities of an empress (political instinct and a sense of simple, human decency). Emhyr prepared to name her his successor. This occurs if you completed Epilogue: Something Ends, Something Begins II (more positive choices than negative ones during Main Quest: Blood on the Battlefield, Main Quest: Final Preparations, and Main Quest: Battle Preparations, and you visited Emhyr during Main Quest: Blood on the Battlefield). Radovid must also be dead (you completed Secondary Quest: Reason of State), and you must side with Roche and Thaler.

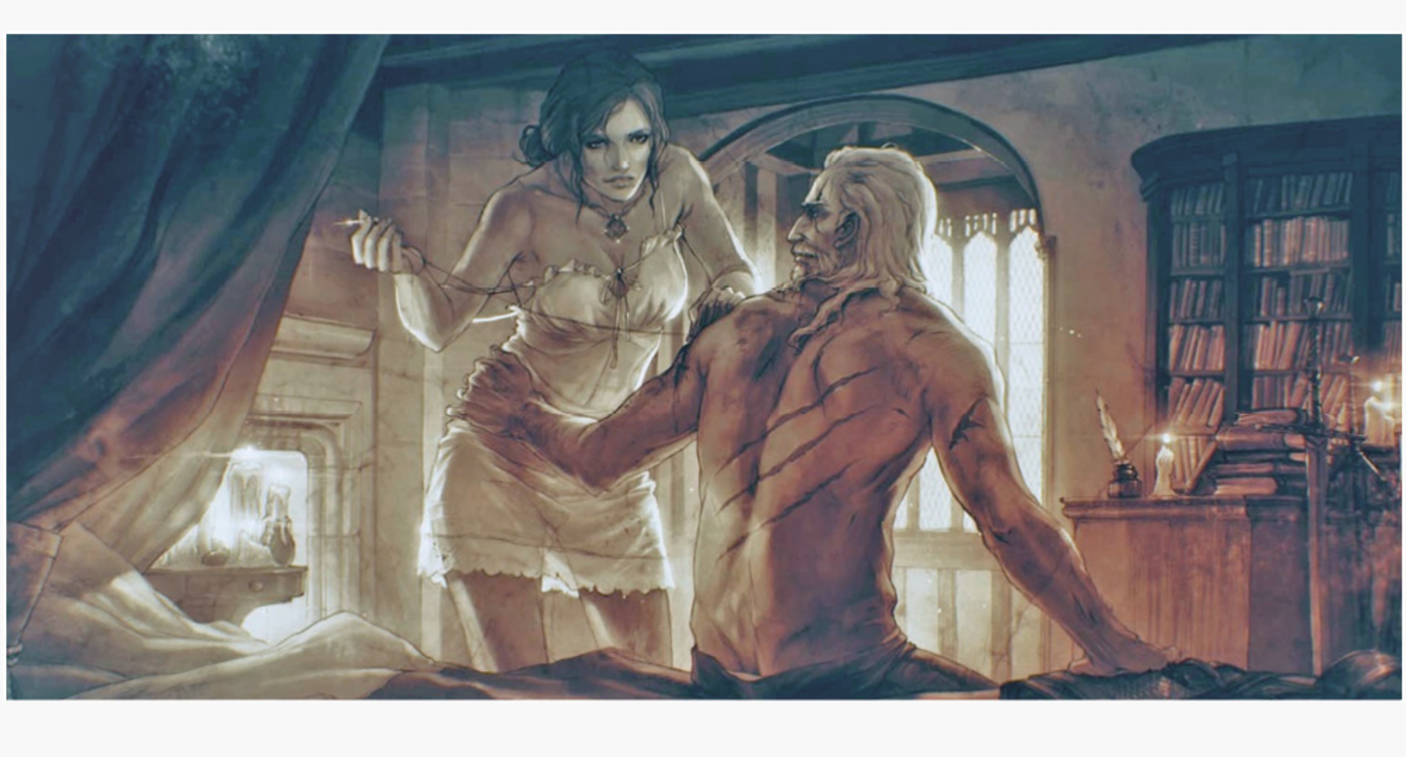


Ciri is Alive: Choosing to live as a Witcher, on the Path, Geralt taught her all he knew, before they each set off on their own. Rumors spread from the Yaruga to the mountains of Kovir of this ashen-haired adventuress. This occurs if you completed Epilogue: Something Ends, Something Begins III (more positive choices than negative ones during Main Quest: Blood on the Battlefield, Main Quest: Final Preparations, and Main Quest: Battle Preparations, and you did not visit Emhyr during Main Quest: Blood on the Battlefield).

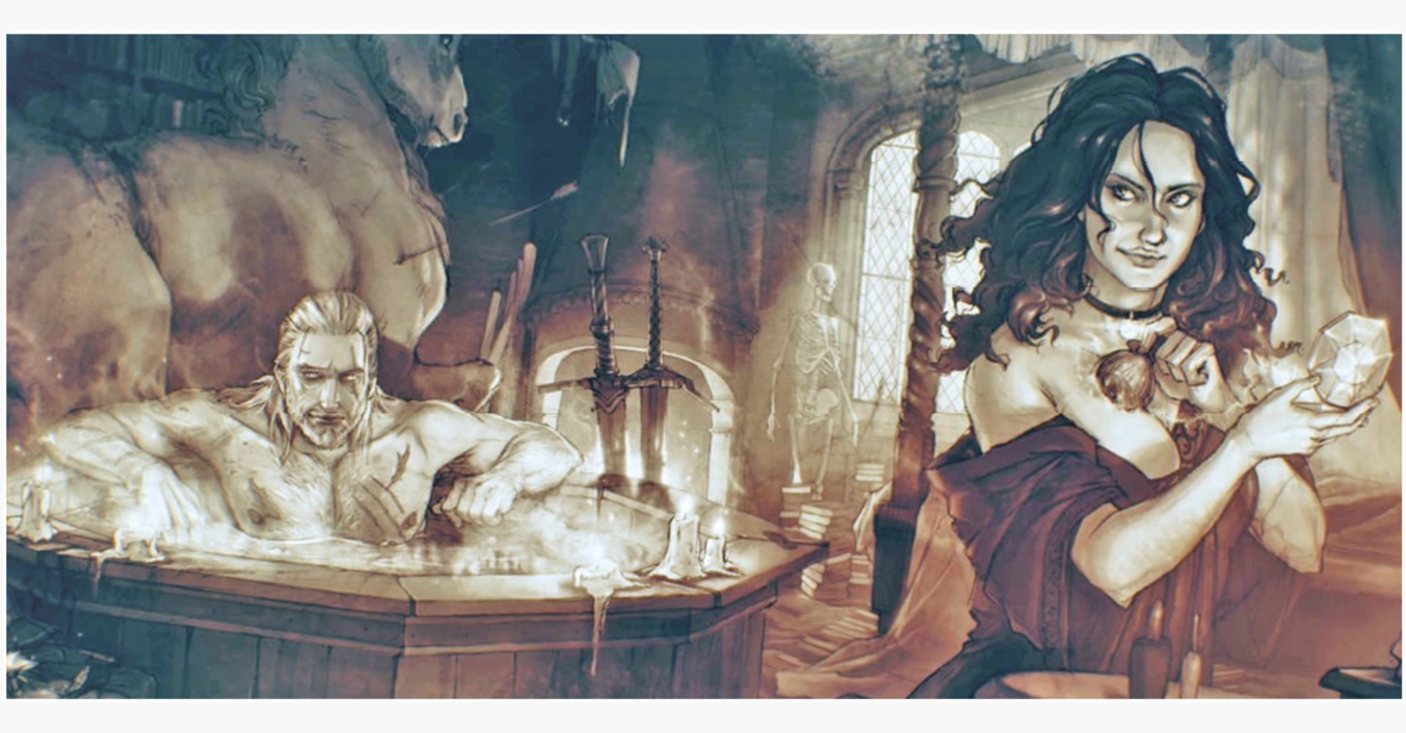


CONCLUSION 10: THE FATE OF GERALT

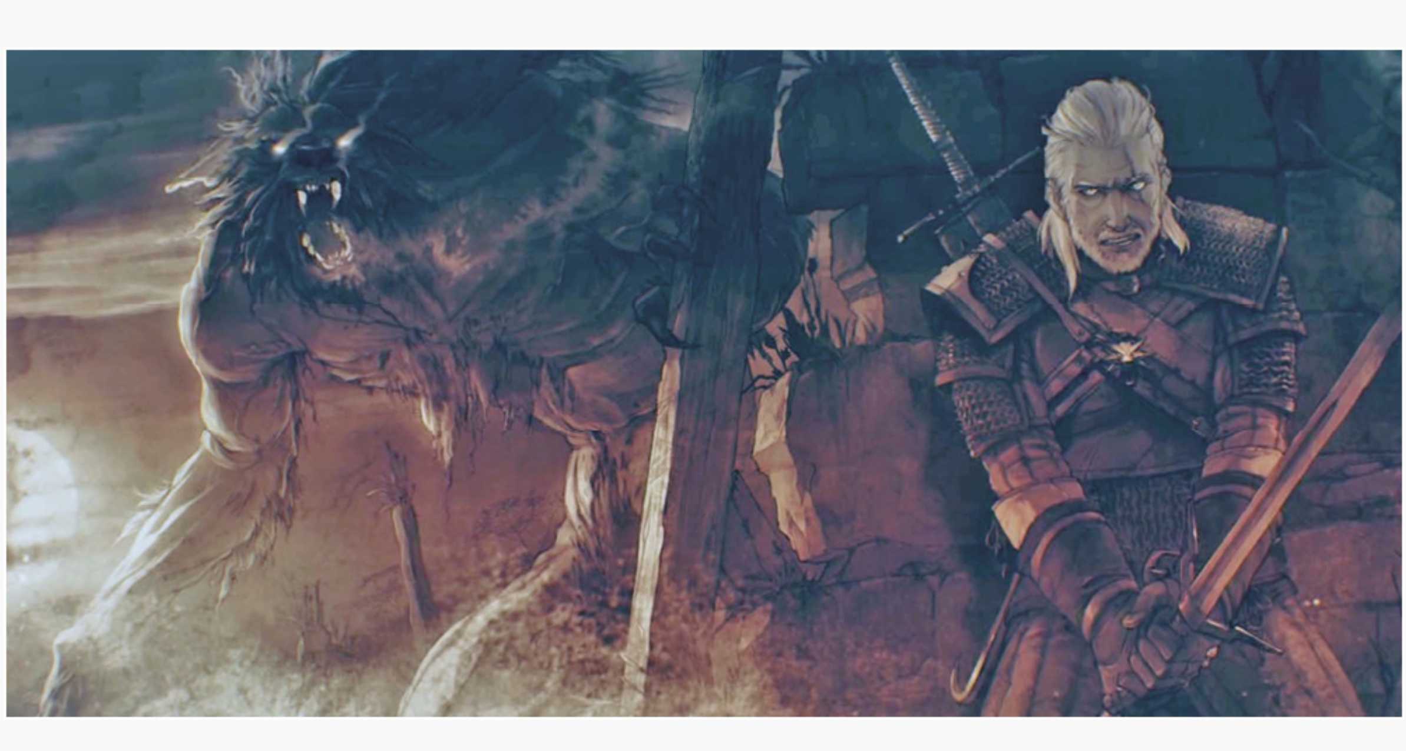
With Triss: It is hard to believe, but Geralt finally planted roots in far away Kovir. The smell of freshly-baked cakes, an occasional job to undertake, and a fortune to spend as Triss was mage advisor to Kovir's king. The occurs if you completed Secondary Quest: Now or Never, told Triss you loved her, and chose to be with her. If prompted, you also need to ignore the advances of Yennefer during Secondary Quest: Last Wish.

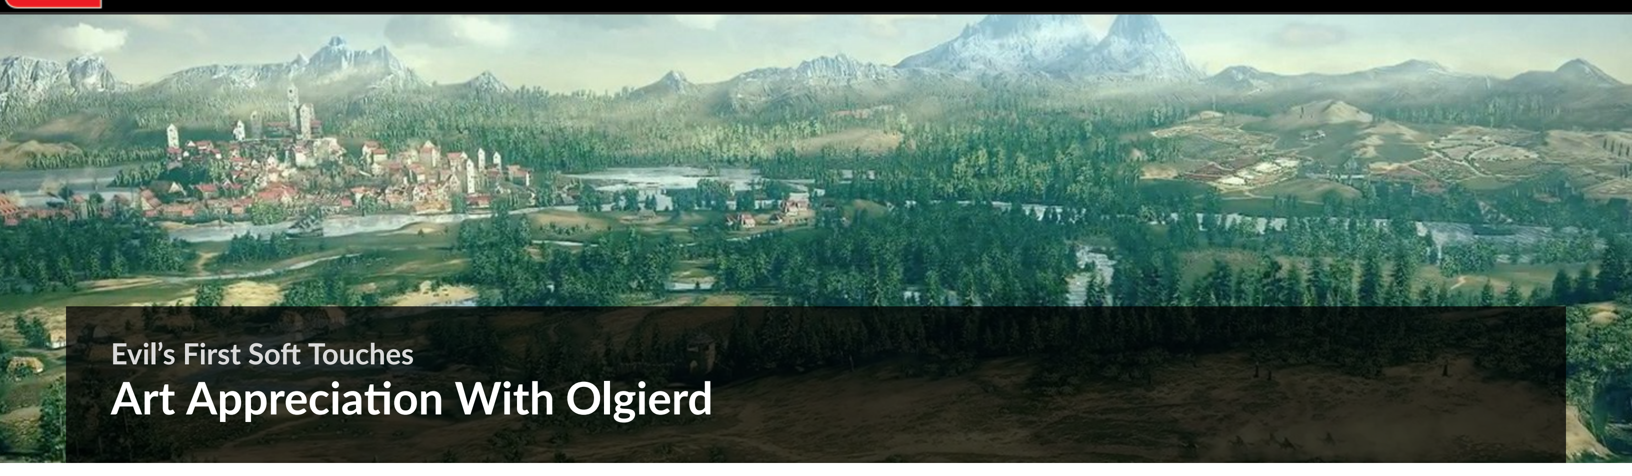


With Yennefer: Geralt and Yennefer retreated away from politics to a quiet, calm life together. They ate breakfasts well after noon, most often in bed, passing time on lazy strolls or long conversations. This occurs if you completed Secondary Quest: Last Wish, and chose to be with Yennefer. If prompted, you also need to ignore the advances of Triss during Secondary Quest: Now or Never.



Forever Alone: Sticking to his profession, living hand to mouth, always on the road, ever coinless. A drink with Dandelion to speculate what could have been. This occurs if you completed both Secondary Quests: Last Wish and Now or Never, and told both Triss and Yennefer you wanted to be with them. Or, this occurs if you ignored both these quests, and any romance options with Triss or Yennefer.





Evil's First Soft Touches

Art Appreciation With Olgierd

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

EVIL'S FIRST SOFT TOUCHES

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Dead Man's Party; Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage; Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: Enchanting Startup Costs; Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: Rose on a Red Field

LOCATIONS: Seven Cats Inn, Garin Estate, Oxenfurt Sewers, Novigrad Beach, Yantra

CHARACTERS: Olgierd von Everec, Wild Ones, Adela, Shani, Gaunter O'Dimm (Master Mirror)

ENEMIES: Drowners, Toad "Prince", Ofieri Soldiers, Ofieri Mage

OBJECTIVES

- Check the notice board outside the Seven Cats Inn.
- Go see Olgierd von Everec about the contract.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

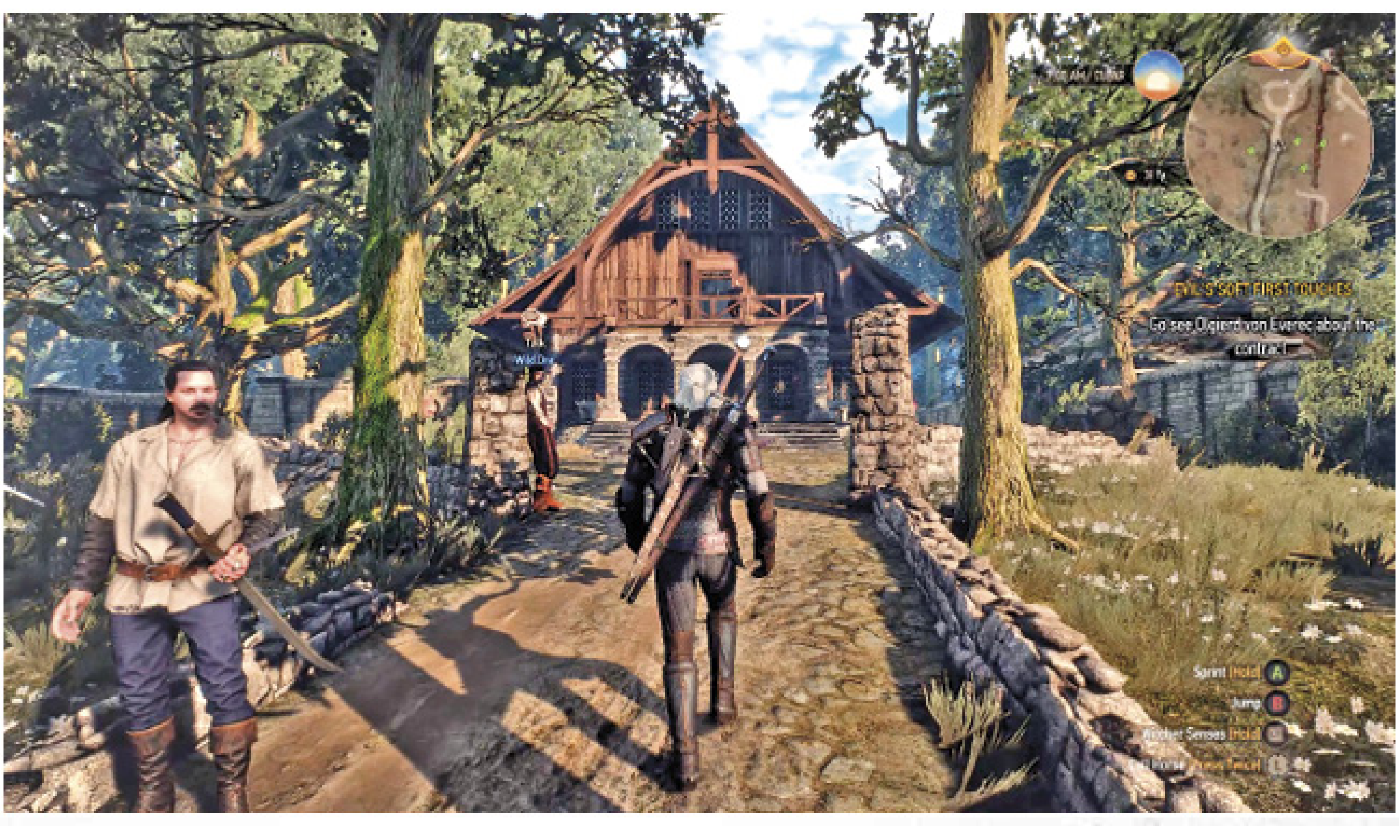
This quest is accessible immediately once you have the Hearts of Stone Expansion (check your Quest menu for the objective). It is advisable to be at least Level 30 before attempting this quest.

Gather an additional notice on this board; "A Runewright Upon Your Shores Has Landed" to begin Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: Enchanting: Start-Up Costs.

The Seven Cats Inn beckons; locate the Notice Board there, where you'll find a man hammering a note. Apparently there's something large and unpleasant in the sewers under Oxenfurt that requires a monster slayer. The man directs you to the issuer of this request; Olgierd von Everec.

SECONDARY QUEST: THE WRIGHT STUFF

Olgierd is currently residing in a manor house to the northeast of the Seven Cats Inn, in a newly-discovered part of Gustfields. Ride across meadow and vale until you reach the Garin Estate. The place is guarded by some uncouth (but reasonably friendly) ne'er-do-wells known as Wild Ones. Enter the premises, and you're accosted by more of these wisecrackers.



Find out more about the Wild Ones by asking them.

- Answer that they're a "bunch of idiots" to encourage a quick fist-fight with one of them
- Answer that you're "here on business" to keep your fists from becoming bruised.

Olgierd von Everec

After your chat, you're escorted upstairs to meet the Ataman himself.

You meet Olgierd in one of the rooms in the manor. After revealing that sculptured nudes by Votticelli aren't really his cup of tea (answer how you wish), he beckons you down to the great hall for a celebration (something his cronies seem to be perpetually engaged in). Feel free to ask what the celebration is about, before getting down to contract negotiations. Agree immediately (for an undisclosed sum), or ask specifically (Olgierd agrees to 450 crowns and any memento from the manor house). Then leave the revelers.

SECONDARY QUEST: HEY, PUSS PEEPERS!

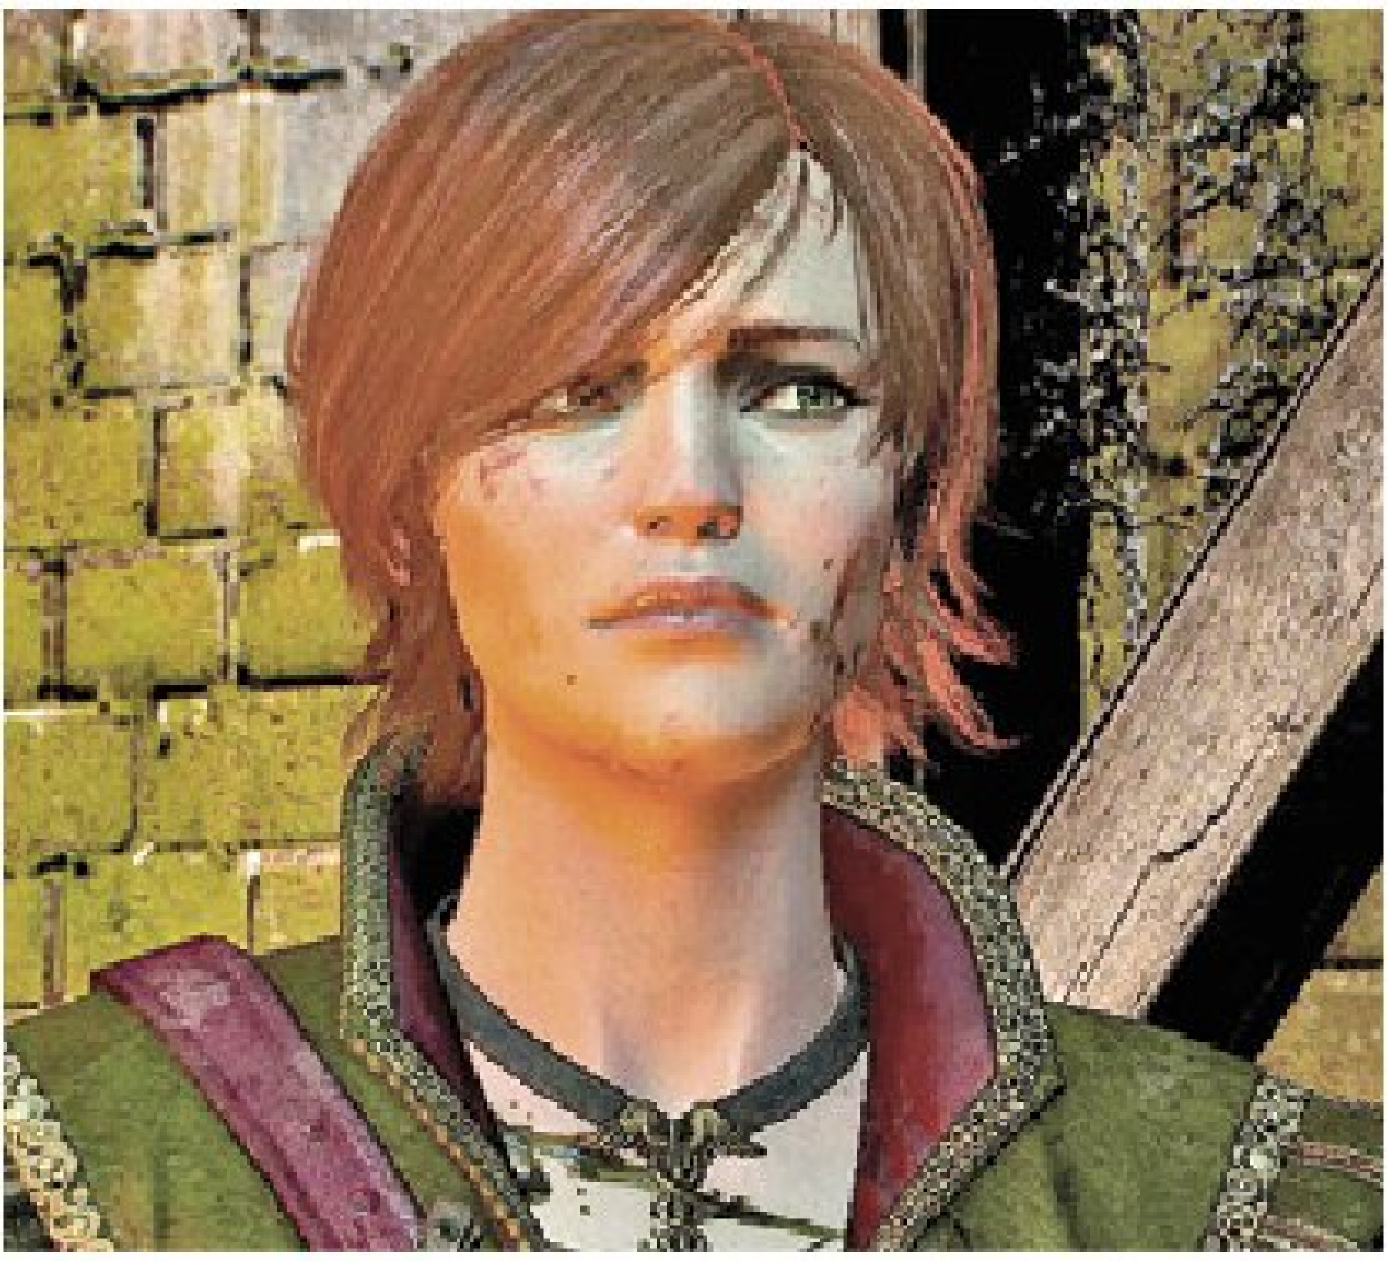
Upon exiting the manor house, you're met by a blunt Wild One woman named Adela, who reckons teasing you about your cat-like eyes is going to win you over. Does it? This begins Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: Rose on a Red Field.

Gather an additional notice on this board; "A Runewright Upon Your Shores Has Landed" to begin Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: Enchanting: Start-Up Costs.

The Road To The Toad

OBJECTIVES

- Enter the Oxenfurt sewers.
- Search the sewers using your Witcher Senses.



Shani

Journey southwest to the second city of Oxenfurt, and locate the open well in the northern part of town. Climb down the ladder, and examine the following using your Witcher Senses:

- Boot prints from a man.
- A smaller set of boot prints from a woman. She came alone.

Continue into a large sewer chamber of grating and gates, and fight off a Drowner. Then continue your Witcher Sense search:

- Find a corpse in the south-east corner near a grating. It was felled by a blade, not a monster's claw.

Further into the chamber are the cries of a woman in distress. This turns out to be a field medic for the Redanian Army, vainly attempting to revive one of her soldier escorts. You're surprised to recognize her as Shani, an old and dear friend, sent here to gather a sample of venom spewed by the monster residing here. Converse as you wish. Though she needs no help, you both agree to find the location where the monster attacked.

CORRECT COMBAT PREPARATION

It's wise to Meditate, brew any potions and purchase provisions for your forthcoming sewer exploration before descending. Golden Oriole is a must-have!

Gather an additional notice on this board; "A Runewright Upon Your Shores Has Landed" to begin Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: Enchanting: Start-Up Costs.

OBJECTIVES

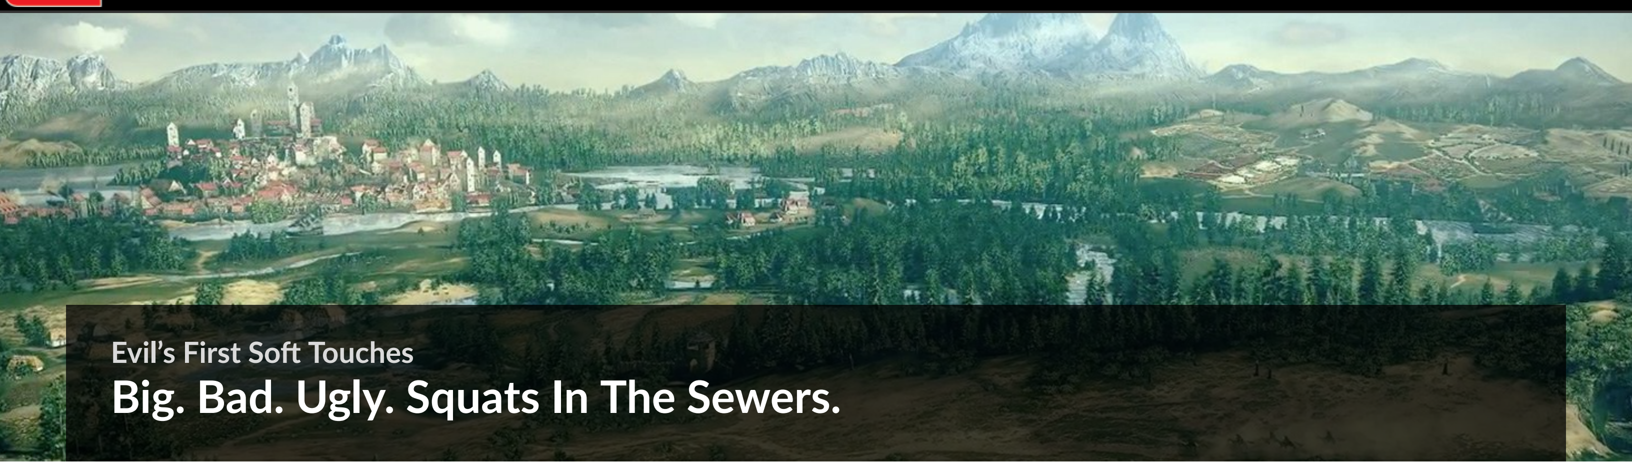
- Go to the spot where the monster attacked Shani and the Redanian soldiers.

Follow Shani to the bent grating. Use your Witcher Senses to reveal a section of weakened wall on the right, before using Aard to demolish the wall. Walk into a subsequent chamber, where further evidence of the monster's violence is found. Converse with Shani as you wish; only one of Shani's men is still unaccounted for. You can either search the area for the skeleton key held by the commander in order to make your way down the sewers or you can jump down the hole in order to explore the sewers more quickly.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the key to the lower level of the sewers using your Witcher Senses.
- Find the monster's lair.

After reaching the lower level of the sewers, prepare to battle around six to eight Drowners. Afterward, examine the corpse here where an interesting discovery is made. Battle a few Drowner stragglers until none remain, and optionally locate the slime patches (showing the beast was just here) and further corpses. Move toward the central sewer chamber where you agree to lure the beast out. Naturally, you're the bait.



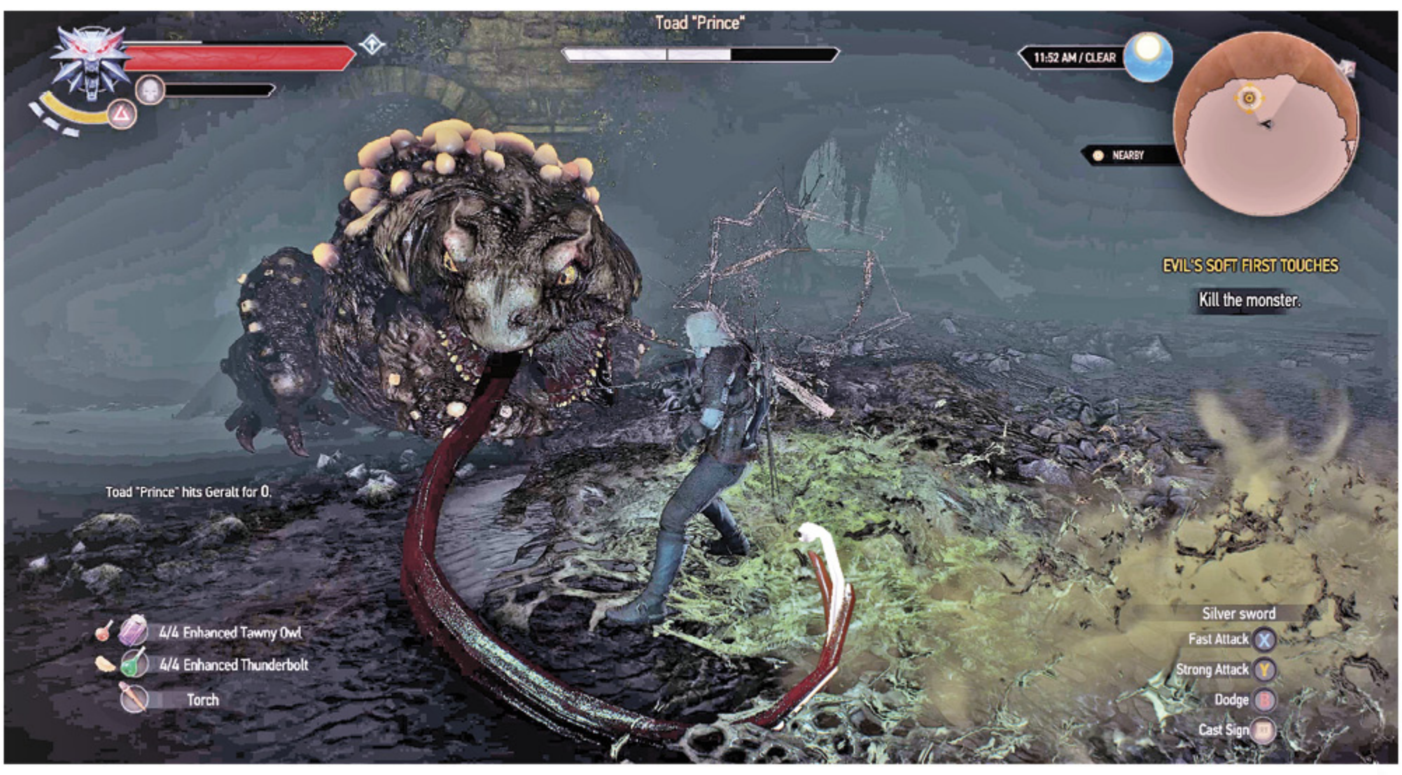
Evil's First Soft Touches

Big. Bad. Ugly. Squats In The Sewers.

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the monster.

A giant Toad lands with a disgusting squish on the ground of the circular chamber. You must vanquish this poisonous, bloated beast before you continue.



DEFEATING TOAD "PRINCE": THE BEAST'S ATTACKS

The Toad Prince has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:

Jump: Expect a leaping maneuver whenever the Toad jumps to face you, jumps forward to change position, or leaps back when you're too close. It likes to leap and land behind or to the side of you, forcing you to change view. Simply lock onto the beast when this happens so you don't lose sight of it, and roll or dodge so you aren't a sitting duck.

Jump and Squash: Closer in, the Toad Prince's leap sometimes ends with it knocking you down with the sheer force of its impact, staggering you. Make sure you rapidly react with a well-timed roll or dodge.

Vomit: This disgusting projectile is usually vomited out at closer ranges, obscures your vision like a Water Hag's attack, hits in a wide arc, and is poisonous. It is also easily dodged.

Spit: Another revolting offensive technique, the Toad launches a blob of spit at you, inflicting poison damage if it connects, and turning into a poison cloud at the point of impact if it doesn't. Dodge it!

Tongue Lash: When you're at long-range, expect a darting lash straight at you. At mid-range, the lash is at a wider, horizontal angle. A roll or dodge, or a retreat when you see the monster's maw open, helps minimize damage. A riskier plan is to roll directly at the Toad, slicing at it (usually at the side) while the tongue attack finishes.

Gaseous Emissions: Poison sacs on the Toad's back throw up large poison globules that explode and cause a small puddle and poison cloud to appear when they impact (which are three random points in the arena). Avoid the puddle and cloud; backing up is a good plan here. Then light the gas clouds with Igni (assuming you're not inside them!).

General Toad Tactics: As soon as the battle begins, the Toad utilizes ranged attacks to dominate the arena. Get in close, and the Toad jumps, landing and attempting to strike you to inflict tremendous damage and knocking you down. Stay too far away and remain defensive, and expect poison clouds (both via spit and gas attacks). The Toad's large health and powerful attacks mean you need to keep moving, and looking for an opening to inflict as much damage as possible.

DEFEATING TOAD "PRINCE": THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

A Good Defense: As the battle begins, cast Quen to add an extra layer of protection. Even better is the Golden Oriole potion, which nullifies the Toad's poisonous attacks, and allows you to heal yourself using the Toad's previously deadly gas clouds!

Circling for the Kill: Keep yourself moving at all times, ideally circling left or right of the Toad and moving toward it. This usually allows you to more easily evade any of the Toad's attacks, or at least gives you a greater chance to react to them.

Swordplay and Yrden: Cast Yrden at mid-range and retreat so the Toad follows you, enters your magic circle, and slows down considerably. Coat your sword in Cursed Oil, then make up to three strong strikes before retreating. Without Yrden, dodge or roll to the side (as you would attack a Bear), inflict two regular slashes, and retreat.

Igni and Ranged Attacks: Despite Shani mentioning the Toad's lack of fearing fire, this foe can be damaged with Igni, though this isn't as significantly damaging, and is mainly used to clear any poison clouds in your vicinity. At long range, lob in a Northern Wind bomb to immobilize this foe. Throw Superior Dancing Star from the chamber's edge is another option, to stun the Toad before following up with sword violence.

OTHER ADVICE

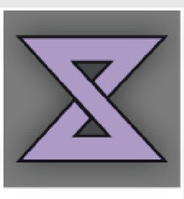
Never stay in the same spot for long, the Toad's spit attacks leave poison clouds on the ground and his various other ranged attacks can damage you no matter where you try to hide. Approach the Toad and provoke it to jump up and slam down until it is facing you (dodge in close then dodge away as soon as the Toad jumps up. This keeps you out of its attack range but keeps you close enough to start attacking as soon as it's safe). When close enough, cast Yrden on the ground to trap the Toad, then attack it with your sword. The Toad becomes un-trapped after three hits or five seconds. Northern Wind bombs also freeze and trap the Toad, preventing it from attacking, and allow you to get close and attack. The Golden Oriole potion causes the Toad's poison to heal you instead of damaging you; use this potion during the fight as you're almost guaranteed to be able to walk into a poison cloud. Using Igni forces the Toad to jump away. This is useful to interrupt the Toad's maneuvers and force it to jump to a new location within the arena.

TOAD "PRINCE" VULNERABILITIES

Northern Wind Bomb

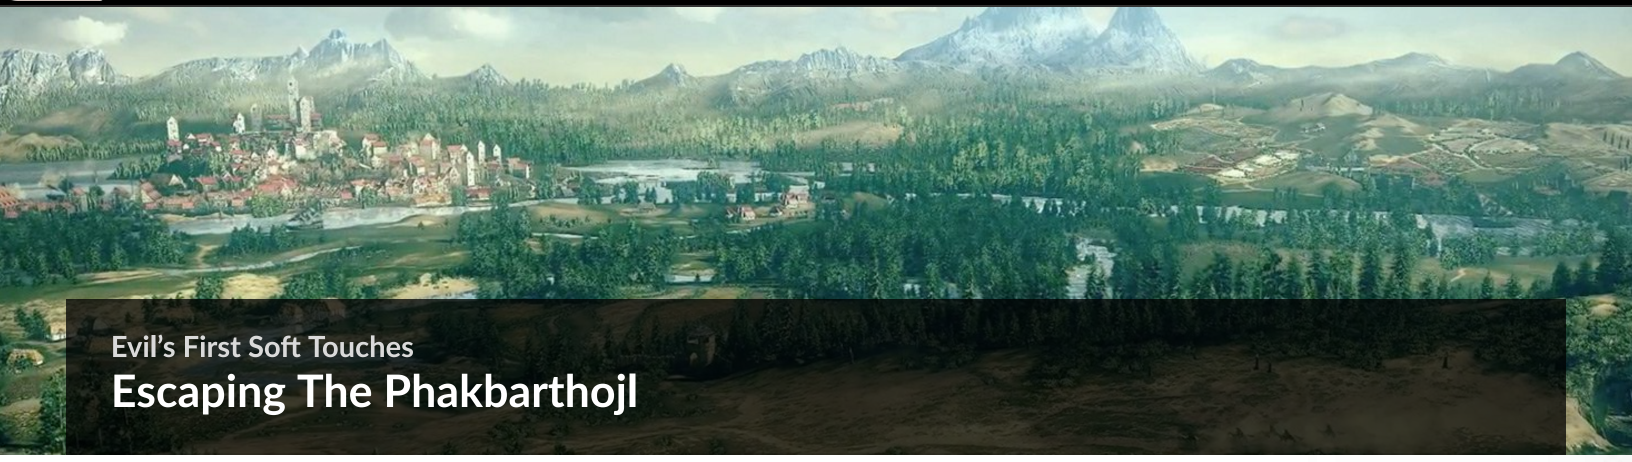
Golden Oriele

Cursed Oil



Yrden

After combat concludes, you're coated in unpleasant slime after gutting the Toad Prince, and witness a transformation just as you slip into unconsciousness.



Evil's First Soft Touches

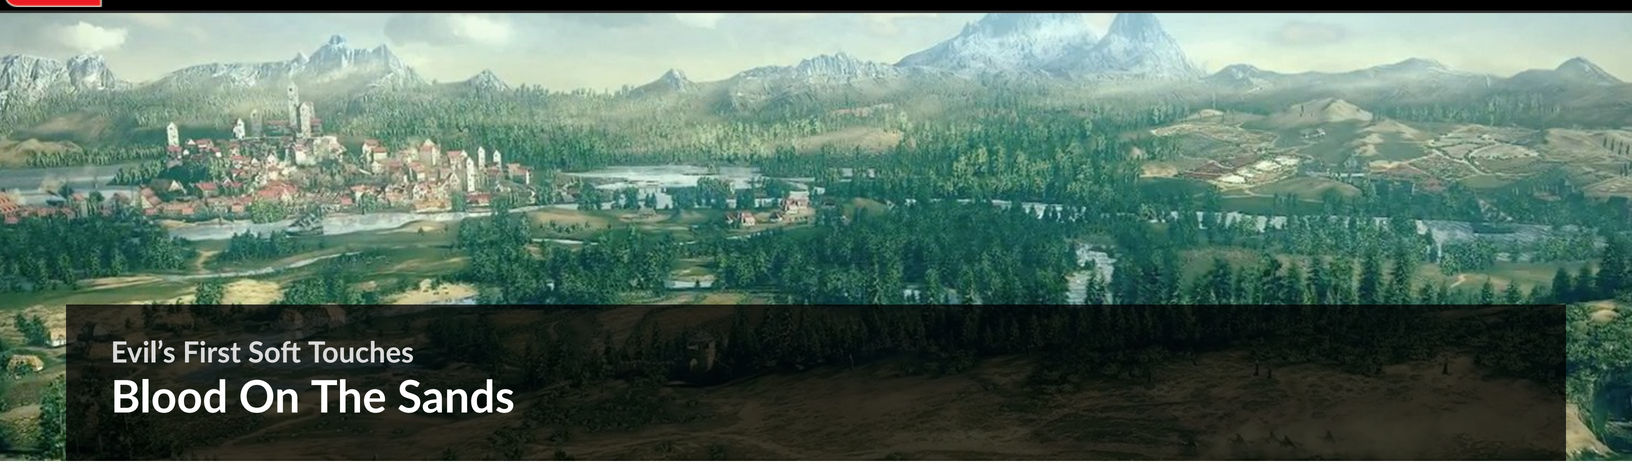
Escaping The Phakbarthojl

Gaunter O'Dimm, Master Mirror

You wake aboard a ship named Albatross (or in the Ofier tongue, "Phakbarthojl") with a crew of strange guards with stranger language, en route to Ofier. A fellow prisoner fills you in on the details; answer him how you wish. When the guards bring you food, and you ask the prisoner how to say "take me to your captain." Try to listen to him, as you're then presented with three choices:

- Choose the third option, "...alle'khe uhl eghullath!"

The guards are more impressed with your learned tongue, but otherwise the conclusion is the same; you're left here and your request ignored. Moments later, a figure strides out of the shadows and up to your cell, a man you might recognize if you met him in White Orchard during your initial search for Yennefer. Gaunter O'Dimm strikes a deal with you. You're extracted from this situation, after Master Mirror gives you something to remember him by.

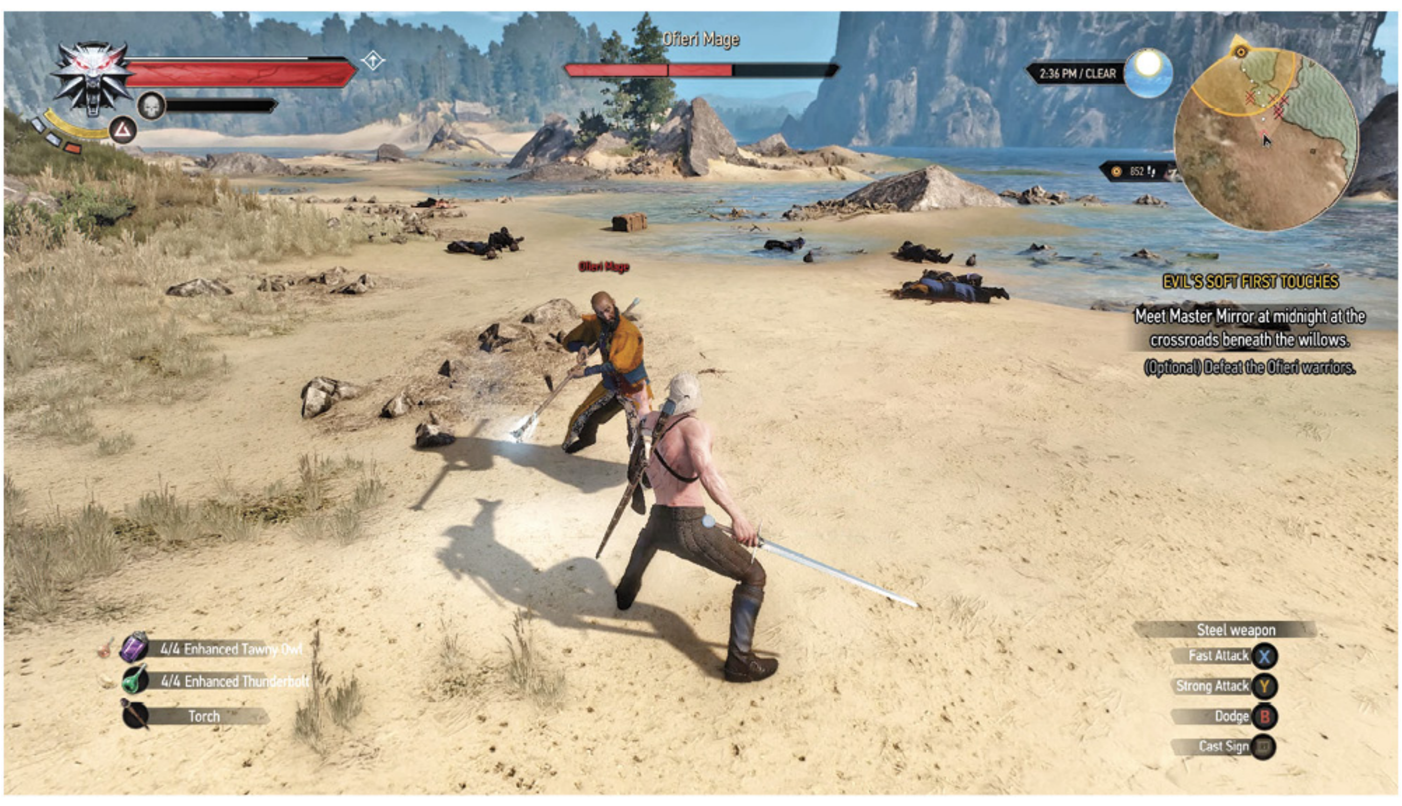


Evil's First Soft Touches

Blood On The Sands

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Defeat the Ofieri warriors.



A mighty storm cracks open the Ofieri vessel, and it runs aground on the beaches northwest of Novigrad. After extricating yourself from a rather ignominious position, you are free to face a group of six Ofieri warriors lead by an impressively skilled Mage. You can:

- Run away, ideally in a southeasterly direction. Or,
- Battle them:

DEFEATING THE OFIERI MAGE: THE MAGE'S ATTACKS

Sand Cage: A number of small clouds of sand appear around you, before quickly closing in to damage and knock you down. Simply roll or dodge out of this maelstrom (the Mage's most damaging attack), and close the distance; the Mage doesn't tend to attempt this when he's facing you in melee combat. If you're fighting warriors too, back away from the Mage completely and coax the warriors into fighting first.

Sand Tornado (Long Range): A fast-moving whirl of sand whips toward you in a straight line. This gust causes damage and lifts you off the ground then throws you down just as violently. The tornado is signaled by the Mage whirling his staff around him, and he remains within (becomes part of) the tornado itself. As the tornado is relatively slow-moving, multiple dodge or rolls can quickly avoid this. It can be interrupted by casting Aard on the tornado as it comes into range.

(Close Range) Force Push: A quick wind gust attack that knocks you back, this is his way of exiting close combat after you strike him repeatedly. So don't be greedy when tackling him; roll in with a couple of strikes and then back up so you aren't struck by this and staggered.

Sand Coil Attack: The Mage points his staff in your direction and starts to spin it in a circle; sand shoots out of the staff (like a sideways tornado), causing damage and temporarily stunning you. Dodge to the side!

Staff Attack: At close combat range, the Mage uses his magic staff as a physical weapon (striking multiple times); simply parry and counter or dodge the attack as you would any other.

A Vanishing Act (Defensive): Expect him to disengage or avoid combat by simply vanishing, only to appear a few moments later with a whipping sand gust around him that damages those nearby. He can also dispel Yrden, reflect most bombs and bolts back at you, and tends not to burn or freeze for nearly as long as a normal human. Simply re-acquire the target once he vanishes (by locking onto the foe again) and roll out of his way until his attack concludes.

A Vanishing Act (Offensive): The Mage may teleport in close to you, while simultaneously causing a large sand blast that damages and staggers you.

Weaknesses: Sword Damage. The Mage is very susceptible to sword strikes. If you manage to get in close (after stunning the Mage), it is possible to hit him three times before he counters. This is the foundation of your attack plan.

DEFEATING THE OFIERI FOES: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Begin by equipping the armor you're carrying, as it's not wise to fight the Ofieri bare-chested (despite what many a Skelliger might tell you).

Back up away from the Mage and save him for last. Then battle the warriors in the same way you would tackle a group of bandits or other human soldiers. All the usual tactics apply here.

Be advised that as long as more than one soldier is alive, the Mage only uses his teleports to stay away from you and any soldiers in the vicinity. When one soldier is left, the Mage begins using some ranged attacks. When only the Mage remains, expect him to utilize all his attacks. Expect him to teleport when you get too close. He also always counters if struck three times, using a force blast that knocks you down. So don't get greedy while hitting him. Instead, try a well-timed roll to get behind the Mage without being hit by the counter.

The Ofieri Mage is extremely dangerous at long range, and attacks from this distance that you might attempt are almost always dodged or reflected back at you. So close the distance as quickly as possible, using dodging and rolls to avoid any magical attacks along the way.

Once you're within sword-clipping distance, use Aard to stagger the Mage, and quickly follow up with two or three fast strikes. Then roll or dodge away, avoiding any sand he whips up.

Continue with this "attrition" based tactic. Stagger him with Aard (or Igni, which is another option) and roll in to inflict two or three nasty sword strikes without being too greedy, before retreating back again, until the Mage yields.

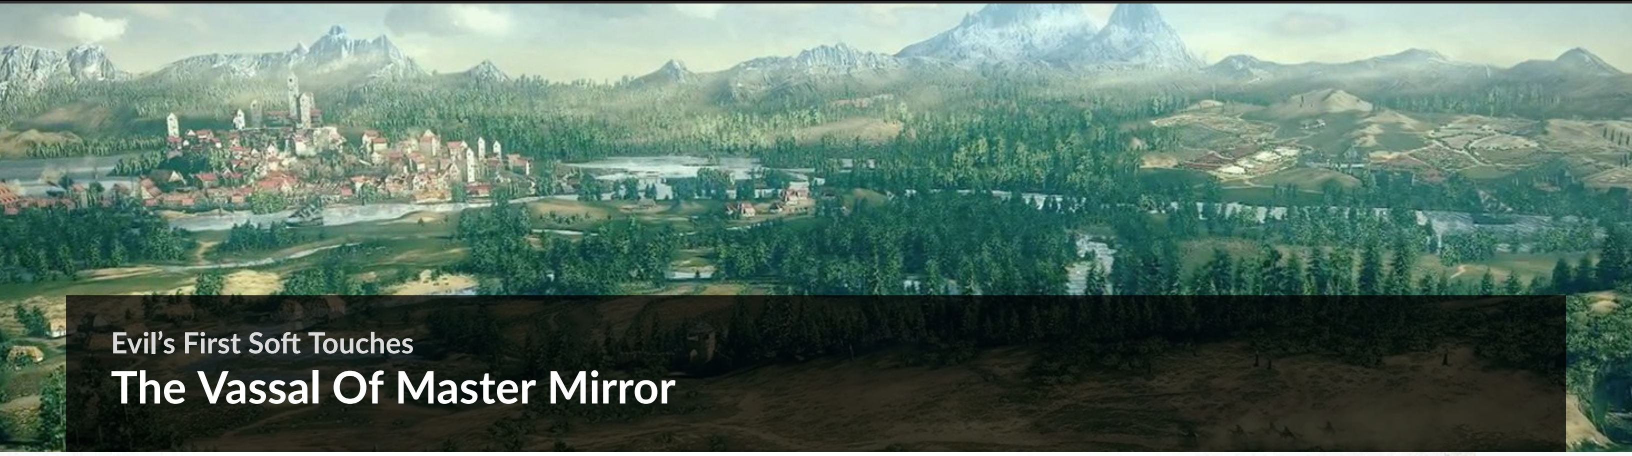
Other Advice: After re-equipping your missing armor pieces, focus on the soldiers first. Dodge any area-of-effect attacks from the Mage, and once he's the only enemy left, quickly use Axii to stun him for long enough to reach him, and inflict sword damage. Igni and Aard can also keep the Mage occupied, allowing you to reach him.

Looting the Mage: This foe always drops a "Letter from an Ofieri Merchant" (read it at your leisure), as well as a (random) runestone, and (random) valuable trinket (such as a necklace).

OFIERI MAGE VULNERABILITIES

Hanged Man's Venom

Aard

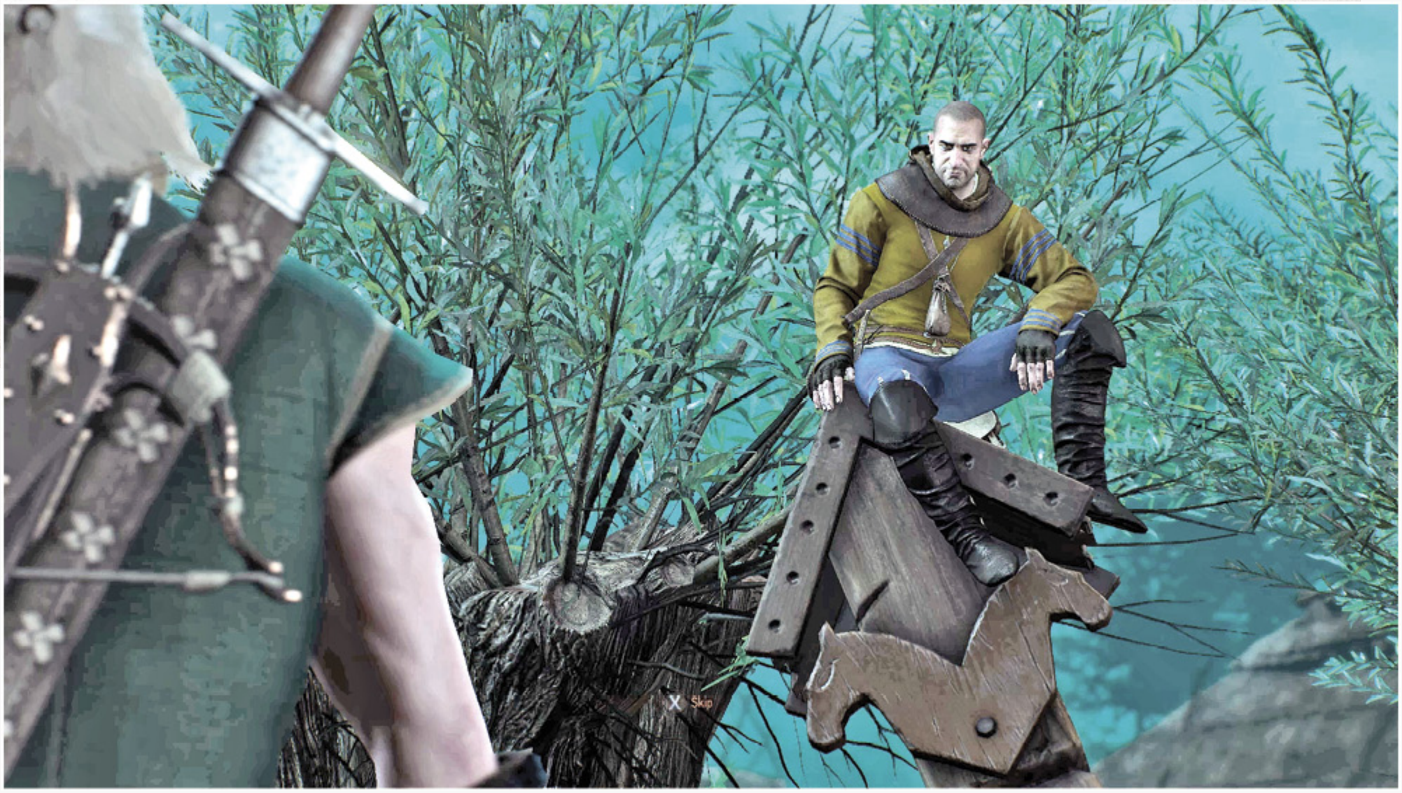


Evil's First Soft Touches

The Vassal Of Master Mirror

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Master Mirror at midnight at the crossroads beneath the willows.



Once the Ofieri foes are vanquished, loot any chests or corpses you wish, and make your way eastward, past a beach cottage brimming with Drowners, to the village of Yantra in Gustfields. At the crossroads, just west of the village, look for the cluster of children singing nursery rhymes, near the sunflower fields. Wait or meditate until midnight, and speak to Master Mirror. Answer him how you wish.

The conversation can best be described as “strained.” It seems you have little choice but to agree to Gaunter O’Dimm’s orders, which involve collecting on a pact Gaunter made with that rapscallion, Olgierd von Everec.

Evil's First Soft Touches

End: Heads Will Roll

OBJECTIVES

- Go see Olgierd.
- (Optional) Defeat Olgierd.

Return to the Garin Estate, which is burning merrily (it seems the Wild Ones' merry-making got a little out of hand). Two Wild Ones bring out a prisoner, attempting an impromptu execution. You can:

- Answer the snotty executioners with "careful now," followed by "let him go or face my wrath," and face Olgierd himself in a spot of ferocious combat.

- Answer with neutral responses that aren't helpful to the prisoner's predicament, and watch the execution as Olgierd greets you.

DEFEATING OLGIERD: VON EVEREC'S ATTACKS

Advanced Swordplay: Olgierd is most adept at flurries of swordplay. He has incredible speed and power. Not only does he use quick combo attacks, but he can take on a shadow form and quickly dash toward you, launching powerful special attacks. Dashes and combo attacks end with special attacks that knock you down and inflict serious damage.

Using his Noggin: If you try to cast Signs on him, Olgierd dashes away. He's also immune to mind-control spells (so no Axii for you!).

Black Sand Counter Attack: When struck with swords or after you hit him thrice while he is stunned, Olgierd tosses a handful of black sand at you. If you are struck by this, it stuns and distorts your view. Plan your attack carefully to get out of this attacks range before it happens.

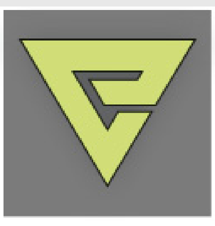
Zig-Zag Charge: A series of dashes with Olgierd's sword glowing red, and his form in shadow, usually ends in you being struck and knocked back or over. Dodge or roll to avoid this. With skill, try parrying the end of the technique and fight back with sword strikes.

Straight-Line Charge: An almost-instant dash forward and a mighty swipe, this looks like an impressively devastating technique. If you time a parry, you can counter and fight back, usually using this plan to win the fight.

OLGIERD'S VULNERABILITIES

Troll or Leshen Decoction

Hanged Man's Venom



Quen

DEFEATING OLGIERD: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Initial Aggressiveness: Expect Olgierd to immediately launch a relentless series of attacks. The type depends on your location. If you're very close, he uses sword combo strikes ending with a very powerful attack. If you're further away, expect various dashing attacks so he can get in close and whittle you down.

Seeing Red: Olgierd's special attacks stand out thanks to the red energy surrounding them (and his sabre), as well as a brief period of slow motion right before the attack. Let's hope you can react in time!

Counter This! Are you a master of countering? Then you can complete this fight without ever being hit!

Oil and Quen: As you might not be expecting this fight, it's worth meditating first, and coating your weapon in Hanged Man's Venom. Next, cast Quen so you're protected from Olgierd's impressively-damaging sword swings. Certain decoctions (the Leshen, for example) that reflect damage are also helpful.

Patience and Dodging: The dashing and swordplay Olgierd employs is as impressive as it is dangerous, so fancy footwork is always a good option. Dodge (or roll) around him and make a trio of sword swings just after he finishes a technique (ideally followed by a dodge to the side). Yrden is also an option after his strikes, to slow him down.

Far Away Furiousness: If other techniques aren't working, feel free to back away from Olgierd, until he's prompted to try a straight-line charge you with his red sword a-glowing; the weakness after the charge is key to winning this fight.

Goading and Parrying: Waltzing in and slashing isn't wise. Though you can parry during his sword flurries (when he's in shadow), you're usually not able to parry them all. Wait until Olgierd makes his charge attack, and then parry it. Follow up with some damaging strikes. Repeat this process to wear him down and eventually he loses his head.

Other Tactics: When the fight starts, roll away from Olgierd, forcing him to be on the offensive, and thus leaving him open to your counter attacks. If you keep your distance, he always tries dashing. These maneuvers have a large window of opportunity for countering, right before Olgierd tries his special attack (easily seen by the red glow). Tap the parry button when his sabre glows red and time slows to counter; the energy from the blade is reflected back on Olgierd, stunning him. Then follow up with three sword attacks before Olgierd counters. As he starts to counter, roll backward and right so you're not hit. Then repeat this plan.

After the battle, or after watching the condemned man be executed, Olgierd speaks to you about the reasoning for the mob justice, and also of three unusual wishes he wants fulfilled. It falls to you to complete the first two of them:

- He wants his departed brother, Vlodimir von Everec, to be shown the time of his life. Which is a little tricky, as Vlodimir is currently dead. This starts Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Dead Man's Party.

- He wants the house of Maximillian Borsodi. Quite how one moves a house is currently a mystery. This starts Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame!

You leave the Garin estate with the crowns Olgierd promised (though there's no chance to scavenge any valuables from the burning building). Before leaving, Gaunter O'Dimm appears again, providing some small hints (and some conversation choices to gain more knowledge) of your forthcoming tasks, as well as some blood to help with the summoning of Vlodimir's spirit.

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Evil's Soft First Touches; Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage; Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: A Midnight Clear

LOCATIONS: Garin Estate, Oxenfurt, Shani's Clinic (Oxenfurt), Von Everec Estate, Brunwich, The Alchemy Inn (Oxenfurt)

ENEMIES: Wraiths, von Everec's ancestors, boars

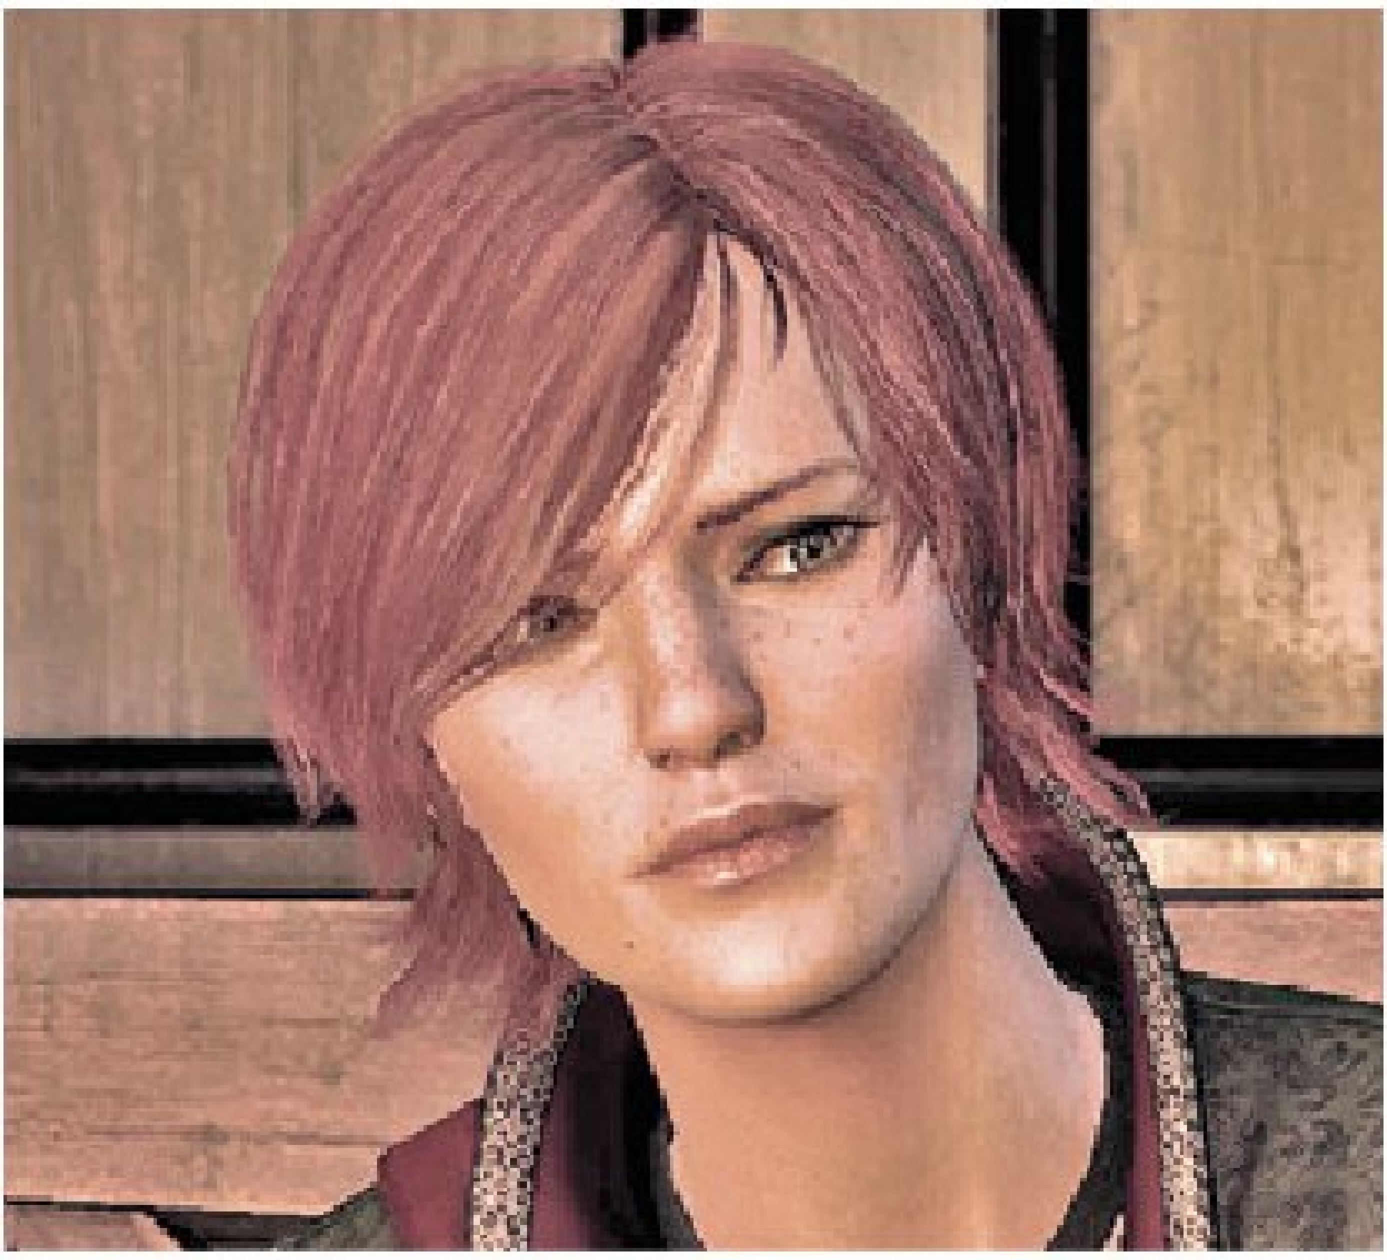
OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Shani about the von Everec family crypt.
- Meet Shani in front of the von Everec family crypt.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Evil's Soft First Touches.

Your erstwhile companion Shani may have the knowledge to summon Olgierd's brother from the afterlife. She is practicing medicine within the walls of Oxenfurt, in her clinic just south of the Oxenfurt Harbor signpost. Head there, weave through the wheezing and coughing peasants, and up the interior stairs, where a group of Redanian soldiers is speaking to her in regards to the antidote she is concocting from the remains of the "toad."



Shani

Engage in some patter with the guard captain regarding scholars, and your opinion of Shani. Answer them how you wish. After the soldiers leave, ask Shani where she's been, before requesting her help. You explain your predicament. Shani offers to fetch a censer, and after you mention whose ghost it is you're trying to summon, she offers advice on finding the von Everec family crypt.

The crypt itself is a reasonably short gallop north and a little eastward of Oxenfurt, deep into the territory of Gustfields. You are wise to concoct potions and meditate before you reach the gloomy von Everec Estate. However, Shani is here gathering wild flowers to brighten up your day. She is fashioning a garland for a wedding. Would you mind accompanying her? Answer how you wish, before she hands you the censer.

Items: Censer

SUBTLE FLIRTATIONS WITH SHANI

While you're speaking to Shani, think carefully about the questions and answers you give; this blossoming relationship requires subtle pleasantries over sarcasm and abruptness. Though the answers don't matter right now, becoming more than friends with Shani requires attentive answers and subtle flirtation.

Dead Man's Party

A Sartorial Reanimation

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the wraiths as they appear.
- Use your Witcher Senses to explore the von Everec family crypt.
- Spread incense in every room in the crypt.

Shani decides to remain at the entrance to the creepy-looking crypt. Prepare your finest wraith-slaying equipment and enter the vault. Sure enough, a group of around six wraiths (attacking three at a time) have prepared an unwelcoming committee for you. Remove these threats as you would normally (consult the Bestiary of this guide for takedown tactics). Lure wraiths into side passages or escape back up to the surface if you're overwhelmed.

After the fracas, examine the votive fire in the middle of the chamber. Then check an alcove in the surrounding wall which holds an old scimitar and has a stone coffin inscribed with the name Vlodimir von Everec. Equip the censer, and visit every chamber within the crypt, uttering the summoning ritual as you go. As the torches snuff out, the chambers start to fill with incense. Return and light the votive fire.

Vlodimir von Everec (Ghost)

Vlodimir von Everec (Possessed Geralt)

Your activities meet with some success, though you raise every Von Everec family member except for Vlodimir. It seems they aren't happy with your actions. Prepare to defeat all five of them in combat, defending their weapon attacks as you would a bandit. After the ghosts are sent to the ether, Vlodimir von Everec makes an appearance. Feel free to ask him how he died, inquire about Olgierd, and answer how you wish. The conversation winds around to talking about the wish; you are to provide Vlodimir with one last evening of cavorting and debauchery. The only problem is, Vlodimir needs a corporeal form to manifest into. After a degree of protest, a host body is chosen—yours!

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Shani by the farm where the wedding will be held.

Shani wakes up "Geralt," and finds him to be somewhat changed. After the situation is explained somewhat (answer both Shani and Vlodimir as you wish), it is agreed that Vlodimir will accompany Shani to her wedding party. While Vlodimir makes some uncouth remarks about the suppleness of Shani, leave the von Everec estate, and ride northward, through the outskirts of Brunwich, a series of small farms around a lake, toward the main manor farmstead where the party is to begin.

THE VON EVERECS' VALUABLES

Before leaving the von Everec crypt, feel free to explore a loose wall (crumble it to dust with your Aard sign) revealing a key on a corpse. This opens a small mausoleum, accessed via a cave with a number of ferocious Arachnomorphs. Loot the mausoleum for valuables.

Dead Man's Party

Walking With A Dead Man Over My Shoulder

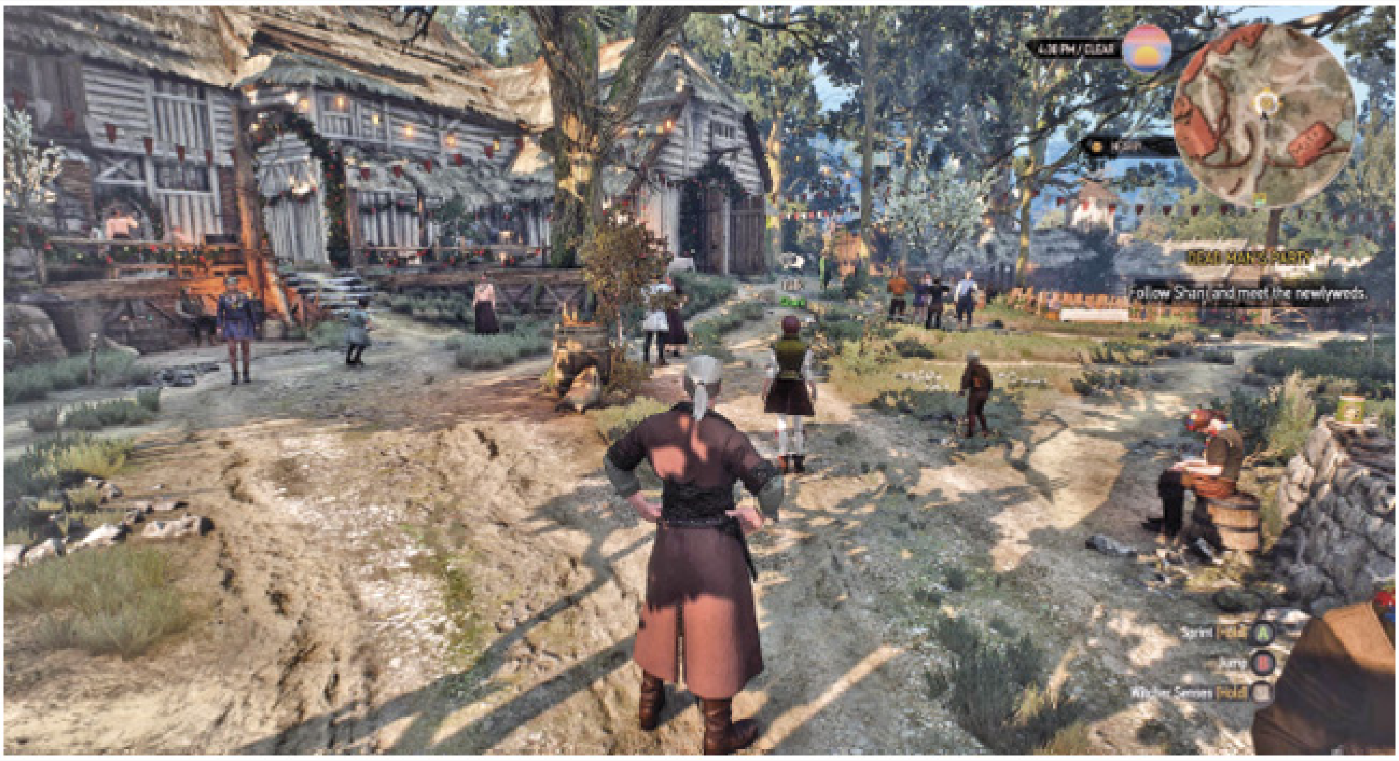
OBJECTIVES

- Follow Shani and meet the newlyweds.
- Talk to the newlyweds.

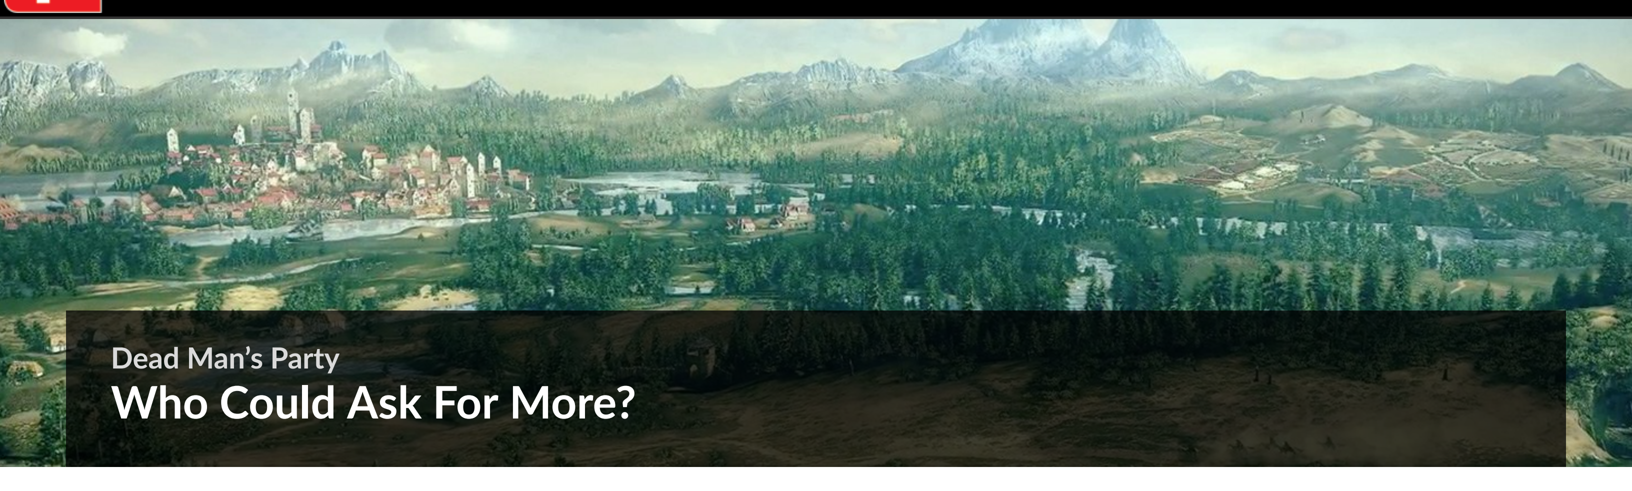
Aldona

Johnnus

After waiting with the insufferable Vlodimir until Shani arrives, you are forced to "borrow" a set of clothing from a nearby washing line, and take a razor to your stubble. After Shani is met (answer both of them as you wish, with an option to inquire about Shani's grudging acceptance of Vlodimir's incorrigible flirting), you enter the grounds of the manor farmstead, pause to look at a dog kennel (without a hound around), examine a rowan tree (one of Shani's favorites), and then must follow Shani to greet the newlyweds.



As Vlodimir is in control, Shani attempts to steer the conversation away from bawdy talk about the bride, and offensive talk about peasants. But feel free to ask the happy couple about the choice of groom, a hefty dowry, and their knowledge of Shani if you wish. Afterwards, you are free to roam the farmstead's grounds, giving Vlodimir the time of his life.



Dead Man's Party

Who Could Ask For More?

OBJECTIVES

- Take part in the wedding activities until midnight.

DON'T RUN AWAY; IT'S ONLY ME

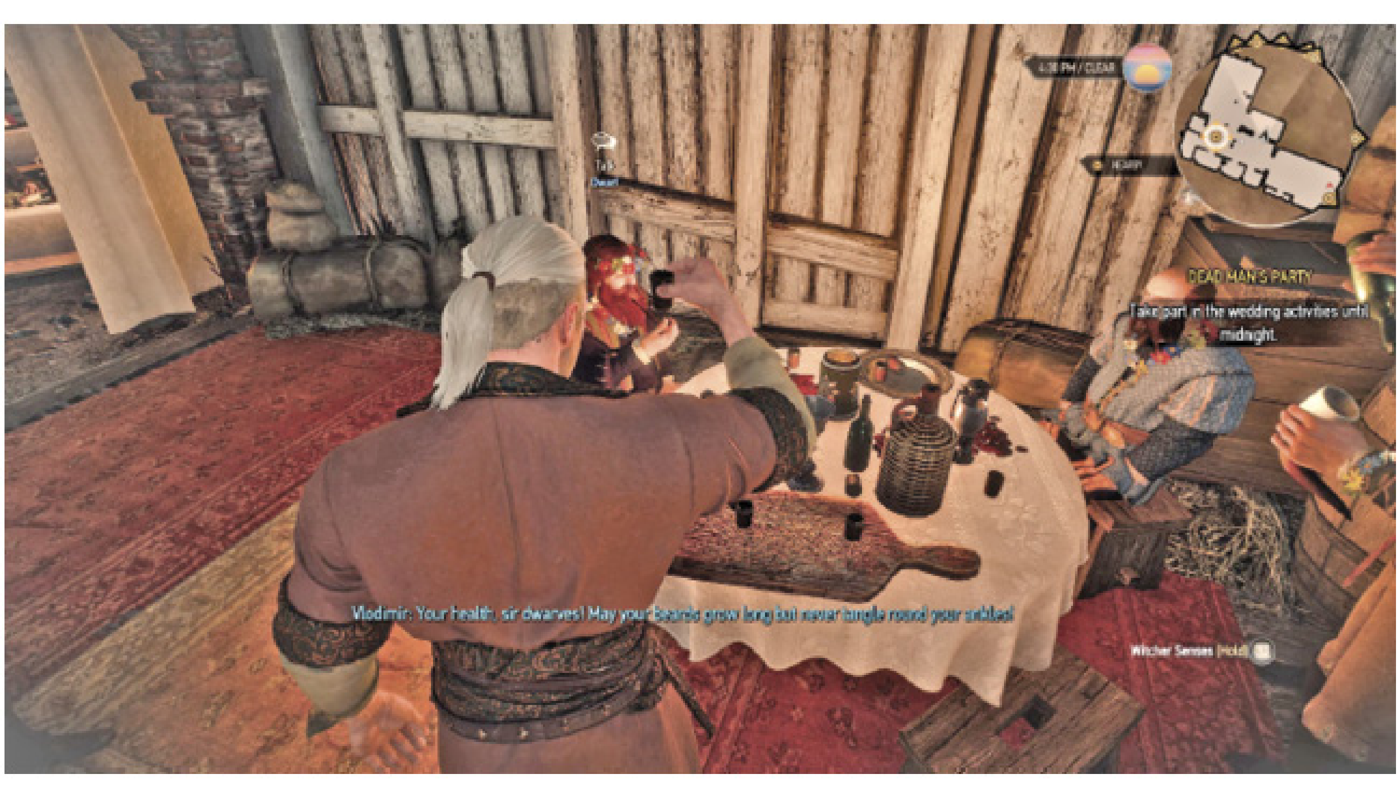
At this point, you are free to take part in the following wedding activities until midnight. Attempt each one to give Vlodimir every opportunity to enjoy himself. These can be completed in any order, and usually after the first two mandatory are concluded, the section marked "Ghost Dance" commences. After that, the rest of the activities can be completed.

OPTIONAL ACTVITY: BOTTOM'S UP!

Visit the small circular table and pick up the drink, toasting to the fair beauty here. And to Shani, naturally.

OPTIONAL ACTVITY: YOUR HEALTH, SIR DWARVES!

Locate the small circular table in the main building, pick up the drink, and toast the two diminutive bearded folk here.



DEAD MAN'S PARTY
Take part in the wedding activities until midnight.
Vlodimir: Your health, sir dwarves! May your beards grow long but never tangle round your ankles!
Witcher Senses (Hold)

OPTIONAL ACTVITY: FUZZY AND WELL RIPE!

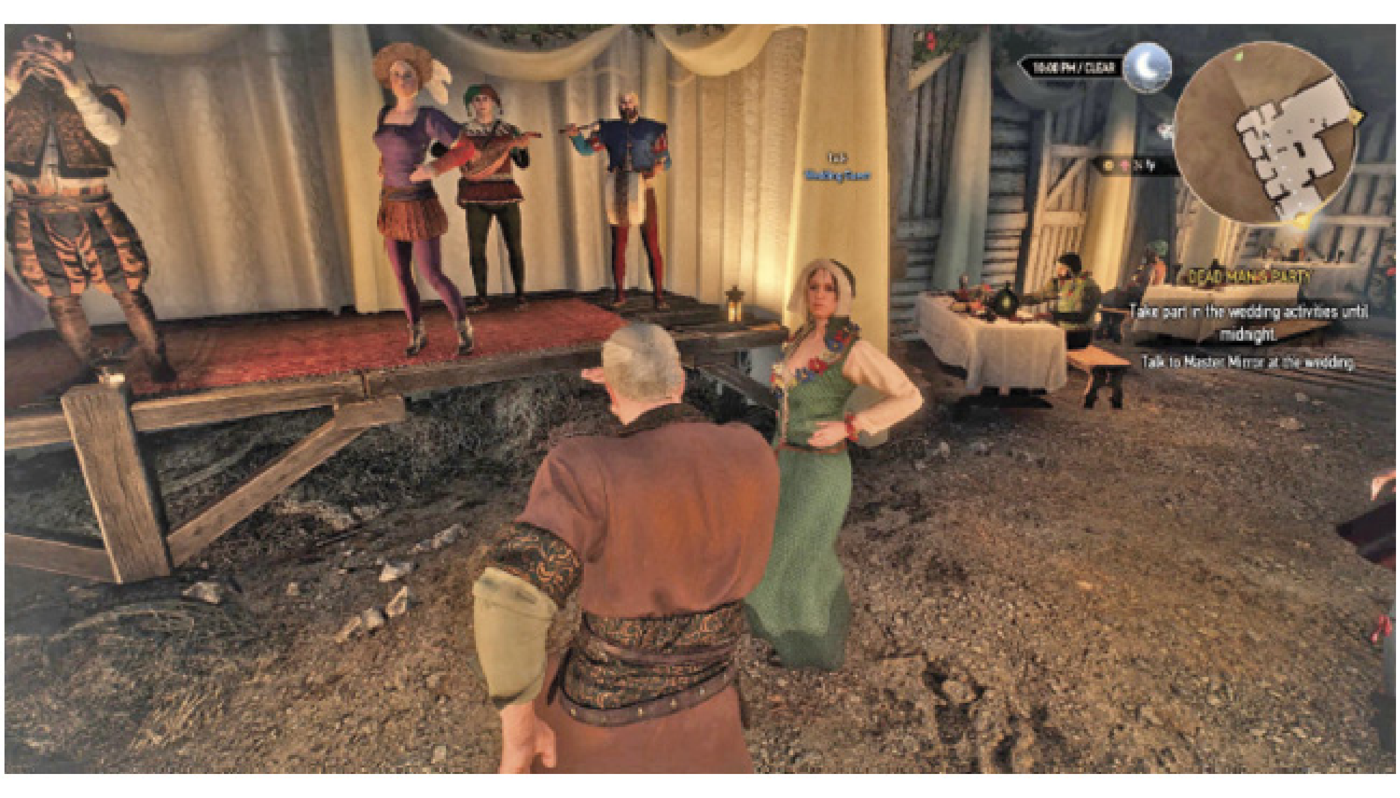
Wander the garden path near the loft ladder, and you chance upon a middle-aged woman. Vlodimir attempts his pick-up lines, causing the woman to blush and wander away. Still got it!

OPTIONAL ACTVITY: FIRE BURNS HOTTER IN AN OLD STOVE!

Locate the large oak tree, where an older lady is resting her back after pounding the churn. A short bout of banter then commences.

OPTIONAL ACTVITY: CUTTING A JIG

Enter the main hall, and feel free to show off your fancy footwork by dancing to the minstrel band. Shani refrains from joining you, despite Vlodimir's encouragement.



10:00 PM / CLEAR
DEAD MAN'S PARTY
Take part in the wedding activities until midnight.
Talk to Master Mirror at the wedding.

OPTIONAL ACTVITY: HORSEPLAY IN THE HAYLOFT

Find the ladder at the edge of the garden steps, close to the side entrance of the main barn. You beckon Shani to follow. Use your Witcher Senses to locate a pair of cushions, and sit down. Vlodimir mentions he finds Shani intimidating, and she promises a little more romance. Before you leave the hayloft, search a nearby table for a unique Gwent card. Don't leave Brunwich without it!

Items: Gwent Card: Cow

MANDATORY ACTVITY: KING OF THE SWINEHERDS

OBJECTIVES

- Drive the pigs into the pen (2).

Find the pig pen, where a group of peasant partygoers are attempting to catch some slippery pigs. After inquiring about a possible prize, agree to chase some pigs. To avoid becoming an embarrassment, locate the two darker colored pigs with the painted circles on their backs. Use Axii to stun them into submission, and walk over to the pens so each one follows you.

But be warned, because those dirty tricks will be recognized by one of the peasants. If you want to win a fluffy pig mascot for Shani, chase the pigs to the pen with no Witcher tricks.

MANDATORY ACTVITY: THE MAIDEN AND THREE BROTHERS

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat your opponents.

After completing King of the Swineherds by use of Axii, the method angers the peasantry, and you're not awarded the title. However, if you did it nicely, you will be given a unique wooden trophy of a pig's head to carry around on your horse and a fluffy mascot for Shani. Vlodimir is slightly dejected, while Shani indicates flirtation with a nearby maiden might brighten your spirits. Flirt with the peasant as you wish, until her three brothers appear and aren't too happy with your intentions. Answer them as you wish. The situation degenerates to a fight in the mud using wooden planks. Batter the three brothers and then have a final chat with Shani (answering her as you wish).

MANDATORY ACTVITY: A SMALL GAME OF GWENT

Outside, gathered around a table, a group of halflings are engaged in a game of Gwent. After Vlodimir insults their size, you can apologize (or not), and agree to a game. Despite Vlodimir waging Geralt's entire fortune, the halflings only take five percent of your coffers if you lose, with the added embarrassment of wearing a pair of donkey ears for the rest of the night. If you win, expect to gather some crowns.

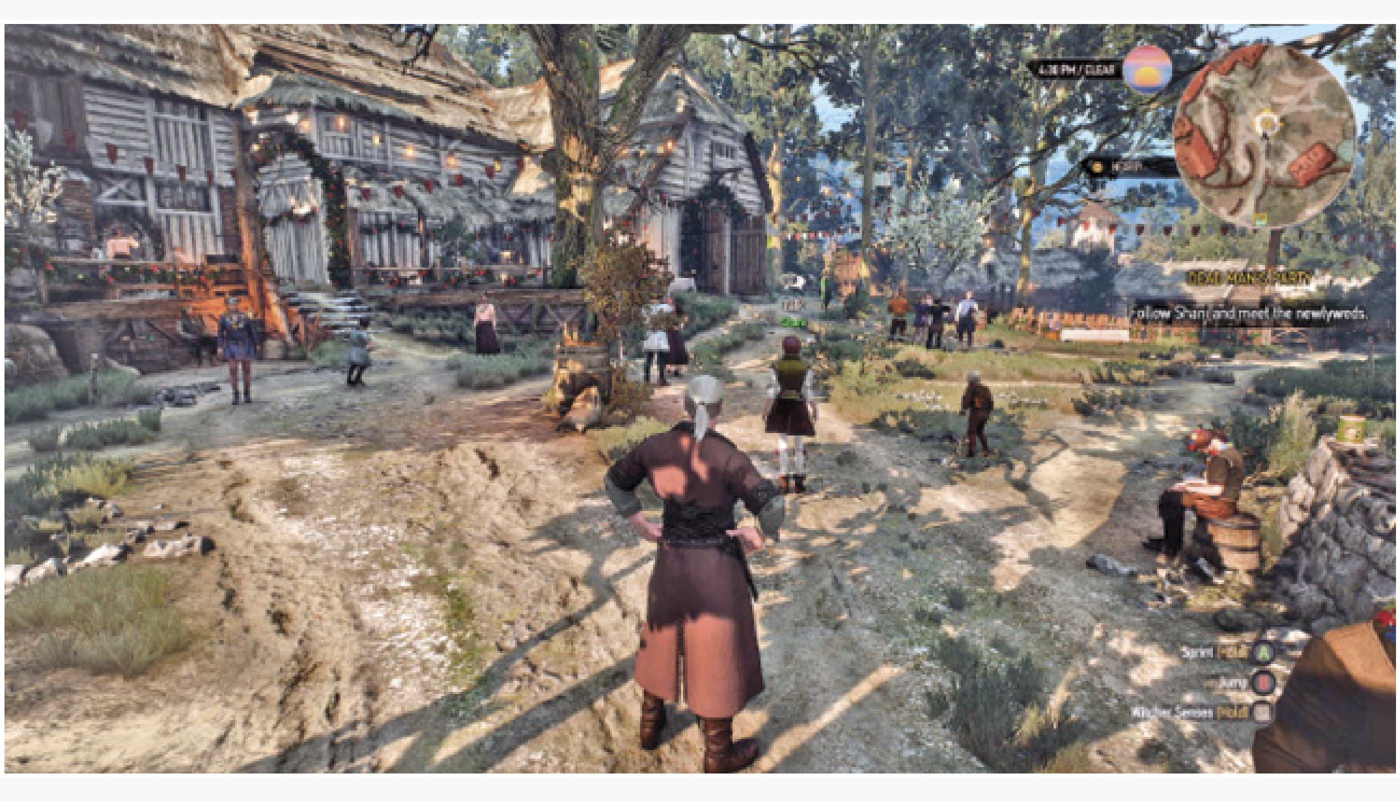
Items: Donkey Ears (loss)

MANDATORY ACTVITY: SLIP IN FOR A SLIPPER

OBJECTIVES

- Fish Shani's shoe out of the lake and give it to her.
- Defeat your opponents.

Saunter over to the small pond, where a group of peasants are playing a fishing game. After stripping to your skivvies, dive into the pond after Shani's shoe. Use your Witcher Senses to find it and two other soggy boots to prove you're particularly adept at this lark. In return, your "maid" is supposed to reward your gallantry. Perhaps later?

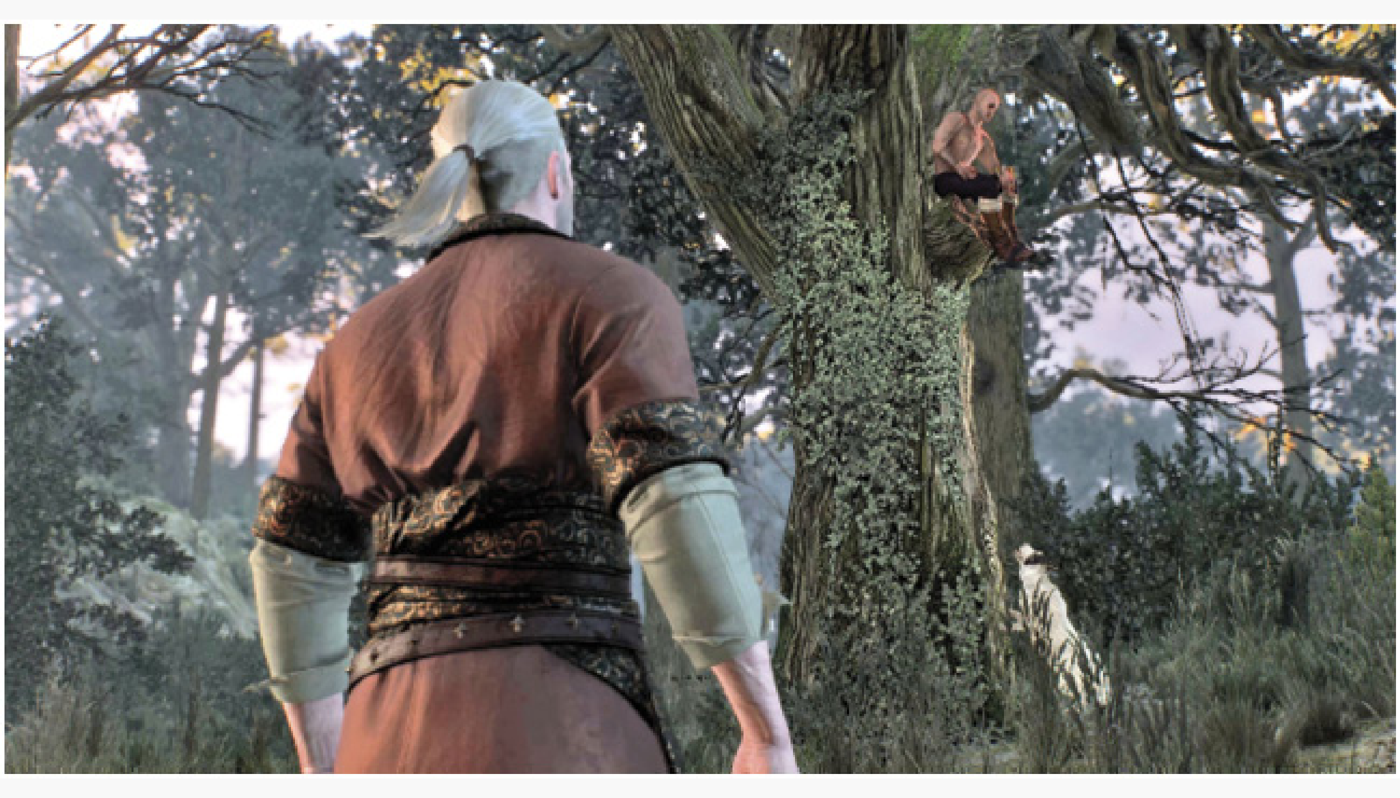


MANDATORY ACTVITY: MISSING MAN. MISSING MUTT.

OBJECTIVES

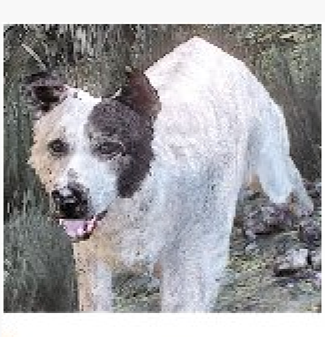
- Use your Witcher Senses to find the fire swallower.
- Escort the fire swallower back to the wedding.
- Protect the fire swallower from the "bear."
- (Optional) Inform the bride's mother about the fire swallower's fate.
- (Optional) Juggle to amuse the wedding guests.

Items: Lost Shoe (3)

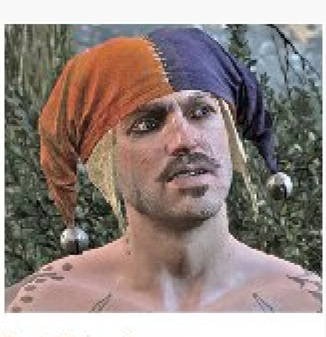


The parents of the bride (located outside) are in a tizzy regarding the location of a fire eater they paid to provide entertainment for the wedding. He seems to have disappeared; apparently chased off by the fearsome giant of a dog (Daemon) that resides on the property. Vlodimir agrees to find the fire swallower. Start your investigation at Daemon's kennel:

- You find a gnawed bone and other oversized accouterments showing the dog to be an oversized beast.
- There are dog tracks, but small.



Daemon



David Artensborrow

While Shani waits at the wedding, exit the compound and follow the dog's trail north and west into the nearby woods. Continue until you spot a spark-spitter's cap on the ground.

Items: Fire swallower's cap

Continue across a stream, to a tree where the fire swallower is sitting, petrified by the beast at the base. Daemon isn't quite the behemoth you were expecting, but the scaredy cat up the tree isn't moving. You can:

- Axii: Calm the dog using this sign, after which Vlodimir has some fun giving Daemon some commands. You order the dog back home.
- Or you can rush the dog and it scampers off. But if you do, be warned that dog is never coming back home.

The fire-taster falls to the ground, and it quickly transpires the man is a stoneless coward. Optionally give him back his hat and then convince him to return to the festivities. You can:

(50 crowns) Bribe him, which annoys Vlodimir, but gets the job done.

(Axii Delusion Level 1) Inform the fire eater he isn't fleeing the area, and take the addled fellow back to perform.

Tell him to do what he wants, and he flees, leaving you no fire eater.

If you did obtain the hat, you can give it back to fire swallower. From now on he will always be wearing it.

Retrace your steps back to the wedding. Along the way as you cross the stream, you're attacked by a "bear" (according to the screaming fire swallower if you're chaperoning him, though the creature is in fact a Wild Boar). Be sure you keep the fire eater safe as one strike from the boar can kill him.

Should the fire eater survive, you have a quick chat where the fellow reveals his name, and the remaining journey to the farmstead passes without incident.

If the fire eater has wandered off, or the wild boar gores him, you must report back to the bride's parents without an entertainer.

END: ARTENSBURROW'S ANTICS

- Is your fire eater still alive and with you? Then report back to the bride's parents, and watch him perform.

END: THE DEFT JUGGLER

- Is your fire eater dead or disappeared? Then mention your prowess at juggling when speaking to the bride's parents, gather three juggling balls from the nearby table, and perform.

Dead Man's Party

Ghost Dance

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Master Mirror at the wedding.

LORD OF THE DANCE

This interval in festivities usually begins once you've completed two mandatory of the previously-listed activities (herding pigs and beating the planks is counted as one activity.

Gaunter O'Dimm (Master Mirror)

Guests are gathered into the main barn hall, where the Master of Mirrors announces you and Shani to the assembled guests. With Vlodimir in control, you both dance and exhibit the most fancy of footwork, before a more stately strut is undertaken. After your stealing a kiss, Shani is taken aback, and asks you to keep your hands to yourself. You have a timed response; answer as you wish. After Shani requests a talk with Geralt himself (answer as you wish), it comes time to speak with Master Mirror, but only after taking part in any remaining wedding activities you wish.

After the dance, you have the option to meet Gaunter O'Dimm (Master Mirror), who played host to this evening's festivities. He introduces himself to Shani, and then thoroughly demoralizes Vlodimir with his knowledge of von Everec's past. After Master Mirror leaves, Shani tells Vlodimir to cheer up. Continue to enjoy any further wedding activities until midnight.

Be aware that this is the last moment when you can take part in optional activities at the Wedding and achieve giving Vlodimir a hell of a night.

Dead Man's Party

An Abrupt Departure

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the barn for the capping ceremony.

The capping ceremony to end the wedding festivities is about to begin. Head to the main hall, and optionally give a speech (despite Shani's protests) to the bride and groom. At the conclusion, more merriment occurs and Shani catches the bride's garland. Outside, Vlodimir is caught up in the revelry; but his tune soon changes when Master Mirror bids him a forceful farewell. Dismissing the ghost, you watch as Shani returns to be with Aldona, frustrated at your emotionless answers. Meanwhile, you receive some encouragement on matters of the heart. Answer any conversation topics as you wish.

CAPPING OFF

This usually begins once you've completed all of the wedding activities, or you've dawdled and not quite finished them all and the midnight hour arrives (whichever is first).

SECONDARY QUEST: A MIDNIGHT CLEAR

Follow Master Mirror's encouragement, and bring something to cheer up Shani, to begin Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: A Midnight Clear.

OBJECTIVES

- Inform Olgierd the task has been completed.

Dead Man's Party

A Wish Fulfilled

Once you woo Shani, or ignore her completely and leave Brunwich, you can return to Oxenfurt, enter the Alchemy Inn, and speak with Olgierd regarding the evening's merriment. This can be done whether or not you finish Main Quest: Open Sesame. Mention his brother, and you share a drink and Vlodimir's Note with Olgierd. You can also quiz him about the company he keeps, his saber, the Ofieri "toad" prince, or play Gwent.

- If only Main Quest: Dead Man's Party has been completed, you must finish Main Quest: Open Sesame.
- If both Main Quests: Dead Man's Party and Open Sesame have been completed, the wild ones free a man from a barrel. Consult the end of Open Sesame for further details; Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage begins.

Shani's Quest: A Midnight Clear

A Sprig Or A Swig

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

SHANI'S QUEST: A MIDNIGHT CLEAR

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Dead Man's Party; Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage

LOCATIONS: Brunwich, Miller's Lake (Brunwich)

CHARACTERS: Gaunter O'Dimm, Vlodimir von Everec, Shani

OBJECTIVES

- Read Shani's Character entry in the Journal to find out what might cheer her up.
- Use your Witcher Senses to find something that will cheer Shani up.
- Give Shani the present.

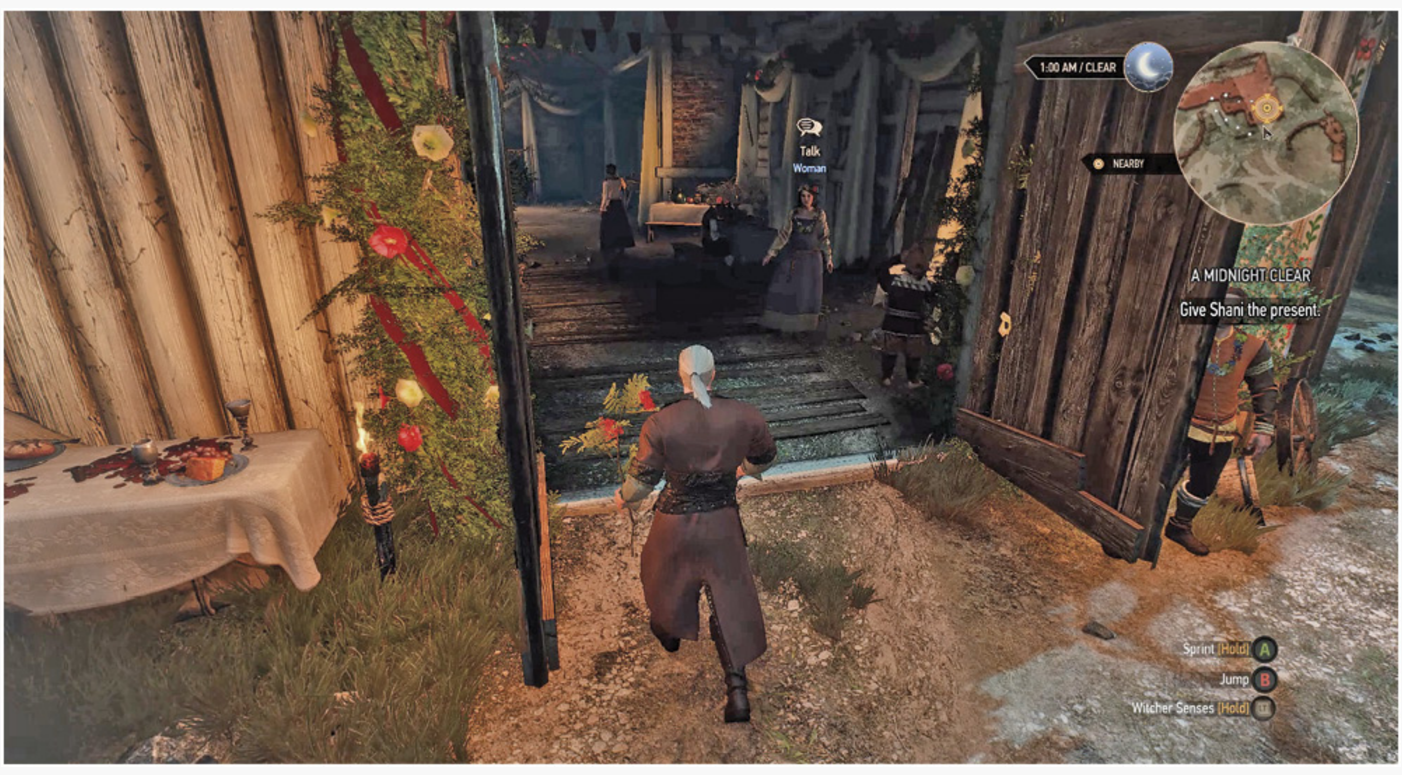
QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This (purely optional) quest is available at the end of Main Quest: Dead Man's Party. It automatically occurs once Gaunter O'Dimm arrives to remove Vlodimir from the proceedings, and forcibly dismisses him.

Shani

Your flirtatious nature (ostensibly under the guise of being possessed by Vlodimir) seems to have had an effect on Shani, though she seems to be a little put off by your lack of emotions now Vlodimir is dispelled. Gaunter O'Dimm encourages you to cheer her up. This is achieved by remembering what Shani said about her favorite blossoms; from the rowan tree. Read her Character entry and this is stated. Search for one of the following (using your Witcher Senses to pinpoint each item):

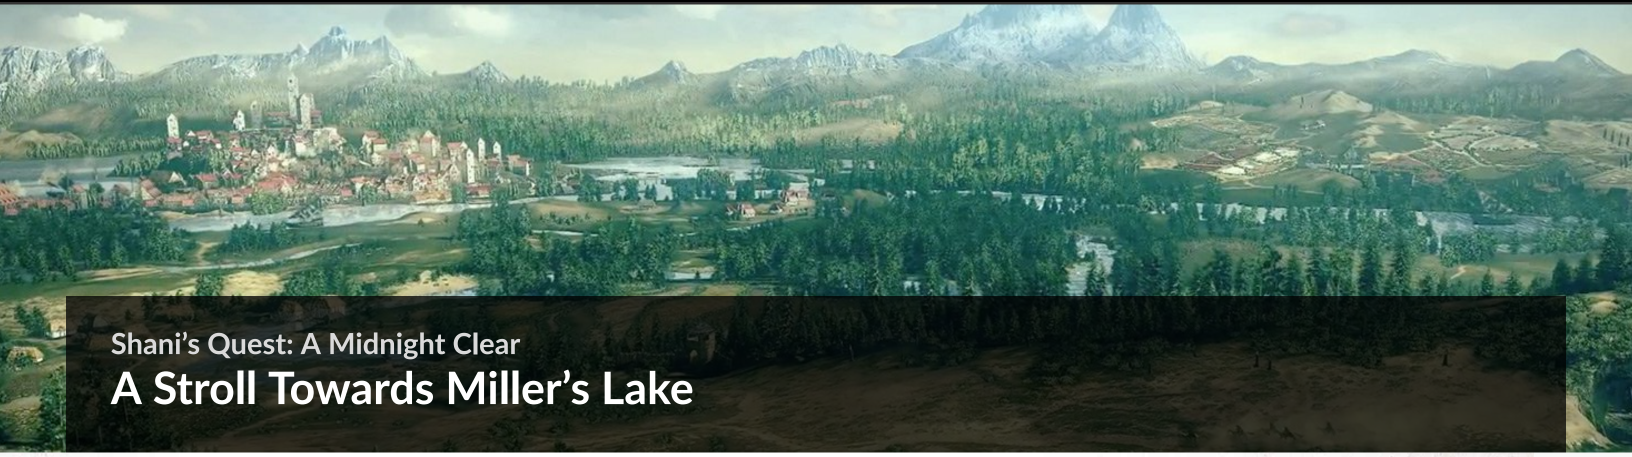
- A sprig of Chamomile, growing near an oak tree.
- A sprig of rowan; Shani used to weave the berries into necklaces. This is recommended.
- A bottle of mead, on a table near to where you talked with Gaunter O'Dimm last.
- A jug of Rowanberry brandy (just inside the main building, on a table); she might enjoy the taste as well as the blossoms.



Once you've chosen your gift, find Shani inside the main building. Give her the gift, and her response depends on what you picked out for her:

- The Chamomile isn't well received; she thinks of it more as a type of tea. But the romance is still possible.
- The sprig of rowan is gratefully received, as Shani is surprised you remembered; she wears the berries in her hair from this point. Romance is in the cards.
- The bottle of mead elicits a single, only slightly positive response: "Thanks." Romance is still a possibility.
- The jug of rowanberry brandy causes Shani to ponder the taste of her favorite berry. Romance can continue.

Your conversation with Shani now continues. You can answer her as you wish as you drink tonight and listen to the off-key minstrels. You both decide to go for a walk.



Shani's Quest: A Midnight Clear

A Stroll Towards Miller's Lake

Conversation with Shani continues. When she asks how you enjoyed the wedding, you can answer with either response. You wander past Johnnus and his father-in-law, bonding after the wedding. This brings up a conversation about Shani's own mother. Answer her as you wish.

You walk past the three "brave" brothers you bettered with a plank of wood earlier in Main Quest: Dead Man's Party. When Shani asks if the brothers' sister was worth a tumble in the hay, answer as you wish.

The conversation continues at the edge of the lake. Shani is taken by the natural beauty of the place, and you steal a kiss. When she asks how it compares, answer as you wish. When she asks whether you have time to waste, you have two important choices:

- Answer "kiss sure didn't sate me," and the romance continues.
- Answer "Let's go back," and you both agree to just stay friends. Before Shani leaves, you ask her a favor, to find out more about Olgierd. She agrees, and this quest concludes.

Row Me To The Moon

If you promised Shani to be even more direct with your affection than Vlodimir, you both scout out an area where you can be together. The pier is taken, but Shani picks up a bottle of wine to swig as you gather a rowboat. At this point:

- If you gave Shani either the sprig of Chamomile or Rowanberries, the conversation continues.
- If you gave Shani either the mead or rowanberry brandy, you can either let her drink, or dissuade her from mixing her drinks.

You push the boat out onto the lake and the moon casts a soft light over your writhing forms. Abandoning your clothing, you both claim each other.

- The moonlit coupling hits a snag if Shani drunk both mead or rowanberry wine, and mixed it with a second drink of wine on the pier, as she throws up over the side of the rowboat, killing the mood ever-so-slightly.
- If the wine at the pier isn't mixed with previous alcohol at the party, there's further writhing.

The next morning, you wake at the lake shore, speaking to a (now fully-clothed) Shani as she prepares to depart for Oxenfurt. Before Shani leaves, you ask her a favor; to find out more about Olgierd. She agrees, and this quest concludes.

Once your night on the lake has ended, Main Quest: Dead Man's Party resumes.

OPEN SESAME (PART 1)

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Dead Man's Party; Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage; Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: Avid Collector, Hearts of Stone Treasure Hunt: A Dark Legacy, Scavenger Hunt: Viper School Gear

LOCATIONS: Borsodi Auction House (Oxenfurt), Herbalist's Hut

CHARACTERS: Lance Corporal Vatslav, Vimme Vivaldi, Yaromir, Countess Mignole, Hilbert, Horst Borsodi, The Stranger

ENEMIES: Novigrad Soldiers, Wild Boar, Fallen Knights

RECOMMENDED ITEMS: At least 2,000 Crowns

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the Borsodi auction house in Oxenfurt and ask for the owner.

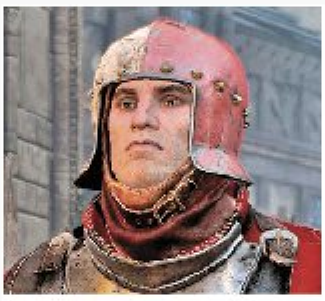
QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Evil's Soft First Touches. It can be completed before or after Main Quest: Dead Man's Party.

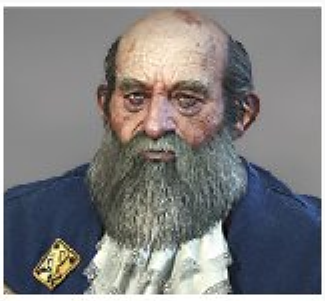
AUCTION HOUSE ETIQUETTE: PART 1

The initial stages of this quest take place within the Borsodi Auction House, and there are some great finds to purchase or bid on! As many of these items are useful, and can't be found at any other point in your travels, be sure you're carrying at least 2,000 crowns to cover your expenses.

The next wish demanded of you is to bring Olgierd the house of Maximilian Borsodi; currently an object that's a mystery to you. Set off for the auction house in Oxenfurt, until you're stopped by two guards at the main entrance. A particularly po-faced soldier named Vatslav isn't about to let you in, no matter how you answer the conversations. That is, until Vimme Vivaldi (with the bank branch in Novigrad) saunters up, and brow-beats the guard into letting you through.



Lance Corporal Vatslav



Vimme Vivaldi

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the upper floor of the auction house.
- Wait for the auction to start.

You're here to talk to Horst Borsodi (the auction house owner), but Vimme reckons that might be a problem, as Horst is an antisocial sort. Optionally speak to the dwarf about the items up for bid, and why the Borsodis moved their auction house from Novigrad. Now optionally inspect the auction trinkets behind the glass cages, then head up the stairs. Vimme quickly points out some of his more important associates: Countess Mignole, Hilbert the Gwent player, and Yaromir the art dealer.

Open Sesame (Part 1)

Before The Auction: Vimme's Interesting Associates

OBJECTIVES

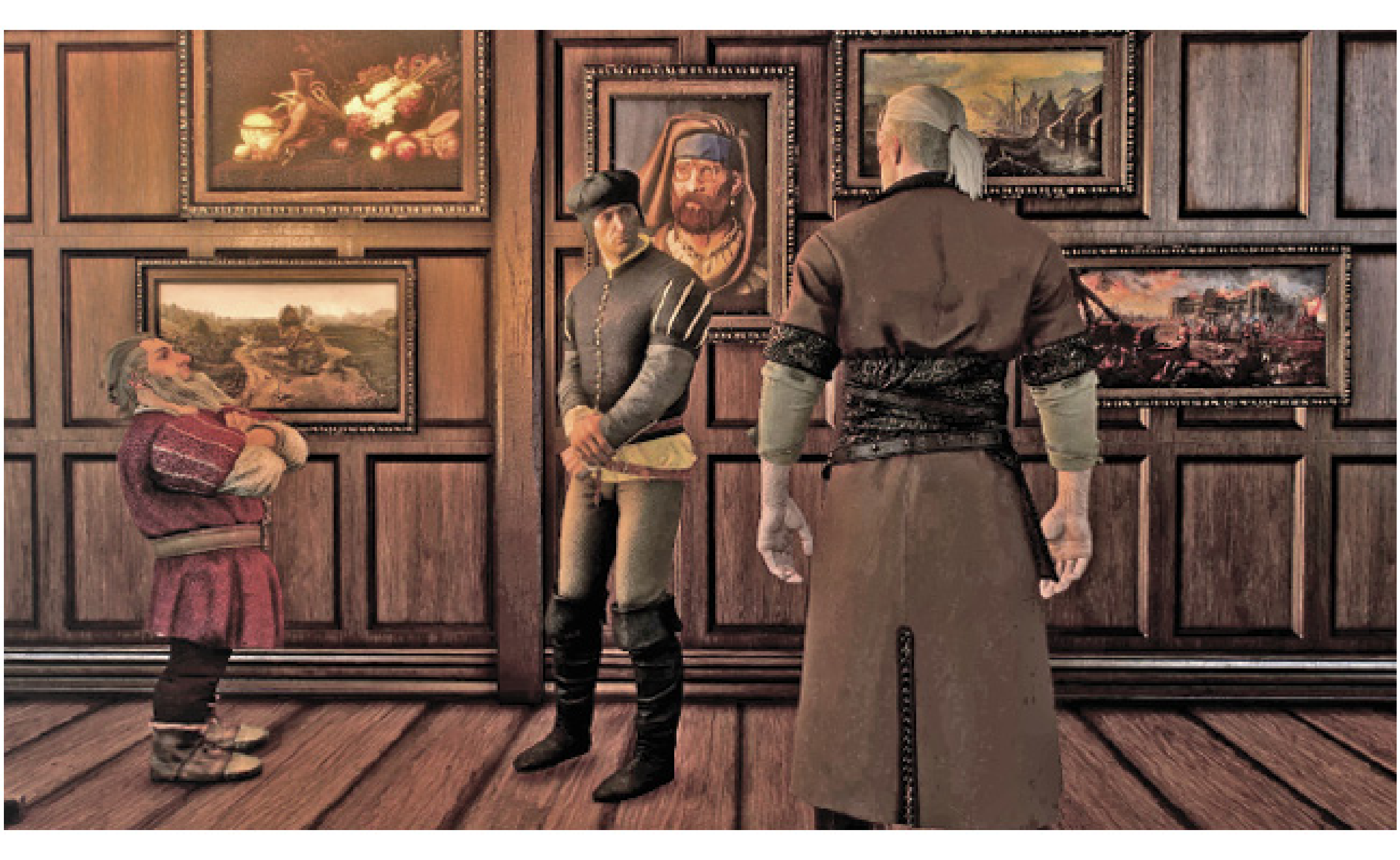
- (Optional) Meet Vivaldi's friends (3).

AUCTION HOUSE ETIQUETTE: PART 2

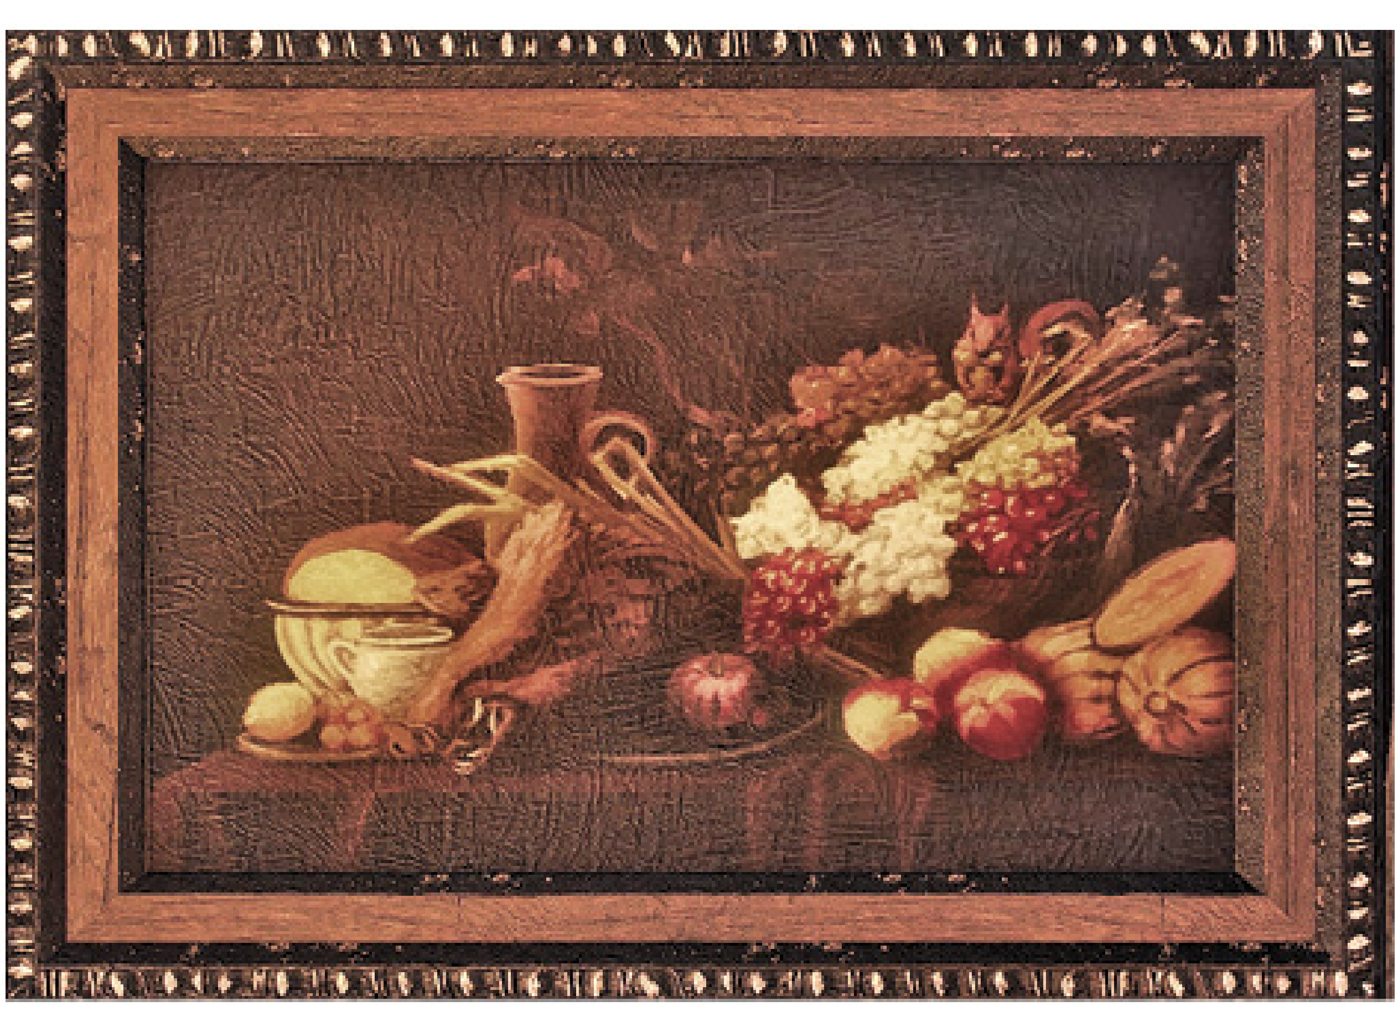
Feel free to interact with one, two, or three (or none) of Vivaldi's associates, in any order you like. You are encouraged to make acquaintances with all three to further the chances of accessing quests and otherwise-unobtainable objects.

Yaromir Ivanovitz Zaytsev

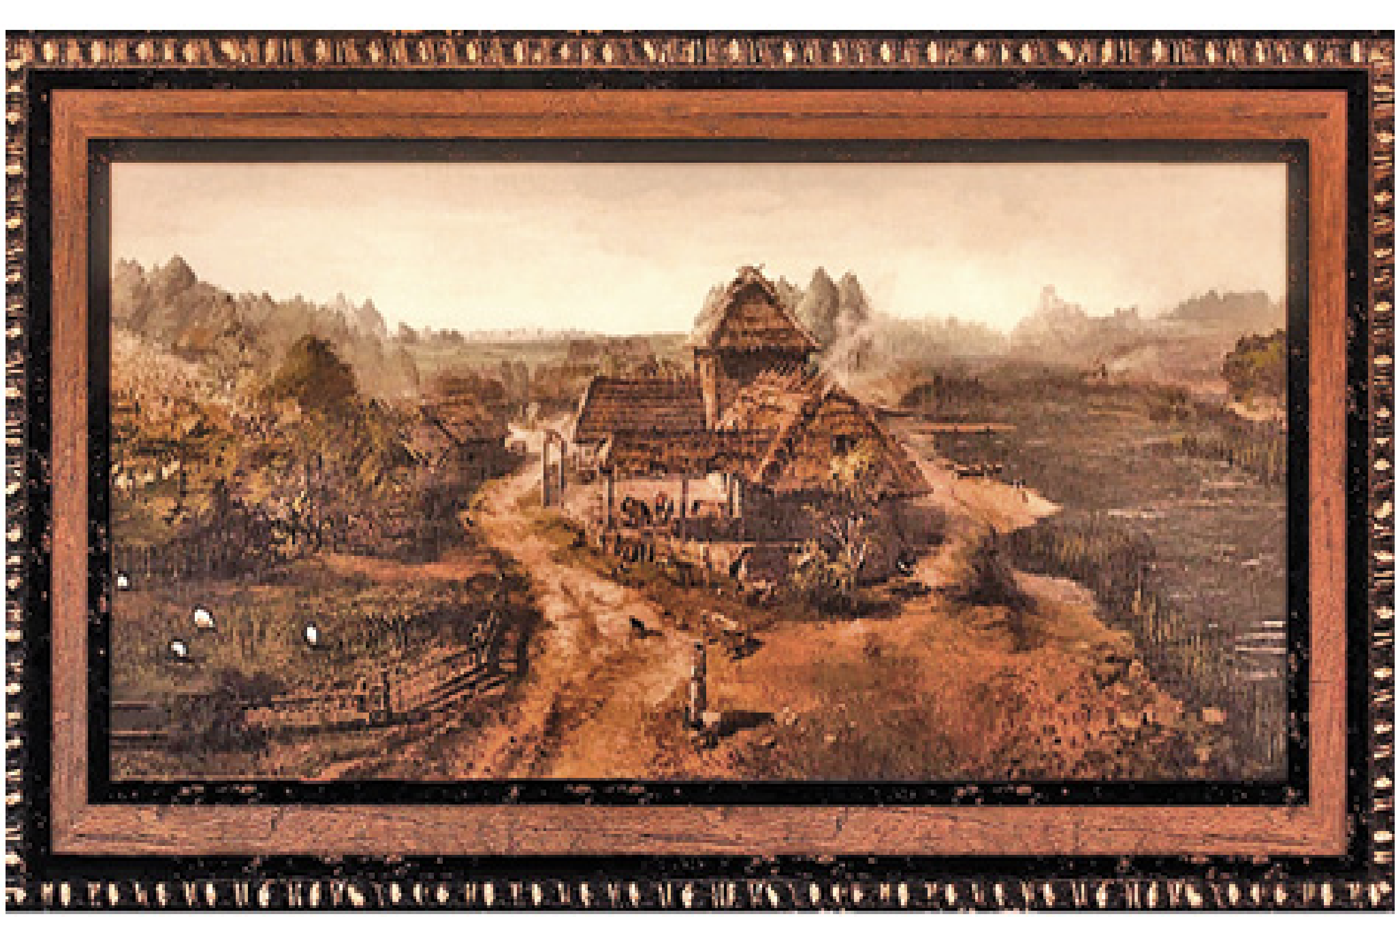
YAROMIR INTERACTION: HE'S AN AVID COLLECTOR



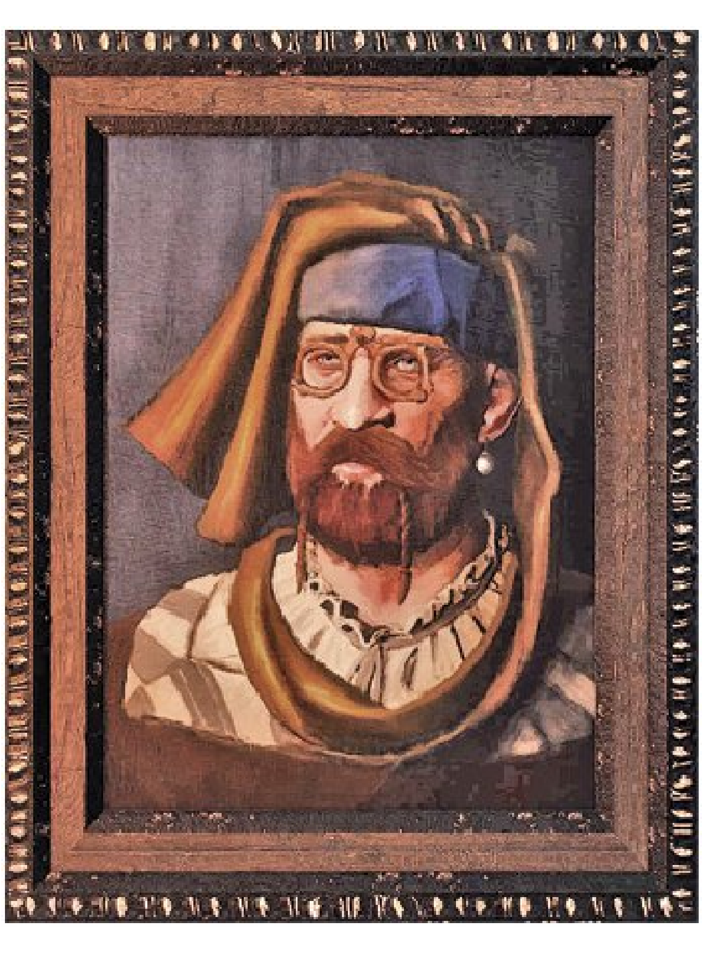
Walk over to the wall of paintings, which is being admired by the hoity-toity art dealer, Yaromir. He has disdain in his voice, and looks down his long nose at the likes of you. Before chatting to him, you may want to further your art appreciation by memorizing the following pictures:

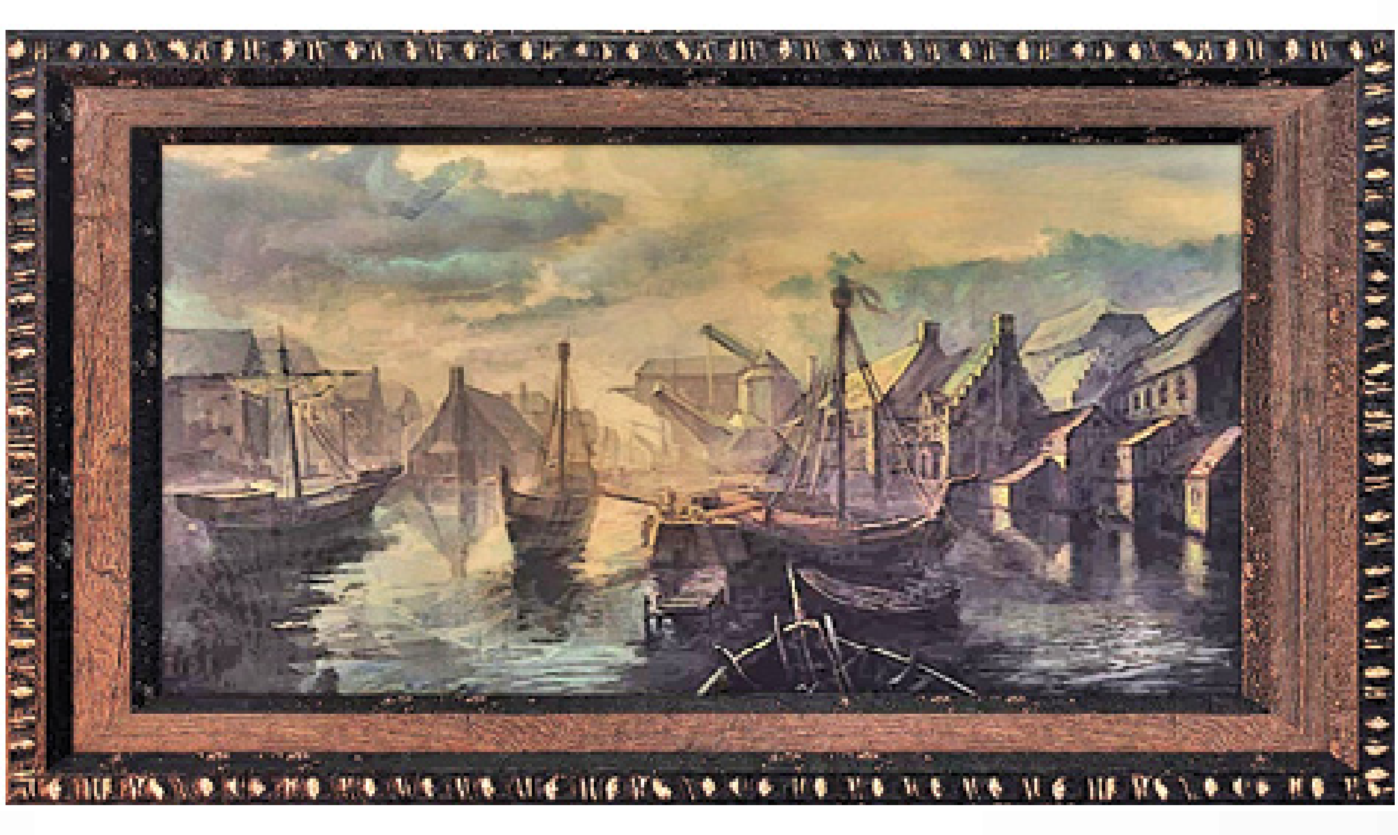


Still Life – J. de Varvari, 1222, oil on canvas

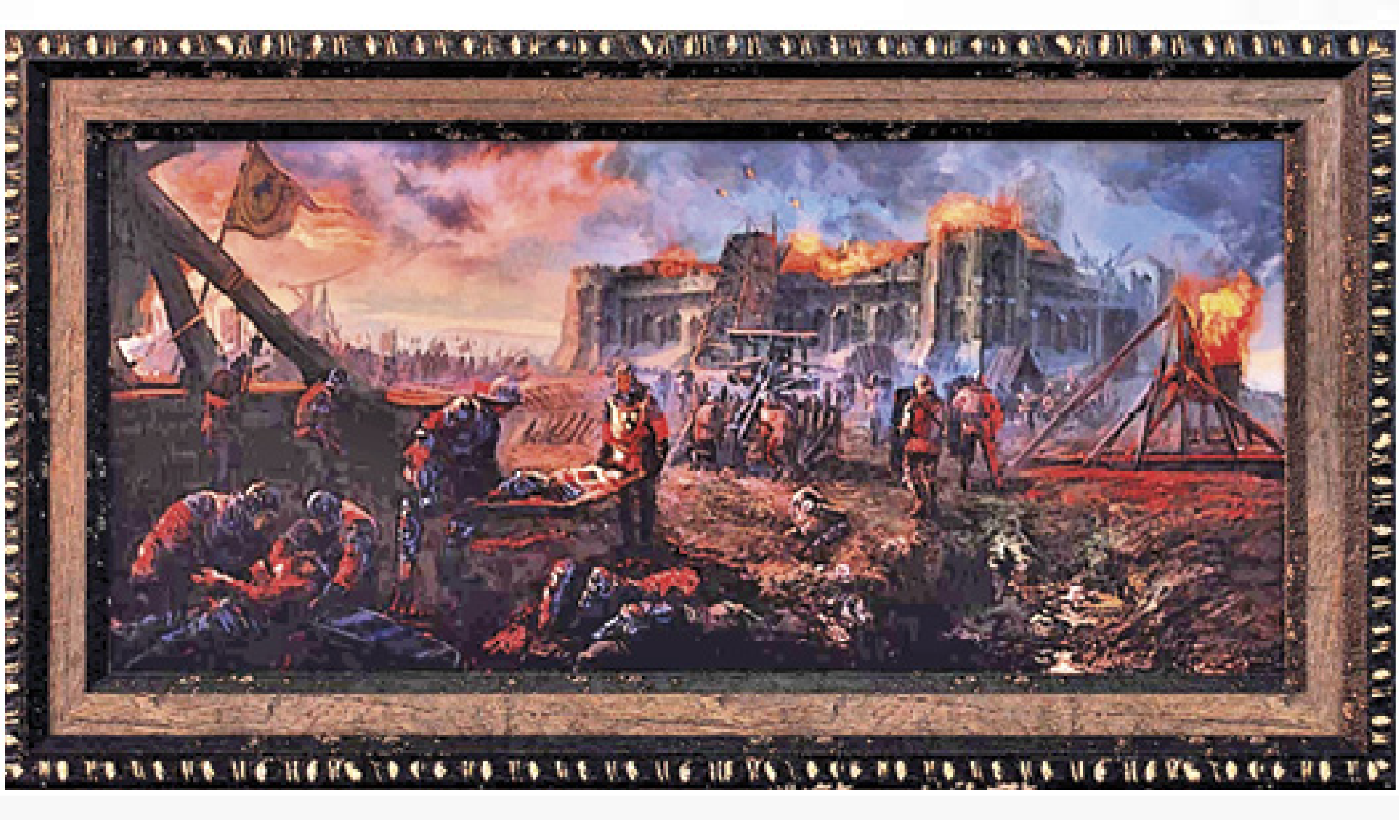


Et in Kovir Ego – N. Boussin, 1210, oil on canvas





A Vessel Leaving Port – 1220, by Z. Burner, oil on wood



Start your chat with Yaromir. You can make a rude response about not caring to learn about art. But it is recommended you tell Yaromir you have "a bit" of knowledge about art. Yaromir takes this as an opportunity to embarrass both you and the dwarf, as he's sure you can't tell a van der Knoob from a da Linci, and asks you to point out which painting is by Edward van der Knoob, the master from Maribor. You can:

- Choose the pastoral, the view of Novigrad, the still life, the battle scene, or tell Yaromir you have no idea; all answers are met with a scoffing and belittling reply. The conversation ends.
- Indicate the portrait of the merchant, and Yaromir is taken aback, asks for a brief word in private, and apologizes for his impertinence. He tells you a secret; there's a van Rogh in the forthcoming auction. Though this painter is a virtual unknown, the bookseller Marcus Hodgson is a fierce admirer. Buy the painting at auction, and you might sell it at a good profit, perchance? If you can trust that Hodgson, of course. This starts Secondary Quest: Avid Collector.

If you learn about the van Rogh painting, after this information has been imparted, Vimme asks you what that chat was all about. You can:

- Tell him you were told to buy the van Rogh. This causes the dwarf to bid for the painting in the auction, forcing you to purchase it at a higher price if you want it.
- Tell him "nothin' special," and the dwarf is none-the-wiser (and you can purchase the van Rogh for a song).

Hilbert

HILBERT INTERACTION: HE'S A RIGHT CARD

A man recently coming into wealth, Hilbert has his eye on a few fancy baubles, but he's also here to get a quick game of Gwent in with his Nilfgaardian Empire deck. After asking what deck you use (answer as you wish), he asks for a quick game. Then Vimme asks for a quick cut of your winnings. Agree or disagree with either option (feel free to maximize your bet at 250 crowns if you're confident). Lose the game, and you disappoint the dwarf. Win the game, and you receive the following (only available here, and during this one game):

Items: Gaunter O'Dimm (Gwent Card)

COUNTESS MIGNOLE INTERACTION: SHE'S A COLLECTOR OF VEDYMINAICA

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Find Countess Mignole's earring using your Witcher Senses.

Countess Mignole

Vimme introduces you to a lady of a certain age, and one that instantly recognizes your medallion. She is a keen collector of objects related to the Witcherly profession.

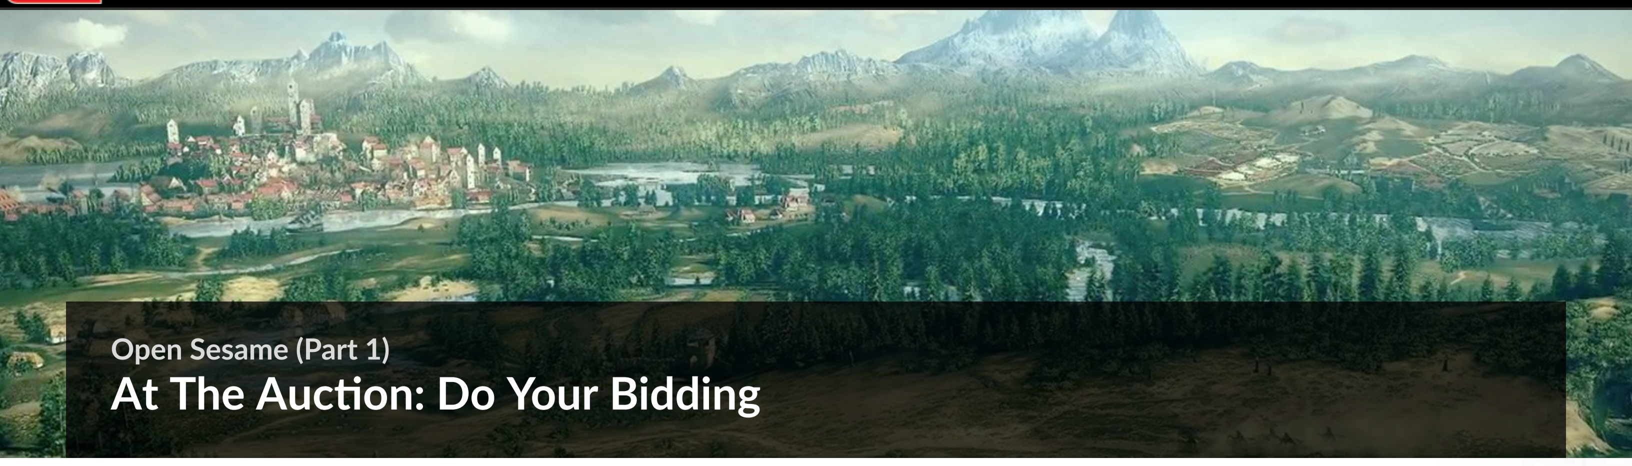
Ask her where she developed this interest, and she mentions a happy past, but doesn't elaborate. She does, however, allow you to view a selection of alchemy formulas, as well as four pieces of Viper gear. This is your only opportunity to purchase the following:

Items: Diagram: Viper Armor, Diagram: Viper Boots, Diagram: Viper Gauntlets, Diagram: Viper Trousers

WITCHER GEAR: GOING, GOING, GONE!

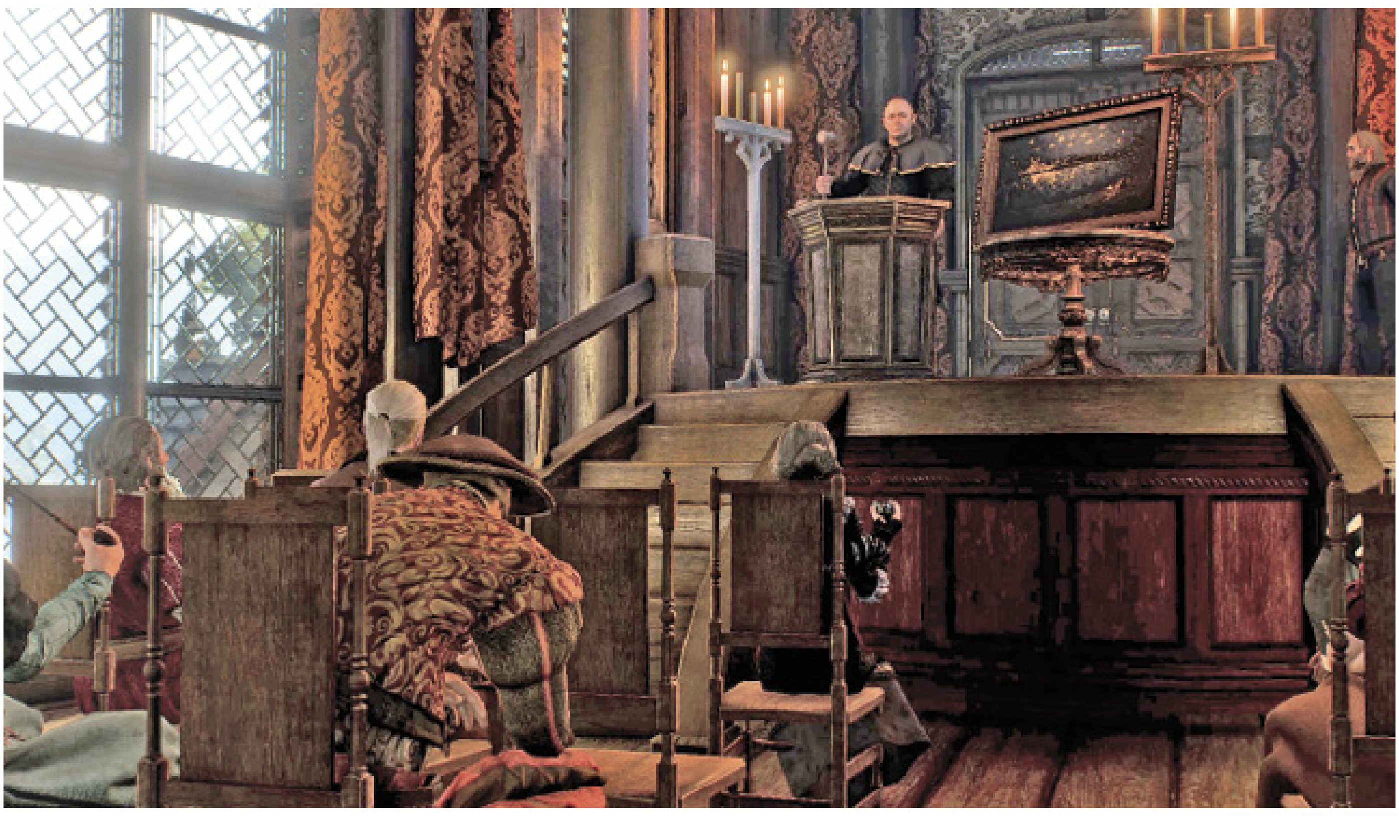
This Viper armor is medium in weight, offers poison immunity, and has the highest armor rating of all the Witcher gear. Each Diagram costs around 330 crowns, and this is the only opportunity to buy them! Consult Scavenger Hunt: Viper School Gear for locations of other equipment from this school).

After a chat about the auction, the Countess hopes you might use your preternatural abilities to locate a missing earring. Oblige, head up onto the exterior balcony, and examine a spilt wine goblet. You soon realize the Countess has an ulterior motive for asking you outside; she wishes to learn more about a man she once knew with tenderness, Vesemir. Answer her as you wish, and leave her to her melancholy thoughts.



Open Sesame (Part 1)

At The Auction: Do Your Bidding



When the auction begins, you take your seat with Vivaldi, who offers to loan you 100 crowns, at a "very favorable" rate of interest (one crown on ten when you pay him back). This is enough to purchase one, but not all three of the auction items. Then he asks if you're prepared to bid. You can:

- Tell him of course, and wait for the auction to begin.
- Ask him to spot you "a couple hundred"; he responds with 100 crowns. Be sure to pay him back at his bank in Novigrad (at a 10 percent interest rate).

Items: 100 Crowns

- Tell him you'll wait in the back. This skips the auction entirely, and doesn't allow you to bid (or start the two smaller quests related to the items)! This isn't recommended.

AUCTION #1: COUNT ROMILLY'S FIGURINE

First up is a brass figurine from the collection of the infamous Count Romilly. The rumored treasure inside can only be discovered by destroying the item itself. You can:

- Refrain from bidding.
- If you want it, you'll need to bid 300 crowns for it (despite the item being worth only 150 crowns).

However, if this lands in your possession, you're able to start Hearts of Stone Treasure Hunt: A Dark Legacy.

Items: Count Romilly's Figurine

AUCTION #2: "STARRY NIGHT OVER THE PONTAR"

Second on the auction block is a charming piece by a young Novigrad artist named van Rogh. Bidding starts at only 20 crowns. You can:

- Refrain from bidding.
- Bid on it, after not previously mentioning its value to Vivaldi, and snap up the piece for its starting bid of 20 crowns. A veritable bargain!
- Bid on it, after mentioning its value to Vivaldi, who wants it for his own collection, bringing up the price you'll pay to 60 crowns. Still, a reasonable sum!

If this painting is won, Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: The Avid Collector continues.

Items: "Starry Night Over the Pontar"

AUCTION #3: THE PROFESSOR'S SPECTACLES

The final item is as rare as hens' teeth—gold-framed spectacles with mountain crystal lenses polished by a gnome master! Once belonging to "the Professor," you can:

- Refrain from bidding.
- Bid on it, getting into a bidding war with Yaromir, and eventually outbid the art collector at 350 crowns. Worthwhile? Possibly, as you can wear these, and add a rather esteemed aura to your visage; you look like a true professional!

Items: The Professor's Spectacles

Open Sesame (Part 1)

After The Auction:don't Expect A Warm Welcome

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the guards.

Horst Borsodi

During the intermission, Vivaldi introduces you to Horst Bordosi himself. Feel free to answer his gruff determination about your uninvited status, in whatever way you deem appropriate. It doesn't matter as you're unceremoniously removed from the building, and dumped outside with two guards to fistfight. Defeat both guards (ideally using fists and Aard).

SECONDARY QUEST COMMENCEMENT

The auction is now definitely over. Secondary Quest: An Avid Collector is now active. Treasure Hunt: A Dark Legacy becomes active once you dismantle Count Romilly's Figurine at an armory. Scavenger Hunt: Viper School Gear is also active.

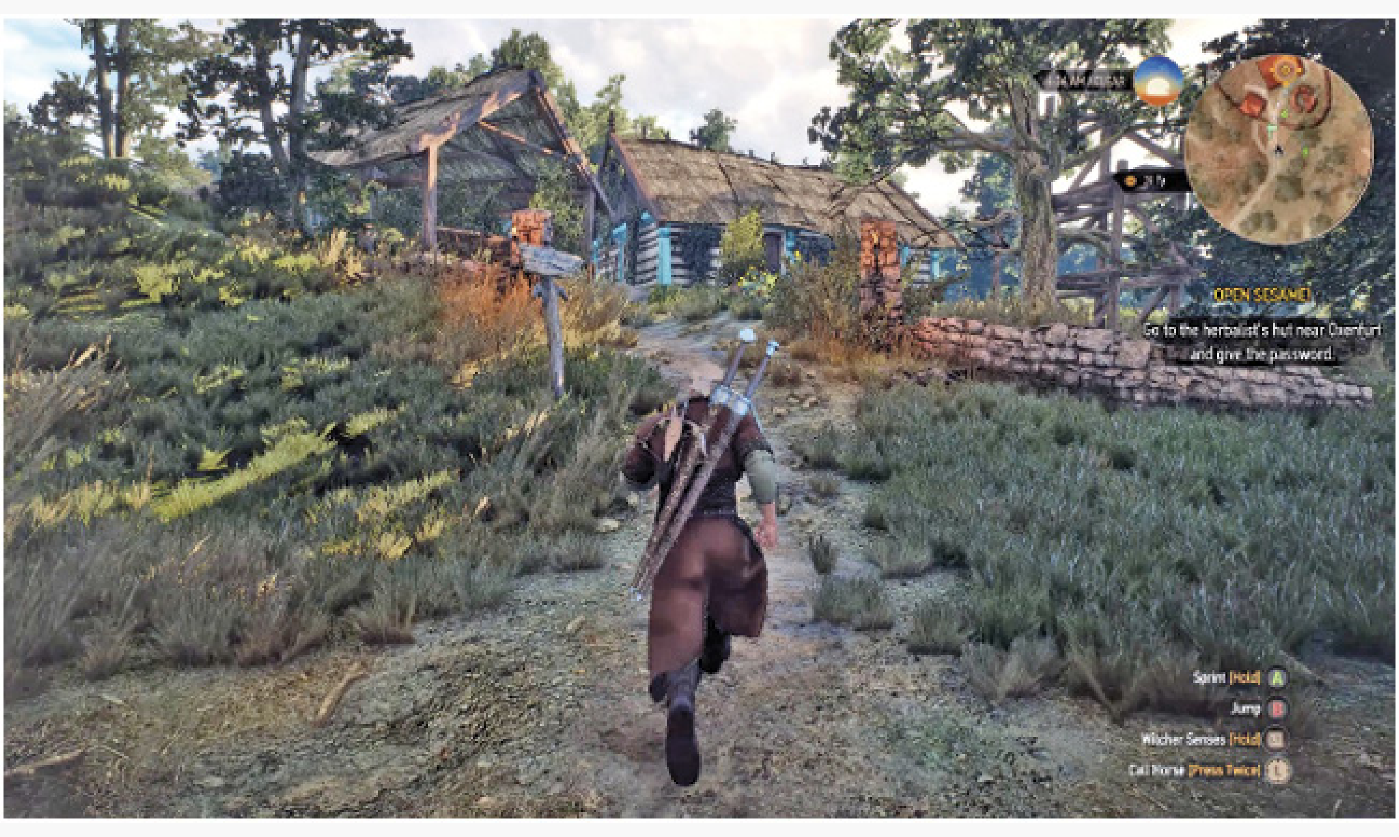
OBJECTIVES

- Go to the herbalist's hut near Oxenfurt and give the password.

The Stranger

Afterward, a hooded stranger beckons you to an intriguing chat regarding a different possibility of gaining entry into the auction house. Further instructions await at a nearby herbalist's hut. Head north and a little east. As you ascend the hill the hut is on, prepare to fight a wounded wild boar. The hut itself has a trio of Fallen Knights, bandits in the armor of soldiers. Remove them as a threat, enter the hut, and speak with the Halfling merchant. You can:

- Trade, ask about master formulae, or play Gwent.
- Ask him for some "yarrow extract;" the password The Stranger mentioned.



OPEN SESAME!

Go to the herbalist's hut near Oxenfurt and give the password.

You're prompted to descend into a small cellar, where The Stranger reveals his true intentions. During the conversation regarding a forthcoming raid on the Borsodi auction house's vault, feel free to ask about The Stranger's name, the House you're here to steal, and what he wants from the vault.

Once you agree to the plan in principle, a crew to help perform this breaking and entering must be assembled; both for getting inside the building and opening the vault itself. There's also the Redanian patrols to waylay, too. Ask about each one during the chat.

GETTING INSIDE: BREAK-IN ARTISTS REQUIRED

As the initial plan is to assault the auction house from the rooftops, The Stranger's favorite break-in artist is Eveline Gallo, a circus artist going by the name "The Ermine." She has a troupe she's associated with, camped nearby.

Eveline Gallo

Hugo Hoff

The other option is the Halfling Hugo Hoff, who's notched up more break-ins than you've felled monsters. He's modest in size, but quite the climber, and he is apparently holed up somewhere in Oxenfurt.

This starts Main Quest: Open Sesame: Breaking and Entering.

OPENING THE VAULT: HIRING A SAFECRACKER

Casimir Bassi

Quinto

You require someone skilled in the arts of vault-opening. To this end, The Stranger has knowledge of two possible safecrackers. The first is Casimir Bassi, a specialist in controlled explosions. The problem with this dwarf is that he's retired, lives in Alness, and might turn down the offer.

The other possible hire is the North's most famed safecracker, Quinto. The problem with him is that has infamy has resulted in numerous arrest warrants, and he's been nabbed by a "prick mercenary" named Hans of Cidaris. You'll need to rescue him.

This starts Main Quest: Open Sesame: The Safecracker.

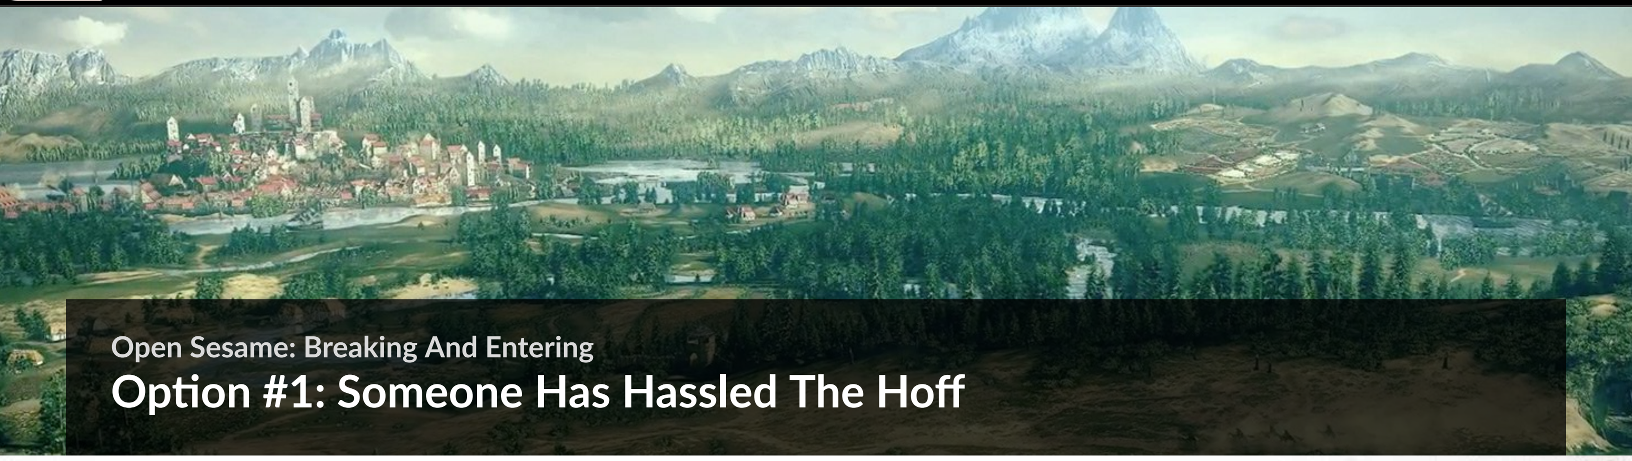
CULLING THE PATROLS: A CLEANSING MIXTURE

You both agree the Redanians need to be indisposed, not slaughtered. You're to approach the garrison's cook, convince him to spike the soldiers' nosh with something to keep them bedridden with gastrointestinal problems. You have a perfect formula to brew. This starts Main Quest: Open Sesame: Witcher Seasonings.

Items: Formula: Cleansing Mixture

HEIST PREPARATION: THREE SUB-QUESTS TO COMPLETE

The next part of Main Quest: Open Sesame now begins. There are three parts to this quest: Breaking and Entering, The Safecracker, and Witcher Seasonings. Complete them in any order you wish.



Open Sesame: Breaking And Entering

Option #1: Someone Has Hassled The Hoff

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

OPEN SESAME: BREAKING AND ENTERING

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame, The Safecracker, Witcher Seasonings

LOCATIONS: Hugo Hoff's House (Oxenfurt), Circus Caravan, Herbalist's Hut

CHARACTERS: Hugo Hoff, Eveline Gallo, Meryn

ENEMIES: Bandits

RECOMMENDED ITEMS: At least 600 Crowns

PICKING YOUR BREAK-IN ARTIST

This quest is accessible after you meet The Stranger for the first time at the Herbalist's Hut, and agree to locate one of two possible break-in artists for the forthcoming heist. You can choose to visit Hugo Hoff or Eveline Gallo in any order you like, as well as the two safecrackers, and concoct a mixture to incapacitate the Oxenfurt guards.

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the house where Hugo Hoff is hiding.

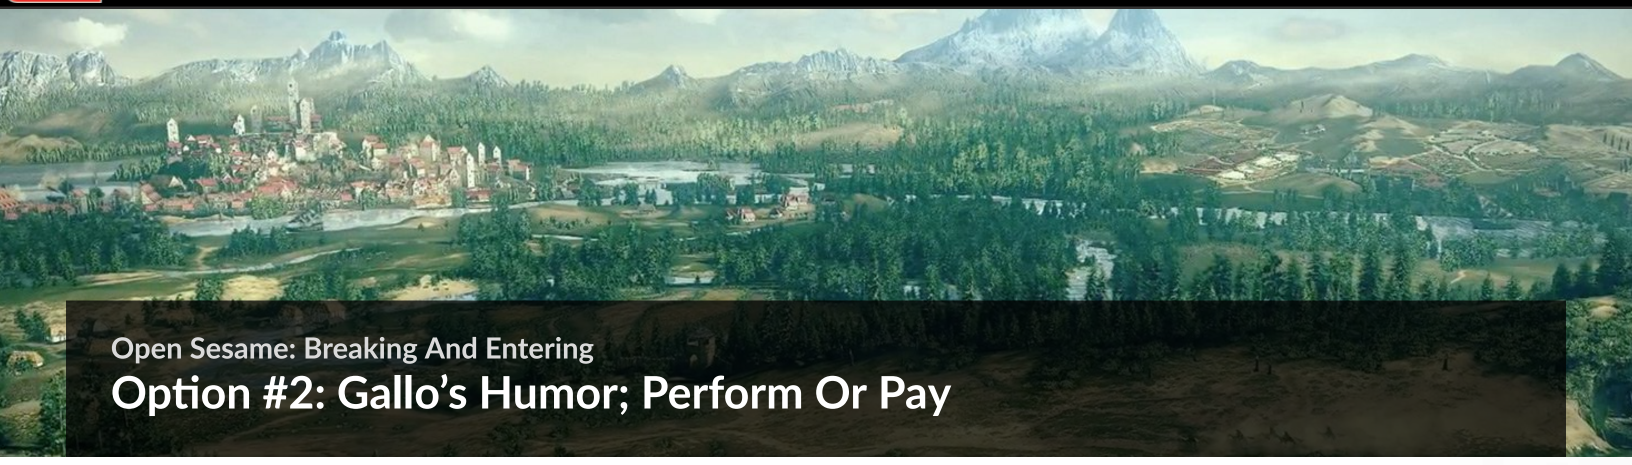
The Stranger mentioned that one of his choices—the Halfling climber known as Hugo Hoff—was holed up in an Oxenfurt house close to the confusingly-named Novigrad Gate. Make haste for Oxenfurt, head to the stone dwelling close to the gate, and knock on the door. There's no answer. But there's evidence of scratching and blood on the porch. Not good.

OBJECTIVES

- Explore around the house using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the tracks using your Witcher Senses.
- Defeat the bandits.
- Search the riverbank for clues using your Witcher Senses.
- Return to shore.

Scan the porch beam to uncover blood; someone knocked their head on it. Close by are footprints. Follow them along the main thoroughfare in a roughly south-easterly direction, and down to the water's edge. A trio of bandits aren't happy you've wandered by; defeat all three of them. You sense Hugo is in trouble.

Use your Witcher Senses and check the nearby rowboat, still moist and used recently. The trail ends at the water's edge, but a quick looting of one of the bandits revealed a letter. It seems Hugo ran into a little bit of trouble, and has been taught a permanent lesson. Dive into the river, swimming south (and optionally using your Witcher Senses to pinpoint Hugo from the surface), and dive down to inspect the halfling, who's sleeping with the fishes. This leaves you no option but to attempt to recruit Eveline Gallo.

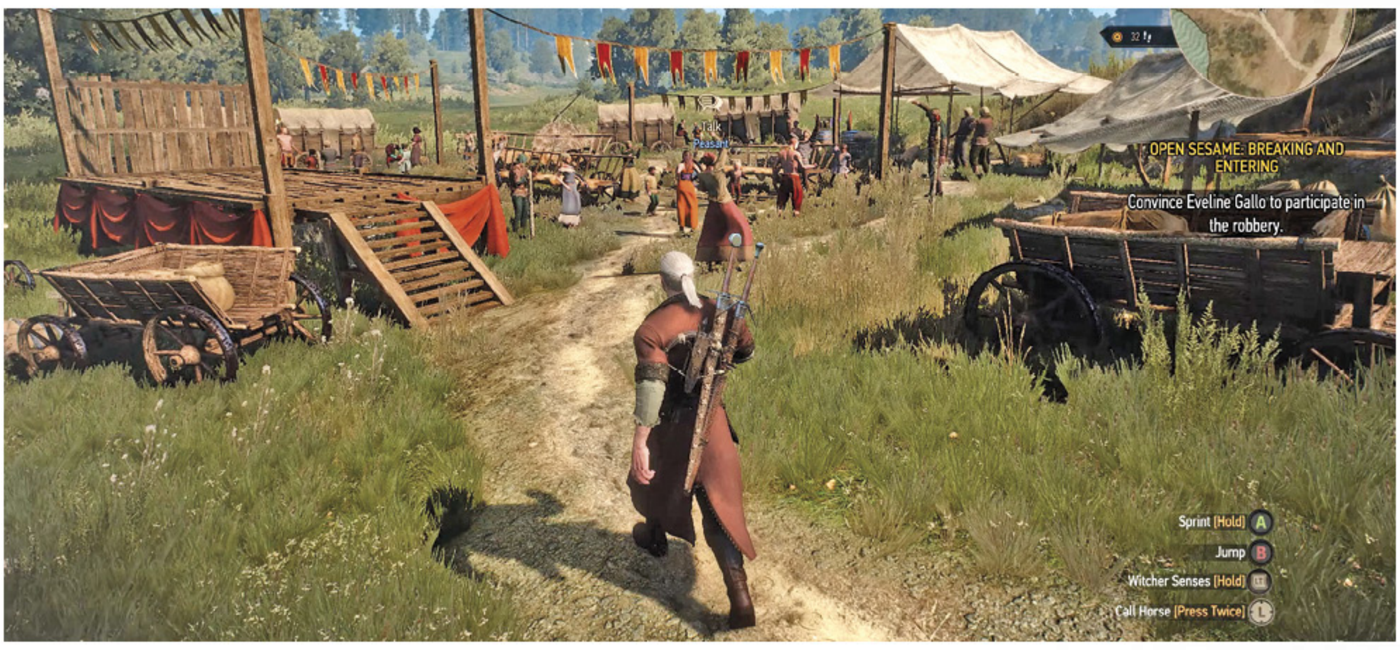


Open Sesame: Breaking And Entering

Option #2: Gallo's Humor; Perform Or Pay

OBJECTIVES

- Convince Eveline Gallo to participate in the robbery.



OPEN SESAME: BREAKING AND ENTERING

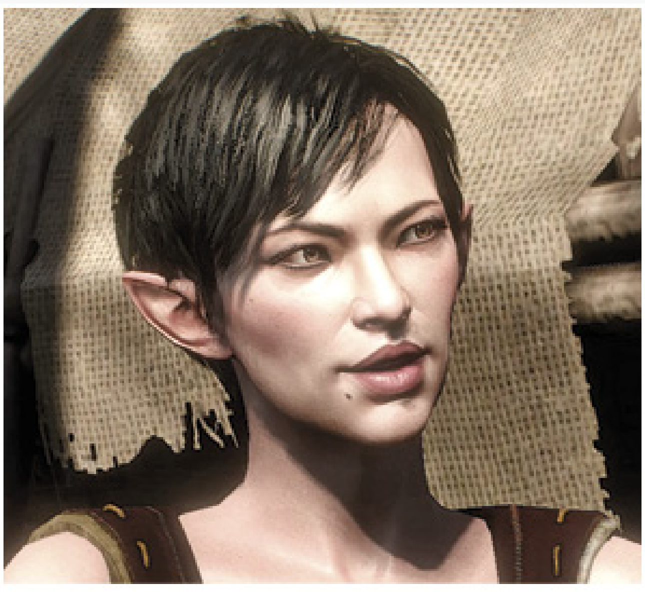
The Stranger mentioned his primary choice—the elven acrobat called Eveline Gallo—was performing with her troupe somewhere in Gustfields territory. Head to the fields just west of the Vegelbud Estate, where a small crowd of peasants are waiting for a circus performance. Find Eveline and her colleague Meryn arguing by the caravans. After she asks what you want, try the following:

- Request you speak privately.

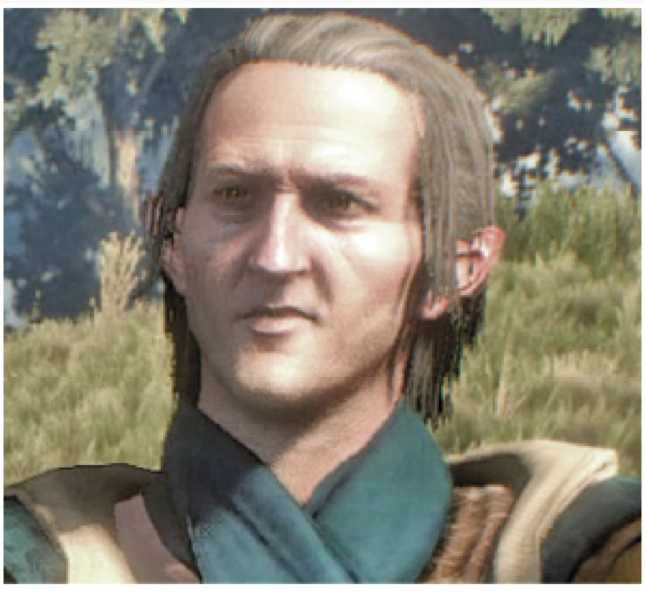
Tell her (with Meryn present) you want her to work with you.

Your choice affects a possible payment you may incur shortly. Eveline tells you she's about to commence a circus show, but her colleague "Hawkeye" Vann isn't living up to his nickname. Quite the opposite in fact; he's gone blind after drinking some questionable hooch. You're asked to stand in for Vann, performing a trick involving a crossbow and some apples. Help her out, and she agrees to your request. You can:

- Agree to this request.
- Disagree, and reimburse the peasants who have bought tickets, and cancel the event. If Eveline is talking with you alone, she agrees that 400 crowns should cover it. If Meryn is with her, he prompts her to increase the amount to 600 crowns. Take it or leave it.



Eveline Gallo



Meryn

OBJECTIVES

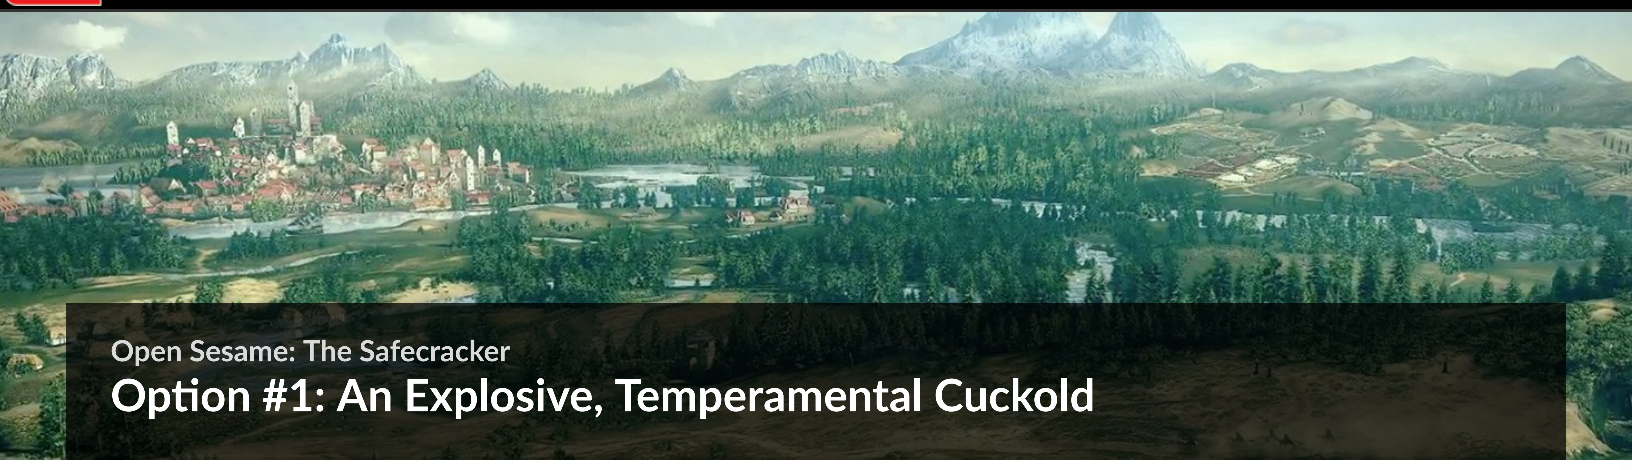
- Shoot the apples with your crossbow.

Accept her request to stand in for Hawkeye Vann, and you find yourself on stage with a rabble of serfs watching your pinpoint accuracy with a crossbow. Meryn is balancing an apple on each arm, one on his leg, and one atop his head. Simply aim and fire at the apples. If you miss, simply try again. If you hit Meryn, Eveline still joins you, apparently that's not the first time this sort of thing has happened.

After the performance or payoff, Eveline lives up to her part of the bargain and receives instructions for visiting the Herbalist's Hut. Your infiltrator has been secured, and this sub-quest concludes.

ON THE CARDS: GWENT MERCHANT

Be sure to locate the caravan merchant here before you leave (or if you return) to purchase a couple of Gwent cards. Perhaps challenge him to a game and secure the Schirru card while you're at it?



Open Sesame: The Safecracker

Option #1: An Explosive, Temperamental Cuckold

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

OPEN SESAME: THE SAFECRACKER

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame, Breaking and Entering, Witcher Seasonings
LOCATIONS: Herbalist's Hut, Alness, Mercenaries' Camp
CHARACTERS: Casimir, Quinto, Hans of Cidaris
RECOMMENDED ITEMS: Axii Delusion level 2, or 200+ Crowns

PICKING YOUR SAFECRACKER

This quest is accessible after you meet The Stranger for the first time at the Herbalist's Hut, and agree to locate one of two possible safecrackers for the forthcoming heist. You can choose to visit Casimir or Quinto in any order you like, as well as the two break-in artists, and concocting a mixture to incapacitate the Oxenfurt guards.

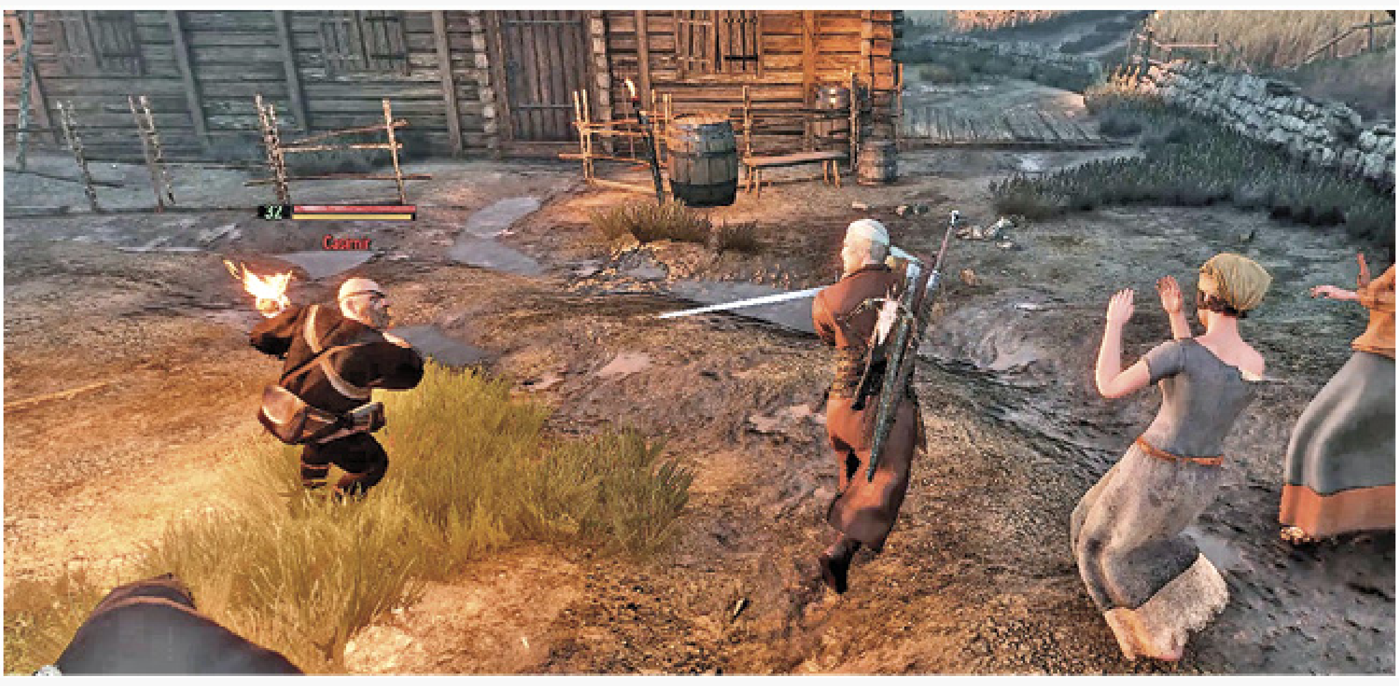
OBJECTIVES

- Convince Casimir to take part in the robbery.
- (Optional) Defeat Casimir.

Casimir

In the Gustfields east of Novigrad lies the village of Alness. As you arrive there, you spot commotion from one of the thatched-roof cottages. It seems Casimir has found out about his wife's infidelity, and is hellbent on blowing himself into tiny, fleshy pieces. He sits atop the roof waving a flaming torch, near a cluster of explosive barrels. The situation calls for quick thinking. You can:

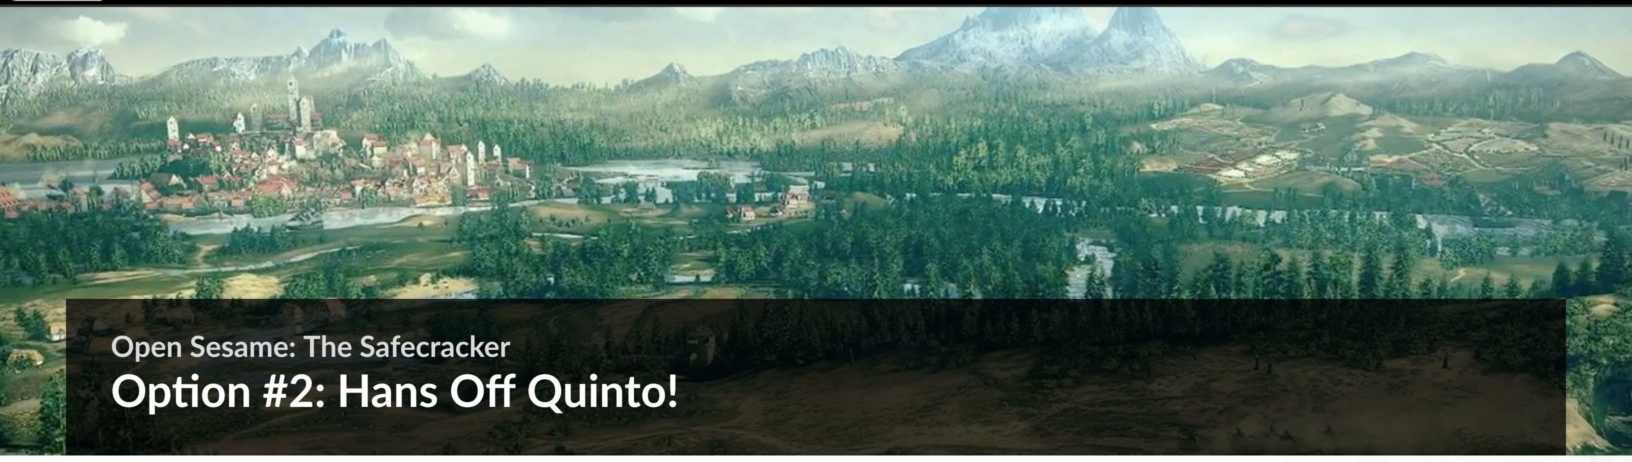
- Mention you're "really sorry" or that he should "set the torch aside" to "talk this out." Neither option is particularly helpful (unless you want to watch a hay roof burn), as it doesn't dissuade Casimir from detonating his barrels. This forces you to find Quinto.
- Tell Casimir "you're pathetic." This angers the dwarf so much, he clambers down off his perch, and challenges you to a fight. Best him in quick combat.
- (Axii Delusion level 2) Or addle the dwarf's brain and order him off the roof without having to belt him.



Choose either of the last two options, and Casimir agrees to help you. You give him instructions on reaching the herbalist's hut, and this quest concludes.

CASIMIR: PICKING SIDES WITH THE BORSODI BROTHERS

(Spoiler) If you pick Casimir, certain elements of the infiltration within the Borsodi auction house play out in a different manner. Be sure to read the subsequent quest to ensure Casimir's loyalties match your own.



Open Sesame: The Safecracker

Option #2: Hans Off Quinto!

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the mercenaries' camp and talk to Quinto.
- Defeat Hans in a fistfight.

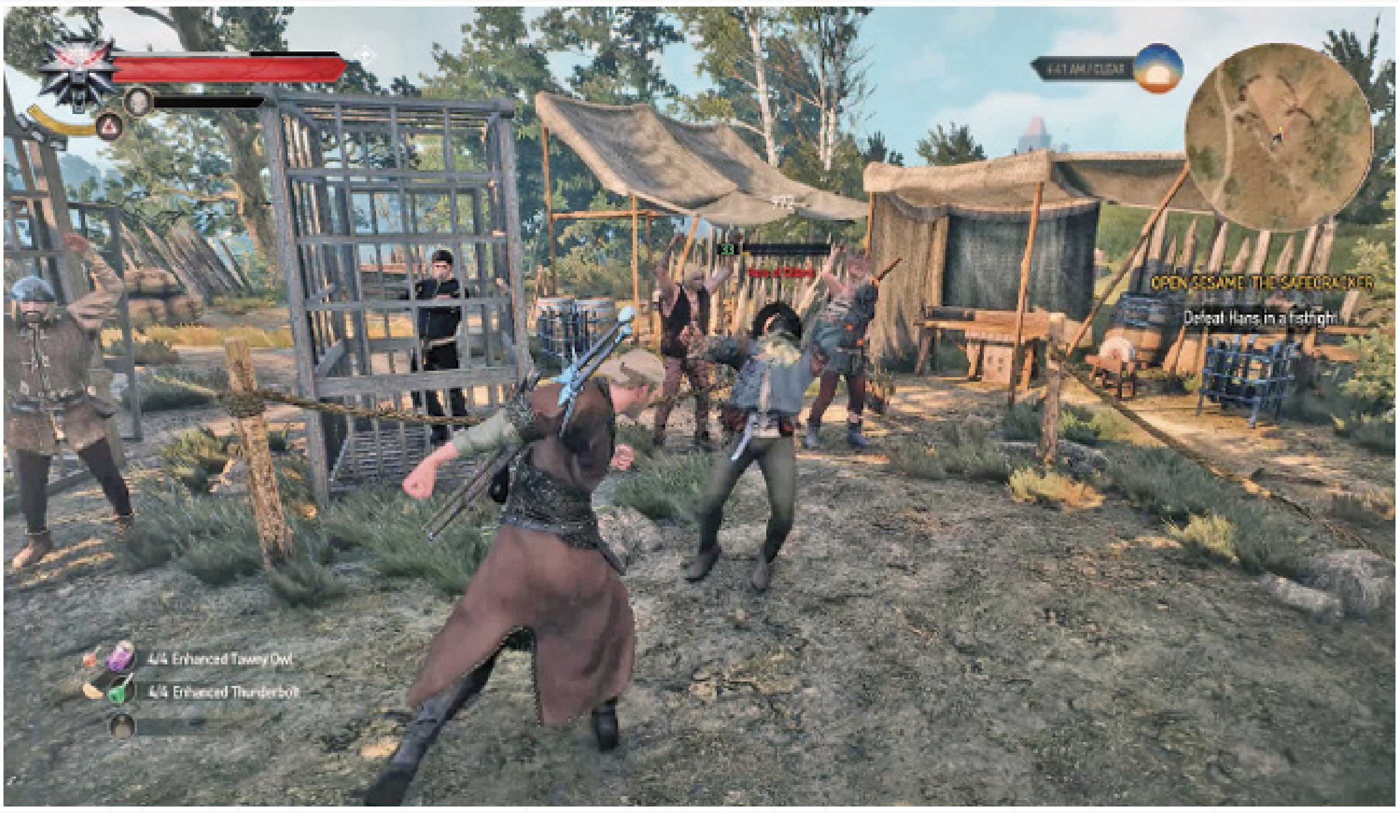
Quinto

Hans of Cidaris

A short distance roughly south from the Herbalist's Hut is a mercenaries' camp where you'll find Quinto caged, and guarded by a group of ruffians lead by Hans of Cidaris. You explain you require Quinto's services, and after some banter, you're left with having to offer Hans something. You can:

- (200 crowns) Pay Quinto's release fee of 200 crowns to Hans. If you forced Hans to pay you more money during Archgriffin monster hunt, Quinto's freedom is worth 400 crowns for you.
- Try to make a deal, usually dropping around 140 crowns in order to buy Quinto's freedom.
- Ask if Hans fancies a game of Gwent. To the winner goes Quinto. If you lose though, expect to pay double to free the safecracker.
- Mention Hans is "acting like a fishwife", goading him into a bout of fisticuffs. To the winner goes Quinto. If you're knocked on your arse and lose though, expect to pay double to free the lock-picker.

After Quinto demonstrates his skill at exiting cages, you give him instructions on reaching the herbalist's hut, and this quest concludes.



QUINTO: PICKING SIDES WITH THE BORSODI BROTHERS

(Spoiler) If you pick Quinto, certain elements of the infiltration within the Borsodi auction house play out in a different manner. Be sure to read the subsequent quest to ensure Quinto's loyalties match your own.

A Heady Concoction Of Blood, Bane, And Spirit

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

OPEN SESAME: WITCHER SEASONINGS

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame, Breaking and Entering, The Safecracker

LOCATIONS: Herbalist's Hut

ENEMIES: Rotfiends

RECOMMENDED ITEMS: Dwarven Spirit (1), Rotfiend Blood (2), Wolfsbane (2), 500+ Crowns, Axii Delusion level 2

PICKING YOUR INGREDIENTS

This quest is accessible after you meet The Stranger for the first time at the Herbalist's Hut. You can choose to complete this quest in any order you like, either before or after you source the two break-in artists and safecrackers.

OBJECTIVES

- Prepare a cleansing mixture that will weaken the Redanian soldiers.

During your conversation with The Stranger in the herbalist's cellar, you're given a recipe to concoct, known as the Cleansing Mixture. It requires the following ingredients.

CLEANSING MIXTURE

Ingredient	Amount
Dwarven Spirit	1
Rotfiend Blood	2
Wolfsbane	2

Dwarven Spirit: This can be discovered randomly in chests, or purchased from any herbalist (including the Halfling whose shop The Stranger is using as a base of operations.

Rotfiend Blood: Consult the Bestiary to discover more about these disgusting atrocities that roam the battlefields, and slay two or more to loot the blood (randomly dropped). Journey to Velen, and visit any of the battlefield locations there to maximize your chance of encountering a rotfiend. The Secondary Quest: Funeral Pyres has rotfiends to face, down in Mulbrydale.

Wolfsbane: Aside from buying this commonly-occurring purple flower from any herbalist (including that Halfling), you can find wolfsbane growing, even in the garden and fields surrounding the herbalist's hut.

Open Sesame: Witcher Seasonings

Fishing For Clues

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to eavesdrop on Redanian soldiers patrolling Oxenfurt to find out where to find their cook.

Journey to Oxenfurt, and lurk an inauspicious distance away from various soldiers as they chinwag about their life.

The first pair of Redanian troops are stationed outside the Borsodi auction house. Wait close (but not too close), and listen to them moan about their idiotic Lance Corporal; a fool named Vatslav. There's no mention of the cook, though.

Items: Cleansing Mixture

The second pair of soldiers are nattering inside the Borsodi auction house. Run around outside and stand by the leaded window (with the river on your left). Listen to a conversation about Borsodi's daughter. Nothing interesting there.

The third set of guards can be found by running east along the riverside path, past them, and standing on the stone threshold by the ficus bush. The two guards talk about having fish for supper, and start strolling westward. Follow slowly at a safe distance. If the guards stop talking, stop walking and back up; you're too close for their comfort. You learn the cook is fishing at the pier close to the Western Gate.

Horrendous Uprisings From The Bottom

OBJECTIVES

- Visit the garrison cook during the day and convince him to help you.

Maarten the Cook

Ensure you're searching for the cook during daylight hours (meditate until the next day if the sun has set), and find Maarten the cook on the pier, as expected. He's able to accommodate your extra ingredient into the guards' fish suppers, but at a cost. He wants 500 crowns. You can:

- (500 Crowns) Pay him what he wants.
- (Axii Delusion level 2) Or "persuade" him to help you free of charge.

Once the cook has been bribed or his mind befuddled into helping you, this quest concludes.

OPEN SESAME (PART 2)

RELATED QUESTS: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame, Breaking and Entering, The Safecracker, Witcher Seasonings, Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage, Scavenger Hunt: Viper School Gear

LOCATIONS: Herbalist's Hut, Borsodi Auction House (Oxenfurt), Alchemy Inn (Oxenfurt)

CHARACTERS: The Stranger, Ewald Borsodi, Eveline Gallo, Casimir, Quinto, Horst Borsodi, "Reginald" the Negotiator, Olgierd von Everec

ENEMIES: Redanian Soldiers, Arachnomorphs, Bouncer bodyguards

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the herbalist's hut to prepare the robbery.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed all three of the following: Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame: Breaking and Entering, The Safecracker, and Witcher Seasonings.

AUCTION HOUSE ETIQUETTE: PART 2

The remainder of this quest takes place within the Borsodi Auction House. As there's no way to stall the proceedings once the heist begins, it may be wise to meditate, refill or concoct your favorite oils and potions, sharpen your blades, and bring a nibble or two to the proceedings.

Head back to the Herbalist's Hut, descend into the cellar, and wait for The Stranger to reveal the precise details of the daring operation. After he says his piece, you can optionally ask about a plan "B," the security measures inside the building, and why The Stranger doesn't use the secret passage he mentions to enter the auction house. After The Stranger warns you all not to blab to anyone about this, you can decide to head there now, or meet everyone there (the latter option allows you to prepare and start the next objective at your leisure).

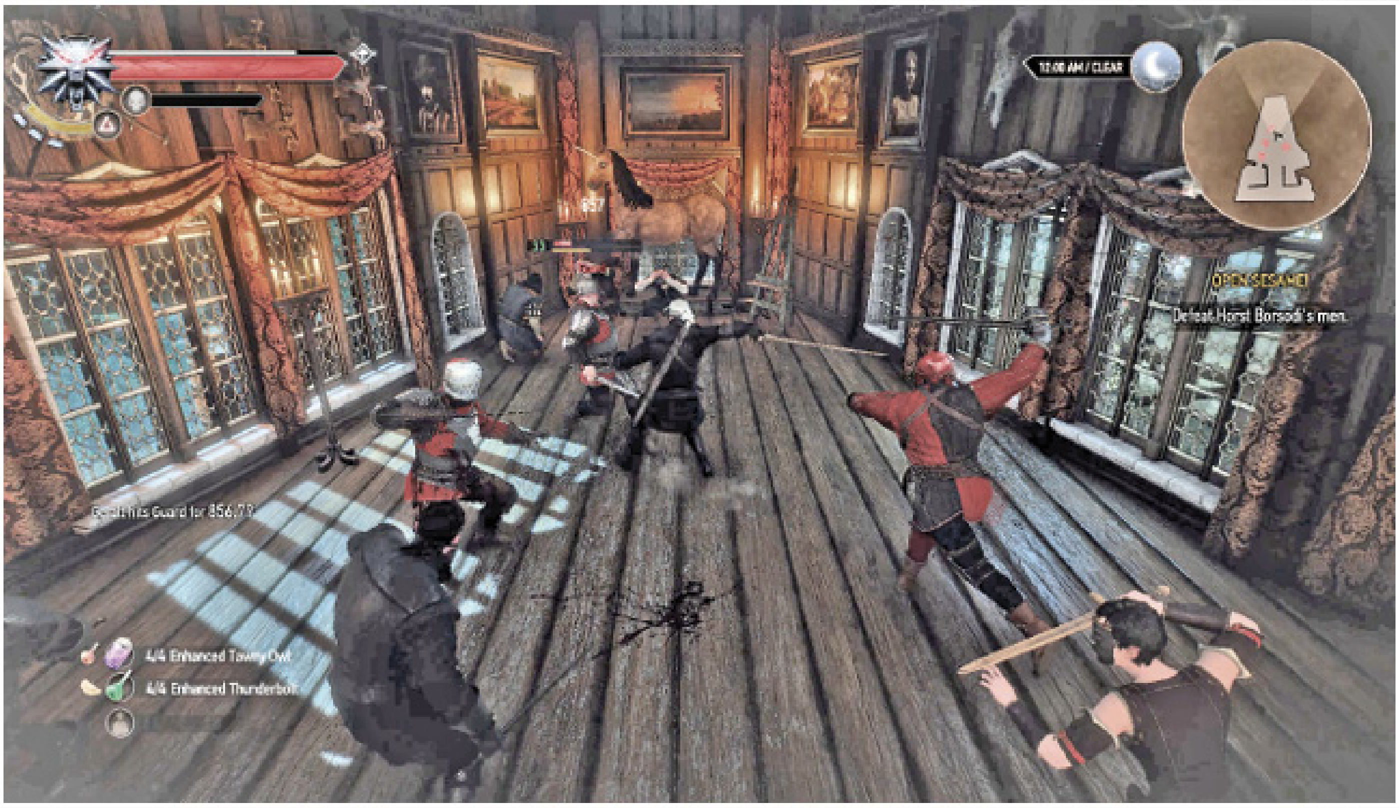
Open Sesame (Part 2)

For Whom The Bell Tolls

OBJECTIVES

- Get to the vault in the Auction House's basement.
- Defeat Horst Borsodi's men.

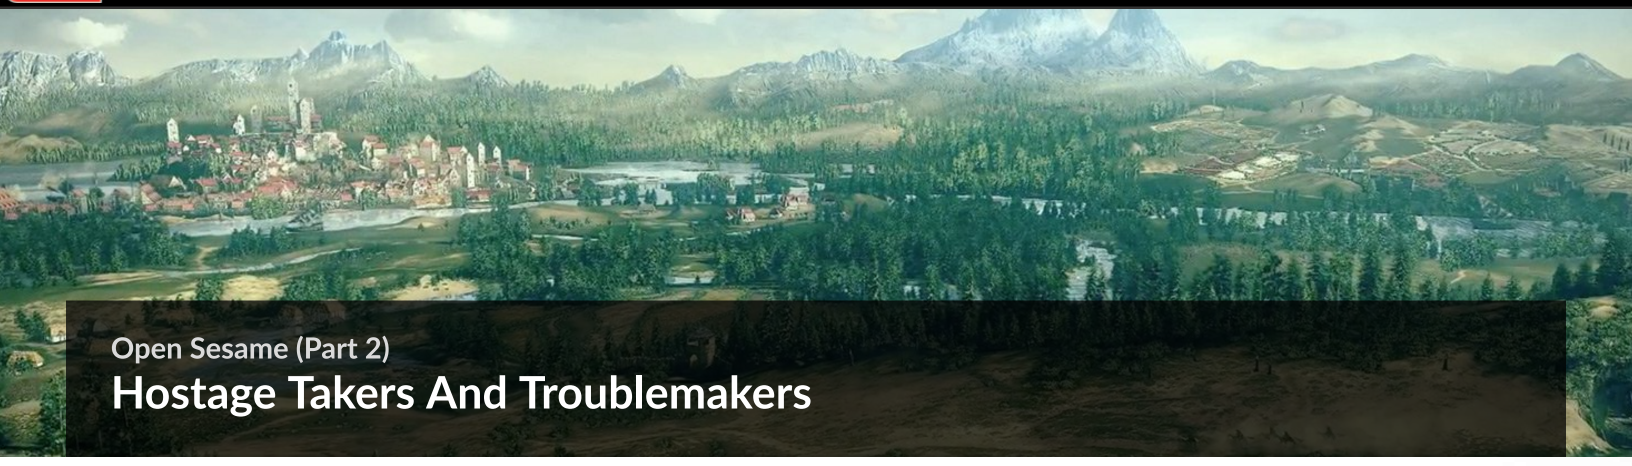
At the allotted time (after nightfall) and at the allotted location (the tower across from the auction house), Eveline scales the walls and shows why she was The Stranger's preferred agility expert. After everyone manages to ascend into the building, there's a small squabble (answer as you wish), and masks are worn.



When you've optionally spotted a love letter in this attic area, descend down the stairs armed with your wooden sword (as you requested no deaths). Keep on descending into the auction room, which isn't as empty as you would have liked. You're confronted by four guards. Defeat them (only two must be defeated by your hands, so you can target foes your allies are fighting to minimize taking damage).

Items: Love Letters

The fracas degenerates further as Horst Borsodi stumbles into the room, and quickly stumbles out again. You're ordered to chase him down, but he escapes into the basement and the main vault doors close. The belltower tolls, prompting The Stranger to produce something sharper than a wooden sword to stop the clanging. Everything, as they say on Skellige, appears to have gone "tits up."



Open Sesame (Part 2)

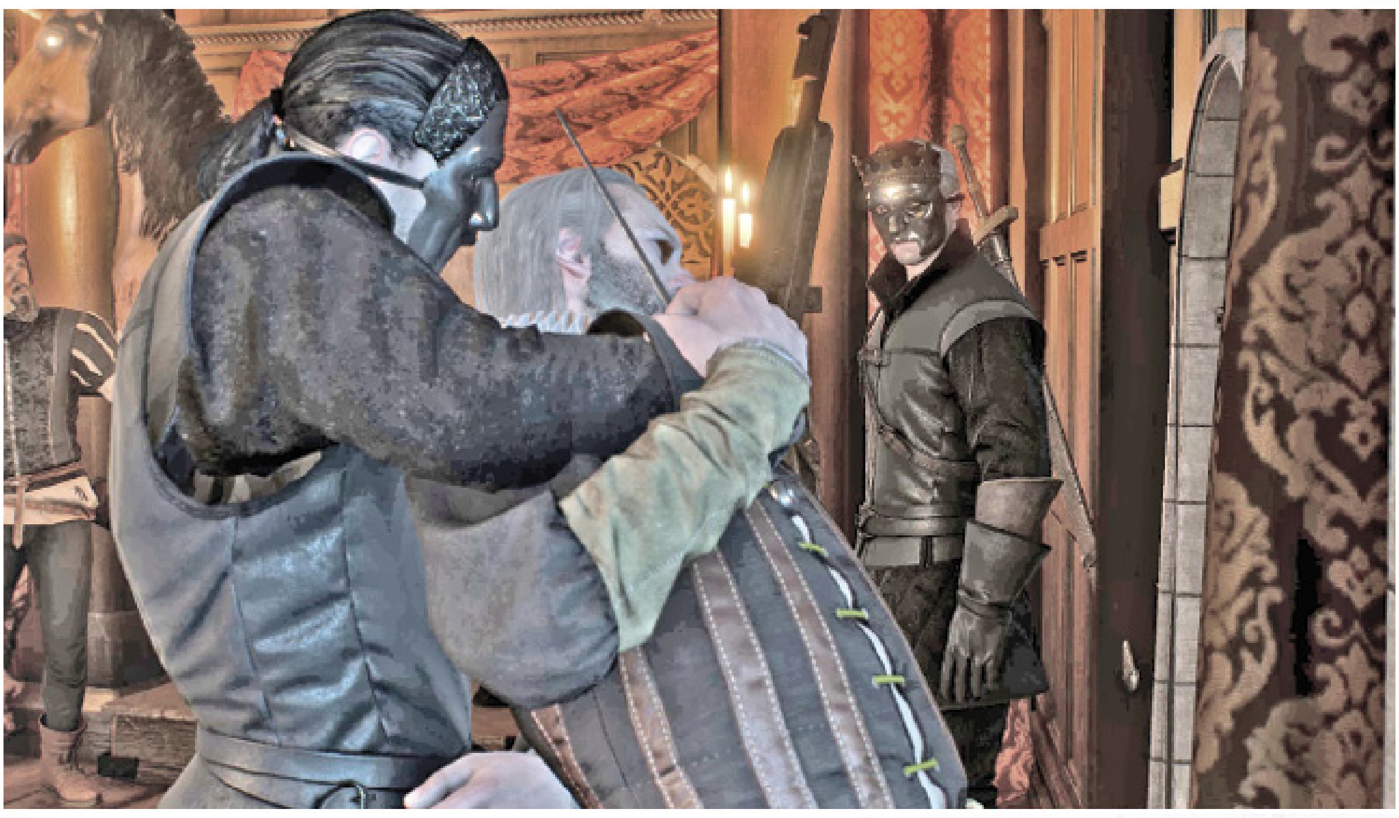
Hostage Takers And Troublemakers

NEGOTIATIONS ROUND #1: BUYING SOME TIME

The Stranger grabs a hostage as a group of Redanian soldiers gather outside and a negotiator steps in to ask what your demands are. The Stranger asks you to buy everyone a bit of time. You can:

Tell the negotiator to pull back from the auction house. This continues the stand-off without bloodshed, allowing your safecracker more time to act.

Tell The Stranger you're not about to use innocents as living shields. With no demands to meet, the Redanians storm the auction house, forcing you into a fight with the negotiator and two guards.



NEGOTIATIONS ROUND #2: COMPOUNDING THE CRIME

Assuming negotiations are continuing, the Redanian captain yells that a bargain or agreement must be made. You have limited time to choose a response. You can:

- Tell the negotiator to pull back again. As he isn't about to give in to this demand, the stand-off falls apart, forcing you into a fight with the negotiator and two guards.
- Ask the negotiator to tell you a joke. This initially befuddles him, and the hostage The Stranger is holding helps your cause by screaming at the correct moments. The negotiations move to a third round.
- Order the negotiator to find you a wagon. This buys you a bit more time, and the negotiations move to a third round.

NEGOTIATIONS ROUND #3: CONTINUING THE PANTOMIME

If you chose to ask the negotiator to tell you a joke, or requested a carriage, a final round of negotiations occur.

- If you asked for a joke, the negotiator (which you've taken to calling "Reginald") blusters out a one-liner. Feel free to reply as you wish, and make a deal involving the releasing of one hostage now, and another in ten minutes. Reginald takes the deal, Quinto appears to let you know the vault is open, and you can descend without bloodshed.
- If you asked for a carriage, the negotiator asks what type:
    - If you ask for Radovid's Coronation carriage, this forces the negotiator into storming the building, and forces you into a fight with the negotiator and two guards.
    - If you ask for any type, "as long as it rolls," the negotiator obliges (as the request isn't ludicrous), and you make a deal involving the releasing of one hostage now, and another in ten minutes. The negotiator takes the deal, Quinto appears to let you know the vault is open, and you can descend without bloodshed.

NEGOTIATIONS NULLIFIED: AN EXPLOSIVE INTERRUPTION

If Casimir is your safecracker, a non-violent exit out of this situationisn't available:

- During the negotiations, even if the guards haven't stormed the auction room yet, your talks are interrupted by a massive explosion from downstairs as Casimir blasts the vault doors wide open. You're forced into a fight with the negotiator and two guards.

NEGOTIATIONS NULLIFIED: THE REDANIANS ATTACK!

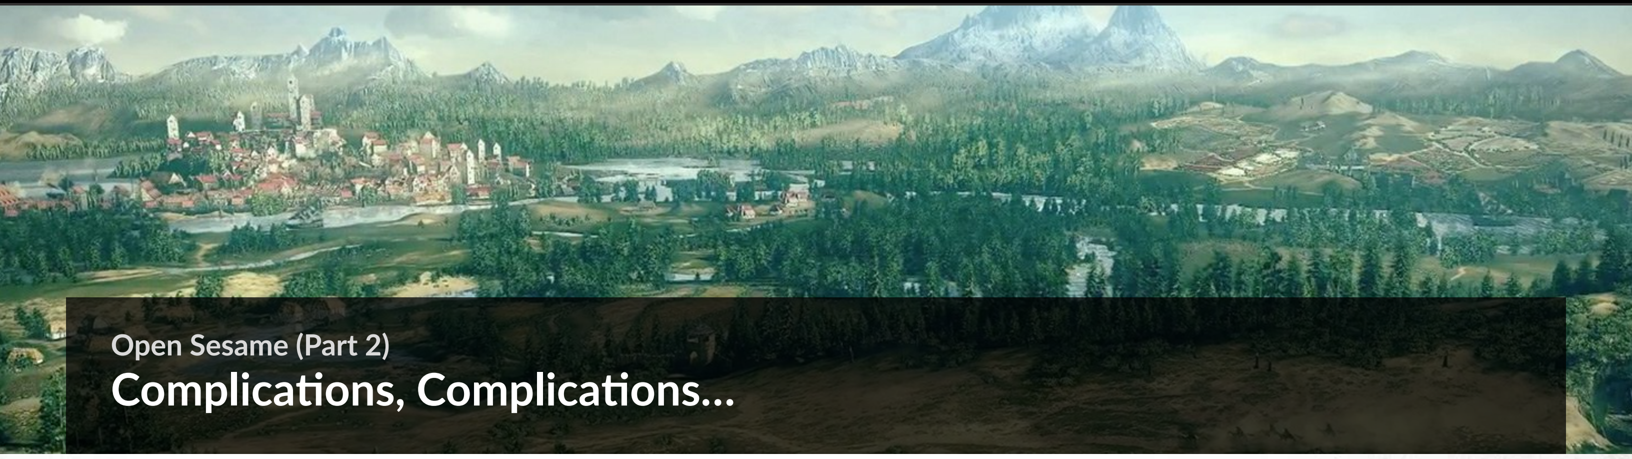
OBJECTIVES

- Fight off the Redanian soldiers' attack.

If hostage negotiations falter due to your saying the wrong thing, or your dwarven explosives expert blowing the vault to bits, you must face two soldiers and the guard captain. As your sword and armor aren't impressive in the slightest, combat is a tricky proposition, so rely more on Signs, as well as removing the two soldiers without shields first, so The Stranger and yourself can tag-team the final foe.

VAULTING OUT OF HERE: EVELINE'S EXIT

Whether or not you're in the mood for negotiations or facing guards down with wooden swords, Eveline Gallo takes this moment to bid you a fond farewell; she's out of here!



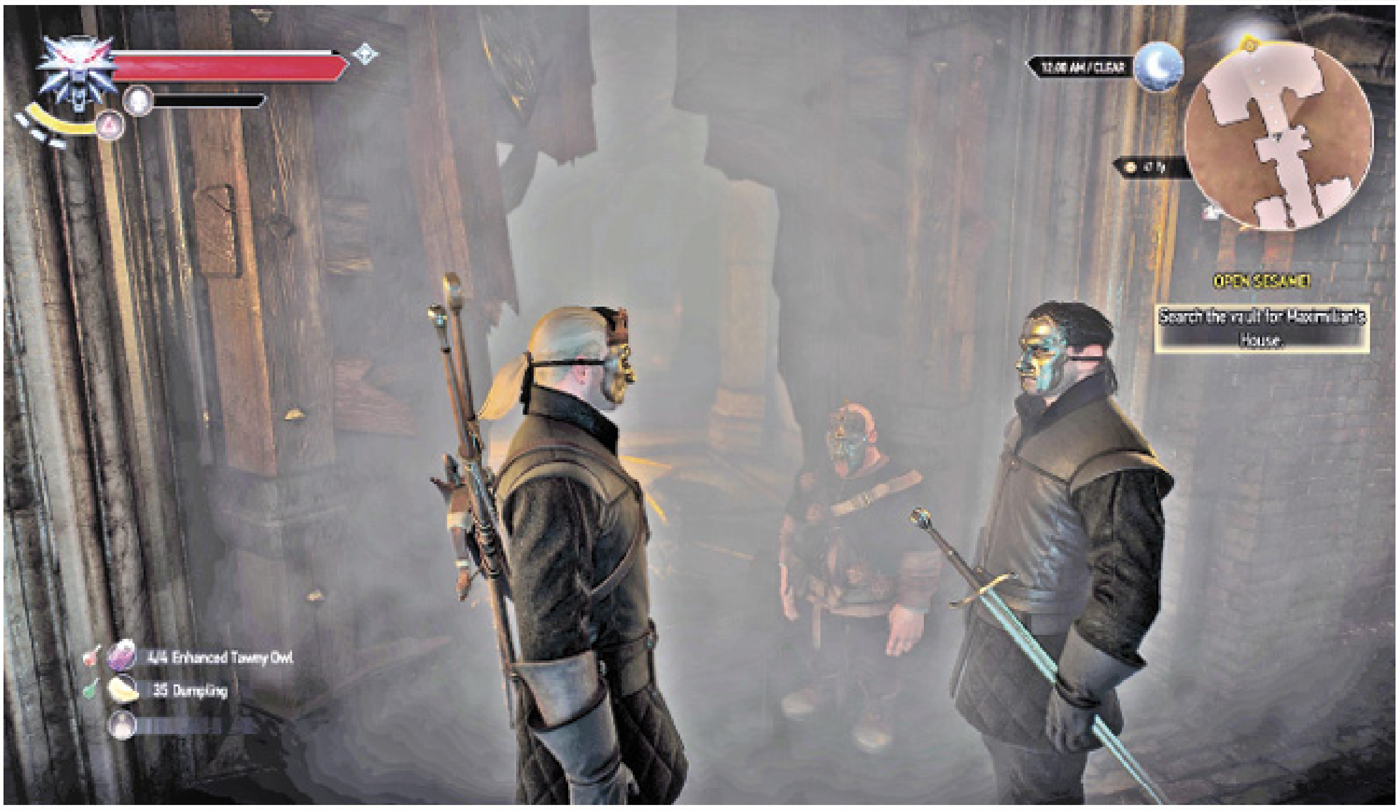
Open Sesame (Part 2)

Complications, Complications...

OBJECTIVES

- Go down into the vault.
- Search the vault for Maximilian's House.
- Defeat the monsters.

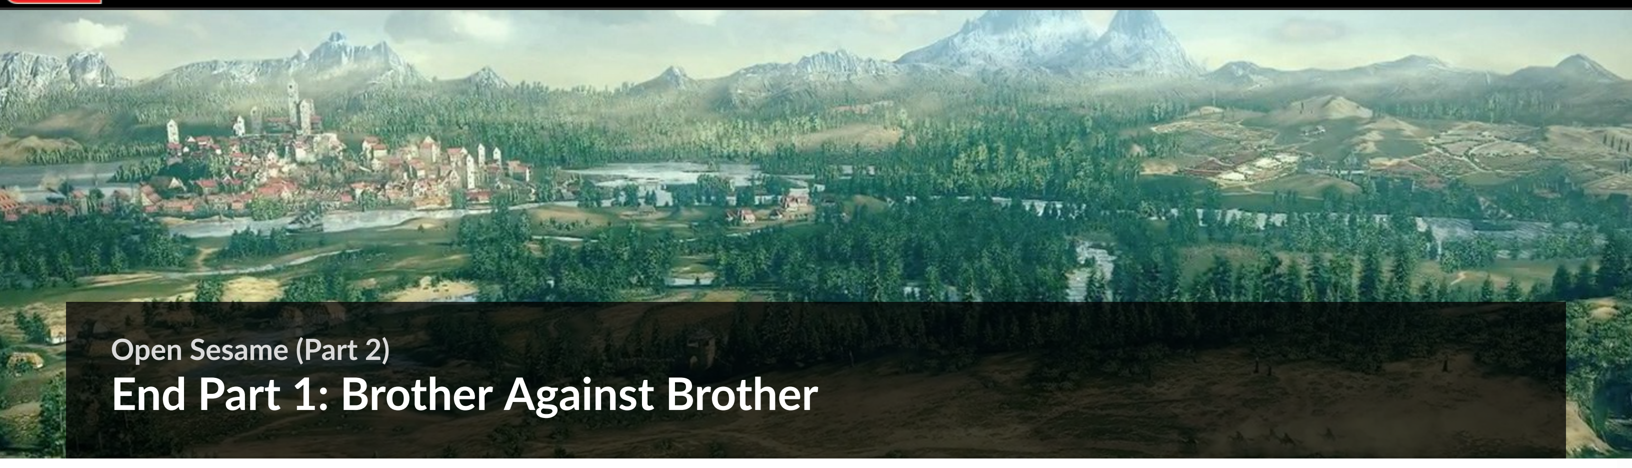
Once combat is over, or you've given yourself enough time through negotiations, you can head downstairs to the vault door.



- If Casimir is your safecracker, the door (and any trap trigger) is well and truly blasted open. You're ordered to push on into the vault. Simply cross to the other side, heading southeast.

- If Quinto is your safecracker, he marvels at the quality of the lock before picking it. You're ordered to push on into the vault. Head forward before dropping down into an earthen pit where four Arachnomorphs attempt to scuttle your chances at treasure. This additional trap mechanism wasn't destroyed by Quinto. Use Quen and either Aard or Igni to help rid yourself of these foes. After climbing back up, cross to the other side of the vault, heading southeast.

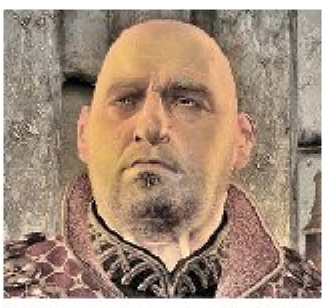
Horst Borsodi and his henchmen are waiting inside the vault. The Stranger takes this opportunity to reveal his true identity—Ewald Borsodi, the estranged brother of Horst, and clamant to the family fortune! As the two brothers exchange spittled verbal barbs, Horst yells your way, asking you to switch sides.



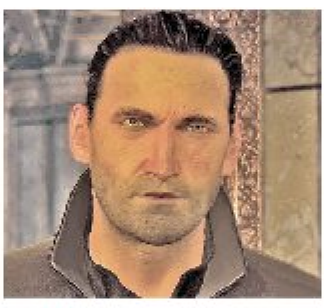
Open Sesame (Part 2)

End Part 1: Brother Against Brother

Remaining neutral isn't an option; you must side with one of the Borsodi brothers. At this point, a few variations are possible:



Horst Borsodi



Ewald Borsodi

PLAN #1A: STANDING WITH HORST (NOT CASIMIR)

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Ewald Borsodi.

▶ Answer "Tempting offer, Horst. I'm in, I'm with you." You tell an incredulous Ewald that you hate being taken for a ride, then watch as Casimir walks slowly toward Ewald, and stands by his side. They both draw their weapons. You must face Ewald Borsodi and Casimir in combat. Horst Borsodi and his two shield henchmen fight alongside you.

PLAN #1B: STANDING WITH HORST (AND QUINTO)

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Ewald Borsodi.

▶ Answer "Tempting offer, Horst. I'm in, I'm with you." You tell an incredulous Ewald that you hate being taken for a ride, and Quinto murmurs that it's hard not to agree. Ewald intends not to go quietly. You must face Ewald Borsodi in combat. Horst Borsodi, his two shield henchmen, and Quinto wait until the duel is over.

PLAN #1C: STANDING WITH EWALD (AND CASIMIR)

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Horst Borsodi.

▶ Answer "Can't bribe me. I'll stick with Ewald." You scoff at Horst's desperate attempt at bribery, and Casimir adds that he's here to take whatever he pleases, along with an explicit disemboweling promise. You must face Horst Borsodi and his two shield henchmen in combat. Ewald Borsodi and Casimir fight alongside you.

PLAN #1D: STANDING WITH EWALD (NOT QUINTO)

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Horst Borsodi.

▶ Answer "Can't bribe me. I'll stick with Ewald." You scoff at Horst's desperate attempt at bribery, though Quinto finds it much more of a tempting offer, and succumbs. You must face Horst Borsodi, his two shield henchmen, and Quinto in combat. Ewald Borsodi fights alongside you.

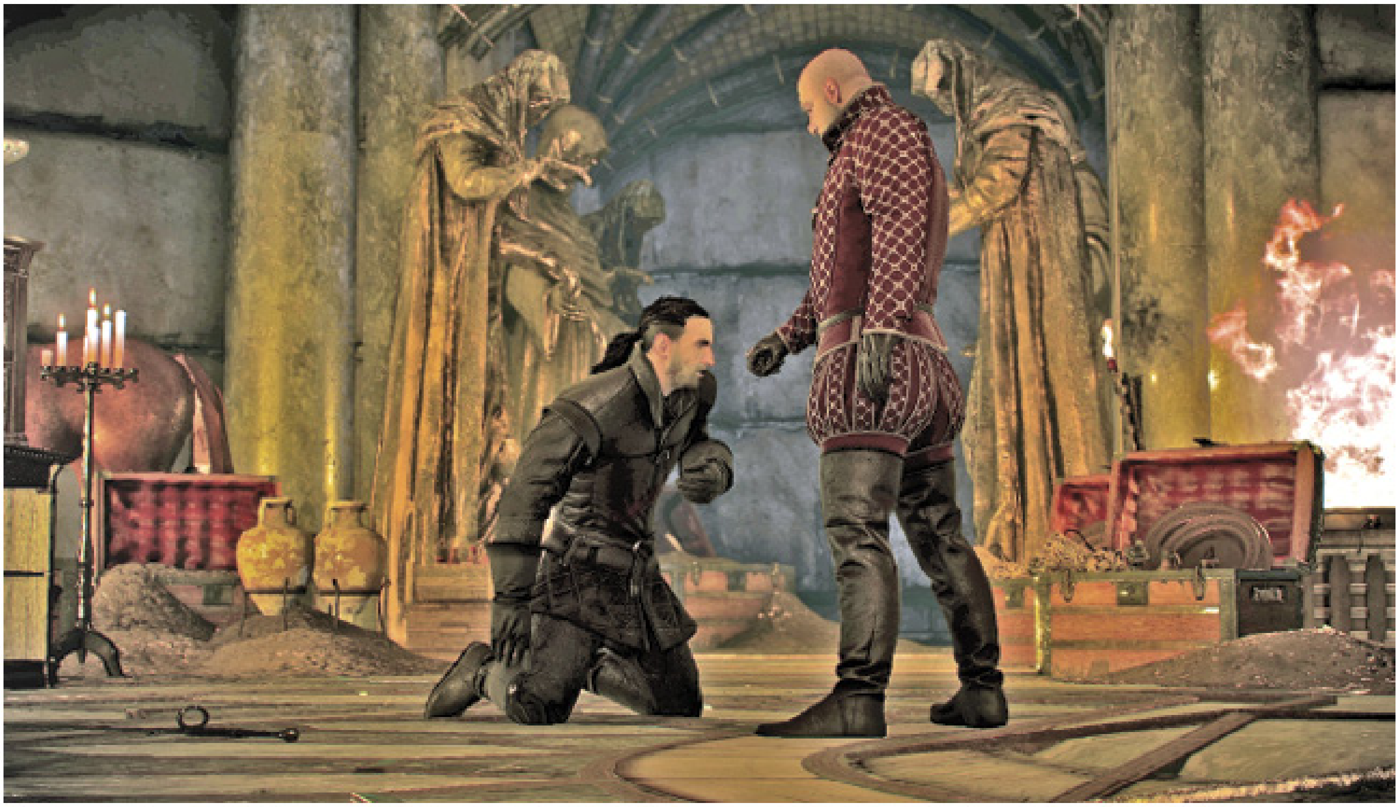
Open Sesame (Part 2)

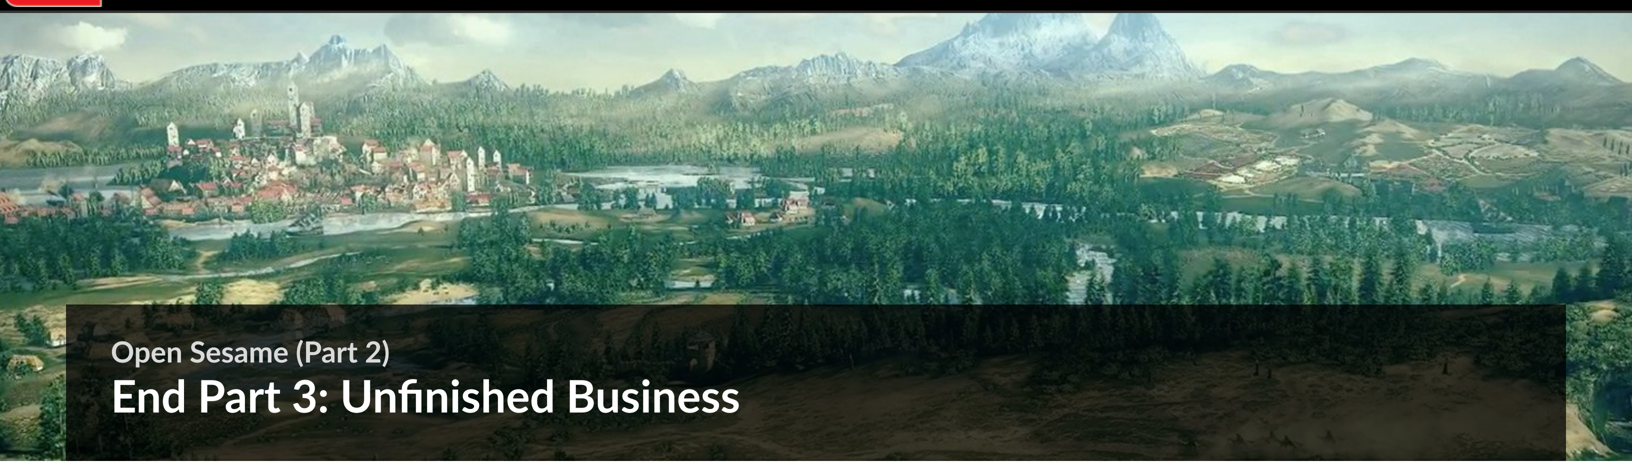
End Part 2: A Violent Fratricide

Begin fighting the brother (and anyone allied with him) in bloody combat. You have a full complement of equipment to utilize. Note that when fighting Horst, attacking him as a primary target is better than elongating the battle by removing his shield mercenaries first, unless you want the XP; as combat concludes when you whittle Borsodi's health down to almost naught. Once your chosen Borsodi is brought to his knees, the following occurs:

PLANS #2A AND #2B: EWALD'S LAST STAND

- After a withering display of sword prowess, you bring Ewald Borsodi to the ground. Horst mockingly crows victory, offering to forgive his brother if he kisses his ring, and acknowledge Horst as the head of the family. Refusing, Ewald tries a knife plunge, but misses and this results in him being struck into a bloody pulp until you intervene. Horst stops, but only temporarily, grabs at Ewald's knife, and plunges it in. Ewald gurgles his last breath. Now for a spot of unfinished business.





Open Sesame (Part 2)

End Part 3: Unfinished Business

OBJECTIVES

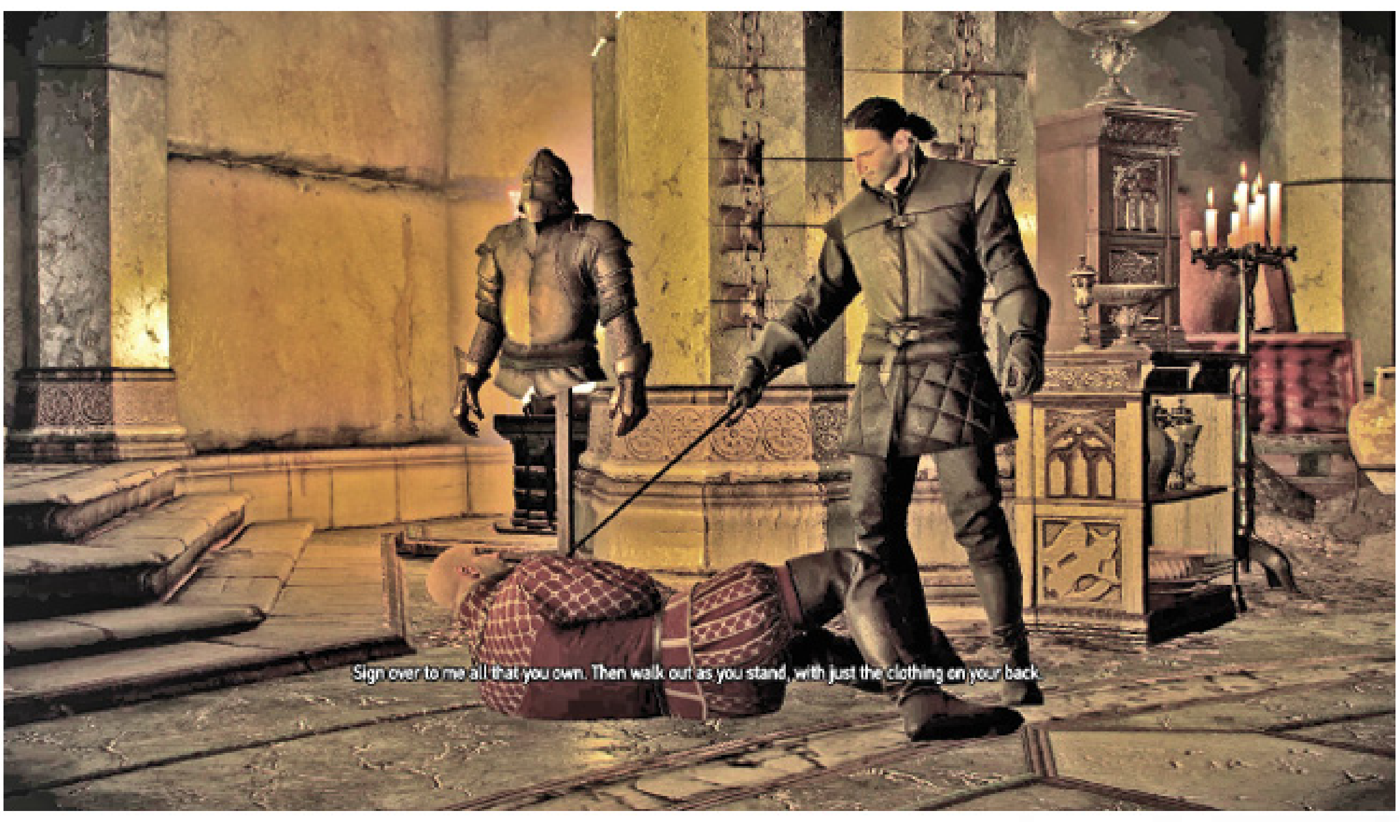
- Take Maximilian's House

PLAN #3A: MAKING A DEAL WITH HORST BORSODI

Did you side with Horst Borsodi? When he tells you he'd rather die than hand you the papers within the House, you can reply "maybe we can make a deal." It is decided that Horst will keep the papers, while you take the casket itself. If Quinto is with you, Horst beckons him to talk, and hires him into his fold. Afterward, you escape the vault via the secret passage Horst opens for you.

PLANS #2C AND #2D: HORST'S LAST STAND

After a battle of swordplay in the vault, you bring Horst Borsodi to the ground with a fierce Aard push. Ewald picks up his own brother's sword, stands over him, and points the blade at Horst's throat, demanding he sign over all that he owns. Horst pleads to take a single trinket, attempts to strike Ewald with it. Disarmed, Horst is rewarded by being struck multiple times in the face with the goblet until you intervene. Ewald stops, but before you can react, he finishes pulping his brother with a final, grotesque bludgeon. Horst gurgles his last breath. Now for a spot of unfinished business.



Sign over to me all that you own. Then walk out as you stand, with just the clothing on your back.

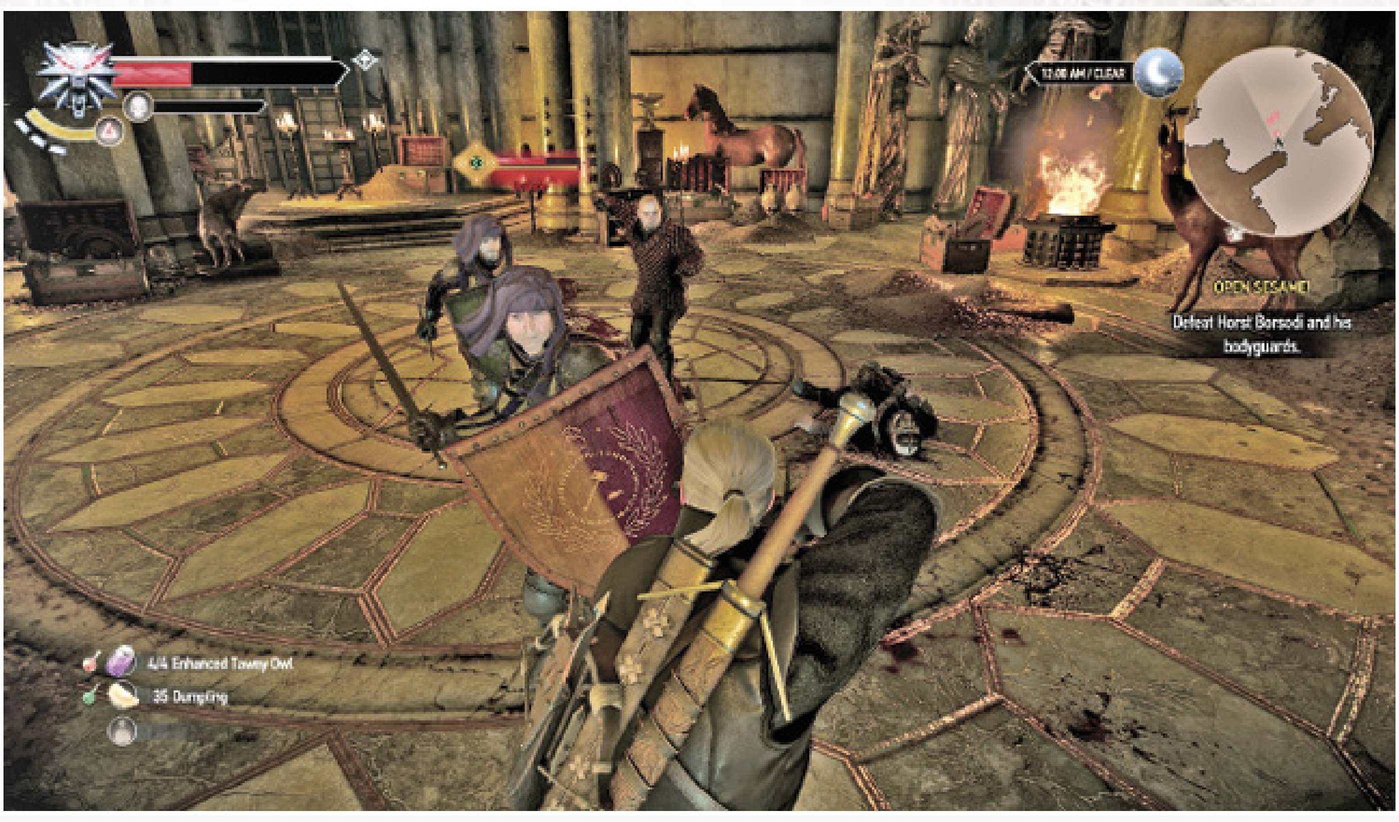
One of the Borsodi brothers now lies crumpled on the vault floor. You must now deal with the other one. Time is short, and Borsodi's House must be retrieved. You stand to face Borsodi, demanding the Borsodi's House. However, Horst or Ewald has some particularly important papers stored within this carved casket, and isn't about to let you have them. If Quinto or Casimir are still alive, they recommend a less violent end. You can:

PLAN #3B: HORST PLAY: ENDING THE BORSODI BROTHERS

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Horst Borsodi and his bodyguards.

Did you side with Horst Borsodi? When he tells you he'd rather die than hand you the papers within the House, you can reply "nothing simpler." Face him in combat; optionally slaying the blowhard quickly to avoid combat with his Bouncer bodyguards. If Quinto is still alive, he sides with Horst, and both must be faced. Afterward, you must escape the vault on your own.



PLAN #3C: MAKING A DEAL WITH EWALD BORSODI

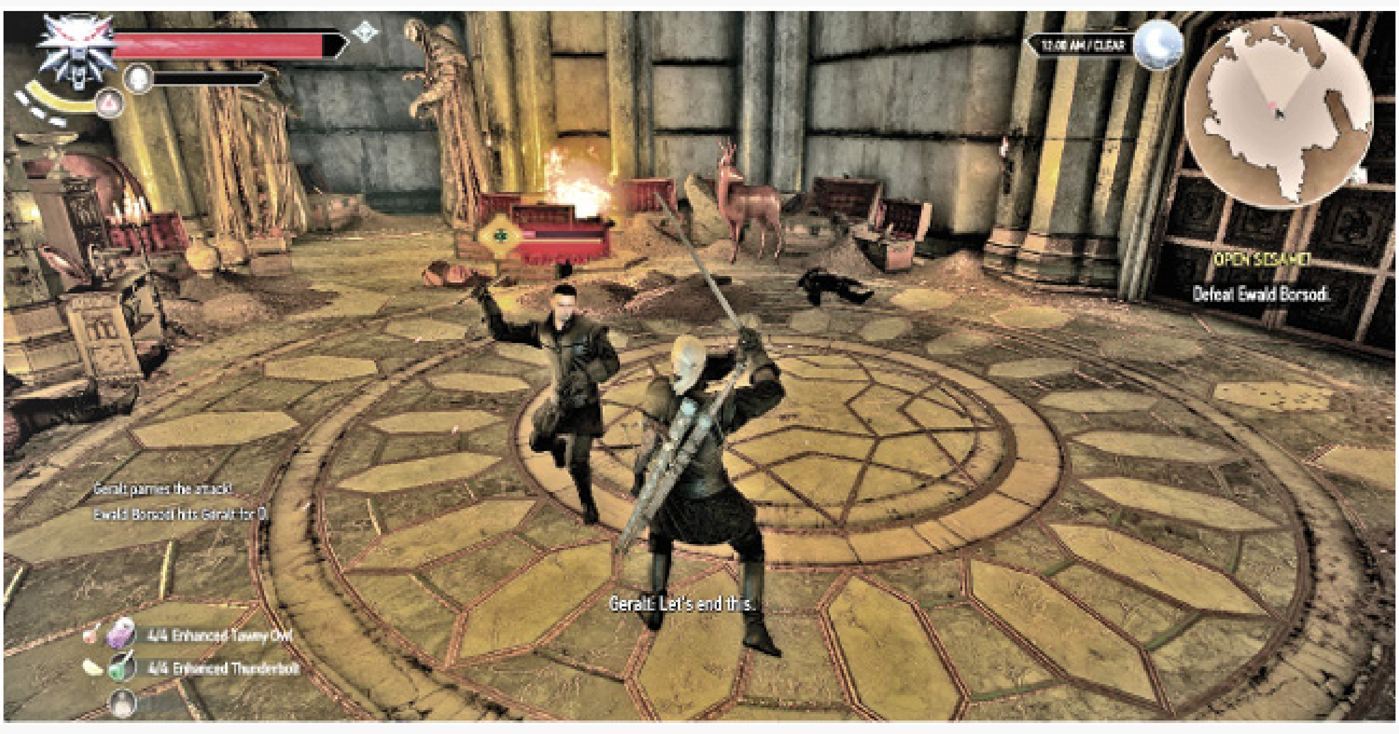
Did you side with Ewald Borsodi? When he tells you he figures his chances to better you are good, tell him, "This is not a bust. We can figure this out." You quickly agree that Ewald will keep the papers within the casket, while you take the House itself. Soldiers are entering the vault, so an escape must occur quickly; if Casimir is with you, he mutters a (coarse) sigh of relief. Afterward, you (with Ewald and Casimir) must escape the vault via the secret passage Ewald opens for you.

PLAN #3D: EWALD'S END: STOPPING THE BORSODI BROTHERS

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Ewald Borsodi.

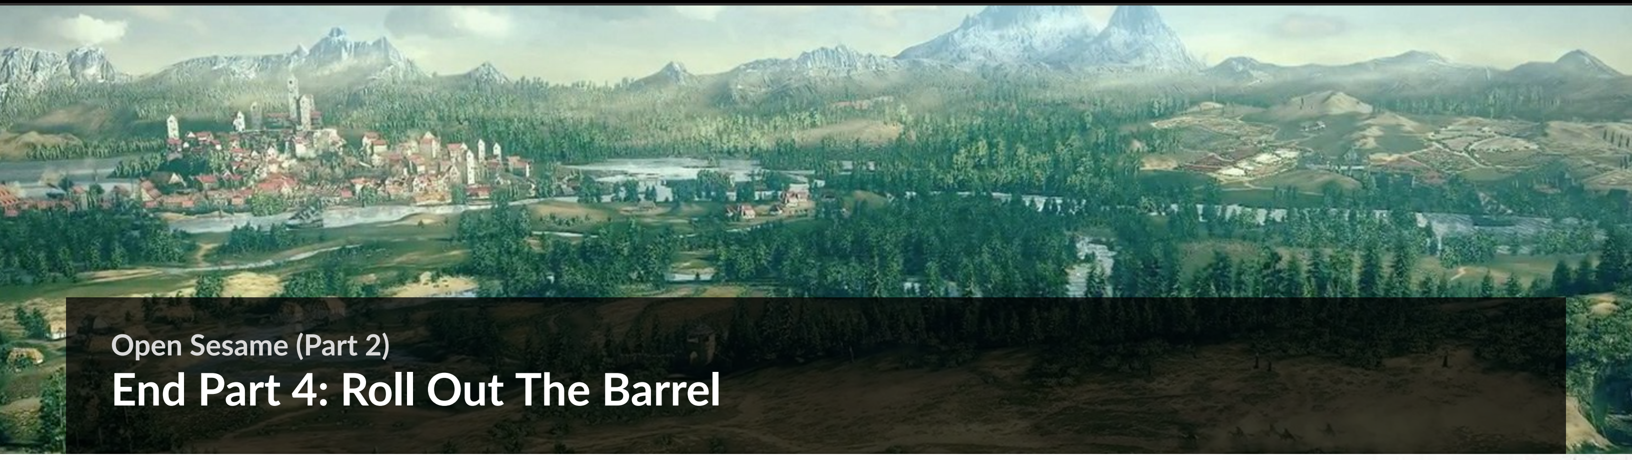
Did you side with Ewald Borsodi? You can question Ewald's decision to fight you as "dumb," and face him in combat, slaying the fool quickly. If Casimir is still alive, he sides with Ewald, and both must be faced. Afterward, you must escape the vault on your own.



Geralt parries the attack!
Ewald Borsodi hits Geralt for 0.

Geralt: Let's end this.

Items: Maximilian Borsodi's House



Open Sesame (Part 2)

End Part 4: Roll Out The Barrel

OBJECTIVES

- Find the secret way out of the vault using your Witcher Senses, OR
- Get out of the auction house.

If you're on your own, locate the large vault pillar to the left of the pedestal Borsodi's House was sitting on, and press it. This opens the secret door to the south.

AUCTION HOUSE ETIQUETTE: PART 3

Before you leave the auction house for the last time, a quick rummage in two vault chests is the order of the day. The two chests near the pillar with the pressure plate hold valuable diagrams for an Ofier Crossbow and the Viper Venomous Steel Sword. Don't forget them before you leave!

Items: Diagram: Ofieri Crossbow, Diagram: Viper Venomous Steel Sword

Dash through the escape tunnel, use the lever to open the secret wall and step into a fisherman's hut close to the Pontar.

- If Ewald is with you, you have a final conversation, and he offers to provide items to you at cut-price rates from the Auction House in the future.
- If Casimir is with you, there's a last chat before he bids you a fond farewell.

OBJECTIVES

- Take Maximilian Borsodi's House to Olgierd.

Return to Oxenfurt, enter the Alchemy Inn, and speak with Olgierd regarding the evening's slaughter. This can be done whether or not you finish Main Quest: Dead Man's Party.

Mention you have the Borsodi's House, and Olgierd beckons you to a quieter location. You can ask why he required the papers within the House, ask more about the Borsodi brothers (Olgierd is happiest if you killed them both), and why he has a gripe with them. What follows is a tale of woe and debt, but mainly debt.

You can also quiz him about the company he keeps, his saber, the Ofieri "toad" prince, or play Gwent.

- If only Main Quest: Open Sesame has been completed, you must finish Main Quest: Dead Man's Party.
- If both Main Quests: Dead Man's Party and Open Sesame have been completed, mention the third task. Olgierd's Wild Ones free a man from a barrel. Olgierd requests your presence outside, and asks if you've ever truly loved. Answer as you wish. You can:
- Refuse to drink, and not discover much about the forthcoming task.
- Agree to drink, and more old wounds are picked apart.

When it comes time, Olgierd tells you he had a wife once. The day he saw her last, he gave her a violet rose. You're to bring him that bloom. This quest now concludes, and Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage begins.

This quest is accessible immediately once you have reported back to Olgierd after completing both Hearts of Stone Main Quests: Dead Man's Party and Open Sesame.

Deep into the eastern hills of Gustfields territory, due east of Winespring Grange and the Dancing Windmill, is the dilapidated remains of the Von Everec Estate. A perpetual gloom hangs over this manor house and grounds, and the main gates are rusty and covered in creepers. This forces you to look around the perimeter for another way in; head left (north, then east and southeast) until you hear someone calling out for "Kendrick." The man is a common thief; ask questions as you wish. Fortunately, he stands at a break in the wall, allowing you to pass through into the grounds.

Follow the tracks on the ground.

Enter the fog-filled grounds, and begin a thorough inspection of the areas of interest on your map, using your Witcher Senses as you go. Your investigations yield the following evidence:

- A couple of bags of fresh manure. Perhaps to feed the flowers?
- A small fountain of ice-cold water, unused for a while.
- Near the fountain is a wooden bench; it looks well-used.
- A small grave under a leaf-less tree. Sitting nearby is a black dog you can talk to and shoo away.
- A cluster of bee-hives, well-maintained but dormant.
- The smell of flowers from the garden beds that are still tended. But there's no violet rose growing here.
- Close to an old oak tree by a circular pathway is an old painting easel; the wood has rotted completely.
- A busted lamp and trampled ground are close to the locked main doors. Somebody dragged something farther along the upper walls into the inner gardens. Your objective updates:

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the tracks on the ground.

Remain on the upper walkway and scour the wooden deck and steps for more evidence; your Witcher Senses pick up the following:

- Scuff marks and blood; a wounded man was dragged through here.
- Prints from cleated boots, leading from the back of the garden.

Follow the footprints around to a side gate, and push the gate. Beyond, you see a Black Cat watching you intently. Your chat with the cat is interrupted by a scraping sound; someone is digging.

Taking Care Of Business

OBJECTIVES

- Search the estate's back garden using your Witcher Senses.
- Defeat the estate's caretaker.

TAKING CARE OF YOURSELF FIRST

The source of the digging isn't a being to be trifled with, and you are encouraged to thoroughly prepare for a prolonged battle by brewing elixirs, prepping projectiles, using oil, and setting up your combat inventory before meditating, before venturing into the back garden.

The Caretaker

Remain on the upper walkway, and follow the trail of footprints and body marks to the back garden. Here you find the source of the digging sounds: a monstrous and grotesque form, an abomination created through black magic, now a guardian of the estate—the Caretaker! It hasn't finished digging the hole to dump the remains of the other thief in yet. Without a sound (as it has no mouth) it stops and turns its shovel at you. The Caretaker must be killed before you can continue.

DEFEATING THE CARETAKER: THE ABOMINATION'S ATTACKS

The Caretaker has the following attacks and maneuvers:

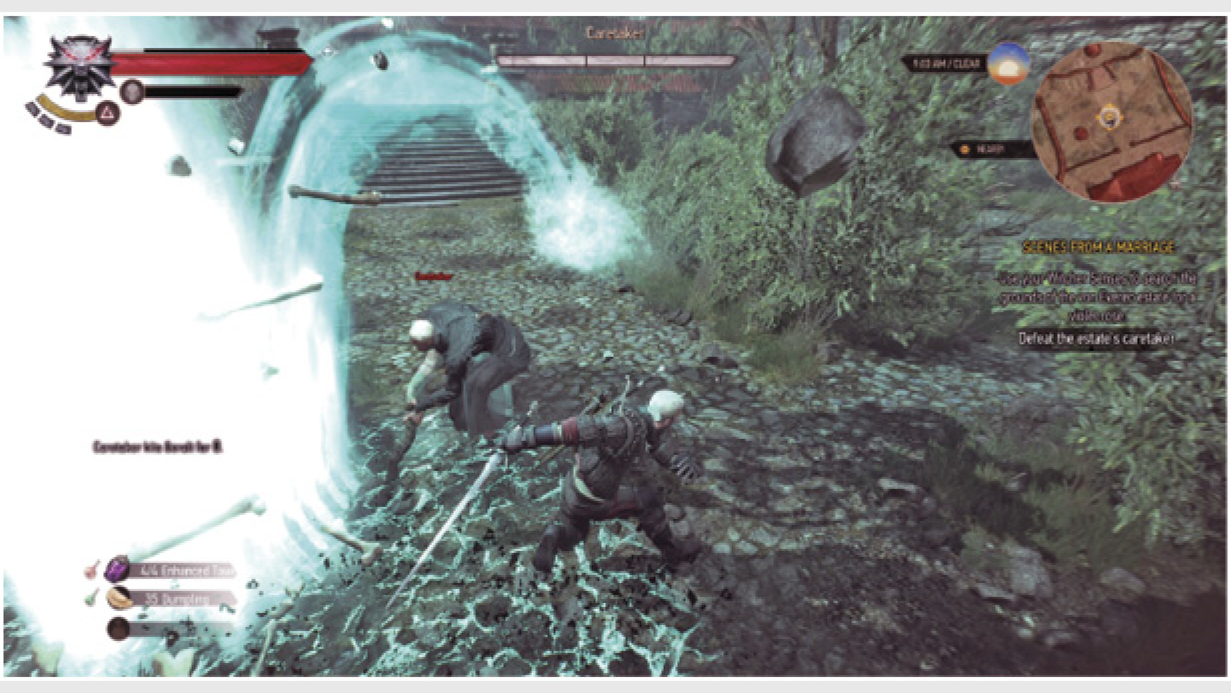
Regeneration Strikes: Whenever he strikes you with his spade successfully, he regenerates a small amount of health. Simply avoid being struck for this, and the usual reasons!

Summoning Ghosts: After around three or more attacks, or when he suffers substantial damage, he invokes ghosts that shuffle toward him, allowing themselves to be destroyed and absorbed by the Caretaker, regenerating his health considerably. Stop this quickly by special positioning (see "Coaxing the Caretaker," below), or by reaching the ghosts first and simply striking them with a single hit to dismiss them. As more ghosts are summoned (continuously for around 30 seconds), continue to look for ghosts (especially on your map) and race to prevent the Caretaker reaching them as quickly as possible while dismissing each with your sword.

Combination Attack (Spade): This is a powerful series of spade attacks the Caretaker can string together to form a devastating combo. If you're caught in this, you can be killed easily. Do not try to attempt to parry or block; step out and away from this attack.

Special Attacks (General): These cause a large amount of damage and cover a large area around and in front of him. These are as follows:

Special Attack: Shovel Slam: The Caretaker raises his spade above his head and then slams it down into the ground, causing a wide, cone-shaped area to be bathed in attack energy; this causes massive damage to you, and knocks you down. Look for the Caretaker to raise his spade, and back away from the area. As the shovel becomes temporarily stuck in the ground after the energy dissipates, venture in to attack afterwards. Then leap away as soon as you see more energy starting to appear around him.



Special Attack: Charging Shovel: The Caretaker barges forward with his spade outstretched, racing forward around eight meters and causing massive damage and a knockdown if he strikes you during this time. Afterward, there is a brief recovery time, where you can strike back. Simply step to the side, or roll into or around the attack so the Caretaker runs past you. Then target and attack the foe during his recovery.

Impressive Immunity: The Caretaker is immune tow most Sign, Bomb, and crossbow bolt effects. He also immediately destroys any Yrden placed by you, making this especially ineffective.

DEFEATING THE CARETAKER: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Learning Patterns: In the Beginning: The Caretaker makes a slow but constant approach toward you, attempting his combo attack when close. These usually end with a Shovel Slam, in an attempt to knock you over.

Learning Patterns: In the Thick of It: When you manage to reduce the Caretaker's health to the first of its three segments, and again when two-thirds of his health is lost, the Caretaker breaks away from the fight and summons ghosts from their graves within the garden. He slays and absorbs the ghosts' energy, and this can easily bolster his health back up to maximum. These invoking phases last 30 seconds, so it is imperative you clear the ghosts away from the Caretaker to avoid prolonged combat. Afterward, the Caretaker begins attacking again. At two-thirds health, the Caretaker summons ghosts and then starts to employ the Charging Shovel attack exclusively. At one-thirds health, the Caretaker summons ghosts for a second time, then uses both the Shovel Slam and Charging Shovel attacks.

Coaxing the Caretaker: As the ghosts are summoned within the low stone walled section of the back garden, if you back away from the Caretaker during the combat phase, forcing the Caretaker to follow you up the steps and to the pathway where you met the Black Cat (or where the thief's body is at the opposite end of the garden), you can quickly leave the Caretaker when he starts to summon ghosts, race into the garden, and mow down ghosts quickly before the Caretaker can reach them; at least until he follows you back into the garden. Area-of-effect attacks, like Igni, are particularly helpful in ridding an area of multiple ghosts. Then concentrate on any ghosts within the Caretaker's path, preventing more health being sucked up by this foe. Don't engage the Caretaker during this time; focus on the ghosts.

A Precise Attack: As the fight begins, approach but do not engage the Caretaker; stay directly outside the range of his combination attack. Watch for the start of the Shovel Slam, you can easily spot this as energy arcs out of his weapon. At this point, roll behind the Caretaker, and as the Caretaker tries to remove the shovel from the ground, batter him with sword attacks coated in Relict Oil.

Conclusion: Once the Caretaker performs his Charging Shovel attack, a simple sidestep, followed by sword attacks during his recovery time, is the key to success. Repeat the previous tactics mentioned until the conclusion of this battle.

Friends Of The House

OBJECTIVES

- Search for Iris von Everec on the upper floor of the manor.

After the Caretaker falls, you're somewhat surprised to start a philosophical discussion with the Black Cat. Joined by the Black Dog you saw at the grave earlier. They don't reveal their identities, only that they are "friends of the house." You can ask them about the Caretaker, and their mysterious nature, but mentioning the violet rose. You're given a key to the manor house, allowing you to search for the rose's owner (and estranged wife of Olgierd), Iris von Everec. Before continuing, you may wish to loot the Caretaker and gather his magical spade; 10 percent of the damage caused by this weapon is returned to you as health. You may also find an Ornamented Brush beneath the rotted gazebo, close to the dead thief, in the back gardens. Head to the back of the manor (the door the two familiars move to sit between) and enter.

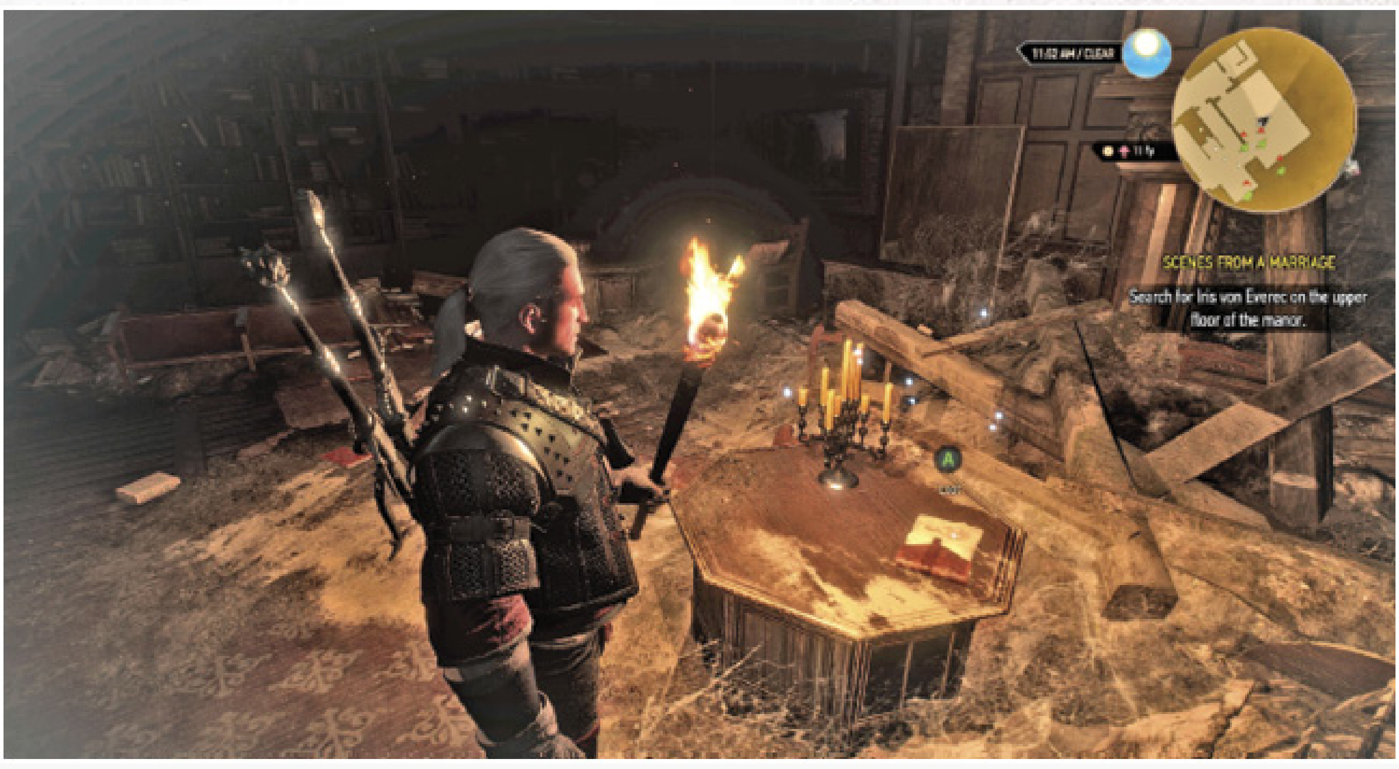
INTO THE DARK MANOR: LET THERE BE LIGHT

A Cat potion, a simple torch or lantern, and judicious use of the map to ensure you're not lost, are advisable when starting your search of this tumbledown manor. Feel free to light any candles or fireplaces along the way, to add further light and so you know where you've previously explored.

INTO THE DARK MANOR: LET THERE BE WRAITHS

Or specifically, one particularly frightening wraith. As you've just defeated the Caretaker, you may be low on provisions, so ensure your best wraith-killing equipment (and health) is up to snuff before continuing.

After listening to whispers and navigating the inky-black entrance and storage area, enter the only accessible doorway, and into the grand parlor. A spectral shape disappears back into a painting on the far wall. Something wraith-like is lurking here. Venture further into this large, dilapidated chamber, and take the sketchbook from the table.



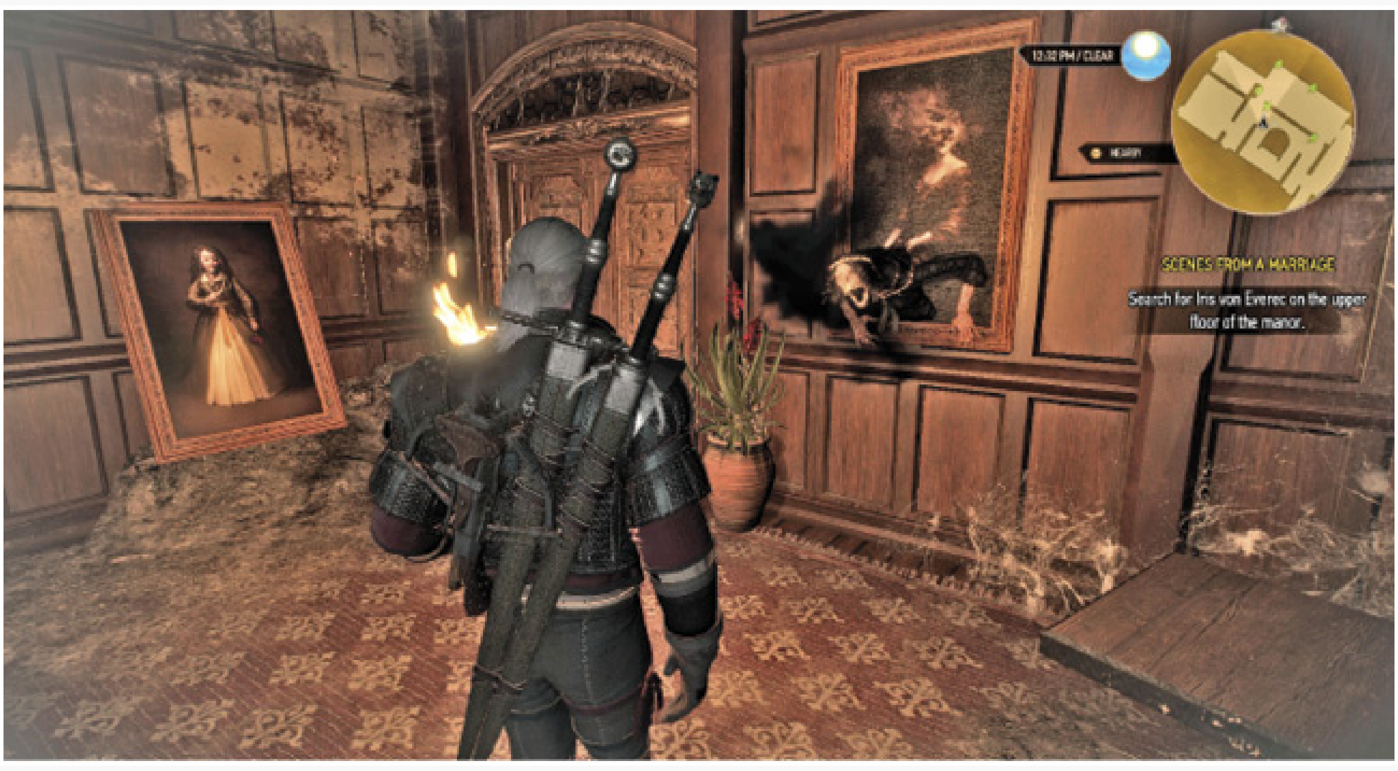
Search for Iris von Everec on the upper floor of the manor.

Items: Iris' sketchbook

Step into the main hallway, where a falling chandelier and ghostly voice attempt to dissuade you from continuing. The way forward is up the grand staircase, but you can optionally inspect the following:

- The painting to the right of the grand stairs; it is of Olgierd looking like a different man compared to the tortured soul you've currently befriended.

- In the dining room opposite the doorway you entered from, there's a table strangely clean and ready for a meal to be served, if you examine it (use your Witcher Senses).



Search for Iris von Everec on the upper floor of the manor.

Ascend the main staircase. At the top, the wraith in the painting may startle you. Nearby is a painting of Iris and Olgierd together. The only accessible area is through the doorway to the left (west), into a smaller office room exhibiting the signs of fire damage. Optionally loot a couple of books, then take the exterior balcony into a secondary bedroom. The door opposite swings open, coaxing you into a long gallery: A very long gallery...

The Wraith in the Painting

As the gallery elongates to a point where it is impossible to escape, the familiar form of a wraith congeals close by. However, this form of Iris von Everec is especially troublesome. Prepare to defeat the Wraith in the Painting.

DEFEATING THE WRAITH: THE ENTITY'S ATTACKS

This wraith attacks in a similar manner to any other floating specter you may have encountered before. But she is a little more problematic than other lost souls:

Relentless and Immunities: She is relentless, fast, and aggressive. She is also immune to Signs that cause damage and special effects from Bombs and crossbow bolts.

Close Attack Clawing: A barrage of close-range clawing attacks can keep you stunned due to being constantly struck. She can also pass through you during this attack, usually used as a counter if you attempt to defend.

Painting Regeneration: Any lost health is regenerated as the wraith flies higher into the air (to escape your attacks), and opens a portal into one of the paintings found in the long gallery. Then attacks resume after the portal opens; until she floats and enters the painting portal. If she enters, she disappears for a few moments, then returns via a different painting portal, regenerated with health.

DEFEATING THE WRAITH: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Quen, not Yrden: Unlike the Wraiths you may have faced before, Yrden isn't a recommended tactic to use. Come to this fight with a boosted Quen; augmented by abilities and utilize these defenses (such as Active Quen) frequently. In this situation, Quen isn't a passive defense, but is instead the key to victory; you're absorbing this Wraith's damage rather than attempting to prevent it. For this reason, it's also worthwhile carrying a supply of Tawny Owl potions to boost the stamina regeneration you need to cast Signs.

Portal Permission Denied: Now Quen is allowing you to fight back more frequently, you'll damage the wraith (especially if your sword is coated with Specter Oil), causing her to float up, and open one of the painting portals. As soon as this occurs, look for the beginnings of the (green) portal, and focus every attack on the location of the painting portal. You can use sword attacks, or bombs, crossbow bolts, or offensive signs (Igni for example, offers a quick closing of the portal).

Repetition Equals Victory: Without a portal to enter, the wraith starts to attack you again, but without the boost in health she craves. Use Quen, counter and wound her again, and prevent any subsequent portals from opening. Continue this tactic until the wraith is slain.

OBJECTIVES

- Examine the remains on the bed.

With the long gallery exit (to the east) now accessible, enter Iris' bedchamber and make a short inspection of the room before checking the bed; there's a portrait to pick up on a small table to the right of the fireplace. Though you can also inspect the small art studio off this room, the main area of interest is the large bed itself. Iris is here, but she's not in the land of the living. The Black Cat and Dog appear to recommend you frame your wishes more carefully. As you learn more about her, you can ask the familiars how Iris died and why they are helping you, before inquiring about Iris' wrath. It seems their mistress endured much hardship. After taking a key to the front door (given by the Black Cat), you inform your furry friends that you intend to talk to Iris anyway, starting with the burial of her remains.

A Eulogy, And Into The Painted World

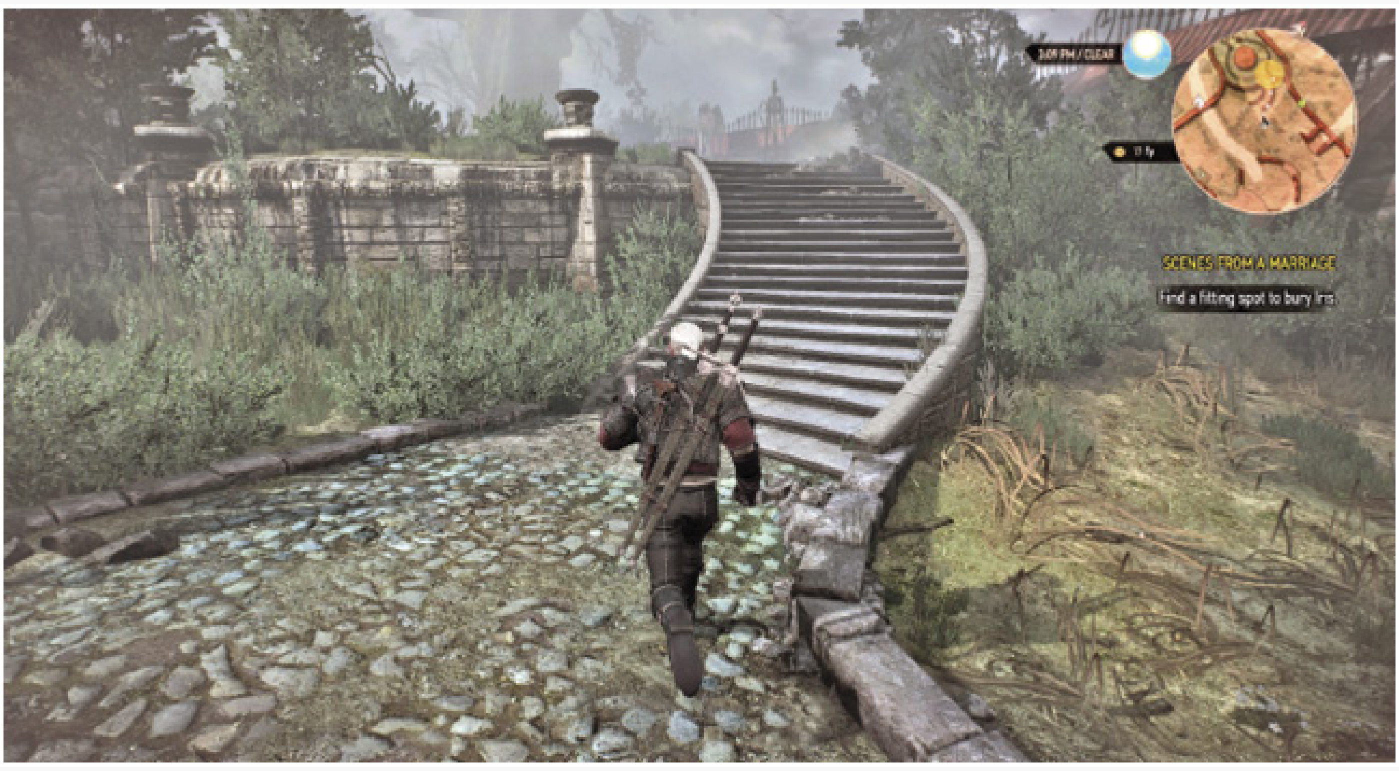
OBJECTIVES

- Find a fitting spot to bury Iris.

Iris von Everec (Deceased)

You now have the run of the manor. Retrace your steps down the main staircase, and out the main doors (you can now unlock). Into the gloomy garden, you should inspect the following locations as a suitable resting place for Iris. Your previous search of the grounds allows you to easily find the following areas:

- The bench near the fountain. Iris liked to sit here, but this isn't a good place for a grave; it is too close to the house.
- The flower bed. Though Iris adored flowers, she would never want to destroy them. Dig somewhere else.
- The easel on the raised garden under the large oak tree (roughly northwest of the main manor) seems suitable; you are told Iris loved to paint.



You dig the grave by the easel, and say a few kind words about Iris (choose whatever you wish to say). You can then try to summon her, and place one of the following items you found during your previous searching (it doesn't matter which, you don't have to place anything):

- The sketchpad from the ground floor study and library.
- The painting of Iris and Olgierd from Iris' bedchamber.
- The ornamented hairbrush found in the back garden.

You can also ask the Black Cat and Dog to add their own eulogies. With the remains interred, you attempt to summon her. Her wraith appears, silently walks over to the easel, conjures a painting of the manor, and steps through. The figure of Iris appears in the painting, prompting you to follow her into the Painted World.

You're More Than A Memory Now

OBJECTIVES

- Look for Iris von Everec's memories and find a way to restore them.

Iris von Everec (Memory)

Olgierd von Everec (Memory)

You appear in a place both strange and familiar, the painted world of Iris von Everec's dreams. The Black Cat and Dog exist in both places. After her death, the Painted World gained substance. Feel free to ask the Cat about it. You are instructed to tear Iris from her autumnal slumber completely. You need to restore her memories, one scene at a time. You must peer closely at each memory before restoring it.

SCENE #1: OLGIERD THE UNWELL

OBJECTIVES

- Place the items that fit the scene where they belong.

Under the gazebo, Iris is painting, while Olgierd sits on a bench. Use your Witcher Senses, and discover the following three objects:

- A book called The Spirit from the Steppe, on the wooden gazebo rail, to the right of the entrance.
- A painter's palette on the empty bench across from Olgierd.
- A teapot for afternoon tea, to the right of Olgierd.

Though not particularly harmful, they can be a nuisance, and can be dismissed using Igni. Head down into the main courtyard with the impressive (and purple) hedge. You're attacked by around four "spiders" along the way. Defeat them before continuing.

Items: Painter's palette, Teapot, Book: The Spirit from the Steppe

REMOVING THE SHADOW SPIDERS FROM THE GARDENS

These shadows attack in a similar manner as Arachnomorphs, and it is worthwhile consulting the Bestiary to discover the best swordplay tactics to utilized. Their lunging attacks can cover large distances, and they have a web-based spittle to tie you up (parry this to avoid it). Copious dodging and rolling are advisable, as unlike normal Arachnomorphs, these shadow spiders are immune to all Critical effects (such as Burning, Freezing, and Paralysis). Therefore, Quen (to absorb any stray hits from these foes) and fast attacks are recommended; especially frequent light sword strikes that can stun these shadows for a while.

SCENE #2: YOUR HEALTH, MY DEAR WIFE

OBJECTIVES

- Search the area around the memory using your Witcher Senses.
- Place the item that belongs there in Iris von Everec's hand.
- Defeat the wraiths.

With any Spiders disposed of, optionally talk to the Black Cat as you reach the formal fountain. Use your Witcher Senses and uncover the following:

- A Glass (a wine cup) on the edge of the fountain, just like the one Olgierd is holding.
- A Bouquet of flowers on the ground, close to the hedge, near the area where you find the glass.
- A wedding veil, on the benches just left of the "happy couple."

SCENE #3: DINING AT THE DEBTOR'S FEAST

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to find a way to restore the memory.
- Carefully examine the painting in the dining room.

Enter the manor, which is much more structurally sound in this other world. Access the dining room, where Iris and Olgierd sit at a long dining table with Iris' family. The memory is incomplete. Use your Witcher Senses to reveal the following:

- A suckling pig, a lavish feast laid on by Olgierd, in an attempt to impress his guests.
- A Toussaint wine on the floor. Expensive.
- A doll made of silver thread and pearls close to Olgierd.
- Some bank notes; it appears a debt has been bought out.

It shows the feast, but with three important differences: The fireplace is lit, as well as the left and middle candlesticks. Ignite them (don't ignite the third candlestick at the far end of the table) and watch the scene unfold. Afterward, an ethereal specter appears. Attack him as you would a bandit, until he yields, and beckons you through a pair of double doors into the main stairs hallway.

SCENE #4: INK STAINS AND CONTEMPT

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to find a way to restore the memory.

Head up the stairs, and into the bedchamber. Olgierd is bent over a wash basin, while Iris lies pensively on the bed. Use your Witcher Senses and uncover the following:

- A bloody towel at the foot of the bed.
- A night shirt, never worn.
- A night lamp on the bedside table; the wick is almost gone.

- Look around for candles and chalk.
- Complete the partially erased pentagram.

Enter the long gallery after the scene, and beware of four specters that attempt to waylay you. Stay at the entrance to prevent being overrun, and attack them methodically. They suffer Igni damage and blows from your swords, and their attacks can be parried like those of a common bandit. Exit the long gallery, and head into the study, where Olgierd and Iris are frozen in time. Enter the study. Use your Witcher Senses to discover the following:

- A pentagram on the floor to bind summoned beings. The lines aren't distinct, and candles must be placed to complete it.
- Chalk is found on the low bookcase, along with a bottle of blood you don't need.
- Beeswax candles are to be found on Olgierd's desk, under the window.
- A book on the floor in the corner by the bookcase, entitled Between Worlds.
- A book on the low shelf right of the desk, entitled Blood Pacts, or On Foreign Presences. A tome about parlaying with demons.
- A painting (to the right of the fireplace) showing a depressingly gloomy manor in the winter.

OBJECTIVES

- Find a way to escape the fire.
- Escape from the blizzard and find a way back into the house.

The doors in the study are locked, and the air is rapidly escaping. You have no other option but to examine, and then jump into, the painting of the manor during winter. You appear in the gardens where you buried Iris. A fierce blizzard is in danger of cutting you to the bone, and you must seek safety immediately! Sprint down the stairs, and head across the gardens (roughly southwest), to an open set of cellar doors with a shadow figure above them. Now out of the blizzard, head through the second (unlocked) door, and into another memory.

SCENE #7: THE OLGIERD I MARRIED IS NO MORE

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to find a way to restore the memory.
- Defeat the wraiths.

Olgierd sits in mid-swig (though he's missing a receptacle) looking as if he's also in mid-argument with his father-in-law (who appears to be needing to hold a scroll), while Iris looks on from the stairwell. Use your Witcher Senses to inspect the following:

- A wine barrel drained to the last drop.
- A pipe on the tile floor; this is the time Olgierd started smoking.
- A knife on the desk; we assume Olgierd got the scars on his shoulders during that winter.
- A beer tankard (Mug) on the tile floor, once filled with vodka.
- A marriage contract between Iris and Olgierd.

Place the mug in Olgierd's hand, and the marriage contract in the father-in-law's hands. Watch the alarming scene unfold, and then bring your sword to bear on a trio of wraiths in the shape of ghouls. A similar bout of sword and sign play is recommended before you continue.

Items: Pipe, Mug, Knife, Marriage contract

SCENE #8: OUT OF SIGHT, NOT OF MIND

OBJECTIVES

Ascend the cellar steps, weaving your way back into the dining room, which now holds a more recent memory. The Black Cat and Dog remember staying here for hours in silence, and take their places close to a small dining table. Olgierd is here with the abomination he created, while Iris sits at the table. Inspect the following:

- Animal hair on a ground pillow. Claw scratches on the ground near the table too.
- A single place sitting at the table.
- A food tray on the table right of the fireplace.
- A large bowl strewn on the floor, and a smaller one on a nearby table.

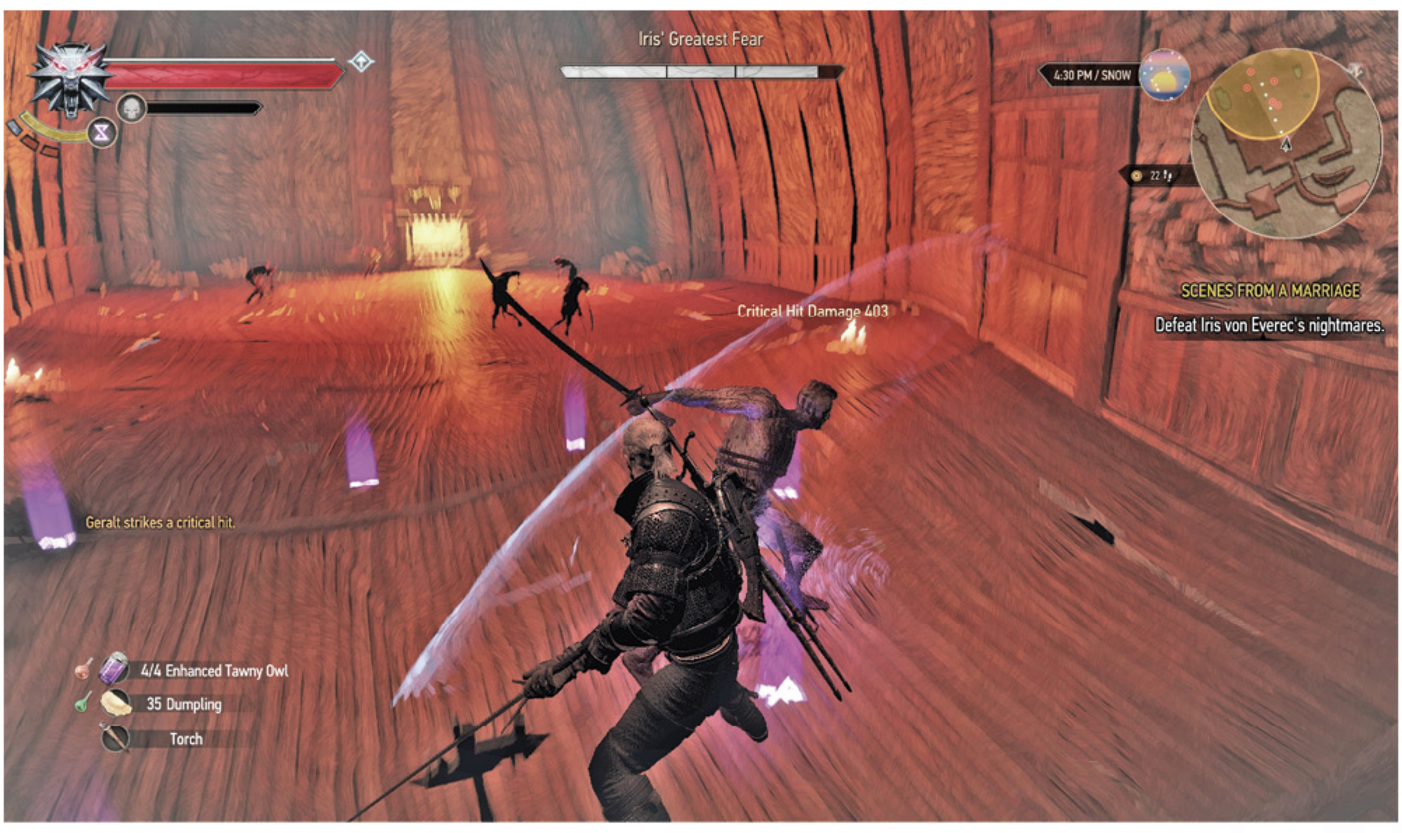
Scenes From a Marriage

Nightmare In Red

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Iris von Everec's nightmares.

You must face a demonic form of Olgierd known as the Ethereal. Six of these dopplegangers appear in the parlor. All must perish!



SIX OLGIERDS TO FIGHT!

This nightmarish form of Olgierd is split into six separate beings. They have all the strengths, weaknesses, and attacks as Olgierd, so you should read up on how to defeat Olgierd when you were presented with this option at the end of Main Quest: Evil's Soft First Touches, or access similar information in the Bestiary. The same tactics apply here.

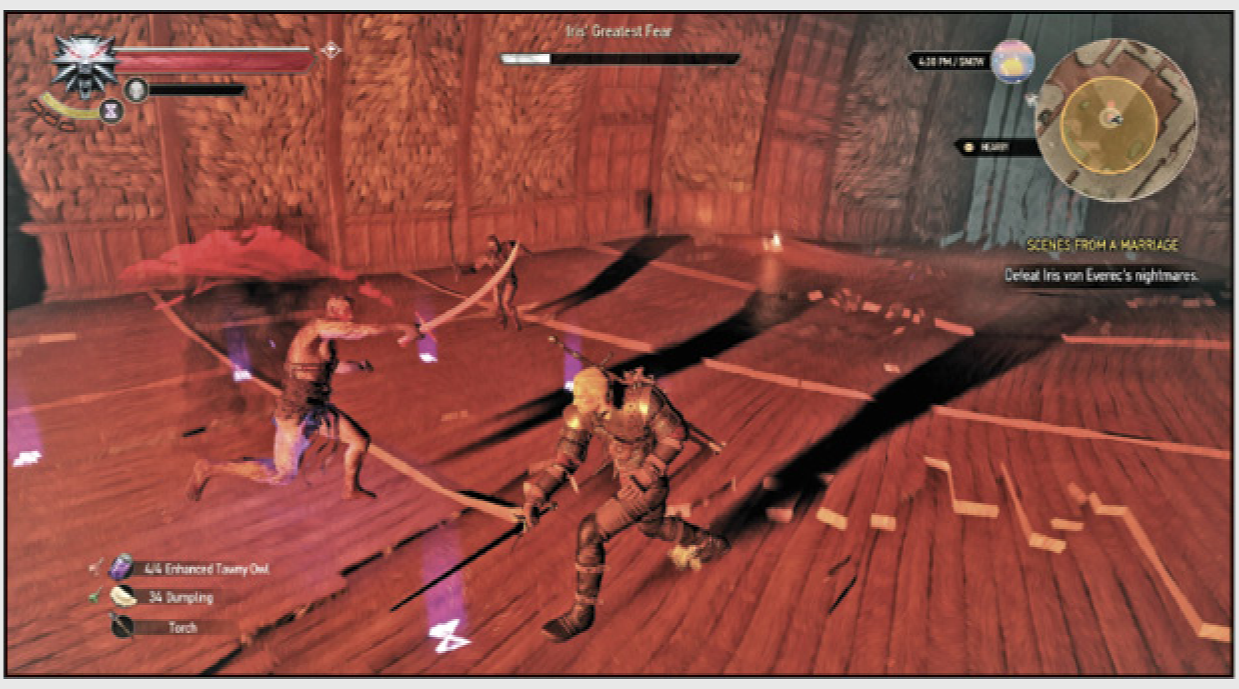
DEFEATING THE ETHEREALS: ATTACKS FROM IRIS' GREATEST FEAR

Strengths: Essentially clones of Olgierd, these demons are fast and relentless. Initially motionless, they wake when you attack each one, so if all the enemies are awoken at the same time they all attack together. The main difference is that these enemies gain Olgierd's skills as they die. In other words at the beginning of the fight the enemies only have basic sword attacks, when one dies the remaining foes all gain another of Olgierd's skills, like a shadow dash. As each additional enemy is killed, the rest gain another skill until the last one left has every skill that Olgierd had when you had the option to fight him at the Garin Estate.

Weaknesses: These are the same as Olgierd's original shortfalls; you can counter and stun the enemies when they are attempting a special attack. The first three clones have so few skills, they are reasonably easy to defeat.

DEFEATING THE ETHEREALS: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

As all their attacks are the same as Olgierd's, you should have some familiarity coming into this fight. When battle commences, there are six opponents, but only one is active. Killing that enemy causes another to wake up and attack, and this process repeats until the last wakes and is beaten. However, any idling foe can be awoken at any time if you accidentally. Need more of a challenge? Wake everyone up and slay them all at once!



Plan 1: One at a Time: The easier plan is to keep away from the idling foes, moving to the far end of the arena, and slay each form of Olgierd one at a time, using tried and trusted tactics from the first time you faced him.

Plan 2: All at Once: Throw caution to the wind, and slay all six foes in a crowd by preparing yourself accordingly. You require maximum damage inflicted in the shortest amount of time. Use damage-enhancing potions and decoctions, and use the Whirl Combat skill to great effect here.

Since these enemies only gain skills as the others die, when they are woken up, they are all relatively weak. Use this to your advantage by corralling them in one place and unleashing damage as quickly as possible. A solid whirl attack can take up to four of them out at once. Once fewer of these enemies are in the arena, treat them as single foes and employ original Olgierd-slaying tactics.

I Am Sadness: Into A Dream Of What Was

After the fight, Iris appears before you in her bedchamber. You can tell her you've met her before, as well as requesting the rose Olgierd gave her. Feel free to mention her husband's powerful enemy, and choose answers as you wish. When the conversation moves to the wintery balcony outside, you can find out more about the rose, why Olgierd needs it so badly, and make the following decision:

- Ask her to give you the rose ("This needs to end. I'm taking the rose."). This forces Iris' spirit from this world, and sets her two animal familiars free. They make mention of a "Man of Glass," and to seek salvation in "glass that cannot be broken". This is a clue to a riddle in the next quest. You are given the rose as Iris departs, and you appear back in the real world.

Items: The Violet Rose

- Refuse to request the rose ("Not my place to decide Iris' fate."). While this doesn't win you any friends with Iris' animal familiars who are stuck with her for eternity, nor does it win Iris' gratitude, you don't leave empty-handed. Iris sends you back into the real world with an addition to her painting; you cut out the image of her carrying the rose.

Items: Painting section of Iris and the Rose

WHATEVER A MAN SOWETH...

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage; Contract: Phantom of the Trade Route, Scavenger Hunt: Viper School Gear

LOCATIONS: Von Everec Estate, Alchemy Inn (Oxenfurt), Shani's Clinic (Oxenfurt), Professor Shakeslock's House (Oxenfurt), Temple of Lilvani, Realm of Rumination

CHARACTERS: Gaunter O'Dimm, Shani, Professor Premethine Shakeslock, Olgierd von Everec

ENEMIES: Drowners, Witch Hunters, Specters

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Olgierd's man at the Alchemy Inn

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Scenes From a Marriage.

Gaunter O'Dimm

One of the ataman's representatives is waiting for you back at Oxenfurt. Stroll in and observe the chatter of the peasantry, sidestepping the drunk at the doorway. Master Mirror is here, close to Olgierd's stead, and after manipulating time, you both speak. Though you can ask who he really is and how he controls time, you want to know why he's even here. Answer as you wish, as O'Dimm skips around the other answers, but he is here to make one final request: Drawing Olgierd to the Temple of Lilvani in Velen's The Descent Territory. You have no choice but to agree. Afterward, you speak to a Wild One (with a fly in his soup), and inform him where Olgierd needs to meet you. Answer as you wish. Before you step over a man with a spoon placed indelicately into his eye, the Wild One also mentions that Shani is looking for you. This begins the following optional objective.

OPTIONAL: HIGHER LEARNING WITH SHANI

Feel free to meet Olgierd at the Temple of Lilvani at your convenience. However, if you complete the optional objectives with Shani, you have an additional choice to make when you visit the Temple; which is recommended.

Higher Learning With Shani

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Talk to Shani at her home.

Shani

Head across Oxenfurt's cobblestone streets and locate the clinic you've previously visited. Upstairs, Shani is getting ready to move; the Redanians require her services in Kaedwen. Answer her as you wish (including a query about why the departure is so sudden). Shani has also learned a little more about Olgierd, not through book-reading, but through her colleague at the Oxenfurt Academy, Professor Shakeslock. Apparently, he met Olgierd multiple times. Ask why Mage Hunters are guarding him, before requesting a meeting with the Professor. Shani agrees, though getting in won't be easy.

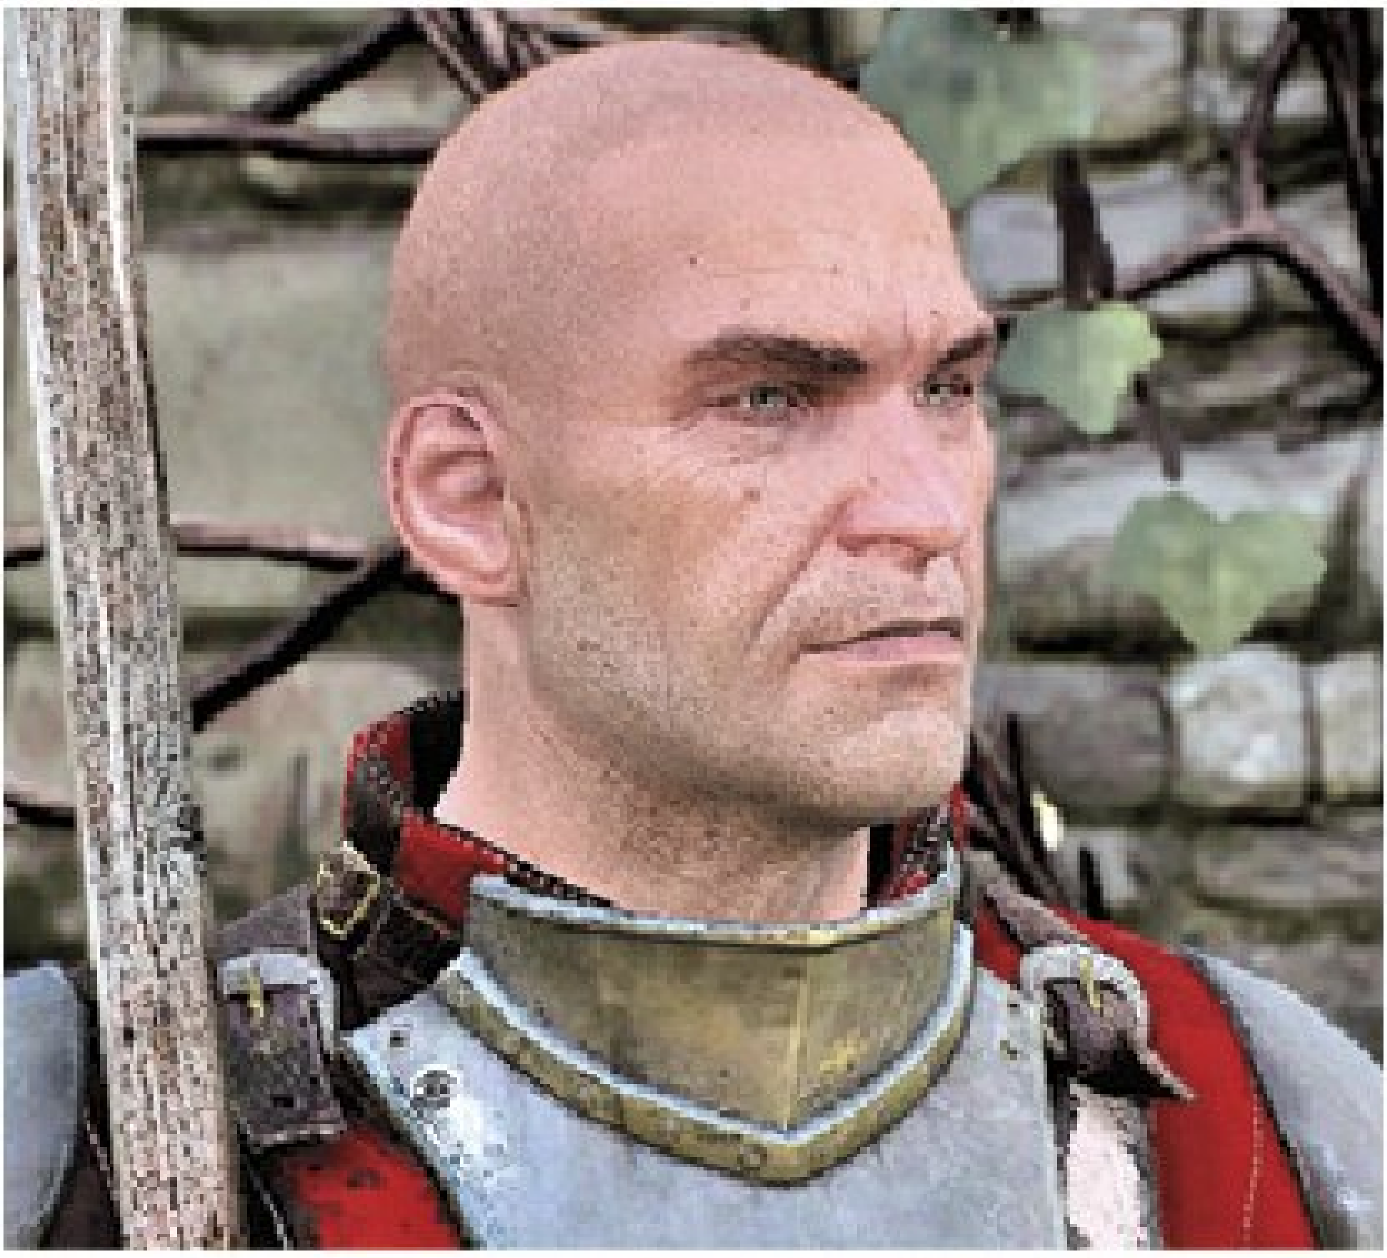
OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Follow Shani to the Academy.
- (Optional) Enter the Academy grounds.



Norbert

Follow Shani south across the bridge to Oxenfurt Academy, talking about the plight of the magicians (and Shani's future) as you go. Radovid's presence is seen almost immediately as you pass by a pile of books ready to be burned. Two guards (Bruno and Norbert) halt your progress into the cloister. Shani recognizes one of them, Norbert, who she saved from being crippled with her arrow-extraction abilities. Reluctantly, the guards buy her story, leaving her to find some way of letting you in via the outer walls.

Jump off the bridge into the water, or make a less dramatic pathway descent to the sandy banks at the foot of the western wall of the Academy. Close to the lookout tower attached to the wall, make short work of a trio of Drowners. Afterward, reach the wall, where Shani pulls you up and into the cloister. She departs for her clinic to finish packing.

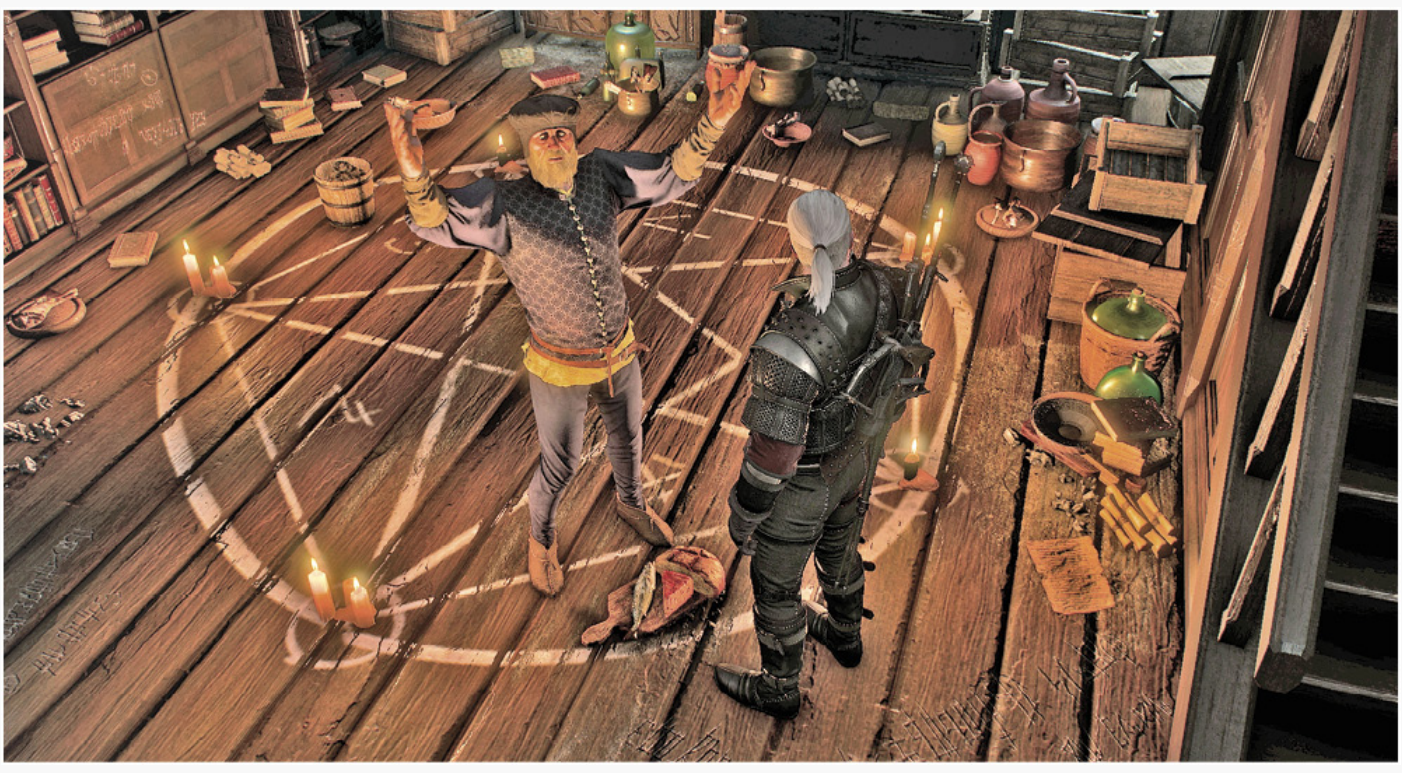
The courtyard and archway leading to the professor's house is guarded by a quartet of Witch Hunters (including one with a crossbow). Deliver swift death to them all, before checking the door of the house. It is locked, forcing you to look to the ladder attached to wooden scaffolding on the opposite (south) side of the cloister. Ascend the ladder, and a second one, gingerly climbing up and across the sloping roof to the tiny balcony lit by a lantern. Use Aard to break through into the house. Descend the stairs, optionally investigating the following with your Witcher Senses:

- A Silver Lamen, not used in ages.
- A shattered mirror, possibly broken by sound.
- A copy of Giliian Aboco's Lesser Key (a tome about demons).

Professor Premethine Shakeslock

Feel free to ransack the place before descending another flight of steps, where you discover the Professor himself, blind, slightly addled, and fearful of stepping outside a protective pentagram. Ask and answer him how you wish, optionally asking whether the Professor is a prisoner. As the Professor explains his research about Master Mirror, also known as the Man of Glass, you can question Shakeslock about the magic circle and other information about O'Dimm, before asking whether Olgierd made a pact with this evil incarnate. The Professor offers an illuminating reply regarding a pact signed in blood, and a price to be paid. Optionally ask about Vlodimir, Olgierd, and then about Olgierd trying to break the pact. Finally, optionally ask how to rid yourself of your facial marking, before thanking the Professor for his help.



Just then, the earth shakes, most strangely, causing the Professor to stumble out of his magic circle, trip, and land awkwardly while you try to prevent a bookcase falling on him. Alas, Professor Shakeslock is no more. Retrieve the key from the Professor's body. Head out of the Professor's house, climb the ladder to the west to reach the lookout tower, and dive out into the waters around the Academy.

Whatever A Man Soweth...

Optional: A Fond Farewell To Shani

- After speaking to Shakeslock, but before you head to the Temple of Lilvani, you can opt to visit Shani one last time. Speak to her if you wish, and optionally play Gwent with her. If you beat her at Gwent, you can obtain the unique Olgierd von Everec card. Note the second option (below).

- After speaking to Shakeslock, and after completing this quest, you can visit Shani one last time. Alas, she has already left and her clinic is empty, aside from some scavengable items. Upstairs on a table is the unique Olgierd von Everec card to take (if you haven't won it already).

...That Shall He Also Reap

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Olgierd at the Temple of Lilvani.

Olgierd von Everec

Due east of Toderas in The Descent Territory (Northern Velen), is a cave entrance to enter. Though you can hike the hillside around the temple, the most direct route is to enter the cave, and climb the large boulders heading roughly south and west (rather than east, which leads you to a Royal Wyvern nest if Contract: Phantom of the Trade Route is active). Instead, enter a small rocky opening, go down some steps, and out to a strange, circular temple overlook with views of the Pontar river where sacrifices where once performed to the moon. How apt.

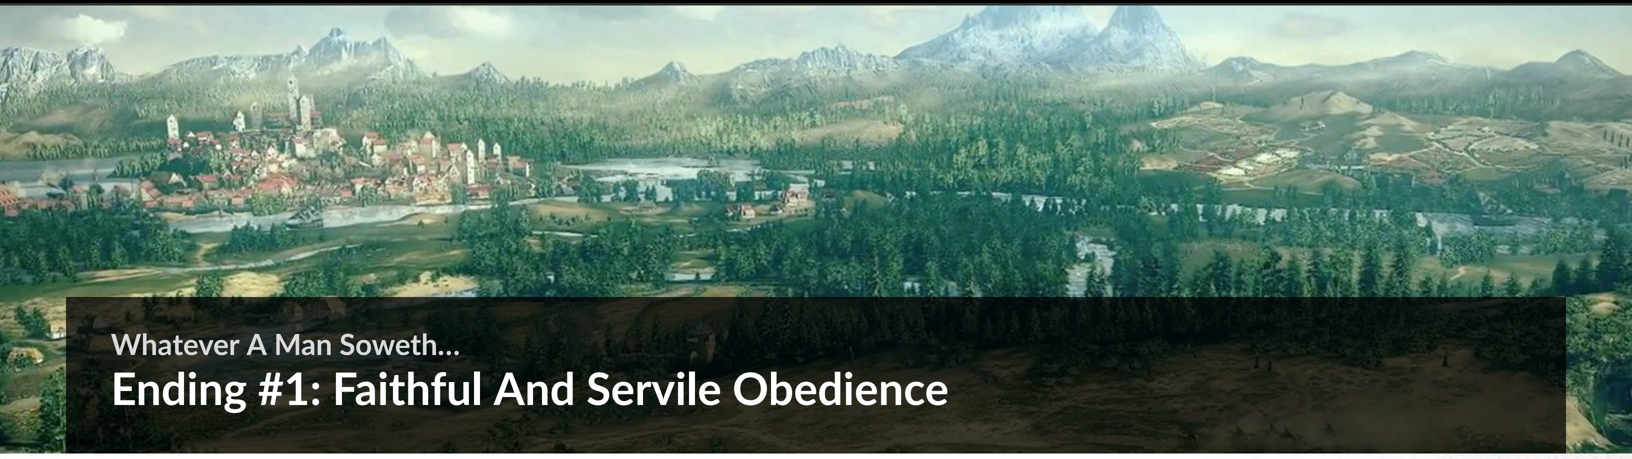
WHATSOEVER A MAN SOWETH...
Meet Olgierd at the Temple of Lilvani

After night falls, Olgierd von Everec meets you. Answer him as you wish. He asks for the violet rose he wished you to retrieve for him. You can:

- Hand him the rose, if you took it from Iris during Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage.
- Hand him the section of painting, if Iris kept the rose during Main Quest: Scenes from a Marriage.

After Olgierd laments the mess he made of his life, and rues the day he entered into a pact with the Master of Mirrors, he is struck by a sudden and agonizing pain. Gaunter O'Dimm makes an impressive entrance, and reveals that Olgierd's contract has been fulfilled; they stand on the moon to complete the pact. Another trick from this master of deception! How will you react? You can:

- Don't get involved. Ending #1: Faithful and Servile Obedience begins. This ending occurs automatically (with no chance to choose) if you ignored the optional parts of this quest, back in Oxenfurt.
- Help Olgierd. This is only available if you completed the optional parts of this quest, and received the information from Professor Shakeslock about the games Gaunter enjoys playing. Ending #2: Some Other Time begins.



Whatever A Man Soweth...

Ending #1: Faithful And Servile Obedience

The Master of Mirrors towers over Olgierd, softly and firmly explaining that Olgierd's soul is now no longer his own. Gaunter strolls over to you with a memento of Olgierd's, removes your facial branding, and asks what you'll choose as a reward for your subservient actions. You can answer:

- "Wanna be as swift as the wind": You receive the Caparison of Lament Saddle, increasing your horse's stamina by an impressive amount (100 points). When equipped, the saddle also affects one person near the horse with one random effect. Affected characters will either be confused, attack you for a short time, or protect themselves from imaginary bees.

Items: Caparison of Lament

- "Never wanna go hungry again": You receive the Horn of Plenty, providing an endless source of food, and +40 vitality regeneration (+25 in combat), for 5 seconds.

Items: Horn of Plenty

- "A bottle of vodka that's always full": You receive the Bottomless Carafe, giving you an infinite amount of alcohol; helpful for getting drunk or during alchemic brewing.

Items: Bottomless Carafe

- "Make me rich": An influx of 5,000 crowns.

Items: 5,000 Crowns

- "Don't want anything from you": Just the experience points, and a slight clawing back of your dignity (and salvaging of your soul, though this doesn't affect your ongoing adventure).

With a merry whistle, Gaunter O'Dimm departs, and the Hearts of Stone Main Quest concludes.

Ending #2: Part 1: Some Other Time

OBJECTIVES

- Find a solution to Master Mirror's riddle.

You intercede, and make a bargain with Master Mirror; offering a game or challenge in return for both your and Olgierd's souls. This piques O'Dimm's interest, but on his terms. You are thrust into an unknown realm. Master Mirror's voice echoes in your ears. He tells you a riddle, and forces you to solve it before the sand runs from the timer. You can ask for the riddle to be repeated. Then you must push northward, along the path.

MASTER MIRROR'S RIDDLE

To all things and men I appertain, and yet by some am shunned and disdained.

Fondle and ogle me, till you're insane,

but no blow can harm me, cause me pain.

Children delight in me, elders take fright, fair maids rejoice and spin.

Cry, and I weep, yawn, and I sleep, smile, and I shall grin.

RUNNING THE REALM OF RUMINATION

The Atlas reveals a succinct pathway through this Realm of Rumination. Access it through the Temple of Lilvani. Otherwise, keep heading roughly north, and be sure to keep an eye on your map so you can see branching pathways coming up; this helps you not get lost.

RUINED IN THE REALM OF RUMINATION

The "time remaining" indicator is of utmost importance to your continued well-being, as there's not quite enough time to visit all the strange locations within this foreboding realm. As death awaits you if you fail, you are encouraged to plan accordingly:

Keep to the paths; wandering off just wastes time.

Beware of crevasses, walls, crooked trees, and other obstacles that delay you, or can kill you if you fall through them.

This realm is inhabited by specters of various forms, shaped like monsters you have previously fought. It is imperative you ignore these foes as battling them can seriously impede your time.

Master Mirror has a number of small traps designed not primarily to harm you, but to simply waylay you. Don't visit every one of these (detailed below); only the recommended areas!

Have Aard ready to cast sooner rather than later.

OBSTACLE: THE WEEPING WELL

Run past the three crooked trees to your right, heading roughly north. Ignore the small stone ruins to your left. At the fork in the pathway, with a trail left and right, watch for two specters. They are guarding a small well you can peer into, and attempt to solve the riddle; the answer isn't "echoes." The left path ends at a chasm you can't maneuver across.

- Evidence of water here. Perhaps there's a way to bring it back?
- Rushing water behind the wall to the northeast.

Stand in front of the wall, and use Aard to destroy it, sending a flood of water into the fountain. As the fountain fills, you are able to complete the riddle (the solution is "reflection"), and grab a spluttering Gaunter O'Dimm from the murk. He babbles in a strange tongue, and is banished.

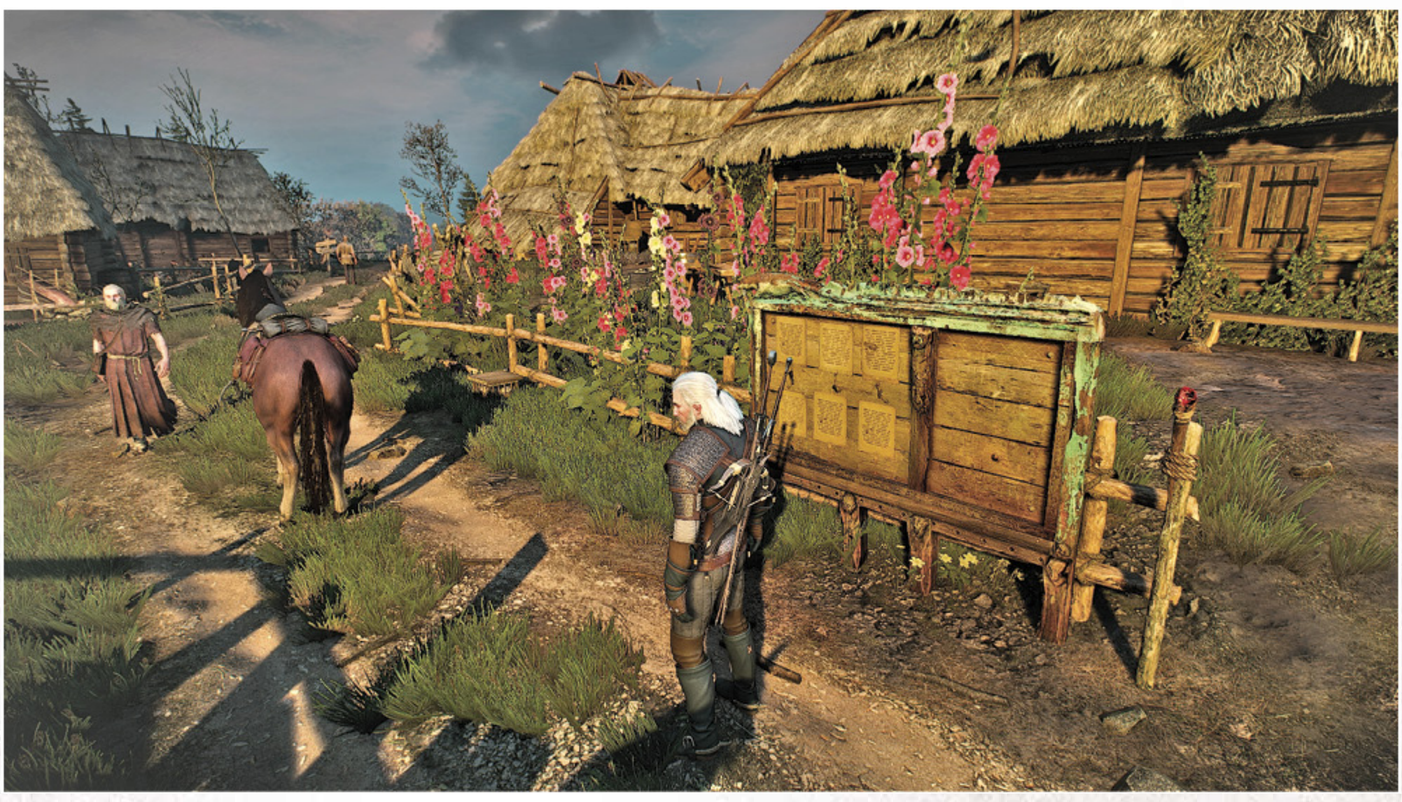
QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have the Blood and Wine Expansion (check your Quest menu for the objective). It is advisable to be at least Level 34 before attempting this quest.

Blood and Wine

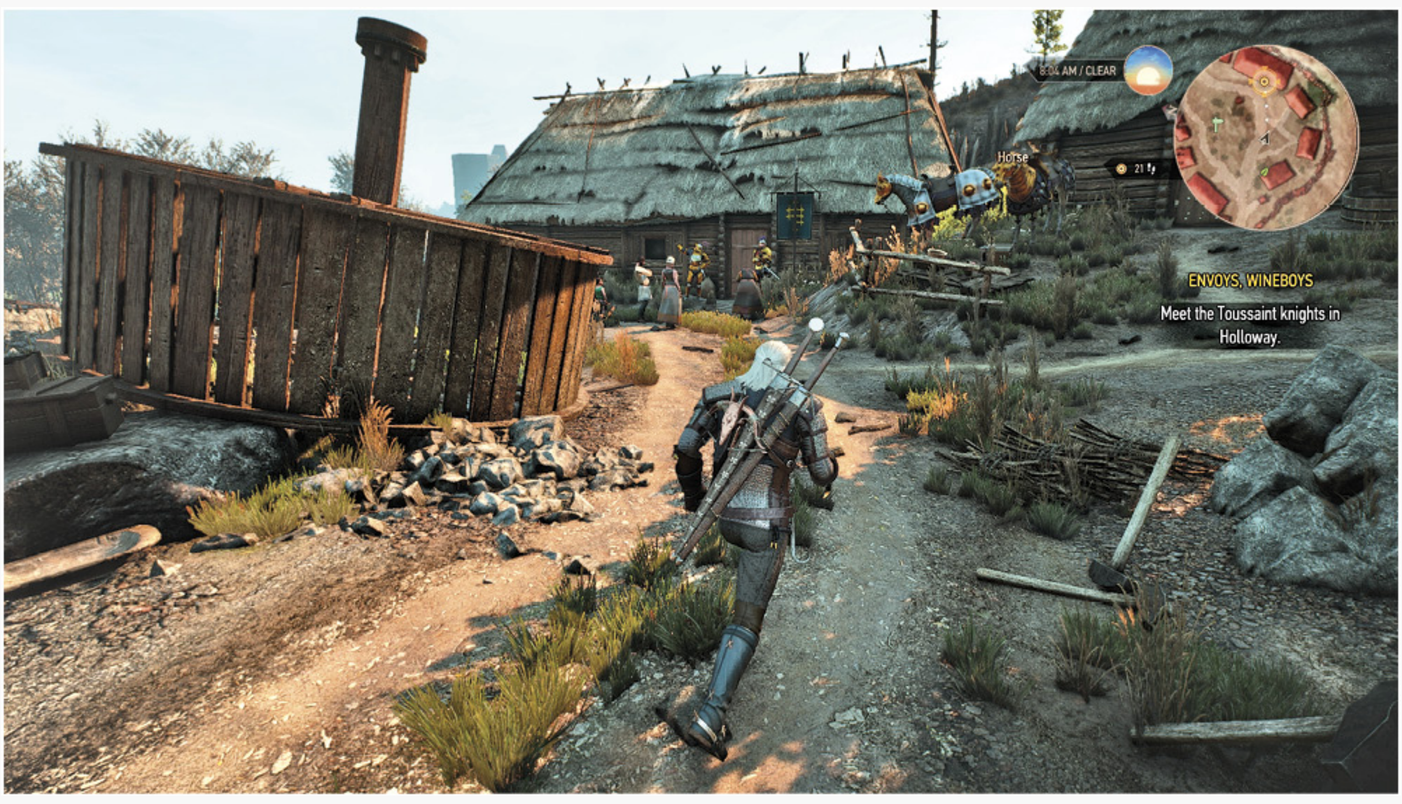
A Notice Board beckons; locate any you wish (such as this one in Mulbrydale), and read the message with the fancy seal marked “Appeal to Sir Geralt of Rivia, the Bridge his Crest.” Notices aren’t usually written to you directly, but this time, the letter reveals the names of two knights-errant you may have had previous knowledge of, in your dim and distant past. A strange “beast” stalks their land, a rich and fertile Duchy to the southeast, called Toussaint.



OBJECTIVES

- Meet the Toussaint knights in Holloway.

It seems the knights are meeting with a group of agitated villagers in the recently-razed Stonecutters’ Settlement, just southwest of Oxenfurt. Ride to where the knights are attempting to convince a peasant rabble of their chivalrous nature. After spotting you, the three of you enter the main village hut. After apologizing for the shoddy nature of the hut they are using, they explain their fealty to justice.



Before handling the matter concerning you, the knights plan to fight oppression by dealing with a band of marauders. You can:

- Offer to help them with the bandit problem.
- Explain that ridding the area of bandits will simply lead to worse brigands replacing them. After some verbal anguish at leaving the peasants to this fate, the knights agree with you. A bandit confrontation is avoided.

OBJECTIVES

After waiting until sunrise, a band of around a dozen bandits descends upon the settlement, ready to continue their pillaging until called to atone for their sins by Palmerin de Launfal. His flowery language fails to inspire, and after a spot of mocking, you can chime in regarding the bandits' course of action. Not that it matters; the bandits decide to verbally agree to their own deaths. Begin a swift series of executions; expect to slay 13 bandit foes, including their leader and a shieldbearer named Zorg. Beware of crossbowman firing at a distance (remove around three of these threats if taking a bolt in the back is starting to annoy you). After the battle, the knights are a little put out by the lack of thanks they receive.

Once inside the hut, a more important matter is discussed. Her Illustrious Highness, Duchess Anna Henrietta, personally beseeches you to help rid her lands of a dreaded Beast. You can quiz the knights on the flowery language of Anna Henrietta's missive, then ask about the monster in question. Bodies have been massacred in a brutal, horrid manner, and three sketches of the Beast can be viewed. Feel free to ask:

- About the black magic the Beast is said to wield.
- About those who have tried to trap the monster.
- About the tourney taking place at the same time as this problem.

After that, you can either take the contract and continue the quest, or think about it, which allows you to make some last-minute arrangements in Velen (such as preparing for the quest first). Return to the knights, and you begin the ride to Toussaint.

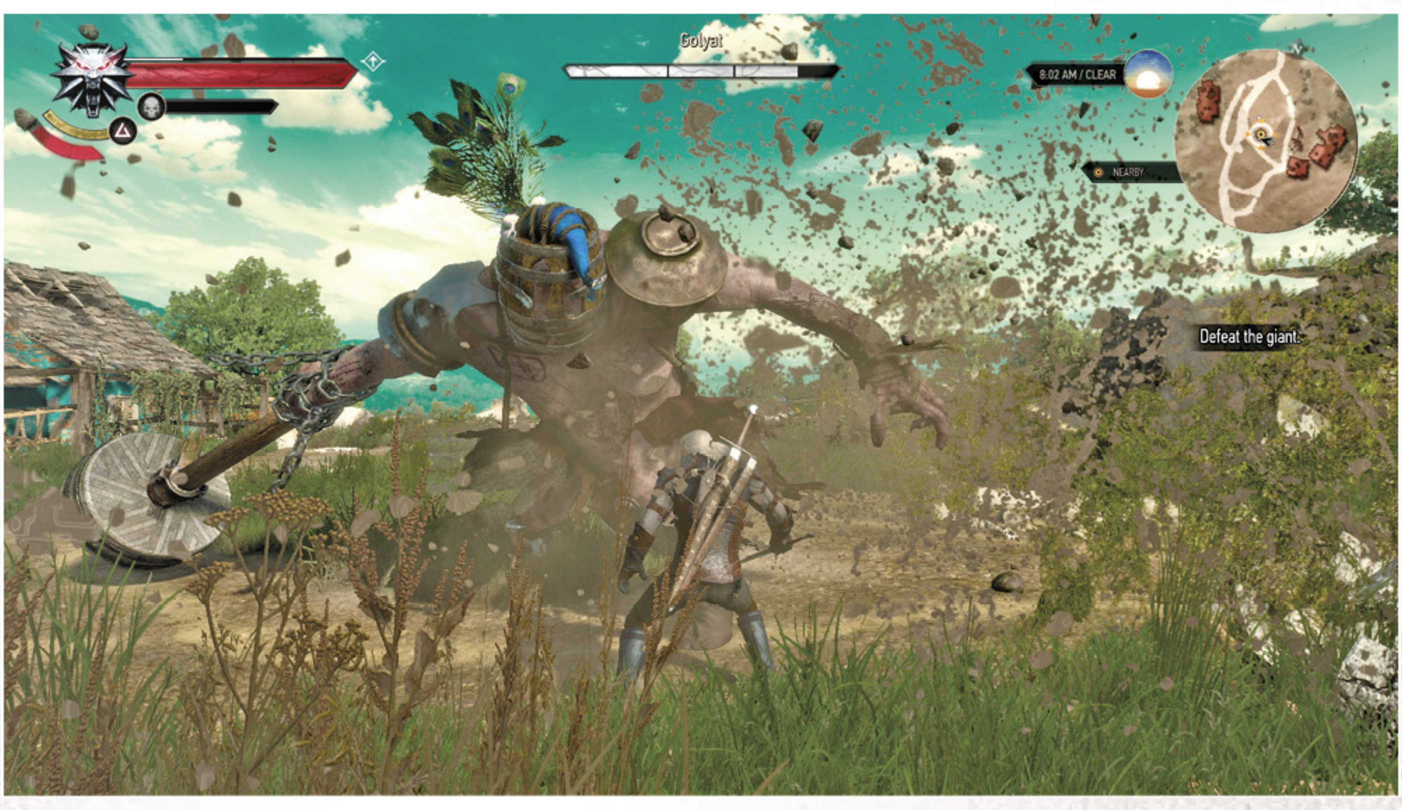
LOCATIONS: Dulcinea Windmill, The Cockatrice Inn, Tourney Grounds, Beauclair Palace, Palace Gardens, Lake Seidhe Llygad (Unmarked)
CHARACTERS: Milton de Peyrac-Peyran, Palmerin de Launfal, Guillaume, Fisherman, Hooded Stranger, Vivienne, Her Illustrious Highness Duchess Anna Henrietta, Captain Damien de la Tour, King Cormorant
ENEMIES: Golyat the Giant, The Bruxa of Corvo Bianco, Shaelmaar, Courtiers

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the giant.

Guillaume de Launfal

After a few days' riding, you reach the Duchy of Toussaint. Your enjoyment of the rolling hills, lush green farmland, and distant view of the spectacular palace of Beauclair is tempered somewhat by the appearance of a huge, lumbering giant with a distaste for windmills. It seems the knight who is facing down this monstrosity requires a modicum of assistance. Engage the giant Golyat!



You are fortunate that both the Knights, as well as the giant's adversary, are in this fight with you; this allows you to dodge around the huge foe while it is preoccupied with your fellows. Employ similar combat techniques to those you honed on Skellige when facing Cyclopes (and the Ice Giant of Undvik); roll away and to the side, and avoid all the vicious pounding and sweeps it makes with its huge weapon. Temporarily flummox it with Axii, use Yrden to slow it down (though Signs only cause minimal reactions to this foe), and Quen to stave off some damage if you're not quick enough to dodge. Continuous circling, before darting in to strike and then retreating, is the most proficient way to win.

DEFEATING THE GIANT: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Goylat moves like his Cyclops brethren, refraining from running or strafing, just lumbering strides in your general direction. He is also incredibly tough, requiring a lot of damage in order to topple over. Exhibit patience, and work with your new knight friends. Occasionally they prove most worthy at distracting Golyat, allowing you to get in strikes when he's pre-occupied.

Otherwise, dart in with a strike once Golyat finishes one of his troublesome, and damaging, swings and is recovering in readiness for his next attack. Darting in, damaging, and retreating is the key. You need not worry about the knights' health, so let them bear the brunt of this enemy.

Or just shoot Golyat in the head with a crossbow. If you shoot this foe through the eye hole in his helmet, you get an instant kill, along with earning an Achievement.

DEFEATING THE GIANT "GOLYAT": THE GIANT'S ATTACKS

Golyat uses a giant mill wheel to deliver massive bludgeoning damage in vertical pounds or massive horizontal sweeps. He loves to swing this weapon, smashing things all around. His attacks are far-reaching, he's extremely aggressive, and tends to keep moving toward you, mostly ignoring the three knights.

Weapon Swing: A medium-range weapon swing. Dodge or leap to the side, or back away to avoid being struck.

Weapon Overhead Smash: A medium-range weapon smash, dropping vertically. Highly damaging, so avoid using dodges and retreating.

Kick, Stomp, and Swipe: Golyat sometimes kicks, stomps, or swipes with his left arm; both push you back, increasing the distance between you, allowing the giant to be more effective with his weapon swings. Simply avoid these by dodging.

Charge Attack: If you're at long range, Golyat occasionally attempts a charge to close the distance. If you're caught, expect to be pushed back, and possibly sent tumbling over. Recover and retreat, or simply roll or dodge to the side to avoid it.

Whirlwind Attack: Occurring at both short and long distances, this is the Golyat's most severe series of strikes, so watch for him raising his weapon up to the side of the head before his spins around. Damage is significant, and you're sent flying. Parrying is not an option, but dodging (or letting Quen bear the brunt of this) is.

After the battle, it transpires the young knight Guillaume attempted to slay the giant (who had ventured down from the Gorgon Hills to feed) to win the heart of a damsel. Guillaume is somewhat embarrassed and indebted to your superior mettle, and offers you the head as payment. Feel free to ask how the giant came to be here, and take the trophy (you can sell it to merchants, or place it on Roach's saddle to add Experience Points to each monster you slay); also loot the corpse for a large number of crowns and other items). Guillaume also has some news regarding the Beast; the river has surrendered a corpse near the Cockatrice Inn!

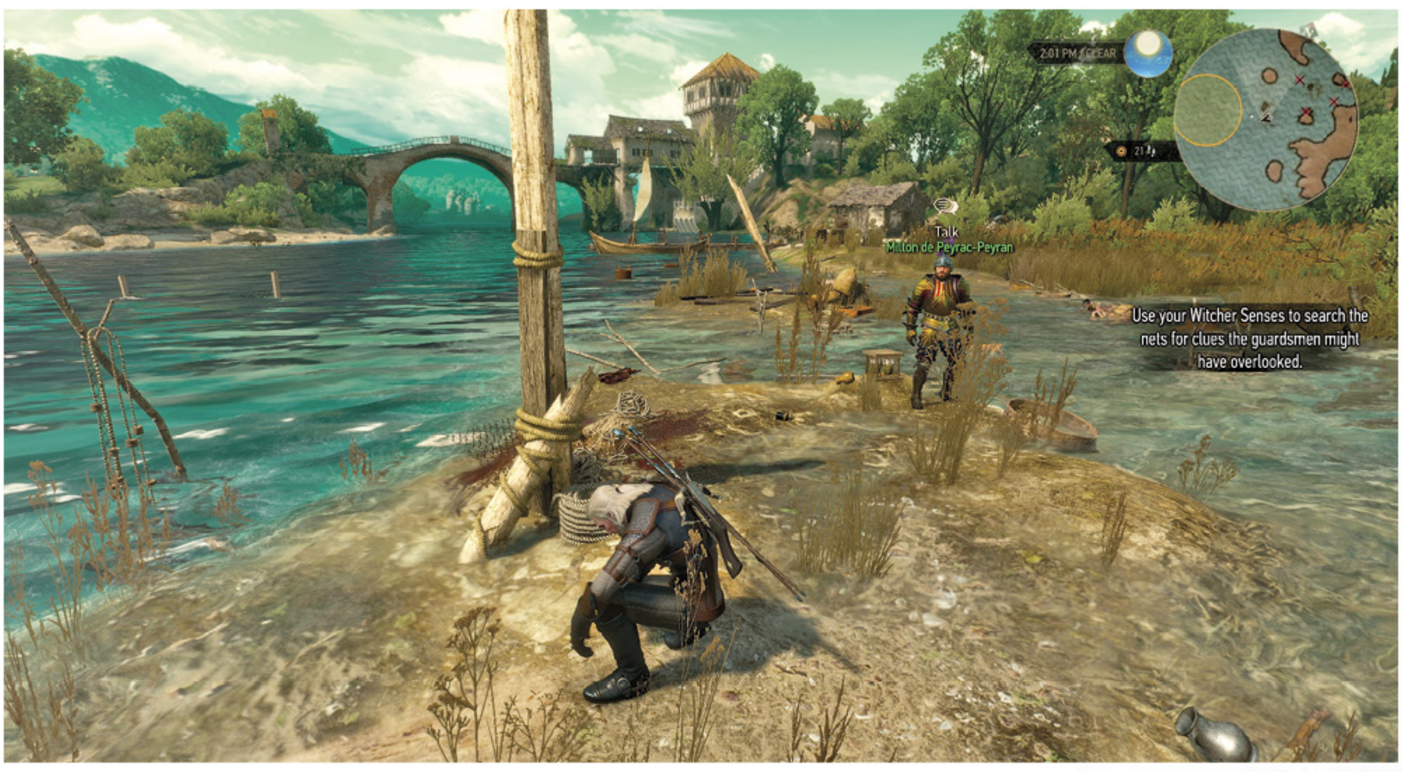
Fishing For Clues

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Milton to the place where the body was found.
- Use your Witcher Senses to search the riverbank for signs of the guardsmen's activities.

While your other knight brethren ride for the palace, follow Milton along the paths through the open fields, talking of Toussaint mannerisms as you go. You pass the Cockatrice Inn, heading down the embankment to the river's edge. The Duchy's troops have already investigated the area (and unknowingly tampered with evidence that could help you), but there's still the need for a thorough investigation.



Talk
Milton de Peyrac-Peyran
Use your Witcher Senses to search the nets for clues the guardsmen might have overlooked.

Walk roughly southward to the cluster of barrels and crates by the jetty, before joining Milton in dispatching a group of four Scurvers attracted by the corpse. When all Necrophages are neutralized, return to the investigation area, and begin a thorough examination of the following:

- The river bank near the pile of barrels and crates, where the traces of some heavy, possibly hobnail boots, can be found.
- Follow the boot prints to a collection of flotsam and clutter at the river's edge; anything taken by the current ended up in these shallows.
- Continue to follow the prints to a fishing post; only blood-soaked scraps of nets pulled out of the water are left there, probably cut by the guardsmen who secured the body.
- As the objective updates, stay in the vicinity of the shallows.
- A rut by the edge of the river indicates the guards pushed off a boat from this point.

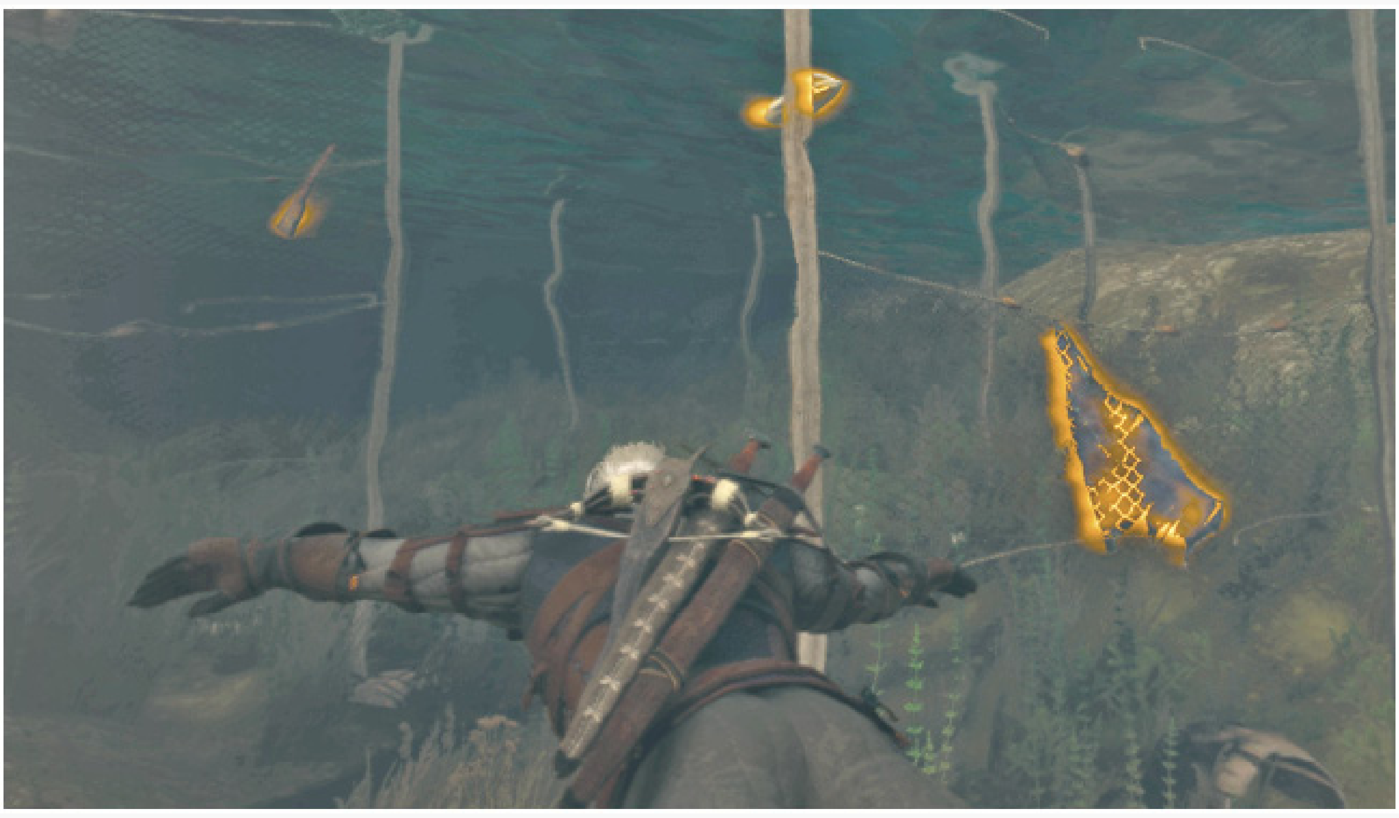
OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to search the nets for clues the guardsmen might have overlooked.
- Talk to Milton about your findings.

Your investigation continues: Make further careful examinations before wading into the river itself:

- Between the two fishing posts is a section of netting; a knife was used to cut the nets that hung here.

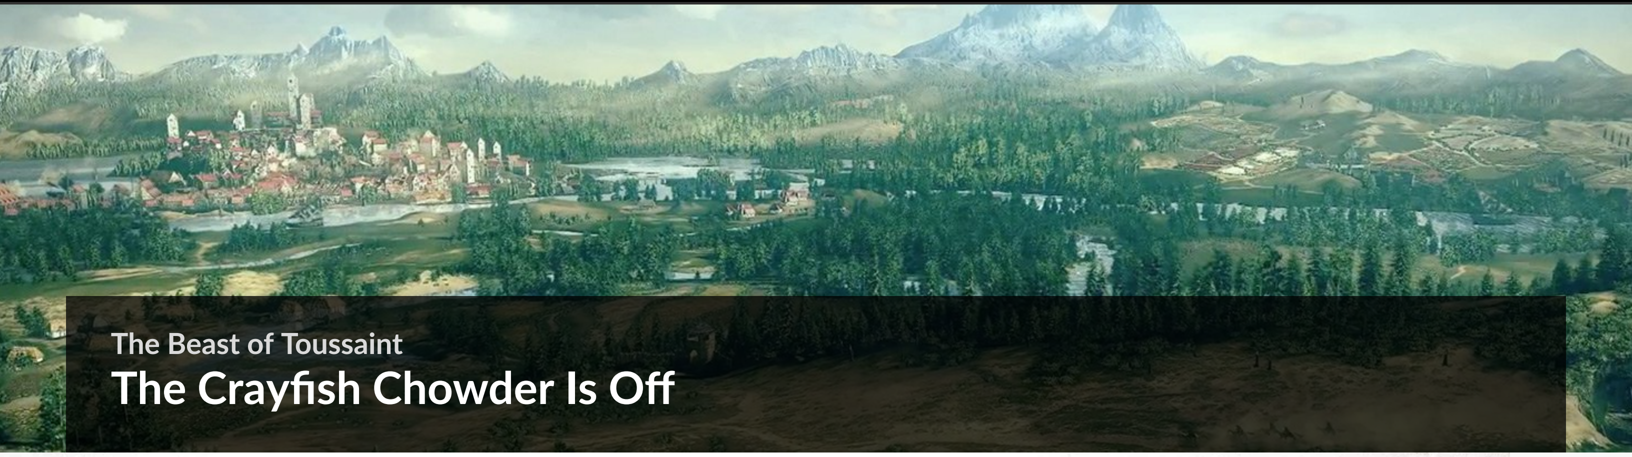
Dive into the river, using your Witcher Senses to look for remnants of these nets; there's various tangled items to discover under the water. You must discover the sodden remains of a monogrammed silk kerchief with the initials d.I.C. embroidered on it.



Items: Handkerchief monogrammed "d.I.C."

With the kerchief gathered, return to the shore and speak with Milton. After a brief sum-up, you agree this isn't the site of the murder (the river current brought the body here; it was caught in the nets, pulled out by the guardsmen, placed on a boat, and taken somewhere. As you talk, mention the following to Milton:

- That someone is watching you. A strange, hooded figure, it seems.
- That you found a monogrammed handkerchief. Milton is taken aback at the initials; De la Croix! Milton remembers the fellow, digging up past memories he'd rather not speak about.



The Beast of Toussaint

The Crayfish Chowder Is Off

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Milton to the inn to ask if anyone saw where the body was taken.

Run around the hut, up the embankment, following Milton into the Cockatrice Inn via the bridge entrance. This watering hole for traders, smugglers, and boatmen is famous for its crayfish chowder, though Milton's nostrils are only picking up the musty scent of fresh pate. After an introduction to a Toll Collector and Nobleman, you begin a discussion with one of the boatmen; the crayfish are off as all that's been caught is a corpse! Feel free to ask any questions you wish, as Milton verbally gathers further information from some verbose questioning. You receive information that the body was hauled off to Corvo Bianco, a nearby winery. You notice a woman leaving the premises (but didn't notice her walk in. How odd).

As you finish the questions, optionally asking about the local murmurings about the Beast's appearance being some sort of divine punishment (asking what else people say about the Beast, if you wish), you plan on inspecting the body. Meanwhile, Milton has other tasks; her Grace has bestowed a great honor on him; he's to play the Hare during this year's games. You refrain from asking what he's exactly on about for fear of further lengthy digressions into local traditions. Instead, you wish Milton luck, and leave the premises.

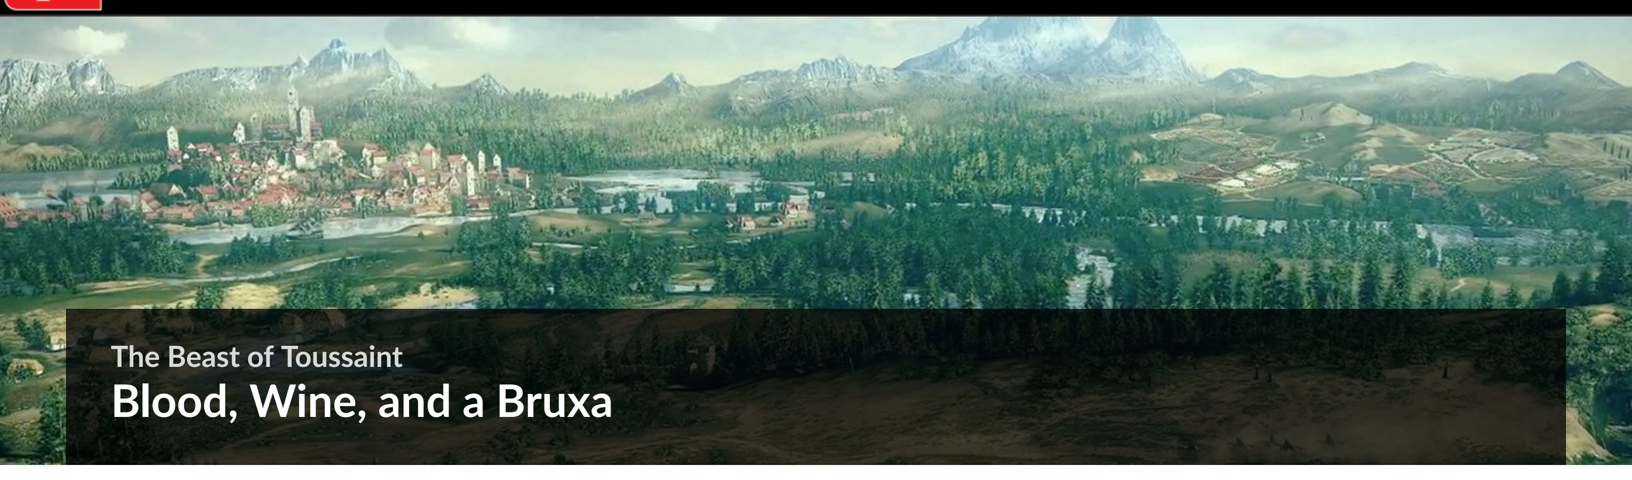
TAKING NOTES OF YOUR SURROUNDINGS

This is likely to be the first location you visit in Toussaint with a Notice Board. As usual, be sure to read any letters pinned to this board, and begin any optional quests you wish. You will find four available here. The investigation of Corvo Bianco is not time-sensitive.



The Beast of Toussaint

Blood, Wine, and a Bruxa

OBJECTIVES

- Go to Corvo Bianco and examine the body kept in its cellar.
- (Optional) Use your Witcher Senses to investigate the site of the massacre.

Whistle for Roach, and gallop across the bridge, following the roadways through the beautiful rolling grassland with a slight incline, into the Sansretour Valley area of Toussaint. Slow down as you enter the grounds of the Corvo Bianco winery, as a bolting horse, rolling barrel, and gurgling guardsman indicates a recent battle. Perhaps related to that strange woman you thought you saw back at the inn?

(Optional) Make a sweep of this carnage-filled scene:

- The body between the splintered wine barrels has busted ribs and blood oozing from the ears. It took a solid hit before dying.
- The corpse slumped by the curved wall has had his throat torn open by man-like jaws.
- The still-bleeding fellow draped over the wall post was killed by a single blow.
- A discarded coat on the cobblestone ground matches one worn by the woman from the inn.
- By the cellar entrance, a guardsman staggers out and collapses.
- It seems your clues are leading you to a cellar investigation. There are more clues to inspect:
- The upturned cart has river muck; it carried the body here.
- The cart tracks show the attacker had no trouble knocking over the cart.
- Two further corpses at the cellar entrance have claw wounds from five separate claws, with a spread about the size of a small human hand.
- There is also a small flock of different kinds of birds perched all over the courtyard and on the cellar entrance overhang. What does that signify?
- Your investigation concludes the guardsmen were slain by a vampire; but not one you've previously encountered in the Northern Realms. This is the work of a Bruxa!

CORRECT COMBAT PREPARATION

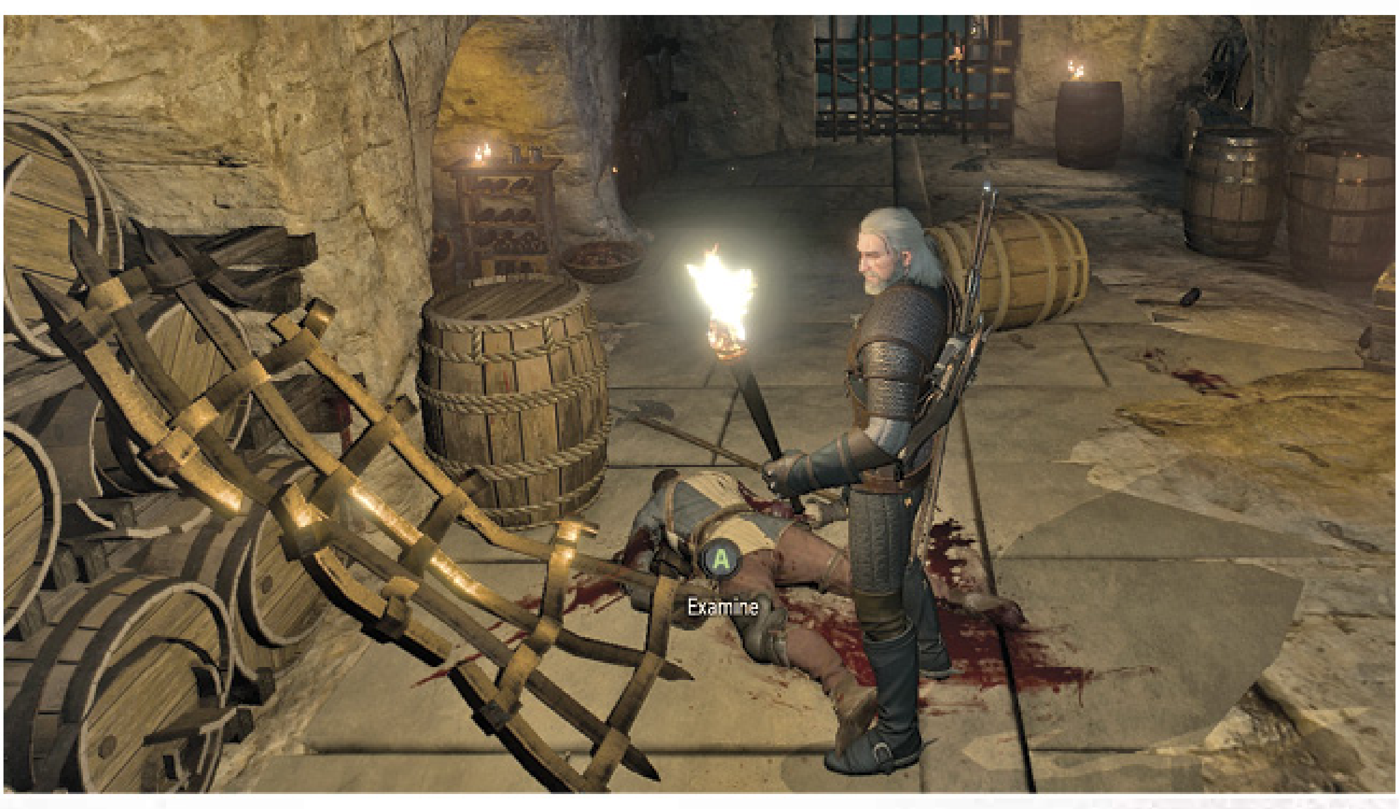
Now is an excellent time to fully prepare for the combat to come. Utilize the oils and potions that help minimize your chances of failure before descending into the wine cellar.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the Beast's victim's body in the cellar.
- Defeat the Bruxa

Your investigation (using your Witcher Senses) can continue as you descend the wooden stairs into the cellar.

- There are small, bare-footed prints leading deeper intothe cellar.
- A crumpled corpse indicates the man fell down the stairs and broke his neck.
- Turn left, inspecting a man slumped against a wall near a grating; he was hurled against the wall with great force.
- Beyond the grating is the remains of a grate (battered with force) and another corpse. Step around the rolling barrel.



You enter the main cellar. The Bruxa seems to be protecting something corpse-shaped on an alcove table. You explain that you know what she is. There is no reasoning with this vampire; it must be slain!

DEFEATING THE BRUXA FROM CORVO BIANCO: THE BRUXA'S ATTACKS

The Bruxa has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:

In and out of the Ether: The Bruxa can instantly disappear and appear at will, as well as briefly teleport in a cloud of mist. This, coupled with her extreme speed, makes her a particularly tricky adversary to effectively track during combat. Of course, if you've dropped a Moon Dust bomb during the fight, this effectively combats the invisibility.

Dash and Clash: The Bruxa enjoys confusing you with a series of running dashes hither and yon, disappearing and appearing to attempt a strike, which can turn into a three- or five-hit combo. Keep your guard up!

Three-Hit Claw Combo: A quick series of three melee strikes, which should be parried immediately.

Five-Hit Flurry: A sequence of five melee attacks, which can occur from all directions. Effective blocking, or quick rolling or dodging can avoid most, if not all, of these strikes.

Scream: An ear-bleeding shriek can stagger and knock you down, and also damages any loose scenery, much in the same way an Aard attack would. You are encouraged to dodge around this attack before it starts.

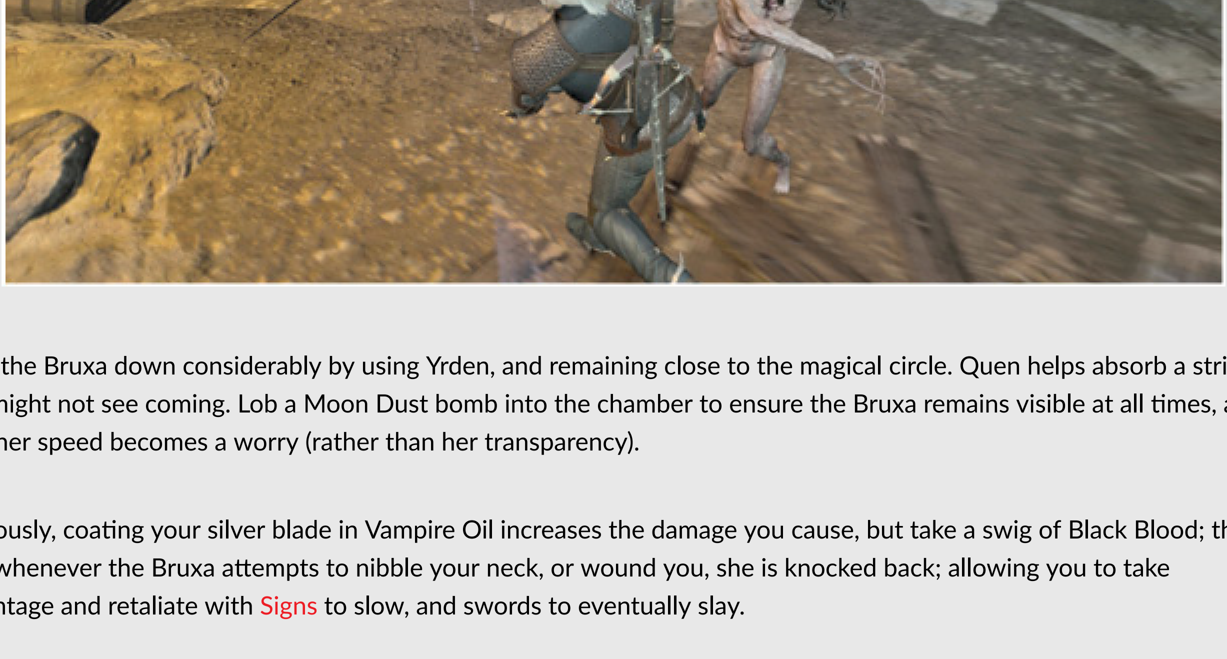
Jump and Strike: A gravity-defying leap into a damaging attack, which can occur at any distance, and is best blocked or dodged if you're quick enough. Dodging backward, before retaliating with a sword after the Bruxa lands, is a good plan.

Blood Drink: If you're leapt on, expect to receive a guzzling around the neck as the Bruxa drinks from your blood! This occurs if you leave yourself open to attack (after a Strong Attack, for example), or if you don't block effectively. If you drank a Black Blood potion, the Bruxa is poisoned by your blood, turning her attack against her.

Defenses: The Bruxa will block your sword strikes using her hardened palms and arms, dodge your attacks, disappear, and use her impressive jumping to leap away if you're dealing damage.

DEFEATING THE BRUXA: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

An almost constant plan of blocking with your silver sword is immediately helpful, to halt the fast attacks that seemingly appear out of nowhere, as the Bruxa emerges from her invisibility to strike. If you've neglected to properly prepare for this fight (which isn't recommended), you require "tit-for-tat" strikes, blocking the Bruxa before quickly retaliating with a hit of your own afterward. Her speed makes strong attacks more worrisome to employ, as you leave yourself vulnerable.



Slow the Bruxa down considerably by using Yrden, and remaining close to the magical circle. Quen helps absorb a strike you might not see coming. Lob a Moon Dust bomb into the chamber to ensure the Bruxa remains visible at all times, and only her speed becomes a worry (rather than her transparency).

Obviously, coating your silver blade in Vampire Oil increases the damage you cause, but take a swig of Black Blood; this way whenever the Bruxa attempts to nibble your neck, or wound you, she is knocked back; allowing you to take advantage and retaliate with Signs to slow, and swords to eventually slay.

The Beast of Toussaint

Gaining The Upper Hand

OBJECTIVES

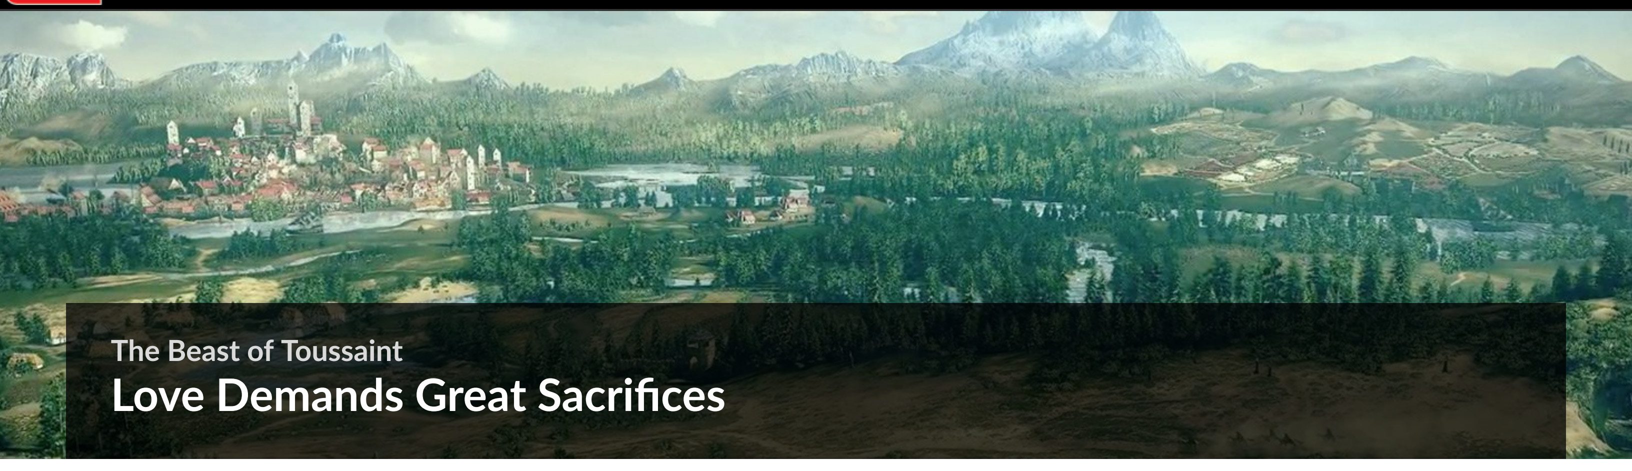
- Examine the body of the Beast's victim.

Over at the alcove table are the revolting, chopped, and water-logged remains of the recent victim. They stink, but further examination is needed. Inspect the following:

- (Examine head): You pry a small pouch of Nilfgaardian florens from the throat; if the murderer did this, you're dealing with a sentient, thinking Beast.
- (Examine arms): Both are separated from the torso. More interestingly is a third hand, which the Bruxa placed in her bag.
- (Examine chest): Though the body suffered great blows to it, the bones were sliced through, and not crushed; indicating the creature had long claws. No Bruxa did this!
- (Examine the severed hand): A still-warm hand, severed at the wrist! Though several monsters can regenerate, the limb seems alive, still.

Items: Unusual Severed Hand

The pouch in the mouth, the way the body was quartered, and the third hand from a separate entity all offer up further questions and no answers. It is time to visit the Duchess herself, and reveal your investigation to Palmerin.



The Beast of Toussaint

Love Demands Great Sacrifices

OBJECTIVES

- Find Palmerin and ask him to take you to the duchess.
- Defeat the Shaelmaar.

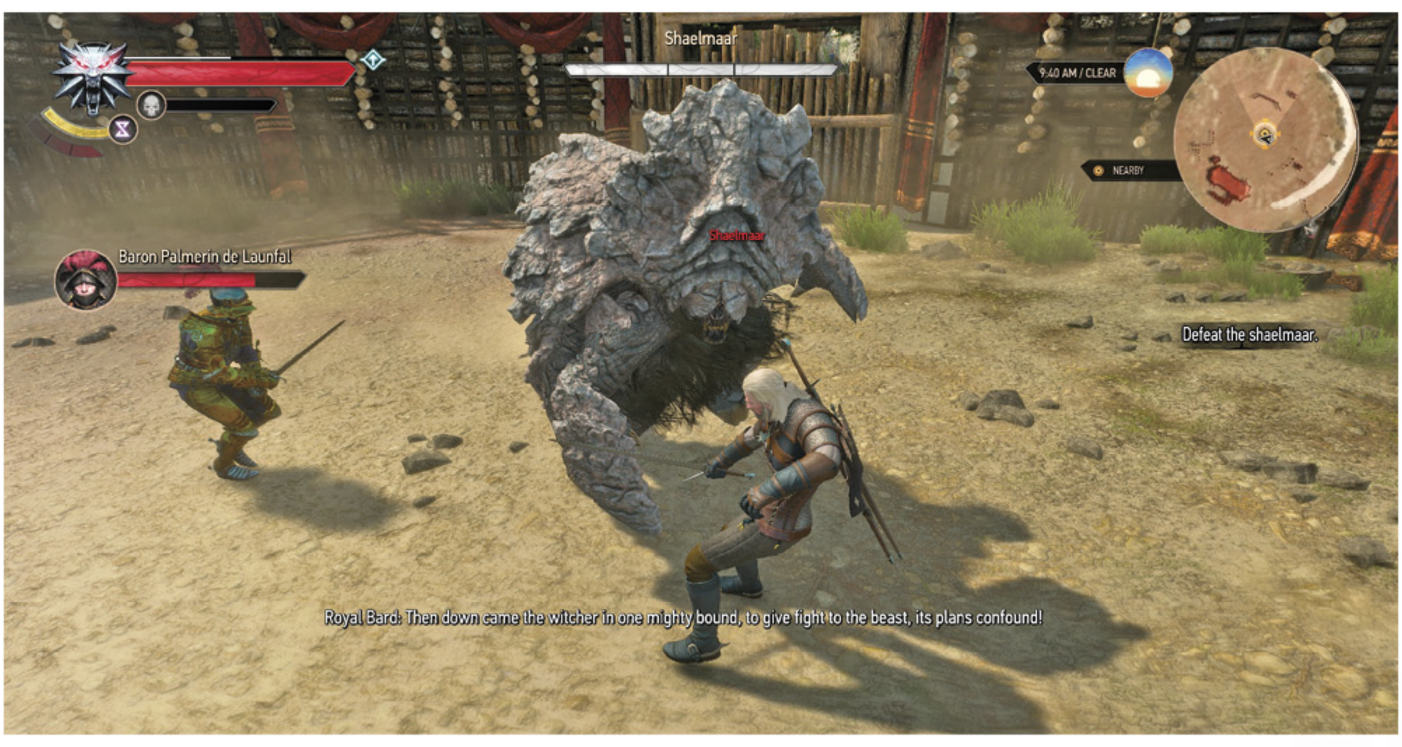
Exit the cellar, optionally find Roach nibbling on some grass, and ride him roughly southward and southwestward, up the hill to the Tourney Grounds. Weave your way past the peasantry, and locate the knight telling stories to a small group of urchins.

CORRECT COMBAT PREPARATION

Wait! Though you aren't expecting it, you're called upon to help out with a rather terrifying monster in a few moments, so it's worth preparing yourself beforehand, and before speaking to Palmerin.

The story of Riddick and the dragon will have to wait; Palmerin shoos the children away, but only after mentioning your help in defeating the giant named Golyat. One of the inquisitive tykes asks if virtue always trumps villainy. Answer how you wish:

- Answer "Virtue always triumphs," to result in the children mocking you slightly.
- Answer "The stronger wins," though this isn't the best way to influence small minds.
- Answer "Not always," to hedge your bets, and answer most truthfully.



Royal Bard: Then down came the witcher in one mighty bound, to give fight to the beast, its plans confound!

Your audience with the Duchess will have to wait too; the festivities at this location are about to begin with an arena battle. You're taken aback to see a large and confused Shaelmaar (a gift from the emperor) being prodded into its pen. Answer Palmerin as you wish regarding the danger or torture of the animal. Ask who will fight the Shaelmaar if you wish; Palmerin explains it is Guillaume, who was out of his depth against the giant when you first met him. This won't end well.

Indeed, it doesn't. After what appears to be a victory, Guillaume makes what could be termed a 'tactical misstep,' forcing you and Palmerin into the fray to save his life. Again. Prepare to face the Shaelmaar yourself, since Palmerin will quickly be knocked down by the creature.

DEFEATING THE SHAELMAAR: THE SHAELMAAR'S ATTACKS

The Shaelmaar has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:

Blind as a Bat: Shaelmaars are blind, and rely on sounds to find their prey. This makes combat much easier, though Palmerin doesn't have this knowledge, meaning the Shaelmaar is likely to attack him over you.

One-Hit Attacks: The Shaelmaar has three types of attacks that strike once; a left arm swing, a right arm swing, and a vertical swing ("uppercut"). Each deals heavy damage, and should be parried, dodged, or absorbed by Quen.

Head Smash: With its bulk and heavy armor plating, the beast lurches forward, leading with its head and neck. This can stagger you, and is highly damaging. Only dodging (or being away from the attack) ensures you aren't hit.

Counterattack: If struck too many times, the Shaelmaar tends to roll up into an impervious ball. You need to exercise patience and wait for it to unroll itself before attacking. Try to strike the beast while it is rolled up, and it can quickly counterattack with a swift and heavily-damaging swipe.

Charge: Usually at mid to long distance, and after being hassled by you, the beast rolls into a ball and rumbles forward, quickly knocking anything in its way. Expect to be stunned for a few seconds after landing on your back (and very prone to more attacks). It stops after striking, or hitting a wall. This is best avoided, through a roll or dodge to the side, and a well-timed strike to its flank will damage it.

Ground Pummel: Using its large, shovel-like arms to throw copious rocks and soil forward in a wave of destruction, this is usually used as an opening attack. Dodge to the side to prevent being damaged by the assorted projectiles.

Tremor: If you're fighting a Shaelmaar in a cave, it can burrow into the ground, shaking its back plates, and creating tremors that cause rocks to fall from the ceiling. It reappears shortly after, so keep your wits about you and watch the mini-map to track the foe.

Echo Location: If you stand still for long enough, the Shaelmaar sends sound waves to locate you, which can cause discomfort to your ears, though isn't debilitating. However, your position is discovered, meaning you need to attack or retreat.

DEFEATING THE SHAELMAAR: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

The good news is that the Shaelmaar has no ability to dodge any of your attacks. The bad news is that it turns and defends its vulnerable front by showing its back to you; a back that is heavily armored, and difficult to penetrate. This also occurs if you attempt to use Igni. Expect it to violently roll around the arena if you're continuously attacking it, and use its meaty paws to swipe if struck from behind.

Aside from well-timed strikes as the Shaelmaar finishes a combat move, the odd attack from Palmerin, and deft dodging to avoid the pulverizing nature of its attacks, disorientate it using Aard, and follow it up with Samum bombs that generate a large amount of noise, confusing the Shaelmaar (allowing you to strike with swords, crossbow, more bombs, or Signs). The Samum bomb stuns the Shaelmaar too, making it incredibly effective.

Another strong tactic is to taunt the Shaelmaar into rolling, then dodge at the last second to make it slam into a wall. This puts it on its back for a while, and all attacks landed in this window of opportunity deal critical damage.

SHAELMAAR VULNERABILITIES

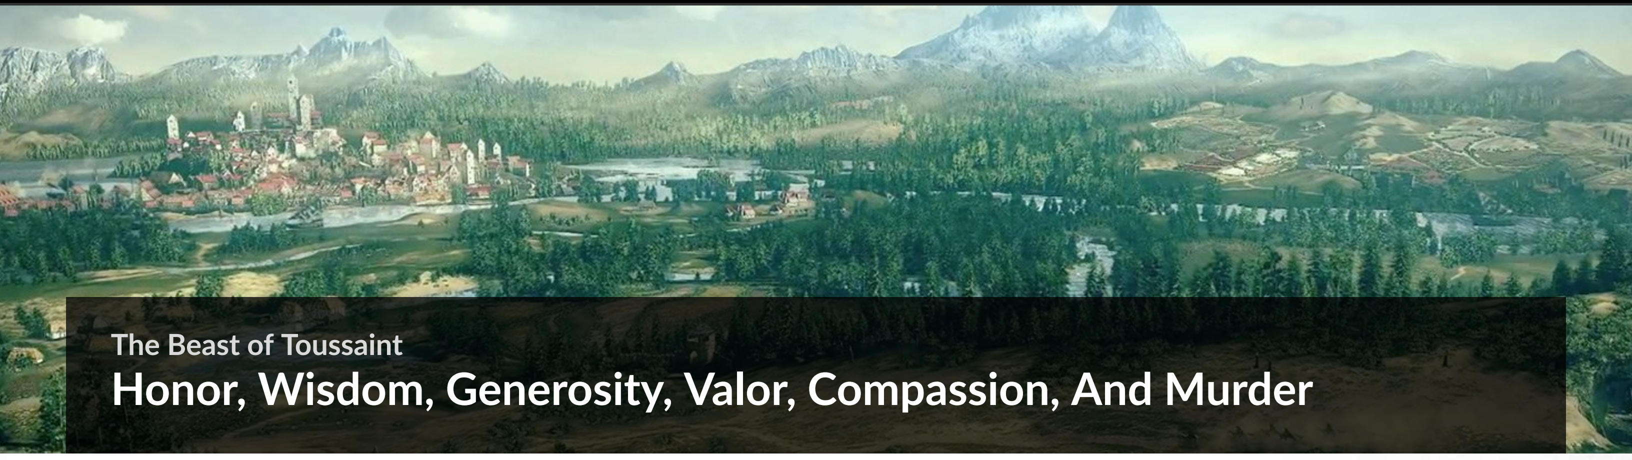
Samum Bomb

Aard

After the beast has been toppled, you have the following option. You can:

- Kill it.
- Spare it.

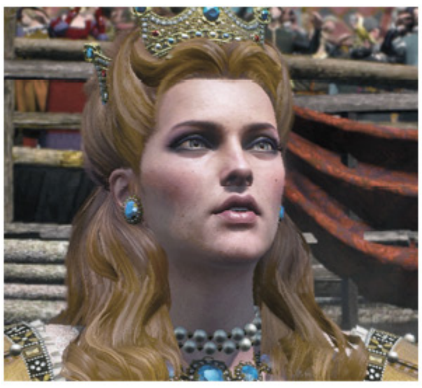
Choose the latter, and pikemen come in to keep it from getting up, while you're awarded the title "Geralt the Merciful" from the bard (an unofficial title). This fulfills the virtue of mercy for the Lady of the Lake quest.



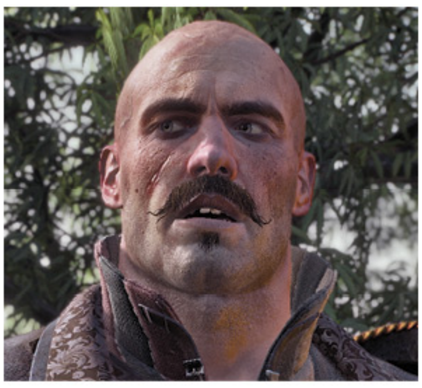
The Beast of Toussaint

Honor, Wisdom, Generosity, Valor, Compassion, And Murder

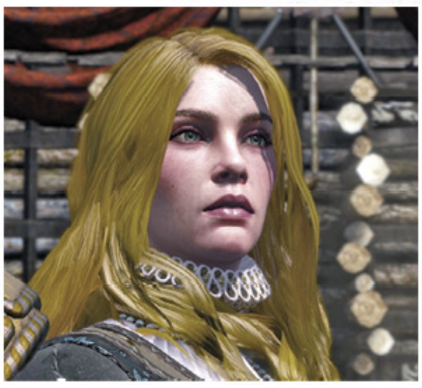
After the third beast you've encountered in your short visit to Toussaint lies gurgling on the arena sand, the Duchess herself (along with her ladies-in-waiting) strides over to greet you. After Palmerin carries the hapless Guillaume to seek medical attention, the Duchess congratulates you on your win. You can optionally mention that fighting a Shaelmaar was a bad idea, before broaching the subject of the contract you've been summoned here to complete: For that, the both of you need to speak with Damien.



Her Illustrious Highness, Duchess Anna Henrietta



Captain Damien de la Tour



Vivienne de Tabris

On your walk to Damien's tent, Duchess Henrietta inquires about Viscount Julian (or as you know him: Dandelion). It seems the Duchess may be having second thoughts about rescinding the death sentence they handed down upon him.

After meeting the Duchess' guard captain, the conversation gets off to a rocky start. Feel free to mention that a bruxa killed his guards before requesting information and a laboratory in order to inspect the severed hand you found. Damien, it seems, doesn't want or need you usurping his investigation; but the Duchess is adamant: so much so in fact, that the discussion of pay is almost immediate. Answer regarding "the Law of Surprise" as you wish; your reward is the same: a most generous sum of coins once you slay the Beast, and the deed to the Corvo Bianco vineyard (where you fought the bruxa), which is available now.

Items: Corvo Bianco Ownership Deed, Key to Corvo Bianco

YOU HAD ME AT MERLOT: CORVO BIANCO

The Duchess is true to her word; you can visit your new vineyard as soon as the audience with her concludes. Expect a tour of the premises, and Secondary Quest: No Place Like Home to begin. Use the Corvo Bianco as your base of operations when exploring Toussaint.

Now to the matter at hand: According to Damien, Knight Crespi was the first to die; ruthless and retired, and not well-liked. He was found during a feast, propped up against the town pillory. The second victim was Ramon de Lac; discovered (in a humiliating position) in a dark nook by some cutpurses. It seems even criminals fear the Beast. Deep claw wounds savaged both these older knights. The third knight to be murdered was Sir de la Croix, who made a fortune trading grain. His was the mouth stuffed with florens from different provinces of the empire.

It is postulated the way the bodies were positioned indicates the Beast has a meaning it is trying to convey. You mention to the Duchess that none seemed to be the model of virtue. After listing the five virtues (and optionally asking why those virtues were chosen), you reckon the Beast is denouncing moral decay:

- Honor is compromised by the pillory.
- Wisdom is compromised by ridicule.
- Generosity is compromised by the coin pouch in the throat.

With this in mind, the Beast's next victim is likely to be an older knight, and one positioned in a way to denounce the virtue of valor. All the knights are either on the tourney grounds or the palace gardens as the annual Hare Hunt is set to begin shortly. You make mention of Milton and his bunny costume, perhaps he is the next victim? After Henrietta mentions the team Milton formed with de la Croix (ask about it if you wish), it becomes increasingly urgent to find the old knight. The only problem is that Milton is currently in hiding, disguised as a hare. Damien's request to call the game off falls on deaf ears; the Duchess instead ordering a discreet search of the gardens. No man or woman shall be spared; in fact, the Duchess herself sets off to head the search. Try to keep up, won't you?

The Beast of Toussaint

Garden Games

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the Duchess to the Palace Gardens.

The Duchess is an accomplished equestrian, so coax Roach into a gallop and race after her, dodging any groups of knights, servants, trees, and nobles as you ride up the palace road that winds up the perimeter to the top. There's little time to appreciate the sweeping vistas along the way. At the top of the great hill the palace is perched upon, dismount and follow the Duchess to the location of the game; southwards down the carved limestone balconies and garden trails. Now you can take in that view!

Along the way, Henrietta explains the participants must find a unicorn's horn, a golden fish, and a phoenix egg. With these, they can deduce where Milton the Hare hides. Thankfully, you don't have to play along, and can just take what you need without regard for the games' rules. Henrietta shall seek the egg, while you're tasked with gathering the unicorn horn and the golden fish. These can be approached in either order, though the unicorn is closer to your starting position.

HORSEPLAY FOR A UNICORN HORN

OBJECTIVES

- Look for the "unicorn" in the clearing in the palace gardens.
- Use your Witcher Senses to find a treat for the "unicorn."
- (Optional) Defeat the courtiers

Take a quick stroll through the tiered formal gardens, weaving down the paved pathways and out to the grassy overlook and large tree where a skittish "unicorn" is being coaxed by a group of game-playing toffs. You interrupt their nattering by striding over and failing to calm the animal. As you have intimate knowledge of unicorns (and eyes), you can tell this is a horse with a horn attached to its head. Your objective updates: Time to chase that filly down!

After the unicorn has bolted, you have two possible choices. You can:

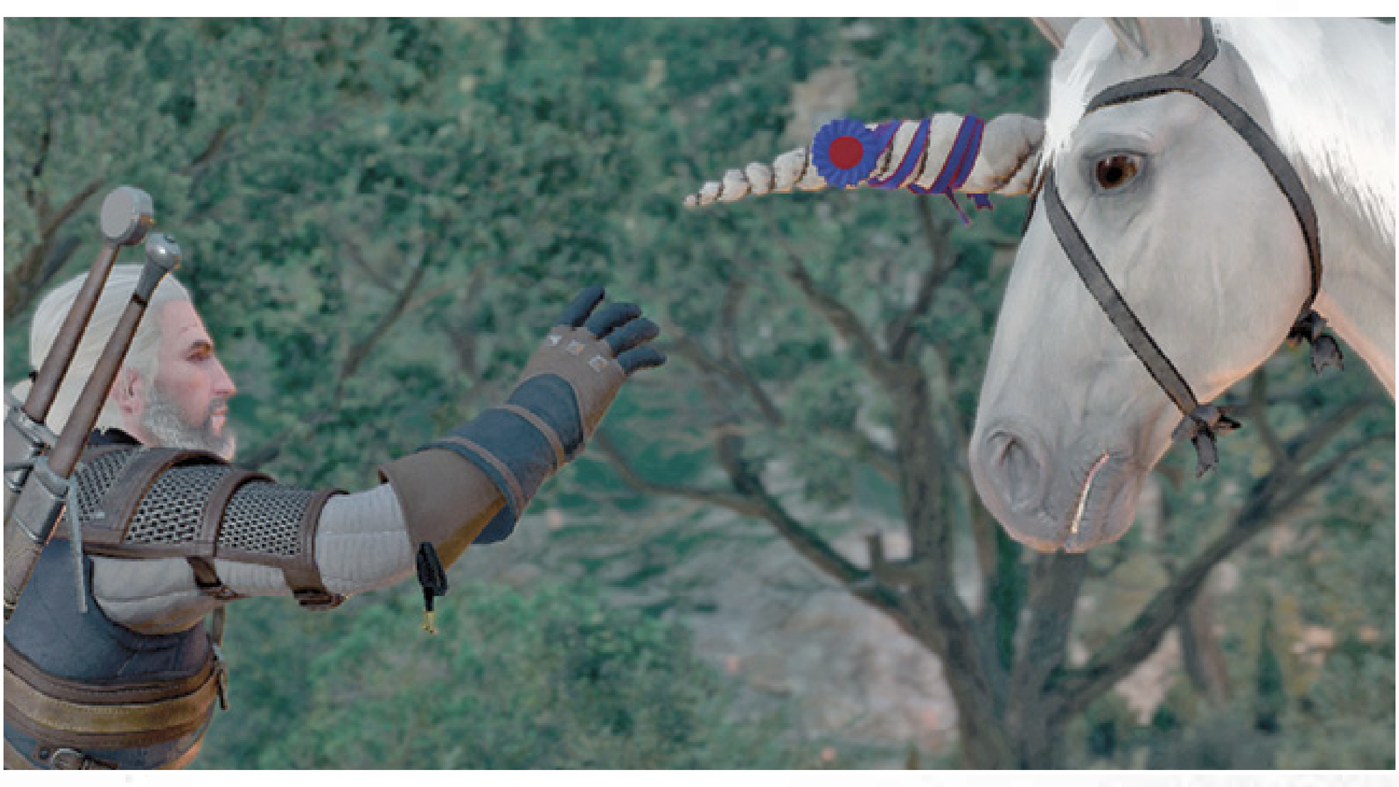
PLAN 1: COAXING WITH A CARROT

Wander the nearby picnic areas, using your Witcher Senses to examine the food the noblefolk have for their partying. Gather a lovely carrot or a ripe apple from one of the picnic rug areas, much to the chagrin of the onlookers. Then carefully approach the "unicorn" with food in hand, and feed it the carrot to calm it down.

Items: Basket of Carrots, Ripe Apple

PLAN 2: ATTEMPTING A CALMING INFLUENCE

Or, you can simply set off down the hill, listening for the whinnying and locating the "unicorn." Carefully approach the horse with a horn strapped to its head, and use your Axii Sign to calm it down considerably.



CONCLUSION: FISTICUFFS WITH THE FANCY FOLK

With the unicorn calmed, you can pry off the cotillion from its horn and keep it. If you used your Axii sign, this doesn't sit well with the hoity-toity types, who accuse you of flagrant cheating. They seem to be under the impression that roughing you up might be a good idea. You can:

- (Axii Sign) Mention you didn't break any rules. This calms down the noblemen sufficiently, without resorting to a fight.
- Tell them to get lost, or actively court a fight. Put up your dukes, and pummel the courtiers into the grass. There are three of them, and they certainly don't put up much of a fight (especially if Axii is used on them).

GALLOPING THROUGH THE GARDENS

Once the Unicorn Horn clue is yours, you can ignore the animal, or ride the horse to your next objective destination, and back to the Duchess afterward. The latter plan is obviously quicker than dashing around on foot.

Items: Clue from the "Unicorn's" Horn

TWEAKING THE BEAK OF KING CORMORANT

OBJECTIVES

- Retrieve the golden fish from the pond.
- Use your Witcher Senses to find the golden fish in the pond.

King Cormorant

Make a descent in a roughly southerly direction, down to the fancy carved pier. Optionally look at the carved goldfish (so you know what you're searching for) before diving into Lake Seidhe Llygad, and swimming to the investigation area. Submerge, using your Witcher senses on a number of large carved goldfish in the murky waters. Most contain candy of some description. As you reach the goldfish you need, it is yanked up on a fishing line, and despite your protests, the fish is presented to the King Cormorant, who conducts this game. You simply grab the fish, ruin the game, and incur the masked nobleman's impotent wrath. However, if the golden fish is the first one you find (instead of the red or white fish), you can just grab the key from it and continue your search for Milton. You receive the following for your troubles:

Items: Key from the Golden Fish

At any point after getting the key from the golden fish, visit the greenhouse where Milton is hiding and open it. This completes the quest and demonstrates your wisdom needed for the Lady of the Lake quest.

The Beast of Toussaint

Here, Hare, Here

OBJECTIVES

- Meet up with the duchess to piece the clues together and figure out where Milton is hiding.

CORRECT COMBAT PREPARATION

Hold on! In your dashing around the Palace gardens, you may forget to correctly prepare for possible combat in the very near future. That would be a mistake: Ensure you're fully ready to fight before returning to the Duchess.

Leave the lake raft where King Cormorant is seething, and swim (or utilize a boat to take you) back to shore. Gallop or run up the garden pathways, all the way to where the Duchess is explaining to her subjects that the rules of the game are being broken. Now you have all three clues, you can reveal a riddle that reveals the location of Milton. It reads thusly:

"I begin like a groan hollowed out with ease, then end like a mouse with the head of hard cheese."

Speak to the Duchess, solving the riddle. "Groan hollowed out with ease" gives you "Green." "Mouse with the head of cheese" could mean "house." How about "Green-house"? This is the answer, and if you pick it, the Duchess is impressed with your powers of deduction. If you don't pick it, she is less wowed by your lack of lateral thinking.

Either way, the Duchess knows of several greenhouses in the gardens, but only one of them has a door that locks; and the key you found looks to open it! She races off to find the structure as this quest concludes.

ENEMIES: Beast of Beauclair

OBJECTIVES

- Fight the Beast

QUESTING DECISIONS

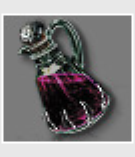
This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Blood and Wine: Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint.

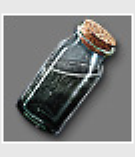
Dettlaff van der Eretein

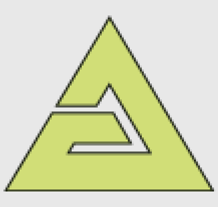
You approach the greenhouse with the Duchess just in time to see a pool of blood leading to the remains of Milton, and a figure crouched over the corpse. It bounds out of the greenhouse with almost super-human deft, leaping across the river. You follow, having trouble keeping up with the most agile foe.

Cornering the fellow in an old warehouse, you produce the severed wrist, and confirm its origin; your adversary has since grown another one, it seems. Striking up a conversation about butchering innocents, the gaunt gentleman asks how many you've struck down yourself. Answer how you wish. Apparently the Beast has one more victim left to murder. But you'll not get the chance to warn the Duchess, if this vampire has his way. He puts on his unhappy face, and the fight immediately starts!

THE BEAST OF BEAUCLAIR VULNERABILITIES







DEFEATING THE BEAST OF BEAUCLAIR: DETTLAFF'S ATTACKS

The Beast of Beauclair has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:

Dettlaff is inhumanely fast, and you should remain extremely cautious when fighting this Higher vampire. With super-human speed and strength, he uses fog to literally disappear, and dash out of to claw with almost unmatched ferocity. This mist is also how he quickly changes position; almost faster than you can blink!

Beast of Beauclair
11:56 PM / CLEAR
NEARBY
BLOOD RUN
Fight the Beast.

Light Attack (Melee): Expect a light attack with his talons; there are three variations of this, and all are best parried.

Strong Attack (Melee): Watch for a slightly slower, more pronounced strike with his talons. There are three variations of this, and all should be parried, or better yet, countered so you can quickly deal damage back to him.

Combination Attack (Melee): Expect a combination of three to five connected strikes, with two variations; usually from the flank, from behind, and appearing from the mist. You have little time to react, so continuously parry. Failing that, roll or dodge just before the first strike connects.

Short Dash Attack (Special): Watch for a fast dash attack, a brief transformation into mist, finishing with a second fast dash attack. Don't be coaxed into attacking after the first hit; you'll slice through mist and miss him. Remain on the defensive.

Dash Attack (Special): A variation on the short dash finishes with a short stop before a strong slashing attack. This is a good place to retaliate; countering the strong final strike with one (or two) of your own. But don't get greedy; he flees from your strikes with ease!

Strong Uppercut Attack (Melee): Expect a strong attack with a flourish that can stagger you, leaving him moments to regenerate, thus prolonging this battle and leaving you vulnerable. Blocking the strong attack is good; countering is preferable.

Resistances: Dettlaff is resistant to poison, bleeding, and Yrden, so employing any of these in battle is simply a waste of time.

DEFEATING THE BEAST OF BEAUCLAIR: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Staying patient and cool under the extreme speed and savagery exhibited by the Beast of Beauclair is key to surviving this fight. Counter any of Dettlaff's attacks, and wait until he attempts his stronger strikes. If you can counter them, you have a tiny window of opportunity to land a couple of strikes before the Beast vanishes or warps behind you to strike.

Judicious use of Quen helps, not only to shield you but to shrug off any attacks you aren't quick enough to parry while you learn the timing to thwart this foe. Swig Black Blood to ensure any damage Dettlaff causes is partly reflected back at him, coat your silver sword in Vampire Oil to ensure each strike damages him as much as possible, and then fight back only after he finishes his strong attack. The battle may take a while, but it's the best way to remain in one piece and stop this higher vampire, if only for a moment…

A Resurrected Regis

After you slice Dettlaff's health down, it seems the vampire is just as spry as when the battle began. He vanishes, readying himself to skewer you from behind, when a second figure appears, taking the full force of Dettlaff's claws, and urging the vampire to return to regenerate elsewhere. Dettlaff departs, and you're taken aback as the newcomer is instantly recognizable to you; this is Regis, a higher vampire and a trusted friend from your past exploits! Alternatively, if Detlaff beats you, Regis also appears and saves your life.

Emiel Regis Rohellec Terzieff-Godefroy (human form)

Shrugging off Dettlaff's clawing (he heals the wound in moments), you reminisce about how much better he's looking since the last time you saw him, and can ask how he managed to regenerate if you wish. Also question him about why he is back, and how he knows the killer you are hunting. It seems Dettlaff, as well as being a Higher Vampire, is a somewhat more stubborn (and bestial) fellow than Regis; but Regis is working on him. Answer Regis as you wish regarding his reasons and motivations. It seems Regis has faith that Dettlaff is performing such ignoble deeds for a well-intentioned reason; and spins a quick historic yarn to prove this point.

After asking (if you wish) about what could have angered Dettlaff, you both agree that finding him is the next best course of action. Your chinwagging is interrupted by palace guardsman, and Regis tells you to meet him at his makeshift quarters, at the Mere-Lachaiselongue Cemetery. After fobbing off the guards regarding the trampling of evidence, you are free to move about the warehouse, and the quest concludes.

ENEMIES: Ghouls, Alghouls, Panthers, Archespores, Kikimore Workers, Kikimore Warrior, Barghests, Wight: Spoon Collector, Rotfiends, Scurvers, Fleders, Katakans

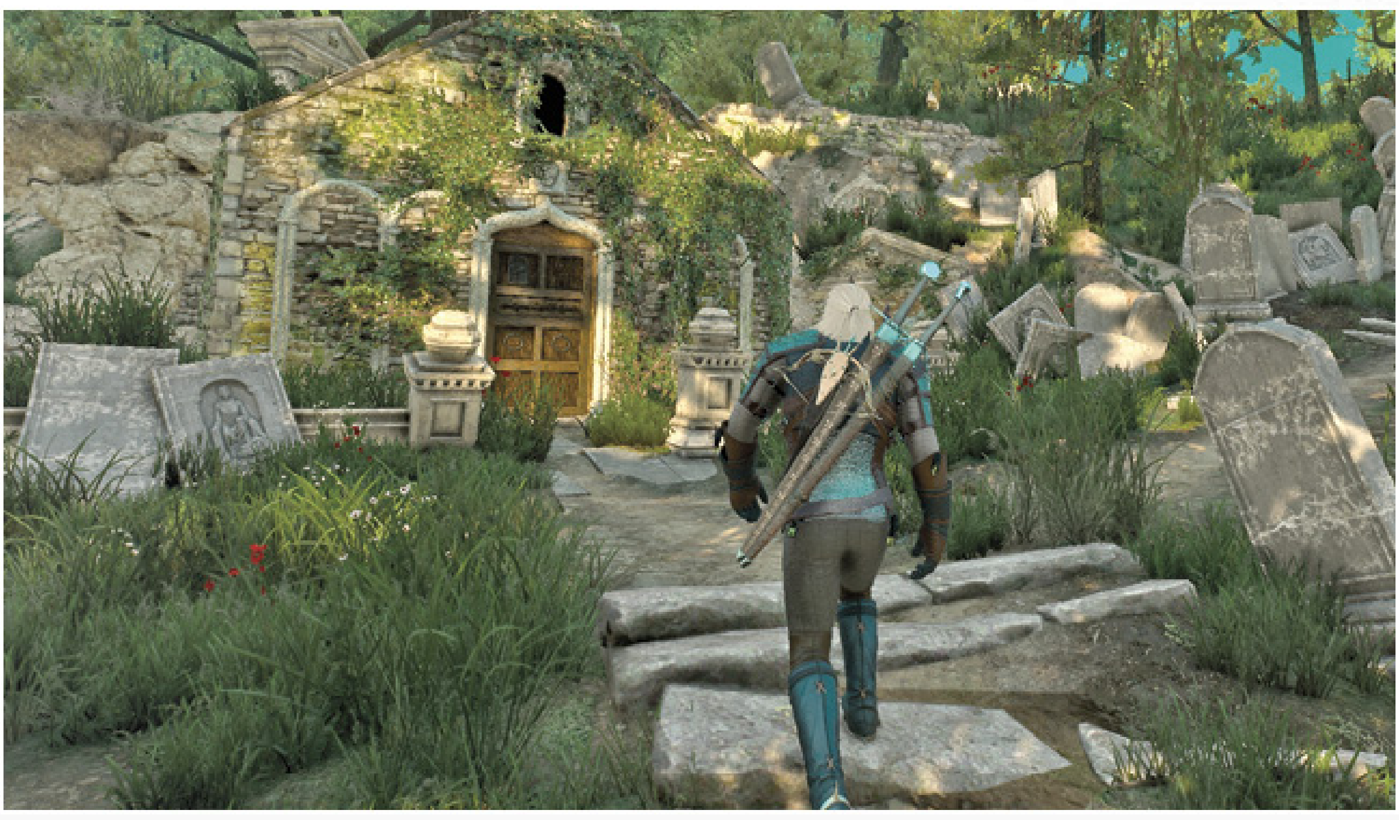
OBJECTIVES

- Meet Regis at Mere-Lachaiselongue Cemetery.
- Find the entrance to the crypt.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Blood and Wine: Main Quest: Blood Run. Feel free to inspect the Corvo Bianco winery that you now own (Secondary Quest: No Place Like Home) if you wish, and begin any optional explorations of Toussaint.

Journey to the Mere-Lachaiselongue Cemetery. Regis isn’t here to welcome you. In fact, he’s nowhere to be seen. Instead, contend with some roaming Ghouls, a possible Panther attack, and a few disgusting, snake and plant-like foes known as Archespores. The scavengers around the small chapel leading to the crypt aren’t your main focus; getting into the crypt is. Which is tricky as Regis isn’t answering the chapel door. It seems you need to find another way into the catacombs under the graveyard.

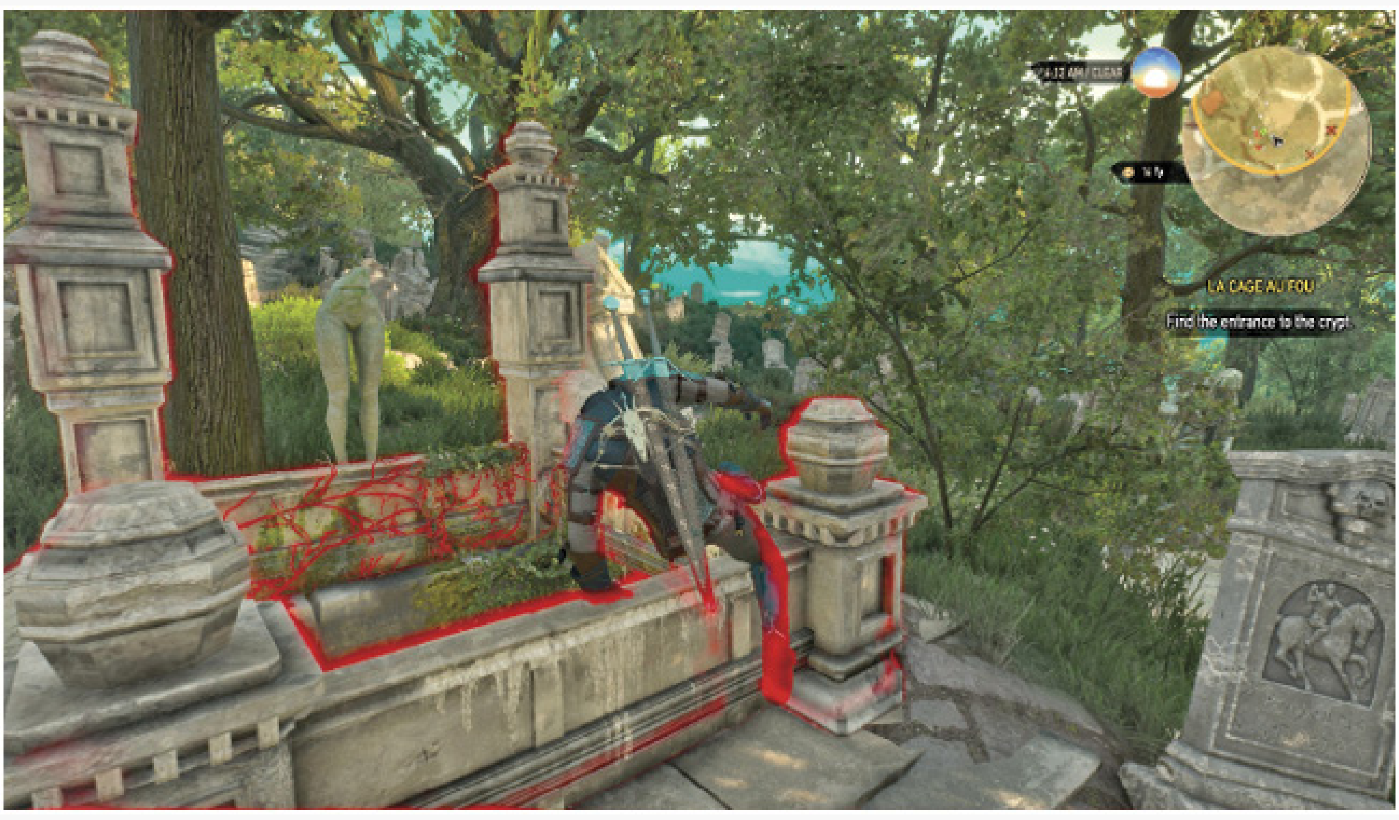


CUTTING OFF THE HEAD OF THE SNAKE

These poisonous Archespore pods and their snake-like heads like to burrow, spit, and thrash with violence and cunning. Consult the Bestiary for the optimal tactics when attempting to weed out this carnivorous plant life, along with any prowling Panthers if this is your first encounter with big cats.

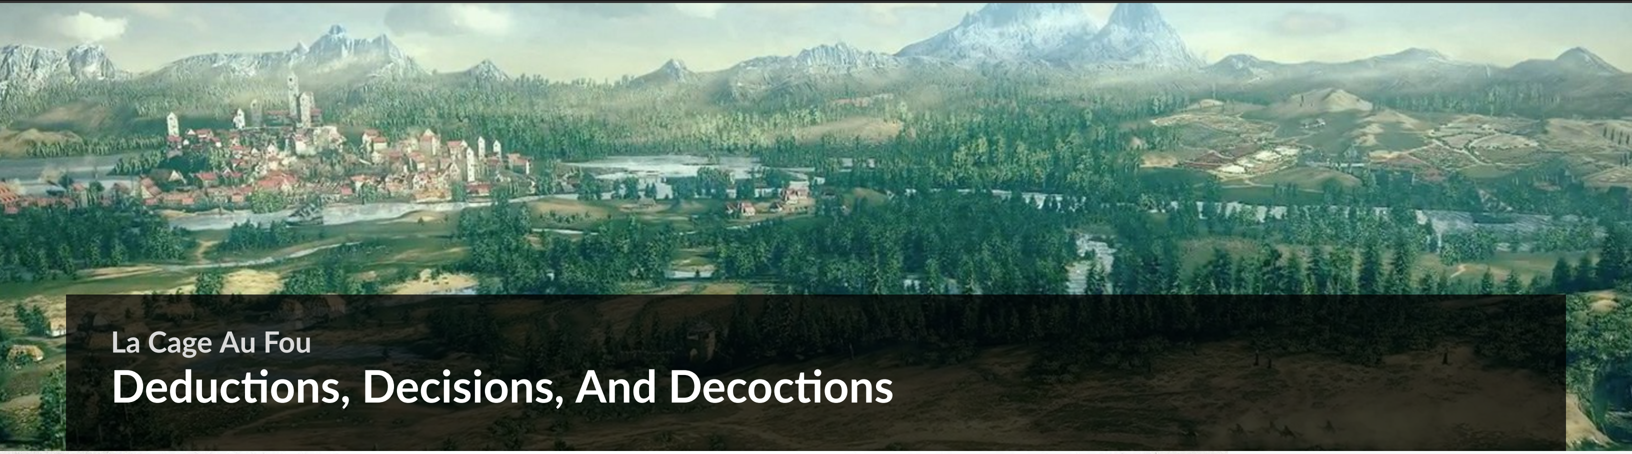
Once you’re into the crypt, prepare to face a group of scuttling Kikimores. They have some tactics to try too. See the Bestiary for further details.

Move into the investigation area on your map, and begin a thorough inspection of the above-ground tombs until you stumble upon a large carved crypt opening (as shown). The tomb is open, allowing you to vault over, and drop into a small rocky tunnel. Draw your sword and engage a cluster of Kikimores Workers, revolting scuttling foes that inhabit this dark, dank place. Feel free to burn the clusters of large egg sacs to earn additional XP before facing a more powerful Kikimore Warrior. Then continue roughly south until you reach an opening into the main crypt itself. From here, it is a short stroll through the catacombs up and into the lair of Regis.



CUTTING OFF THE HEAD OF THE SNAKE

Your Eye of Nehaleni may be vibrating, once you’re through the Kikimore nest, but before meeting Regis. Use it on a wall-like illusion, leading to a hidden crypt with a choice Relic sword and documentation about who is buried here.



La Cage Au Fou

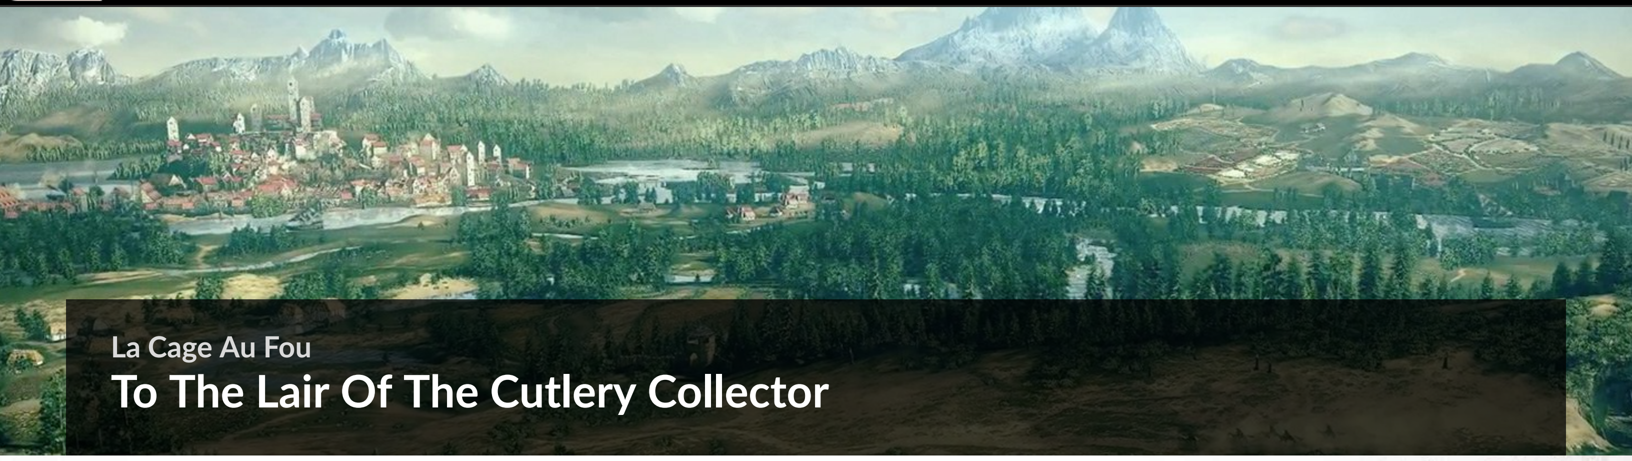
Deductions, Decisions, And Decoctions

After laughing about the nature of your meeting, Regis reminds you that a powerful entity such as Dettlaff will not be found if he doesn't wish to be. And that includes finding them with megascopes. It is fortunate, then, that you've kept your memento from the encounter in Corvo Bianco basement with the bruxa. After showing Regis the hand of Dettlaff, you can ask how he intends to use the hand, what the ring on the hand signifies, and why he can't simply summon Dettlaff. Regis' verbose responses lead you to a conclusion; a decoction needs to be brewed, too.

Regis agrees that a hallucinatory poison is needed. Alas, the ingredients are scattered far and wide. Summoning ravens to aid in finding the elements of the decoction, Regis asks if you'd like a snifter of mandrake while you both wait. You can:

- Accept, prompting a lengthy conversation between you and the vampire Regis. Answer how you wish.
- Refuse, and mention to Regis you'll sleep until the Ravens find the ingredients you seek.

Some time later, the ravens fly back and confirm your suspicions that no kobolds or mamunes can be found, and therefore their organs are safe from your ingredient-collecting. Instead, a Wight haunting an abandoned residence near the Trastamara Hunting Cottage could be harvested, though you don't believe the birds; Witchers should have culled them all. Optionally ask Regis about the Wight, the curse the Wight is under, and then agree to pay the Wight a visit (you're attempting to collect some of it's saliva, which should be fun). You can't miss the place; it's covered in spoons.



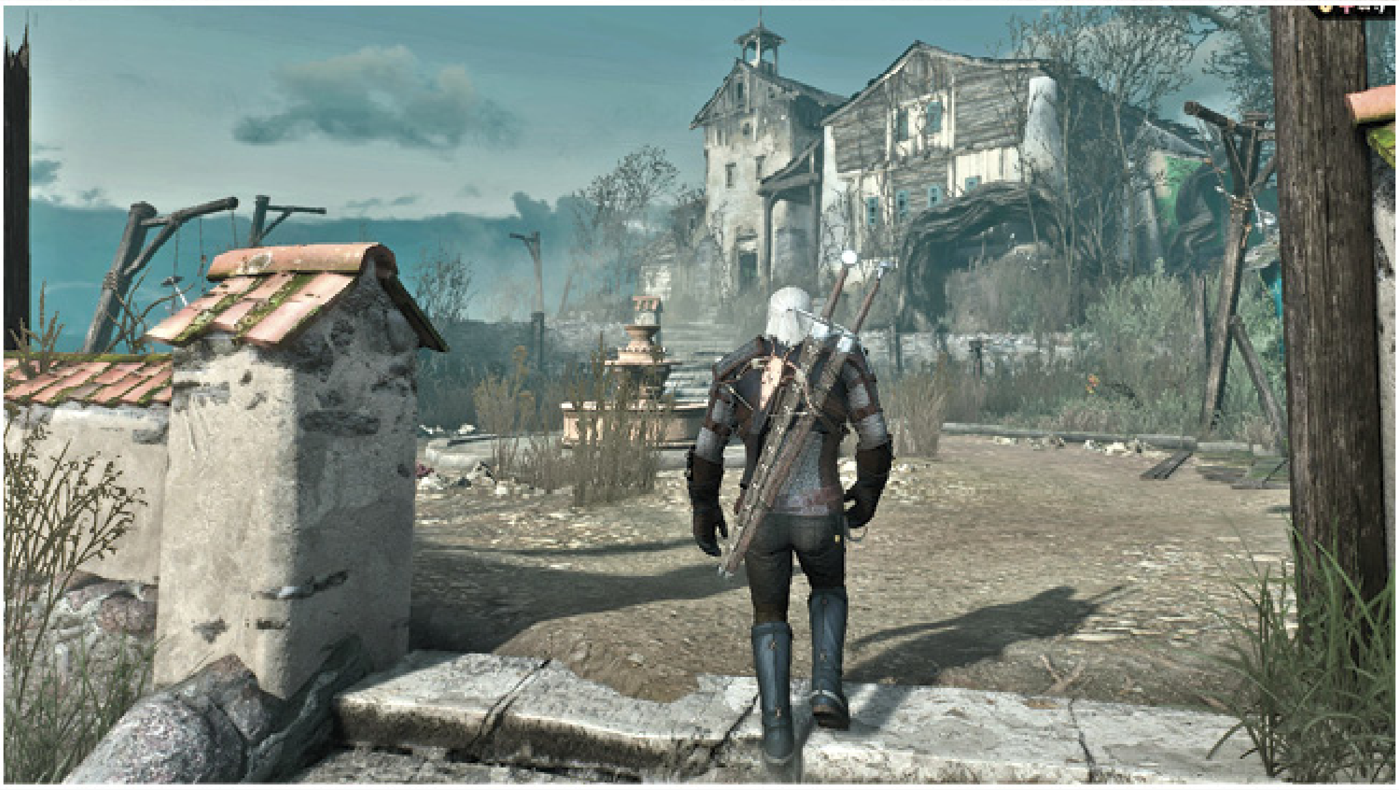
La Cage Au Fou

To The Lair Of The Cutlery Collector

OBJECTIVES

- Look for the Wight's lair.
- Read the Bestiary entry about Wights to learn more about the spoon collecting monster.

Open your Glossary, and read the entry on the Wight, Spoon Collector. You are fortunate to learn the vulnerabilities of the Wight ahead of time, in case you solve your forthcoming ingredient-gathering with violence. Then set off in a roughly easterly direction, trekking through the pasture lands and vineyards, until you reach the perimeter of Caroberta Woods. Expect to encounter Wild Boar and Foglets once you enter the woods, and the dog-like spectral hounds known as Barghests as you arrive close to the Manor itself. Ascend the hillside to a plateau of gnarled trees and the tumbledown Ruins of Trastamara Manor (close to the Trastamara Hunting Cottage Signpost). The ravens of Regis weren't lying; as you enter the property, there are spoons jingling in the wind, tied to posts throughout the courtyard. Are the spoons beating out some kind of rhythm? Pass the fountain, and reach the imposing (but dilapidated) front entrance. Someone has scrawled the following on the walls:



"None shall sit and dine with you at your table, no spoon you have shall sate you, never again shall you wish to spy your reflection in the mirror."

Somebody is clearly obsessed.

Optionally head to the left of the entrance, around the outside of the manor structure, to a bench where you can read a strange note. Now enter the manor house.

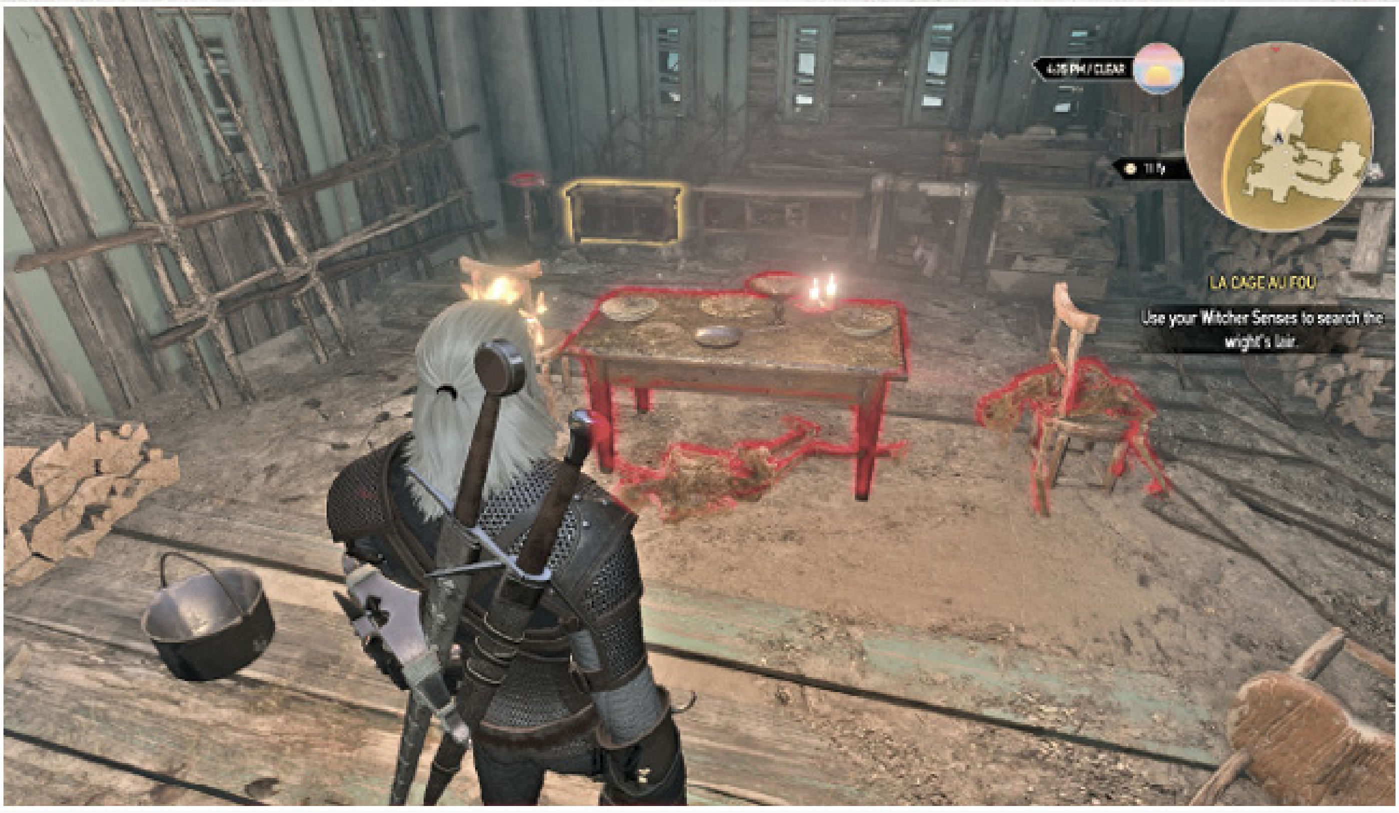
Mind Your Manors

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to search the Wight's lair.

The manor is a pigsty, but it must be searched thoroughly. As the spoons tinkle in the breeze, use your Witcher Senses and inspect the initial hallway and kitchen:

- Look in the oven. Hidden behind the small hatch is a stained diary, charting the female Wight's descent into madness and a monstrous form.
- There's an incredibly crafted spoon on the nearby table.
- Nearby wall graffiti with the same message as outside. Whoever lives here took this curse literally.
- A small bedroom off the kitchen has a mirror to inspect; smashed as if someone couldn't stand to look at themselves.
- Walk south, through a small connecting corridor into a large dining room. More graffiti greets you on the walls.
- A table in the southeast corner of the room holds a spoon key with a tag on it. The Wight is a true collector. The tag bears an inscription; read the Spoon Key Note and Secondary Quest: Spoontaneous Profits! Immediately begins. Complete this short quest at your convenience.
- Moving into the dining room, it seems the guests to dinner haven't faired well recently. The table has three skeletons; you doubt they came willingly. Perhaps this has something to do with the curse?
- One skeleton has its right arm bitten off and its teeth knocked out.
- One skeleton has a broken neck and was smacked in the head by something heavy.
- One skeleton probably choked to death.
- Behind the dining table on a small side table against the wall is a spoon with a woman's name scratched into it. Romantic?



Items: Stained Diary, Spoon-Key and Spoon-Key Note

Head down the stairs into the lower floor from the dining room. Your objective updates.

MAKE YOUR SEARCH STUDIOUS, NOT SLAPDASH

Before you venture downstairs, it is worth ensuring you've completely investigated the first floor of this manor, and learned all the clues listed previously. At a minimum, pass through the corridor full of spoons, check the table with the dead skeletons, and check the table with the tableware, in the room with the cauldron, to open the most choices later on.

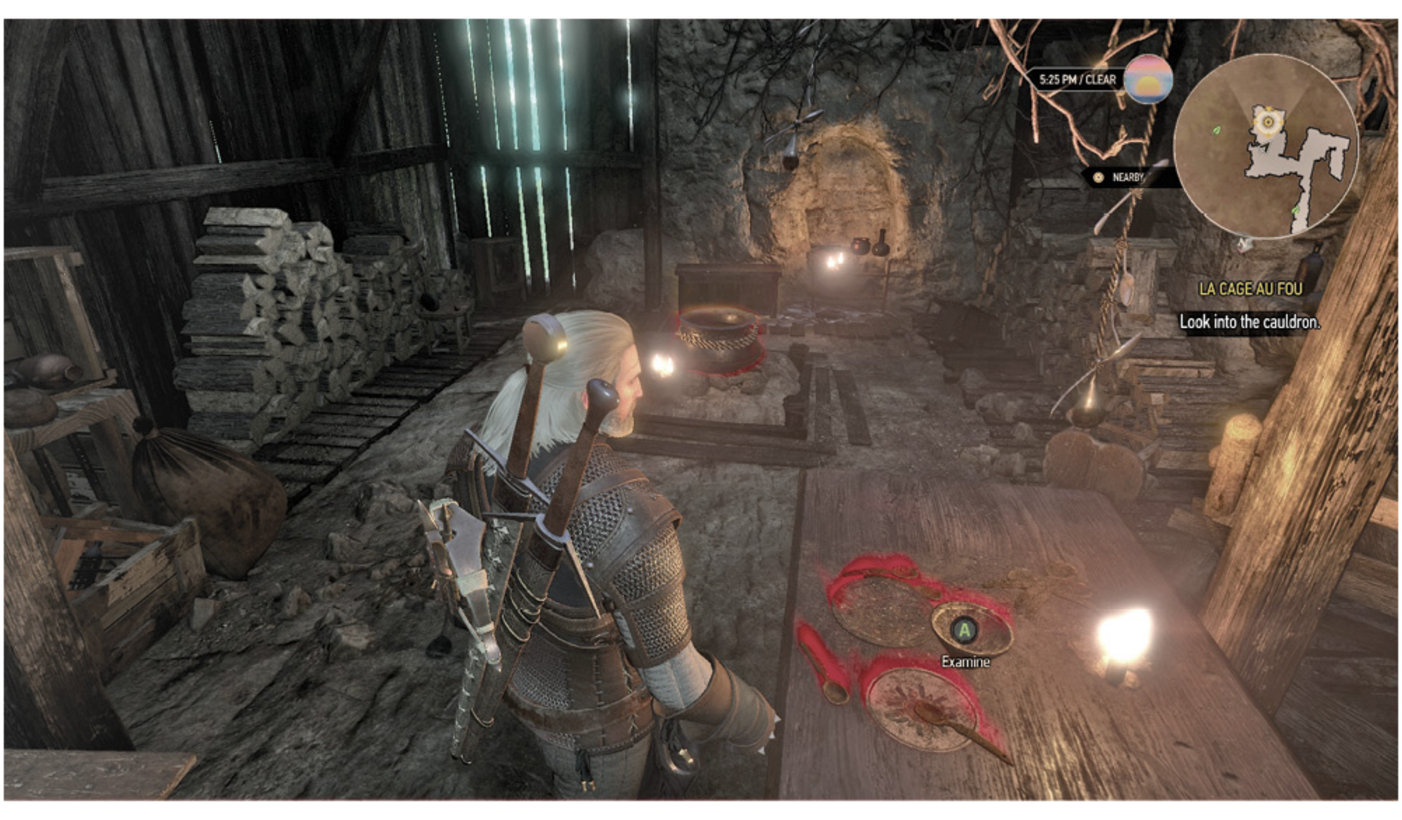
The Wight Stuff

OBJECTIVES

- Find the Wight's cauldron. Look into the cauldron.v



Head through the cellar. Feel free to examine an old, ordinary spoon on a table near some wine barrel alcoves, before heading east into a chamber where the cauldron can be found. Though there's a tunnel passage through some dangling spoons to a cellar vault, (with, you guessed it, more spoons), it isn't necessary to enter yet.

Instead, pay close attention to the table and use your Witcher Senses:

- The table is set; the Wight seems to be getting ready for a feast. The Wight appears to be desperately trying to lift the curse.
- Close to a chest is a cauldron. Unfortunately, it is empty. You have little choice but to locate a spot and observe the Wight when it steps close to the cauldron.

OBJECTIVES

- Hide in a place with a good view of the cauldron.

It shouldn't take long (especially if you use your Witcher Senses) to find a wardrobe in the far corner of the chamber, opposite the cauldron, examine the door, and enter it. Hide inside, remaining patient as the Wight eventually appears, and begins to pace about the room. Continue to wait until the following happens:

- (Attack the monster: No choice) If you've failed to search the house (particularly the dining room) for clues, you're spotted by the Wight, shaken out of the wardrobe without the knowledge of lifting the Wight's curse, and must face it in combat.
- (Attack the monster: Choice) You are given the opportunity to attack the monster, or choose a more peaceful solution ("Try to lift the curse") if you've thoroughly inspected the manor for clues.
- (Try to lift the curse: Choice) You step out of the wardrobe, offering soothing words of wisdom about figuring out how to lift the curse. Time for dinner.

PLAN A (DEATH TO THE WIGHT): STICK A FORK IN IT

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Follow the Wight.
- Kill the Wight.

If you have malice in your heart, or just didn't bother to investigate the manor for clues, you have little choice but to follow the Wight down into the main wine cellar vault, and maneuver about the knee-deep collection cutlery while battling this atrocity. Once you've killed the Wight, you can collect a vial of vile spittle, and be on your way.

DEFEATING THE WIGHT, SPOON COLLECTOR: WIGHT'S ATTACKS

The Wight has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:

Spit Attack (ranged): A revolting globule of green is spat at you from range, leaving you woozy (rather like being drunk, though much more disgusting). As you can see the spittle forming, you should be easily able to dodge this projectile.

Melee Attacks: Expect a single claw (from either hand) to paw at you when either you or the Spoon Collector are close. These can be parried, countered, dodged, or rolled away from.

Burrow: Submerging itself in its room of spoons, the Wight can scuttle underneath you, pull you down (causing you a few seconds of prone struggling before you pull yourself up again), and wound you in the process. It can also retreat under its spoons, and dart about the room, making it reasonably difficult to follow. Just look for the disturbance of spoons to track it, and dodge or roll away if it tries to grab you.

Resistances: The Spoon Collector is resistant to both bleeding and poison attacks.

DEFEATING THE WIGHT: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Being constantly aware of the position of the Wight is critical for this battle, or you'll be pulled down, spat on, and slapped about by nasty-looking claws. Apply similar tactics to those you would employ on a Grave Hag when timing your sword strikes. Coat your silver blade in Necrophage Oil, burn the Wight with Igni, and slow it down with Yrden, allowing you to more easily track it.

PLAN B (DINNER WITH THE WIGHT): THERE IS NO SPOON

Should you choose to try and solve the riddle of the curse without resorting to violence, you inform the Wight that you're its willing guest at a dinner. At this point, you must choose how to eat (based on the solving of the riddle, which you can remind yourself of before making one of the following choices). You can:

- Swap spoons with the Wight. You swap spoons, chow down some disgusting gruel, fail to lift the curse, but retrieve some Wight brew for your troubles (and for Regis). You can optionally chase the Wight down into the wine vault to kill it (Plan A), or leave the Wight and the manor and head back to Regis.
- Eat without using spoons. You down some particularly unpleasant broth, ordering the Wight to open its eyes and gaze on its likeness. This freaks it out and it flees. You believe the curse is lifted. You can optionally use your Witcher Senses to follow the odor of the broth out of the manor. This leads to Plan B (Interlude), below.
- Eat using spoons. You down some vile vittles, fail to lift the curse, but retrieve some Wight brew for your troubles (and for Regis). You can optionally chase the Wight down into the wine vault to kill it (Plan A), or leave the Wight and the manor and head back to Regis.

Items: Wight Brew

PLAN B (INTERLUDE): THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE CORVO BIANCO

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Follow the stench of the Wight's brew.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This interlude back at Corvo Bianco automatically starts Secondary Quest: No Place Like Home, if you haven't done so already. Consult that quest for further information on your interactions with Barnabas. If you rescue Marlene, Secondary Quest: The Hunger Game becomes available. Consult that quest for more knowledge on coaxing Marlene back to health.

If you lifted the Wight's curse, follow the scent of the fleeing wretch across the gardens, down a winding path, pausing to slaughter any Barghests along the way, to a rocky outcrop where a ragged bag of bones is huddled and pleading for food. Some time later, back at Corvo Bianco, you tell your majordomo (Barnabas) that leading this old woman back here was the only suitable course of action. If you speak with Barnabas, he reveals the old woman to be Marlene Trastamara, and explains how she became to be cursed.

Resonance Broth: Needs More Blood

OBJECTIVES

- Report back to Regis.

Journey back to the Cemetery, and return to Regis' lair. Feel free to use the chapel entrance this time. Climb the steps inside, up to a small laboratory, where Regis has extracted some tissue from Dettlaff's hand and burned the rest. Answer about spying or ravens as you wish, before Regis informs you that blood is also needed. The blood must be from a vampire in a particularly agitated state. Optionally ask whether Regis' violent state will be dangerous, before he explains how he intends to induce such a mood swing.

Regis intends to journey to Tesham Mutna, an ancient vampire estate. There, you will lock him into a cage, lure beasts and slay them, and the bloodletting should result in him transforming. Ask more about Tesham Mutna if you wish, and then make the following decision. You can:

- Head there with Regis immediately.
- Or stall the quest for a moment, giving you time to adequately prepare. Simply return to the Cemetery and tell Regis when you're ready to proceed.

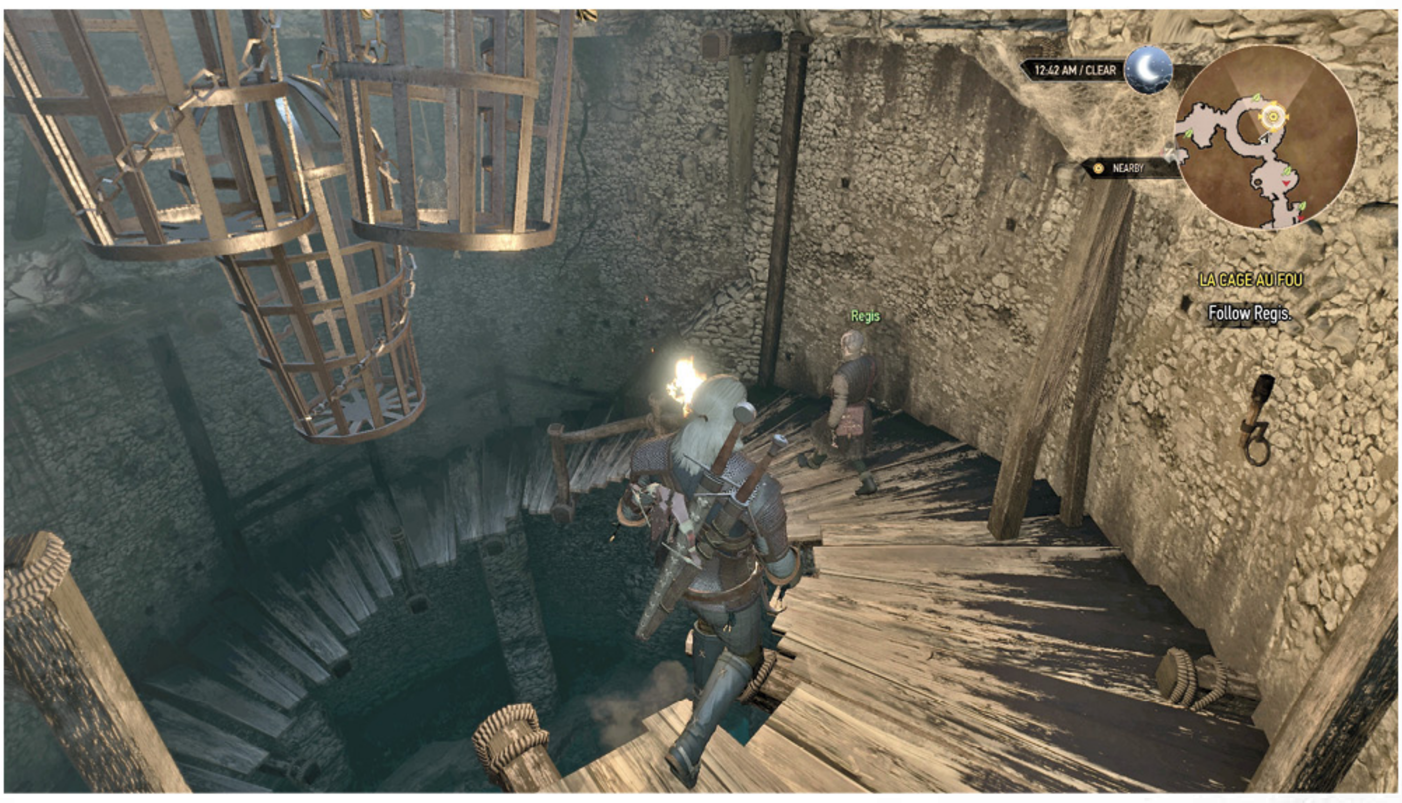
La Cage Au Fou

Death Hangs In The Air

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Regis.
- Place bait in each of the four tunnels (4).

As Regis is already starting to find you more "tasty" than usual, you reach Tesham Mutna without further delay. Descend the spiral steps, speaking to Regis about this place. Pass some cages suspended from a great height, and remain close to the walls as you descend a far more dangerous tower. At the bottom, step into an antechamber, and optionally use your Witcher Senses to make out some wall carvings, emblems, and symbols of vampire tribes dispersed throughout the word after the Conjunction. Regis is less thrilled at explaining the prison cells you then walk through, where you can spend a few moments collecting more trinkets.



Enter the main sacrificial chamber, where humans were once lead to a slow, bleeding death while the caged higher vampire Khagmar ranted and raged, unable to feed. You can use your Witcher Senses to inspect the cage you're about to seal Regis into, as well as some tunnel entrances. Regis hands you lures.

Items: Scavenger Lure (4)

AN EXTENDED TOUR OF TESHAM MUTNA

You should take a few moments to scour the interior of this place for some rather interesting Tesham Mutna Relic armor. Also available are armor dyes, and a host of other items to collect on your way to the main cage arena.

Feel free to inspect the cage in question, before moving to the four indicated locations on your mini-map, and placing one of the lures there. Feel free to ignite the wall torches as you go, if you wish more light to shine on the forthcoming bloodletting. If one of boarded-up tunnels has a few barrels blocking your placement; a quick blast of Aard removes them.

OBJECTIVES

- Tell Regis when you're ready to fight.
- Kill monsters until bloodlust transforms Regis into a monster.

After locking Regis and hoisting up his cage, you may notice an empty bar regarding the higher vampire's bloodlust. The plan here is to slaughter the incoming monsters, and fill this bar. The meat attracts the following base creatures (though the exact type depends on your Level). Slay them all (and consult the Bestiary if you require further combat knowledge):

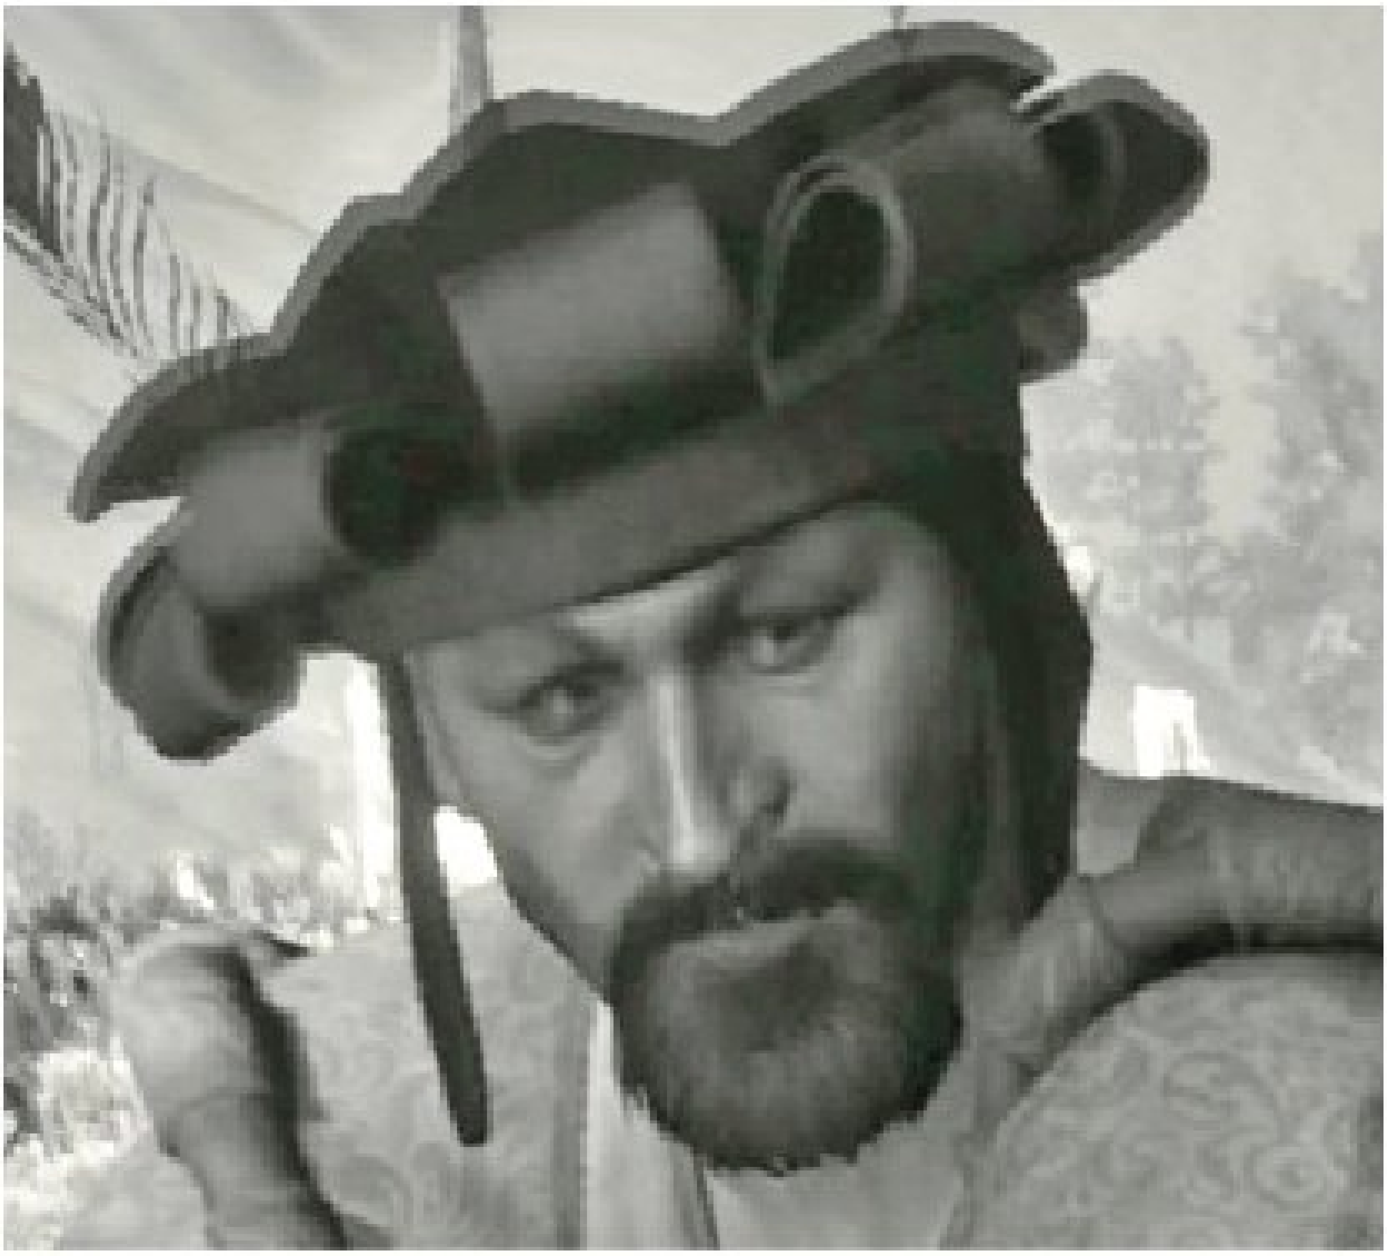
- Wave 1: A Rotfiend, a Scurver, and a Ghoul. This raises Regis' bloodlust a quarter.
- Wave 2: Three Scurvers, a Fleder, and a Rotfiend. This raises Regis' bloodlust to over two thirds.
- Wave 3: Three Ghouls, three Rotfiends, a Katakan, three more Rotfiends… these revolting creatures just keep on coming! Fortunately, Regis is ready at this point: His bloodlust is filled, and he transforms.

You lower the cage, make a cut in Regis' skin to obtain his blood, and leave him to calm down for a few hours.

Readying The Resonance



Count de la Croix (deceased)

Some time later, back at the cemetery, Regis is starting to recover from his transformation. You can optionally ask about what happened, before mentioning that you finished the brew. You're given the resonance, and slip into a deep trance.

Waking up, you explain that you saw visions of the death of de la Croix; it did not come easy. After chopping up the body, Dettlaff was overcome with remorse, and slicing off the hand that had committed the murder. You can also mention the vision of where the Count and Dettlaff first met. Then mention your vision began and ended with a bootblack's stand. Somewhere in the port district. A chat with the lad at the stand is your only lead. The quest now concludes.

REMOVING THE RESONANCE

It is worth meditating for a few hours to rid yourself of the poison from the resonance, and also letting Regis rest for a bit. Begin the next quest when you're fighting fit.

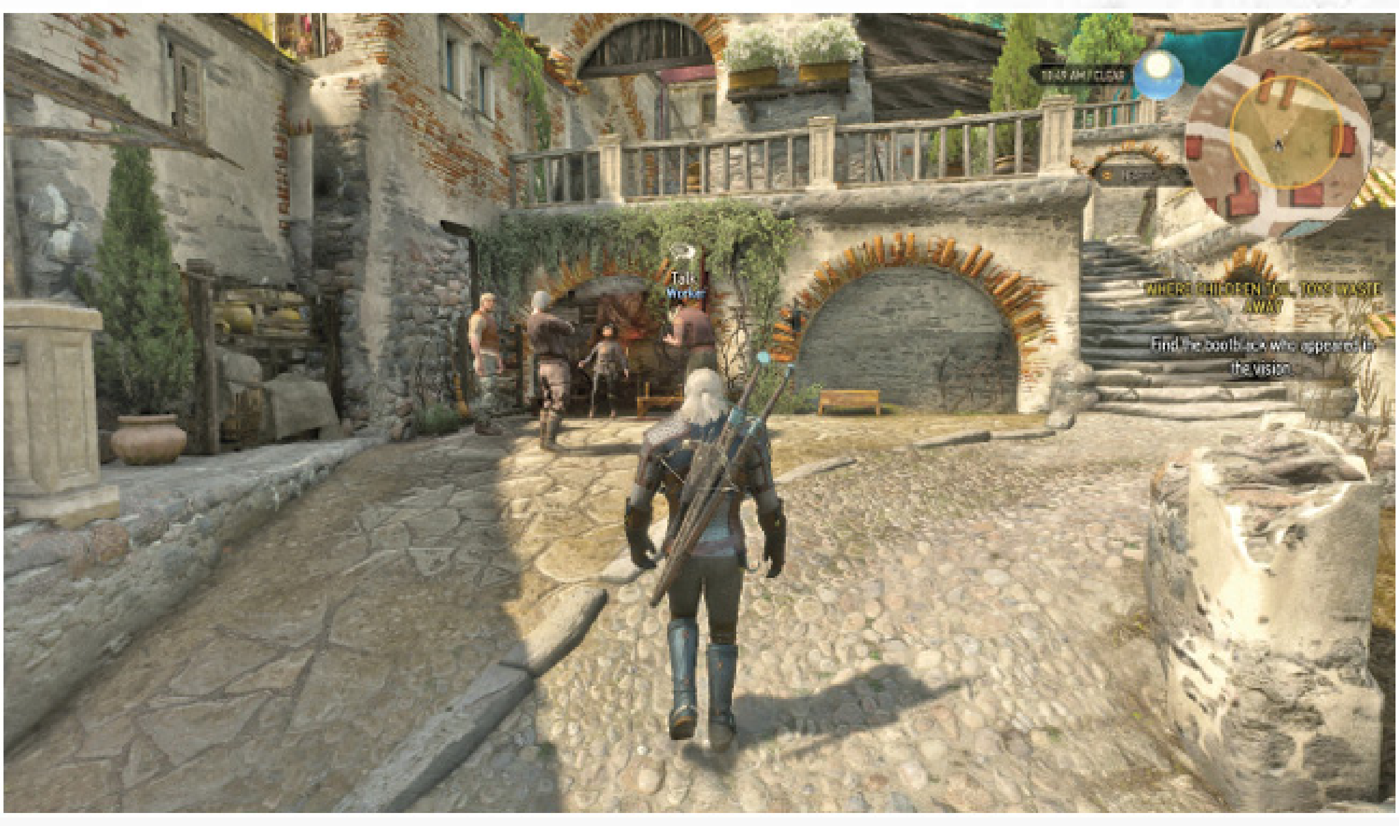
OBJECTIVES

- Find the bootblack who appeared in the vision.
- Visit the boy during his work hours.
- Defend the bootblack from his attackers.

The Bootblack Boy

The Port District of Beauclair lies to the northwest of your current location in the Cemetery. While Regis rests up, journey there yourself, locating the bootblack stand during business hours (after 8 AM, and before 8 PM). When you arrive, a group of dock workers are advancing on the Bootblack Boy, accusing him of intentionally dirtying their boots with a chamber pot. When you arrive to intervene, answer them how you wish; they aren't about to let you stop them from belting the boy. The situation degenerates into a bout of fisticuffs.



WHERE CHILDREN TOIL, TOYS WASTE AWAY
Find the bootblack who appeared in the vision.

After a few well-timed wallops, the dock workers lie groaning on the pavement. A patrol of guardsmen arrives to see about the commotion, and you explain either that the dock workers are making things difficult for you, or there was a simple misunderstanding. Either way, the workers are rounded up, and taken to the nearby prison. This leaves you to talk to the Bootblack Boy himself.

He's a precocious scamp to be sure, reckoning you'd work well as a duo. Humor him if you wish, before asking about Dettlaff. The boy also seems to be a huckster of some repute, offering information in return for a small donation to his operations. The amount required is 500 crowns! You can:

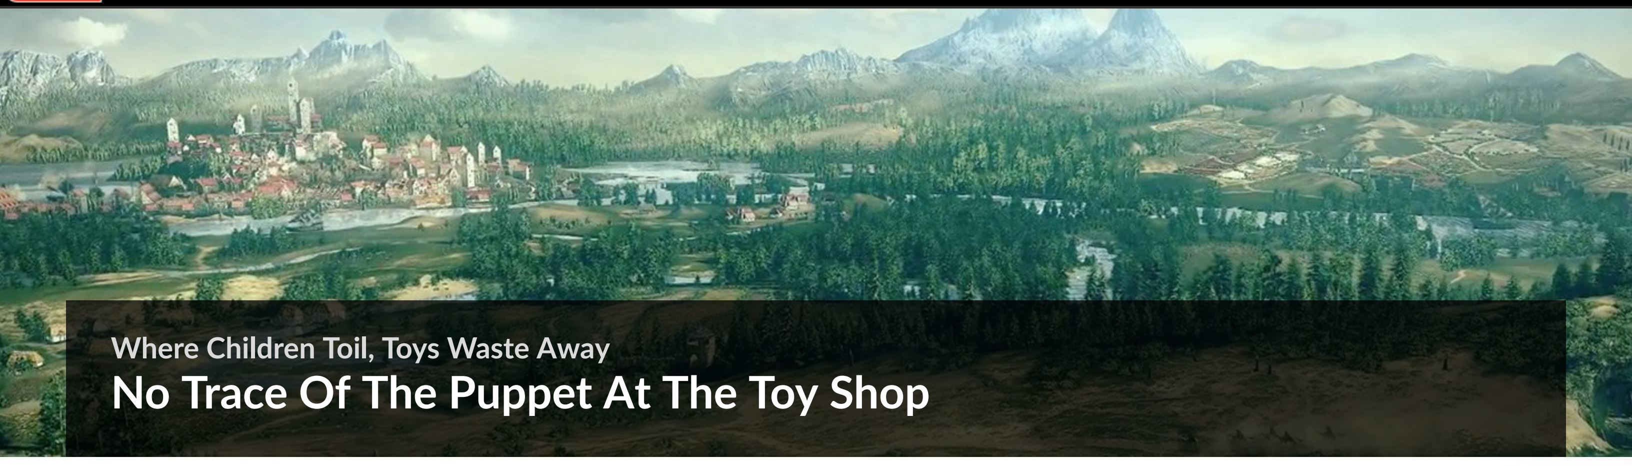
- (420 Crowns) Negotiate him down to around 420 Crowns.
- (Axii Delusion level 2) Or inform him you're not about to pay him.

Regis arrives just in time, as you might be thinking of strangling the Bootblack Boy. Appealing to the boy's innovative nature, he offers a special concoction to help clean more boots, in return for the location of Dettlaff's portside home. It has a red door.



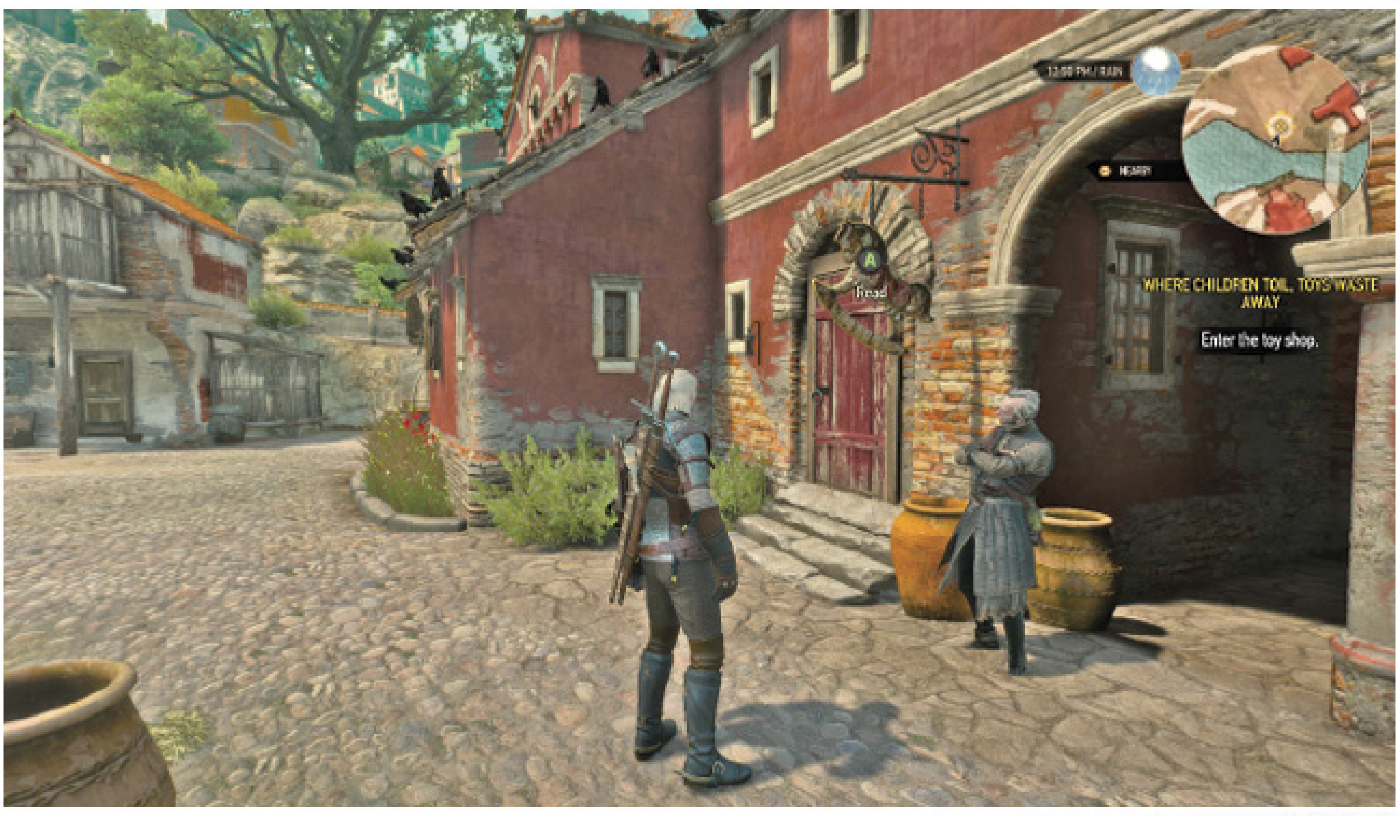
Where Children Toil, Toys Waste Away

No Trace Of The Puppet At The Toy Shop

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Regis through the city.
- Enter the toy shop.

Set off for a stroll down to the docks with Regis, following him to a small toy shop with the locked red door. It seems Regis missed his calling as a burglar; opening the residence with ease. Sniffing the air, Regis tells you Dettlaff was here recently. Time to conduct a sweep of the premises.



OBJECTIVES

- Search the toy shop using your Witcher Senses.
- Use your Witcher Senses to look for clues in the toy shop.

Use your Witcher Senses, and locate the following:

- Any of the toys on the ground floor of the property are old toys, and nothing more.

Ascend the stairs to the toy shop's attic; where Dettlaff has made his nest. Time to look around:

- There's a suspicious letter on a small crate to read. It is a letter to Dettlaff regarding his weakness for a "wench they call Rhenawedd."

The letter continues in the form of blackmail; Rhenawedd is to be tortured in a manner most foul unless five men from Beauclair are slain. This certainly gives you proof that Dettlaff isn't killing of his own accord. Optionally ask about the blackmailer, before inquiring about Rhenawedd. Regis tells you it is Dettlaff's human lover. Ask what happened to her, and why Dettlaff thought she'd gone missing. Afterward, optionally ask if Dettlaff tried to look for her. Then conclude that someone has actually kidnapped Rhenawedd this time.

Items: Suspicious letter

Continue your search of the attic, using your Witcher Senses:

- Over on the wall is the likeness of the woman, but a bit smudged. You've a feeling you've seen that face before. Wasn't she in the Palace Gardens earlier?
- In one corner are slips of paper with a name on each of them. It is a list of targets, written in ink dyed with cinnabarite!
- Over on the table are the tools of a toymaker.

Spend a few moments pondering the blackmailer and summing up your search. You can agree (or disagree) that the evidence exonerates Dettlaff. Whatever the evidence points to, the Duchess will need more convincing. Regis has another plan; to strip the blackmailers of their hold on Dettlaff by finding Rhenawedd. While Regis meets with Dettlaff, you must reconvene with the Duchess. The quest then concludes.

From the attic floor of the toy shop, descend down and out into the port, and run (or ride) westward, uphill through the main paved streets of Beauclair, ascending up and across the bridge, to the top of the hill and into the Palace grounds. Venture into the bailey, ascend some lavishly-carved steps to an exterior balcony, where Captain Damien isn't too happy with the violence that has followed your arrival. Answer him as you wish regarding the case, wait until both Damien and the Duchess have finished offering inaccurate vampire-killing advice. Then disagree with Damien regarding the assembling of a battue to defeat the vampire. After schooling them on the types of vampire, you can optionally mention this is no common "monster," and that you're set to find and talk to Dettlaff.

Her Illustrious Highness, Duchess Anna Henrietta

Captain Damien de la Tour

Benoit, the ducal sommelier

You explain that Dettlaff is being blackmailed. You can optionally mention that an innocent woman's been abducted and point out that the most important thing is to prevent further attacks. Before Damien can utter another ignorant comment, you show the Duchess the blackmailer's notes, mentioning the wine stain. The ducal sommelier is immediately summoned. In Toussaint, as you might have gathered, wine is sacred.

Benoit the sommelier studies the parchment, and is able to tell the stain comes from a Sangreal; the 1269 vintage. The Duchess is taken aback, as this wine was produced at Castel Ravello exclusively for the ducal table! Ask about the wine if you wish, before you grudgingly agree to accompany the Duchess (and Damien) to the vineyard to get to the bottom of this outrage. Feel free to prepare for this journey before agreeing to leave.

OBJECTIVES

- Search the wine cellar with Anna Henrietta.

The winery owner, Master Fabricio, is surprised by this visitation. Answer him how you wish, then quiz the wine master regarding the stolen Sangreal. Fabricio's worried responses result in the Duchess ordering an inspection of the Castel Ravello cellars. Along the way, Anna Henrietta informs you of Fabricio's past misfortunes, and her appointment of him from beggar to steward. Follow her down into the cellar where the search begins.

OBJECTIVES

- Read the wine register
- Find Sangreal from the 1269 vintage.

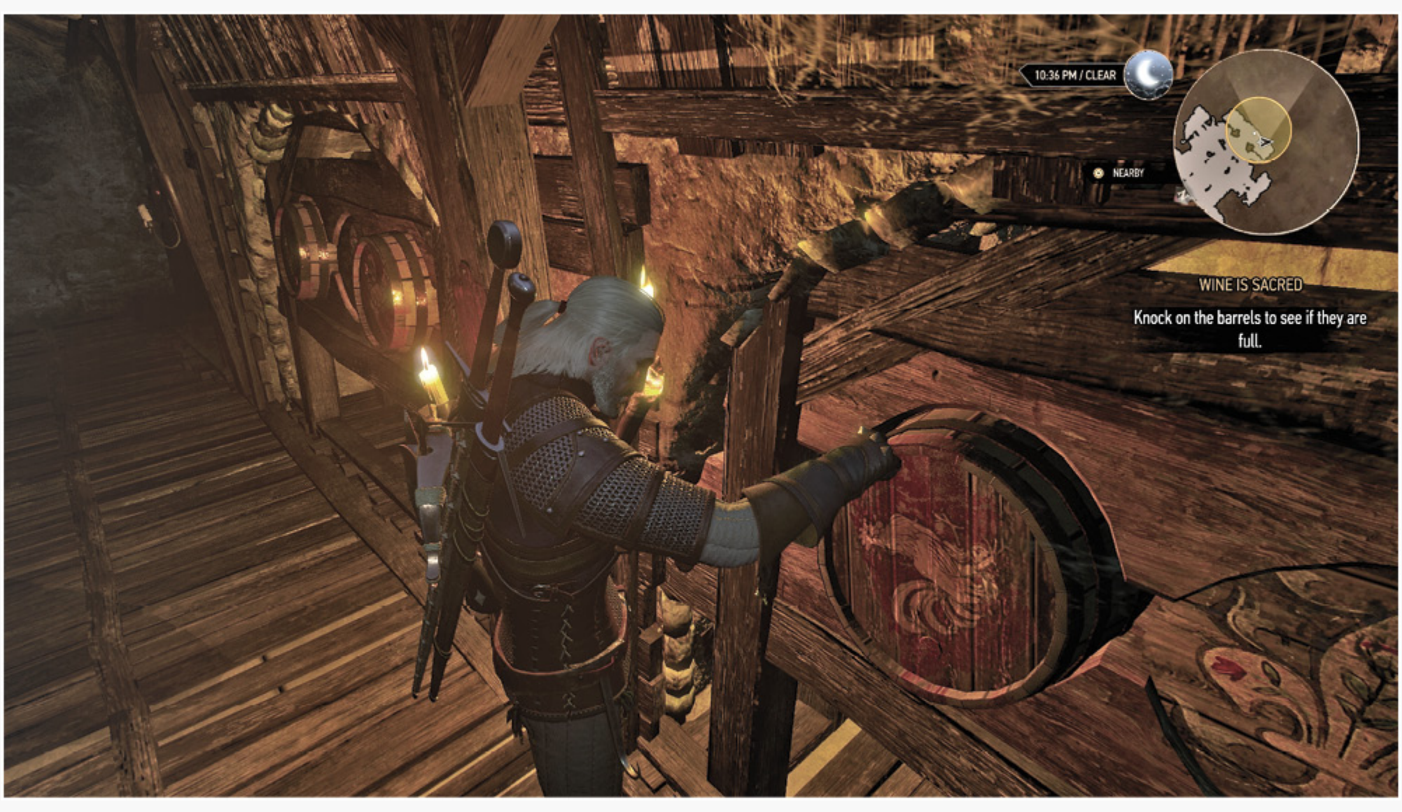
Master Fabricio

Conduct a thorough sweep of the premises, beginning with the wine ledger on the table just to the side of the entrance (use your Witcher Senses if you can't immediately spot it; all areas of interest glow red). This Vintner's log seems to be neat and thoroughly documented. Now to find the 1269 vintage that Benoit claimed the stain was from.

Though it isn't necessary, inspecting every parchment sign near an alcove cask allows you to view the different wines this place is storing. From the Fiorano (Dandelion's favorite) to the Pomino, the ground floor holds no Sangreal. Climb the wooden stairs to the upper alcoves, and work your way through the different Sangreal years to the far end of the wooden walkway, until you find the 1269 vintage.

OBJECTIVES

- Knock on the barrels to see if they are full.
- Find a tapping hammer.
- Find barrel taps.



Check the smaller barrels set into the three large archway alcoves. A total of five of these barrels must be inspected; knock each one. After tapping all five, it appears all the barrels are full. But are they full of Sangreal? It seems you require two pieces of precision equipment in order to find out. Descend down to the main cellar floor, and look for containers highlighted in red which contain the barrel tap and hammer you need. Now return to the upstairs alcove.

Items: Barrel tap, Wooden hammer

OBJECTIVES

- Tap the barrels for Anna Henrietta.

Broach the barrels in the Sangreal alcove, then step back and let Anna taste each one. One of the barrels has been tampered with! This isn't Sangreal; it's revolting, bitter plonk!

You both return to interrogate Master Fabricio, who eventually admits to selling a few barrels of Sangreal. It seems the Duchess doesn't pay him much and he desired the extra funds to purchase his ancestral grounds. Chime in as you wish during this conversation. Fabricio reveals a few weeks ago, a rich nobleman approached him, suggesting an enterprise involving the selling of Sangreal to an unknown party. The nobleman was the intermediary, and Fabricio reveals him to be tall, black-haired, and speaking with a foreign lilt. He has already made arrangements for the next shipment. You agree with the Duchess to set a trap; this Cintrian noble could be the blackmailer! A visit to Fort Astre is agreed upon.

CORRECT COMBAT PREPARATION

There's bound to be a number of ne'er-do-wells at Fort Astre Ruins, so feel free to meditate and prepare before agreeing to journey with Damien and his troops.

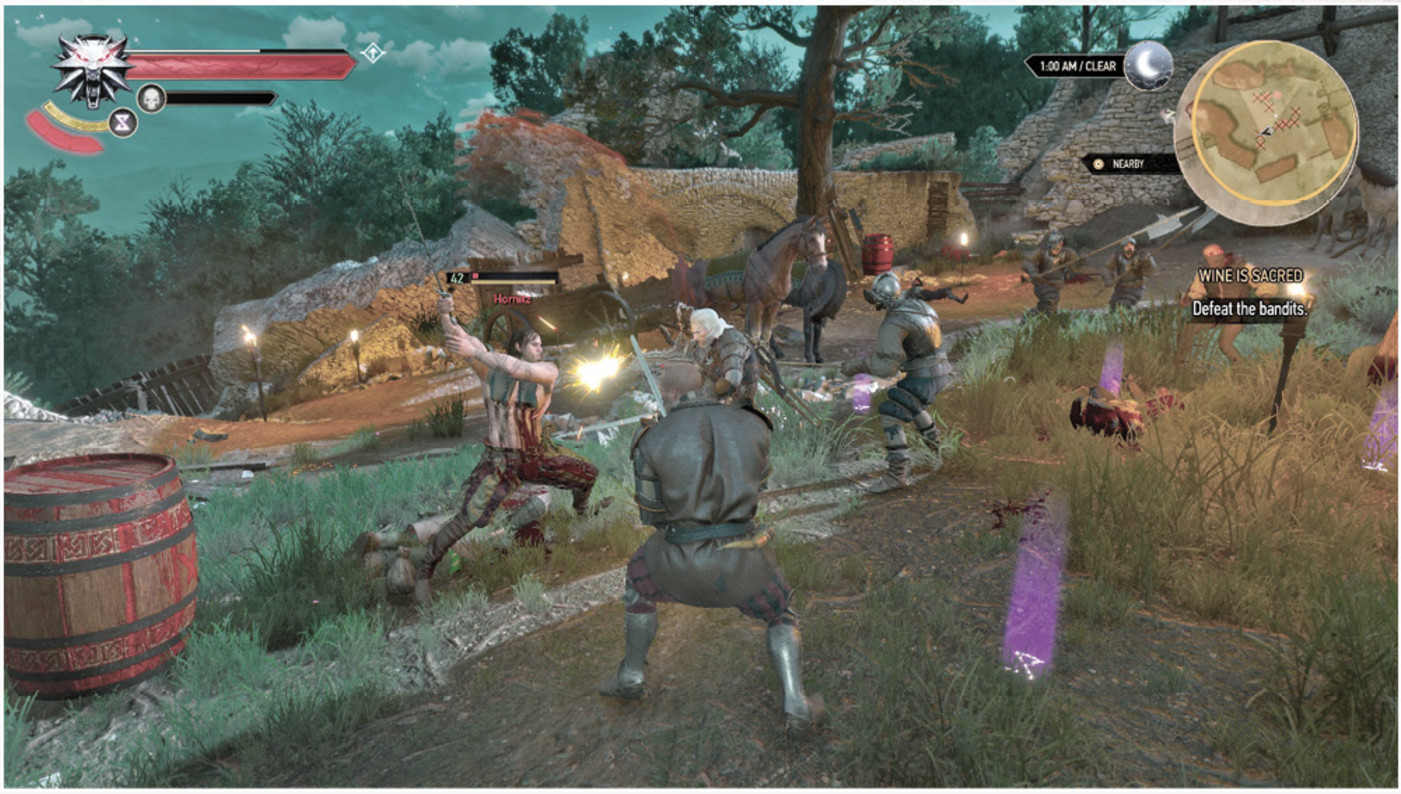
Wine Is Sacred

His Name Is Dog. They Say He Ploughed Your Mother.

OBJECTIVES

- Tell Damien when you're ready for the ambush.
- Defeat the Bandits.

A few hours later, at Fort Astre Ruins, a group of Bandits is surprised that their wine cart arrives with you driving the horses. Surprise number two occurs when one of them receives a crossbow bolt to the shoulder, before he can gain the upper hand against you. Surprise number three is revealed when Damien's pikemen appear to help you. Now engage in the melee, dropping a dozen of these Bandits and their burly leader, Hornitz. Remember there are a number of explosive barrels sitting around the combat area, which can really light up the place (and help nullify the bandit horde) if burned by Igni!



You thank Damien for his proficient aiming, and before you interrogate one of the captured scoundrels, Damien admits he was initially wrong to distrust you. Answer him as you wish. Naturally, the Duchess is here, risking her life, and attempts to gain knowledge from the Bandit. The thug's response is some pretty obscene language about being intimate with Damien's family members. That is, until the Duchess recommends the bandit to act as bait for the Beast of Beauclair!

This changes the Bandit's tune. Answer her as you wish, and then you calm the panicking foe enough to (optionally) ask where the wine barrels were going, and also who hired his band of not-so merry men. It seems the Bandit leader (named Hornitz) only knew the drop-off point, while the man who hired them is known only as "The Cintrian." The bandit is disposed of, and the Duchess orders Damien back to the Palace, while you and she head to the guard post near the port. You can meet her there immediately, or on your own time. When you reach the Duchess, this quest concludes.

While you wait at the guard post, the Duchess seems jittery. Answer her as you wish regarding the Cintrian, until Damien arrives, revealing you are fighting not one man, but a whole organization! His troops were attacked, and a hefty bounty placed on your head. Answer as you wish. However, the port warehouse where the wine was delivered has been identified, and although the Cintrian man remains a mystery, Damien's sources uncovered a woman with the Cintrian is none other than Cecilia Bellante, a gifted singer. Furthermore, a chambermaid in the service of Cecilia (who hasn't been found yet) claimed her mistress is to meet a Cintrian tonight, at a reception over at The Mandragora. Optionally ask what that is if you wish, before agreeing that nabbing the Cintrian is the next plan. However, discretion is the key to victory. You are to enter the reception at the Mandragora in the Upper Town. The Duchess instructs you to don appropriate attire, and meet her there.

PREPARATIONS FOR A PARTY

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Put on clothes Anna Henrietta will consider appropriate for the soiree.

Pierre the Tailor

Prior to visiting the evening's soiree, you have the option to dress up in something a little more becoming, rather than the sweat-and-blood soaked armor ensemble you're currently wearing. There are a number of options. You can don any attire you have previously purchased from the following Tailor merchants, or visit them to purchase some attire:

- Head to the Tailor's Workshop close to the palace bridge, just northwest of The Gran'place, visit Pierre the tailor, and don an elegant Beauclair outfit (Doublet, boots, and pantaloons for around 600 crowns).

- Journey to Novigrad, and visit Eilhal the Tailor, purchasing something Nilfgaardian in nature from his collection.
- Don the Ornate Robe you came across in your Hearts of Stone journeys.
- Or you can simply ignore the Duchess' request, and turn up looking like a white-haired monster hunter, in your usual garb.

Each outfit garners a different response from the Duchess (and an elegant Beauclair outfit is automatically given and worn if you turn up unchanged, meaning you might wish to forgo the expenses of the tailor!).

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Anna Henrietta in Mountebank Alley.

Once you're suited and booted for the festivities, take a stroll to the alleyway close to the soiree, around the corner from the Herbalist shop and across from Lady Orianna's Estate (just northwest from the Metinna Gate signpost). Be on the lookout for groups of thugs hunting Geralt around the city. After nightfall, the Duchess arrives, gives you a mask to wear (which you can ask about if you wish), before you agree to head inside. The plan is to find the Cintrian by locating his partner, Cecilia, first. Speak to the doorman (asking about the evening's performances if you wish), before mentioning Cecilia Bellante's name. Though the doorman can't tell you where she is, he does give you a clue; seek the Koviri orchid. Stepping inside and onto a stone balcony, Anna points out the owner of this property is Orianna, after which the search for Cecilia begins.

Peer into the northern alcoves and spot a slumped drunk. Another alcove along the northern gallery of arches features a forlorn fellow with his head in his hands, crestfallen at being described as pretentious. He has very little to offer you except a look into the mind of a man with a deflated ego.

OPTIONAL ALCOVE (SOUTH): UPTIGHT ARTISTS

The Man From Cintra

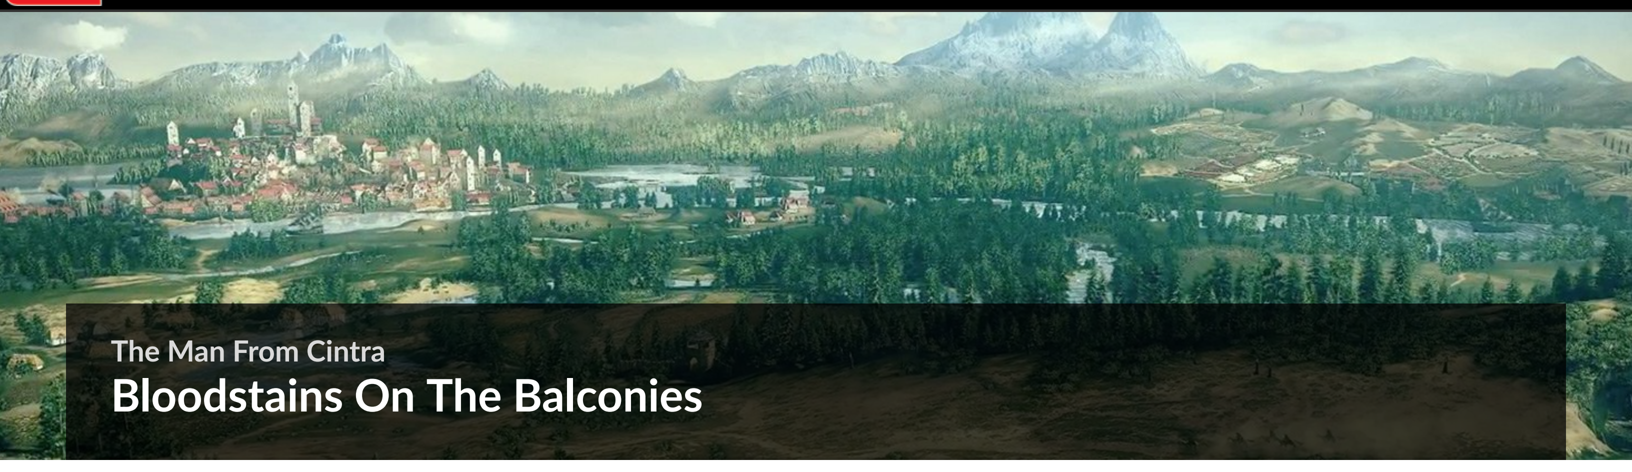
Draw Me Like One Of Your Zerrikanian Girls

OBJECTIVES

- Search the alcoves for a woman with a Koviri orchid in her hair.

Dorian Vilesse

Assuming you've finished (or ignored) your new career as an avant-garde artist, the premises need to be searched for a woman with a Koviri orchid. Walk along the long gallery of arches, until you spot an alcove on your left that you can enter. You and Anna stumble into a painter's studio, with a model wearing such an orchid, and very little else. Optionally compliment the artist on his portrait, then ask the model if she is Cecilia Bellante. It appears Cecilia tossed the flower into the audience after her performance, and the model caught it. But she does remember seeing a nobleman; he gave Cecilia a heart-shaped box, in fact. They were last seen at the refreshment tables.



The Man From Cintra

Bloodstains On The Balconies

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to search the refreshment tables.
- Use your Witcher Senses to follow the scent.

Stroll over to the lavish circular food tables, and begin to search the area for clues regarding the last known location of Cecilia and the Cintrian:

- You can optionally inspect the names of the three paintings with a decidedly modern design.
- There's a lute leaning against a support pillar. The instrument is a little like Dandelion's.
- Another table has a love-letter on a napkin; treacly refuse.
- An empty, heart-shaped box sits on one of the tables. Cecilia must have left it behind. However, the scent from the box still lingers.
- Follow the scent trail from the tables, around the long gallery of arches, passing the painter, and around to the balcony overlooking Toussaint. Head right (south), into the Mandragora building itself.

Your path is blocked by a doorman, but when the Duchess mentions the need to figure out a way in, the doorman recognizes her voice. Optionally ask the man for his discretion, then ask if he's seen Cecilia. Apparently, she's in her dressing room with the nobleman. The man's description fits that of the Cintrian. While the Duchess stays by the door, you're allowed upstairs. Continue to follow the scent trail up the steps, across the hallway, and into Cecilia's chamber.

- Cecilia's corpse is bleeding out, and the murderer left a bloody handprint.

- Follow the prints to a ladder, climbing it to an upper balcony, and into a top-floor bedroom. Your objective updates.

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to search the room and find out what happened there.

Make a lengthy inspection of this new chamber, and find the following clues:

- Over on the wall is a broken mirror; someone slammed into it before sinking to the floor.
- On a side table is an empty inkwell, knocked over and turned toward the room.
- A painting with a cut canvas hangs over the table with spilled ink. Close to the door lies a hunting knife.
- A wall sconce is bent and smeared with blood. Did someone try to grab it?
- There's blood on one of the window frames. Did someone climb or fall out?
- Bloodstains on the checkered floor near the bed.
- Nearby on a dressing table is a jewelry box with a broken lock; picked open, you reckon. Next to it is a precious stone to examine. It has a bloody fingerprint on it; the thief came for this item. There are tiny chain links next to it; signs of a struggle.

Examine

You surmise that there was a fight with a thief, who was surprised while searching this room. An ensuing struggle ended with the Cintrian being forced out of the window. It seems Cecilia was not the only victim.

Items: Decorated Hunting Knife, Valuable Jewel

Lady Orianna (human form)

The doorman arrives with Orianna herself, who orders Cecilia's body removed. She recommends you all sit, and she will tell you everything she knows. You all retire to Orianna's private balcony where she reveals she caught the Cintrian rifling through her possessions. She attacked him, striking his head on a picture frame before he drew a knife.

She managed to knock the weapon from his hand and push him, causing him to fall out of the window. That's some impressive strength and dexterity! Optionally mention the fellow's impudence, before revealing your hypothesis for what the thief came here for.

You produce the jewel you found, and Anna Henrietta is shocked; that's the Heart of Toussaint! She claims she bought it years ago. The jewel's importance is revealed as Anna tells you it is her family heirloom once thought lost. It seems you aren't seeking the Cintrian thief, but rather his employer. To this end, the hunting knife you found may hold a clue; it has an emblem on the hilt. The Duchess recognizes it as a crest used by the lords of Dun Tynne. Ask about the family if you wish (the family's last heir, Roderick, recently restored the castle from ruins), before agreeing to investigate the Dun Tynne estate.

The doorman interrupts your talk, leaving you and Anna to speak in hushed tones; optionally about Orianna, as well as talking of the drawing of the jewel found in the thief's tool bag; sketched on the same paper the victims' names were written on. You're beginning to see the wine and the jewel were both linked intrinsically to Anna herself. The Duchess then reveals her own sister could be among the schemers! Banished from the duchy when they were children, you can ask about her sister's involvement, and reasons for Syanna's removal in the first place. Your next task is to find the Duchess's sister. The Duchess tells you that Syanna can't be harmed. You can either promise her you'll see no harm comes to Syanna, or that you'll see.

Madame Orianna returns, bringing two highly-unexpected guests with her; Regis and Dettlaff! They are lending their combined resources to your hunt. Apparently, Orianna has known Regis for ages. Answer her as you wish, before Dettlaff pipes up regarding a purely theoretical reason a monster might kill for; "when loved ones are at risk and require protection" is the example he gives. Answer as you wish.

Emiel Regis Rohellec Terzieff-Godefroy (human form)

Dettlaff van der Eretein (human form)

You excuse yourself and accompany Regis to obtain another bottle of wine. You have two optional conversation choices to try: asking about coincidence and inquiring about how he knows Orianna. Then mention you know the blackmailers' location and now both the Duchess' sister, and Dettlaff's lover must be extricated from the Dun Tynne castle!

Back at the banquet table, the Duchess bids everyone farewell, and you speak to her in private. Optionally ask whether Dettlaff told her anything about himself, before remarking about the interesting evening you've had. The Duchess then informs you that her guardsmen are to support you in the forthcoming infiltration of Dun Tynne castle. You are to meet them at Count de la Croix's mill. The quest then concludes.

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: The Man from Cintra, Main Quest: The Night of Long Fangs

ENEMIES: Dun Tynne Guards, Roderick of Dun Tynne, Cael, Peeps, Nazairi Bandits, Iron Borg

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Damien at Count de la Croix's mill after midnight.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Blood and Wine: Main Quest: The Man from Cintra.

CORRECT COMBAT PREPARATION

The assault on Dun Tynne requires a good amount of battling, so feel free to meditate and prepare before agreeing to journey with Damien and his forces. Also remember to change from your evening wear to something more "armored," before you go!

Captain Damien de la Tour

Descend from the Palace, down through the city streets, then across the bridge to the water-side location of Count de la Croix's Mill. Damien and two of his men, having arrived at the mill at midnight, await Geralt. Damien has formulated a two-point plan of attack; to find Her Grace's sister, and capture the men who blackmailed the vampire. Damien points to a central keep, which you need to reach. Roderick's men include his own forces, with an additional group of mercenaries. This is likely to be a bloodbath. You decide to attempt both objectives simultaneously; your plan is to sneak into Dun Tynne, find the sister, and ensure her safety.

OBJECTIVES

- Search Dun Tynne for Syanna and Rhena.

You ride to Castle Dun Tynne, hop over the wall, and introduce yourself to four of the castle guards. Slay them in the immediate area; then head to the gatehouse archway where two more Dun Tynne guards need to be slaughtered. Head roughly southeast, through the gatehouse archway.

SLOW SPEED AHEAD: NOT FAST AND DEAD

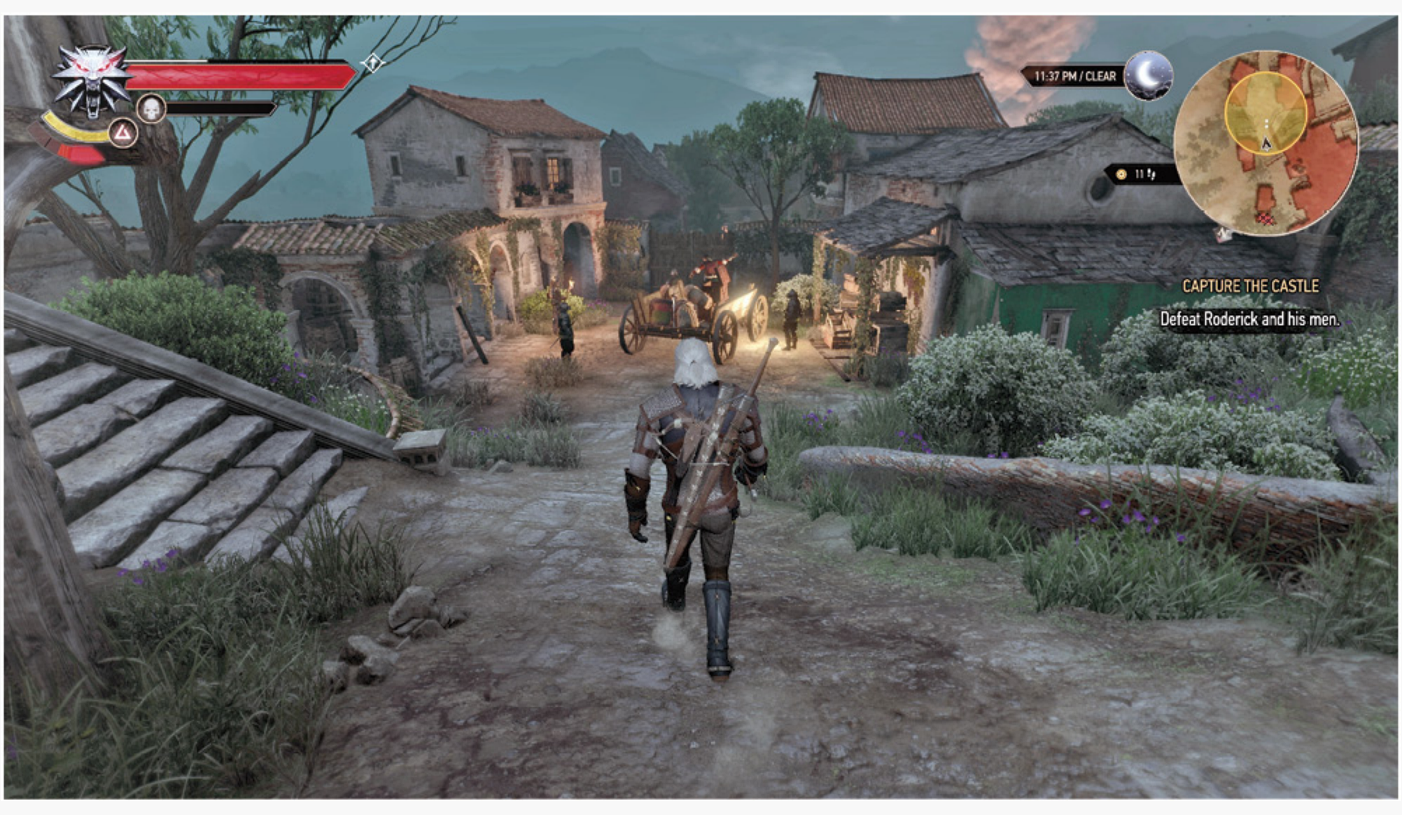
The following massacre occurs as you wade through opposition forces during your storming of Castle Dun Tynne. It is imperative you take your time, battling each foe you see (using the mini-map to guide you), rather than racing through the fortification, as you can be easily swamped if you're too hasty. See the gameplay scene to see some of the unexpected endings of those involved.

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Roderick and his men.

Roderick of Dun Tynne

Emerge from the gatehouse and head along the paved thoroughfare, stopping to remove a trio of guards before reaching a cart near a wooden gate and small belltower. A further six guards, including Roderick himself, are milling about the cart. Offer no mercy to the armored enemies, but temporarily stop your bloodletting when Roderick (who is still alive after your beating) begs you for mercy. Ask him about the Cintrian's forces, as well as the female hostage. He informs you they are all in the Keep; Syanna is in the top floor of the tower. He knows nothing of a hostage.



After answering your questions, you can:

- Give him something to press against his wound to staunch the bleeding, saving his life.
- Answer "not my problem," and leave Roderick to die.

CAPTURE THE CASTLE
Defeat the guards and reach Dun Tynne's keep.

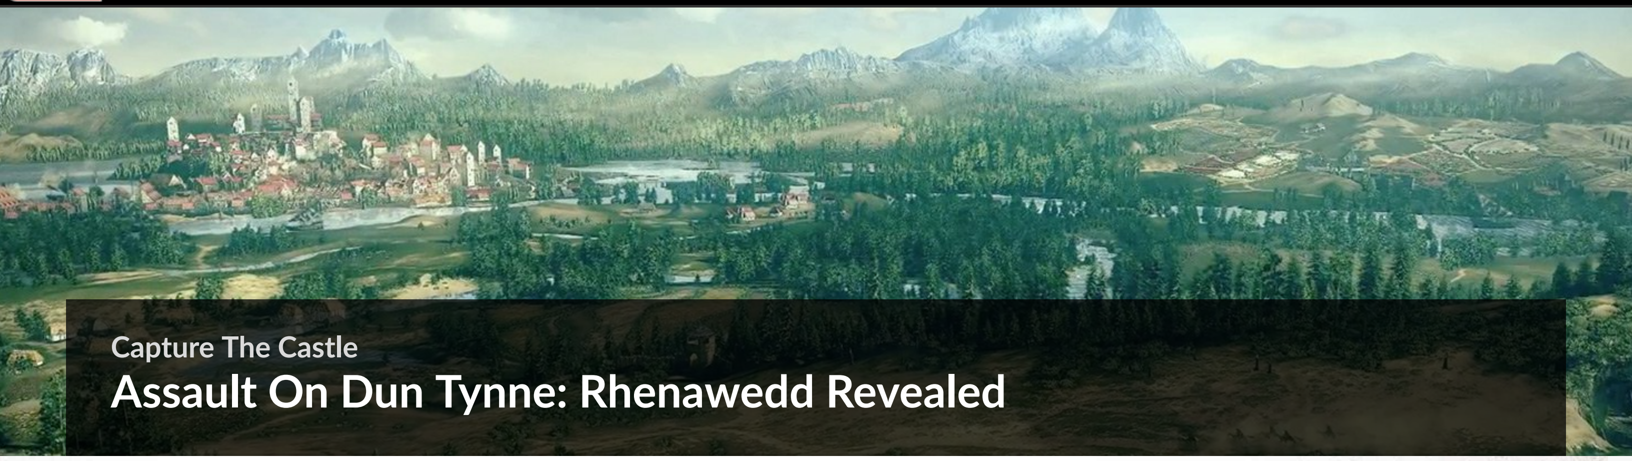
Head through the open gates, into a bailey courtyard where the Dun Tynne troops are fighting off Damien’s forces. Continue along the paved pathway, slicing down one confused guard, and then a group of Nazairi Bandits. Watch out as one of them is a particularly tough Iron Borg! Check the lower stepped area so you aren’t attacked from behind. If you choose not to engage the Iron Borg, and instead hide, you will later find the Borg at the Dyn Tynne main square.

Continue your merry way along the buttress-walled battlement balcony, bringing down another set of Nazairi bandit troops. To the right of the balcony, some Nazairians work to free the dogs from a burning kennel. When you reach the circular veranda, a large number of castle crossbowmen waylay you.

Dettlaff van der Eretein

A little unnerved by a flock of ravens landing on the tile roof, the Dun Tynne troops are surprised as a cloud of mist descends on their forces. Unable to see, the enemy hears only the screaming of their own. When the mist clears, the entire squad of foes lies dead, the last of the troops receiving a mauling at the claws of Dettlaff and Regis, who claim they are here to help.

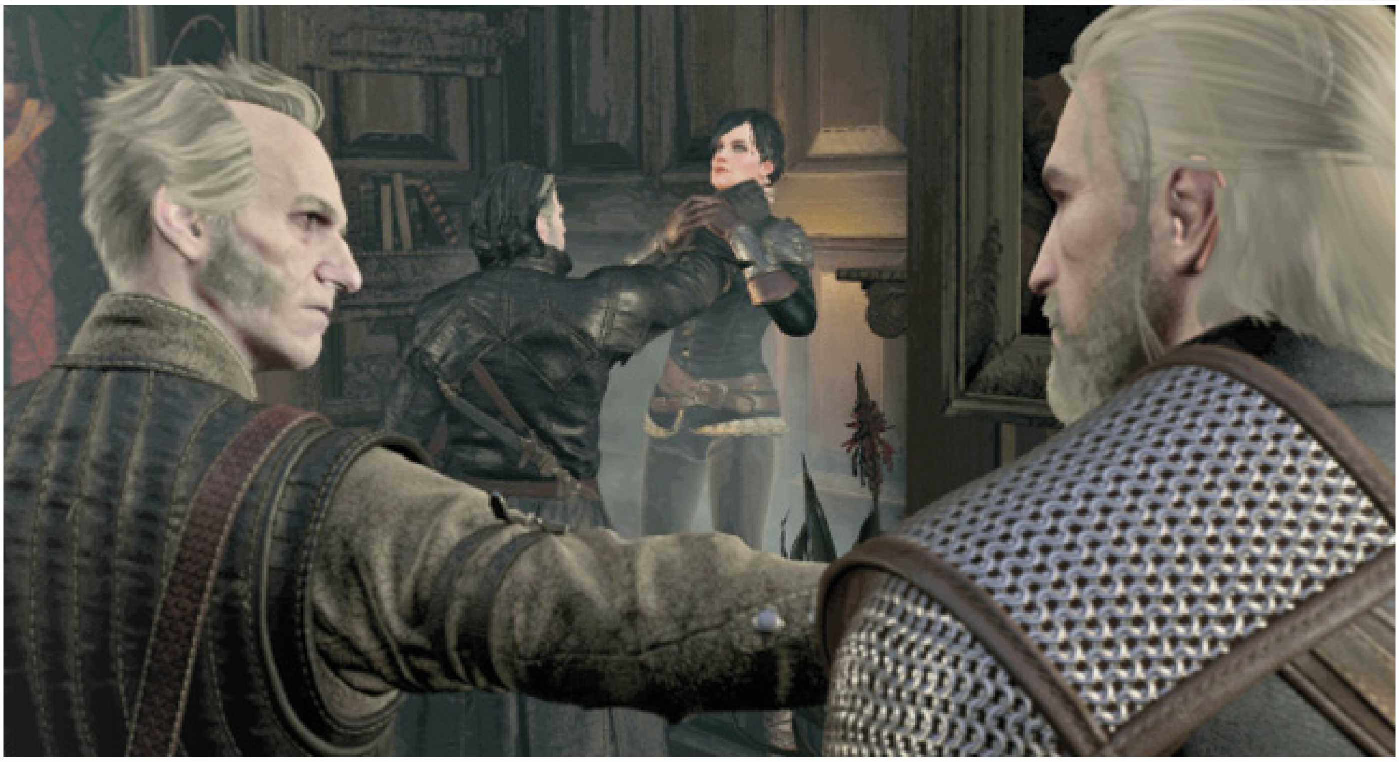
This solves the problem of the troops on the veranda, allowing you to push into the inner courtyard. There’s little time to admire the purple shrubbery; engage around eight mercenary bandits, watching as your vampire friends make extremely quick and short work of anyone you’re not fighting. Turn north, advancing on the keep itself; expect around a dozen more troops (including some troublesome bowmen); amid the chaos and bloodshed, your friends provide invaluable support, so check your mini-map to ensure you’re mopping up foes without racing past any. Check the formal gardens and fountain and slay any stragglers.



Capture The Castle

Assault On Dun Tynne: Rhenawedd Revealed

After the blood has flowed like wine, you meet up with Dettlaff and Regis, and the three of you head into the keep, and up the tower. After easily removing the guard to his beloved's cell, Dettlaff is reunited. But what of Syanna? Regis and you speak about where the Duchess' sister could be. When you interrogated Roderick, he says that he doesn't know anything about a kidnapping and tells you that the girl is in the Dun Tynne main building packing her things. It doesn't take a genius to work out Syanna and Dettlaff's beloved are the same person!



Dettlaff is both angry and incredulous when you explain Syanna was banished as a child, but recently returned and ran a bandit group from this location. Dettlaff was a useful plaything as part of a plan to get revenge on the people she blames for her fate. A clearly infuriated Dettlaff leaves abruptly after nearly throttling his now ex-lover; Regis hopes to a location where he can soothe his nerves.

Aftermath: Is Anyone Else Here A Vampire?!

Syanna says she will go to him. Answer how you wish. She is concerned Dettlaff might be furious enough to level an entire city, something he is more than capable of. Before this occurs, you exit the keep, meeting with the Duchess and Damien. Anna is shocked to see her estranged sibling, but Syanna greets her with resentment, snapping the olive branch Anna offers her. While Damien escorts Syanna to the Palace, the Duchess thanks you and vows to try Roderick for treason and blackmail.

Her demeanor changes when you answer (as you wish) regarding Roderick's lack of culpability in all of this, and revelations of Syanna's antics as chief architect of the recent knight slayings fall on deaf ears. When Regis lets slip that Dettlaff was the vampire in question, the Duchess becomes enraged that you kept this information from her. Though you have three days to bring Syanna and Dettlaff together (or face the destruction of Beauclair), the Duchess won't hear of it. She wants the head of the beast, and she's particularly forthright with this message. The quest (and your dressing down) then concludes.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Blood and Wine: Main Quest: Capture the Castle.

A few days pass. Both Regis and yourself are summoned to the Palace. You're empty-handed, having failed to find Dettlaff (or even a lead to his location). Answer Regis as you wish. On the highest balcony of the Palace, Palmerin is informing the Duchess that the population is demanding Syanna be punished for her crimes. She refuses (in no uncertain terms); Syanna is not about to be lynched. Palmerin warns of an uprising, but Anna Henrietta waves off this threat; the accursed vampire must be removed from Toussaint first.

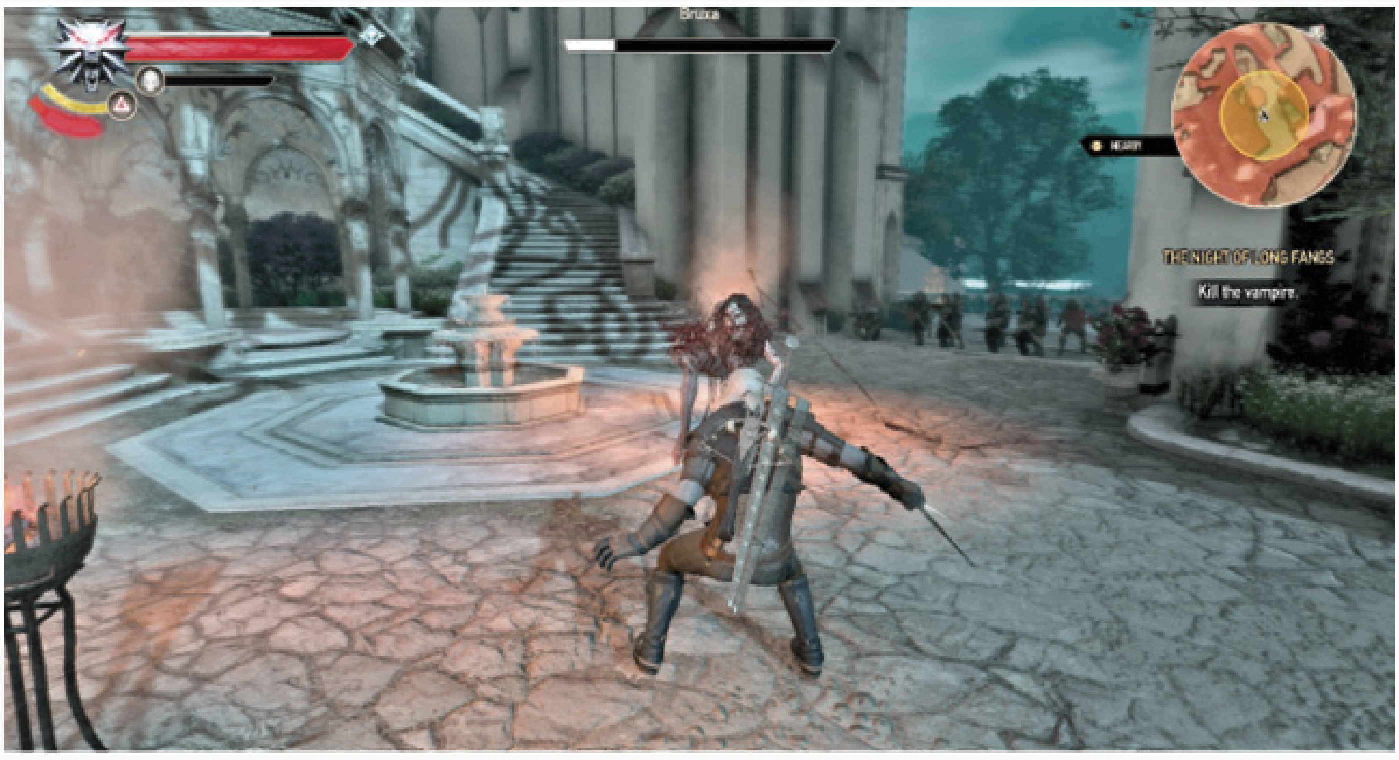
The Duchess' patience is at an end. She asks curtly where Dettlaff is. Answer her as you wish. After a fox-hunting analogy, you can reply with a subservient or flippant response (as you wish), irking the Duchess. It is almost a relief, then, when Regis' explanation of Syanna's actions is interrupted by a crawling, badly-wounded guardsman. Vampires are attacking the city!

As the bells toll, a helm comes rolling down the stone steps. A Bruxa has infiltrated the highest perches of the Palace! While Regis escorts the Duchess away, you step up to the plateau, and must engage the Bruxa in combat. Make short work of this sinewy bloodsucker, using the same tactics you attempted during the Bruxa combat back in Corvo Bianco.



The Night Of Long Fangs (Part 1)

Vampire And Princess: Born Under The Black Sun

Regis appears after the bout. A serious plan is called for. You tell Regis he mentioned something about drawing Dettlaff out; a method too dangerous to use thus far. After Regis explains the method is likely to be much more than simply “dangerous,” he explains there is an alternate way to reach Dettlaff: To simply agree to his demand and free Syanna. Optionally ask whether Dettlaff still believes Syanna is innocent, before asking exactly what Regis suggests you do. You’re sure that Anna Henrietta won’t agree to this. To which, Regis replies it isn’t necessary to mention it to her. Ask about guaranteeing Syanna’s safety, and where she’s being held. You reckon Damien might know where Syanna is.

However, the other plan is still a possibility; ask how you could get Dettlaff to reveal himself. Regis once again expresses an extreme reticence to this idea, before explaining one of the Unseen—an ancient and powerful vampire—has a lair nearby. As vampire society is a gerontocracy, and Toussaint is this Unseen Elder’s territory, the Unseen could summon Dettlaff without delay. Ask why the Elder hasn’t stopped Dettlaff already if you wish, then inquire how the Unseen must be convinced to help. After more of Regis’ endearing pomposity, he mentions that Madame Orianna knows where the Unseen Elder is. After more discussion, Regis asks your choice. You can:

- Consider freeing Syanna, after taking to Damien.
- Lean toward finding Orianna and the Unseen Elder.
- Or mention you need time to think about it (which is recommended).

QUESTING DECISIONS

The choices you make have a major and lasting effect throughout the rest of the Main Quest in Toussaint. If you are considering freeing Syanna, choose the “Path to the Sister” objectives. If you are considering an audience with the Unseen Elder, choose the “Path to the Unseen” objectives (and additional quest).

In addition, some optional activities, such as those during Witcher Contract: Big Game Hunter and Secondary Quest: Turn and Face the Strange, are put on hold until the vampire threat in the city has been quelled.

COMBAT DECISIONS: BLOODSUCKERS IN BEAUCLAIR!

At this point, pandemonium is playing out across the city of Beauclair. Vampires stalk the city streets, and the population is fleeing in all directions. As you navigate through the thoroughfares, expect to encounter the following Lesser Vampires:

Alps.

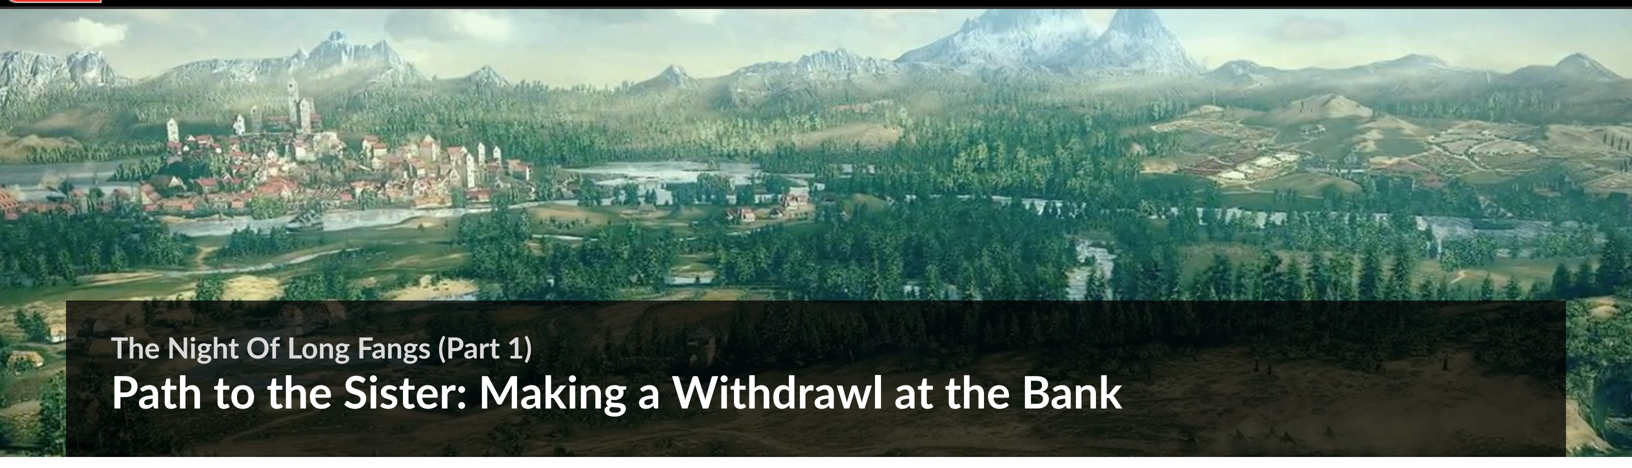
Bruxas.

Garkains.

Fleders.

Katakans.

Engage them as you wish; usually these fights are mandatory if you’re completing a nearby objective.



The Night Of Long Fangs (Part 1)

Path to the Sister: Making a Withdrawl at the Bank

OBJECTIVES

- Find Damien and ask him where Syanna is being kept.

WARNING! MAJOR QUEST DECISION AHEAD!

Though you have one of two quest decisions with major ramifications to make, this collection of objectives can be completed without stopping you from making other inquiries. The "point of no return" will be flagged to aid your decision-making.

Leave the palace, battling through the city streets, fighting a Fleder (and optionally a Katakan) before you reach the bridge, and dodging the mass of fleeing peasantry as you cross the bridge. Ahead, a Garkain is prowling the main thoroughfare, now blocked with a fiery barricade. Slay it before heading right (south), down a sloping cobblestone street where more burning carts greet you, along with a troublesome Bruxa. Continue running along the stone balconies with the lake to your right, descending the tiered neighborhoods, down into the next investigation area. A large and sinewy Fleder is prowling the square; dispatch it quickly, then look around for signs of Damien.

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to track down Damien.
- Follow Damien's unit using your Witcher Senses.

The town square where you fought one of the lesser vampires has a series of clues to look for, utilize your Witcher Senses to spot each of them:

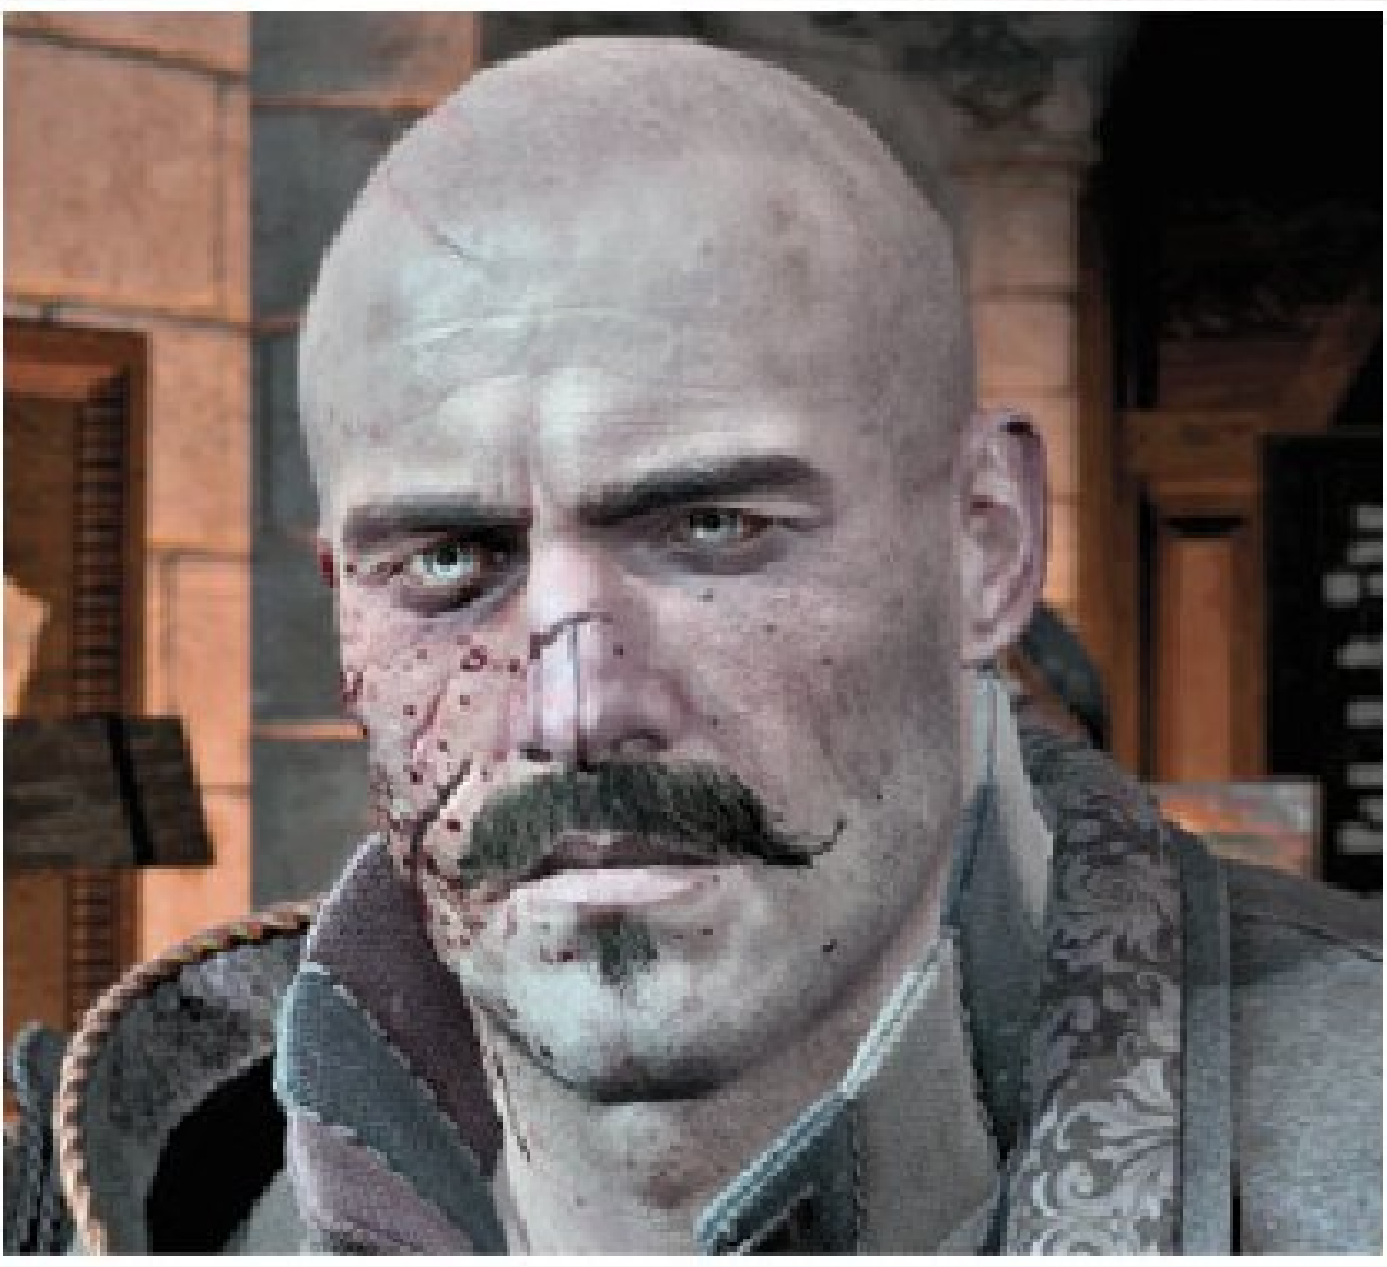
- A corpse on the street, and another slumped by the well, show signs of being clawed; something sliced through steel armor like butter.
- There's another corpse. Damn it.
- Another corpse reveals the vampire's blow didn't kill him; he bled to death afterward. There are bodies littered across this area.
- There are footprints; Damien's men broke formation and ran. Follow the prints along a side street and up some steps. Watch for a burning townsperson; use Aard to extinguish the flames (though it is too late to save him).
- At the top of the steps is a barricade next to the Perfumery.
- Over the barricade is another corpse; this one fell on his face.

Dash along the street, following the footprints, until you encounter an Alp, and possibly another Bruxa. Introduce them to the sharp end of your sword. Then turn left (north), and continue to track the footprints.

- As you enter another town square if you didn't help Guillame and Vivianne yet, you spy the body of Guillame. Poor, foolish lad.

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the vampire attacking Damien's unit.



Captain Damien de la Tour

Enter the town square, where a Fleder is prowling the area. You deduce that Damien is hiding in the bank (judging by the barricades (and cluster of forces) to your left). Defeat the Fleder in vicious combat. A wounded Damien appears from the bank, incredulous at your combat prowess. You request Damien retreat from the city, but his duty is to protect Beauclair. After a spot of convincing, you explain to Damien how to defeat these lower vampires (silver and vampire oil, bombs with silver splinters). He thanks you, and hopes you return with the head of the wretch that caused this bedlam. Answer Damien with either conversation option, then make insistent conversation answers to Damien, before walking away; prompting him to reveal that Syanna is locked away in the palace playroom.

When you reach Regis (where you left him after he escorted the Duchess away), he's made sure his brethren won't be sniffing around the area. At this point, Main Quest: The Night of Long Fangs (Part 2) becomes accessible. Continue this quest.

WARNING! MAJOR QUEST DECISION AHEAD!

The conversation with Regis ends with you being able to access the Palace playroom. However, the objective to speak to Orianna regarding the location of the Unseen is still available, and continues to be until you finish an inspection of the playroom itself. This is the "point of no return;" you have to pick a choice and stick with it!

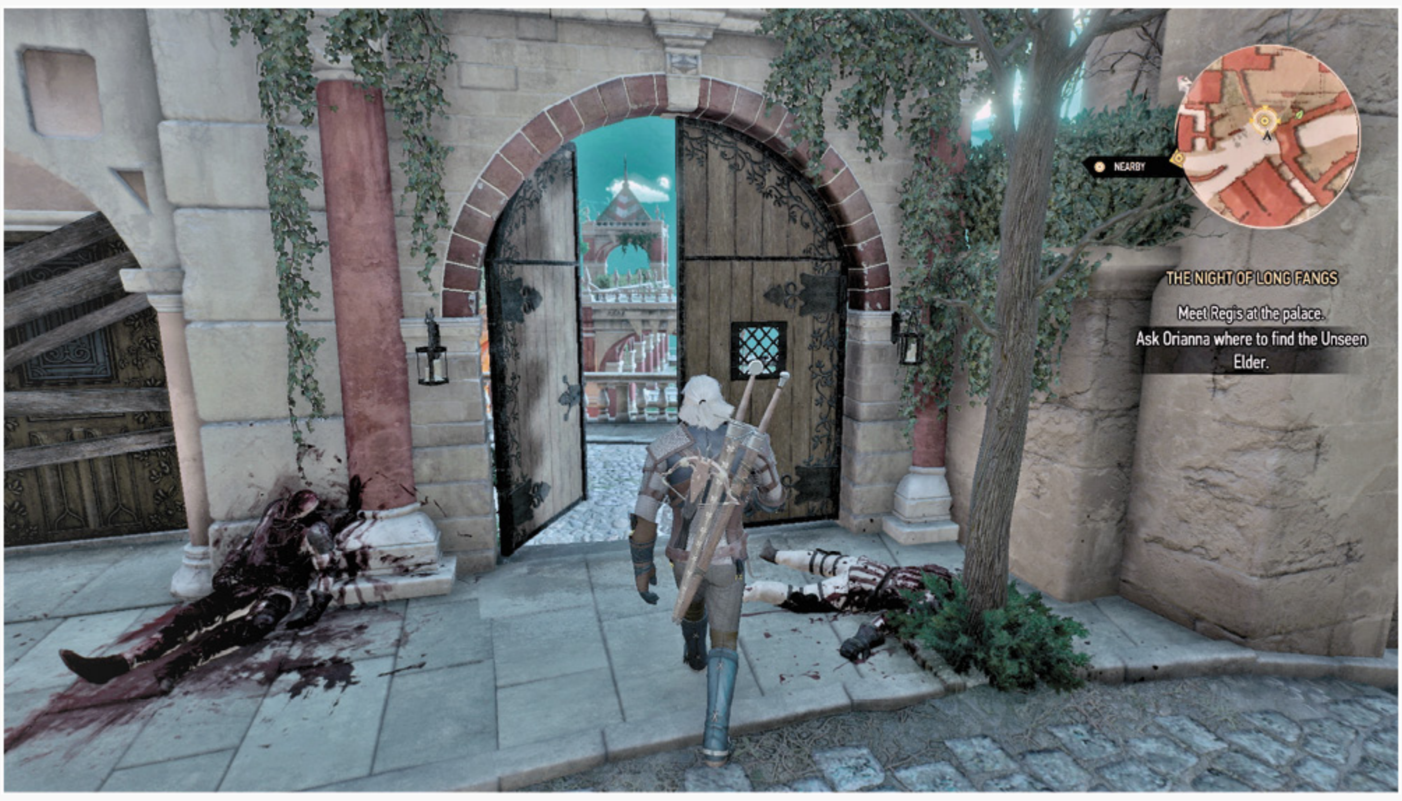
Lady Orianna

As you should have discovered by now that Lady Orianna is a close friend of Regis and shares his affection for blood, she is the perfect person to ask the location of the Unseen Elder. Leave the palace, battling through the city streets, dodging the mass of fleeing peasantry as you cross the bridge, heading right (south) into a town square to make short work of any Lesser Vampires prowling the townsfolk. Continue down the thoroughfares, cross the market square, and hightail it to Lady Orianna's Estate (further vampiric incursions are likely to slow your progress). Just before you reach the doors of Orianna's residence, you can spy the body of Guillaume, who perished fighting in the city, if you didn't help him and Vivienne yet. Poor, foolish lad.



THE NIGHT OF LONG FANGS

Meet Regis at the palace.

Ask Orianna where to find the Unseen Elder.

Upon entering the Mandragora residence, you spy Madame Orianna attempting to leave. She finds the current conditions in the city a little "irritating." Call her on this comment if you wish, before asking about the Unseen Elder. She tells you there are simpler ways to commit suicide. She eventually agrees to your request. But only after you've tended to a certain matter for her. Answer her as you wish; there's a quid pro quo before you can go to the Unseen's lair. This involves you helping Orianna at the orphanage she owns. This quest pauses, and Main Quest: Blood Simple (see below) begins.

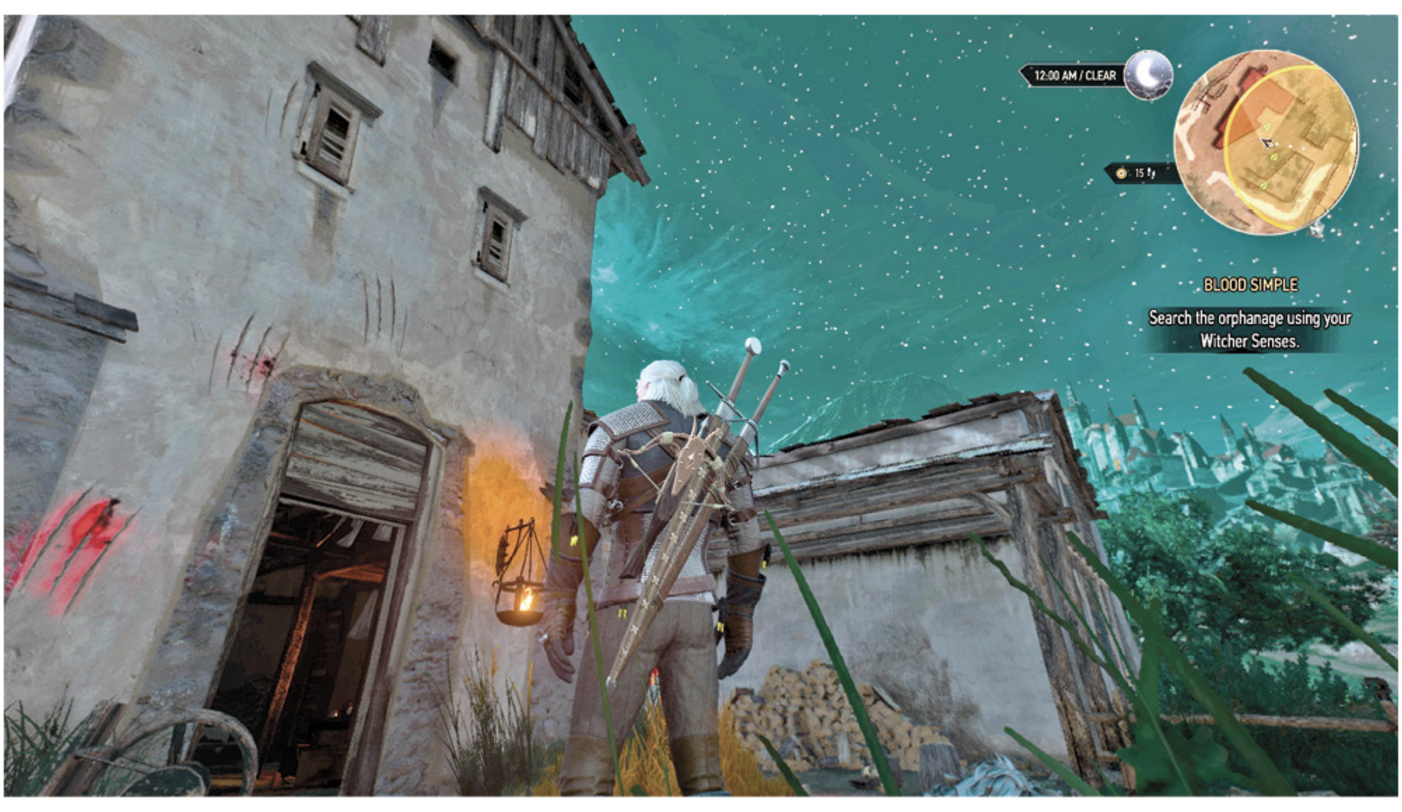
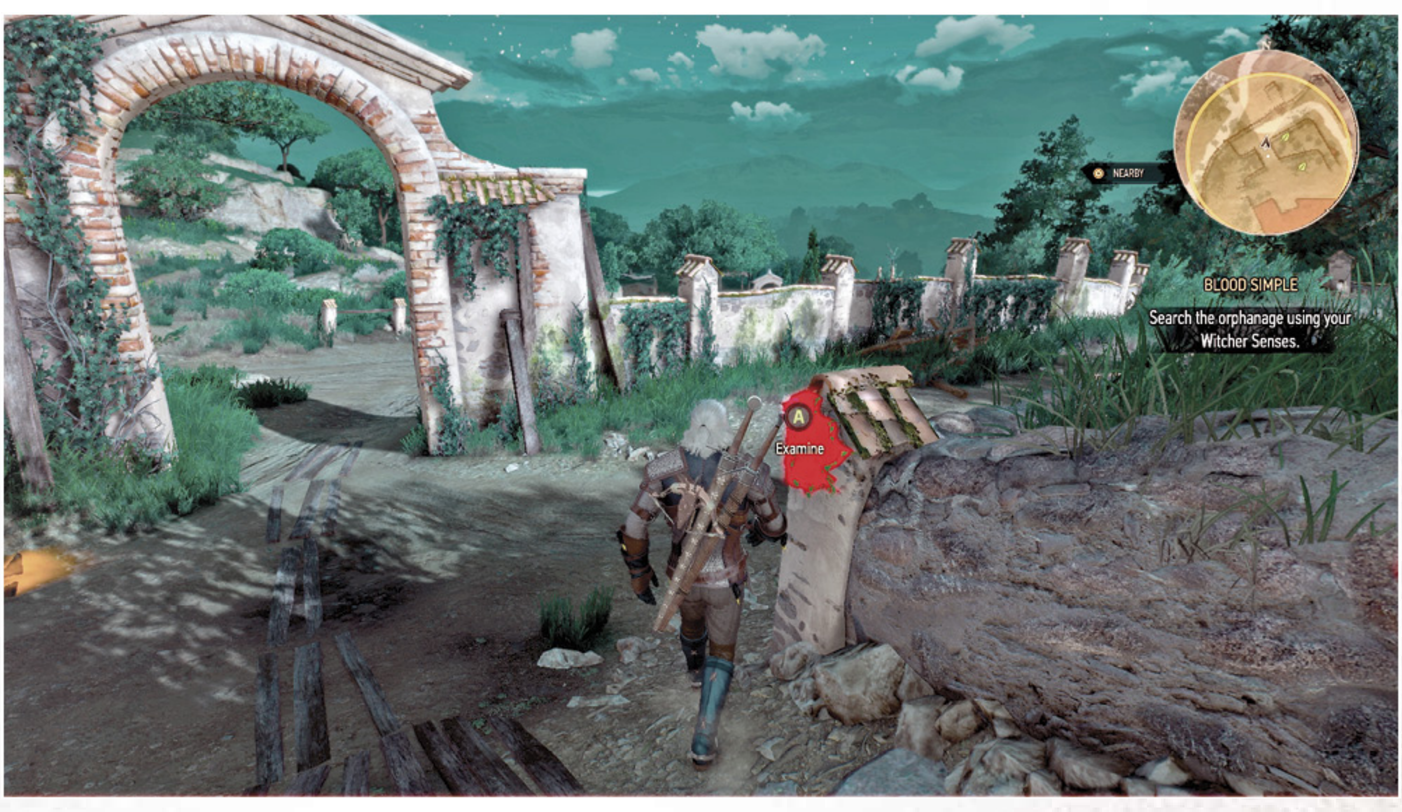
Orphan Boy

Some time later, you agree to accompany Madame Orianna to the Orphanage, where she smells trouble. There are signs of a struggle both outside and in the compound, and a small orphan boy appears, in a state of shock, to stammer an explanation. You can optionally use Axii to calm the little tyke down. He tells you the orphanage's caretaker, Uncle Arnaud, has disappeared, and the children are nothing more than bait. Whatever killed her children needs to be tracked, slaughtered, and its head brought back to Madame Orianna. Only then will she help you with the Unseen Elder.



QUESTING DECISIONS

This optional Main Quest is only accessible during Main Quest: The Night of Long Fangs, and is accessible if you decide to take the Path to the Unseen. You need to have spoken to Lady Orianna at her residence in Beauclair. Major decisions are not made at this point. You are able to complete this quest, and change your mind regarding the meeting the Unseen Elder (and instead free Syanna) if you wish.



A thorough inspection of the Orphanage—both outside and in—is called for. Using your Witcher Senses, be sure to examine every nook and cranny in the investigation area for the following:

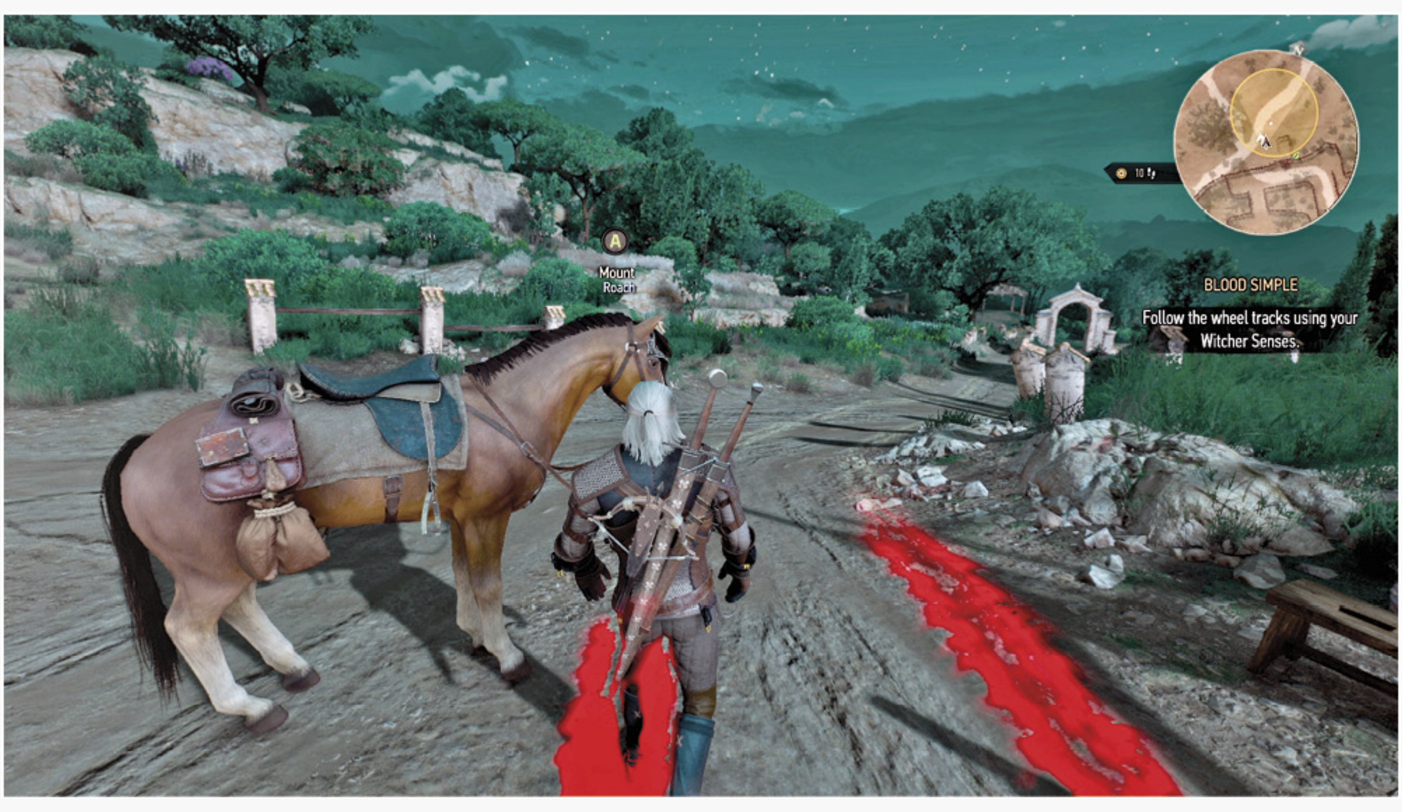
- The slumped corpse of an orphan child inside the building; smashed against the wall, with a cracked skull.
- There are claw marks on the outside wall, by the orphanage entrance: Sharp, hooked claws; the monster easily climbed onto the roof.
- A tiny corpse outside the orphanage entrance has head, shoulder and neck wounds. The monster attacked from above (from the roof).
- Outside are paw prints from a hunched, bipedal beast.
- A child's corpse slumped under a tree has its throat ripped open and larynx crushed.
- Blood on the nearby wall hasn't even dried yet.
- Another child's corpse at the bottom of the outside steps has a sliced aorta with fang marks alongside; but this is an old wound. Curious.
- A corpse on the other side of the wall, under the tree, has wounds that are smooth-edged; claws have cut cleanly through young, thin bones. The beast didn't eat the children; did something grab its attention?
- At the bottom of the steps down to the lower walled area is a corner stone with something daubed on it. It is giving off a scent. Your objective updates. Follow the trail of scent down a path, and hop over a wall where the scent and monster tracks both lead.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the scent and tracks using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the wheel tracks using your Witcher Senses.
- (Optional) Read the entry about alpha Garkains in the Bestiary.

You reach a small horse pen and another diminutive body.

- Examine the corpse to discover "gunk;" some type of venom? This narrows down your list of monsters to an alpha Garkain; a pack leader.



Close to the pen are grooved tracks on the road, indicating a wagon and the Garkain may have caught up to the orphanage's residents as they tried to flee. Time to whistle for Roach.

While your faithful steed trots over to you, make a quick inspection of your Bestiary in the Glossary menu, and read up on this most despicable of monsters.

Ride Roach roughly northward along the road, while utilizing your Witcher Senses to keep viewing the wagon tracks, as they veer off the road to the right just after you pass the Signpost. Slow to a canter and drop down to the right of the small, stone bridge and follow the wagon's trail along the dry stream bed to the large expanse of water. On the beach are the remains of an overturned wagon.

- A dead horse lies to the side of the wagon.
- A corpse by the wagon has been shredded and the blood licked up; to the last drop. The Garkain ate its fill here and is holed up nearby, digesting the meal.
- There are faint noises coming from under the bridge that spans the river to the Cockatrice Inn, roughly northwest of you. Spot the noises using your Witcher Senses, and the red, glowing form of the Garkain hanging upside down under the bridge.

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the Garkain.
- Collect a trophy from the Garkain.

You edge forward, sword in hand. It seems Uncle Arnaud was the last one to be savaged and drained. His twisted corpse lies under the slumbering Garkain. It senses you advancing, drops to the ground, and lets out a shriek. Battle the Alpha Garkain, using the techniques detailed of the Bestiary. Remember this Garkain uses its brain waves to flummox you; should this occur, be sure to respond by lobbing Samum or Moon Dust bombs to disable these psychic attacks. With the Garkain slain, you remove its head, tie it to Roach's saddle, and gallop back to the orphanage with proof of your slaughter. As you enter, you hear a child's whimpering. Moving to the light, you catch Orianna feasting on the neck of the orphan boy. She releases him, thinking your task would have taken longer. After threatening to kill her, you fully understand this is Orianna's own "wine cellar," a larder for her bloodlust. After shooing the boy outside, he stops and pleads with you not to harm Lady Orianna; after all, she took the children off the streets, fed them sweets, and sang to them. Leave her be!

Orianna drinks the children's blood, but never so much as to kill. Answer as you wish. Due to current circumstances, you let her live, and explain that the recent slaughter here was the work of a Garkain, one probably summoned by Dettlaff. After salivating over the sweet taste of child blood, you manage to get Orianna to focus on describing where the Unseen Elder's lair is located: west of the city, across the lake, behind a cave near the shoreline. She places a stone in your hand that will open a hidden door.

You leave Madame Orianna with a threat; one day you will return for her. And she will be ready; this will be a "Night to Remember"!

Items: Magic Key

NIGHT TO REMEMBER

Wolves asleepin' 'midst the trees, bats all aswayin' in the breeze,

But one soul lies anxious, wide awake,

Fearin' all manner of ghouls, hags and wraiths.

Birds are silent for the night,

Cows turned in as daylight dies,

But one soul lies anxious, wide awake,

For the Witcher, brave and bold,

Paid in coin of gold,

He'll chop and slice you, cut and dice you,

Eat you up whole.

Eat you whole.

Blood Simple

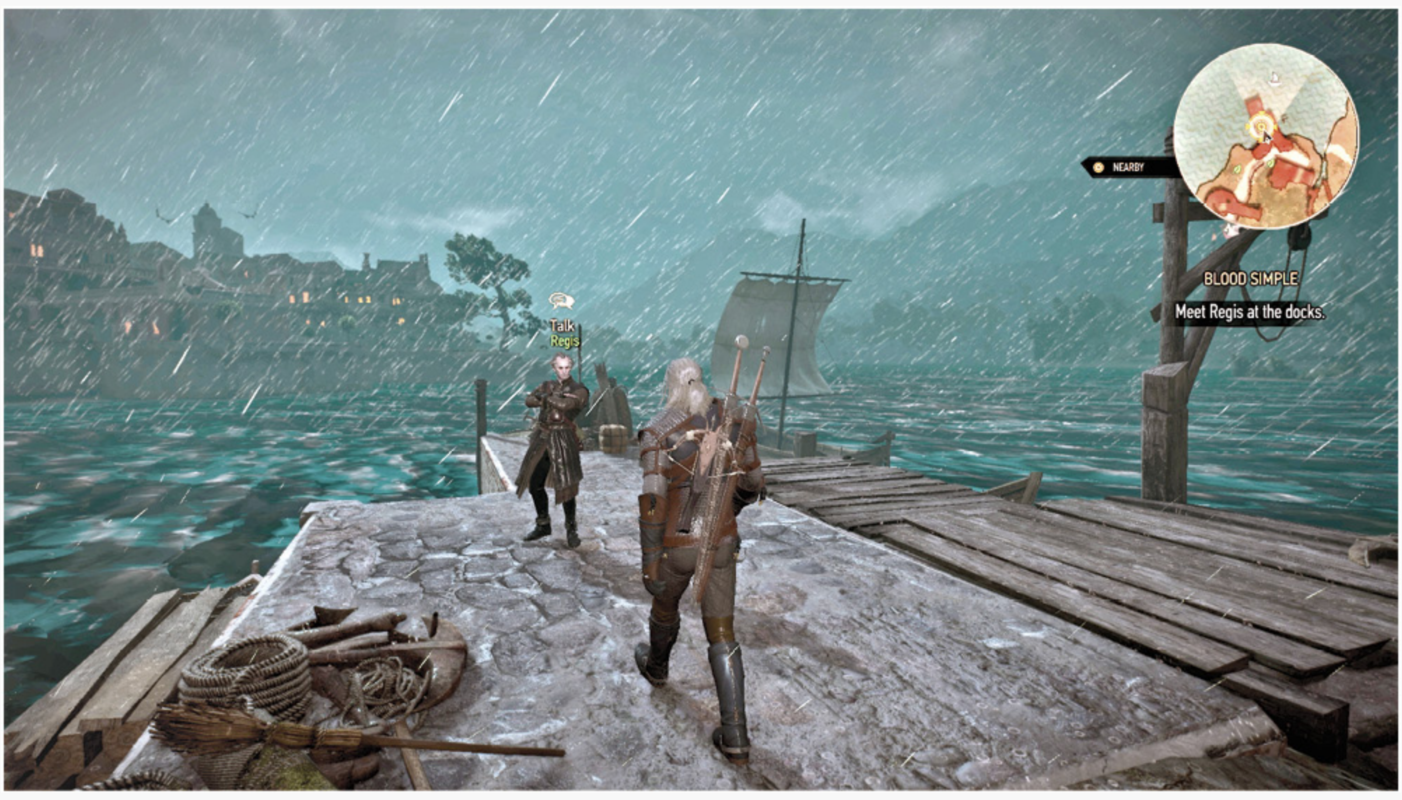
Slipping a Word to the Birds

OBJECTIVES

- Tell the birds you're ready to meet Regis.
- Meet Regis at the docks.

Emiel Regis Rohellec Terzieff-Godefroy

Leave the orphanage building, locating a nearby oak tree, and approach the flock of ravens that are watching you intently with their beady eyes. You tell them you'll be at the boat landing near the Palace, waiting for Regis there. At this point you can head their automatically, or at your leisure.



WARNING! MAJOR QUEST DECISION AHEAD!

▶ The forthcoming conversation with Regis ends with you having to make one of two choices that have major ramifications to the Blood and Wine Main Quest. This is the "point of no return;" you have to pick a choice and stick with it!

Assuming you wish to conclude this quest, you reach the Beauclair Palace Docks, spying a raven that flutters to a nearby roof. Regis approaches. He asks how your meeting with Orianna went. You make mention of her "hunger," before explaining where the Unseen's cave is. Regis is prepared to accompany you, but implores you once again to free Syanna instead. At this point, you have a major decision to make:

- Tell Regis you won't change your mind: Period. This starts Blood and Wine: Main Quest: What Lies Unseen.
- Tell Regis you've changed your mind, and Syanna should be found. This continues Blood and Wine: Main Quest: The Night of Long Fangs (Part 2), with Regis already having found Damien (if you didn't already), and learned where Syanna is being kept.

When you've made your decision, this quest concludes.

OBJECTIVES

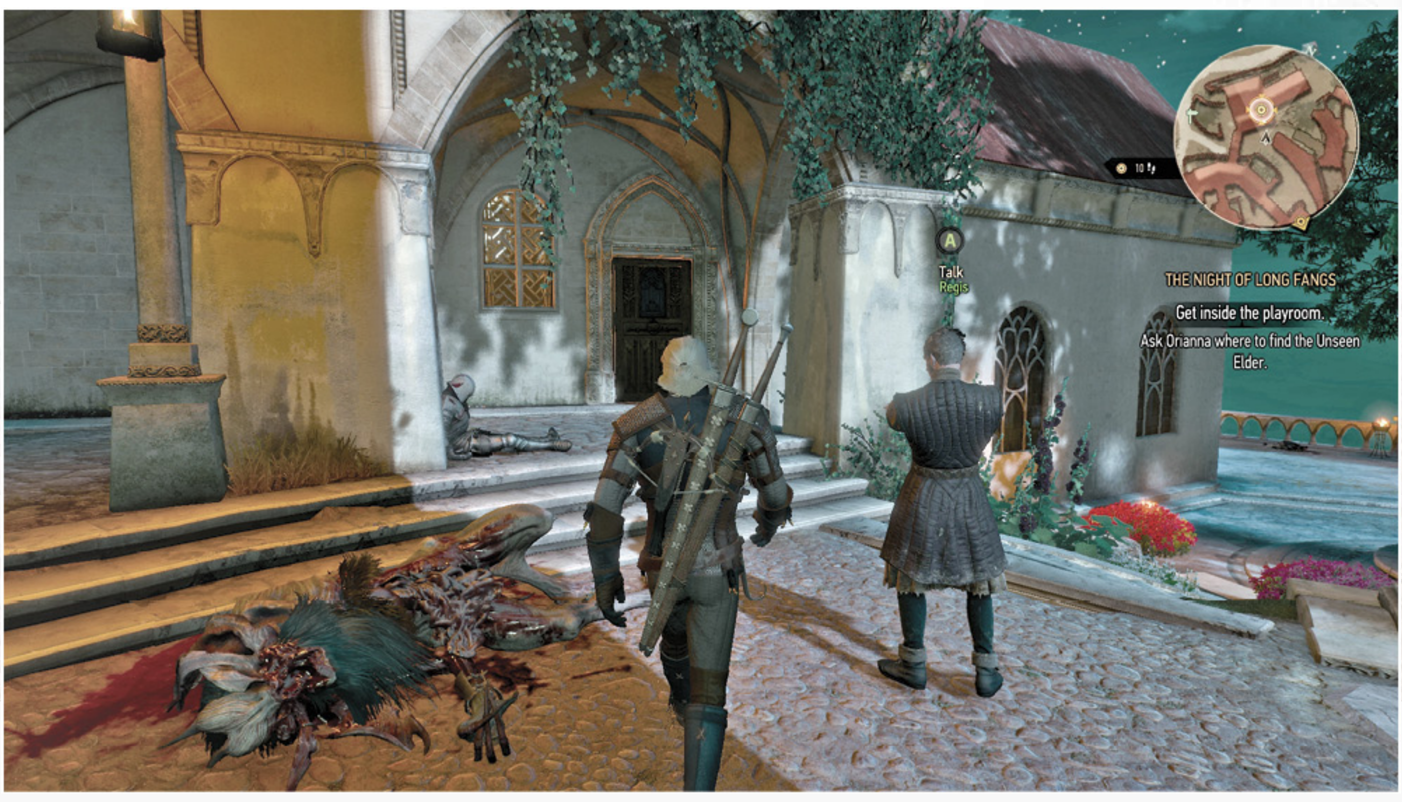
- Get inside the playroom.
- Search the playroom to find out what happened to Syanna.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Main Quest: Night of the Long Fangs (Part 1), and you've decided to follow Regis' advice about finding Syanna, rather than seeking an audience with the Unseen Elder. You can complete Main Quest: Blood Simple first, if you wish.

WARNING! MAJOR QUEST DECISION AHEAD!

▶ You are about to access the Palace playroom. However, the objective to speak to Orianna regarding the location of the Unseen is still available, and continues to be until you finish an inspection of the playroom itself: This is the "point of no return;" you have to pick and choice and stick with it!



You advance on the playroom (slaying a Fleder, if Regis hasn't already dealt with it), but the door is locked. After Regis performs his breaking-and-entering trick, you're able to step inside, and begin a thorough search of this two-floor dwelling for signs of Syanna. The place seems silent. Use your Witcher Senses to aid you in this search:

- The globe in the corner, yielding no clues.

THE NIGHT OF LONG FANGS
Search the playroom to find out what happened to Syanna.
Ask Orianna where to find the Unseen Elder.

Head up the stairs, into the main (and rather ornate) playroom. Your search continues:

- There's some miniature tableware and plush toys. Cute. But nothing under the rug.
- At the top of the stairs is a picture, with a key tucked behind it.
- There's a tin knight on a side bench. And a wooden duck with its wings broken off, along with a little broken music box which plays a tune. None of these are much use to you.
- On a writing desk is a diary; "Property of Isabelle de Roquefort, Court Governess," notes from Syanna and Anna Henrietta's governess. Leaf through the entries, reading the five passages in conversation with Regis. The entries are most illuminating, giving you an idea that Syanna might be trapped in an otherworldly place, the lands of a fairy tale book! This quest then concludes.

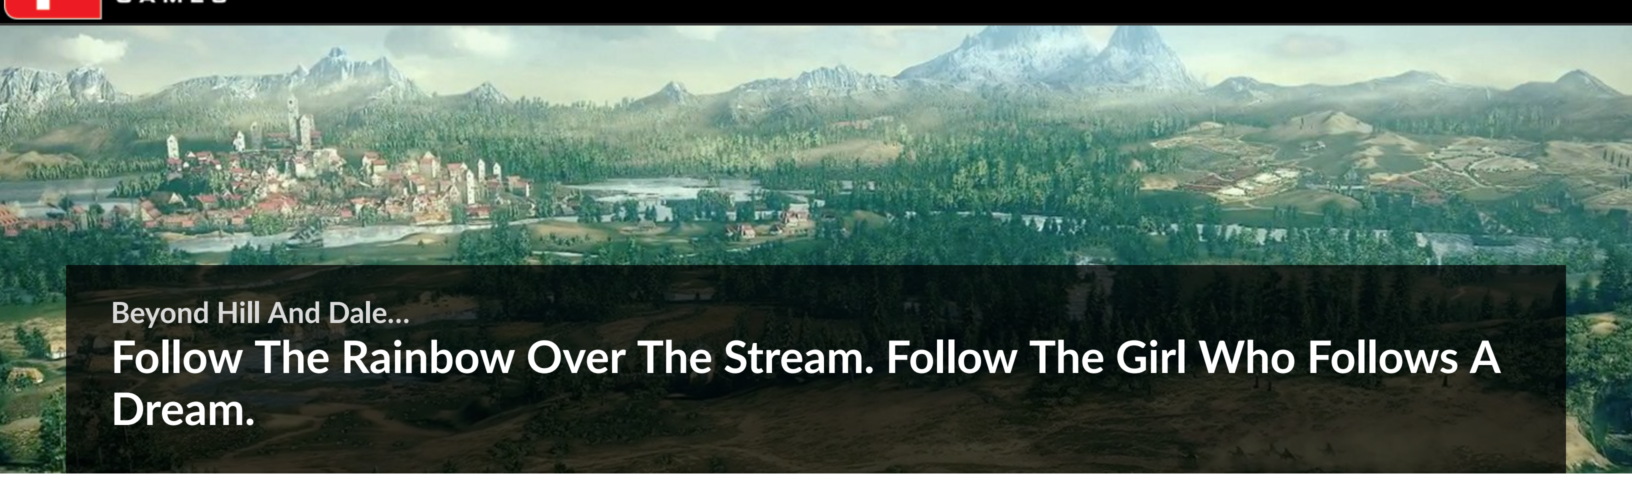
QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Main Quest: Long Night (Part 2), and you’ve decided to follow Regis’ advice about finding Syanna, rather than seeking an audience with the Unseen Elder. You can complete Main Quest: Blood Simple first, if you wish.

WARNING!MAJOR QUEST DECISION AHEAD!

This is the “point of no return.” Once you open the fairy tale book, you cannot choose to visit the Unseen Elder, and complete Main Quest: What Lies Unseen.

Take the Golden key you found behind the painting, and use it to unlock the ornate cupboard. Inside is the book of fairy tales you seek. As you open it, and read the words of the book, you are immediately transported into Syanna’s childhood “Land of a Thousand Fables,” appearing in a strange forest with giant mushrooms lining the winding path. The only way is onward, farther into this strange and vibrant land. The Eye of Nehaleni is shimmering wildly, indicating this entire world is an illusion; but one so powerful there’s no way to dispel it!



Beyond Hill And Dale...

Follow The Rainbow Over The Stream. Follow The Girl Who Follows A Dream.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the yellow brick road

OBJECTIVES

- The Wonderful Wizard of Oz

There's a distinctive hue to the pavement you're standing on. Set off through the toadstool forest. Inspect the signpost to the right, which gives you a briefing of exactly what is going on: This is apparently the land of a thousand fairy tales, where fun is to be had thanks to "Uncle Artorius" (a powerful mage who created this place). Only the warning (that the spell holding this Fablesphere together isn't stable) is cause for concern.

OBJECTIVES

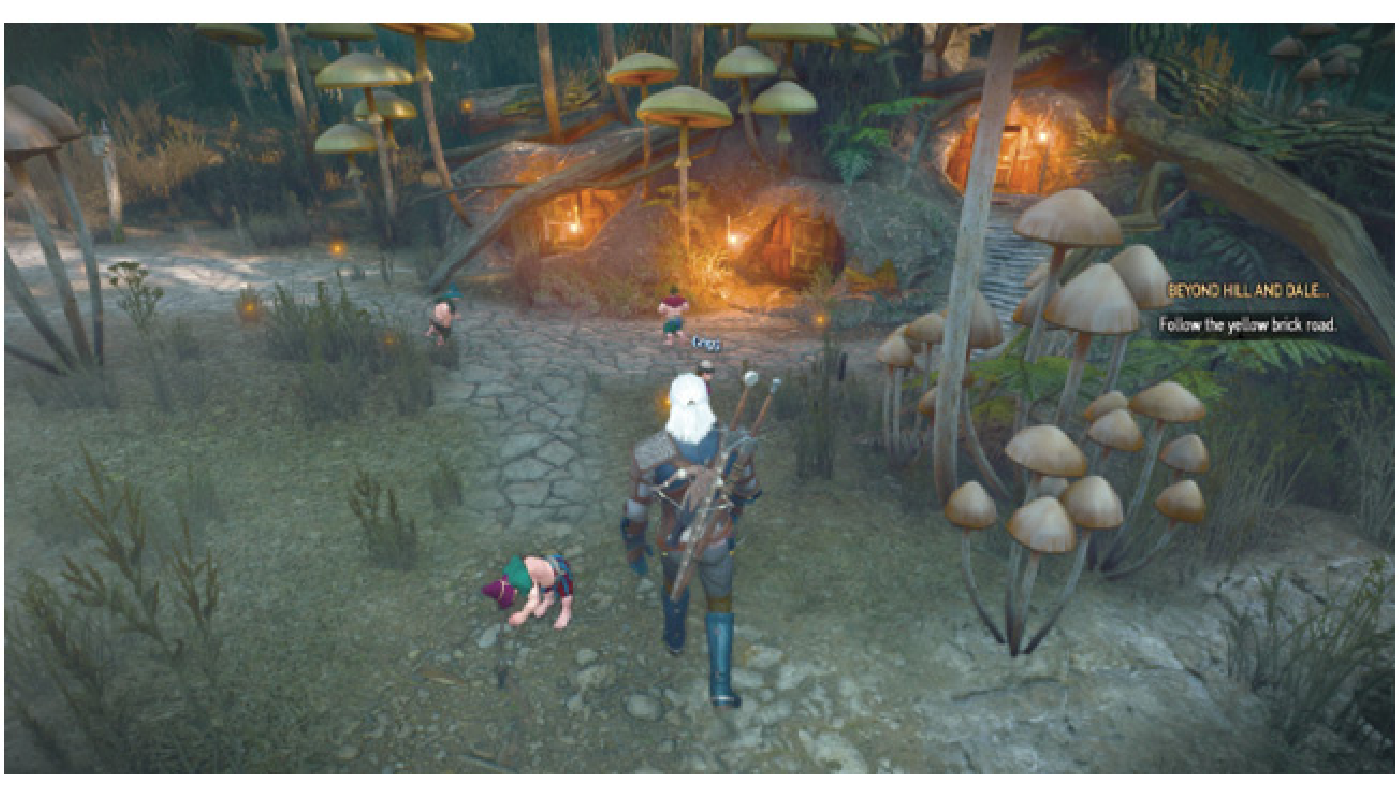
- Wolpertingers and Grigg Village

OBJECTIVES

- Wolpertinger: Bavarian Folklore
- Grigg Gnomes

On your way through the Fablesphere, you may encounter some hoppity rabbit-like critters (that can be hunted, but are peaceful), said to have the head of a rabbit, deer antlers, pheasant wings, and a squirrel's body.

Should you wish to divert from the yellow brick road, slightly downstream of the bridge is the tiny Grigg Village, where a number of diminutive gnomes are working. They flee to their burrows if you approach.

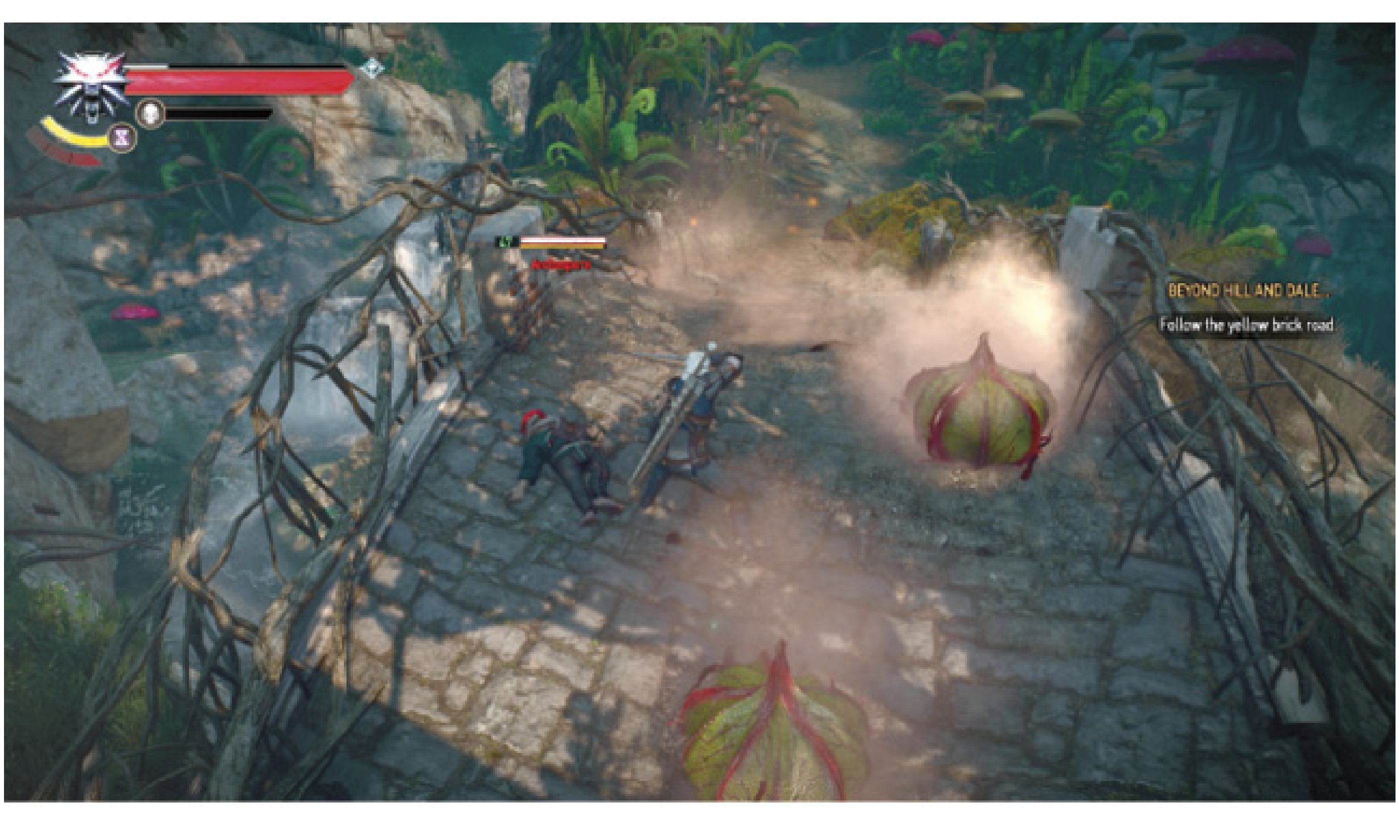


ARCHESPORE AND THE APPLE: GETTING SLEEPY

OBJECTIVES

- Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs

When the yellow brick road peters out, just before a small bridge of briars, drop down and cross the structure, concentrating on a writhing Archespore to slice and dice. Then inspect the body of a dead dwarf, still clutching a poisoned apple. Does this playground seem a little...violent for two little girls? Cross the bridge, continue along the road, leaping the gap across a second bridge. Then follow the path under some briars until you hear voices.



Items: Poisoned apple

EVIL WITCH: GINGERLY DOES IT...

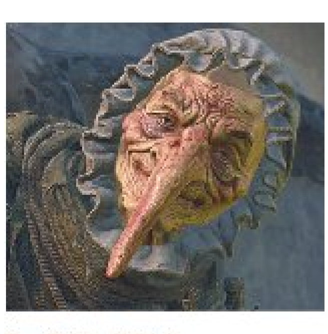
OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the Wicked Witch.

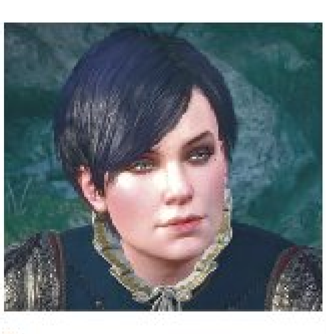
OBJECTIVES

- Hansel and Gretel

You hear (and then see) Syanna arguing with a Witch both warty and familiar. Syanna orders the Wicked Witch to release someone, but the crone isn't about to free a gingerbread stealer! After you open the gate, the witch seems puzzled why you're here. Not to worry; she isn't about to let you live to explain your predicament!



The Wicked Witch



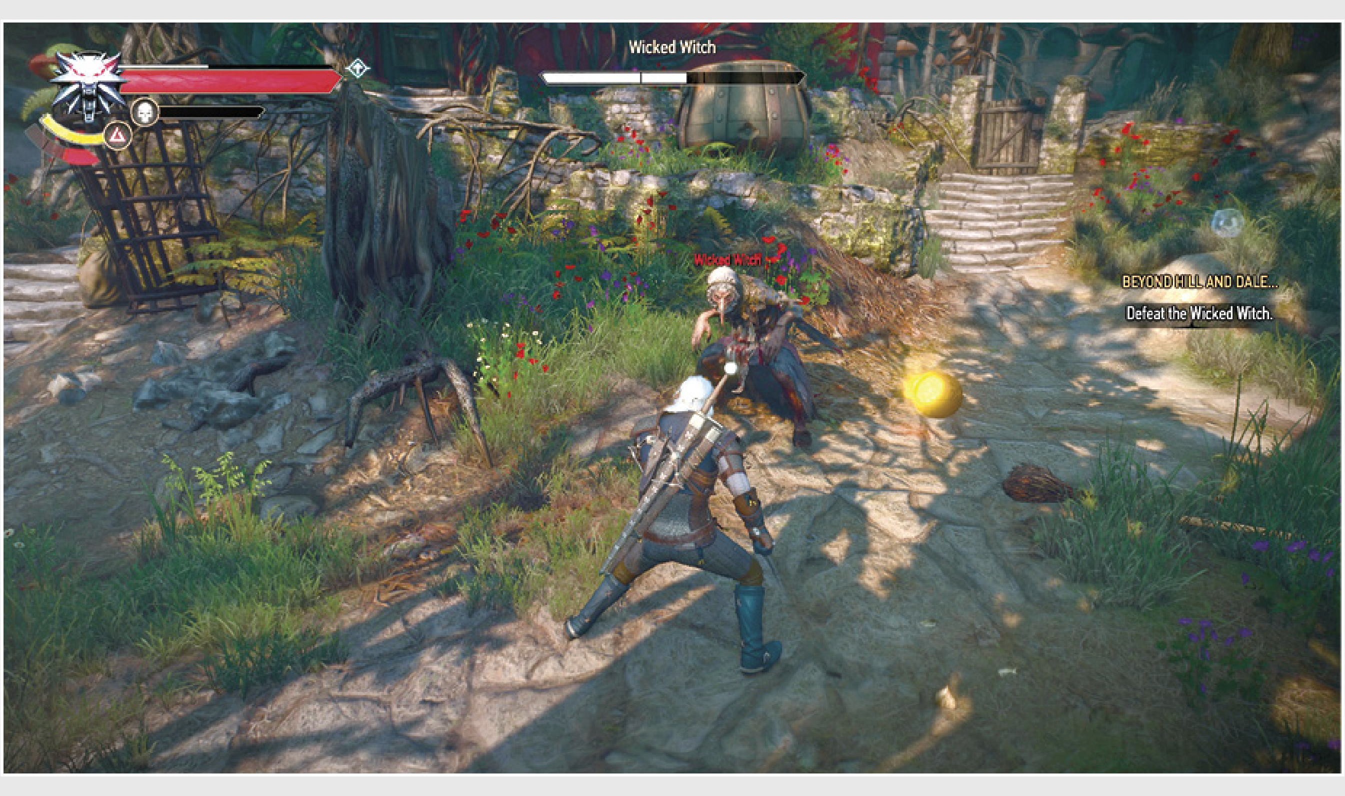
Syanna

DEFEATING THE WICKED WITCH: HER ATTACKS

The Wicked Witch has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:

Phase 1: Monster Summoning: The witch takes to her broomstick, and flies about the combat area, summoning Archespores from her bubbling cauldron, and letting them spit their disgusting projectiles at you. During her flight, she is completely impervious to attacks while encased in her magical bubble. Concentrate your attacks on the Archespores.

Phase 2: Airborne Projectiles and Divebombing: Once her summoned plant life has been cut down, she tries harming you with revolting liquids from her cauldron, in a long, airborne attack. She also tries to knock you over by swooping down in a divebomb, while riding her broomstick. Dodge out of the way during either of these attacks, and refrain from striking her during the time she is encased in her bubble; she is invulnerable. However, when her bubble disappears (usually just after the divebomb), she can be struck.

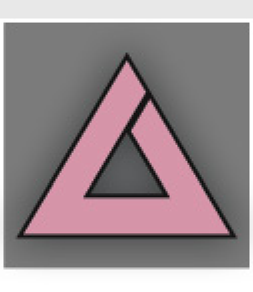


Phase 3: Cauldron Broth Projectiles and Melee Strikes: When she is on the ground, she will throw large, unpleasant globs of cauldron contents at you, which act like Archespore spittle, and should be dodged. She can bring down the cauldron with both hands, creating a large explosion that damages and staggers (so back up or interrupt this attack). She also has claw attacks (left or right) at melee range which can be dodged or parried. Spend too long neglecting her broomstick, and she flies off again, and Phase 2 begins anew.

Resistances: The Wicked Witch is resistant to Axii, and usually counters you successfully if you manage to strike her three times in succession.

THE BEAST OF BEAUCLAIR VULNERABILITIES

Relict Oil



Igni

Aard

DEFEATING THE WICKED WITCH: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Phase 1: Produce your silver sword, and watch the flight path of the witch, but don't attempt to strike her. She lobs projectiles that spawn into Archespores. Face and cut these down continuously, until she starts Phase 2 of her attacks.

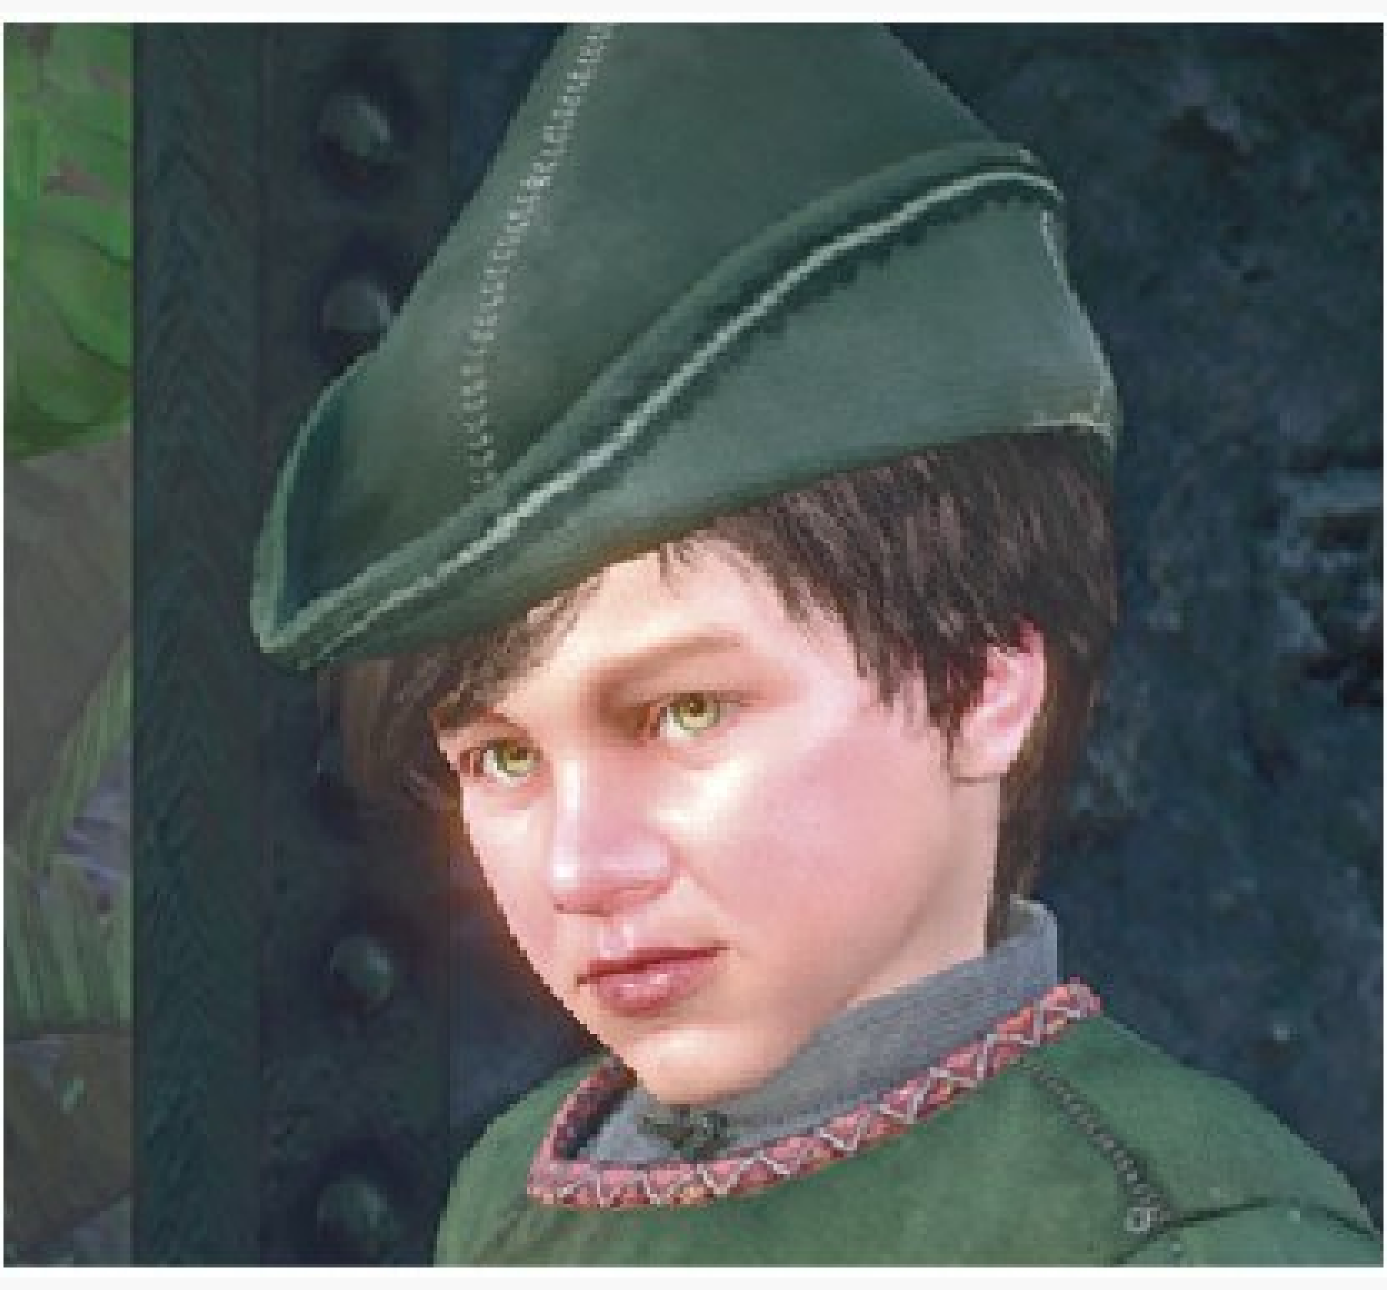
Phase 2: Avoid her cauldron-spilling airborne attacks, and watch for her impenetrable bubble to disappear during these divebombs; as soon as the bubble has gone, hit her hard with Igni, Aard, your crossbow, or a bomb; she tumbles to the ground, and separates from the broom. She now begins Phase 3 attacks. However, the broom seems sentient, and hops around, finally rejoining the witch as she takes off again, forcing you to strike her from the air just like before. Combat this problem by concentrating all your attacks on the broom, as soon as it becomes separated from the witch. Destroy the broom, so the witch is left on the ground.

Phase 3: Once she is on the ground permanently, combat is both swift and unrelenting; dodge the revolting projectiles the witch lobs, dodging around to slash at the stout foe when she waddles quickly toward you. Usual combat planning is necessary, but the fight is straightforward. Though there's no oven to shove this witch into, Relict Oil (as offense) and Quen are useful (as defense), as well as a quick burst of Igni to put an end to her.

ALL JACKED UP

OBJECTIVES

- Jack and the Beanstalk



Jack

Syanna has little time to talk after the witch is subdued; she needs a key. She's already apprehended a weapon from Prince Charming, and quickly frees a small lad from a large baking oven. He recognizes Syanna; Jack wants to know if she's come back to play. All she's here for is Jack's beans. Answer as you wish; it seems veiled threats against small children is Syanna's current plan. However revolting this is to you, Jack claims Syanna's sister ordered him to hide all the beans across this land, so Syanna could never leave. The only help Jack can give you both is to visit Joss, "the boy with the thing for wolves;" he might know where the beans are hidden.

After Jack flees, Syanna asks why you're here. Answer as you wish. You explain Dettlaff has summoned monsters to attack Beauclair, and you're here to put a stop to it by bringing back Syanna. Shockingly, Syanna displays a glimmer of compassion at the innocents currently dying in Beauclair's streets, and an uneasy alliance is agreed upon. At this point, you can ask about the place, the men Dettlaff killed in her name, and about the Curse of the Black Sun. When you're satisfied, ask about the beans.

It seems Jack (of Beanstalk fame) had three beans; a red one, a blue one, and a yellow one. All must be collected, before climbing up into the clouds to escape this land. You shake on your alliance.

Beyond Hill And Dale...

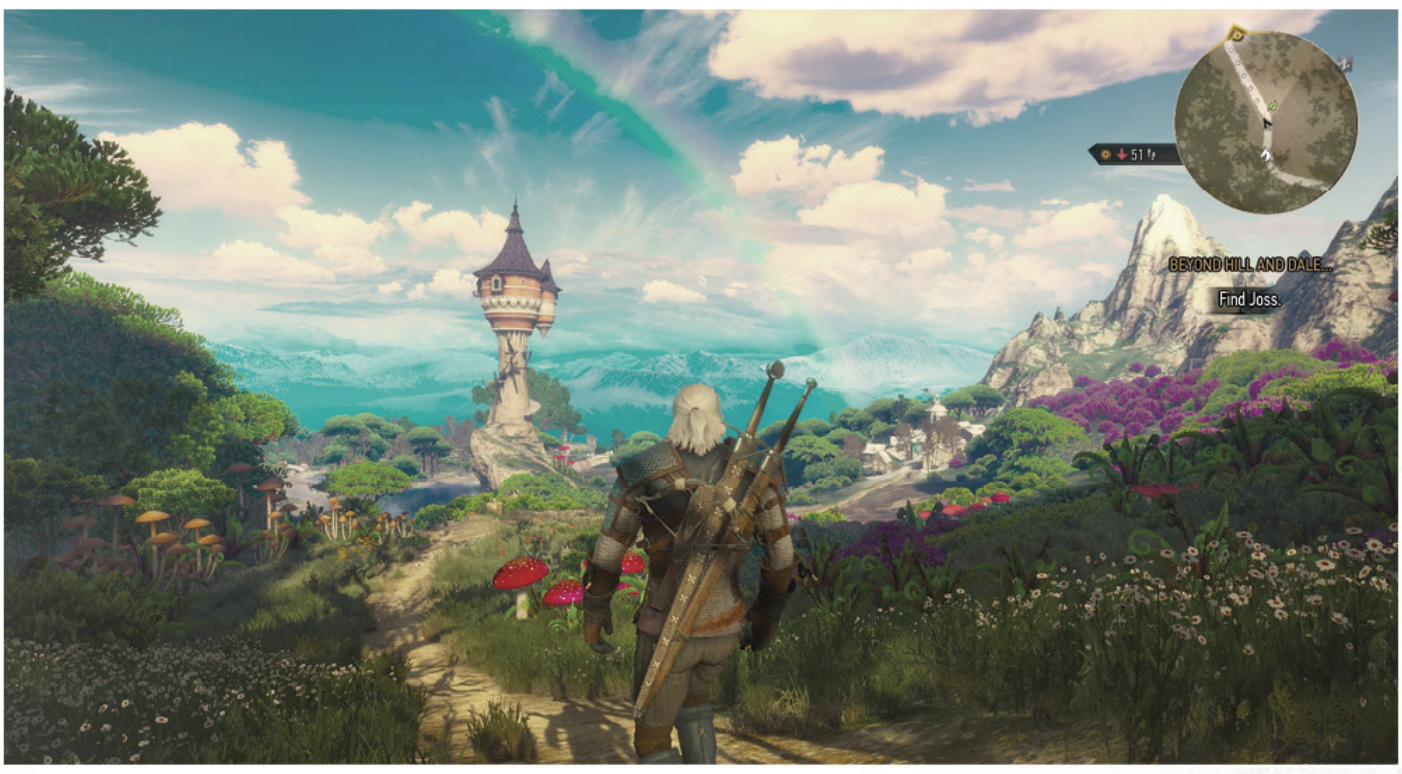
No Wolves Here! None At All!

OBJECTIVES

- Find Joss.
- Save Joss from the wolves.

OBJECTIVES

- The Boy Who Cried Wolf



Syanna describes Joss' location as you open the opposite gate, and continue your journey along the road, leading down a small valley with strange roots above you, until your progress is waylaid by a group of angry pixies, gnome-like entities that were put here to protect the Fablesphere from intruders. They appear in a cloud of smoke, and swarm you. Treat them like Nekkers, and dispel these angry spirits with fierce swordplay. Expect to encounter them from time to time. Then follow the path out of the forest. Syanna points out to whinnying unicorns, and wants to catch them so you can ride your way through the Fablesphere. A new (and optional) objective to tame them appears, though it is advisable to continue along the path and encounter Joss, first.

Joss (the boy who cried "wolf")

Joss is standing on a tree stump, definitely not being harassed by wolves. Draw your weapon and remove the five wolves snarling around the stump. Afterward, Joss points out more wolves behind you, but this is an amusing lie. Everything Joss says is a lie, as Syanna tells you. After a small interrogation of Joss, you learn the following from him:

- Joss knows not one thing about the beans.
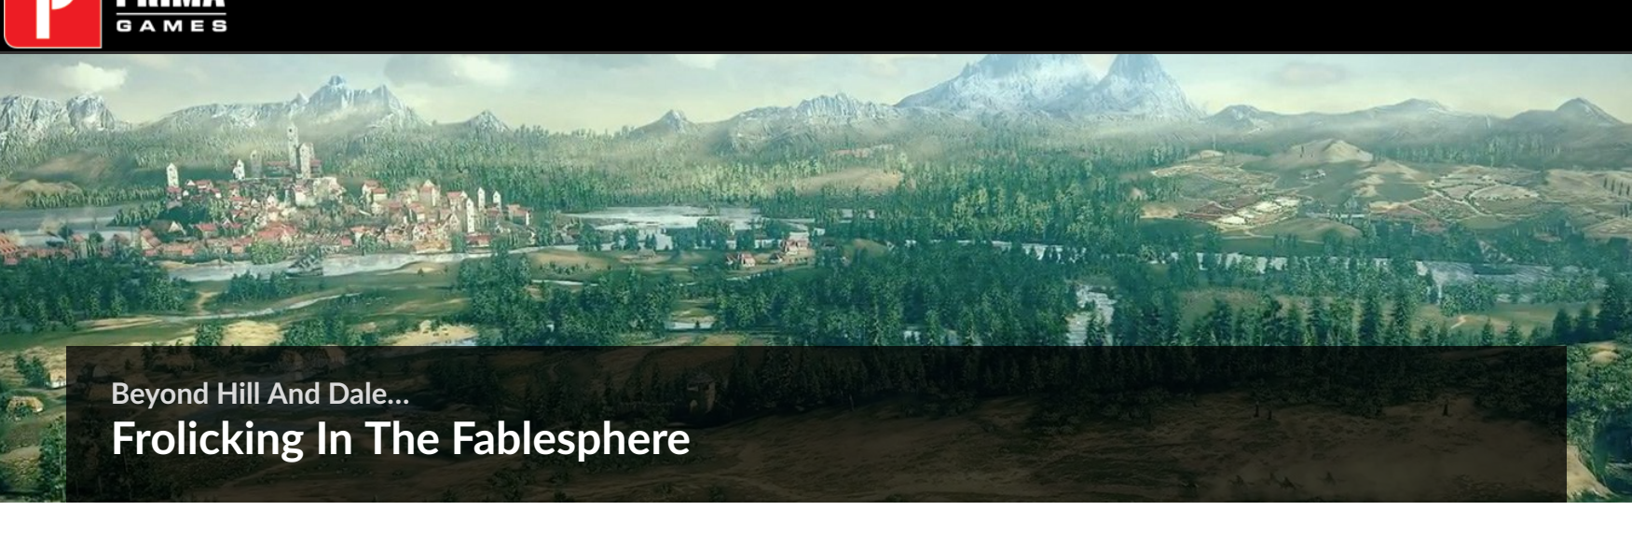
- The red bean, for example, most certainly hasn't been swallowed by the most humany human in the Land of a Thousand Fables.
- The blue bean lies out in the open, with nobody—three times over—guarding it.
- The yellow bean is deep; completely underground. A bald farmhand, who in no way awaits someone, has it.

With the following...let's call them "clues" learned, your quest objectives multiply, and you have a variety of activities to undertake. At this point, it's a good idea to understand some rules about this fairy land:



Beyond Hill And Dale...

Frolicking In The Fablesphere

OBJECTIVES

- Find three magic beans (3).

PLANNING YOUR STAY IN THE FABLESPHERE

Now you've emerged from the forest with Syanna and spoken to the "truth-reversing" Joss, there's some planning to attempt if you want to make the most of your time in the Fablesphere:

Think of the path from Joss' tree stump as a long, circular route through the rest of the Fablesphere. You are encouraged to stop and visit every location along the way.

However, there are a number of optional and hidden activities that must be performed, even including a Contract!

It's worth completing tasks both important and optional before you sow the three magic beans and conjure the beanstalk, so you can see everything and so you can finish optional tasks before leaving this world.

Once all three beans are found, and the beanstalk summoned, you won't be able to return to finish any optional tasks; so be aware of this (especially as there's a Gwent game to try!).

Use your mini-map to pinpoint all the objective locations you need to visit, but remember there are optional places to explore, too!

OPTIMAL, OBJECTIVE-BASED TASKS

TASK 1: TAMING A UNICORN OR TWO

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Ride the white unicorn.

OBJECTIVES

- The Lion and the Unicorn

This optional task occurs when you first emerge from the toadstool forest. Syanna spies two unicorns that you can ride. You get an objective to get on the white unicorn. This isn't necessary for quest completion, but it does remind Syanna of her childhood. It reminds you of something definitely more adult!

TASK 2: SNUFFS, PUFFS, AND ALL SORTS

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the girl with the flint.

OBJECTIVES

- The Little Match Girl

WARNING! MAJOR QUEST DECISION AHEAD!

Though you won't realize it yet, speaking to the Girl with Flint, learning she has a ribbon belonging to Syanna, and then either obtaining (or not obtaining) it, has a major effect during Blood and Wine: Main Quest: Tesham Mutna.

Little Flint Girl

In the northwestern part of the Fablesphere is a snowy village, with a Notice Board where a Contract written by a goose can be attempted, and a girl selling a variety of tobacco products. And fisstech! She's not aware of any magic beans; is that the new name of a kicker she already carries?

Syanna spies the girl is wearing her ribbon, but she's not about to give it back to her; "finders keepers, sweetheart!" Optionally ask Syanna what the ribbon is about (a family keepsake from her Uncle meant to act as a good luck charm). As the only thing the girl gives out for free is "a first hit," you'll have to pay if you want the ribbon back. At this point, you can:

- (Gwent) Play the Girl with Flint at Gwent. You have one chance to score a victory in a normal game of cards (she uses the Scoia'tael deck). Win and the ribbon is yours. Lose, and it remains with the girl.
- (500 Crowns) You can pay the Girl with Flint for the ribbon.

(Shop) You can also purchase some narcotics, and other sundry items (usually including a Decoction).

Assuming you win the ribbon, Syanna actually thanks you, and the ribbon is given to her.

Items: Syanna's Ribbon

TASK 3: LITTLE PIG, LITTLE PIG, LET ME IN!

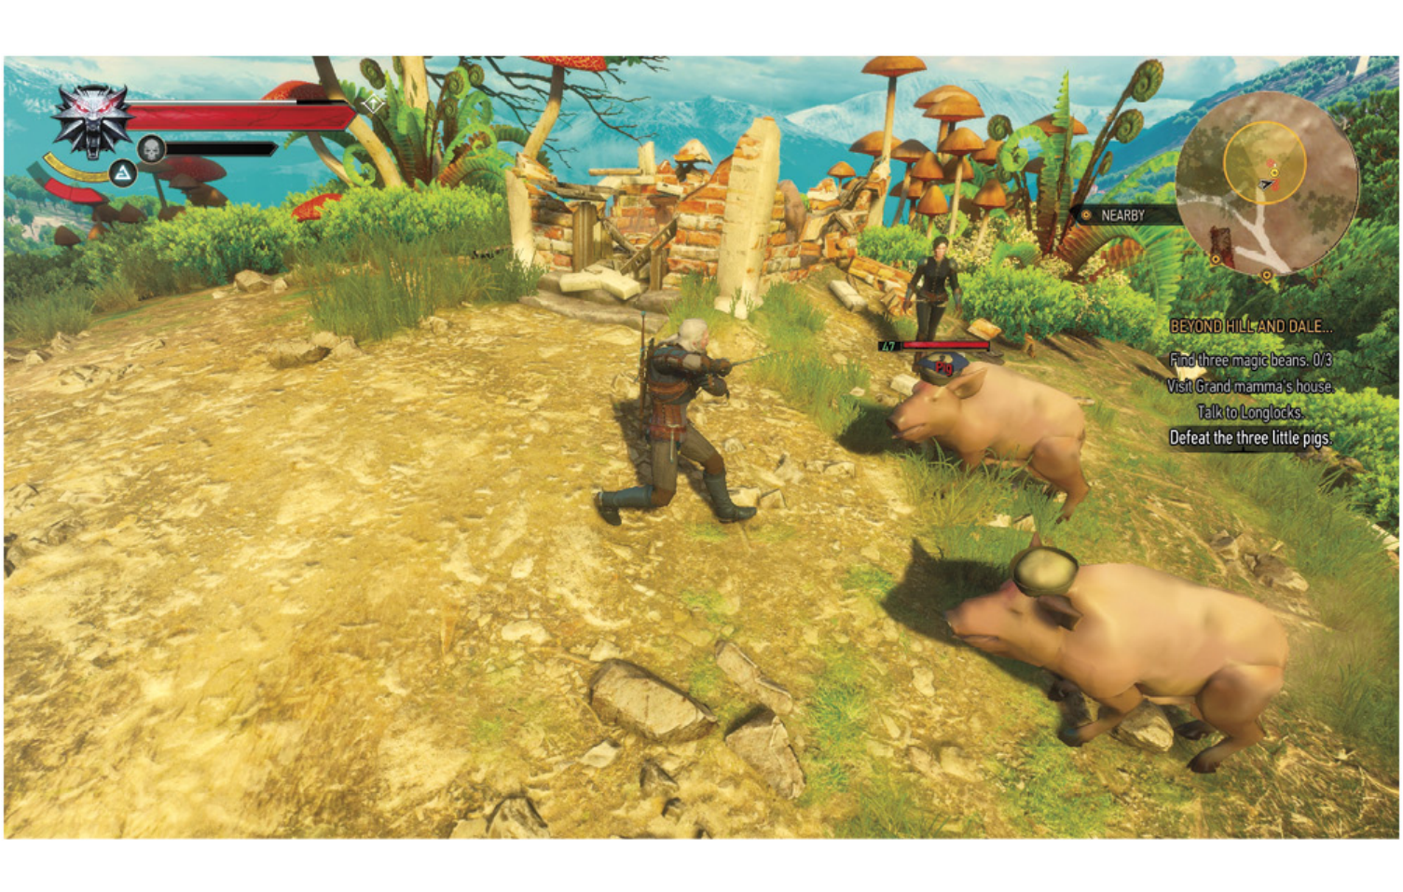
OBJECTIVES

- Go see the three little pigs.
- Defeat the three little pigs.

OBJECTIVES

- The Three Little Pigs

Just past the miniature village, between the two humped bridges, are the dwellings of three porcine inhabitants. It seems that two houses (made from straw and wood respectively) have been heavily damaged; possibly by huffing and puffing. Only the brick structure is intact, and even that looks like it's in a weakened state. When you cast Aard, and destroy the brick house, out come three enraged pigs (treat them like Wild Boars) which must be slain. Then step into the ruins of the pigs' house, and procure a bean. After showing it to Syanna, she's shocked that you have a sense of humor. Answer her as you wish; Syanna seems to be softening to your gruff exterior.



Items: Blue Bean

TASK 4: GRIM TALES IN THE TOWER

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Longlocks.
- Defeat the wraith of Longlocks.

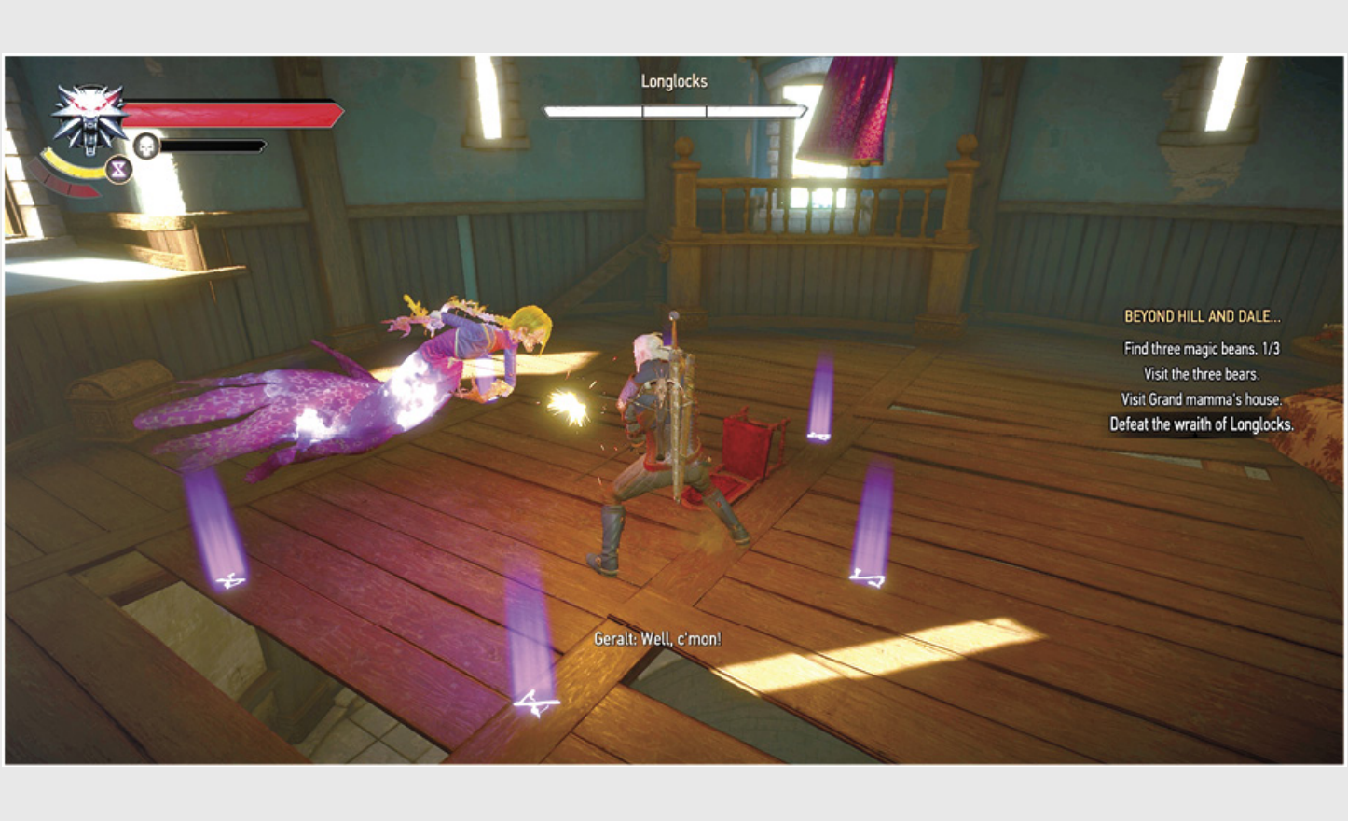
OBJECTIVES

- Rapunzel

Across the marsh in the fields across from the pigs' houses is a tower you cannot miss; venture close to it and Syanna wonders aloud where Longlocks is; she would grapple up her braid in the past. Now, it doesn't seem to be there. Furthermore, the tower seems to be in disrepair. Run up the hill to the base of the tower, then leap across to the spiraling platform on the tower itself, where the dead knight in shining armor lies. Run around, and ascend the wooden scaffolding, and finally a ladder, before leaping into a crack in the main tower. Continue up an interior spiral staircase, then another, all the way to the top of the tower. Longlocks? "Deadlocks" is more apt a description. The girl with the long braid has hanged herself with her own hair, cursed to become a Banshee!

DEFEATING LONGLOCKS: HER ATTACKS

Longlocks has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:



Banshee Wail: After taking damage from your attacks, Longlocks will rise to her place of death (the light in the center of the tower ceiling) and let out a scream that could wake the dead; literally. This summons a group of five skeletal foes (and she is invulnerable for a few moments during and after the wail). Longlocks then heals while you're preoccupied with the skeletons (who are easily dispatched like Bandits, or blown backward with Aard and stabbed while prone).

Banshee Scream: Longlocks has a second scream that's just as ear-piercing, but is used to stun you instead of summon skeletons. Beware of this and dodge or roll away from the sound wave.

Dash Attack: If you're stunned, Longlocks bursts forward with great speed and performs a powerful melee attack; don't let this happen by avoiding the scream in the first place!

Melee Combo: Expect some nasty clawing, which can strike you up to four times (usually three or four hits). These are quick and light, and can therefore be parried. She quickly floats backward after each successful attack or counter that she performs.

Counter: If you're successful with two or more melee attacks, Longlocks attempts a counter attack; a very quick spin that causes heavy damage, and pushes you (and her) away from each other. You're encouraged to strike twice before adjusting and striking again, so this is avoided.

Resistances: The critical effects of Signs, Bombs, and bolts do not affect Longlocks. She is slow, attempting to stay at medium range and away from your attacks; only approaching when attempting a dash or melee combo strike.

DEFEATING LONGLOCKS: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Use Yrden to slow Longlocks down enough to dart in with a couple of hard-hitting, spectral oil-coated attacks, and whittle down her health until she starts her infamous wail. As soon as the skeletal foes appear, defeat them as quickly as possible using fast attacks, and knocking them over with Aard; this means Longlocks has fewer opportunity to heal herself, and you can continue this combat of attrition.

Longlocks strafes, tries a melee attack, dashes away, tries the scream to stun you, then uses her dash attack if successful; then she begins this attack pattern again. If wounded, she stops this pattern and summons her bony brethren. When she does, remove the skeletal threats quickly, before attacking her with well-timed sword strikes once again.

LONGLOCKS' VULNERABILITIES

Spectral Oil

Yrden

After the battle with Longlocks, procure the bean from the tower, and retrace your steps. Carefully. Alternatively, you can step out onto the balcony of the tower and jump into the water. Before leaving, you can grab a bite from the Wishing Table in Longlock's room. The food on it replenishes after a few seconds. Back at Syanna, the conversation turns to Dettlaff. Ask any questions you wish, as Syanna can describe her first meeting with the vampire. Your answers are important here. Show enough compassion and Syanna is more likely to show her sister that same compassion later on.

Items: Yellow Bean

TASK 5: NOT TOO BIG. NOT TOO SMALL. BUT STILL NOT RIGHT.

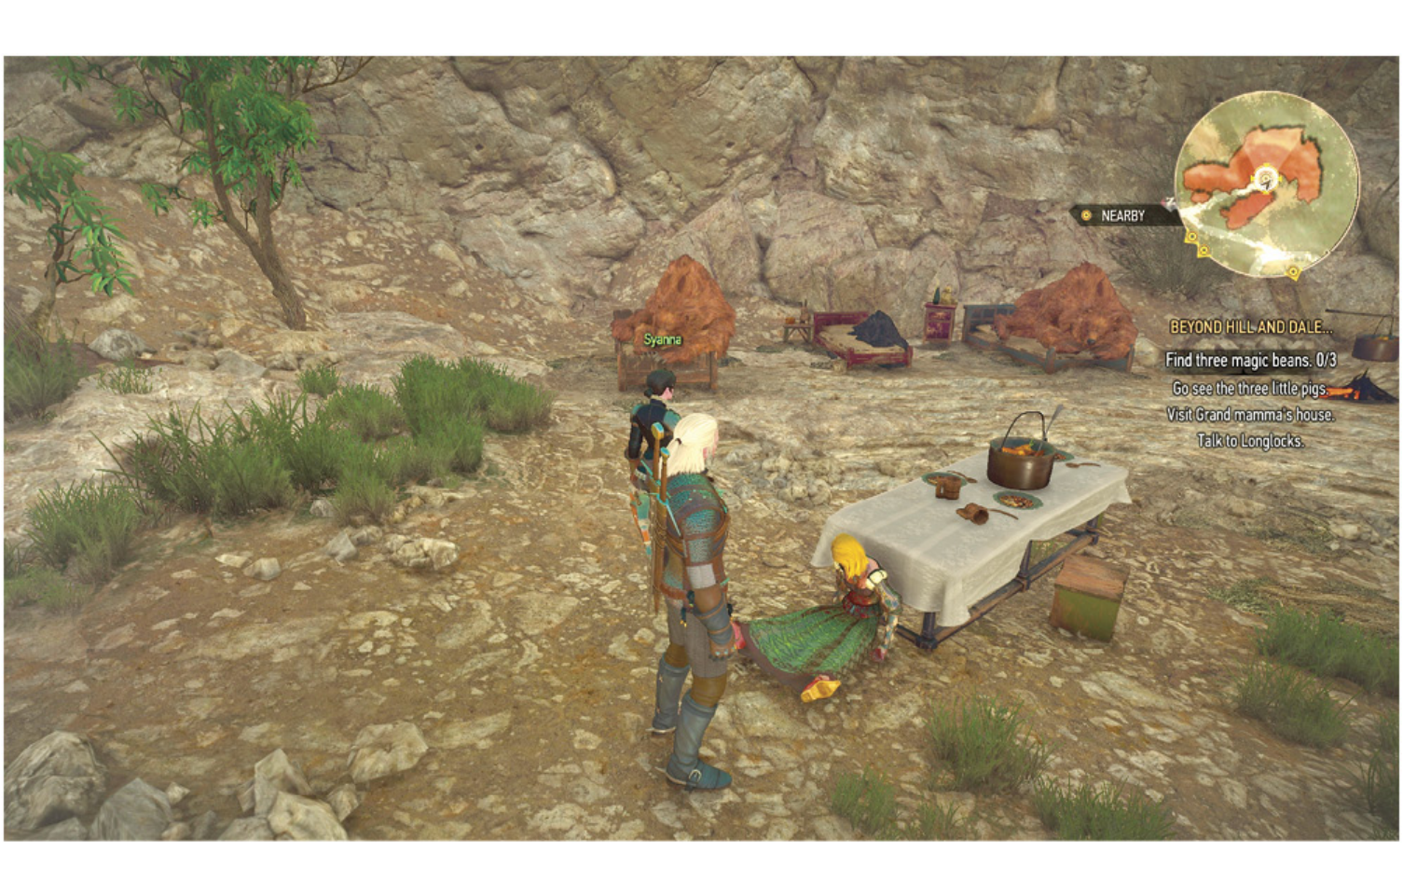
OBJECTIVES

- Visit the three bears.

OBJECTIVES

- Goldilocks and the Three Bears

On the outskirts of the forest (if you follow the path toward the edge of the woods from where you spoke to joshing Joss), is a blocked-off cave opening and an embankment where three bears are snoozing in their beds. It seems the girl with the golden locks (slumped against the table) may have accidentally woken these godless killing machines. Inspect the table, and you'll see three bowls of porridge. Take any of them, and all three bears wake up, not happy with your attempt at breakfast pilfering. Defeat all three bears in combat. Then leave; there's no magic bean here.



TASK 6: BAD WOLF

OBJECTIVES

- Visit Grand mamma's house.
- Find little Red Riding Hood
- Return to Syanna.
- Defeat the Big Bad Wolf.

OBJECTIVES

- Little Red Riding Hood

Search the woods for grandmother's house, a quaint dwelling with an outbuilding and well. The main dwelling is of most interest; enter to discover a Big Bad Wolf sleeping off the effects of a night's drinking with Redbeard. Optionally you can offer to have a drink with the fellow, but the Wolf is uninterested, before broaching the subject of magic beans. The Wolf seems to know about a bean, but he wants to reenact his fairy tale one last time. The only slight problem? The Wolf has murdered Little Red Riding Hood, as payback for all the times his gut was cut open, filled full of rocks, and drowned. Both Hood and the Hunter are slowly decomposing at the bottom of a well.

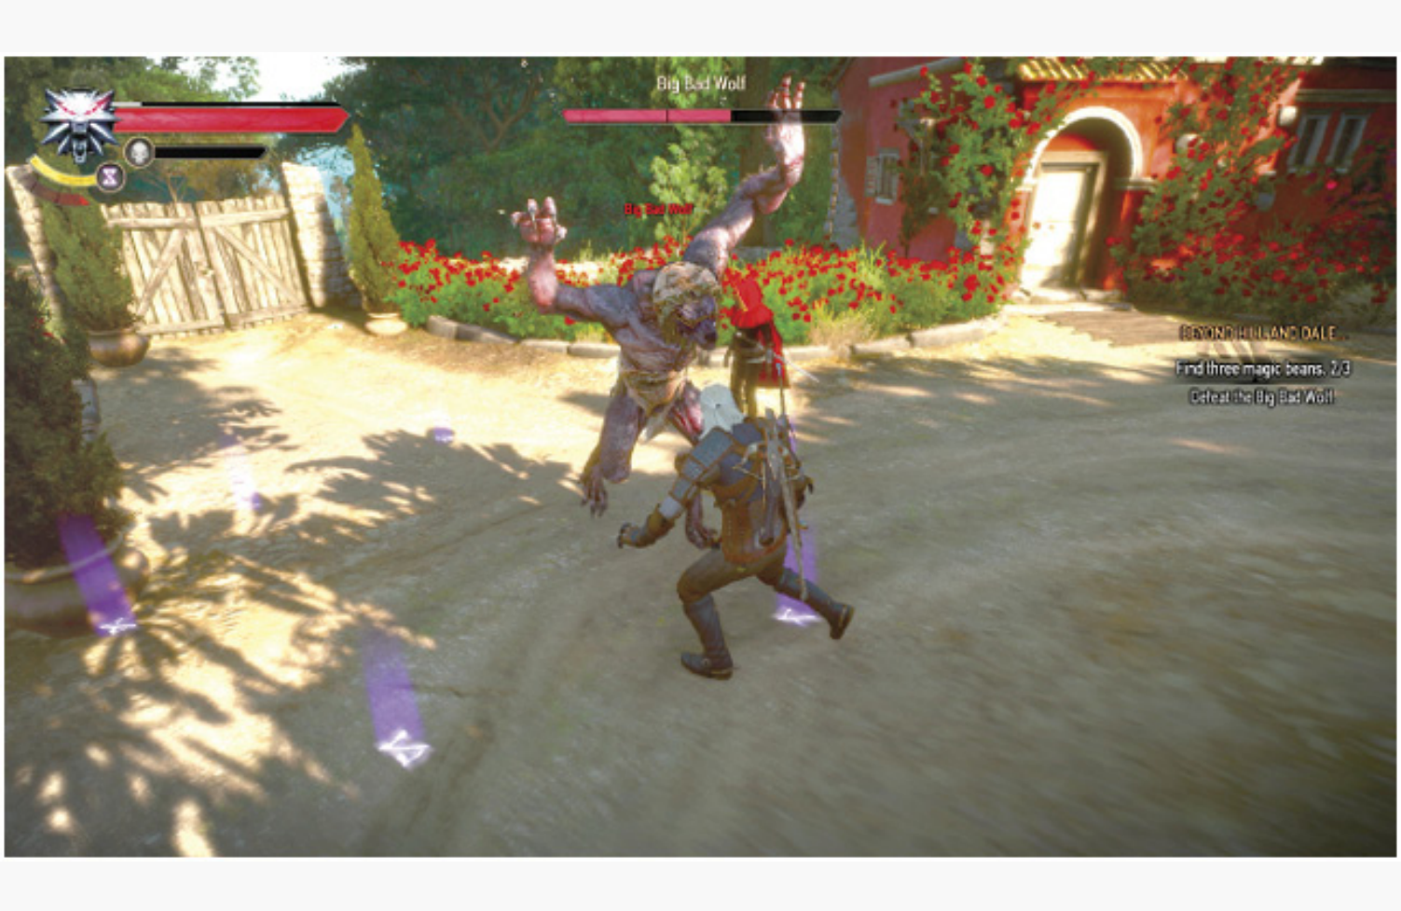
Big Bad Wolf

Syanna (Little Red Riding Hood)

Syanna has the idea of dressing up as Little Red Riding Hood. Finding the attire is simple enough; jump into the well in the grounds of grandmother's house, dive down to the investigation area, and use your Witcher Senses to locate the remains of Hood and the Hunter. Remove the Red Riding Hood from the corpse, then swim along the underwater tunnel, surfacing in the pond around the tower.

Items: Little Red Riding Hood's hood

You hand the outfit to Syanna, who asks how she looks. Answer as you wish before returning to the Big Bad Wolf. You inform him that Syanna is playing the role of the granddaughter, while you're the fetching hunter. After Syanna reacts in mock shock at her "grandmother's" big eyes, arms, and mouth, the wolf takes a lunge at you. Prepare to battle the Big Bad Wolf, using all the techniques you developed when fighting Werewolves. Syanna also helps give grandmother a good send off. After the battle, you cut the wolf's belly open, and procure the red bean.



Items: Red Bean

Afterward, Syanna seems taken aback that you haven't asked her what happened after she was cast out of the first family of Beauclair. Inquire in whatever way you wish. Once again, showing sufficient compassion will push Syanna toward showing compassion to the Duchess later on.

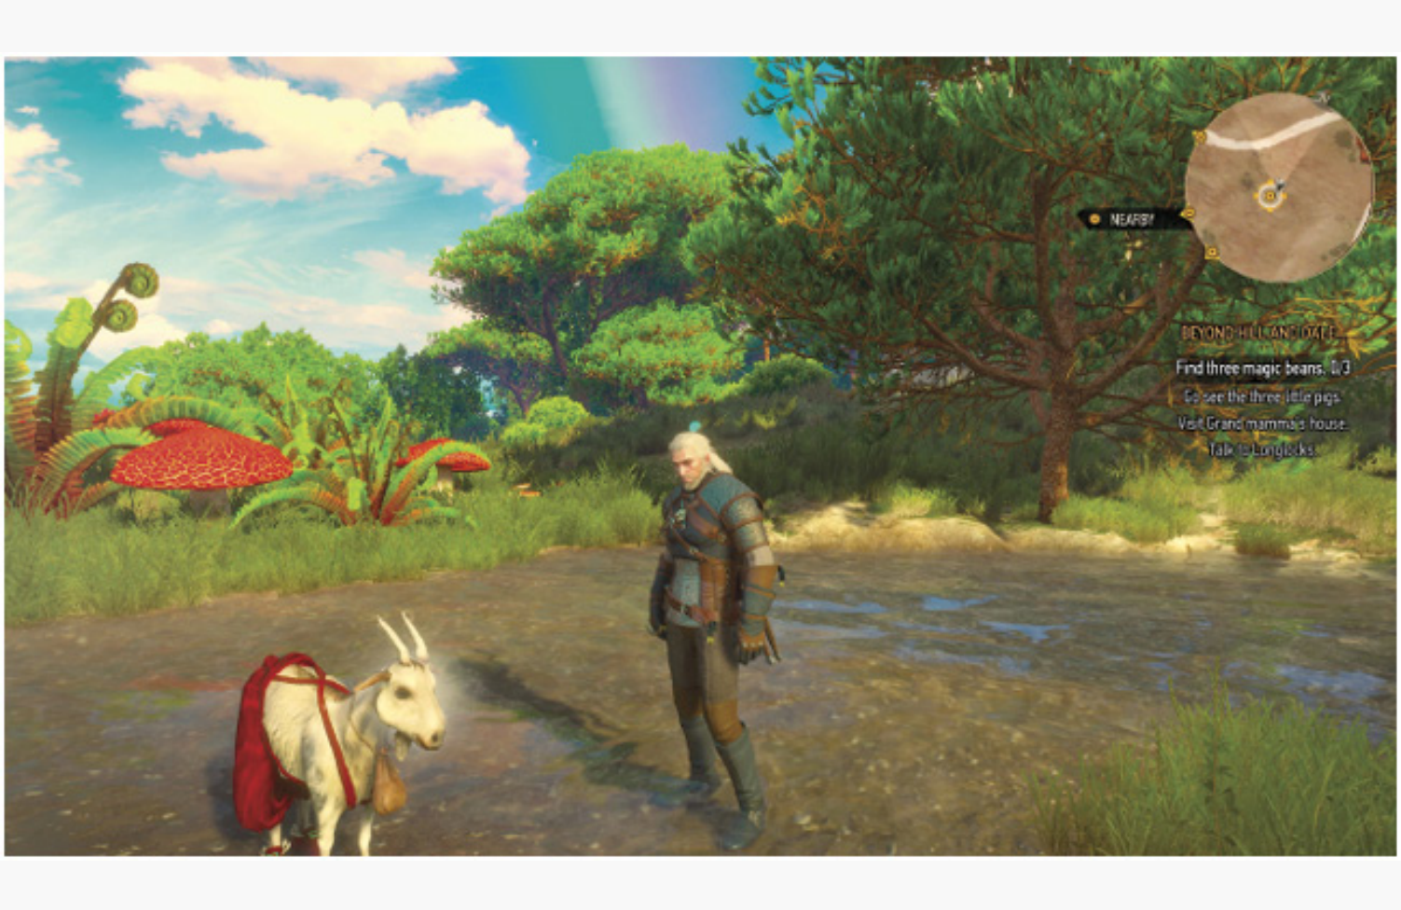
OPTIONAL (UNMARKED) TASKS

TASK 7: ONE BILLY GOAT GRUFF (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Matolek the Billy Goat

As you wind along the Yellow Brick Road, you may see a goat sporting a pair of fine pantaloons. This is Billy Goat, but he runs off before you can say hello to him. He's no fun!



TASK 8: FELINE GROOVY (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Puss in Boots

Close to the Little Flint Girl is a prowling puss, all suited and booted. He scampers off when you attempt contact, much like normal cats. He's no fun, either!

TASK 9: THE THREADBARE EMPEROR (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- The Emperor's New Clothes

On your travels along the Yellow Brick Road, you may occasionally pass what appears to be the Emperor of Nilfgaard. According to Syanna, he's strolling about, showing off his new robes (which are apparently invisible). Apparently, the new attire reveals itself but to the wise and cultivated. All you can see are his pants. He's no help to your objectives, however.

TASK 10: WHERE WITCHERS FEAR TO TREAD (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Thumbelina

Just before you reach the bridge and visit the three little pigs' houses, assuming you're moving counterclockwise from the winter village, on your right (northwest) side is a strange little hamlet; with emphasis on the word "little". A tiny cluster of houses and a windmill have but a single inhabitant. Be careful where you tread, as you can easily step on the single, miniscule inhabitant of the village, incurring the wrath of Syanna.

TASK 11: SOMEWHERE, UNDER THE RAINBOW (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Tuatha De Danann (Irish folklore)

Between the village where the Little Flint Girl is, and Thumbelina's village, is a large rainbow arc. Head through the trees to a short path leading to a pot of gold! Beware if you're intending on gathering any valuables from this pot; if you step too closely, the pot changes into a golden panther with an unfriendly disposition.

TASK 13: THE KNIGHT'S ERROR (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Will o' the Wisp (general folklore)

Move to the smaller ponds between Joss' location, and Longlocks' tower, and chance upon a glowing will o' the wisp. Despite Syanna's warnings, you can follow this orb to another marshy pond area, where the corpse of a knight errant can be found. His relic armor and steel sword are easily pilfered, though it can only be worn in the Fablesphere.

Items: Toussaint Armor, Boots, Gauntlets, Trousers, Steel Sword

TASK 14: IN THE BELLY OF THE BEAST (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Dragon of Wawel Hill

Over on the shore of the lake, close to the bridge near the goose's house, you discover the rotting form of the Wawel dragon. While you and Syanna discuss the origins of this fairy tale, you cut the belly open, and unsuccessfully attempt to locate any beans.

TASK 15: A RED-HOT CHILI PEPPER (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Futuristic bard composition

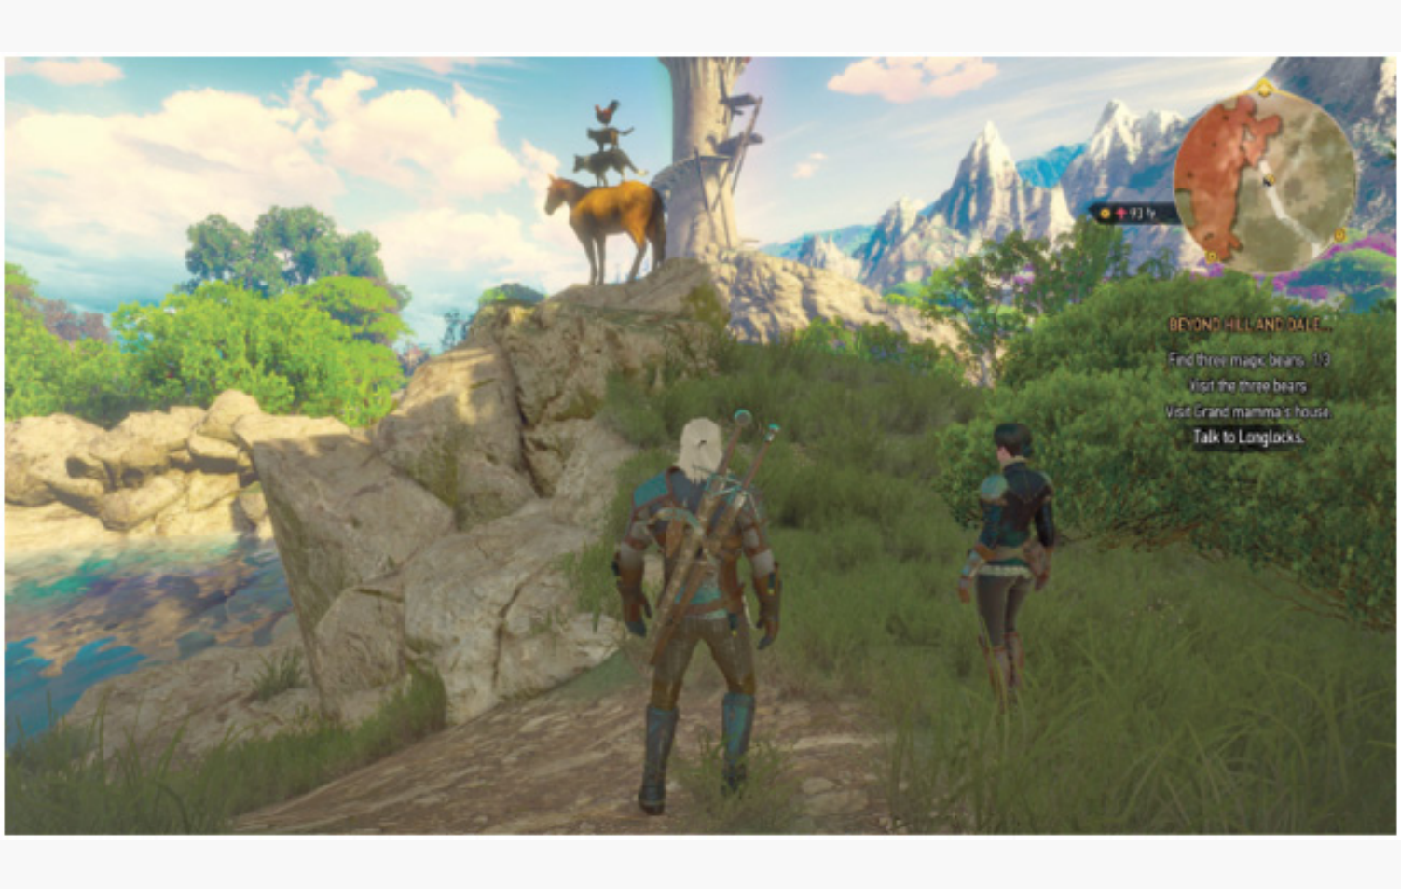
Venture "under the bridge" close to the goose's house, and you can discover a strange vegetable. Though red in color, it isn't a bean, but rather a pepper.

TASK 16: HEN ON CAT ON DOG ON HORSE (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- The Musicians of Bremen

Close to grandmother's house, on a rocky outcrop overlooking the tower at the edge of the woods, is a most peculiar scene; a horse with a dog standing on top of it, then a cat atop the dog, and a hen atop them all. Get too close, lob a bomb, or attempt some crossbow aiming, and face an admonishment from Syanna. No matter; there's no bean here.



TASK 17: TURNING PIXIES INTO DUST (UNMARKED)

Lastly, a cloud of pixie dust announcing a cluster of up to 12 evil gnomes also continues throughout your stay. Expect to encounter them once, in the following Locations:

- The fork in the path between Longlock's tower and the village with the signpost, close to the field with the posts in it.
- Between the winter village and the miniature village, by the bridge before the three little pigs' houses.
- In the hilly woodland just outside the goose's house.
- In the scrub land near the bridge, between the three little pigs' houses and the goose's house, close to the water.
- On the verge of the path between Joss and the three bears.
- In the field where the beanstalk grows, close to the winter village.

- Redbeard Barbarossa the Robber

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during Blood and Wine: Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale.... It is only available prior to climbing the beanstalk, while you are searching for the three magic beans.

While exploring the Fablesphere, be sure you check the Notice Board in the chilly village to the northwest, near to where the Little Flint Girl is standing. On the board is a letter marked "Loosey this Goosey!" from Balbina the goose, requesting your help. Syanna isn't that interested in befriending poultry, but a goose in distress may be worth your time. Set off along the path, heading southwest, passing Longlock's tower on the left, and engaging a group of violent gnomes as you reach Thumbelina's village.

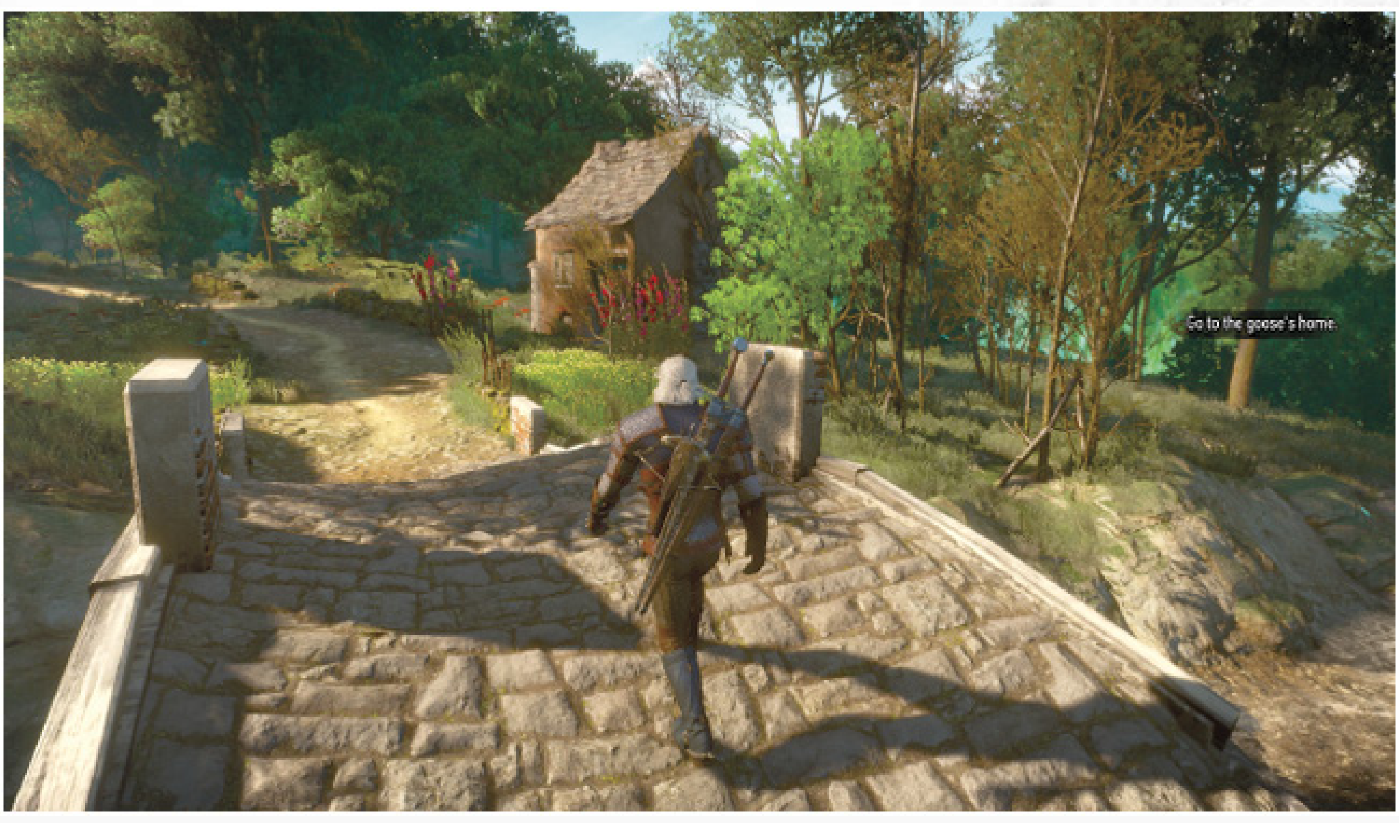
OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to find the goose.
- Follow the tracks.

Remain on the path, crossing the bridge, running past the remains of the three little pigs' dwellings, and crossing a second bridge. On the other side of the bridge lies the modest dwelling of the goose. Make the following discoveries on the ground outside:

- Broken feathers, indicating a fight.

The objectives update, and there are more feathers and footprints to follow into the wooded hills. A little farther into the woodland, expect to encounter some furious pixie folk.



OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Redbeard and his bandits.
- Let the goose out of the cage.

Balbina the Goose

Farther up the hill, is a small camp where two dwarven bandits, and their leader Barbarossa Redbeard are guarding a "goose in distress," and must be slaughtered where they stand. Treat them like the common bandits they are (watching for Redbeard's crossbow attacks before you close in on him). Then search the corpse of the infamous pirate for the cage key, and open the cage. With a shake of her tail-feathers, the goose waddles out, having laid a golden egg for your troubles. The quest concludes.

Items: Cage key, Golden egg (+1 Ability Point)

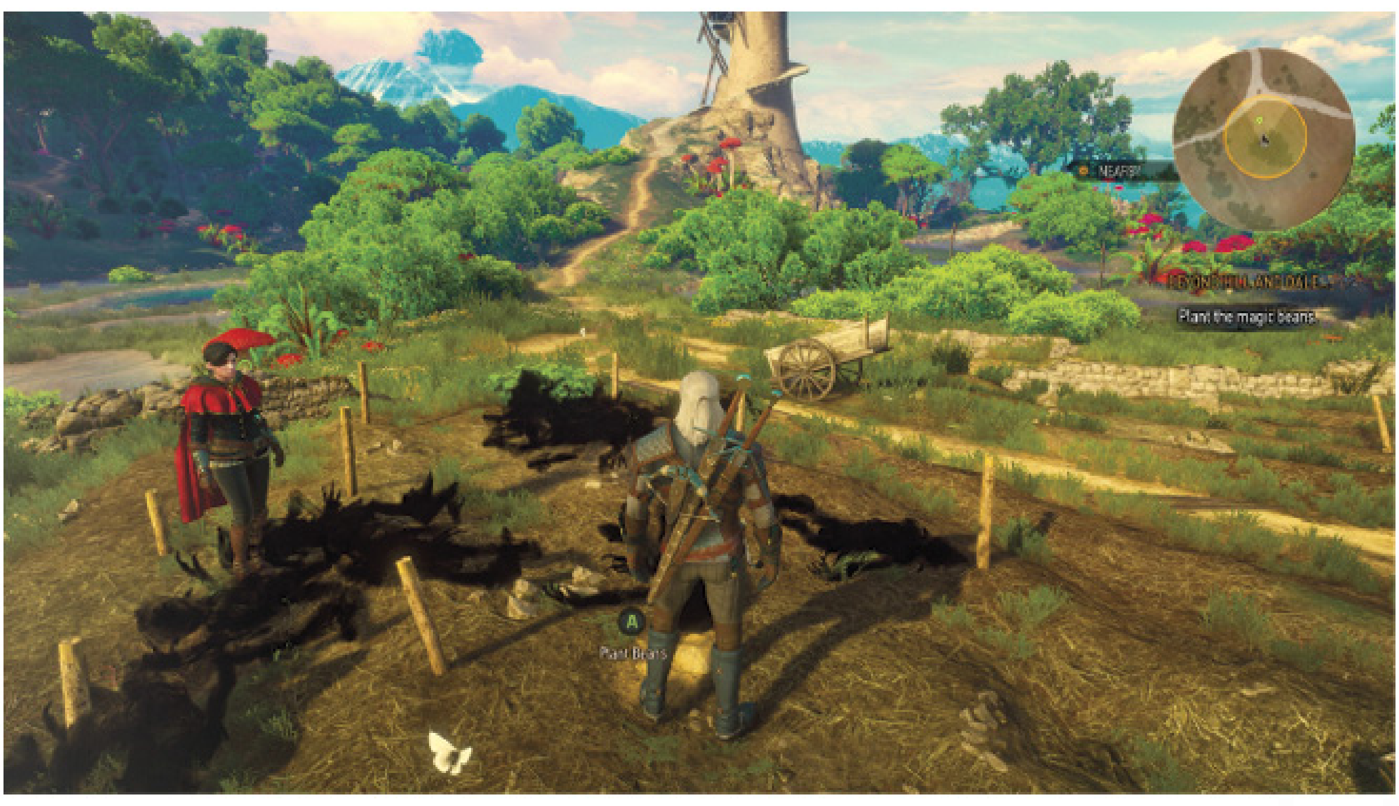
OBJECTIVES

- Plant the magic beans.

Once you have all three magic beans (from the Pig, Longlocks, and the Bad Wolf), Syanna suggests planting them by the path near the tower. When you reach the planting field, you're set upon by a dozen appearing Pixies. Remove these annoyances, then inspect the investigation area (using your Witcher Senses) to find the correct spot.

You place the three beans, before Syanna quickly retreats to cover. A moment later, the ground erupts as a mass of snaking tendrils bursts upward, knocking you off your feet.



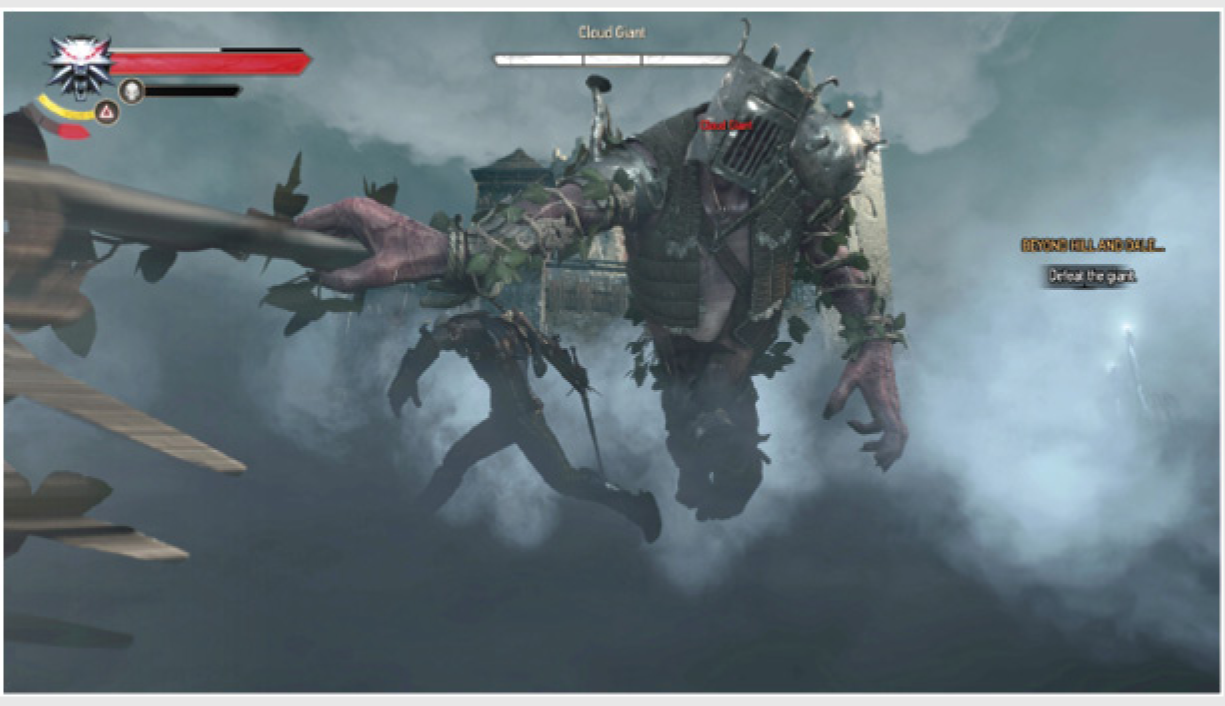
You climb the towering beanstalk with Syanna, ascending into, and then onto the clouds above the Fablesphere. As you look over to Syanna, she tells you there will be time to admire the view later. First though, is the owner of this castle. A lumbering giant crashes out from the entrance, intent on grinding your bones to make his bread.

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the giant.

DEFEATING THE CLOUD GIANT: HIS ATTACKS

The Cloud Giant has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:



Weapon Swing: A medium-range weapon swing. Dodge or leap to the side, or back away to avoid being struck.

Weapon Overhead Smash: A medium-range weapon smash, dropping vertically. Highly damaging, so avoid using dodges and retreating.

Kick, Stomp, and Swipe: The Cloud Giant sometimes kicks, stomps, or swipes with his left arm; both push you back, increasing the distance between you, allowing the giant to be more effective with his weapon swings. Simply avoid these by dodging.

Charge Attack: If you're at long range, the Cloud Giatn occasionally attempts a charge to close the distance. If you're caught, expect to be pushed back, and possibly sent tumbling over. Recover and retreat, or simply roll or dodge to the side to avoid it.

Whirlwind Attack: Occurring at both short and long distances, this is the the Cloud Giant's most severe series of strikes, so watch for him raising his weapon up to the side of the head before his spins around. Damage is significant, and you're sent flying. Parrying is not an option, but dodging (or letting Quen bear the brunt of this) is.

Cloud Teleport: Using his lair to the best of his advantage, he drops into a cloud, and a moment later, leaps back out, and brings his mighty weapon slamming down with an overhead smash. React with dodging, while keeping an eye on where he leaps up from so you aren't caught.

DEFEATING THE CLOUD GIANT: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Engage this behemoth in combat amid the clouds. Syanna helps, but it still takes skill and cunning to vanquish this tough son of a wench, which hits pretty hard for an illusion. Use the techniques you attempted when you slew the other giant while first adventuring in Toussaint, or employ similar techniques to those when facing a Cyclops, or the Ice Giant in Undvik.

In addition, to shorten combat considerably, you stay within the three piles of metal objects. As this battle takes place on a cloud, during a thunderstorm, these objects are frequently struck by lightning. The objects remain electrified afterwards, so lure the Cloud Giant close to one of the metal piles still writhing with energy, and wait for the foe to make a giant swing, and a giant mistake! The giant's weapon strikes the metal, electrocuting the fool and allowing you to attack him for a few moments. Keep this up!

And They All Lived Happily Ever After...

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Syanna.
- Jump into the well.

After the fight, Syanna seems reluctant to leave. You can mention the following in answering her questions:

PLAN 1: ACROBATIC INTIMACY

- You can sit here a while longer. She begins to open up, telling Geralt she needs a man, since she doesn't know what awaits her once they leave the Fableshpere. Let her "have her way" with Geralt and she reveals more than her terrible upbringing...

You both fall through the clouds, losing clothing in the process. This is your most acrobatic display of intimacy since Yennefer introduced a unicorn that one time.

Items: ♥Carnal Knowledge: Syanna

After you land, Geralt thinks they should talk. Syanna remarks that it seems no woman has ever treated him this way. At least he now knows how women must often feel.

PLAN 2: ACERBIC INQUIETUDE

- Complain about her moaning, and ensure Syanna is less than enamored with you. She halts the conversation, and you both leave.

Whether you've decided to tumble through the skies with Syanna or not, run up the Giant's castle drawbridge. At this point, there are three optional (unmarked) tasks you can complete, before leaving the Fablesphere forever. Once you're done larking around, enter the cloud castle and search for the well, hopping over and plummeting back into reality, and the Palace of Beauclair. Regis is waiting for you by a secret exit from the Fablesphere, near a formal fountain. Regis is particularly vehement with his dislike of Syanna; feel free to agree or admonish him in your answers. The meeting with Dettlaff is scheduled, Main Quest: Tesham Mutna begins, and this quest concludes.

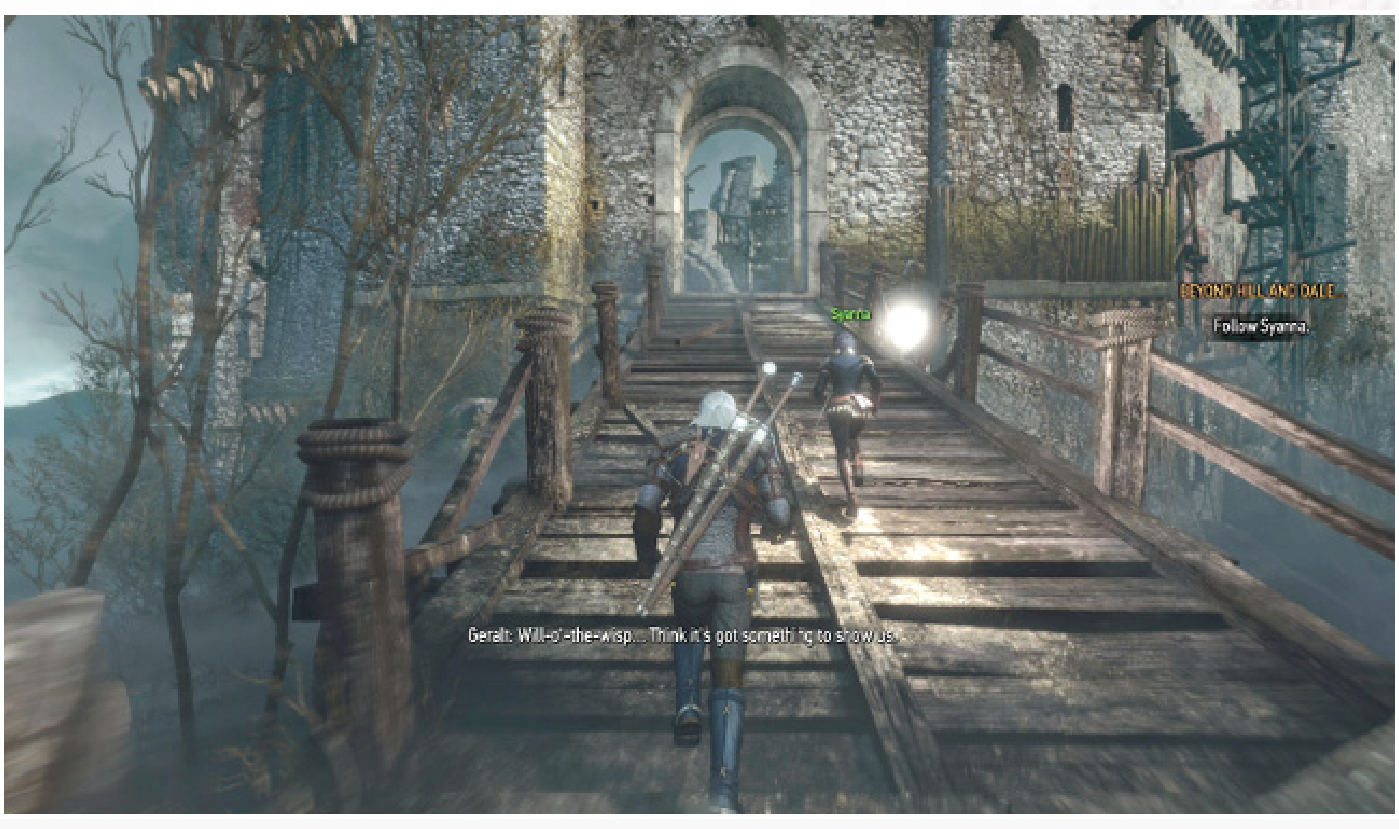
OPTIONAL (UNMARKED) TASKS

TASK 1: THE WILL O' THE WISP (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Will o' the Wisp (general folklore, Dark Souls)

As you cross the drawbridge, you should notice a will o' the wisp. This glowing orb isn't to be trusted (according to Syanna), but you can stop for a moment, leap off the left side of the drawbridge, down a path under the drawbridge, across a rickety bridge, and into a cave with a relic sword to gather. Burn the campfire it is in to access it.



Geralt: Will-o'-the-wisp... Think it's got something to show us.

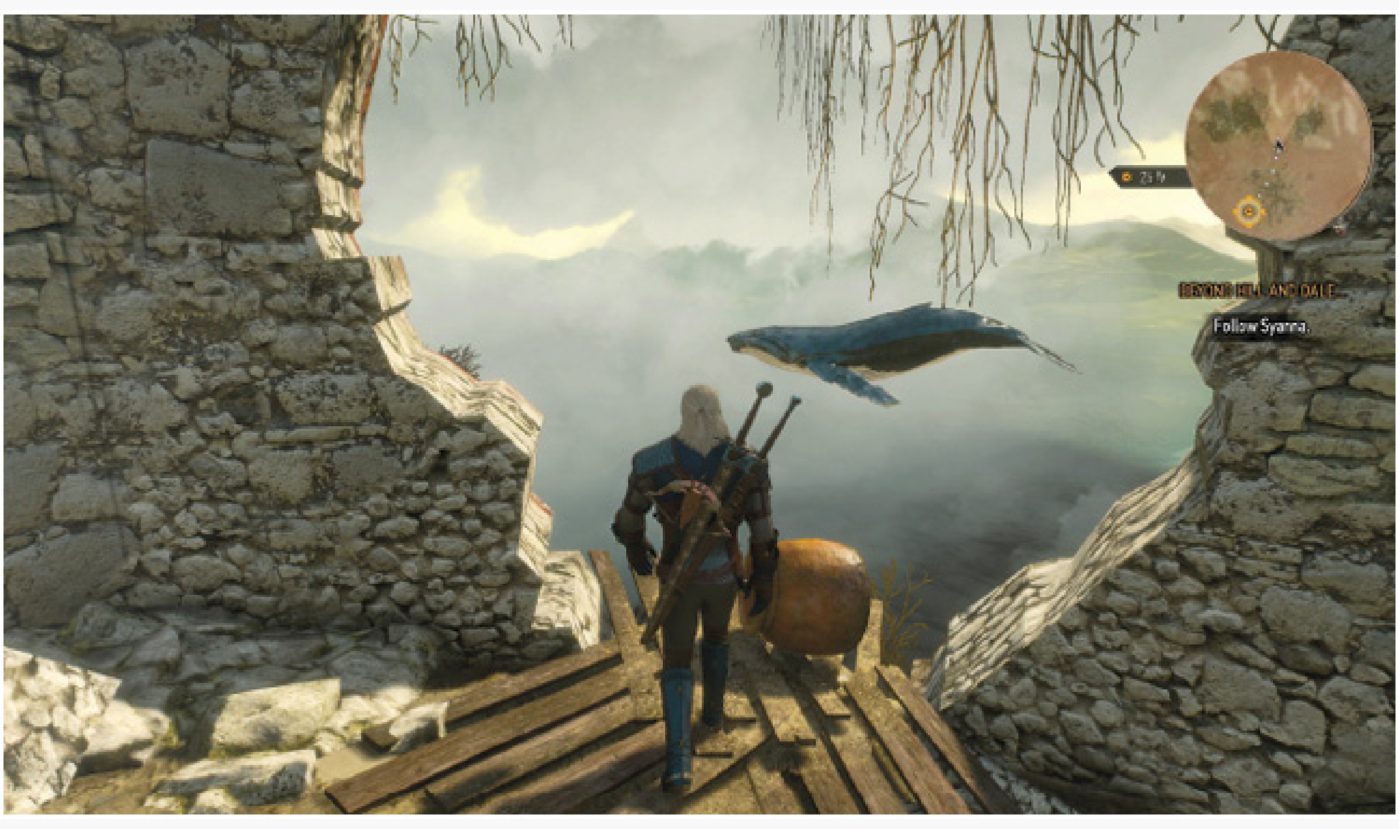
Items: Relic Sword: Geshelft

TASK 2: THE WHALE (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Futuristic author composition

Enter the castle, and make an immediate left turn. Step through the archway, and view the clouds outside. Keep watching; against all probability, a sperm whale has been called into existence, several miles above the Fablesphere. It plummets out of view. Strangely, a bowl of petunias didn't appear at the same time.



TASK 3: THE DONKEY (UNMARKED)

OBJECTIVES

- Donkeyskin fable

Upon entering the castle, search around for some stables where a donkey is happily munching away on some hay, and excreting a pile of gold. This "magic gold" can be gathered, though it disappears once you return to Beauclair.

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the Unseen Elder's lair.
- Open the entrance to the Unseen Elder's lair using Orianna's key.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed Blood and Wine: Main Quest: Blood Simple, you've met up with Regis on the boat landing, and you've refused Regis' pleas to free Syanna instead, answering that you won't change your mind.

WARNING!MAJOR QUEST DECISION AHEAD!

▶ This is the "point of no return." Once you enter the Unseen Elder's cave at the southern shores of the lake, you cannot access Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale... You have to pick a choice and stick with it!

Emiel Regis Rohellec Terzieff-Godefroy

Once you've had time to prepare (and concoct at least one Swallow potion), agree to find the Unseen Elder with Regis. You set sail and chart a roughly southerly course across Seidhe Llygad Lake. As you cross, Regis informs you of the customs for greeting such a venerable vampire as the Unseen Elder. Regis leaves the boat to reconnoiter the area.

Maneuver the boat to the investigation area, disembark, and climb the stone steps on the bank of the lake, and around to Regis' location. He suggests you use the magic key you acquired from Orianna, at the end of Main Quest: Blood Simple. Before you do, you may wish to draw Aard strength (and add an ability point) from the nearby Place of Power, on the rocky outcrop overlooking the lake. Then head to the blocked cave entrance, and open it, leading down into the ancient vampire lair known as Hen Gàidh.

Elders And Betters: Getting It In The Neck

OBJECTIVES

- Enter the Unseen Elder's lair.

Unseen Elder

Descend into the cave passage with Regis, moving along the tunnel until you reach water. Then climb the rocks to the right, entering a cavern with a Fleder you must defeat (though Regis makes short work of this lesser vampire if you let him). Climb a second set of natural rock steps, passing a lit wall brazier, that leads into a grand and arched cavern. There is not one sound in this silent place.

The silence is broken by the snarling voice of a monstrous host, a fearsome shadowy form that speaks to Regis in a foreign tongue. Regis' response is cut off. Answer the Unseen Elder as you wish; it matters not as the Elder launches an attack on you, faster than you can blink. Tearing at your neck, it feeds on your blood, hoists you by the neck, and throws you tumbling down a deep side tunnel. Not the conclusion to the meeting you'd been hoping for.

OBJECTIVES

- Find a healing potion. Drink a health potion to regenerate Vitality.
- (Optional) Collect the items and gear you lost as you fell.

You regain consciousness with busted ribs, internal hemorrhaging, and your health bar emptying faster than Zoltan Chivay's tankard at an ale festival. Access your inventory, and swig down a Swallow potion (of any strength). If you don't have a Swallow potion, choose a White Raffard decoction. If you don't have either, you can prepare a potion using alchemy.

After staggering and dropping to the ground, you regain consciousness some time later. Before you gain your bearings, make sure you gain your belongings; use your Witcher Senses and hunt for your Crossbow and bolts, Steel Sword, and Silver Sword that lie scattered about the cave. Don't forget to re-equip them!

What Lies Unseen

Onwards And Upwards

OBJECTIVES

- Get out of the cave.
- Find a way to appease the Unseen Elder.

After your short rest, you realize the Elder will kill you even if you manage to find your way out of this subterranean labyrinth. From your current position, climb to the small, flat cave plateau, and run left through the curved tunnel into a strange and terrifying place. Crumbling battlements, and streams flowing upwards? Drop into the investigation area, and loot some notes from a couple of sacks near the gravity-defying waterfall. Read them to gain a better understanding of your predicament.

A DIFFERENT GATHERING AT HEN GÀIDTH

As you explore, it's worth taking a little extra time (and checking the Atlas map of this area) to find various casks (indicated on the guide map as chests) containing ancient coins, strange statues and artifacts, and precious mineral deposits. There's Hen Gàidth Relic armor to gather, too.

OBJECTIVES

- Explore the cave and find a way out.
- Read the notes. Find the mage.

Peering upwards, you see a dimly-lit passage above you, which leads back to the Unseen Elder's "welcome room." It seems impossible to reach. Head down the only tunnel (left and behind you if you're facing the waterfall), following the set of footprints (which can be seen using your Witcher Senses), passing a lantern and a secondary tunnel to your left. When you reach the end of this passage, prepare to do battle with four Protofleders. There are casks to ransack as your reward.

Back down the main tunnel, continue down the main tunnel, disturbing three Protofleder vampires (take them to task using tactics of the Bestiary). After demolishing them in their cave, climb the side of the cave wall, which leads to a narrow, higher passage. Continue to follow the footprints.

Geralt: Damn, you're ugly.

Run through the narrow passage, to a stone bridge and cross it, heading through an archway. You reach the megascope of a wizard (probably the one whose notes you read) and can find further papers in a pile of old books on the ground. Give them a read, before examining the area:

- There's a damaged megascope along with the books in the pile.
- A deep set of male footprints leads away from the books.

Follow the footprints to a stream that flows upwards. The footprints continue onward and upward. You carefully tread along the same route, until you're standing on the ceiling. Gravity has flipped!

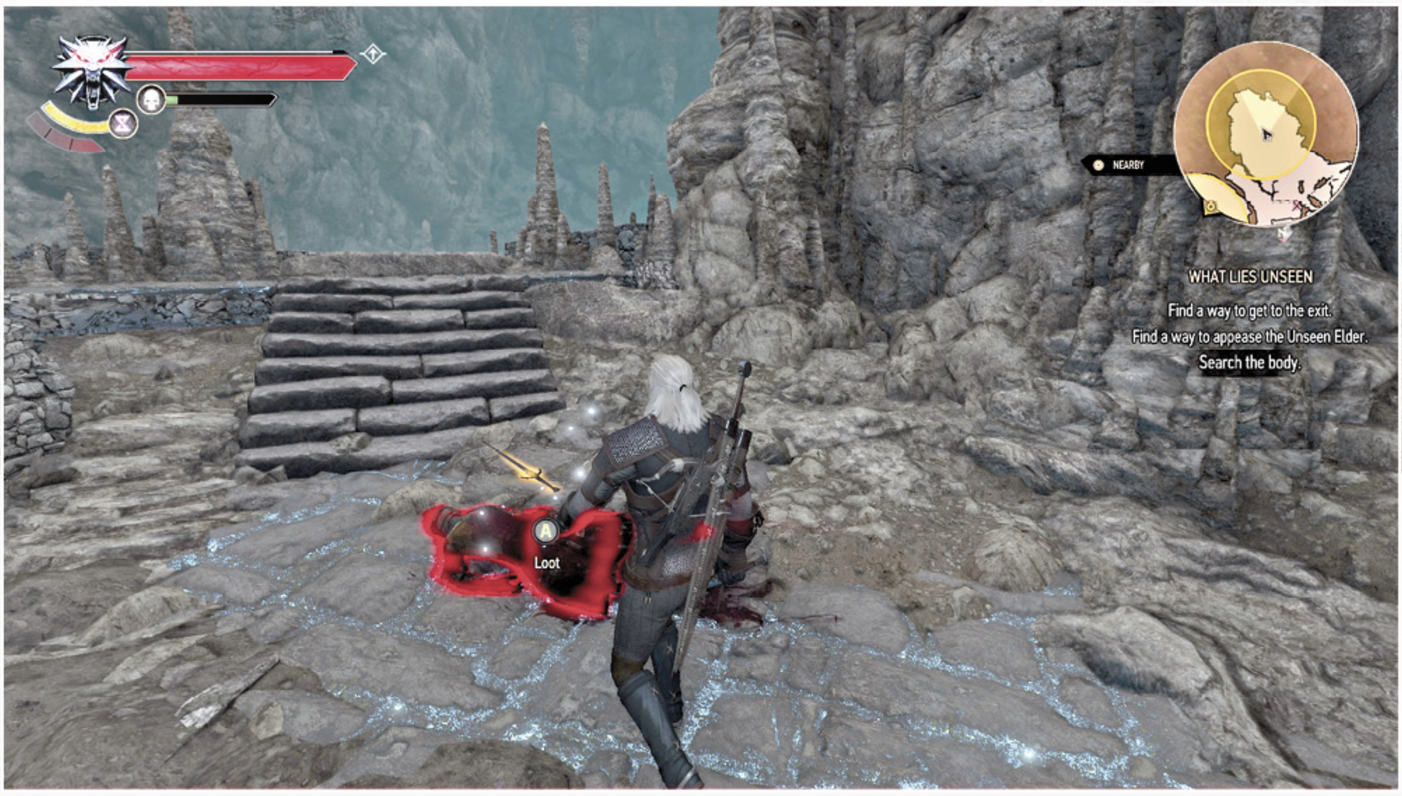
What Lies Unseen

Understanding The Gravity Of The Situation

OBJECTIVES

- Search the body. Read the mage's notes.
- Find an offering to appease the Unseen Elder.

You're on a turret, looking across at a huge rock. Open the chest for more armor, then run down the steps, between the stalagmites (that are technically stalactites), following the footprints along an eerie stream bathed in blue light. Climb up onto the rock outcrop, and face down a Protofleder in combat, close to a small, collapsed bridge. After bettering the vampire, search the area it was guarding, on the perimeter of this cave "ceiling". Gather some crumpled notes from the corpse of the mage whose footprints you were following (and look nearby for his Relic sword). It gives you clues to your next course of action; to find an offering for the Unseen Elder. The offering is close by; a strange, glowing formation of rock tucked close to the ruined bridge you just leapt across.



WHAT LIES UNSEEN
Find a way to get to the exit.
Find a way to appease the Unseen Elder.
Search the body.

Items: Crumpled notes, Offering for the Unseen Elder

Retrace your steps, leaping across the broken bridge, before facing the central "islands" of this cavern, leaping to a higher promontory, and weaving around some more rock formations to a large rocky pillar. You figure out you need to collapse the base of the rock. Access Aard, and blast the rocky pillar; the rock falls upward.

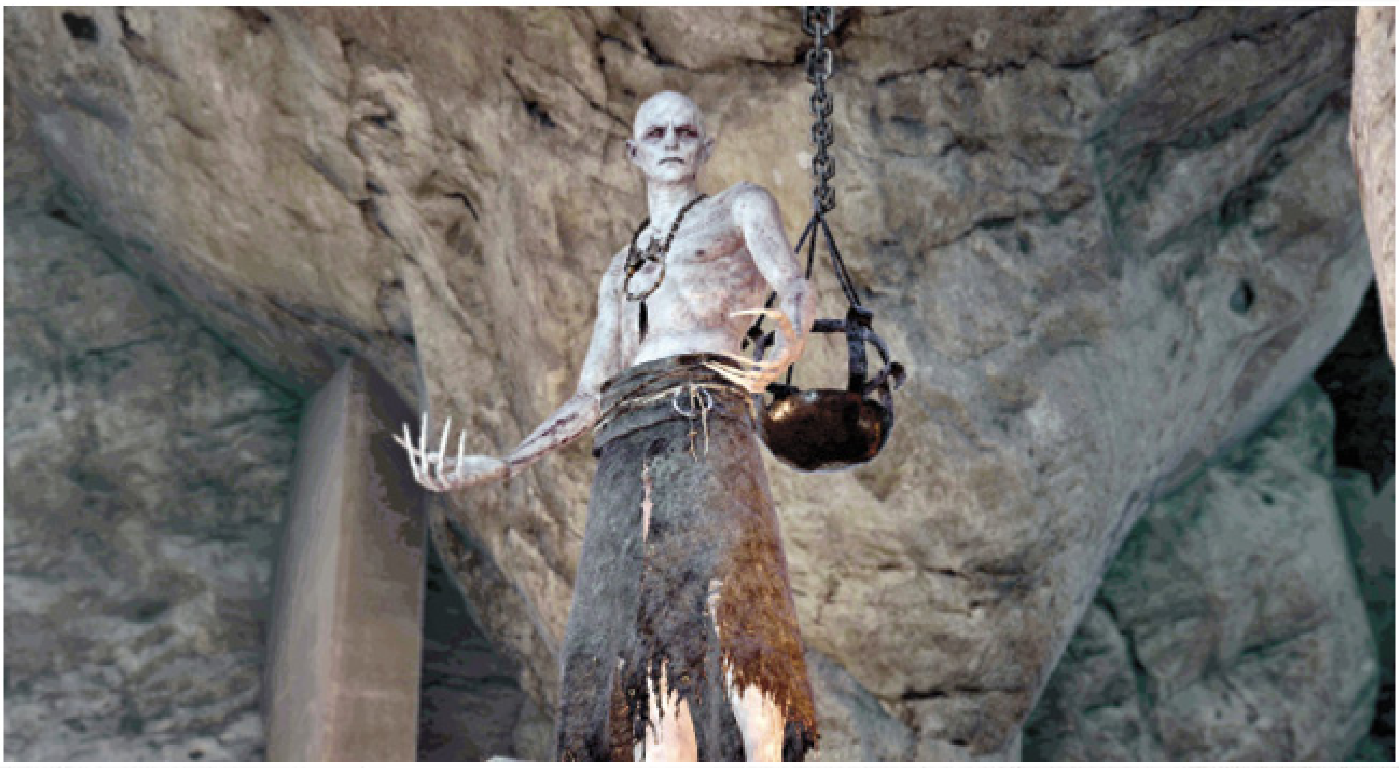
OBJECTIVES

- Jump into the water.
- Reach the platform and get out of the cave.
- Speak to the Unseen Elder.

Your only route is to leap off the nearby waterfall. You're carried down to a cavern you have a passing familiarity with; this is where you first emerged after healing yourself. Now the huge cavern has an additional feature, the rock you dislodged, which has fallen and created a platform you can climb up onto. This, in turn, enables you to reach the remains of the bridge and steps up to the exit archway. Head through, into a cave corridor that winds to the left, and into the chamber of the Elder.

Elders And Betters: A Concise Conversation

The Unseen Elder seems a trifle surprised you're still alive, and is content to listen to you, if only for a moment, once you present your gift to him. When you're ordered to speak, you can:



- Concentrate on only the factual (yellow-colored) comments and questions; asking about Dettlaff. Explain the situation, choosing any (yellow-colored) conversation choice, but focus on explaining how Dettlaff will be a threat to the Elder; as the population currently under attack will seek out every last vampire to kill over the following decades, which could really hinder the Elder's sleeping patterns. The Elder seems agreeable. Answer as you wish in regards to what you want to do with Dettlaff: The Elder agrees to summon Dettlaff to Tesham Mutna, once you reach this fortification yourself.

- Asking optional questions infuriates the Elder; to such an extent that if you try this more than once, the Unseen Elder tires of you, and snuffs out your life. This isn't the recommended way to end this chat.

Phew... That went better than I expected it would.

Dismissed from the lair of the Unseen Elder, you reunite with Regis. Feel free to ask if all Unseen Elders are like the one you met, and how Regis can tell you the previous near-death experience went "better than expected" (answer any following questions as you wish). Then you tell Regis it is time to face Dettlaff.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible immediately once you have completed either (but not both) of the following Main Quests:

- Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale...: You conclude the search for Syanna, and she arrives with you and Regis to meet Dettlaff.
- Main Quest: What Lies Unseen: You conclude your talk with the Unseen Elder, and you and Regis head to the place where Dettlaff is to be summoned.

Either choice has a major effect regarding how this quest concludes.

WITH SYANNA: A RIBBON OF RED

- Some time later, both you and Regis reach Tesham Mutna; the old fortification where Dettlaff has agreed to meet. If Syanna is with you, after staring at the view for a moment, Syanna seems unimpressed with this pile of stones. Optionally ask her if she's nervous to see Dettlaff again. But you're here to tell Syanna to be ready; Dettlaff will arrive at any moment. A few moments later, Dettlaff appears.

Did you truly feign it all? That which bound us was a... ruse?

Dettlaff has little time for past affection with his ex-lover, and he launches into her with a vicious attack:

- If, during Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale..., you won (or paid for) the ribbon for Syanna, from the Girl with the Flint, the attack doesn't kill her, and she vanishes, appearing back in the Fablesphere. It seems her Uncle's talisman was imbued with some luck after all.
- If, during Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale..., you lost a game of Gwent against the Girl with the Flint, or ignored the Girl altogether, and didn't obtain Syanna's ribbon, the attack ends in Syanna's life being snuffed out, within the cursed walls of Tesham Mutna.

If Dettlaff killed Syanna he is ready to depart, he got what he came for. You can choose to fight him, or let him go. In all other outcomes combat is imminent.

WITHOUT SYANNA: SUMMONED TO SLAUGHTER

- Some time later, both you and Regis reach Tesham Mutna; the old fortification where Dettlaff is to be summoned. After staring at the view for a moment, you can converse with Regis. Optionally ask him if he's angry you didn't free Syanna. But you're here to request Regis inform the Elder that you're ready for Dettlaff to be summoned. Regis whispers to one of his ravens, and it flies away.

From the depths of the Unseen Elder's cave, the bats carry a message that pauses the vampires attacking Beauclair in their tracks. Carried on the wind, the order is given, and Dettlaff cannot refuse.

A highly-annoyed Dettlaff appears at Tesham Mutna, demanding to know why he was summoned. You can answer how you wish (that you're here to kill him, or demand the attacks on the city are stopped). Either answer begins Dettlaff's transformation into his vampiric form. The battle is on!

IF YOU ACKNOWLEDGE ANY GODS...START PRAYING, NOW!

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Prepare for the fight.
- Help Regis fight Dettlaff.

Dettlaff's charge against you is thwarted by Regis, who takes the form of a vampire and dislocates Dettlaff's shoulder in the process. Popping the socket back into place, the two vampires hiss, before launching a flurry of claws and leaps across the ruined plateau. When you are able, stop for a moment. This is a critical moment to fully prepare for the fight of your life! Have you swigged your Black Blood, coated your sword in Vampire Oil, and understood the few weaknesses that the Higher Vampire Dettlaff possesses? Only then, should you rush forward.

Emiel Regis Rohellec Terzieff-Godefroy (vampire form)

Dettlaff van der Eretein (vampire form)

OBJECTIVES

- JDefeat Dettlaff

Amid the tumbling and lashes, both you and Regis manage to subdue Dettlaff, but Regis stops you ending the fight with a killing blow. This proves to be a costly mistake, as Dettlaff blinks out of existence, appearing again to thrust his claws through Regis' back. Throttled and thrown against the battlements like a ragdoll, Regis seems in no state to aid you. The fight against Dettlaff now begins in earnest!

STAGE 1: VAMPIRE FORM

DEFEATING DETTLAFF THE VAMPIRE: DETTLAFF'S ATTACKS

Dettlaff exhibits the same level of initial ferocity that he did during your first encounter with him, during Main Quest: Blood Run. Therefore, similar tactics apply:

Dettlaff is inhumanely fast, and you should remain extremely cautious when fighting this Higher vampire. With super-human speed and strength, he uses fog to literally disappear, and dash out of to claw with almost unmatched ferocity. This mist is also how he quickly changes position; almost faster than you can blink!

Light Attack (Melee): Expect a light attack with his talons; there are three variations of this, and all are best parried.

Strong Attack (Melee): Watch for a slightly slower, more pronounced strike with his talons. There are three variations of this, and all should be parried, or better yet, countered so you can quickly deal damage back to him.

Combination Attack (Melee): Expect a combination of three to five connected strikes, with two variations; usually from the flank, from behind, and appearing from the mist. You have little time to react, so continuously parry. Failing that, roll or dodge just before the first strike connects.

Short Dash Attack (Special): Watch for a fast dash attack, a brief transformation into mist, finishing with a second fast dash attack. Don't be coaxed into attacking after the first hit; you'll slice through mist and miss him. Remain on the defensive.

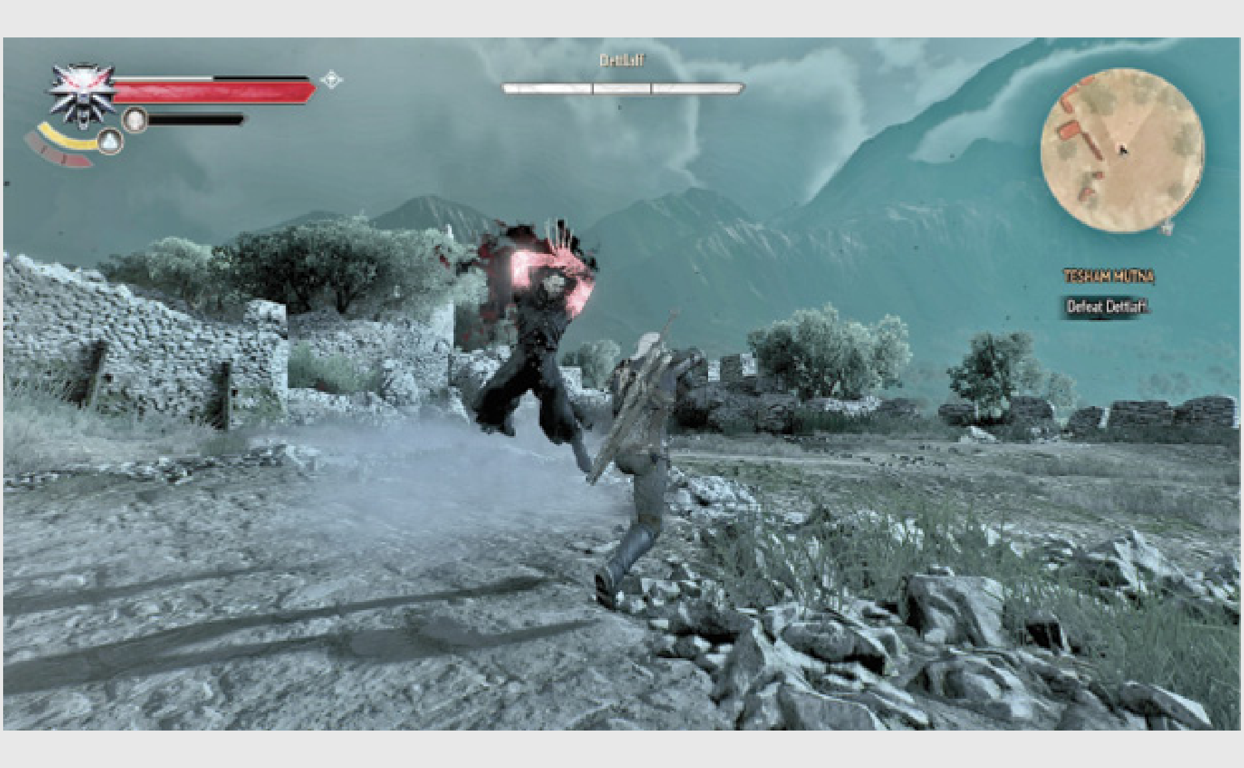
Dash Attack (Special): A variation on the short dash finishes with a short stop before a strong slashing attack. This is a good place to retaliate; countering the strong final strike with one (or two) of your own. But don't get greedy; he flees from your strikes with ease!

Strong Uppercut Attack (Melee): Expect a strong attack with a flourish that can stagger you, leaving him moments to regenerate, thus prolonging this battle and leaving you vulnerable. Blocking the strong attack is good; countering is preferable.

Resistances: Dettlaff is resistant to poison, bleeding, and Yrden, so employing any of these in battle is simply a waste of time.

DEFEATING THE VAMPIRE FORM: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Staying patient and cool under the extreme speed and savagery exhibited by Dettlaff's Vampire Form is key to surviving this fight. Counter any of Dettlaff's attacks, and wait until he attempts his stronger strikes. If you can counter them, you have a tiny window of opportunity to land a couple of strikes before the Beast vanishes or warps behind you to strike.



Dettlaff is adept at parrying; he blocks all attacks from the front, and after three parries (or hits), he usually teleports behind you and counters. If you manage to strike him in the back, he dashes away, so as not to receive further punishment from you. Not only that, but he can regenerate up to 30 percent of his essence, usually while standing at range.

Judicious use of Quen helps, not only to shield you but to shrug off any attacks you aren't quick enough to parry while you learn the timing to thwart this foe. Swig Black Blood to ensure any damage Dettlaff causes is partly reflected back at him, coat your silver sword in Vampire Oil to ensure each strike damages him as much as possible, and then fight back only after he finishes his strong attack. The battle may take a while, but it's the best way to remain in one piece and stop this higher vampire, if only temporarily....

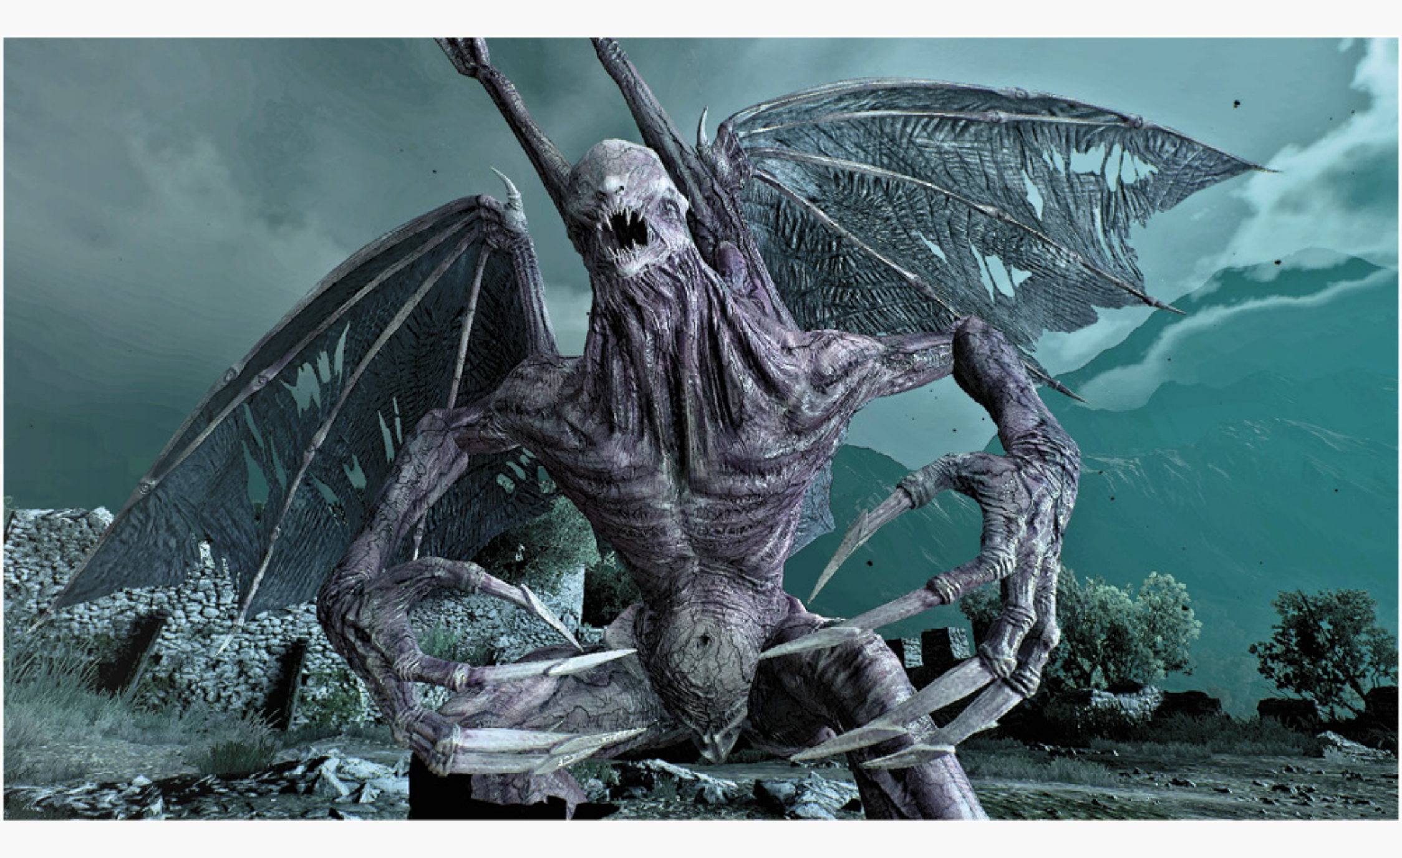
STAGE 2: TRUE FORM

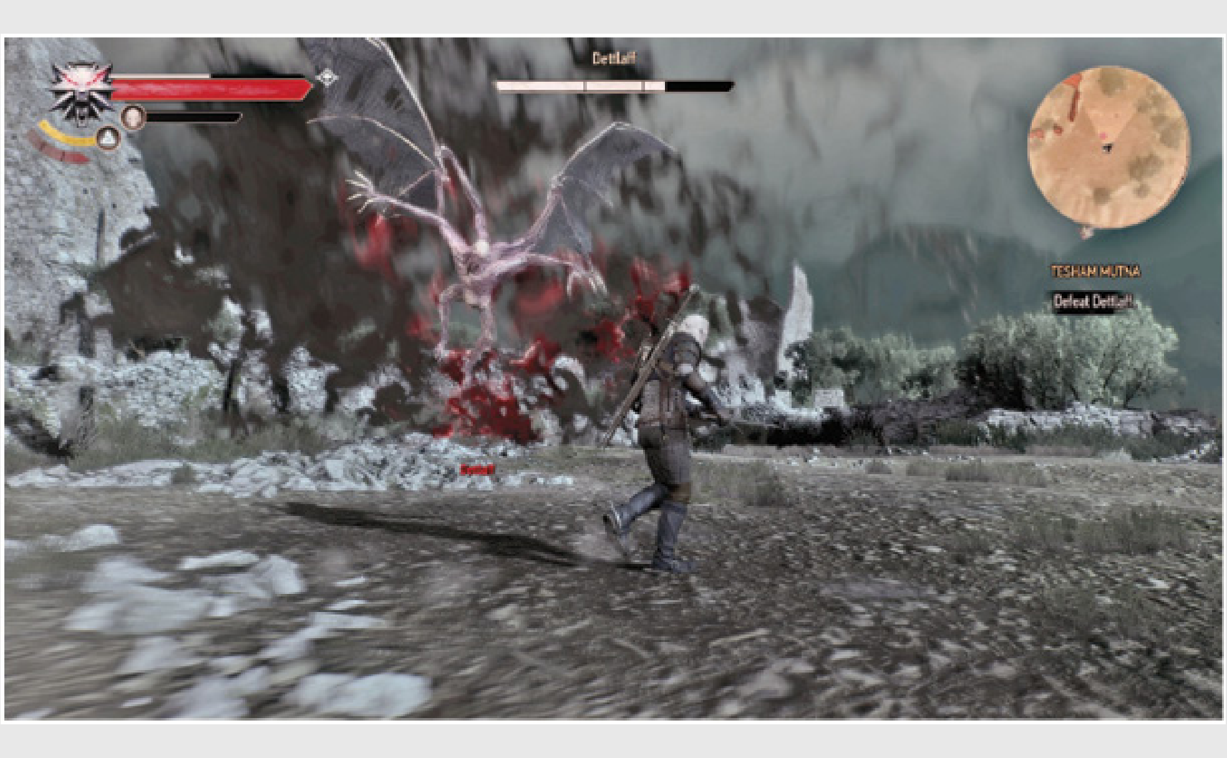


Dettlaff van der Eretein (true form)

DEFEATING DETTLAFF'S TRUE FORM: DETTLAFF'S ATTACKS

When you've removed around a quarter of Dettlaff's vitality, a grotesque transformation takes place, as Dettlaff reveal his true form! This fearsome flying enemy is essentially immortal, and so fights with no regard to his personal safety, and with a ferocity not previous encountered! When in the air, he is impervious to any attack. In addition, watch for the following offensive maneuvers:

Flight and Flying Dash: While airborne, he isn't able to be harmed, though he sometimes executes a Flying Dash, striking you before he flies away again. It is during this attack that you can make a well-timed sword strike, interrupting the dash and bring Dettlaff to the ground; one of only two opportunities to strike him.



Teleport: He is able to teleport short distances; so keep an eye on where he is at all times so you aren't slaughtered from the flanks or rear.

Dive Attack: Using his massive wings to raise himself up and out of your reach, he flaps up, then brings himself down with a mighty pummeling ground strike that can hit hard and possibly stagger. However, he requires some time to recover from this dive, and is vulnerable on the ground.

Swarm Attack: Dettlaff conjures a massive swarm of bats, damaging and staggering you. Back away, and dodge or roll quickly to avoid this.

Traps: After Dettlaff recovers from an attack, he conjures a revolting, oil-like trap that can severely impede your movement. He uses a special Dive Attack to hammer you while you're prone, so avoid the Traps whenever possible by remaining mobile, and don't get too greedy when striking Dettlaff during his recovery.

Resistances: Dettlaff's True Form is immune to burning (Igni and weapons), stuns, blinding, and Axii. If he's flying, he dodges any bombs or crossbow bolts you may try to strike him with. When he's recovering from a strike, he can send you flying backward, knocking you over; so get in with strikes and retreat quickly.

DEFEATING DETTLAFF: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Put your projectiles away when Dettlaff is airborne, as you cannot harm him when he's flying. The only times he is susceptible to harm is at the end of his Dive Attack (he lands on the ground, and is vulnerable for a moment), and during the Flying Dash (where this attack can be interrupted, and Dettlaff brought to the ground). Swords are best employed here, though bombs work too. Then whittle Dettlaff's health down with two or three strikes before backing away, out of the range of the trap he conjures, and let him fly away. Then begin the tactic anew.

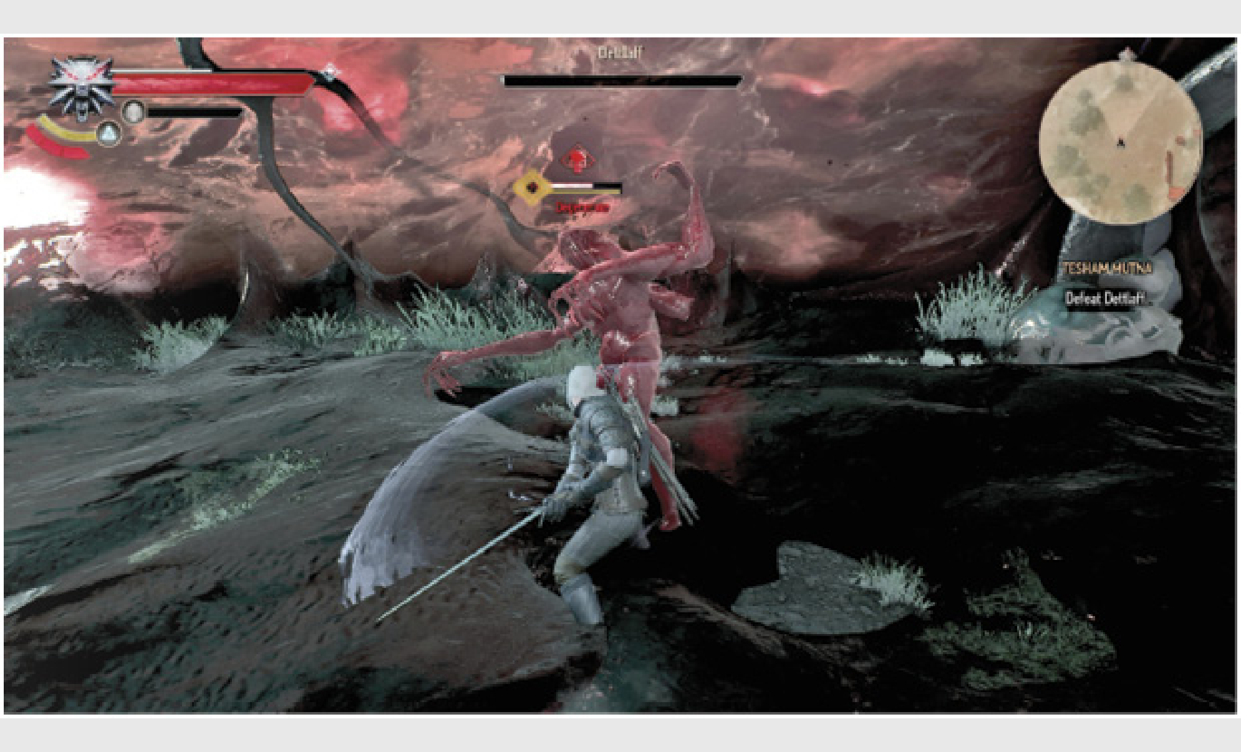
STAGE 3: BLOOD CONSTRUCT (FINAL FORM)

DEFEATING DETTLAFF'S FINAL FORM: DETTLAFF'S ATTACKS

At around one third vitality, after successfully clipping Dettlaff's wings, this horror wraps himself up completely in a revolting cocoon of blood. Quickly sculpting an encased arena from gore and flesh, It is supported by three vein columns that pump blood into the cocoon hanging from the middle of this atrocity. A doppleganger of Dettlaff is also conjured, made from the blood and sent to fight in Dettlaff's stead.

An Idiot Construct: The Blood Construct is a magical being formed from the blood and willpower of Dettlaff. It does not possess any intelligence of its own, and exists only to kill you. So expect a constant barrage of attacks with little time to rest.

Melee Strike (one hit, six variations): A quick single attack that is damaging, and can be parried or dodged. You can retaliate afterward, but as the construct shouldn't be the focus of your fighting (aside from getting rid of it momentarily), think of all these attacks as a hindrance to your main goal.



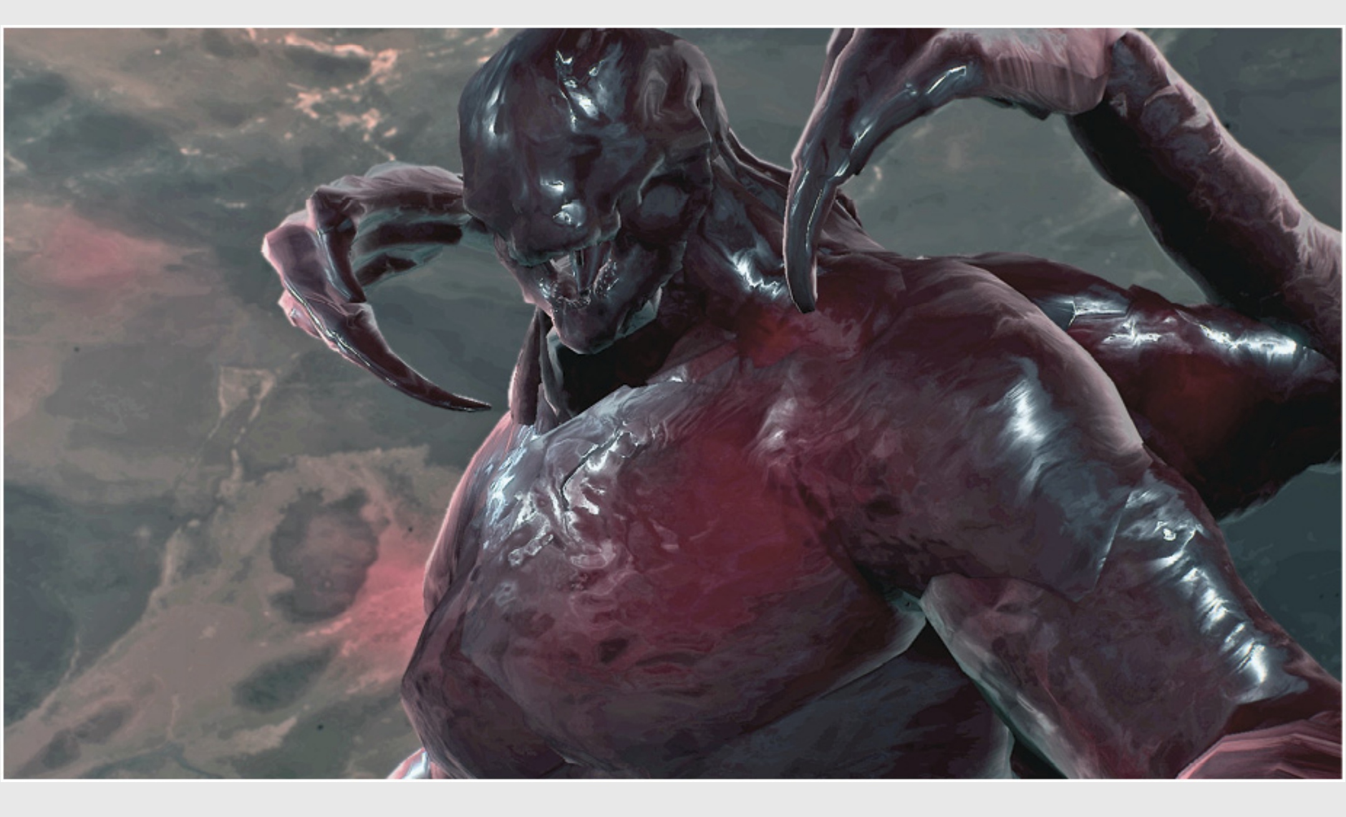
Combo Strike (four variations): A series of attacks, inflicting damage up to four times in a single combination. These can be parried or dodged.

Dash Attack: A sliding strike that can be interrupted or countered, allowing you to stun the construct for a few moments; only of the best ways to quickly remove yourself from its clutches to deal with the real solution to your problem.

Flying Attack: Similar to the attack Dettlaff attempted during Phase two of this battle, this occurs once the Construct is dispelled (by your attacks), only to reappear again. Dodge away from its landing spot, or take a chance at hitting it to remove a small amount of its health.

Resistances: The construct is immune to any critical attacks, and can easily parry your sword strikes. It also revives itself each time you kill it, making it effectively immortal.

DEFEATING THE FLESH ARENA: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS



The three columns, resembling veins, are the main focus of your attack. Make sure you are slicing, blasting, or bombing these stationary targets as quickly and as often as possible. Waylay the Blood Construct by using Yrden, quick maneuvering around the flesh arena, and ranged attacks at the flesh columns so you don't need to physically move to each one. Treat the Blood Construct as you would Dettlaff in Phase one of this battle, but know that you can never defeat this golem; though removing it temporarily before it reforms allows a few seconds of uninterrupted flesh-column removal! When all three flesh columns are removed, Dettlaff finally yields.

The battle is over at last. Regis insists that the still-thrashing form of Dettlaff is dismissed in a style of his own choosing. Against the howling maelstrom, the Beast of Beauclair is removed from existence.

Two weeks then pass, as your previous decisions and actions catch up with you.

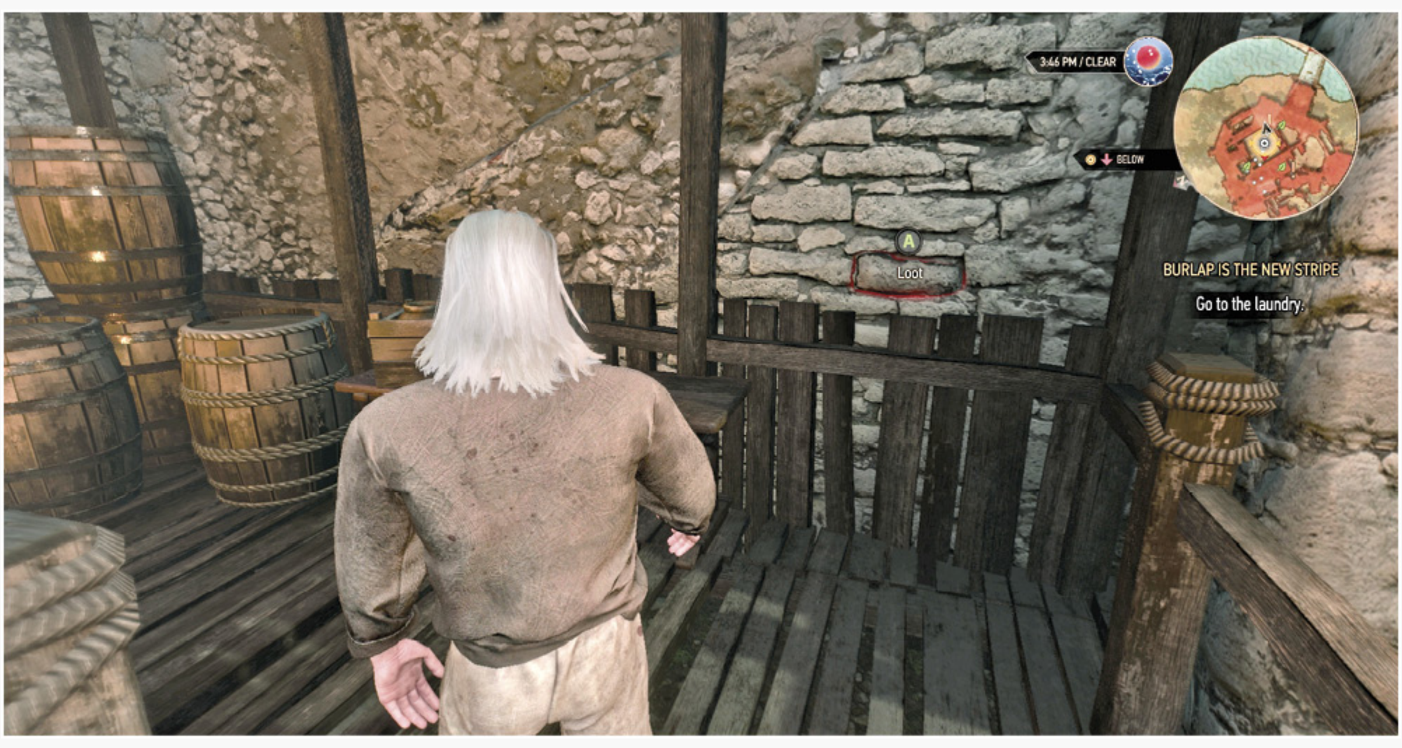
Handsome Jacques

Two weeks after your imprisonment, you find yourself languishing in Toussaint Prison, and befriend the lantern-jawed Handsome Jacques. Feel free to ask him what he can get you, or that you don’t need anything, then ask how he knows you. It seems your role letting the Butcher of Beauclair slay the Duchess’ sister is well-known. Ask Jacques what he’s in for, then about the laundry duty you’re supposed to report for.

After your chat, and your objective, feel free to wander the main courtyard of the prison. Though the guards aren’t in a talkative mood, there are a couple of distractions to try:

USING YOUR SENSES TO SEARCH FOR A STASH

Close to the porch where you talked to Jacques, a quick scan using your Witcher Senses indicates there’s a loose brick in the corner of the jail wall. Examine it to discover a note, which also starts Secondary Quest: The Perks of Being a Jailbird (detailed after this quest). This optional quest should be attempted prior to your other laundry duties.



Items: Notes found in the Toussaint prison

SECONDARY QUEST (UNMARKED): USING YOUR LOAF IN A GAME OF GWENT

Over by the entrance to the cells is a Gwent card game on the go, and the stakes are high if you’re interested in playing; the winner receives a prize meant for the mysterious “Stefan.” Agree to play if you wish. To the victor goes the spoils. Or in this case, the spoiled bread.

Items: Bread

Burlap Is The New Stripe

Dirty Laundry

OBJECTIVES

- Pick up the soap.
- Pick up the dirty clothes (2).
- Put the soap and the clothes in the washtub.
- Pick up the stick.

Follow Jacques to the door and down into the prison, descending the steps to the large interior laundry area. Your quest updates with some menial tasks to perform; scan the chamber for soap, as well as two sets of dirty clothes in some crates, and a stick with which to pummel the washing.

Items: Soap, Dirty Clothes (2), Stick

OBJECTIVES

- Wash the clothes.

Head over to the large, barrel-shaped laundry tub, place the soap and the clothing into the receptacle, and begin stirring the soupy mess with the stick you found leaning on one of the walls.

PRISON STASH: TIMING IS EVERYTHING

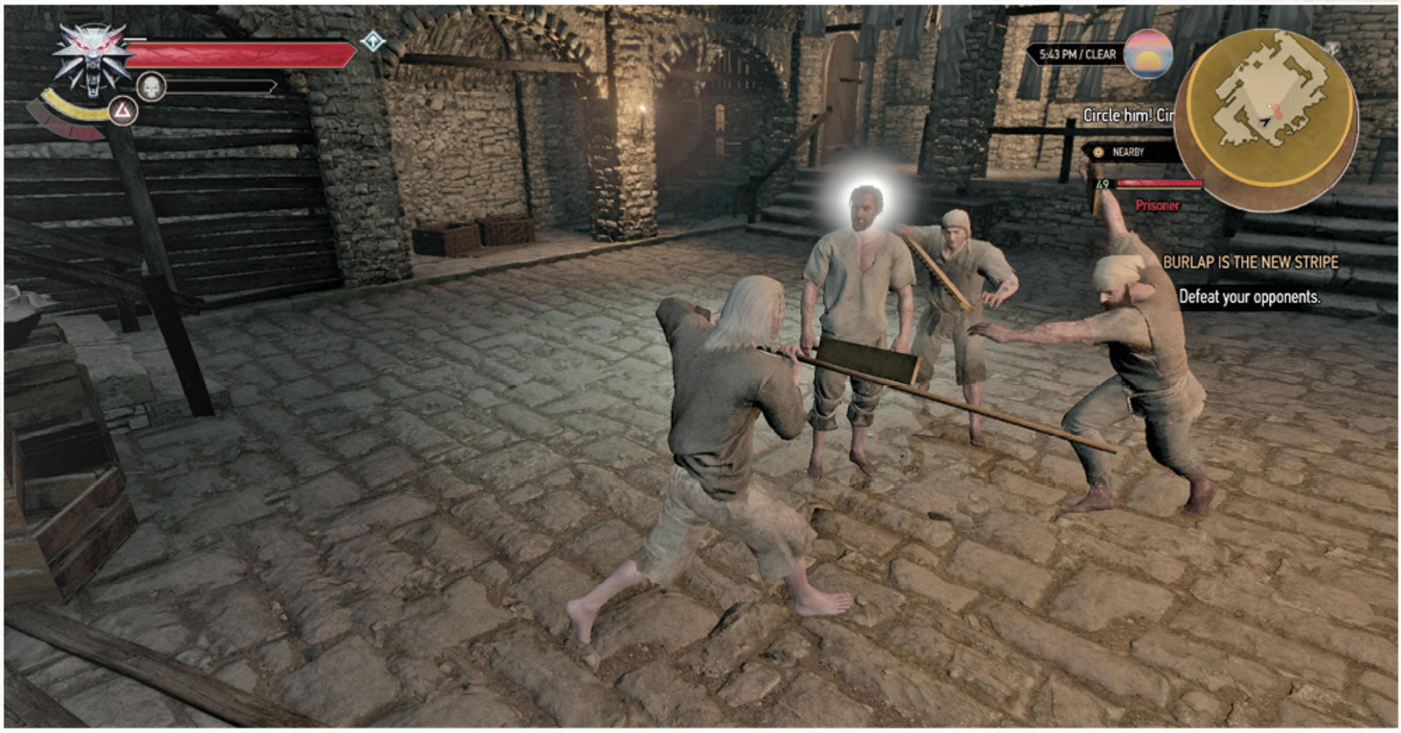
If Secondary Quest: The Perks of Being a Jailbird is active, make sure you finish up the first part of that quest before you face the three dock worker thugs and are placed in solitary confinement. If you don't, the Secondary Quest fails.

Burlap Is The New Stripe

Guardian Of The Guttersnipes, Locked In The Clink

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat your opponents.



After your successful laundry work, three prisoners walk into the chamber, closing the door behind you. They seem familiar; and once they start taunting you about saving the Bootblack Boy, you remember they were the trio of dock workers you fought when you first visited the shoe-shiner. After Handsome Jacques reveals his more slippery nature, you're faced with this angry trio to deal with. You can:

- Challenge them to "show you what they've got," or choose the optional conversation; both lead to a swift pummeling.
- (Axii) Affect one of the dock worker's minds. Unfortunately, one of the other thugs realizes your witchery, and a peaceful solution isn't available.

You must fend off the three Prisoner assailants with your laundry stick (two if you used Axii on one of them), while they wield washboards. This shouldn't be too taxing, as you can use Signs if you wish.

Burlap Is The New Stripe

There Are Different Kinds Of Exits

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the guard.

Paul (Prison Guard)

Whether you beat your opponents into submission or not, guards hear the commotion, and order all of you to solitary confinement. You can protest, but the guard is Milton's cousin, and isn't too happy that you "let him die."

Marc Dubois

One week passes. In the darkness of your cell, you're engaged in conversation with Stefan (the prison rat), though you're hopeful to be eating mutton leg, rather than any bread you might have won from the recent Gwent game. You receive a knock on your cell door; the guard has come to ready you for sentencing.

Follow the guard up into the main courtyard, and stand before a sentencing ceremony. A man named Marc Dubois has been found guilty of trampling another while on horseback. The sentence is death by decapitation. After the axeman has swung, you're ordered to follow the guard again; the gruesome end to Marc Dubois' life was partly orchestrated to show you this is no almshouse for lost orphan boys!

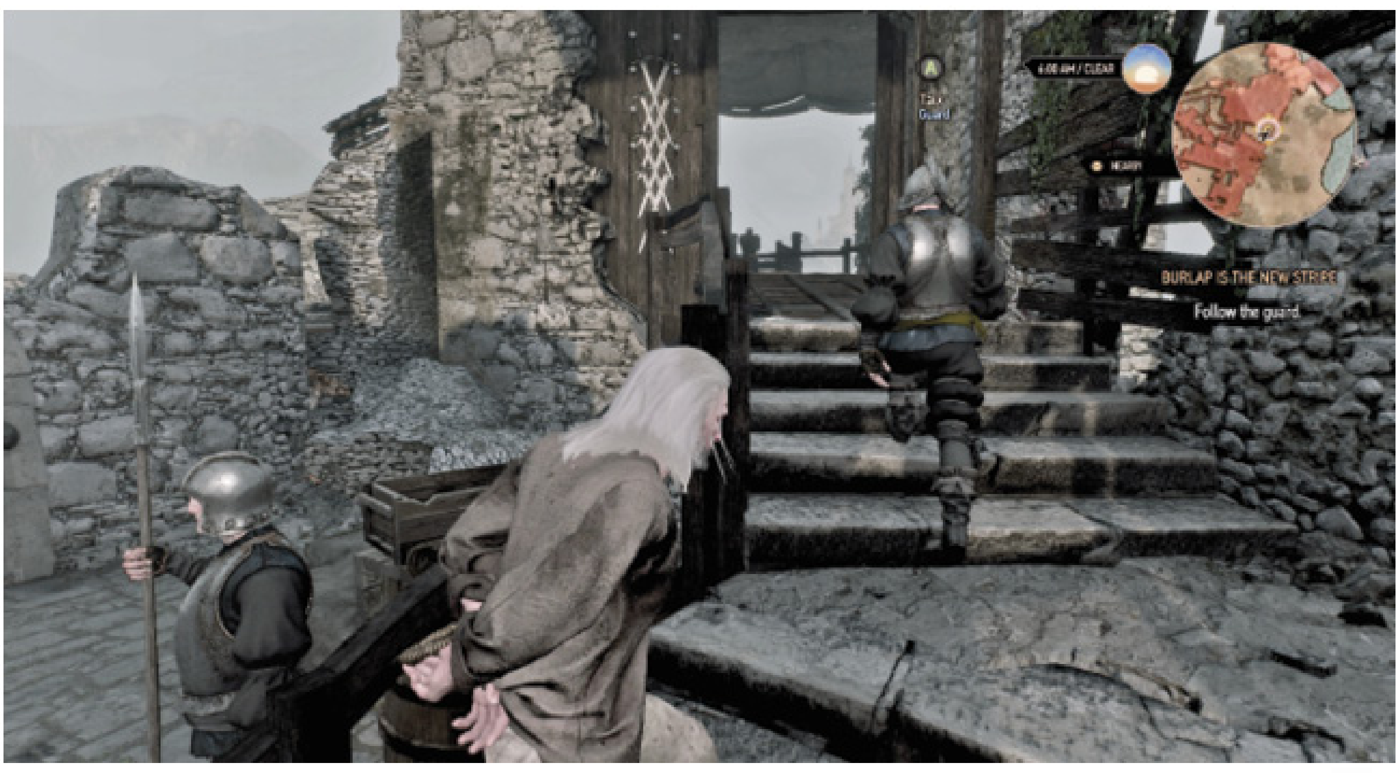
Burlap Is The New Stripe

A Regular Master Of Diplomacy

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the guard to the exit.

Follow the guard into the upper ruins of the prison, that you haven't been able to access yet, and continue upward to an overlook. Standing on a balcony is a familiar face, though it's been savaged by vampire claws recently: Damien turns to tell you his scars pale in comparison to the fate Syanna met. After asking about the decision in your case, answer Damien as you wish. Damien explains that if the court's outcome had been up to him, you'd be rotting in his dungeon until your dying day.



Fortunate, then, that the decision wasn't up to Damien. It seems an old friend was instrumental in freeing you, that rapscallion Dandelion! Shocked at seeing him, he explains he's here to "visit" Anna Henrietta, but is really here to "save your hiney;" despite being persona non grata in Toussaint.

Captain Damien de la Tour

Dandelion (Viscount Julian de Lettenhove)

Optionally ask how he knew you were here, before wondering how he managed to free you (a mixture of logic, rhetoric, and charm apparently). So persuasive was Viscount Julian that he was even able to save Corvo Bianco for you, though your monetary reward is out of the question. You end your talk with Dandelion leaving to visit Anna Henrietta in the cemetery. Meanwhile, you're able to collect your belongings and leave.

PRISON STASH: TIMING IS EVERYTHING

If Secondary Quest: The Perks of Being a Jailbird is still active, this is the opportunity to complete it, prior to leaving the prison.

OBJECTIVES

- Retrieve your things from the chest.
- Exit the prison.

Emiel Regis Rohellec Terzieff-Godefroy

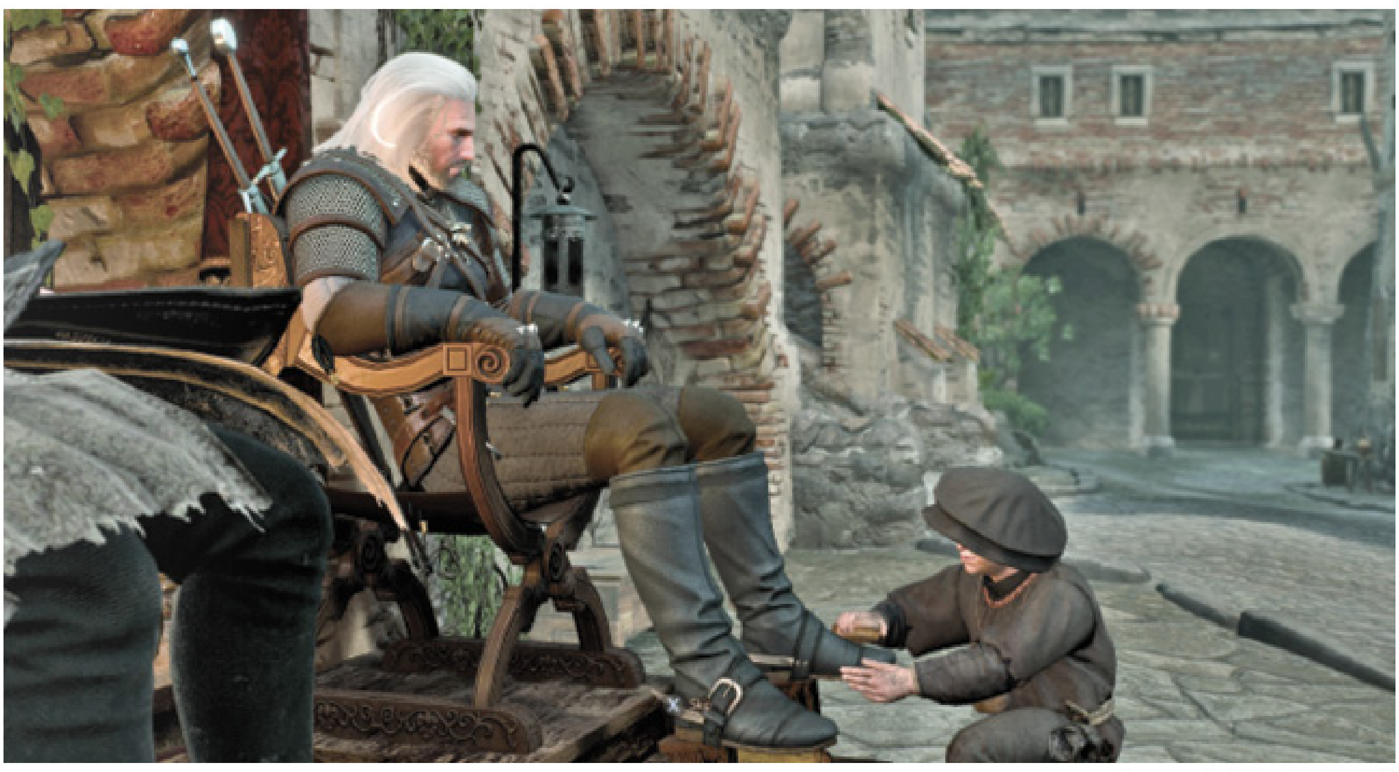
Follow the guard back down the steps, to the portcullis (which thankfully now opens), and collect your Witcher gear and all inventory items from the chest on your left. Remember to re-equip everything! Then stride out of the prison, across the drawbridge, where an old friend is waiting to greet you. Optionally thank Regis for intervening, before asking what he did during your incarceration. Naturally, Regis spent most of his time coming to the realization that the "Five Virtues Punished" was correct. He asks if you're curious to know who the fifth and last victim is. Agree, and he tells you to meet him at the Bootblack Boy; further evidence shall be uncovered there. Alternatively, you can also choose to not go to the Bootblack Boy and be teleported to Mere-Lacahiselongue Cemetery for the final talk.

Burlap Is The New Stripe

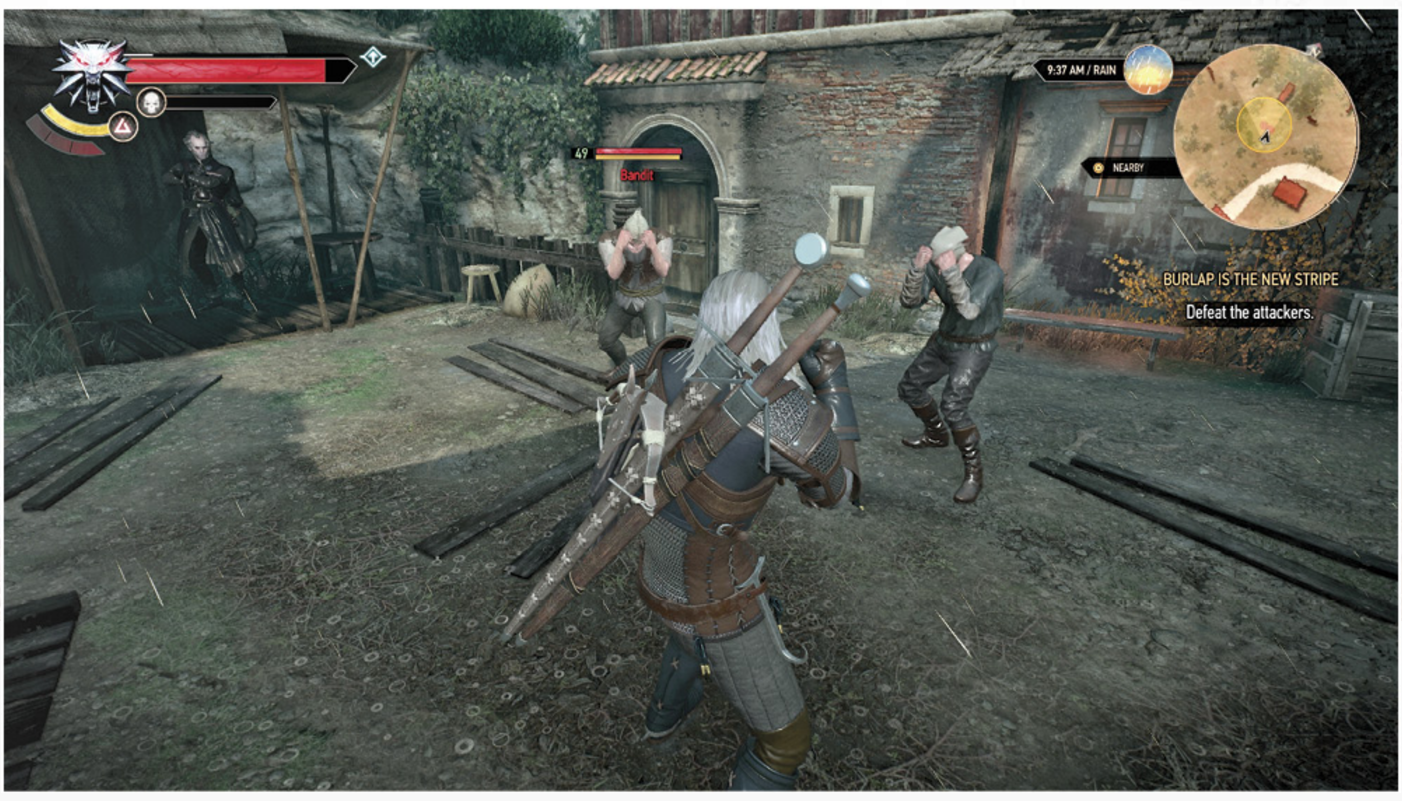
Boots Should Be As Clean As The Souls That Wear Them

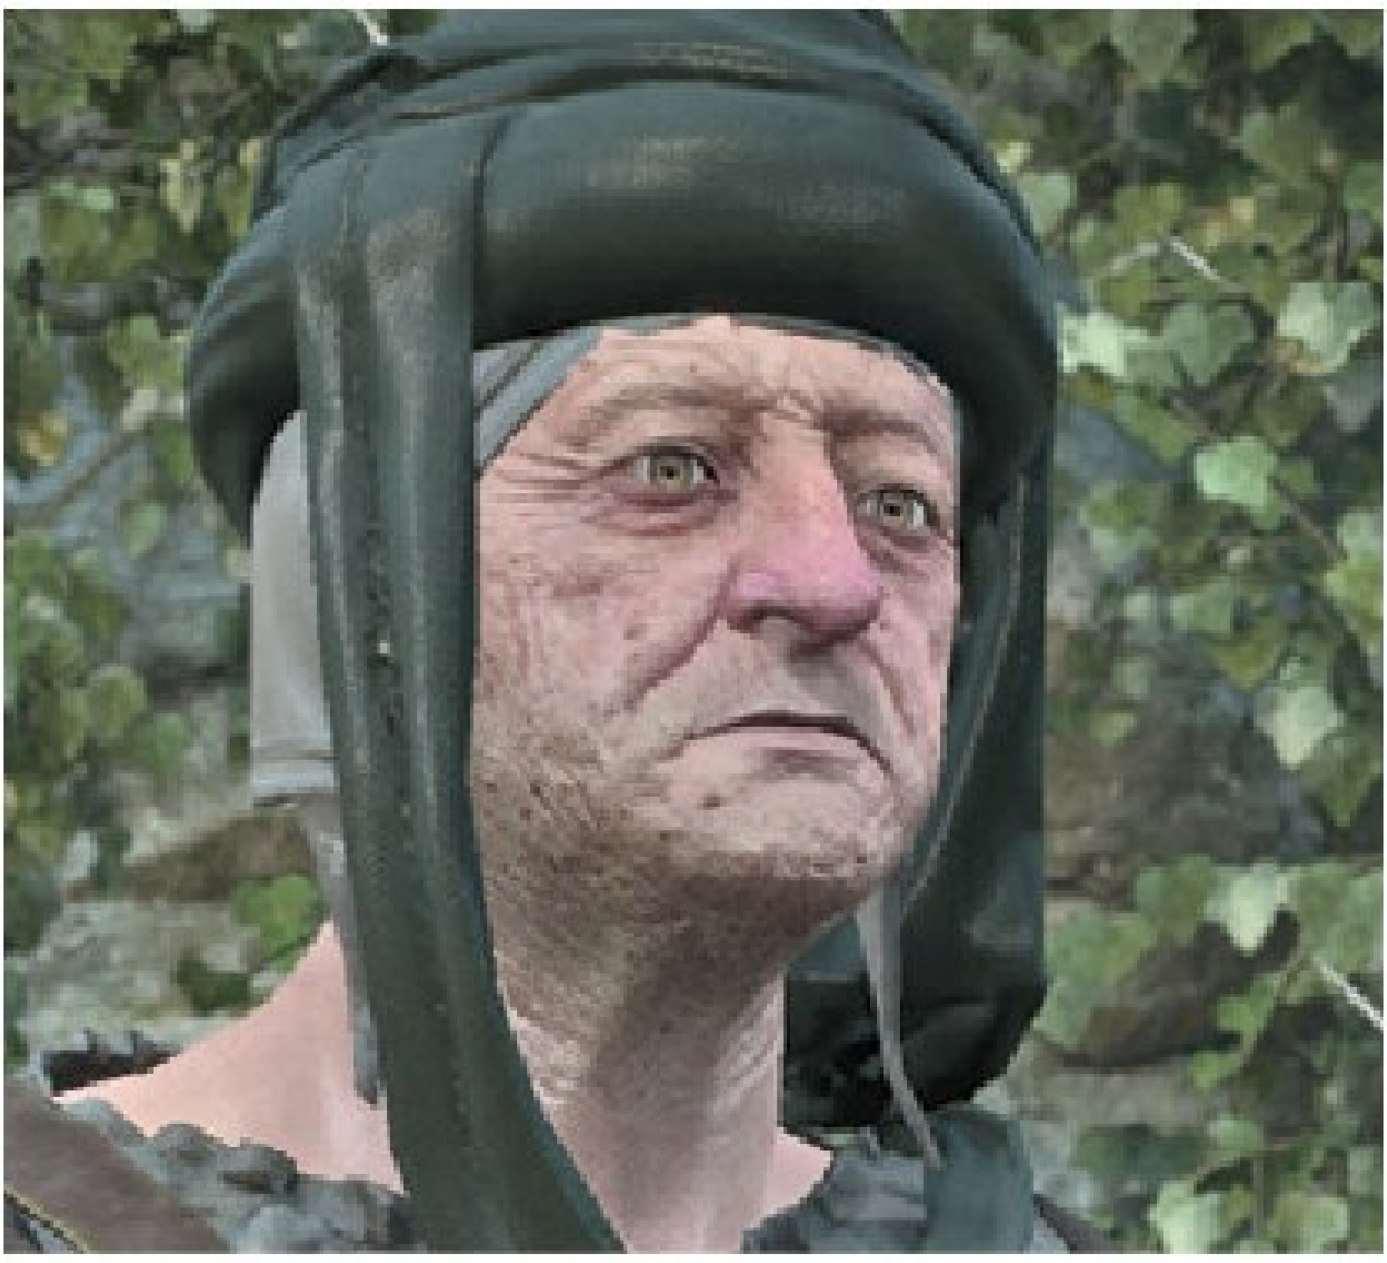
OBJECTIVES

- Find the shelter.
- Defeat the attackers.



After a brisk walk into Beauclair, you speak to the Bootblack Boy; optionally asking how business is, then asking about the letters the boy received. Eventually, you pry out the information that beggars brought them. Feel free to ask why this information wasn't revealed before, before asking who the beggars were. All were different, one for each of the four letters. Then ask where the beggars obtained the letters from, and what they looked like. Eventually, Regis steps in, asking where the beggars are. You are directed to their shelter.





Shelter Proprietor

Accompany Regis up the steps, and along the paved thoroughfares to an unassuming archway and rickety gate, by the sign marked "Lassommoir," behind which you can hear voices. Open the gate, and step into an argument between a couple of townsfolk who aren't happy with this homeless encampment in their fair city. Optionally ask what the harm is, before asking who the "decent" folk actually are. The conversation degenerates into a bout of fisticuffs.

Answers. Then Soup. Then Drink!

Romain

After the fight (whether you pummeled your adversaries or Regis had to step in) you head into the shelter for a word with the proprietor. Optionally ask about the place before pressing the fellow for information. After asking if all the beggars will be at a meeting place, you agree to wait, and a few hours later, a number of vagrants arrive to fill their bellies with soup.

In order to receive their vittles, they must answer your questions. One beggar named Romain begins to spill some beans, and you can ask for the letter, or ignore it (as it's now meaningless). Romain's friend is eventually persuaded to part with the letter.

Items: Letter revealing the fifth victim

Outside of the shelter you unroll the parchment, and are shocked to discover who the fifth victim was supposed to be: Anna Henrietta herself! It seems you both underestimated Syanna rather grossly. After going through Dettlaff's proposed method of murder (where you can optionally solve the puzzle for Regis, before mentioning the duchess as the last victim). After more discussion on the machinations of Syanna, Regis feels there's little point in bothering the Duchess with this revelation. You can optionally mention that the Duchess is safe, before asking "what now?" Regis reckons a drink is in order. You can:

- Agree, and head off for a spot of alcohol, concluding this quest. Over at the cemetery Regis frequents, the conclusion of this quest now begins.
- Tell Regis Anna Henrietta needs to be informed. The following interlude now begins:

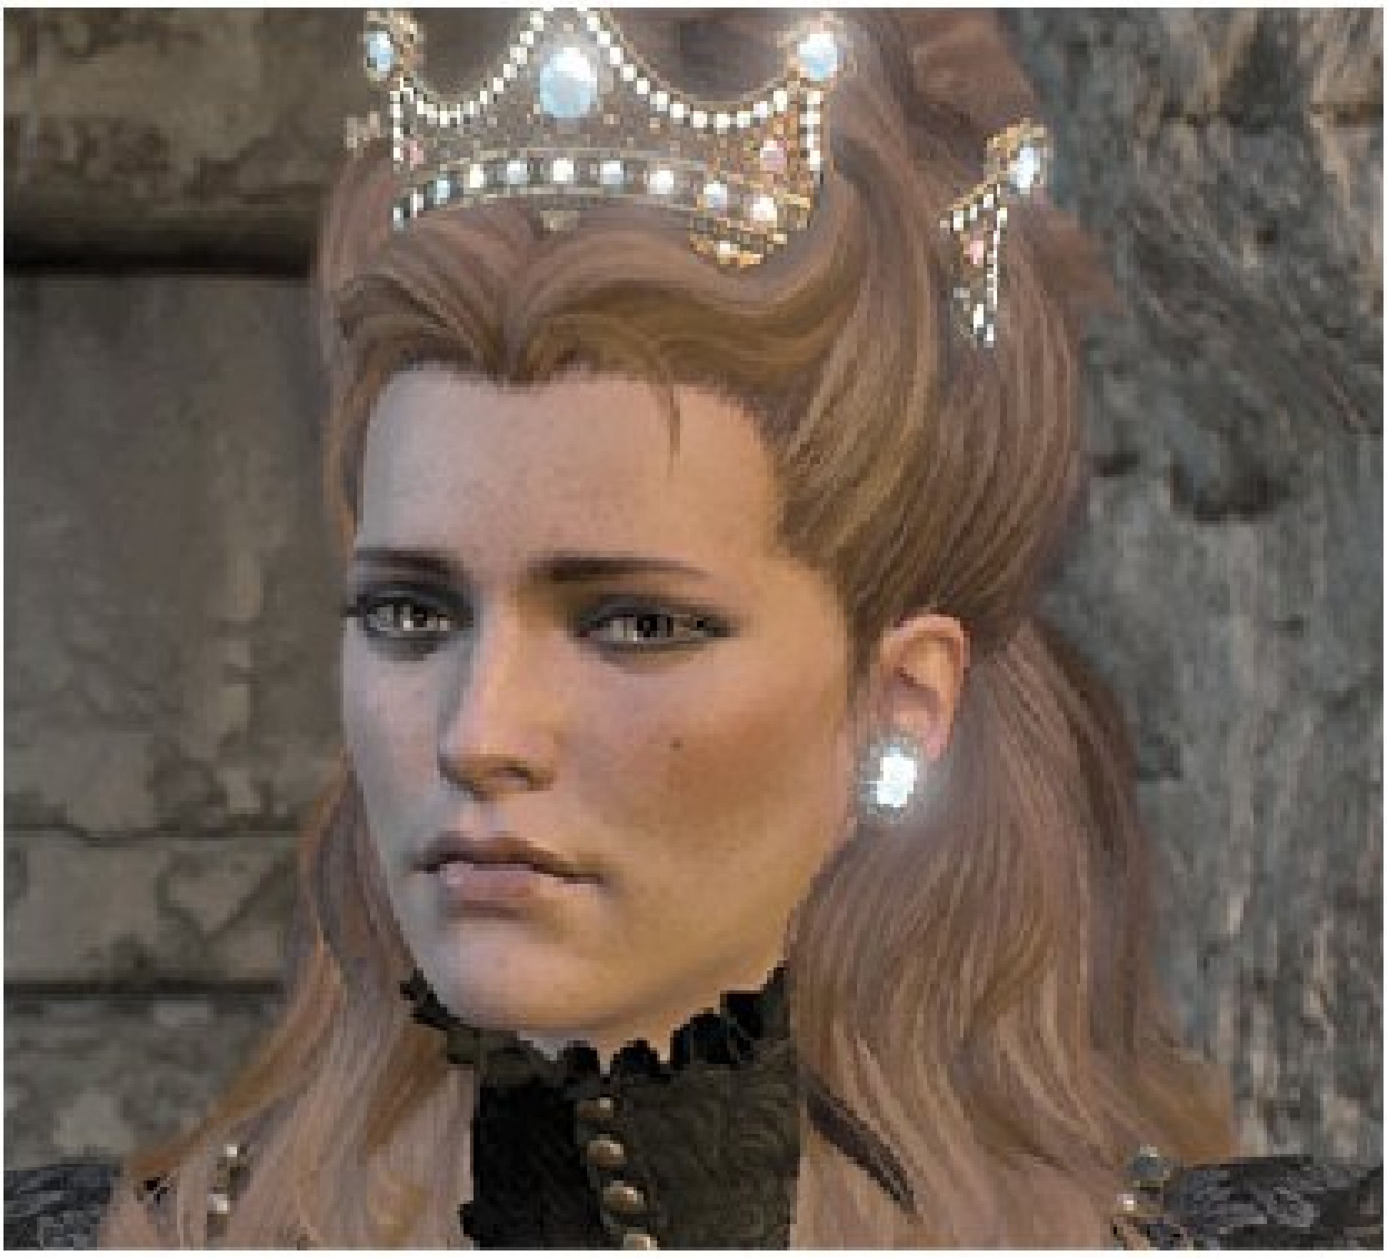
Burlap Is The New Stripe

Interlude: A Dirty Lie! Vile Slander!

OBJECTIVES

- Tell Anna Henrietta about your last contract.

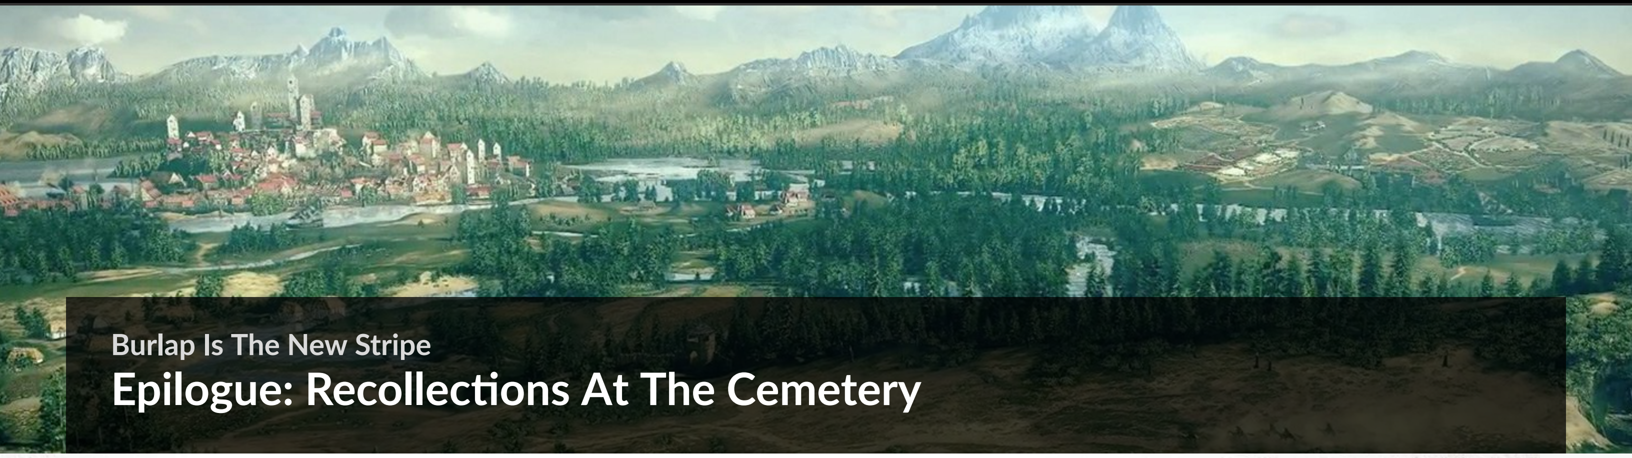
Head into the streets of Beauclair, locating and entering the mausoleum in Beauclair Cemetery where Syanna has been interred. You are greeted by a none-too-happy Damien, who eventually lets you into the crypt.



Her Illustrious Highness, Duchess Anna Henrietta

Viscount de Lettenhove (or as you know him, Dandelion) is there comforting the Duchess. She seethes her contempt for you, but Dandelion calms her slightly, so you may say your piece. Answer as you wish; Dandelion takes the scroll and reads from it.

Anna Henrietta simply does not believe the “vile slander” contained on the parchment, and orders the letter destroyed. Clearly overwrought, and with your latest revelation certainly not helping matters, Dandelion thinks it best you leave. The quest concludes. Over at the cemetery Regis frequents, the conclusion of this quest now begins.



Burlap Is The New Stripe

Epilogue: Recollections At The Cemetery

After breaking out the strong stuff, you and Regis sit around a campfire on the outskirts of the cemetery.

- If you ignored the letter, the conversation is regarding the characters you met during your stay in prison.
- If you visited Anna Henrietta, the conversation is regarding how the Duchess didn't take the news very well, as expected.

Regis asks if Syanna's fate brings you any pangs of regret. You answer in the affirmative. Regis agrees. Optionally mention you thought he preferred complex solutions, before stating that Beauclair is safe now. However, you're still worried Anna Henrietta is in danger due to the fate of Dettlaff. Regis tells you Dettlaff is long gone. However, if you chose to kill Dettlaff, instead the two discuss collecting mandragora roots.

You swill the wine around in your wooden goblet, stating you're not much of a connoisseur to Regis. He urges you to visit your winery and learn, asking what the future holds. You can answer as you wish. After further reminiscing (about Vilgefortz), you can then optionally ask Regis what he will do now. Then you tell Regis to sit a while longer. This quest concludes, and Main Quest: Be it Ever So Humble begins.

BAW SECONDARY QUEST: THE PERKS OF BEING A JAILBIRD

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Burlap is the New Stripe

LOCATIONS: Toussaint Prison

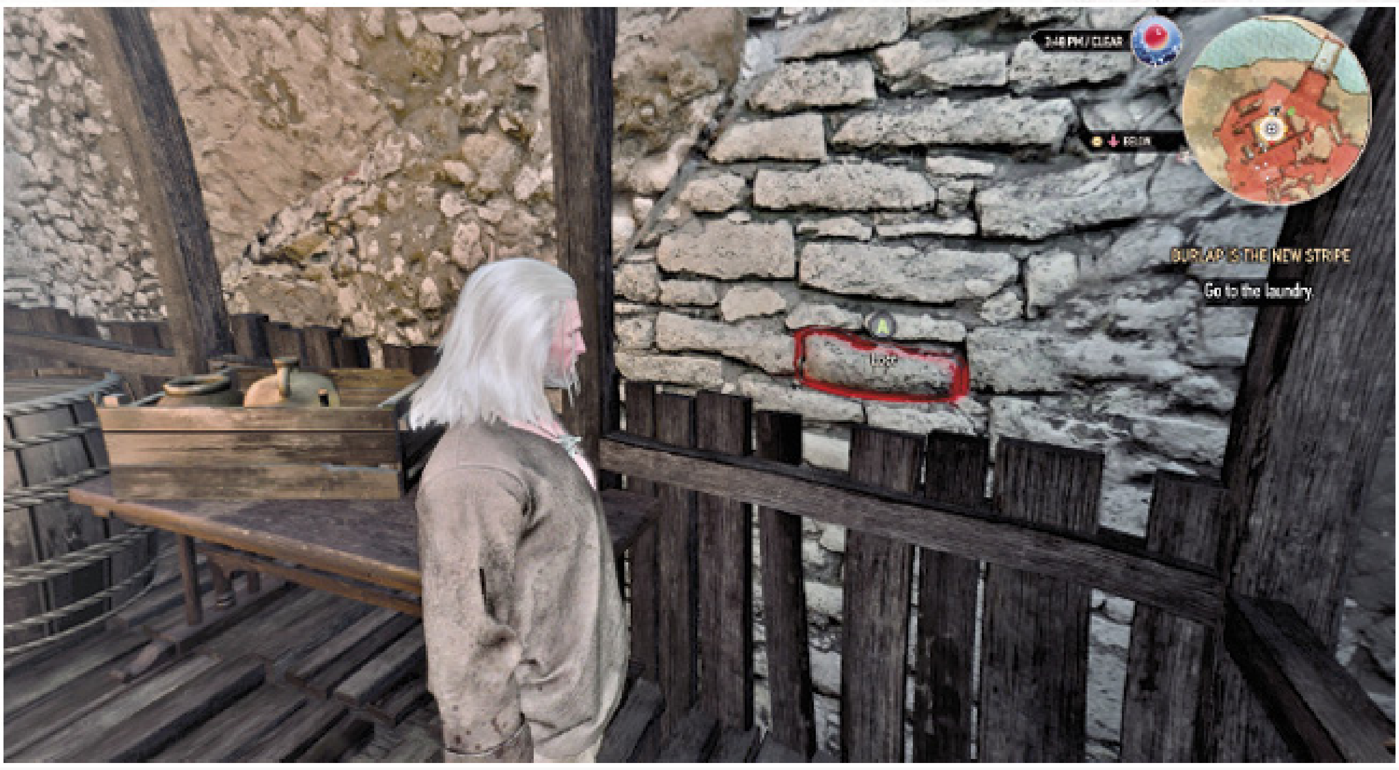
OBJECTIVES

- Read the note.
- Search for a hammer and chisel.

QUESTING DECISIONS

- This quest is accessible only after you begin Main Quest: Burlap is the New Stripe. It should be attempted at the same time as the Main Quest occurring in the prison, as it concludes at the same time.

After discovering a loose brick and a hidden note on the prison wall behind the porch where you talked to Jacques, read the mysterious missive, and set off searching for a hammer and chisel to stash in the wall.



Items: Notes found in the Toussaint prison

PRISON STASH: TIMING IS EVERYTHING

Make sure you finish up this part of the quest before you face the three dock worker thugs and are placed in solitary confinement. If you don't, this quest fails.

OBJECTIVES

- Hide the hammer and chisel in the stash.
- Wait two days.

You don't have to go far to find these two items; they are on the small cart under the gallows just to the left of the porch. Procure both the hammer and chisel, return to the loose brick in the wall, and place the items in there. Now you must wait. Simply continue with the Main Quest until this Secondary Quest updates—or meditate for two days.

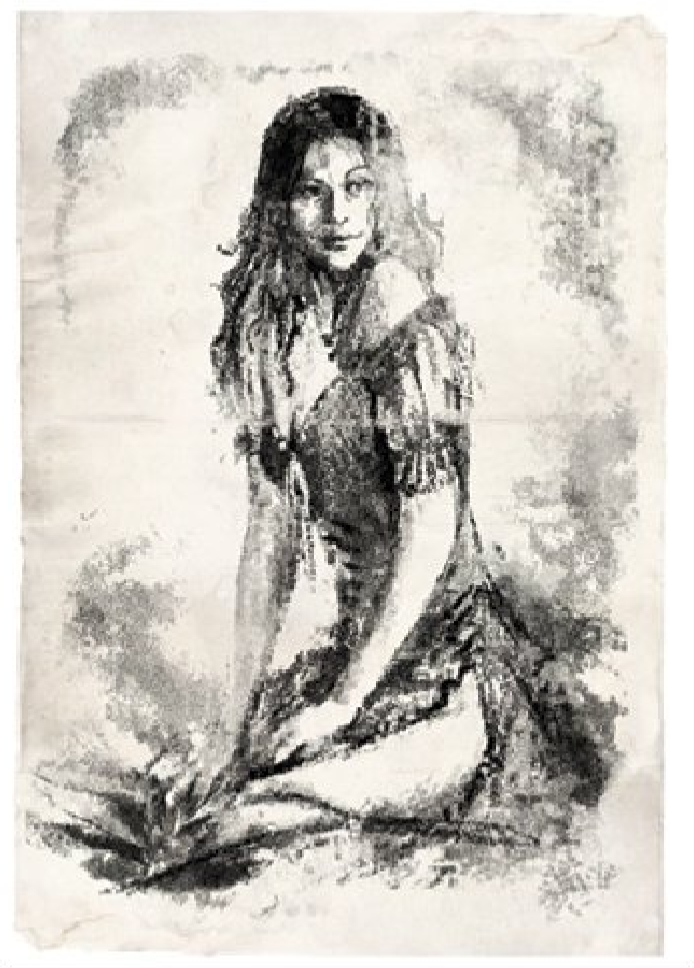
Items: Small hammer and chisel for carving stone

Secondary Quest: The Perks Of Being A Jailbird

Something To Hang On Your Wall

OBJECTIVES

- Check the prison stash.



Prison Poster

Once you have received your sentencing from Captain Damien, and spoken to the dandy who helped secure your freedom, you are escorted out of the prison. Before you head through the open portcullis and secure your equipment, check this quest for the updated objective. Return to the loose brick in the porch wall, just left of the exit, and secure something to hang on your wall (literally, this can be placed on the wall of Corvo Bianco). This quest then concludes.

CHARACTERS: Pierre the Tailor, Emiel Regis Rohellec Terzieff-Godefroy, Bootblack Boy, Shelter Proprietor, Romain, Captain Damien de la Tour, Syanna, Her Illustrious Highness, Duchess Anna Henrietta ENEMIES: Bandits, Bruxa, Alps

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Talk to the bootblack during the day.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible after you've completed either of the following paths:

- Main Quest: Tesham Mutna is complete. You must have completed Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale..., given Syanna her ribbon, so she lived during the final battle with Dettlaff.

- Main Quest: Tesham Mutna is complete. You must have completed Main Quest: What Lies Unseen, but not visited Syanna in her playroom (and then the Fablesphere), so that Syanna is not present during the final battle with Dettlaff.

In short, Syanna must be alive after the battle with Dettlaff to access this quest.

Two weeks after your final confrontation with Dettlaff, you are visiting the Palace Tailor's, and are being fitted for the forthcoming ceremony. Though you feel you look like a twit, Regis and the tailor himself are both pleased with your appearance. Answer how you wish regarding your taste and what clothing you're used to, before Regis continues to talk (as is his wont). You must be strategically shoved into something fitted, as Toussaint's highest honor, the Order of Vitis Vinifera, demands proper attire!

Optionally speak to Regis' philosophical mood, before reminding him about the honors bestowed upon you. Regis has also had little time to ponder the one piece of the puzzle that never seemed to fit: The "Five Virtues Punished" was correct. He asks if you're curious to know who the fifth and last victim is. He wishes to question the Bootblack Boy once more, as the letters from Dettlaff were sources from the tyke.

You can:

- Agree, and immediately head to the Bootblack, who may have further information to impart.
- Agree, and head to the Bootblack in your own time (so you may complete optional, and mainly Secondary quests, head to see Damien instead, or prepare beforehand).
- Tell him there's no point in further investigations. Regis isn't content with this plan, but it's your choice. You can now visit Damien who will take you to the Ceremony, and forgo this investigation.

Optionally ask how he knows the Bootblack Boy delivered the letters.

After going through Dettlaff's proposed method of murder (where you can optionally solve the puzzle for Regis, before mentioning the duchess as the last victim). But why would Syanna murder her own sister? When Regis recommends asking her yourself, answer as you wish. You understand the Duchess has Syanna locked up somewhere, in a secluded wing of the palace, awaiting trial. You'd need to get past some guards to see her. After asking whether Regis is coming with you (he's not), or telling him you'll meet after the Ceremony (as he's off to brew a mean mandrake ale that'll singe off any hairs on your chest as well as grow them), you are left to conclude this investigation yourself. You can:

- Ignore any investigation into Syanna, and skip to the "Talk to Damien" objective, below.
- Or become determined to understand exactly what made Syanna write a death warrant on her own sister, and start the following objective:

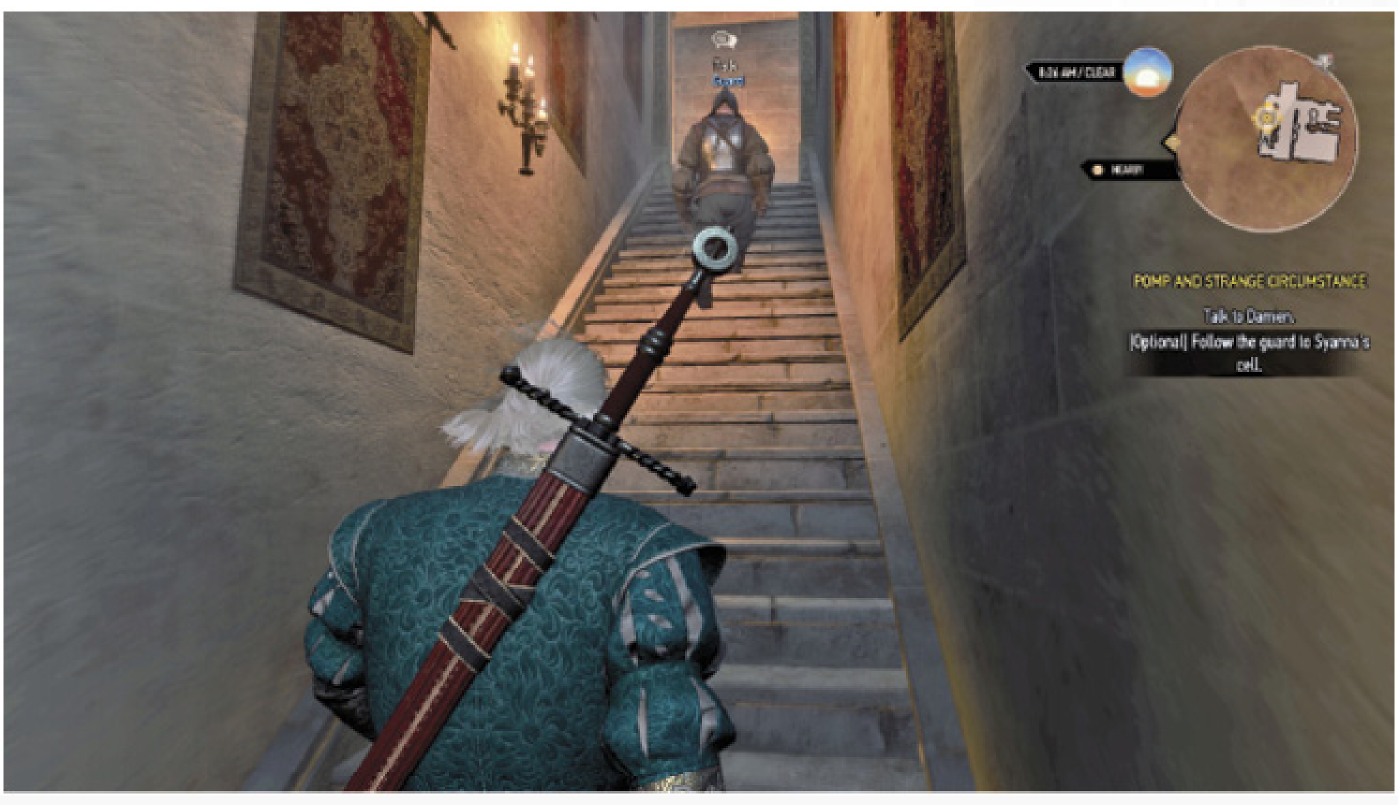
OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Talk to Syanna.
- (Optional) Follow the guard to Syanna's cell.

Cross the bridge into the Palace grounds, and head up the streets, winding your way up the beautifully-hewed balconies to a less-traveled wing of the Palace you have yet to discover. Enter the door, and work your way to a guard who stops you from investigating Syanna's quarters. Answer the guard as you wish; he finally recognizes you as "that Witcher who solved the murders," so you're let through, but only for a few minutes. Agree, and head into the locked chamber, where Syanna's guards step aside, letting you into her cell.

Syanna



CLEAR

POMP AND STRANGE CIRCUMSTANCE
Talk to Damien.
(Optional) Follow the guard to Syanna's cell.

"Cell" is perhaps not the correct word to describe this lavish upper chamber, resplendent with fineries and a large picture window Syanna is gazing wistfully out of. Syanna greets you.

- If Artorius' ribbon saved her life in the fight with Dettlaff, she makes mention of it.

If you earlier asked Syanna about her motivations, you mention you know who the fifth victim would have been. After some mock protesting, she agrees to talk. However, if you didn't inquire about her motivations and didn't read the governess's writings, you will instead have a rather unpleasant conversation. You ask why she wanted her sister killed. You must answer with one of the following:

OPTION 1: CURSE OR ENVY

- "Curse of the Black Sun" or "Because you envy her": Syanna is slightly crestfallen and has misjudged you; you understand nothing. The conversation continues with you telling her you'll let Anna Henrietta know.

Answer her regarding her honesty. After some additional home truths (regarding Syanna herself using you, Regis using you, and Anna Henrietta's less-than charitable thoughts about you being an "unthinking, blunt instrument," you can respond with venom of your own. You then leave, choosing to head to Damien immediately, or in your own time.

Or answer that you've heard enough (and you leave; choosing to head to Damien immediately, or in your own time).

OPTION 3: HAPPILY EVER AFTER

- "Because she turned her back on you, forgot about you": You're congratulated for solving another riddle and having your sick curiosity sated. The conversation now has a chance to remain civil:

WARNING! MAJOR QUEST DECISION!

The choices you make during this conversation with Syanna, depend on how you treated her during Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale...:

If you read every entry in the governess' diary, just before entering the Fablesphere, and spoke to Syanna at length, verbally investigating her thoughts, past, and feelings, then the conversation choice "ever thought to forgive her?" will be available.

If you ignored the governess' writings, and scampered through the Fablesphere without getting to know Syanna, then the conversation choice always degenerates into name-calling or unpleasantness.

This has a major effect on the end of your Main Quest, so choose wisely!

You mention that Anna Henrietta should probably know about the fifth letter, if only because Syanna is likely to try and kill her again if she's ever let out of this chamber. Syanna answers "I probably will." Answer with one of the following:

- "Ah, honesty, finally" or "Think I've heard enough": The conversation degenerates into curt and unpleasant responses before you leave.

- "Ever thought to forgive her?": You explain that you've read the diary of the governess in the playroom, and that Syanna and Anna Henrietta were once inseparable. She wistfully stares out of the window of the high tower, asking you why her sister washed her hands of her. Answer as you wish. You end the conversation stating Anna Henrietta still hasn't given up on her. The chat ends, and you leave.

Choose to head to Damien immediately, or in your own time.

Pomp And Strange Circumstance

Saving Face With Captain Damien

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Damien.

Captain Damien de la Tour

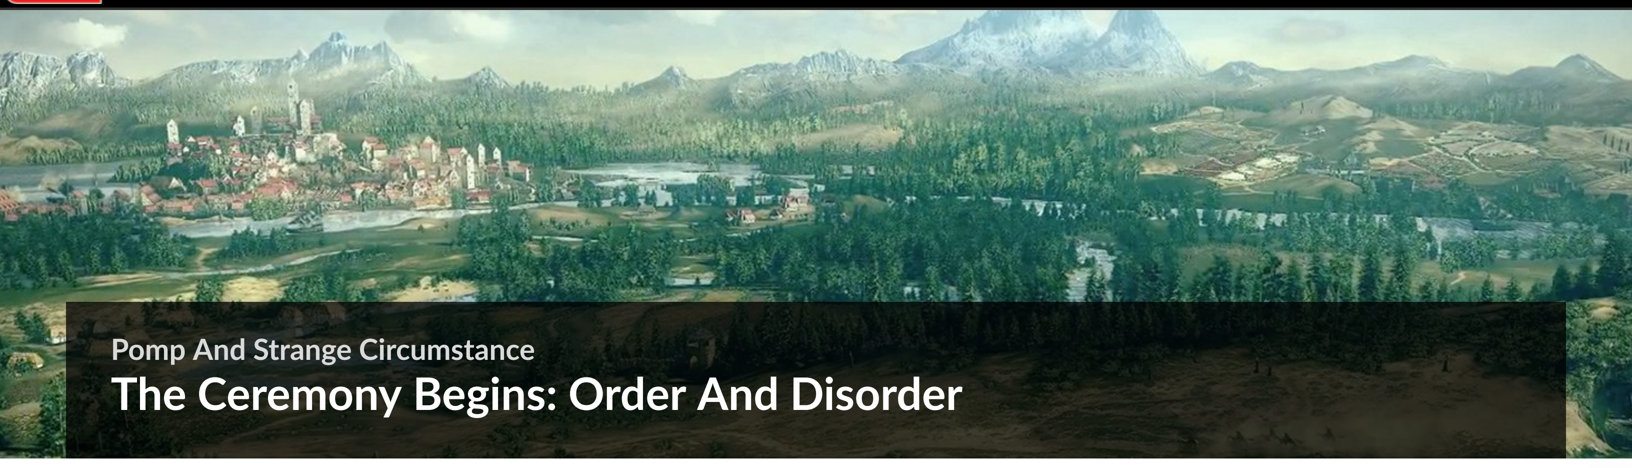
In order to begin the Ceremony, you must visit Damien who is waiting on a balcony overlooking the formal gardens. Visit him after any of the following circumstances have occurred:

- You ignore the final part of the investigation concerning the beggars and letters, and simply head there to start the Ceremony as quickly as possible.
- You conclude your investigation concerning the beggars and letters, but don't seek out an audience with Syanna.
- You conclude the beggars and letters investigation, and conclude your audience with Syanna, whether she was belligerent or helpful.

Damien greets you, and asks if you are ready for the ceremony to begin. You can:

- Tell him the ceremony can start.
- Tell him you know who the fifth victim was supposed to be. You can only choose this option if you finish the investigation of the beggars and letters with Regis, previously.

(Optional) You can also remark on his appearance after his recent savaging at the claws of a bloodsucker. Damien is shocked and furious, vows to enlarge the Duchess' honor guard, and will personally see to security during the Ceremony.



Pomp And Strange Circumstance

The Ceremony Begins: Order And Disorder

The Duchess is conducting a variety of ceremonies on the grand garden balcony. She is pleased to bestow the distinction of the Order of Vitis Vinifera upon you. Geralt of Rivia, slayer of the Beast of Beauclair, step forth! In addition to a fancy medal, you receive your payment, and a rather pleasant surprise; more than a dozen barrels of Sangreal to bolster your wine cellar.

Her Illustrious Highness,
Duchess Anna Henrietta

Syanna

Items: Medal of the Order of Vitis Vinifera, Crowns (5,000)

The gustatory experience of a lifetime awaits! Are you content? You can answer:

- “Can’t wait,” or “Truly honored.” The Duchess smiles, before her sister arrives at the Ceremony.
- Or mention Syanna’s plot to kill her, if you figured it out. She is initially incredulous, but then insists that you help with her judgment of her. Syanna then arrives at the Ceremony.

Syanna wonders why you’re here. Answer as you wish. For the crimes she has committed, Syanna must be punished. You can choose either a fate becoming of a common criminal, or a fate for the good of the duchy. Choose whichever you wish:

THE CEREMONY ENDS: SYANNA’S SOFTER SIDE

▶ If you managed to convince Syanna to forgive her sister while speaking to her in her Palace cell, the sisters both embrace. Epilogue: Reflections at the Cemetery now begins.

THE CEREMONY ENDS: FRATRICIDE AND SORORICIDE

▶ If you didn’t manage to convince Syanna in her cell, the sisters both embrace, before Syanna pulls out a hairpin and plunges into Anna Henrietta’s head! The Duchess drops to the ground, bleeding heavily. Too late, Damien realizes what has happened, and executes Syanna where she stands. This is, perhaps, not the way you wish the Ceremony could have ended.

OBJECTIVES

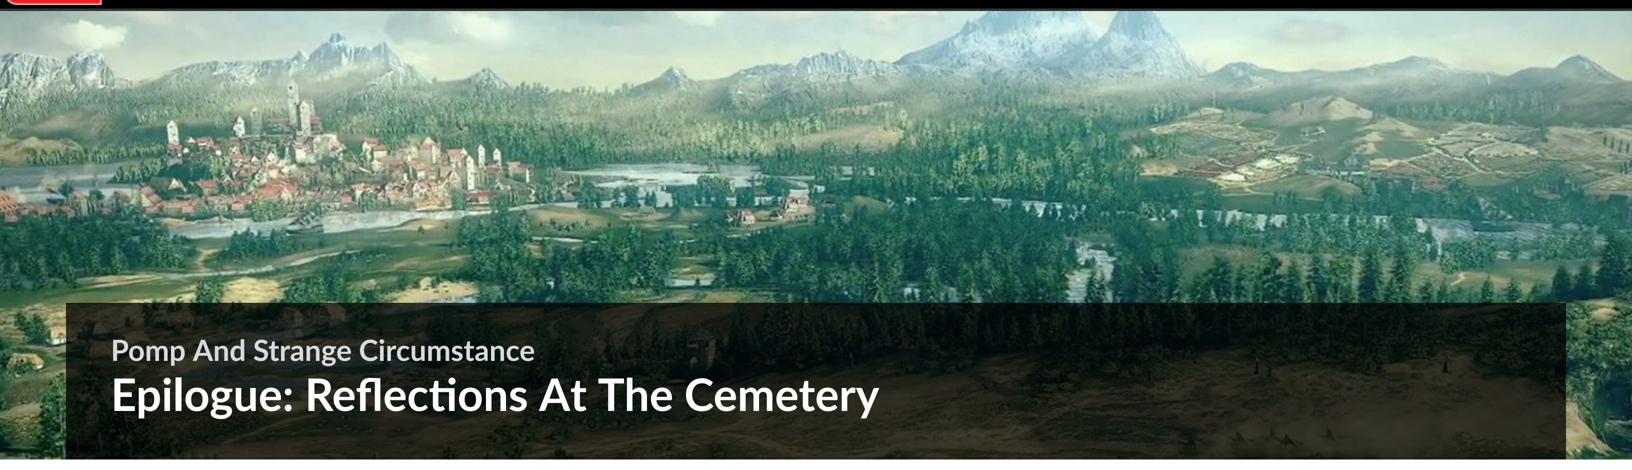
- Place a flower on Anna Henrietta’s grave.

Two weeks later, you are speaking to a flower vendor regarding a wreath or garland to place on the tomb of Anna Henrietta. When the flower seller asks how this could have happened, answer her as you wish. She recognizes you as the one who saved Beauclair, and offers the flowers for free.

Items: Bouquet of white roses

Head into the streets of Beauclair, locating and entering the Beauclair cemetery mausoleum where Syanna and her sister have been interred. You are greeted by a none-too-happy Damien, who blames himself for not doing more. Answer him as you wish, then head into the crypt. The Regents’ Council have decided to place both sisters in the same crypt, a fact that infuriates the captain. There is little you can do except to choose to place flowers on one or both coffins.

Naturally, this is a place in which Regis is bound to show up. After a few words of comfort to the deceased, he tells you he’s come to take you away from this place; it is time for a speck of respite after the mad whirl of the last few days. You leave for Regis’ cemetery at once; the Epilogue now begins.



Pomp And Strange Circumstance

Epilogue: Reflections At The Cemetery

After breaking out the strong stuff, you and Regis sit around a campfire on the outskirts of the cemetery.

- If you ignored the letter, the conversation is regarding the more you could have done to save Anna Henrietta. You have an additional (optional) conversation choice regarding the last words the Duchess spoke.
- If you convinced Syanna to spare her sister's life, the conversation is regarding the thankfully short nature of the ceremony.

You make mention that Syanna was either unbending, or had a glimmer of humanity in her (depending on previous actions). Regis agrees: Optionally mention you thought he preferred complex solutions. Regis also inquires about how his personal brew tastes. The Interlude (below) now begins.

INTERLUDE: THE ROOT CAUSE

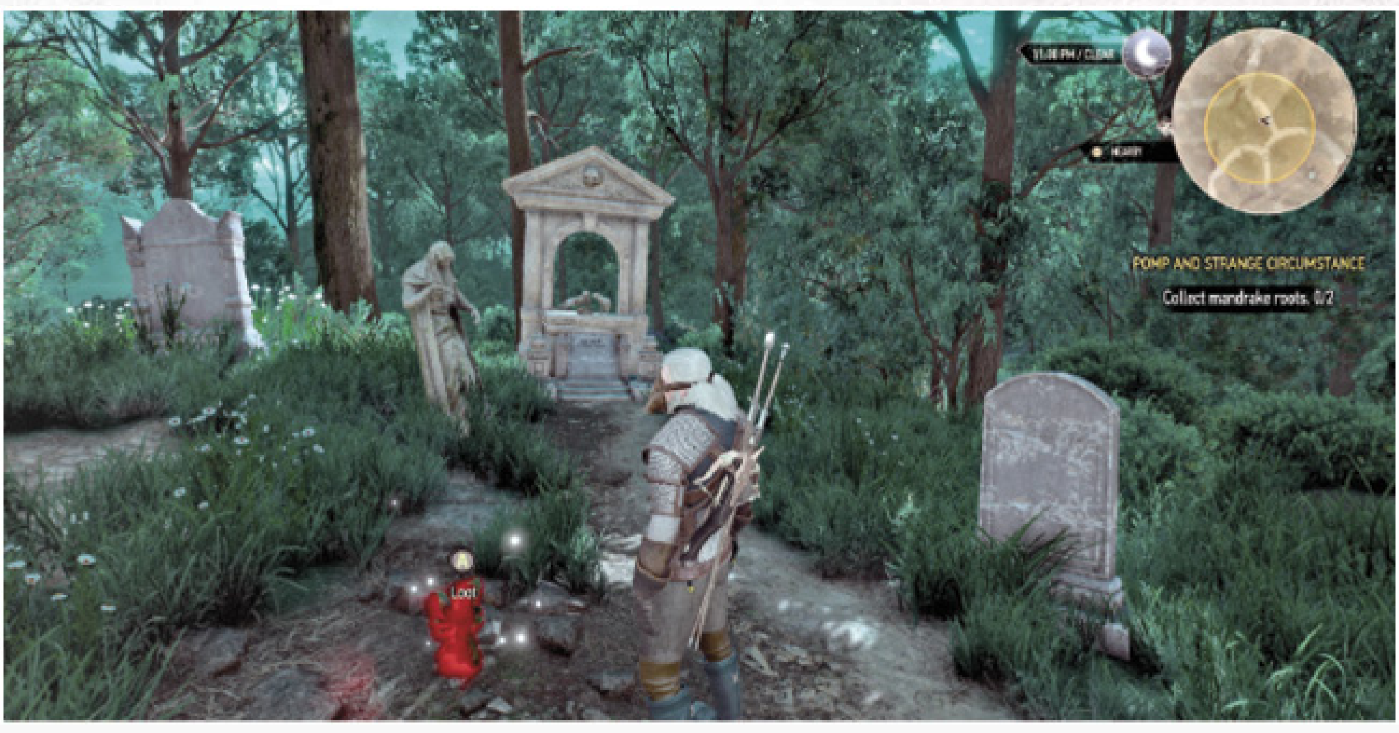
OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Put on a mask and gloves.
- Collect mandrake roots (2).

Regis is keen on stockpiling some roots for future batches. Care to accompany him? You can query the plan (hunting for herbs in the dark), before starting a search for mandrake roots. Before you start, Regis offers you gloves and a mask (as mandrake is highly poisonous to you).

Items: Gloves and Mask for picking Mandrake

Though optional, it's a sound plan to access your Inventory menu, and don the gloves and mask that Regis just gave you; otherwise expect to take damage and be poisoned during the subsequent root hunt. At the edge of the woods are two locations where you can quickly pull mandrake roots from the soil. Now where did that bloodsucker go?



OBJECTIVES

- Return to Regis.
- Use your Witcher Senses to find Regis.
- Help Regis defeat the vampires.

Study the ground for some footprints, and make your way deeper into the woods. You hear hissing from the grassy glade you're in. Draw your sword; Bruxa are tackling Regis in combat! After a struggle, where your previous combat knowledge is key to victory, the last of the vampires falls. Speak to Regis again. It seems there is one last contingent of creatures you need to deal with.

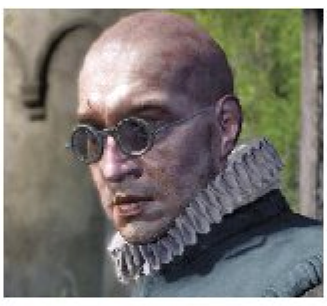
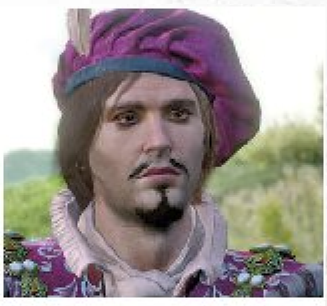
After your night's festivities with Regis have concluded, make your way back to the property the Duchess deeded you, the Corvo Bianco Winery. As you reach the main entrance, your majordomo Barnabas seems most perturbed; an unknown individual has barged into the residence. After entering the building, you discover your oldest (and dandiest) friend has stopped by. Dandelion has brought you a little something, a housewarming gift.



Barnabas-Basil Foulty



Dandelion (Viscount Julian de Lettenhove)

Except it isn't that small; it's the (apocryphal) painting of Dandelion standing over a vanquished wyvern that you and Zoltan had a good chuckle over back at the Rosemary and Thyme. Answer Dandelion depending on your enthusiasm for the gift.

- If you were rescued from prison by Dandelion, you have a proper conversation regarding how you came to your predicament.
- If you were unable to save the Duchess from Syanna, you reveal to a shocked Dandelion that you were unable to save Anna Henrietta
- If you managed to convince Syanna to keep her sister alive, you are greeted warmly, laughing that he is a figment of your imagination.

You can then optionally ask what he's been up to, whether he and Zoltan are still in business, and what he plans to do in the future. Mention what you think of his house-warming present. Meanwhile, you can learn the finer points of wine production, and commence (or continue) Secondary Quest: No Place Like Home by further enhancing and updating your home, though your main adventuring—both in Toussaint and across the Northern Realms—is seemingly at an end.

The above interaction with Dandelion takes place only if you've played Blood and Wine as a standalone adventure. If you played Witcher 3 and have a girlfriend, she visits you. If Geralt doesn't have a girlfriend (or tried to have both Yennifer and Triss), Ciri comes to visit.

Secondary Quests

Overview

This impressively gargantuan chapter details all of the optional Secondary Quests that you can undertake throughout your adventuring across the Northern Realms and Toussaint. Aside from Secondary Quests that are "unmarked" (denoted in this guide by the "*" symbol), every single one of these quests appears in the Secondary

Quests section of your Quest Menu. However, the guide further subdivides Secondary Quests so you have even more information to help you in your adventuring:

Secondary Quests (Stand Alone): The vast majority of Secondary Quests are included in this chapter. They are almost always quests you can find on Notice boards, or by chancing on someone in a location (such as a village) that requires a Witcher's services. They are self-contained, and all are presented in this chapter.

Secondary Quests (Critical Path-Related): There are also Secondary Quests that can only be activated or completed as part of a Critical Path (or Main) Quest. These are listed here, but are also detailed from start to finish in the previous section.

Secondary Quests (Gwent-Related): Gwent Quests are Secondary Quests where the main focus involves the locating or playing of Gwent cards. These are listed here, but also grouped together in their own section.

Secondary Quests (The Heroes' Pursuits): These are Secondary Quests involving fistfights across the realms (Fists of Fury) or Racing Roach (Horse Races). Both these activities are listed here, but also grouped together in their own chapter.

Secondary quests are almost always not necessary to complete, have no bearing on any ending, and have no "Major Effects" to choose during them. Remember you are able to leave a Secondary Quest (under most circumstances) at any time and complete other quests, uncover points of interest, prepare potions and oils, meditate, or simply explore.

Available Quests

Secondary Quests throughout your original adventure are divided into five separate sections (based on the five Realms in which they are available).

Whenever possible, the quests in this chapter are divided by Realm and Territory. If you aren't sure where a Territory is, consult this guide's Atlas.

If a quest has multiple starting points in multiple realms, it is flagged in the "All Realms" section of the forthcoming chart.

If a quest has multiple starting points in multiple territories, it is flagged in the "General" section of a Realm, in the forthcoming chart.

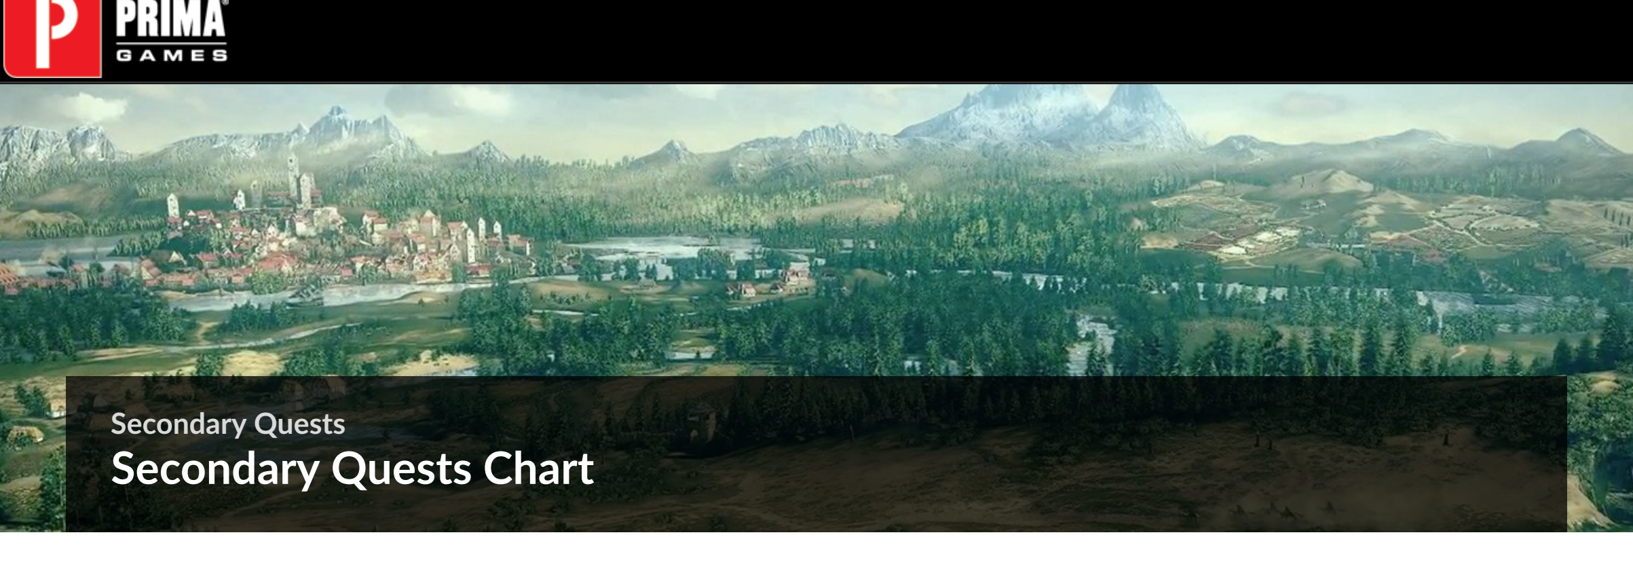
OPTIMAL QUEST COMMENCEMENTS: YOUR MILEAGE MAY VARY

Sometimes you begin a Secondary Quest through eavesdropping, finding notes or other loot, or stumbling into a location you'd be sent to if you already knew about a quest's existence. So although the listed locations for each Secondary Quest are the optimal methods for starting each quest, they aren't the only way you can launch one.



Secondary Quests

Secondary Quests Chart

There are a total of 197 secondary quests (including those related to the Critical Path of your original adventure, and the Main Quest of the Blood and Wine expansion). The following chart shows every quest you can attempt.

(* If a quest has this asterisk next to its name, this is an unmarked quest, and the name will not appear in your Quest menu. However, an exclamation mark ("!") may appear on your in-game map to signify the start of this quest).

"!" MARKS THE SPOT

Feel free to check through this guide's Atlas section, where every single one of these quests has its starting location flagged with a similarly-colored exclamation mark.

Missing In Action

A Blind Man Leading A Cripple

DANGER ALERT

SPOILER ALERT

MISSING IN ACTION

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries

LOCATIONS: Ransacked Village, Crossroads, Overgrown Cabin

CHARACTERS: Dune, Bastien, Rhosyn, Hussar

ENEMIES: Ghouls

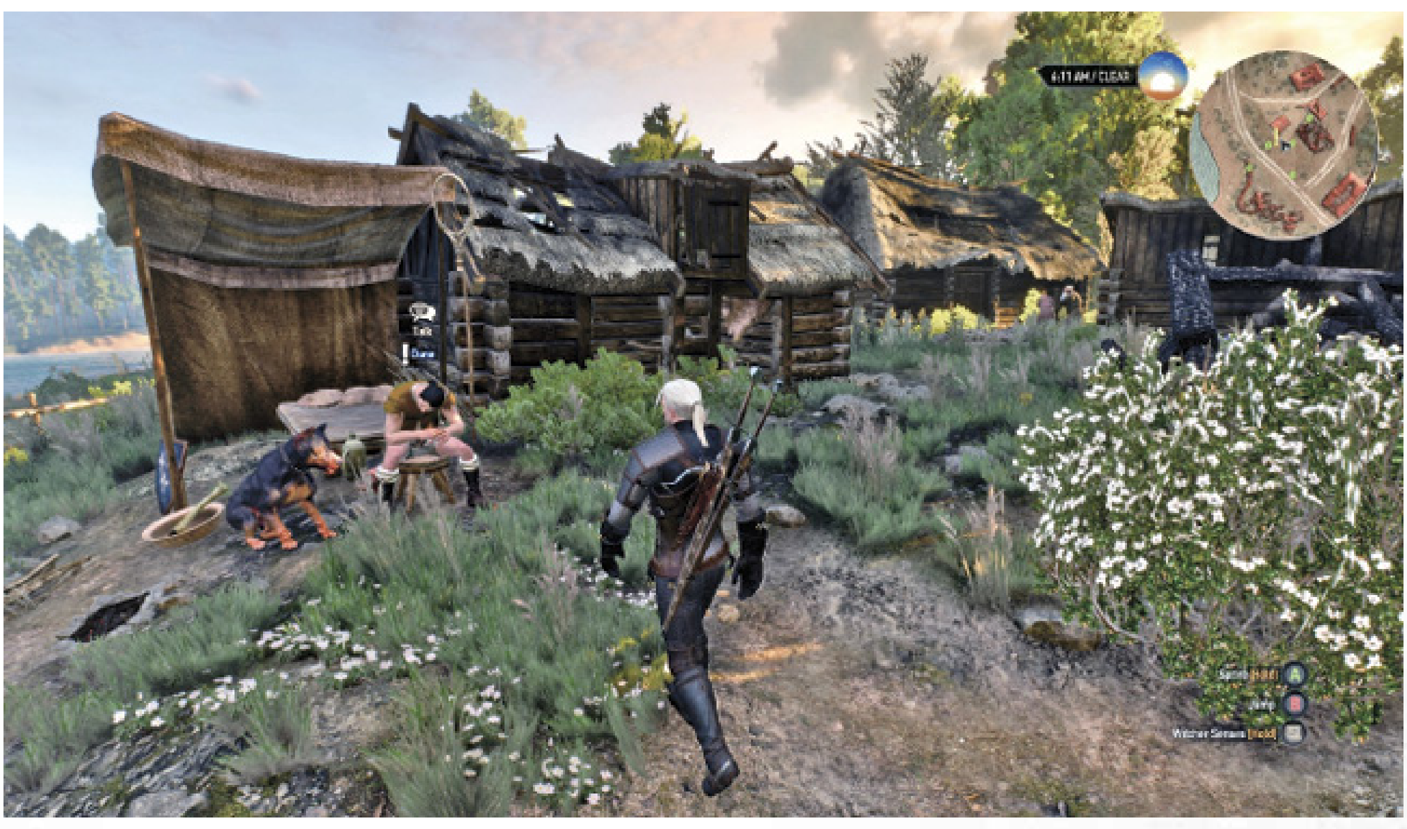
OBJECTIVES

- Meet Dune near the battle field
- Nearest Signpost: Northeast of Crossroads

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries. Locate Dune at the Ransacked Village, and speak to him. This quest becomes inaccessible once you leave for Vizima.

Dune sits dejected, talking to his brother's dog, Hussar. Brother Bastien was a soldier who fought the Black Ones just outside the village. Agree to help Dune find his brother, and follow him as he runs under the hanging tree, and takes the path roughly northward past Crossroads, to the site of a recent battle. Speak to Dune again, and he explains the recruits from White Orchard painted a small flower on his brother's shield—this should aid you in your grim search.



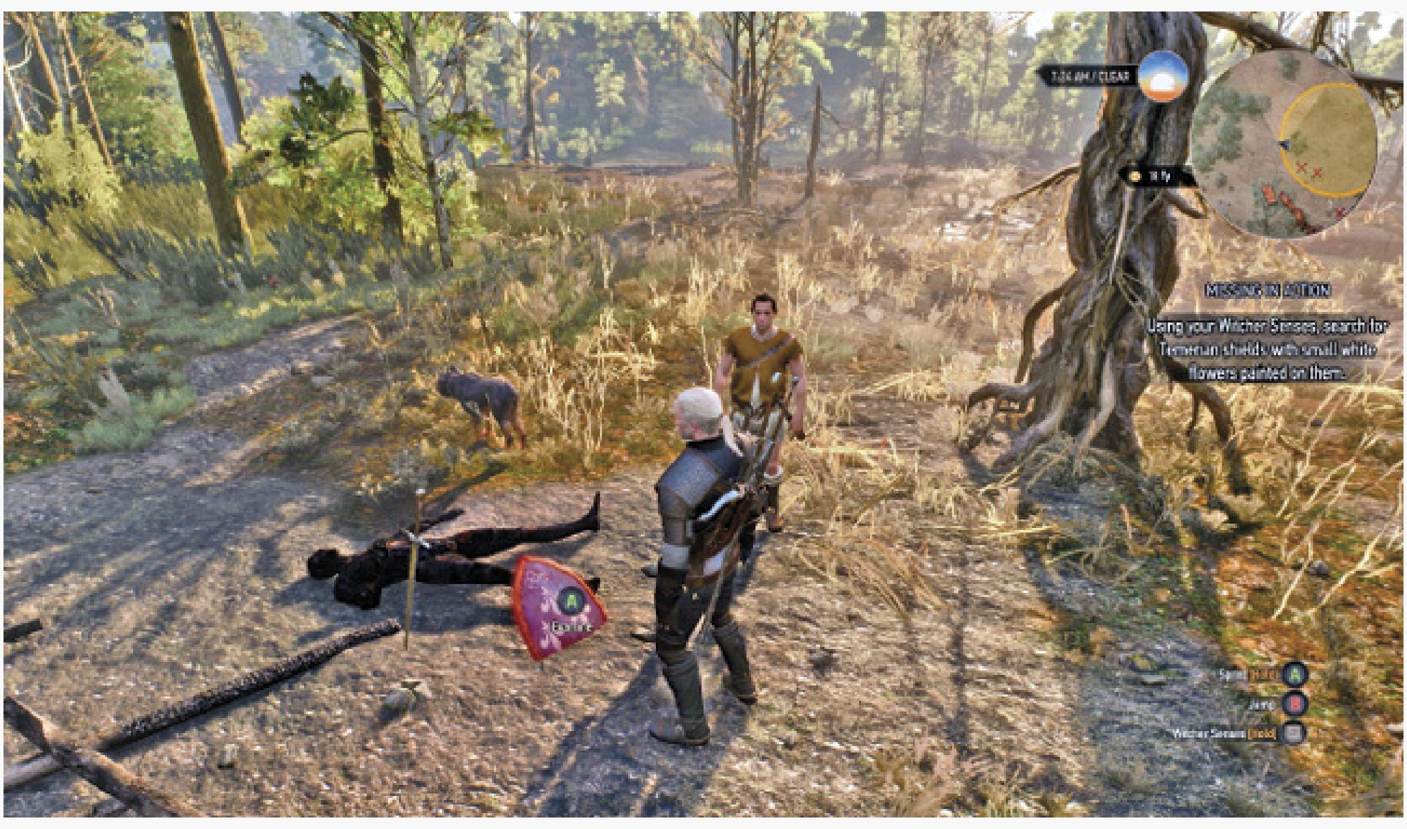
A QUICK TRIP TO THE CROSSROADS

You can Fast Travel to the battlefield location (Crossroads signpost), in which case Dune and Hussar arrive ahead of you.

OBJECTIVES

- Search for Temerian shields with small white flowers painted on them.

Wade down into the Objective Area and study the corpse-strewn field using your Witcher Senses. You soon come across a shield, but it belongs to another villager. Methodically inspect each shield you come across, moving across the fetid landscape, and dealing with around four ghouls who prowl for morsels of fallen flesh.



MISSING IN ACTION
Using your Witcher Senses, search for Temerian shields with small white flowers painted on them.
Sprint (Hold)
Jump
Witcher Senses (Hold)

A burned corpse lies in the lonely southwest corner of the battle field. The shield matches Bastien's, but the corpse isn't as broad-shouldered. Bastien is close though, as Hussar picks up his master's scent.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the dog's trail.

Use your Witcher's Senses and follow the footprints through the undergrowth, optionally pausing to examine the trail as you go. The trail leads you to an overgrown cabin where you're surprised to discover Bastien (badly wounded but still alive) speaking with a Nilfgaardian deserter named Rhosyn. Dune is surprised at this turn of events, but knows he can't simply leave the Nilfgaardian deserter to his own kind. It falls to you to administer final judgement upon Bastien's rescuer. You can:

- Agree with Dune that leaving Rhosyn alive is too risky, and abandon the soldier.
- Agree with Bastien and show some nordling leniency, keeping Rhosyn alive.

ALTERNATIVE PLANS

You may also stumble across Rhosyn and Bastien yourself, without starting this quest. If you do, Bastien asks you to seek his brother Dune out. In this scenario, Rhosyn always dies as there is no one around to convince him to take in the wounded Nilfgaardian soldier.

Twelve hours later, Dune, Hussar, Bastien (and optionally Rhosyn) have moved into a small farm south of White Orchard, together with Dune's wife, Liesje.

If you ignored this quest and travelled to Vizima, Rhosyn and Bastien both die of starvation. Their corpses can be found in the overgrown cabin.

Precious Cargo

A Mediocre Merchant

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

PRECIOUS CARGO

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries, Main Quest: The Beast of White Orchard

LOCATIONS: Swamp (south of Nilfgaardian Garrison), Insurgent Camp

CHARACTERS: Private First Class John Geermer (Merchant)

ENEMIES: Insurgents (Bandits)

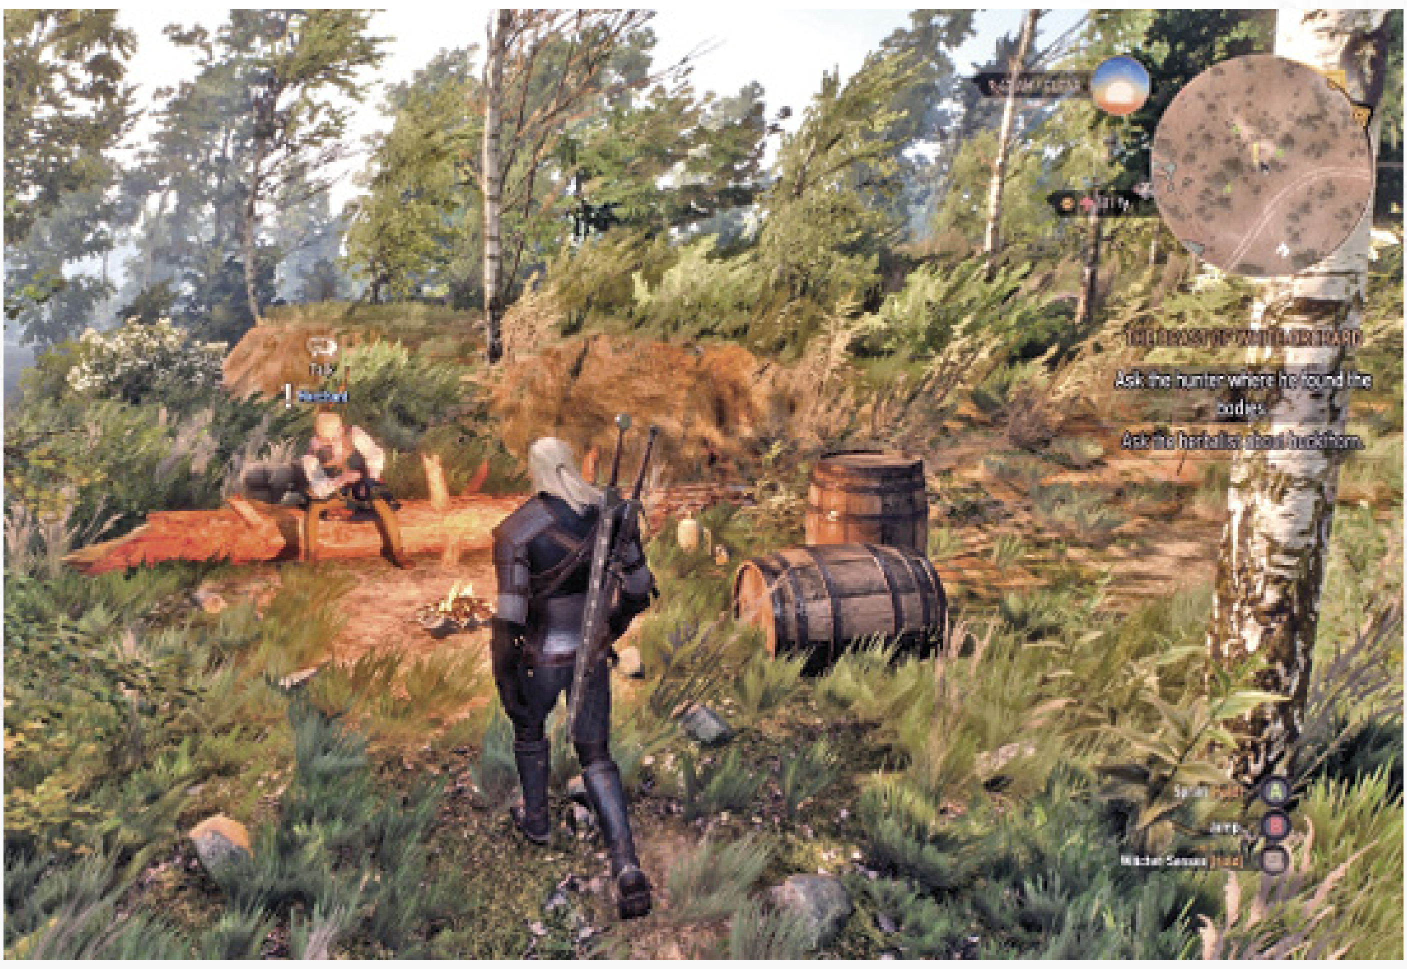
OBJECTIVES

- Find the little box the merchant mentioned.
- Find where the cart left the road.
- Find the cart.
- Nearest Signpost: Nilfgaardian Garrison.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries or Main Quest: The Beast of White Orchard. Locate the Merchant close to the edge of the swamp south of the Nilfgaardian Garrison.

Approach the forlorn merchant tending to a damp camp. Shouting for you to come over, he explains he ignored the warnings and became a cropper in the nearby swamp, losing his wares. He's particularly concerned about a little box, and hopes you can find it for him. Agree to his request and set off down the road to the objective area (northwest).



Merchant

Witcher Senses [Hold]

Use your Witcher Senses and examine the cart tracks that lead off into the swamp. Then wade into the unpleasant water. A few methodical moments later, and you should stumble upon the cart, riddled with arrows. With your senses, inspect the dead horse, and the remains of a merchant—both struck by arrows from a well-aimed bow.

SCATTERED SUPPLIES

Feel free to gather any items you can from the trail of supplies scattered around and among the cart wreckage.

Expect a confrontation with a drowner or two as you inspect the clumps of swamp trees surrounding the ruined cart. The strongbox is under one of these thickets. Loot it. Of course, your detective work has solved the mystery of how the cart left the road. The "merchant" seems to have ambushed the transport and then mislaid its spoils.

Precious Cargo

A Better Bowman

OBJECTIVES

- Return the box to the merchant.

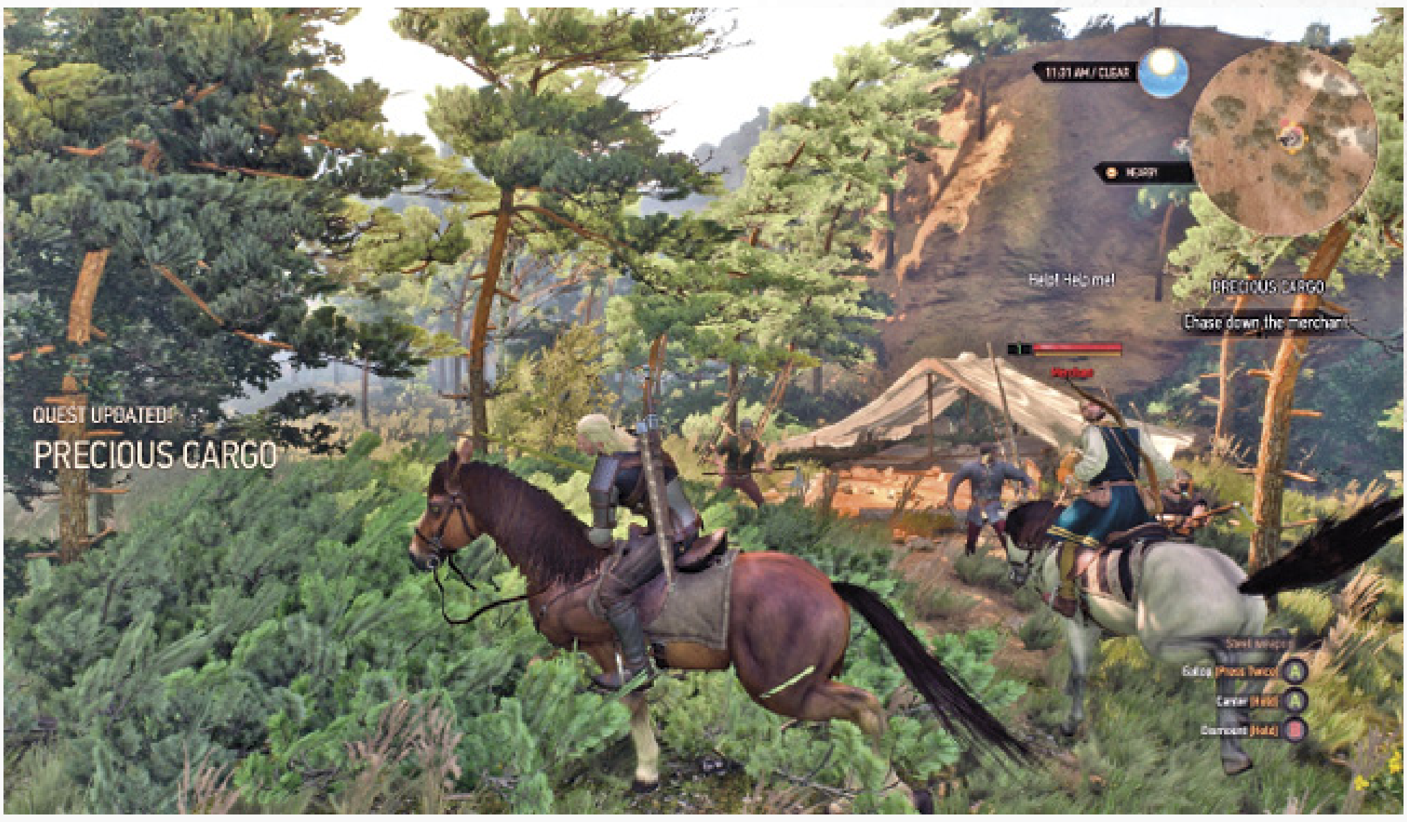
Head back to the merchant at this point, and decide how you'd like to continue this quest. Your conversation choices are important here. You can:

- Tell him you found his box, hand it over, and receive a small reward of crowns as the quest concludes.
- Tell him you've seen through his lies. After an ineffectual attempt to distract you, he flees by horse, and the quest takes a turn for the dramatic. The following objectives now begin:

OBJECTIVES

- Chase down the merchant.
- Knock the merchant off his horse.
- Defeat the bandits.
- Nearest Signpost: River Crossing

The merchant is a terrible liar, but an accomplished rider. Race after him, using your gallop and shortcuts along the main road to reach him, before employing sword, crossbow, or bombs to drop him from his horse. Be quick! If you let too much distance come between you and the merchant, and this quest fails, the man has fled!



Continue to follow, and the merchant eventually leads you into a Temerian insurgent camp he is part of (just northeast of the River Crossing signpost). Expect combat with around three bandits and the merchant himself. After everyone is down, it seems the merchant isn't quite dead.

If you knocked the merchant off his horse, or defeated the insurgents, he reveals his true identity; a private in the Temerian army, who attacked the transport for its medicine. You can:

Return box to the merchant, no questions asked:

Items: 20 Novigrad Crowns

Strike a deal with the merchant:

Items: 30 Novigrad Crowns

Extort the merchant:

Items: 50 Crowns, Plus 5x Celandine and 4x White Myrtle

A Frying Pan, Spick And Span

Find A Pan For Dear Old Gran

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

A FRYING PAN, SPICK AND SPAN

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries, Main Quest: The Beast of White Orchard

LOCATIONS: Locked Hut

CHARACTERS: Old Woman

ENEMIES: None

OBJECTIVES

- Break into the locked hut.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries. Locate the Locked Hut along the river bank on the path between White Orchard and the Nilfgaardian Garrison.

Approach the old woman on the river's sandy shoreline, watching as she mutters about never again lending out anything to strangers, and speak with her. After she explains that she let someone borrow her prized frying pan, which is inside the locked hut, agree to inspect the hut and the strange smells coming from within. Begin your hut infiltration with a swift Aard Sign to smash the door open.

You can also get her attention by blasting Aard at the door before speaking to her. You can also refuse to help her verbally, then enter the hut and help her anyway.

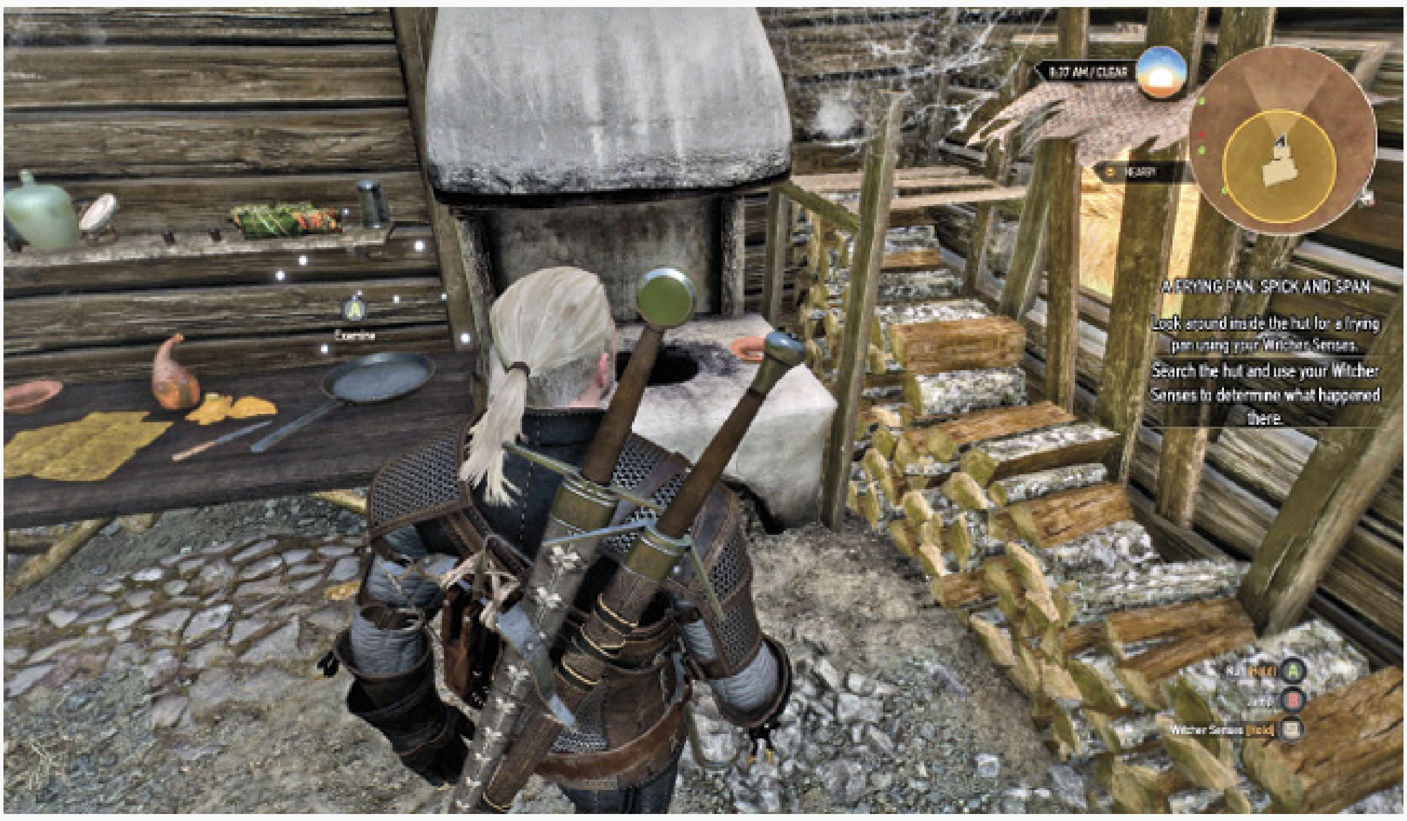
OBJECTIVES

- Search the hut and determine what happened here.
- Return the frying pan to the old woman.

There's more than just a rotting corpse inside this dwelling. Use your Witcher Senses to discover that the victim's throat was garroted, as well as a cracked monocle lying nearby. There's also a pile of smoldering documents in the fireplace. The pan itself is safe and sound; in fact, it's been scrubbed clean as the mystery man needed the soot to make ink for his clandestine letter-writing.

Items: Quest Items: Silver Monocle, Burned Papers, Frying Pan

Back outside, explain your findings, and the fate of the two gentlemen who tussled inside this hut. The papers reveal someone was waiting for a contract to show up, but he never did. You're given a few crowns for your troubles as this quest concludes. As for the spy who stayed here? It was Thaler!



A FRYING PAN, SPICK AND SPAN

Look around inside the hut for a frying pan using your Witcher Senses.

Search the hut and use your Witcher Senses to determine what happened there.

Twisted Firestarter

A Punking Instigator

DANGER ALERT SPOLIER ALERT

TWISTED FIRESTARTER

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries

LOCATIONS: White Orchard

CHARACTERS: Willis, Napp

ENEMIES: Drowners

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to look for evidence about the arsonist behind the forge.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries. Locate Willis the dwarf blacksmith in the center-north of the village.

Willis

Willis the blacksmith of White Orchard is furious with one of his own townsfolk for razing his smithy to the ground, and seeks someone to investigate the culprit responsible. It could be anyone in White Orchard, but once you agree to help him, your clues lie in the bushes behind the forge, to the south. Use your Witcher Senses to discover the following:

- The shavings from a tinderbox, and boot prints from a large man.

The trail continues east into the orchards the town is named for. Aside from a urine-soaked tree, the footprints lead directly to the edge of a lake near the Woesong Bridge. Inspect the area near the small rock cluster to see where the arsonist took off his boots and waded into the water.

PRECIOUS CARGO

Find the little box the merchant mentioned using your Witcher Senses.

Use your Witcher Senses to find where the cart left the road.

Follow this lead literally, and wade through the water under the bridge, and back onto the same side of the bank, where a lost boot is found, as well as signs of a scuffle with drowners.The drowers are still active—fight a few of them or flee. The trail continues around and onto the bridge, with the arsonist suffering a light wound, and the footprints continue back into town, ending at the front door of the cottage opposite the tavern. Step inside.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the trail.

Twisted Firestarter

Fear Addicted, Danger Illustrated

Use your Witcher Senses to look the inhabitants of this cottage up and down. The perpetrator is in the bedroom behind the fireplace, propped up against a wall. Use your senses to double-check the drowner marks on his arm.

OBJECTIVES

- alk to the suspect.
- Return to the blacksmith.

Napp

This wretched fellow cracks under the lightest of interrogation, admitting to the crime, but reasoning that his hatred of dwarves somehow promulgates his cause. Napp offers some of his dead mum's gold if you don't turn him in.

At this point, you have two choices (at the end of the conversation with the arsonist). You can:

- Ignore his pleas, drag him to Willis (using Axii Delusion Level 1, or beating him to the ground when he refuses), and claim your reward from the dwarf.
- Agree to his pleas, claiming your reward from the arsonist, letting him go with a warning, and return to the dwarf to let him know you couldn't find the culprit.

In either case, the quest concludes.

Did you side with the arsonist? Then you might want to return to White Orchard later to see if that forge is still standing. Is that the smell of a burning forge in your nostrils?

Faithful Friend

Galloping Gulden

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

FAITHFUL FRIEND

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Something Ends, Something Begins (II)

LOCATIONS: White Orchard, Woesong Bridge

CHARACTERS: Peasant, Gulden's Master

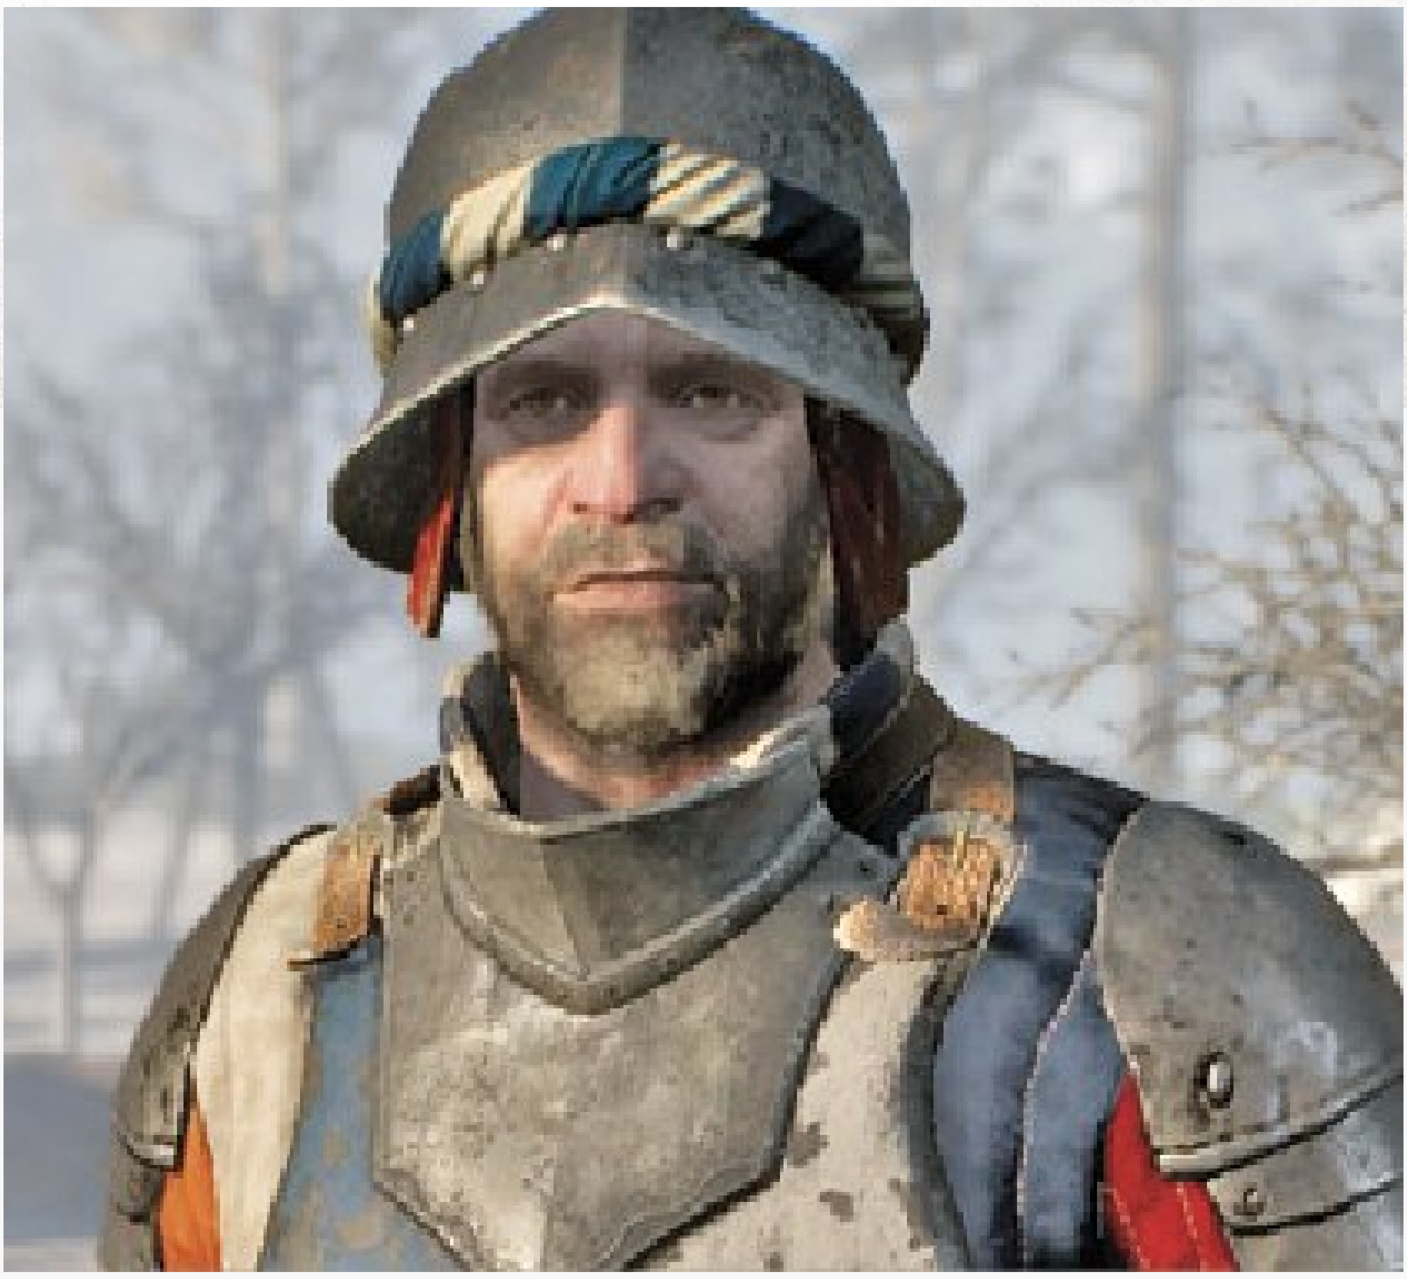
ENEMIES: None

OBJECTIVES

- Catch the runaway horse.

QUESTING DECISIONS

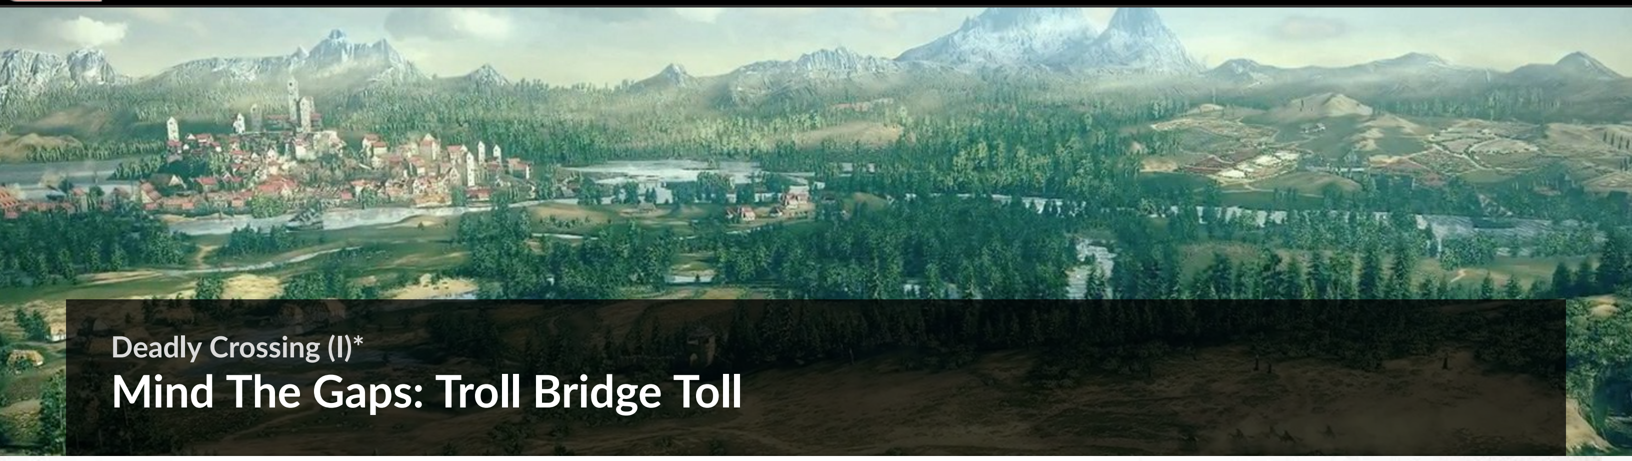
This quest is only accessible during the Epilogue of the Main Quest: Something Ends, Something Begins (II).



Gulden's Master

As you emerge from the White Orchard Tavern, a peasant is attempting to calm a rearing horse. Watch and the rider is jostled while the horse gallops off, usually across Woesong Bridge. Follow the trail across the bridge, to where a soldier is resting with the horse—now considerably less spooked.

You can ask whether the fellow has been away long, the side he was on when he fought, and tell him you can see the horse (named Gulden) is in good hands now that his owner has returned. A faithful friend is reunited with its master.The quest concludes.



Deadly Crossing (I)*

Mind The Gaps: Troll Bridge Toll

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

DEADLY CROSSING (I)*

LOCATIONS: Mulbrydale, Lindenvale, Crookback Bog Orphans Village, Crossroads, Troll Bridge

CHARACTERS: Looters, Bandits

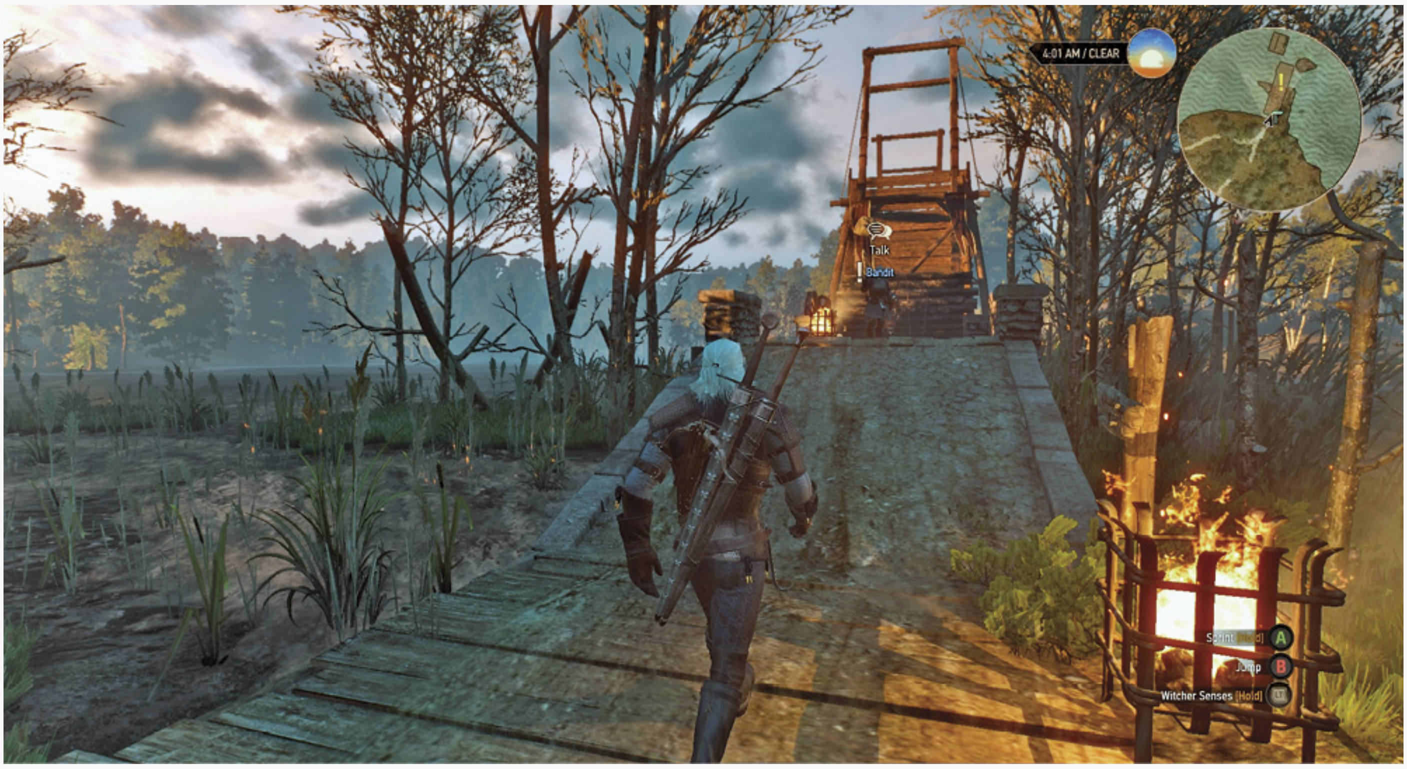
ENEMIES: Looters, Bandits

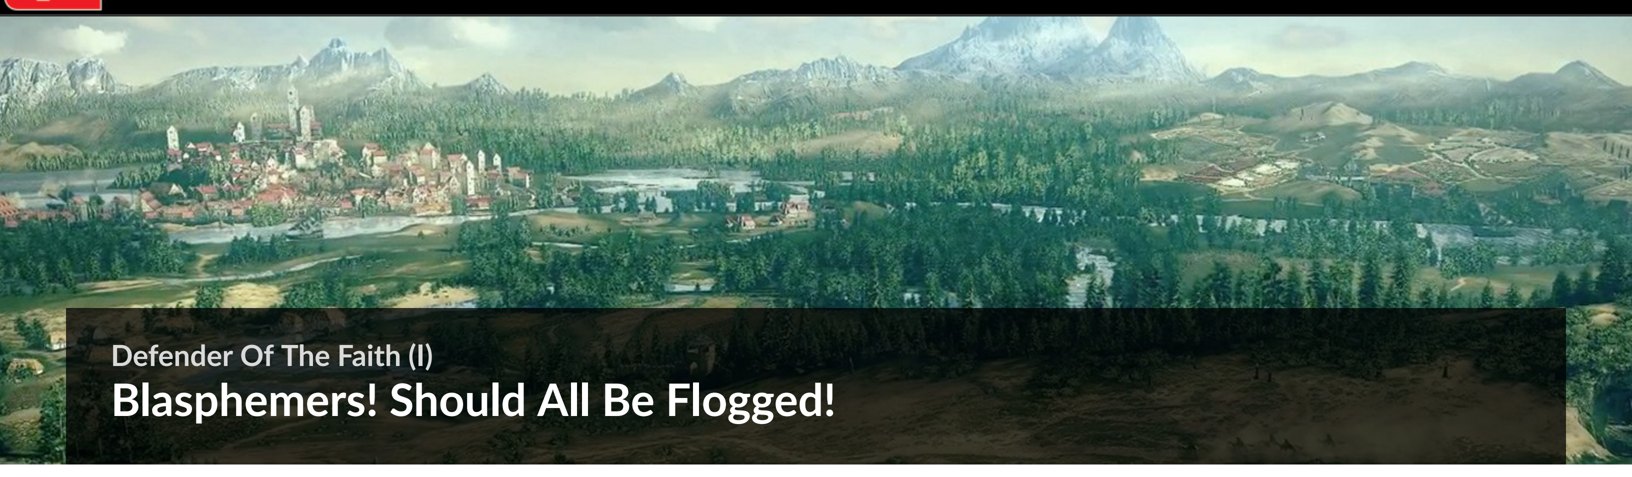
Recommanded Item: 50 Crowns, Axii Level 2

At the bridges and river crossings of war-torn Velen, expect to encounter groups of ne'er-do-wells. They can be hostile, so use diplomatic conversation choices, avoid them, or engage them.

At the "Troll Bridge" on your map, you encounter a group of bandits ordering a toll to be paid. Your words speak louder than your actions, at least at first:

- (50 Crowns) Pay the bandit, and cross the bridge.
- (Axii Level 2) Flummox the bandits, and pass.
- Introduce the three bandits to the pointy end of your steel sword. Then manually lower the bridge at the wooden winch.





Defender Of The Faith (I)

Blasphemers! Should All Be Flogged!

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

DEFENDER OF THE FAITH (I)

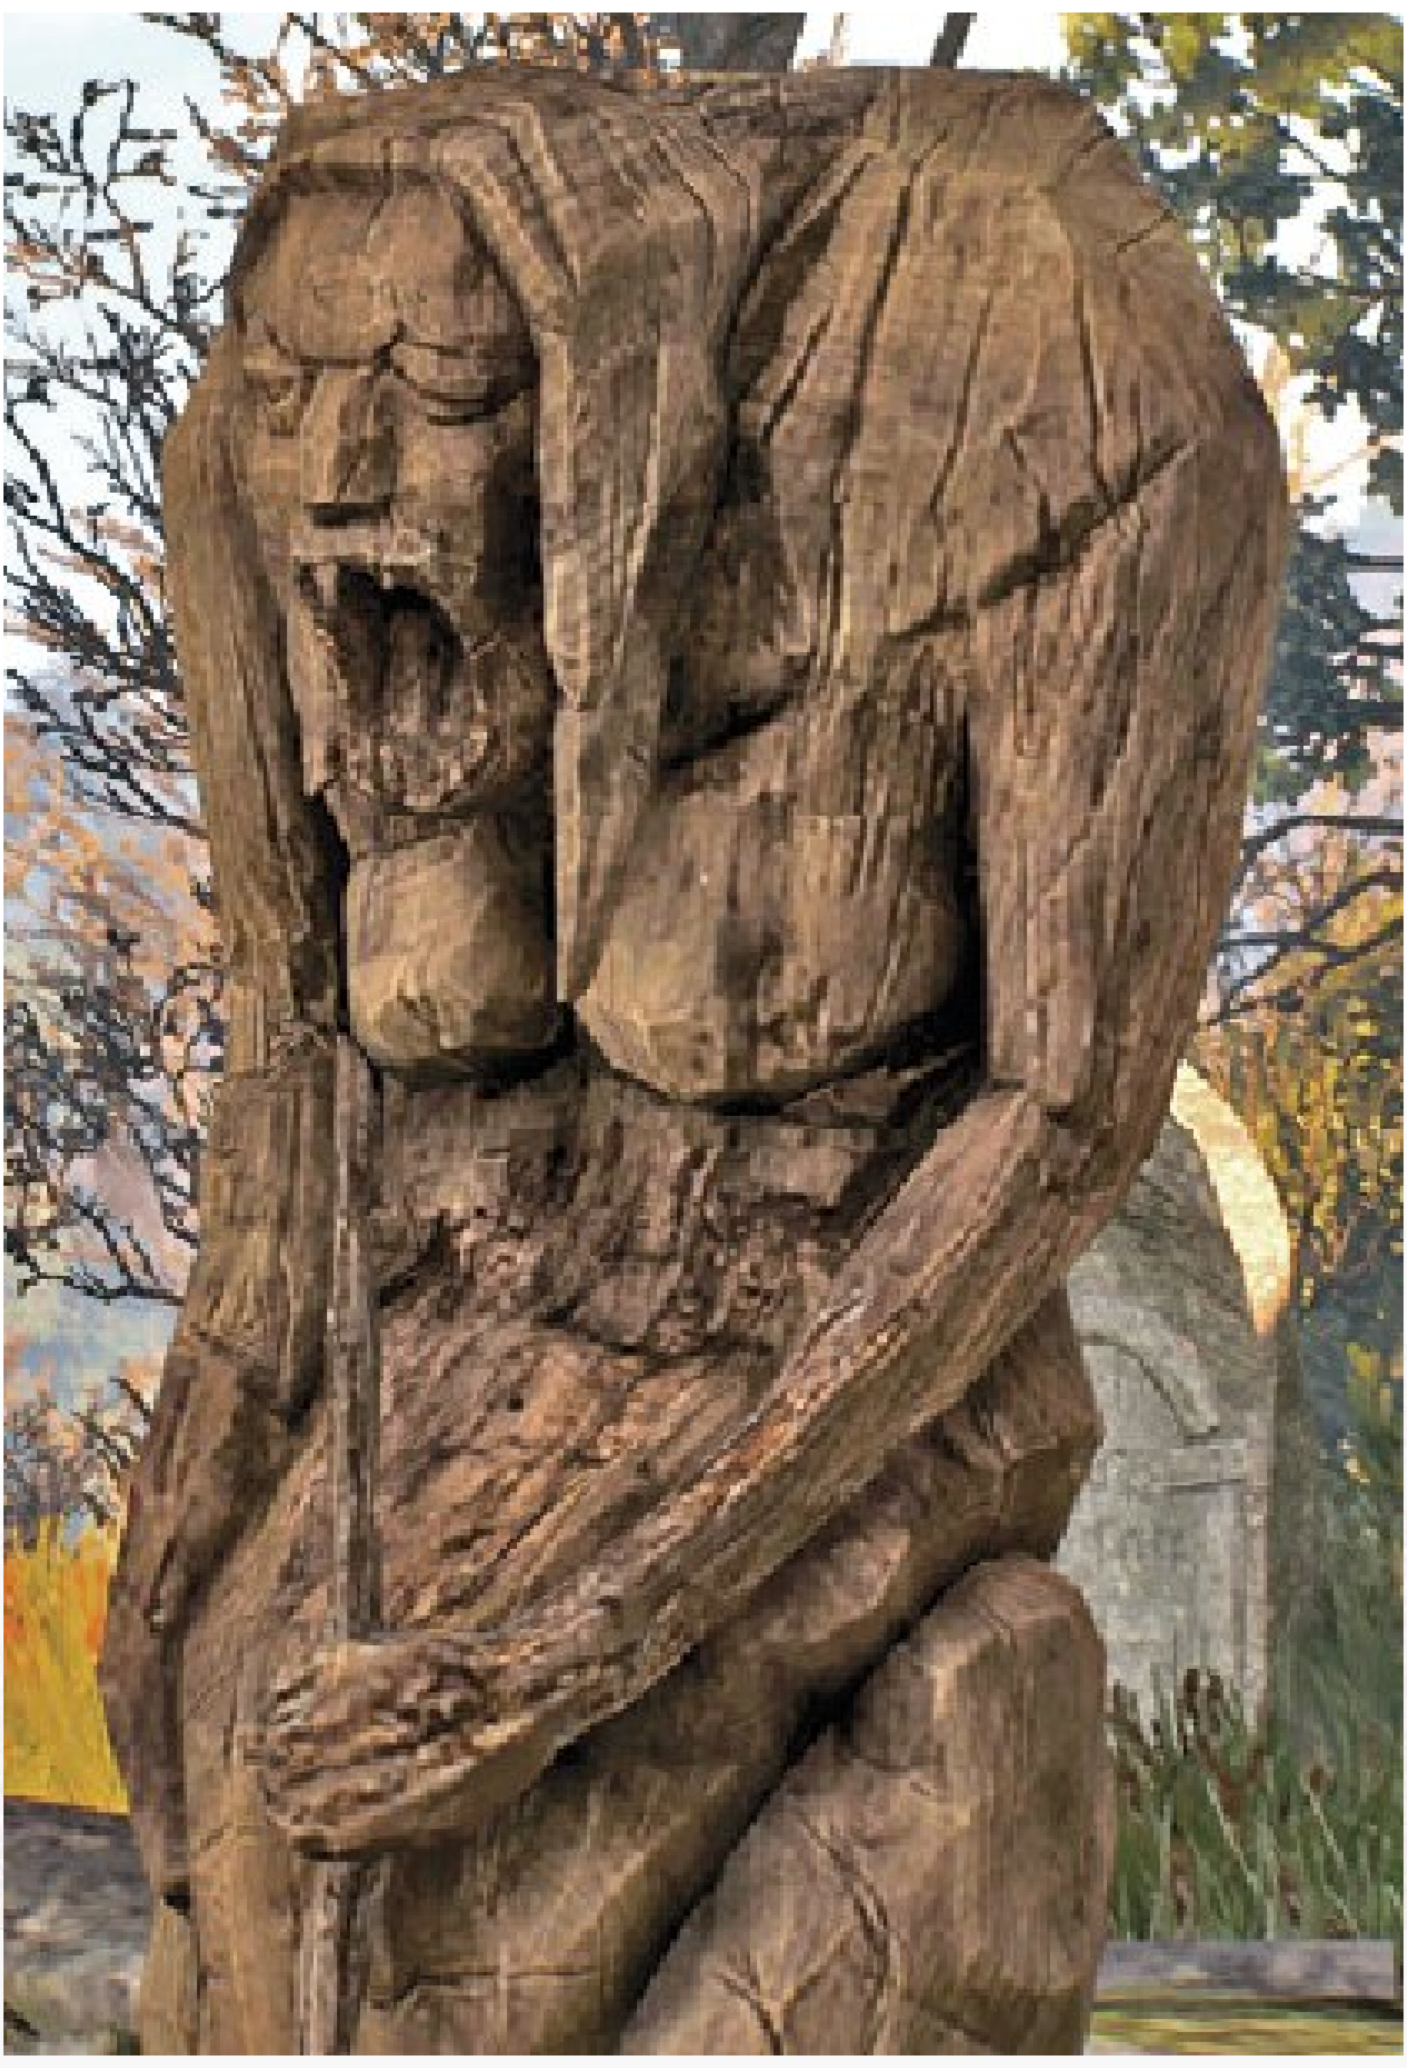
LOCATIONS: Blackbough, Duen Hen, Byways
CHARACTERS: Peasant, Master Friedrich of Oxenfurt
ENEMIES: Students (Vandals)

QUESTING DECISIONS

Locate the peasant who requires your help at one of two different locations. The junction of the road leading eastwards from Blackbough (shown), or the small hillside shrine of Duen Hen in The Mire (Secondary Quest: Defender of the Faith (II)).

OBJECTIVES

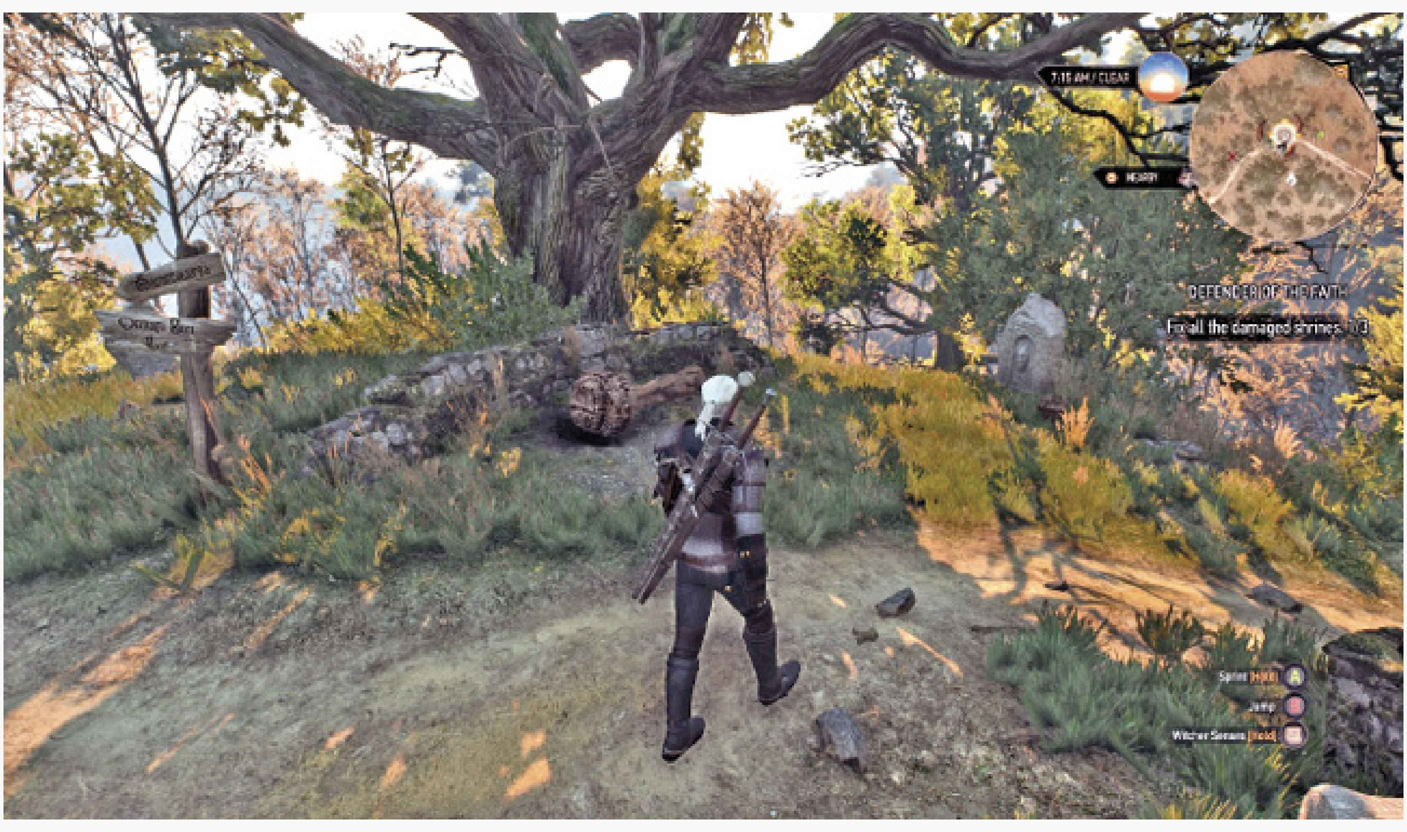
- Fix the damaged shrines (3).
- (Optional) Defeat the vandals.
- Nearest Signpost: Blackbough

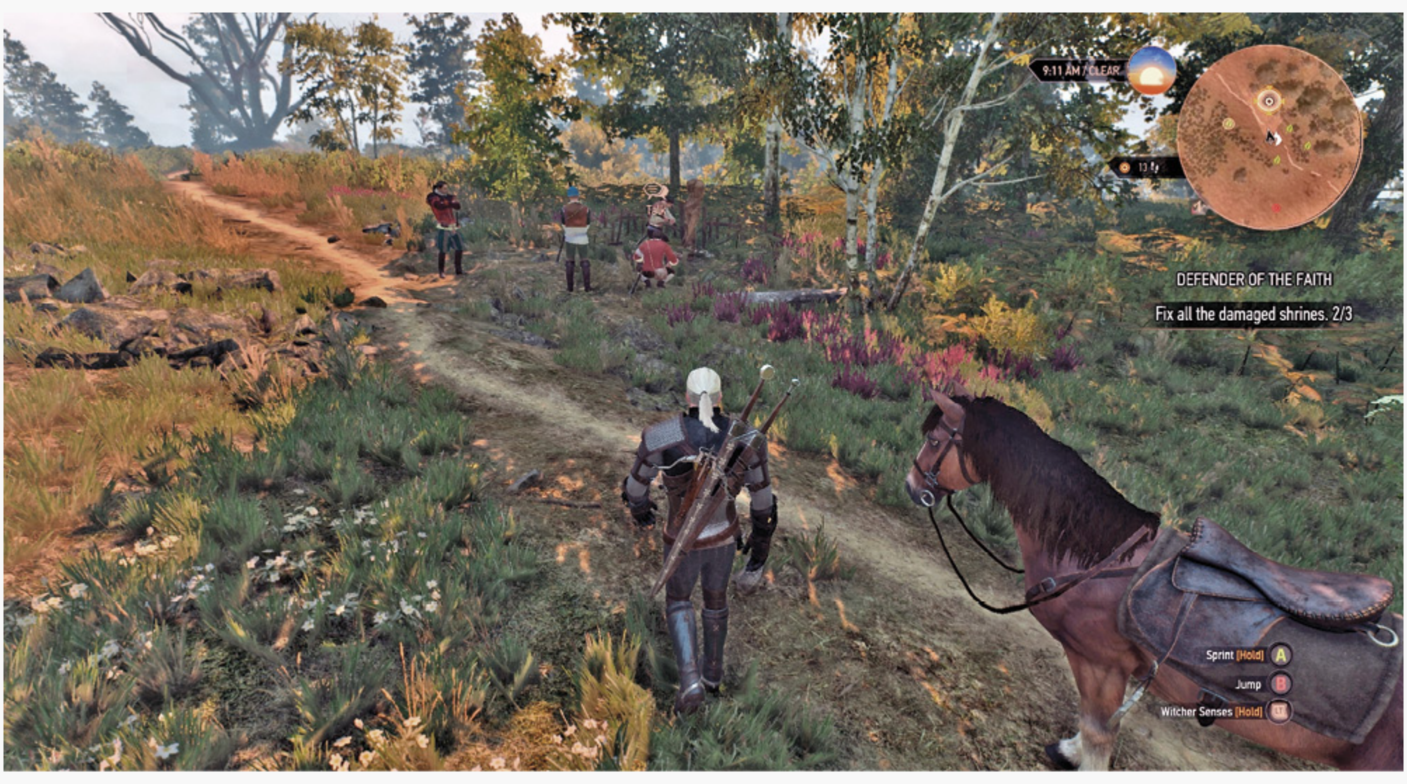


Shrine to Vernia the Merciful

Approach a ranting peasant woman on the hill known as Duen Hen, and listen to her diatribe.It seems blasphemers (pox take them) profaned a shrine to Verna the Merciful. Agree to "fix" these shrines (by lifting the effigy of an old woman carved in wood to an upright position). There are three to find (in any order).

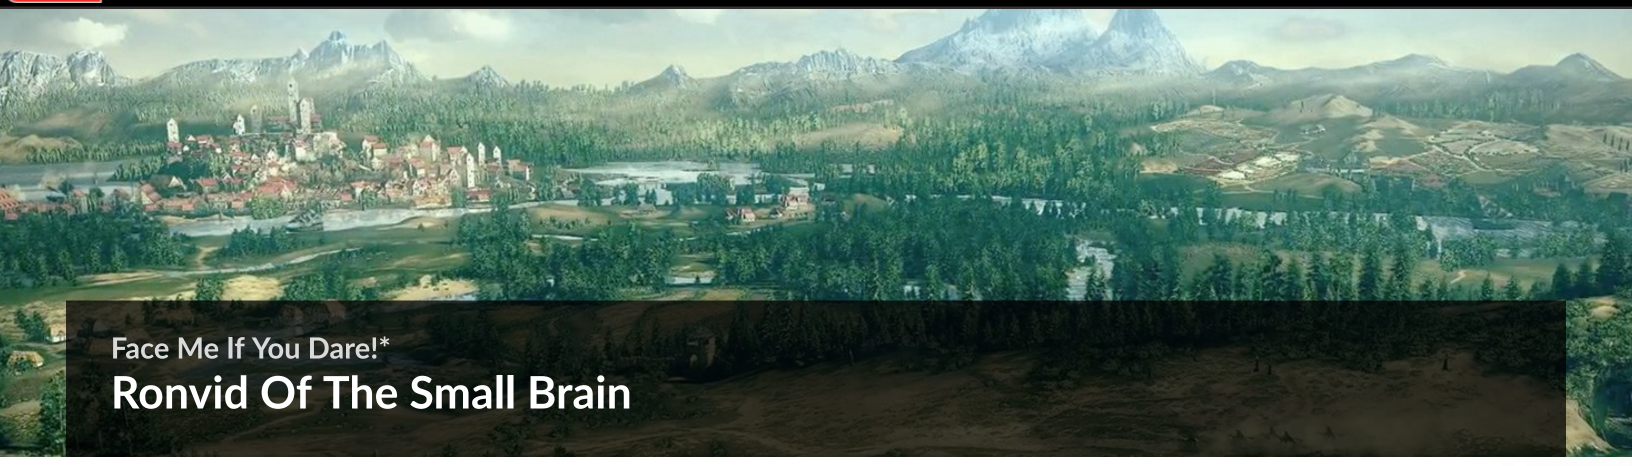
- The first (if you started this quest in The Mire) is atop a small hill known as Duen Hen in the southwest of this province.
- The second (if you started this quest in Crow Perch) is at the junction of the road leading eastwards from Blackbough.
- The third shrine is in the very southwestern parts of Velen, southeast of the Byways signpost.





When you reach the last shrine (in any order), it is being desicrated by a group of vandals lead by a flouncing philosopher. He firmly believes that religion is the opiate of the masses, and insists on vandalizing shrines. You can:

- Agree to leave him to his stand against the old ways and intolerance. The quest then concludes.
- Disagree with the dandy's methods, and tackle him and his three vandal cohorts. The quest then concludes.



Face Me If You Dare!*

Ronvid Of The Small Brain

DANGER ALERT

SPOILER ALERT

FACE ME IF YOU DARE!*

LOCATION: Crow's Perch, Novigrad

CHARACTERS: Ronvid of the Small Marsh

ENEMIES: Ronvid, Thugs

OBJECTIVES

- Nearest Signpost: Crow's Perch

Ronvid of the Small Marsh

An idiot with a deathwish stands at an intersection of dirt paths close to the bridge into Crow's Perch. He seeks to challenge you to a duel, babbles on about the honor of Maid Bilberry, and also the one hundred knights he wishes to slay in mortal combat. You're his first. Despite your best banter, the fight commences.

It also stops abruptly after you inflict a few choice hits on Ronvid. Defiant even after an embarrassing display of swordplay, he heads on his way. Finish up any of the conversations as you wish (with a threat, or a promise).

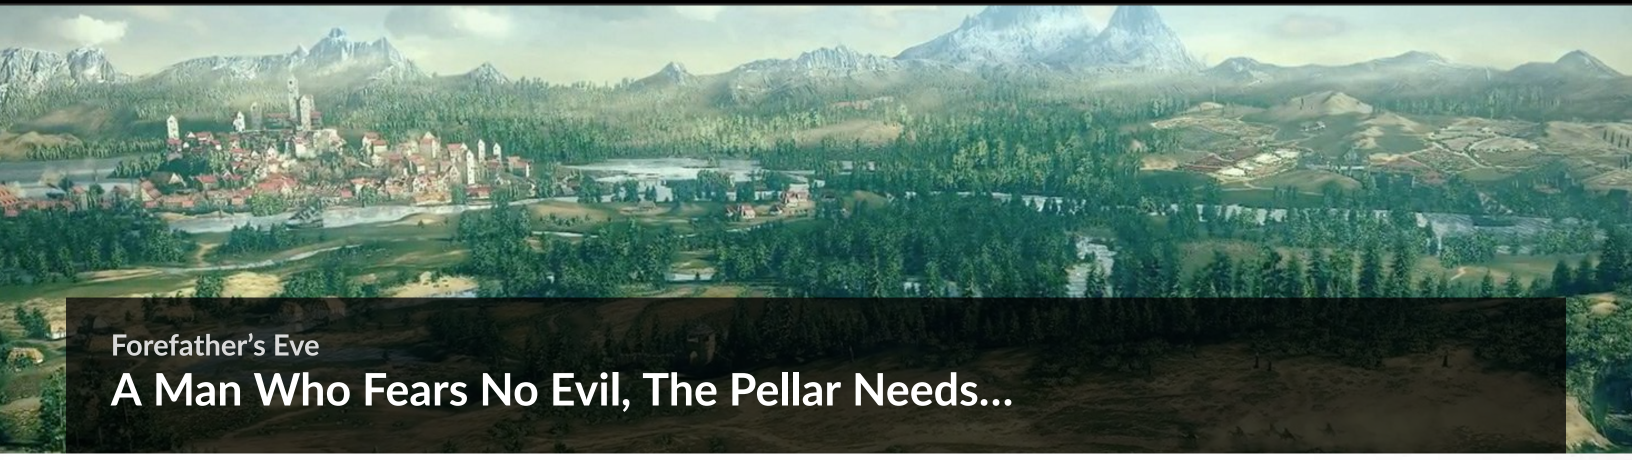
A few days later, you may stumble upon Ronvid again, just outside Novigrad (look around each of the gates).

Now armed with shield and sword, he is ready for a rematch! Once again, he stops the combat and gives up after a few hits.

Two days later, you may find Ronvid in Novigrad (check along the docks or harbor on the west side of the city). This time he isn't alone. There are two hired thugs with him to take you down, now he realizes you're a Witcher. You can:

- Fight and kill them all.
- (Axii Delusion Level 2) Convince them they are tired and should go home.

Afterward, this quest concludes.



Forefather's Eve

A Man Who Fears No Evil, The Pellar Needs...

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

FOREFATHER'S EVE

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Family Matters; Main Quest: A Princess in Distress

LOCATIONS: Fyke Isle; Blackbough; Pellar's Hut

CHARACTERS: Pellar; Old Man Ambros

ENEMIES: Drowner; Water Hag; Witch Hunters; Wraiths; Rotfiends

QUESTING DECISIONS

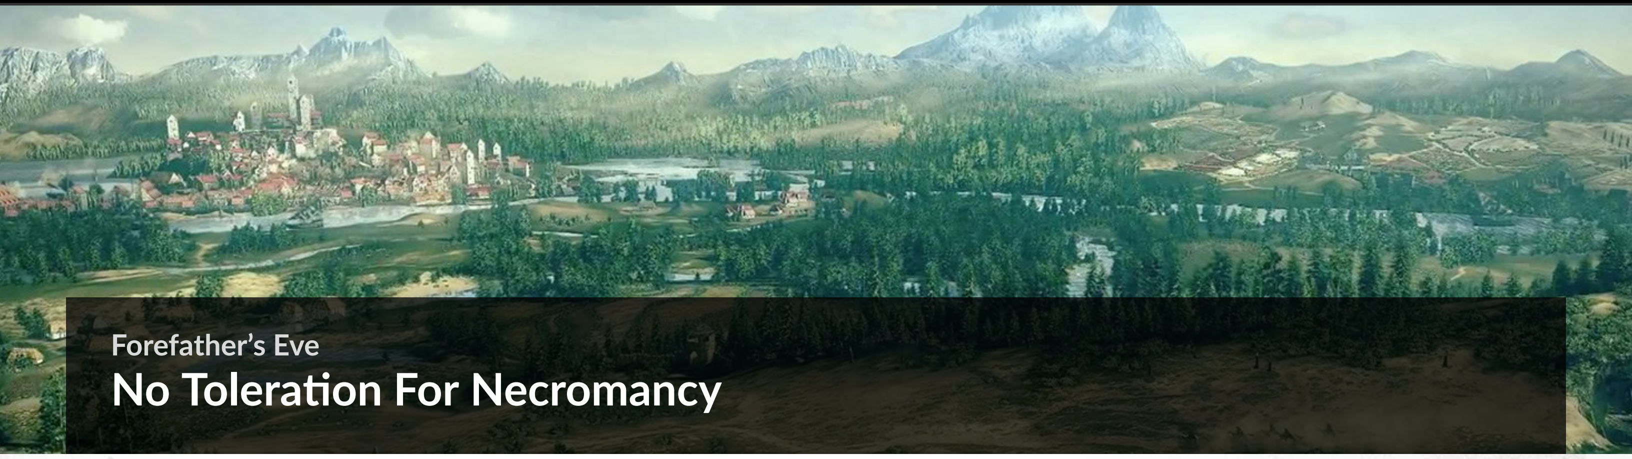
Head to Crow's Perch after completing Secondary Quest: A Towerful of Mice before Main Quest: Family Matters; or head outside Keira Metz's cottage (if you completed Main Quest: Family Matters, and then Secondary Quest: A Towerful of Mice. The pellar should automatically stroll up to meet you.

OBJECTIVES

- Meet the pellar in the stone circle on Fyke Isle.

The Pellar

Soothsayer and friend of goats, the pellar approaches and requests your presence at a ritual that begins tonight on Fyke Isle. There are rites to conduct on Forefather's Eve, and you're hired to provide protection from the damned souls that may disrupt the ceremony. Agree to help, then journey to the standing stones on the southwestern part of the isle. An assembly of peasants is already enthralled by the pellar. You have one more chance to meditate and prepare for the battles to come. Then the ritual begins in earnest.



Forefather's Eve

No Toleration For Necromancy

OBJECTIVES

- Protect the ritual's participants.

While the pellar gesticulates, bring your sword to bear on a few drowners that attack from the edge of the circle that is closest to the lake. These five wet souls are backed up by a water hag. Be sure all are defeated, and draw them away from the pellar. Fight close to the water. Afterwards, the pellar summons old man Ambros from the flickering flames.

After quite a conversation, you're about to witness further chatter between Pellar and ghost, when the ritual is interrupted. Not by monsters, but witch hunters. They want to put a stop to this necromancy in no uncertain terms. The pellar asks you to intervene. You have an important choice to make. You can:

- Tell the witch hunters to leave the pellar and peasant alone. Neither side can be reasoned with, and the witch hunters attack you. The next objective begins.
- Tell the pellar this is not your fight. The witch hunters move to disperse the peasants, and the fire is snuffed out. The pellar is most dispondant at your actions, and the quest concludes.

Forefather's Eve

All Is Gloom. What Beings In The Darkess Loom?

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the witch hunters.
- Defeat the wraiths.

Cut the three witch hunters down so the ritual may continue. Alas, blood has been spilt on this hallowed ground, and the pellar is worried other malicious entities may appear. He's correct—prepare to defeat three incoming wraiths.

Afterwards, it is clear the pellar is afraid of his father's ghost (especially as the wraiths referred to the death of Ambros as patricide). Agree to find the corpse of Ambros, and destroy this bond it has to the wraiths and the land of the living.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the body of the pellar's father in the swamps.
- Burn the pellar's father's body.
- Nearest Signpost: West of The Orphans of Crookback Bog.

Swim or take a boat across the lake towards the marshes, and scout the edge of the bog, west of the Orphan Village. The corpse is in remarkably good condition (you can see where the pellar smashed in his father's skull). Defeat any rotfiends roaming the area, use Igni to set the corpse ablaze, and dismiss the patriarchal specter homing in on the pellar.

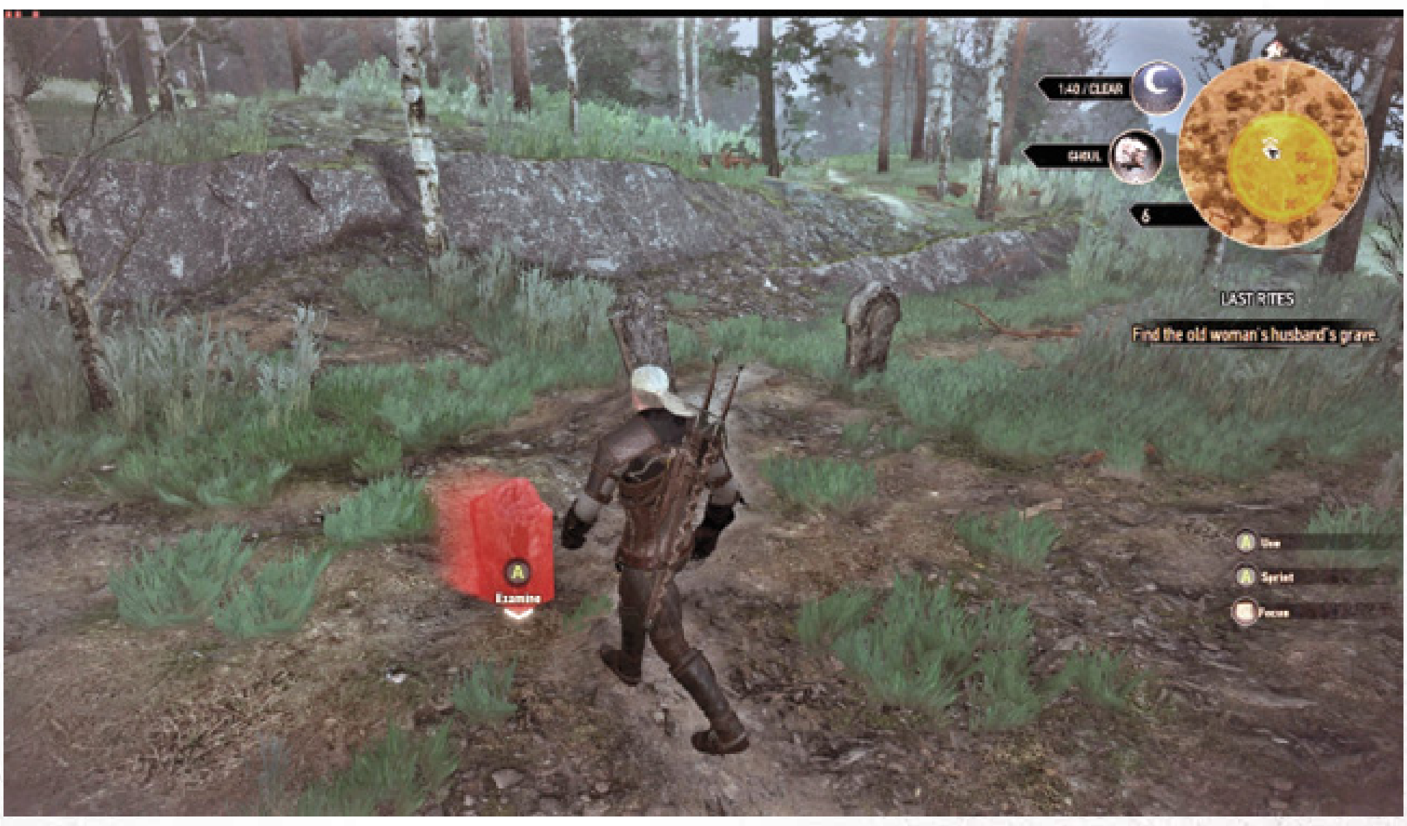
LOCATION: Blackbough
CHARACTERS: Old Woman, Lessy
ENEMIES: Ghouls

OBJECTIVES

- Find the old woman's husband's grave.
- Place the ring on the grave.
- Nearest Signpost: North of Blackbough.

Locate an Old Woman standing by the bridge overlooking the pond just north of Blackbough. She only appears at night. She emplores you to find the grave of her old husband (Jackamar), and bring a stop to the hauntings she says she's been the victim of.



Lessy

Rid her of this specter by placing the ring she gives you on Jackamar's headstone. Something seems odd about this old dear (she's getting her battle dates wrong).

Jackamar's grave is northwest of here, along the bank of the pond, and up into the woods. This leads to an unmarked cemetery. Dispatch the prowling ghouls, utilize your Witcher Senses to find the gravestone, and deposit the ring on it as requested. Use Keira's Magic Lamp at this point, and you can see the ghosts reunite with each other.

OBJECTIVES

- Return to the old woman for a reward.

Head into Blackbough, and search for Lessy's hut. Speak to the old woman's grand-daughter, who has some startling revelations about her dear old gran. Then collect your inconsiderable reward.

MASTER ARMORERS

LOCATIONS: Crows' Perch (Velen), Clan Tordarroch Forge (Undvik), Wolven Glade (Velen)

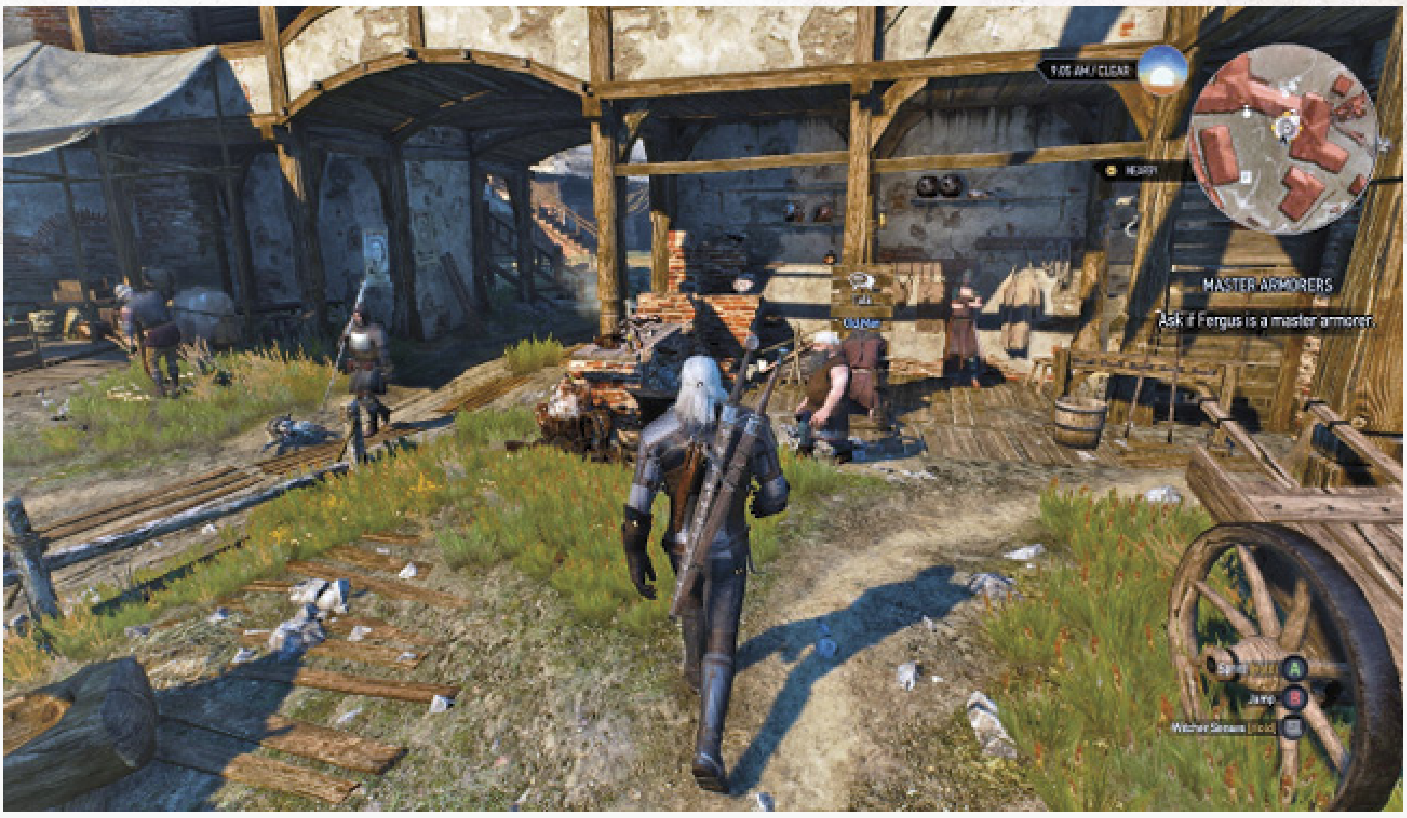
CHARACTERS: Fergus, Yoana, General Harmon aep Groenekan, Baron's Quartermaster

ENEMIES: Rock Troll, Bandits, Archgriffin

OBJECTIVES

- Ask if Fergus is a master armorer.
- Nearest Signpost: Crows' Perch.

Fergus, a dwarf and supposed master craftsman with all types of armor, has a forge within the walls of Crows' Perch in Velen. Head there and speak with him. Even though you can request that he make you some armor, you're here looking for a "master armorer." Speak about a durable and lightweight suit, and Fergus reckons it's impossible to make.



But his helper, Yoana, pipes up that the folk of Clan Tordarroch (on the isle of Undvik) have the tools to make such a piece. Fergus reprimands her for talking to the customers again. Despite this, Yoana describes where such tools can be found—in a cave on the north side of the isle.

SAILING TO SKELLIGE

Feel free to complete other quests closer to your current vicinity if you wish, since the ocean trek to Undvik (one of the isles on the western side of Skellige) can take a while. The optimal time to visit is during Secondary Quest: The Lord of Undvik.

Master Armorers

Tools Of The Tordarroch Clan

OBJECTIVES

- Get blacksmith's tools from Undvik.

The trek to Undvik is perilous, and should be undertaken once you've visited Kaer Trolde with Yennefer, as part of the Main Quest. Once you're free to explore, set sail for Undvik itself, mooring your boat at the Marlin Coast marker. From there, you have a lengthy hike, which follows the path (exactly) that you take during Secondary Quest: The Lord of Undvik:

- Venture along the coast to the northwest, to the ship's graveyard.
- Find a winding cliffside path heading roughly southwest, then leads you across various small bridges to a massive giant's ship.
- Venture past the ship, then to Hjalmar's Camp, and work your way across the heath to the abandoned village of Urskar, on the southwest shore of the central lake (see previous picture).

From Urskar, trek up and into a slit-like cave opening, and a subterranean cave system. Take a long drop into a low pool, then work your way up the caverns and tunnels, until you reach a mountain-top ruin—the Clan Tordarroch Forge. When you're here, admire the view near the old ballista (see previous picture).

C--King Up Simple Bungs

OBJECTIVES

- Bring the tools to Fergus.

Now return back to Velen, to Crows' Perch, and finally to the forge of Fergus. Tell him you have his tools. You're about to negotiate some payment, when a high-ranking Nilfgaardian officier (General Groenekan himself) arrives, dismounts, and asks the dwarf about a custom-made set of armor. They go inside to discuss, leaving you with an exasperated Yoana. Speak with her, and you discover she's the one with the talent (and clan hereditary), while Fergus can't even shoe a horse.

- Agree to help Yoana demonstrate her prowess by helping her build a set of armor that will out-perform the one that Fergus is constructing for the general. For this, she requires some acid from a draconic griffin—specifically the one seen north of Crows' Perch. If you actually have some, you can hand it to her now, and skip the following contract.

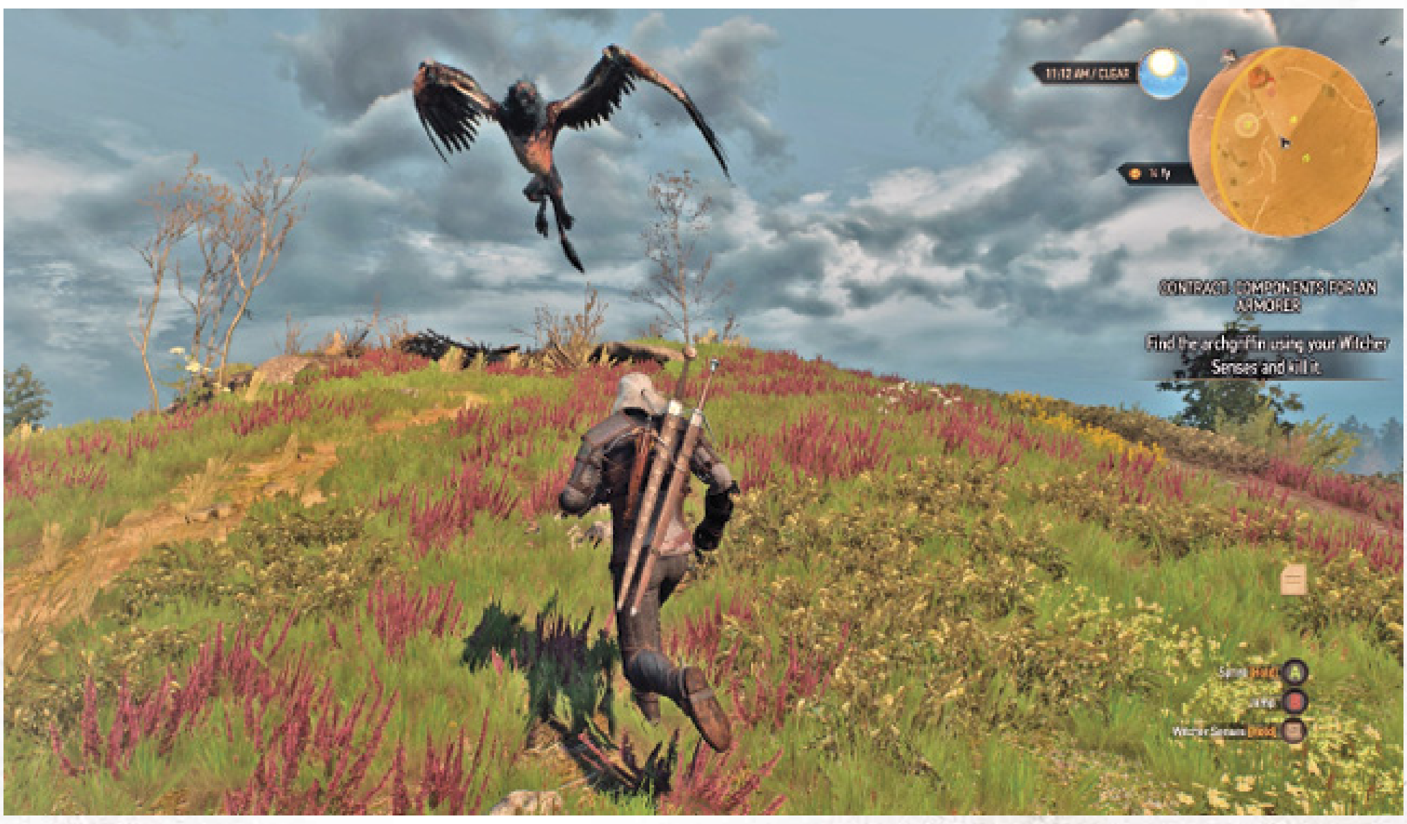
ENEMIES: Archgriffin, Bandits houls

OBJECTIVES

- (Master Armorers): Get gland acid from an archgriffin.
- Take the gland acid to Yoana.
- (Contract): Find the archgriffin using your Witcher Senses and kill it.



CONTRACT: COMPONENTS FOR AN ARMORER

Find the archgriffin using your Witcher Senses and kill it.

Track this fabled beast to a partly wooded area north of Crows' Perch, and just north of the Wolven Glade marker. Find the road through the northern part of the woods, usually where a group of bandits are hanging out. Introduce them to the sharp end of your sword, before inspecting the area with your Witcher Senses tingling:

- There's evidence of bloody body parts and claw prints by the road.
- An archgriffin feather is found on the hillside pasture, roughly north, as you exit the edge of the woods.

The nest itself is at the top of the hillock, and after a lengthy wing-clipping, you should bring this beast down with a thud and cut out the necessary ingredients for Yoana.

OBJECTIVES

- Take the archgriffin trophy to the baron's quartermaster.

Now you have the acid gland, be sure you cut off the griffin's head (the trophy), and return it to the Baron's quartermaster, who sells his wares on the left side of the archway within Crow's Perch, opposite Fergus and Yoana. He has a reward of crowns for proving you slew the archgriffin. The Contract part of this quest now concludes.

MASTER ARMORERS (CONTINUED)

OBJECTIVES

- Help test the armor.

Back at Crows’ Perch, speak to Yoana (not Fergus) at the forge and hand over the acid. She applies it to her handiwork—a spectacular set of plate armor. The general arrives, and Fergus shows off his slightly less robust piece. Amid the confusion and the general’s consternation, it is agreed to test both sets of armor to see who is the real artisan. Agree to help Yoana again.

Stand beside a hapless peasant the general has tasked with testing his armor (made by Fergus), while you stand clad in Yoana’s best. The general notches his crossbow, and the peasant is brought down with the bolt.

He’ll live, but he’s not impressed with the tin can he’s wearing. The general fires at you, and as Yoana predicted, the bolt doesn’t even leave a mark.

The general proclaims the forge to belong to Yoana now, and a dejected Fergus heads off to stoke the fire. Yoana rewards you with a set of armor just for yourself; simply return to her in one day to claim it. The quest now concludes.

WHERE THE CAT AND WOLF PLAY...

RELATED QUESTS: Contract: The Beast of Honorton, Secondary Quest: Take What You Want

LOCATIONS: Honorton (Unmarked), Roadside Shrine (Unmarked), Oreton

CHARACTERS: Millie, Witcher Gaetan, Auntie Lucy

ENEMIES: Alghouls, Wolves

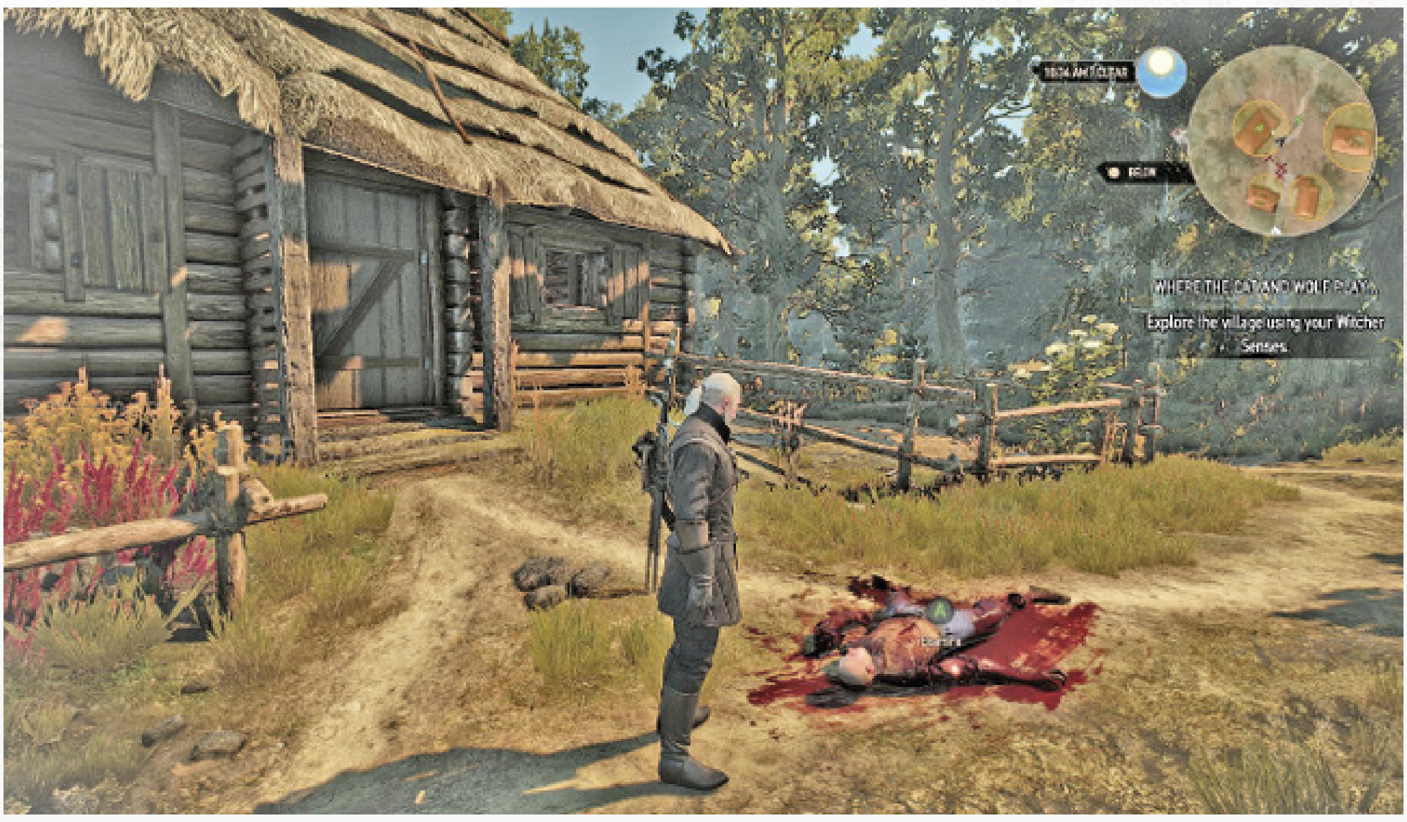
OBJECTIVES

- Explore the village using your Witcher Senses.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest starts automatically at the conclusion of Contract: The Beast of Honorton.

There are signs of bloodletting everywhere in the hamlet of Honorton, and four main locations to study just what happened here. They can be approached in any order, and not all need to be studied.



WHERE THE CAT AND WOLF PLAY...
Explore the village using your Witcher Senses.

Use your Witcher Senses to find specific areas of interest:

- In the middle of the village lies a body torn apart, but the man was dead before the Necrophages slashed at it.
- Northwest hut: Outside is a dog, sliced open defending its owner.
- Northwest hut: Inside, is a corpse who died quickly without putting up a fight. Sliced expertly.
- Northeast cottage: Inside, a woman lies slumped against a wall with sword wounds.
- Northeast cottage: In the fancy study (someone is well-off for a Velen) lies a Leshen's head, chopped off with a sharp knife.
- Northeast cottage: The stove fire is still burning, indicating this massacre happened recently.
- Southwest Hut: A woman lies inside this hut, killed without mercy.
- South stable barn: Outside is a corpse with shallow cuts; each hit an artery. Nearby is a piece of splinterd wood. Watch for another Alghoul appearing from inside the barn, and two more approaching from the road to the south.
- South stable barn: Inside on the straw floor is blood mixed with a concoction; a potion was taken.
- South stable barn: A corpse in the corner with his arm severed above the elbow, and a pitchfork (a dangerous close-quarter weapon).
- South stable barn: In the rear stable is the slumped form of an importantman with a blade wound under his ribs. He is holding a silver chain he ripped from someone.

Short-Changing The Bad Man

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to find the girl.

Once you've inspected the corpse of the important man holding a silver chain, expect to see a small figure fleeing the area behind you. She drops a doll outside the stables; be sure to pick it up at the start of the trail of footprints. These continue through the small window of the southwest hut, and out the other side. Follow the trail a little ways into the woods, and locate the cowering urchin behind a large oak tree. The girl also appears when you investigate Leshen's head or body in the northwest hut.

WHERE THE CAT AND WOLF PLAY...
Use your Witcher Senses to find the girl.

Items: Doll

The girl (named Millie) claims you've cat eyes; "same as him!" but refuses to tell you what happened. You must win her trust in one of two ways. You can:

- (Axii Delusion level 1) You can tell her to calm down and tell you what happened.
- (Doll) You can hand her the doll she dropped. She calms down after being reunited with Master Freckleface.

The girl tells of an argument between "the bad man" and her uncle Sobermir after the Witcher agreed to slay some spook that haunted the woods. After returning with the spook's head, there was an argument in the stables barn, and screaming. Then followed the massacre; everyone was slain by the Witcher, including the girl's mum and brother. She also hands you a medallion she found in the hay. You agree to take the girl to her auntie Lucy in Oreton. But first, you must deal with this wayward Witcher.

Twelve Crowns Buys You A Massacre

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the tracks in the stone circle using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the School of the Cat Witcher's tracks using your Witcher Senses.

The Witcher Gaetan

The tracks begin in a stone circle northeast of Honorton. Head there, examine the area with your Witcher Senses, and discover some barely-visible footprints. Your objective updates. Follow the School of the Cat Witcher's tracks northeast to a rough road (expect wolves in the vicinity). Examine the road itself; there's fresh blood so he must be close. Continue northwest to a path leading to a roadside shrine where the Witcher murderer Gaetan is sitting. Approach him wearing Feline armor, and he has a special question for you.

Gaetan is clutching his ribs. He seems wounded but in good enough spirits to engage in slightly sardonic banter with you. Answer him as you wish, as he explains his actions. Having been short-changed by the ealdorman, he was led to the barn (on pretence of payment) where he was stabbed with a pitchfork. Then he lost his temper. What now? After optionally learning why he spared the girl, you have a choice. You can:

- Choose "godspeed" and let Gaetan be on his way. You earned your nickname for good reason, so you can understand Gaetan's actions. Gaetan seems a little taken aback. Secondary Quest: Take What You Want now begins, and Gaetan returns to the Witcher's Path. The objective to escort the girl to Oreton now begins.
- Choose "prepare to fight" after listening to Gaetan, or choose "you need to die" without even a chat, and Gaetan won't get away with this loss of composure. Gaetan consigns himself to the fight, and hopes you'll allow him a dose \of Swallow?

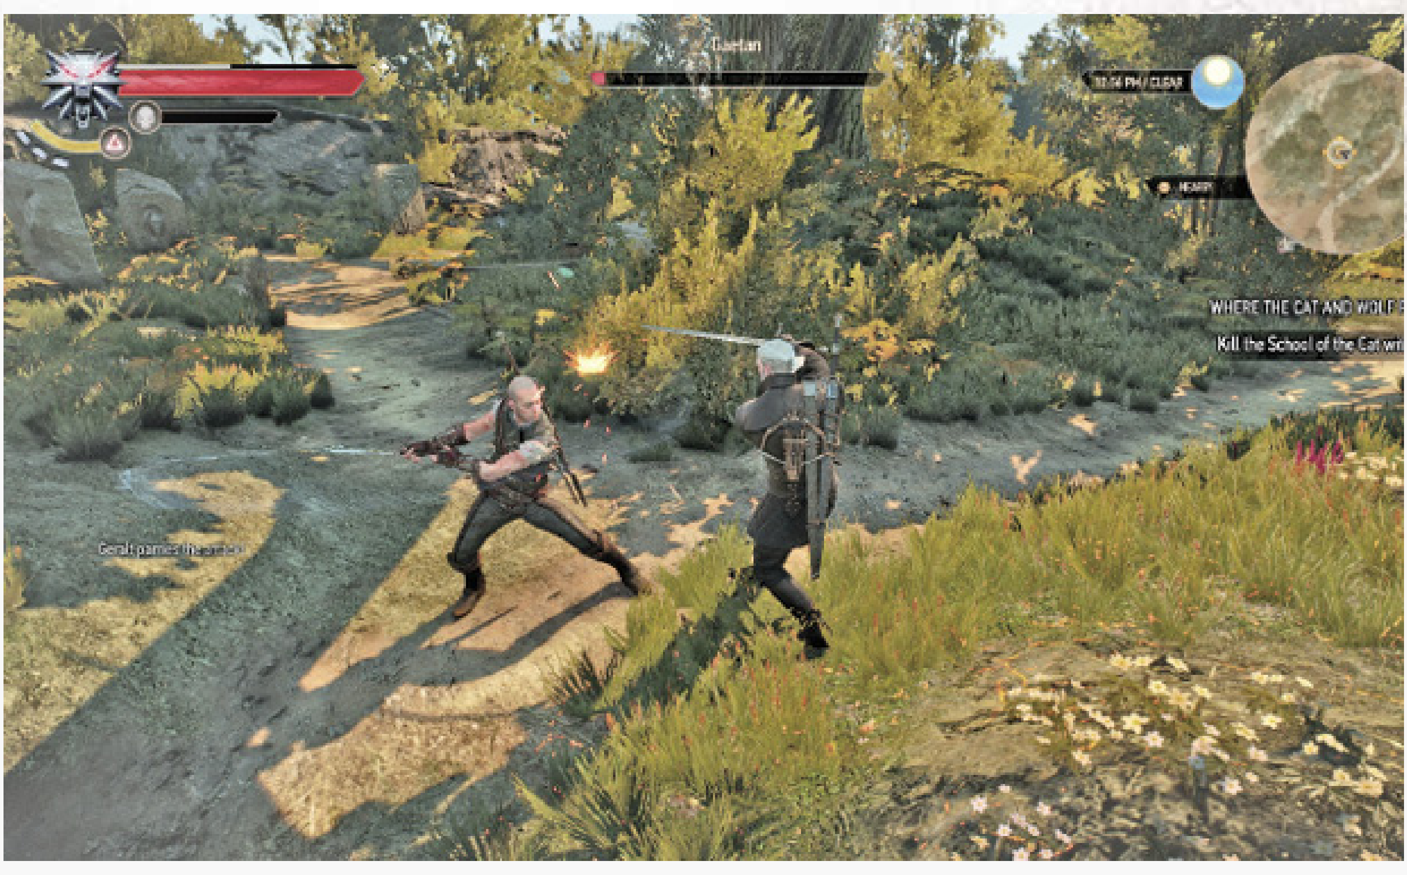
A CORNERED CAT FIGHT

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the School of the Cat Witcher.

- If you gave Gaetan a chance to drink Swallow, he laughs at your idiocy, throws a concoction at you, blinding you for a full minute as the battle starts, and you must attack in darkness. This makes the battle a little more tense.
- If you told Gaetan "no chance," combat continues as normal.

Gaetan is quick, and poses a special threat as he can utilize Igni, Aard, and Quen. Your best action is to parry his attacks (as he's a little too aggressive), then countering them until you eventually drop him. Any preferred plan for dealing with human foes is also advisable, and aggressive Signs are also worth a shot. After the slaying, inspect Gaetan's corpse for a common silver sword, and the following special weapon:



Items: Teigr (Steel Sword)

LITTLE GIRL LOST

OBJECTIVES

- Escort the girl from Honorton to her relatives in Oreton.

Dash back to Honorton, and find the girl still cowering behind her tree. Agree to lead her over to Oreton (she can sit on your shoulders if she wants). You arrive in Oreton automatically, and speak to Millie's aunt Lucy about the tyke's predicament. Answer Lucy as you wish. Lucy can take her in, but the peasant woman has little to give her except bark soup.

Answer her:

- (40 Crowns) With a donation to feed her own brood, as well as Millie.
- That times are tough, and she'll have to forage a bit harder.

After that, the quest concludes. Feel free to return here to visit Millie. If you've been kind to her; you're likely to find her close to the Notice Board in Oreton.

LITTLE GIRL LOST (PERMANENTLY)

Beware! You made a promise to the girl in Honorton to successfully escort her to Oreton. Ignore this objective, and complete Secondary Quest: Take What You Want first, and the girl succumbs to wild animals (or worse), and dies in Honorton while waiting for you. Hasn't she suffered enough, you reprobate?

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

WILD AT HEART

LOCATIONS: Crow's Perch; Blackbough; Isolated Shack

CHARACTERS: Niellen, Margaret, Glenna, Blacksmith, Hanna

ENEMIES: Nekker, Wolf, Bear, Werewolf

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the hunter named Niellen.
- Nearest Signpost: Blackbough.

Read a Notice Board (such as the one at Crow's Perch) and look for a missive from a local hunter named Niellen, whose wife Hanna has gone missing. He's beside himself with worry. Canter on over to the village of Blackbough, find Niellen (he's usually standing outside his cabin), and speak with him.

Niellen the hunter

Margaret the sister-in-law

Niellen's story matches the one he pinned to the Notice Board, but your talk is interrupted by Margaret (Niellens sister-in-law) who mentions a friendship with the butcher's wife. You now have two objectives:

OBJECTIVES

- Ask the neighbors about Hanna.
- Search for signs of Hanna in the woods using your Witcher Senses.

Start with an interrogation of the villagers. The chicken-plucking Glenna is only a fence-hop away. Ask about Hanna and Glenna reckons she was a cheerful sort, but probably got eaten by wolves (or howlers) while picking mushrooms. Now head over to the blacksmith's, where your conversation yields results from the blacksmith's children (who Hanna minded from time to time) the boy swears he saw Hanna enter the woods with another woman.

Glenna the butcher's wife

Wild At Heart

Torn To Pieces

Now enter the woods to the northwest of Blackbough. Expect pockets of wild nekkers and wolves to dispatch. Once you reach the objective area, you can find a pack of wolves surrounding a corpse that could be a clue. However, once you dispatch the wolves to clear the way for the investigation, Margaret suddenly interrupts your search. She pleads with you to end the search and lie to Niellen that his wife is dead. You have two opportunities to agree to this. You can:

- Agree, receive 55 crowns from Margaret, return to Niellen and lie to him regarding his wife's fate, and receive an additional 10 crowns.
- Agree, receive 55 crowns from Margaret, and continue to complete this quest.
- Refuse, receive a verbal tongue-lashing as Margaret walks off, and continue your woodland search.

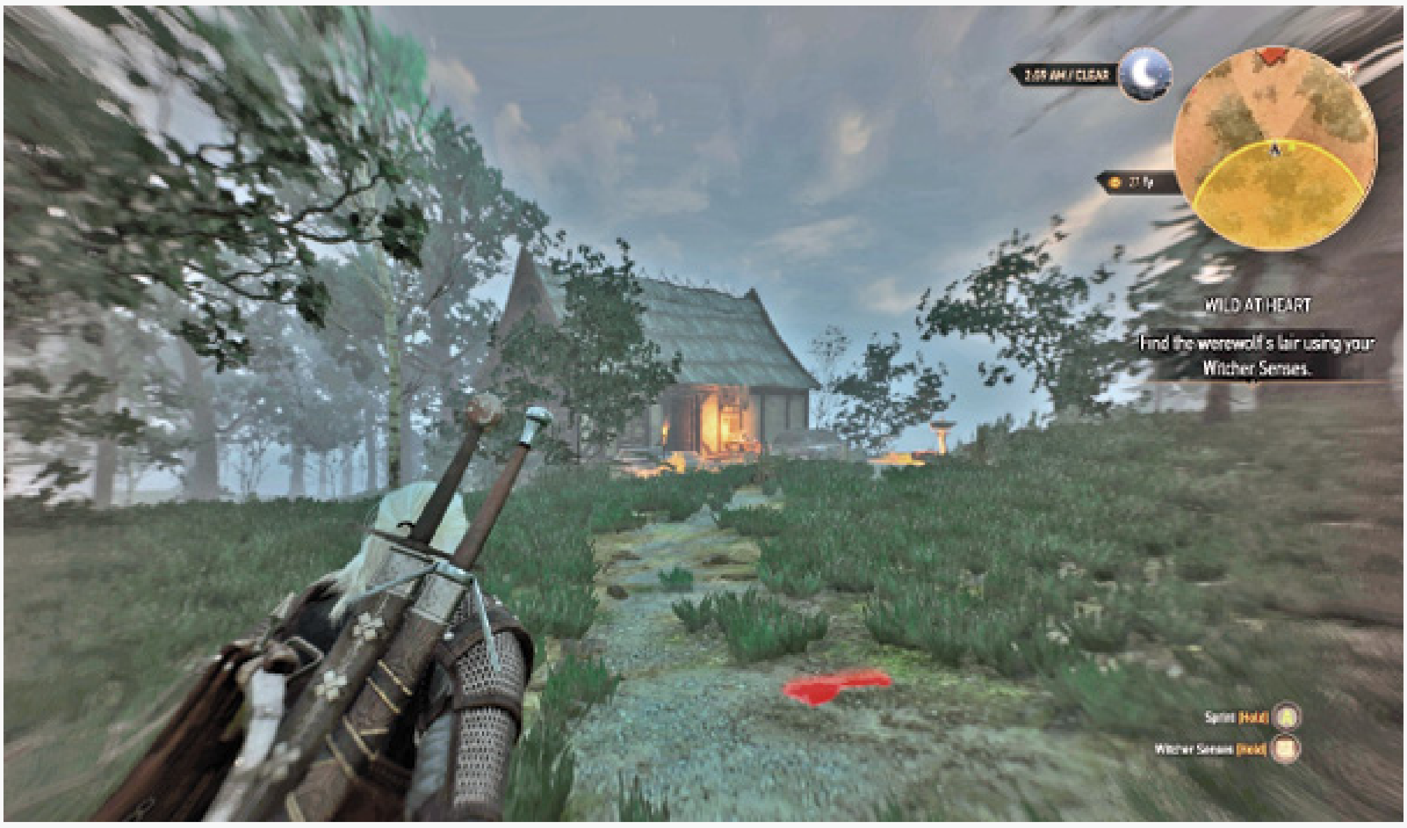
Items: Crowns

Slightly southwest of the center of the objective area is a grim discovery; the rotting corpse of Hanna who has been literally torn to pieces. Close by is the body of a dog; examine that to see long cuts made with lengthy claws. Note the claw marks on the ground around the dead dog, too. You know what made these lacerations...

OBJECTIVES

- Find the werewolf lair using your Witcher Senses.

Near to the dead dog are paw marks near an upright stone where the werewolf climbed a tree. Close by is a tuft of fur, and a stench you can follow through the woods. Look up with your Witcher Senses as you spot the scent moving through the tree branches, and track it back to the ground, eventually finding some shredded clothing. While this is happening, expect to encounter more wolves and a bear.



Look northwest from the discarded clothes, and find the hunter's quarters (Isolated Shack signpost), and enter the premises. On a bed are some Mysterious Notes. Read them to confirm your suspicions of werewolf activity.

Items: Quest Item: Mysterious Notes

Now exit and inspect some freshly-dried blood to the side of the structure. Venture under the property, to a hidden cave with a door you need to smash open using Aard.

Wild At Heart

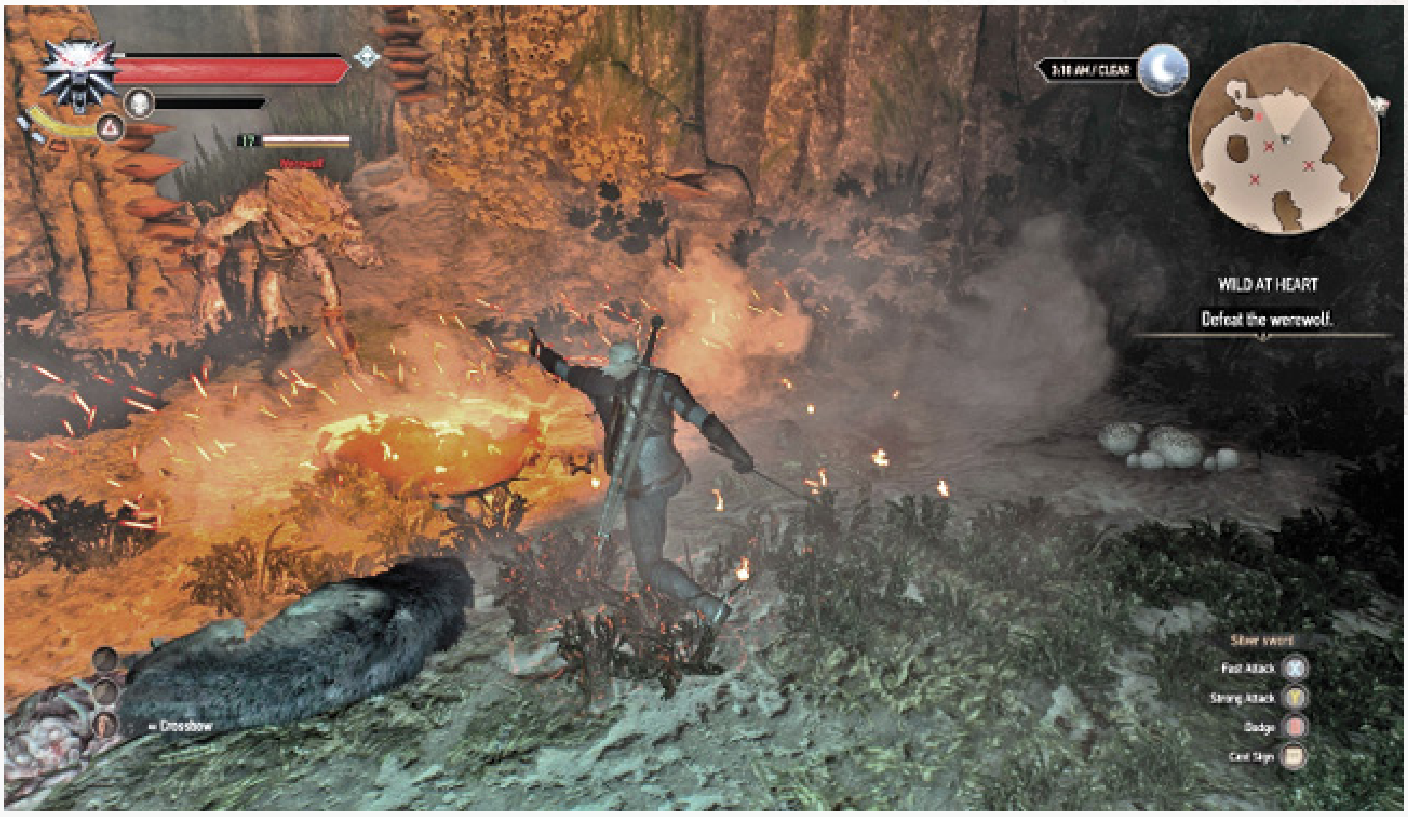
End: A Lycanthropeless Romantic

OBJECTIVES

- Fix Search the werewolf's lair.
- Defeat the werewolf.

Enter the cave, and follow the tunnel until it opens up into a large cavern. If you arrived during daylight hours, meditate until nightfall. Meditate inside the cave, and the wolves (and werewolf) approach from the outside.

A wolf charges you, followed by the fearsome werewolf himself! Begin combat with this lycanthrope, whittling his health down to almost naught. As you're about to inflict a killing blow, a shrill voice interrupts you. It's Margaret, again!



Revelations abound: It seems the werewolf is Niellen himself! Furthermore, it seems Margrit has become besotted with Niellen—to such an extent that she lured her own sister to a savage demise by the claws of her own husband! And now no one can stop her love of Niellen. Well, except for you and the hairy beast you've brought to heel. Conclude this quest with an important choice. You can:

- Kill Niellen the werewolf, stopping him from murdering the (insane) Margaret, leaving her to flee.
- Leave Niellen the werewolf, who slays Margaret despite her protests of love, before turning on you. Niellen will follow you, and plead you put an end to his suffering.

Either way, you get a reward. You a key from Niellen's corpse. This opens a chest inside the Isolated Hut, for an additional (random) reward— a diagram and other goods. There are notes in the hut too, revealing the true horrors of lycanthropy.

The horrors of battle are on display in the boggy ground south of Halver Isle. But the rotting corpses and prowling ghouls haven't stopped a plucky band of scavengers from combing the remains of the slain. Clear the immediate area of enemies, and then go speak to Albin Hart, the scavenger supervisor. Agree to protect his peasant brethren from monsters as they pick the loot from the fallen.

- Position yourself on the southern slopes to intercept the monsters when they inevitably arrive. If they get a whiff of the scared peasants, they may choose to attack them instead.
- Spend most of your time slaying the ghouls (and alghouls) attacking from the southern slopes at the edge of the woods.
- Occasionally dart to the east and stop a few marauding bandits (some on horseback), but don't stay away too long. You will hear the monstrous growls
- whenever the ghouls approach.
- Periodically inspect the objective area perimeter, and always keep an eye on your minimap for moving targets you might not have seen visually.
- Expect to slaughter around a dozen foes before your job is done.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is also part of Secondary Quests: Fake Papers and Thou Shalt Not Pass. You may wish to start either of those quests first.

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the scavenger supervisor.

OBJECTIVES

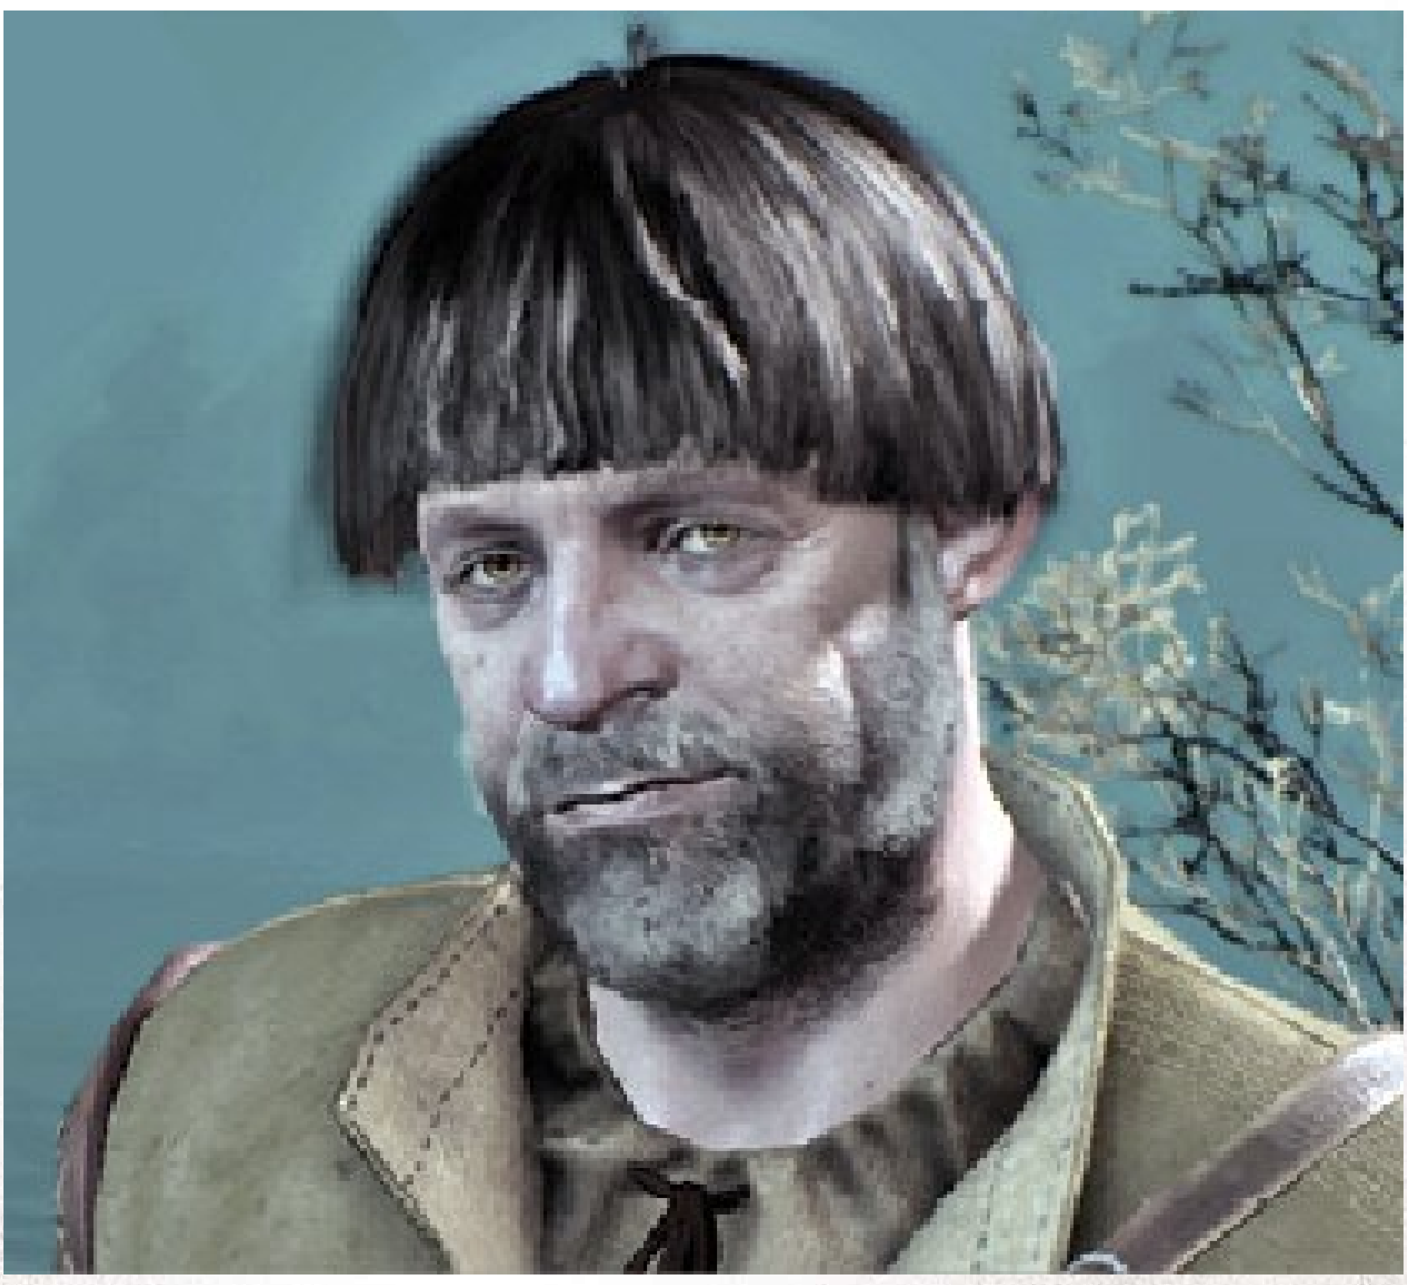
- Fix Help the counterfeit pass seller's brother-in-law.
- Nearest Signpost: Southeast of Border Post.

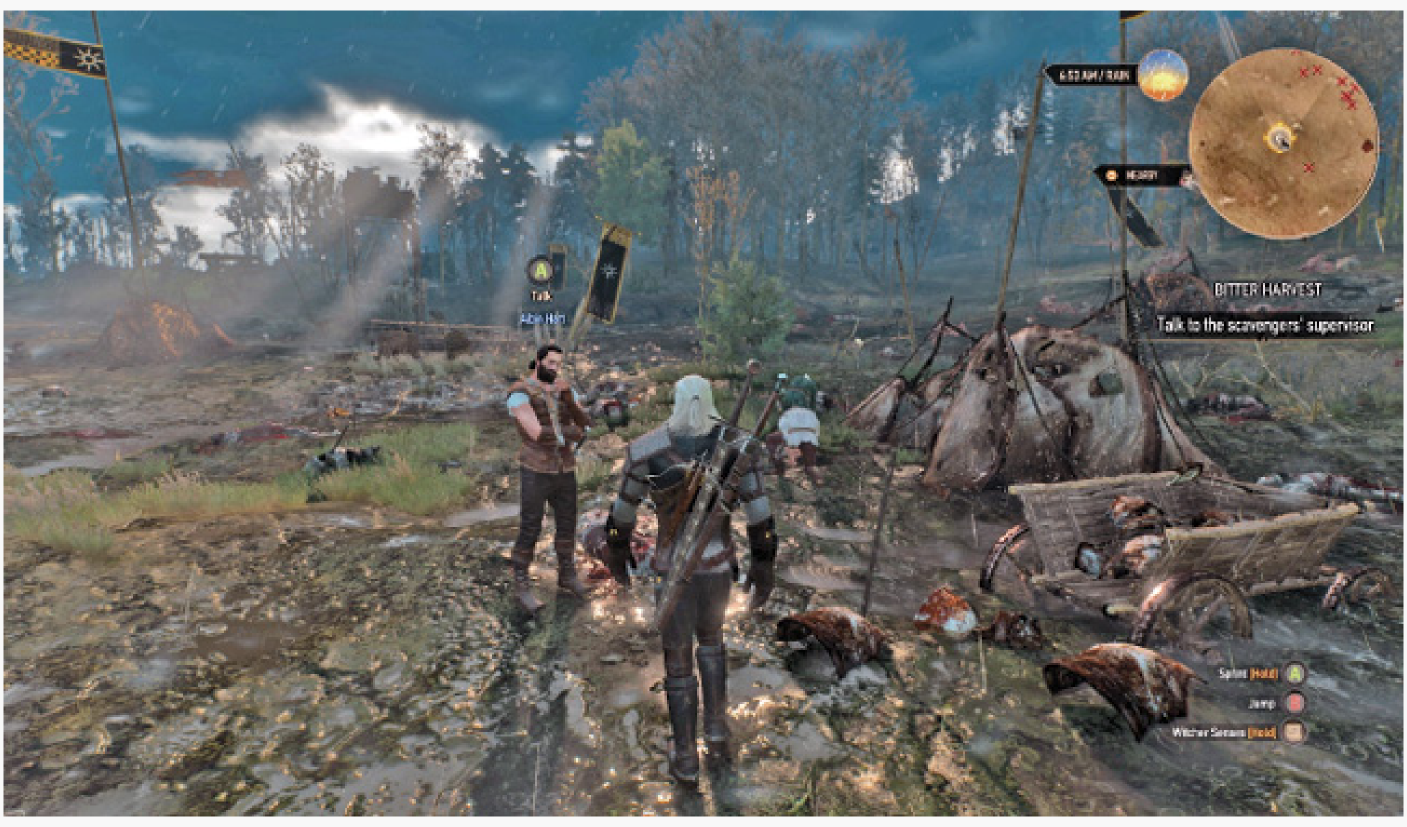
QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is also part of Secondary Quests: Bitter Harvest and Thou Shalt Not Pass. You may read up on those quests as well.



Shady Merchant

Just south of the river, close to the Redanian Border Post, is a reasonably bustling refugee camp. Locate the shady merchant close to a campfire, and speak to the him here. He explains that the Redanians hold all the fords that cross the Pontar (including the entrance to Oxenfurt), but a pass will get you through.



You can:

- (100 Crowns) Pay the man an exhorbitant fee for a pass, concluding this quest.
- Ask to go lower, and the trader tells you that his brother runs a business picking through the battlefields to the southeast, but he's constantly bothered by monsters. You help him, and he'll help you with a discount. At this point, you can:
  - (Axii Delusion Level 1) Mention there's another way, and flummox the trader with Axii. He agrees to a cut-rate pass for 50 crowns, and the quest concludes.
  - Agree to help the merchant's brother, Albin Hart (as shown). At this point, expect one of two occurrences:
  - The objective appears, and you may head to the battlefield south of Halver Isle, and east of the Scavenger Camp. Albin's quest is actually Secondary Quest: Bitter Harvest. Finish this quest (defending the scavengers' grounds from alghouls, ghouls and bandits), and return to the shady merchant.
  - If you've already met Albin Hart and completed Secondary Quest: Bitter Harvest successfully, you can let the merchant know, and he drops his price accordingly.
  - If you fail (or already failed) Secondary Quest: Bitter Harvest, the shady merchant is upset at the loss of his brother-in-law, and refuses to sell you the pass. This happens whether you succeed or not in Secondary Quest: Bitter Harvest, if Albin dies.
  - If you tell him you ran into his brother-in-law but refused to help, the shady merchant does not lower his price.

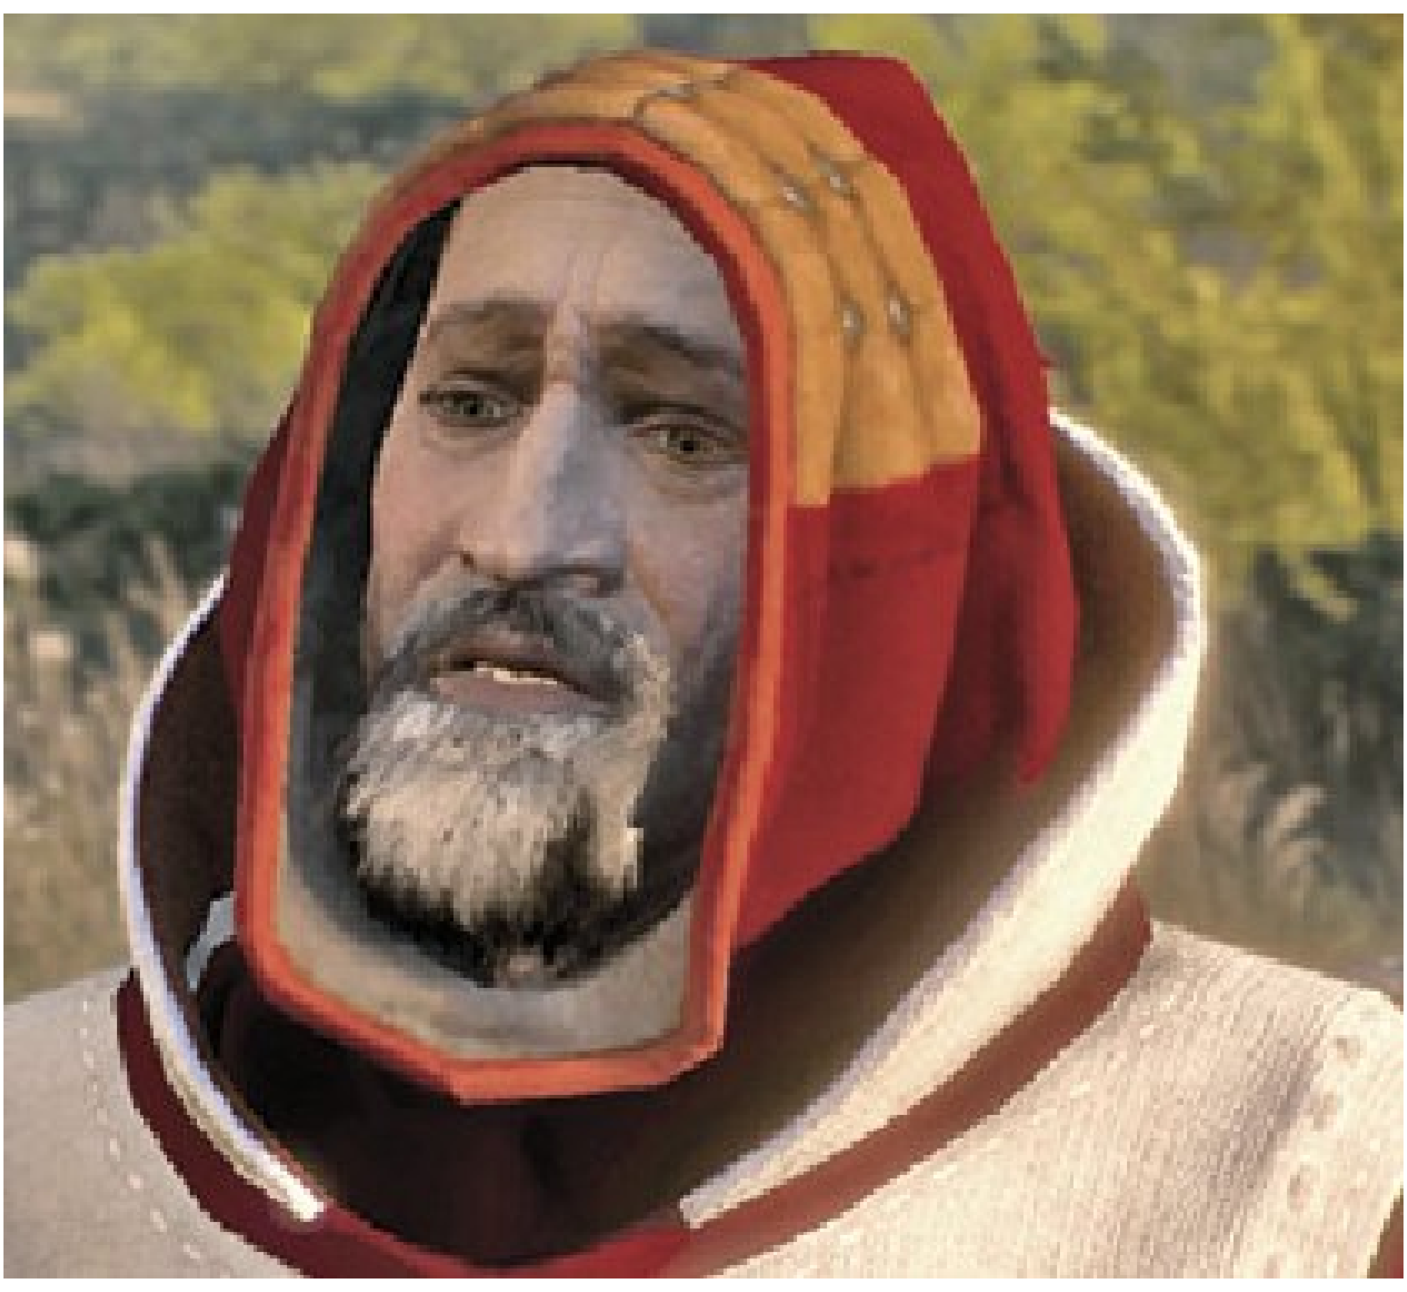
Burning The Dead Of Mulbrydale

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

FUNERAL PYRES

OBJECTIVES

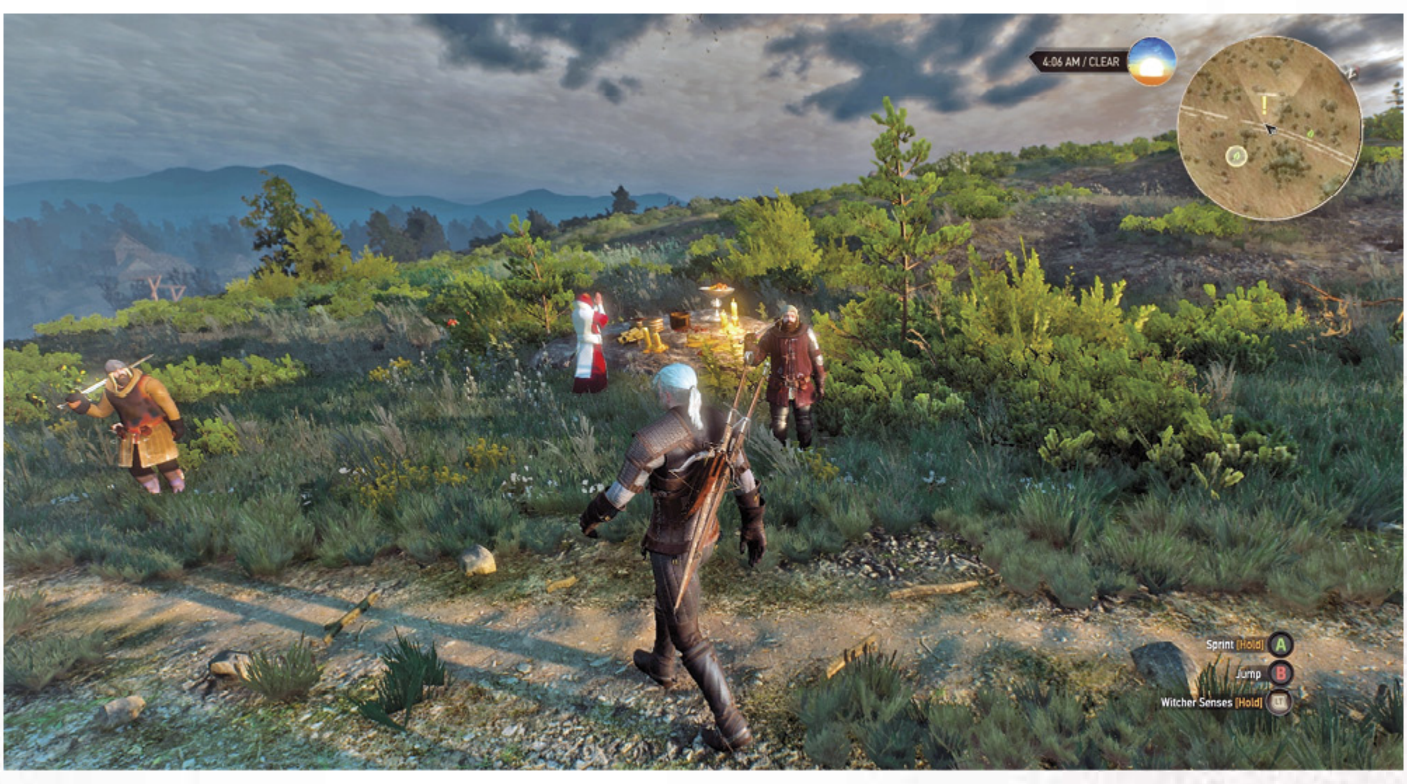
- Find and burn the bodies lying in pits on the battle field (3).
- Nearest Signpost: Mulbrydale.



Priest of Eternal Fire

Encounter a priest of Eternal Fire, flanked by two guards along the cart road running west of Mulbrydale. For a mixture of condescension and pomposity, speak to the priest, who also has a task for you—to rid the battlefield of necrophages, foul beasts that seek to feast on the rotting. You're given some holy oils to douse three charnel pits, and sent on your way.

LOCATION: Mulbrydale, Border Post
CHARACTERS: Priest of Eternal Fire, Titus Gielas
ENEMIES: Ghouls, Rotfiends, Priest's Guards



BURNING DESIRES

The pits can be approached in any order. The following route is optimal.

Pit #1 is a short dash southwest of your current position. The smell is terrible, but the combat techniques of the rotfiend lurking here may hinder you. Once the foe is dispatched, approach the corpses near the cart, "use" to sprinkle the oil on them, and light the pit up with Igni.

Pit #2 is a run northwards of the first pit, over the hill and down into thicketed woodland, southeast of the Scavenger Camp. Defeat the family of four ghouls before you sprinkle, then set the pit on fire.

Pit #3 is a horse ride away to the southeast, or a shorter gallop northwest if you Fast Travel to the Louis Ferry Station along the river bank. As you approach, a pack of ghouls is facing down a masked assailant. Jump in to help, and afterwards Titus Gielas speaks to you. This thief and fisstech dealer was left to die in this pit after being double-crossed by one of his buyers. The priest who hired you in the first place! Finish your pit burning, leaving Titus to wander away.

END: BRIBERY AND INCORRUPTION

OBJECTIVES

- Return to the priest of the Eternal Fire.

The priest and his bodyguards (now known fisstech users and ne'er-do'wells) have moved and are along the northern river bank southeast of the Border Post. Approach the priest, and let him know the following:

- His mission has been completed. There's no talk of the Priest's more nefarious activities, as the quest concludes.
- If you spoke to Titus about the "priest", you mention it now. You're then bribed to keep quiet. You can accept the 200 crowns, or fight the priest and his two guards (taking the crowns from his corpse afterward). The quest then concludes.

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

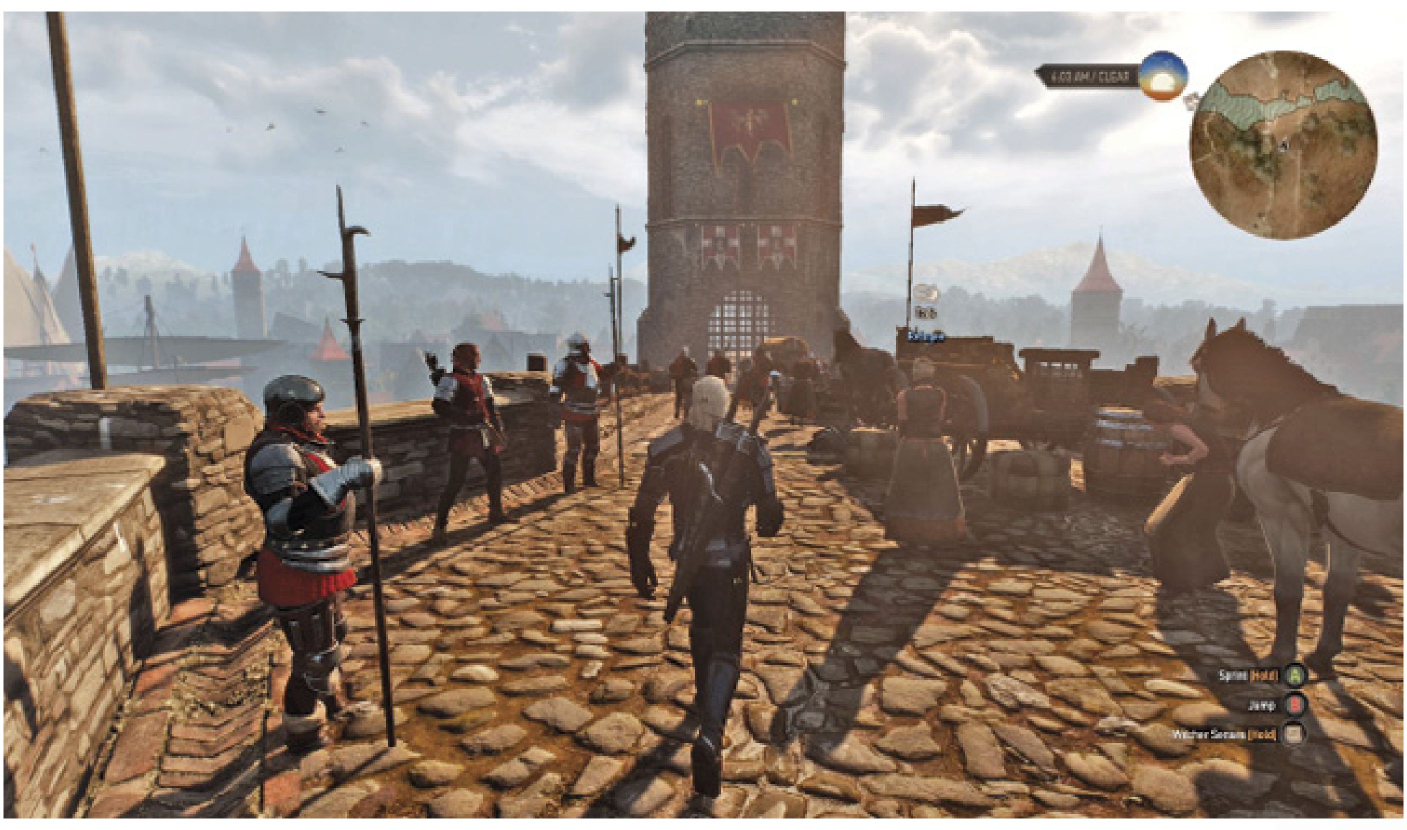
THOU SHALT NOT PASS

LOCATIONS: Oxenfurt, Western Gate, Border Post
CHARACTERS: Redanian Soldiers, Shady Merchant
ENEMIES: None

OBJECTIVES

- Acquire a pass granting permission to cross the Pontar.

The bridges across Pontar River are both closed, and heavily guarded by Redanian troops after the recent war. Whether you're trying to head through the Western Gate into Oxenfurt (first picture), or you're trekking through the mud and human misery to access the Border Post in Velen (second picture). You cannot use the main thoroughfares (though swimming across is possible, but beware of archers). Speak to one of the soldiers on the border, and they tell you a pass is required for safe passage.



QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is also part of Secondary Quests: Fake Papers and Bitter Harvest. You may read up on those quests as well.

THE VOLUNTEER

LOCATIONS: Oxenfurt Port, White Eagle Camp

CHARACTERS: Rock Troll

ENEMIES: None

OBJECTIVES

- Look around the area.
- Nearest Signpost: White Eagle Camp.

It seems Berto Bertolomiu, Captain of the Oxenfurt Garrison, has left a warning note entitled “Beware of Trolls!” on the Notice Board in the Whitebridge district (north) of Oxenfurt. Read it (or simply stumble upon the troll itself), and begin a search of the area. This involves boating or swimming across the Pontar River, heading westwards to a cluster of low-lying islands. Soon you’ll stumble across a makeshift camp of wrecked boats and other flotsam, and a rock troll singing a Redanian marching tune.

Speak to the lumbering brute, and you’ll discover he was hired by the Redanians to watch their boats. He’s been eating those that venture too close to his lair, and by the end of the conversation, you can:

- Choose a violent end and slaughter the troll, fulfilling the request of the guard captain.
- Agree to find some red and white paint, so the troll (if you’re understanding the half-gibberish he spouts) can mark this lair as a Redanian colony.

END: BEAUTIFOO, PRETTY BIRDO

OBJECTIVES

- Find the paint the troll needs.
- Deliver the paint to the troll.

Return to Oxenfurt on your search for paint. You are fortunate that the General Store in Whitebridge (across from the Notice Board) in the north of the city has the paint you need. Speak to the store owner, and purchase it (during daylight hours).

Items: Quest Item: Paint

Make a return journey to the troll’s camp, and present the paint. The troll hopes you can use your not-considerable painting talents to daub the insignia (which must be chicken based) onto one of the ruined boats. You duly oblige, or let the troll paint the insignia and are justly rewarded with something hilarious daubed on the camp wall, as the quest concludes.

Fool's Gold

Going The Whole Hog

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

DLC

FOOL'S GOLD

LOCATIONS: Lurtch, Hog Hut (Unmarked)
CHARACTERS: Yontek, Yagoda (Pig), Igor, Klaus
ENEMIES: Bandits, Wolves, Nekkers

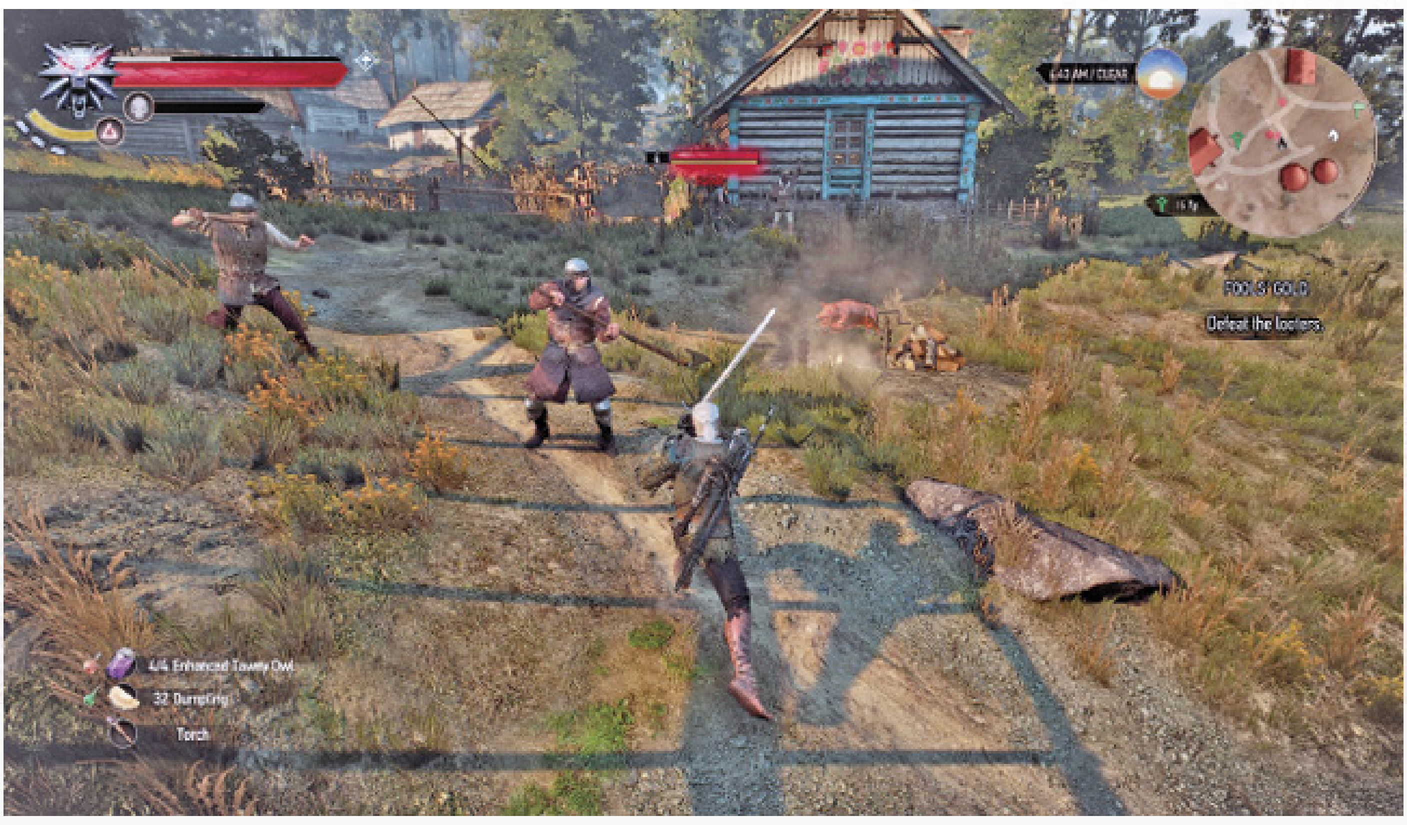
OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the looters.
- Talk to Yontek.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is available during your exploration of Velen, once the DLC is installed. Start by visiting the village of Lurtch, in the Descent territory in northern Velen.

Along the northern road within The Descent territory of northern Velen, lies the settlement of Lurtch, with its landmark windmill. As you arrive, there's some commotion as a trio of bandits are spit-roasting a pig, much to the chagrin of a local named Yontek. The fellow is shouting something about them cooking "Yagoda." While it's normal to name your pigs, something seems off. No matter whether you try some meat, or leave well enough alone, the bandits take exception to you, and these wazzacks must be defeated.

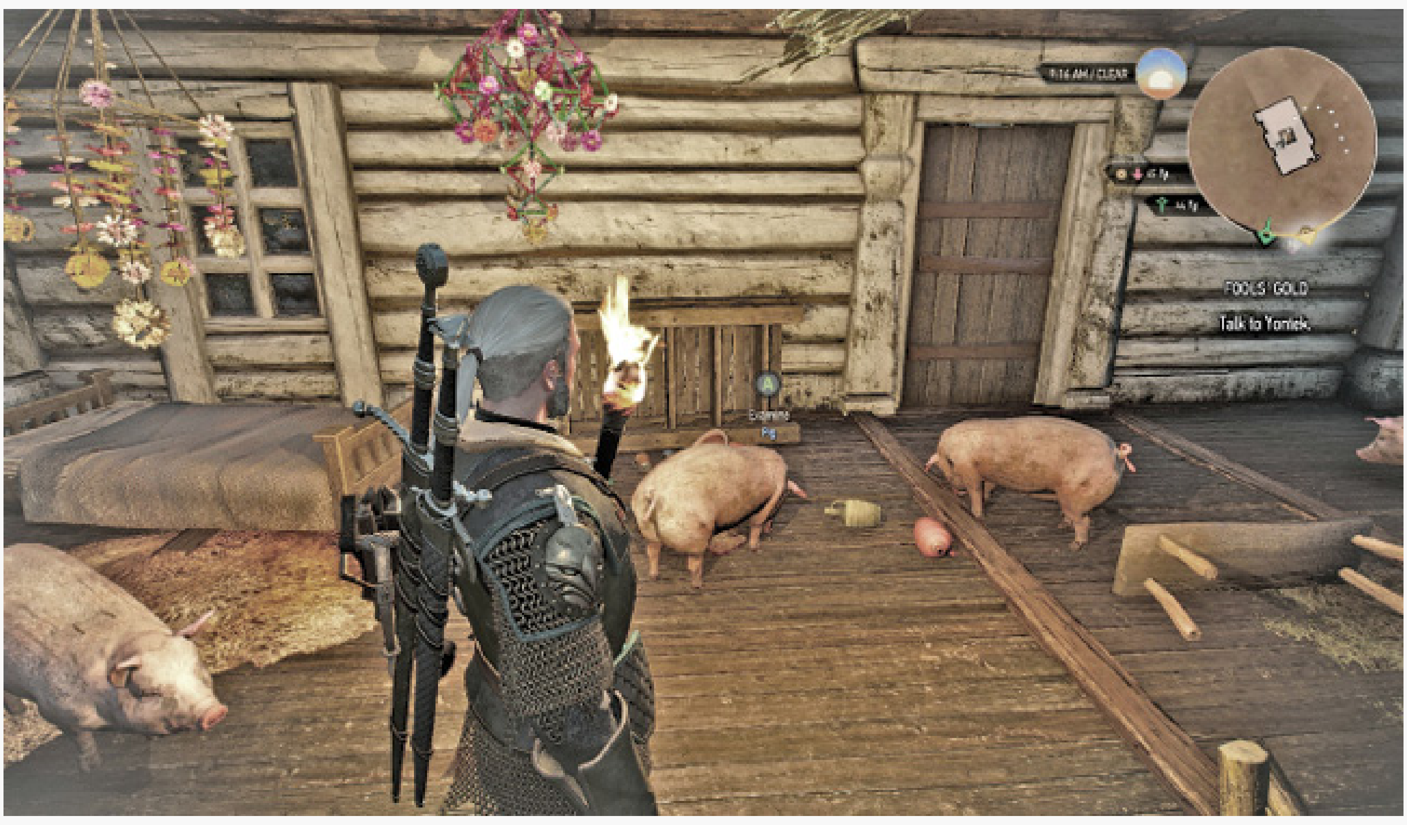


Afterward, speak to Yontek. It soon becomes apparent that "village idiot" might be too kind a description for this simpleton. He's babbling about two of his villagers (Klaus and Igor) going missing, all "took by the piggy magic." He maintains all the other inhabitants are present and correct. Agree to check on the other pigs in Lurtch.

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to examine the pigs in the village of Lurtch.
- Talk to Yontek.

You won't find the pigs in a sty; they are clustered inside the three village huts, though you only need inspect one set of swine. Step up to any pig, and examine it. Though the animal seems ordinary, your medallion is vibrating like mad. Yontek was correct; these are enchanted in some way. Return and speak to Yontek again; he seems slightly evasive, but does mention "sorcery" turned them. He also produces a key to open the "hog hut," where the villagers were apparently transformed. After optionally asking where he got the key, set off to search for further evidence at the hog hut.



Items: Key to the hog hut

Fool's Gold

I Think, Therefore I Ham

OBJECTIVES

- Find the hog hut.
- Go inside the hog hut.

Roughly east and a little south of Lurtch, across the undulating grassland, is a cave cut into the hillside. Three bandits are waiting to greet you at the entrance. Make short work of them, then venture into the cave tunnel. Pass the corpse of a bear, and listen for a second trio of bandits attempting to break through a walled-up archway. They aren't interested in helping your cause, so wet your steel blade with their blood. Inspect the stone wall; use the key and it disappears, revealing a magical barrier that opens up into the interior of a strange temple.

OBJECTIVES

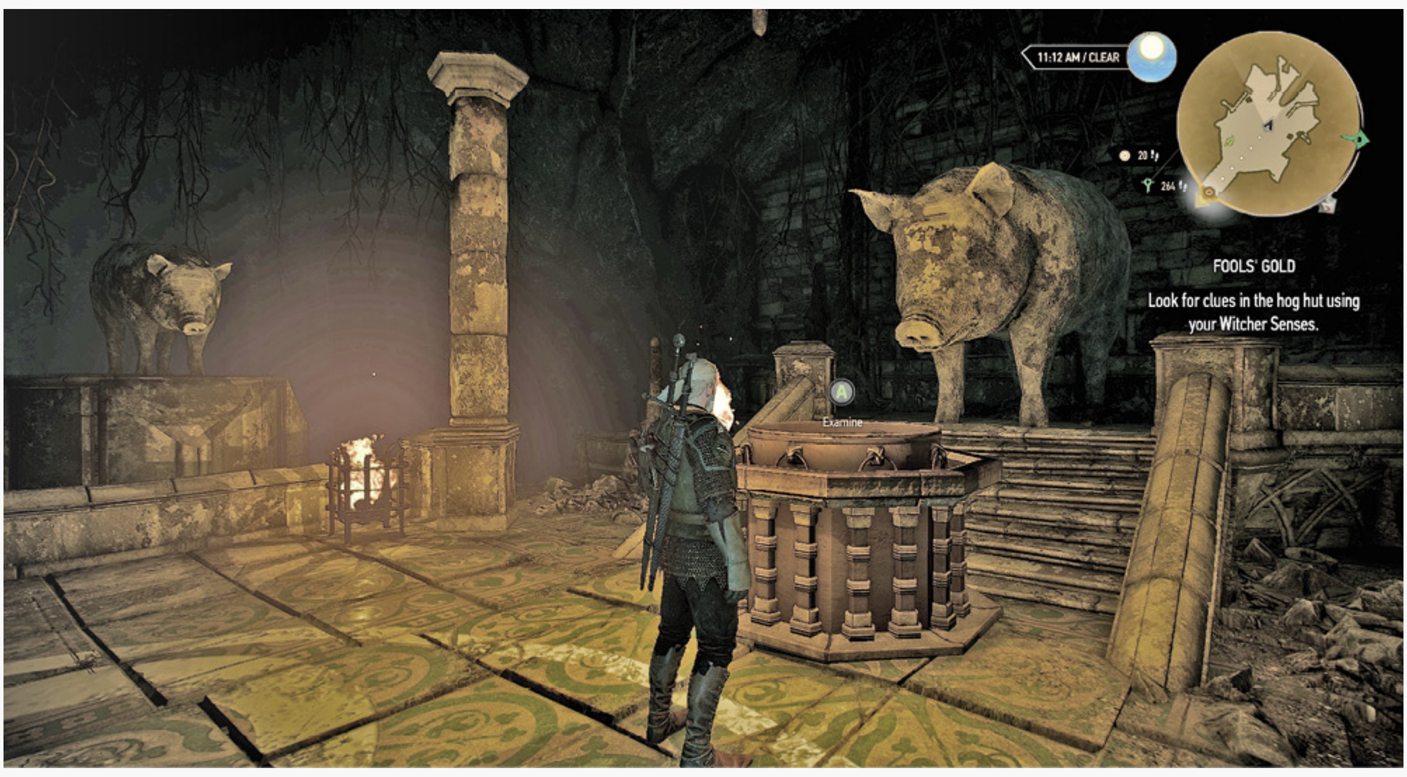
- Look for clues in the hog hut using your Witcher Senses.
- Talk to the pig.

Igor the Herbalist (Pig form)

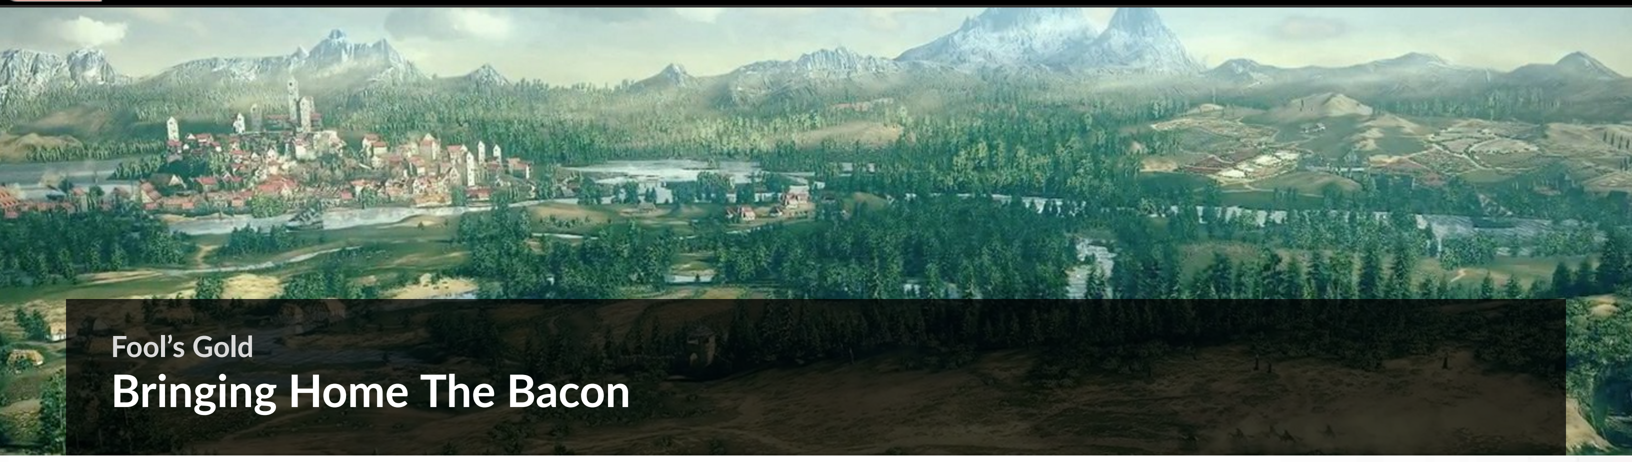
Progress slowly down the temple tunnel, stooping to examine the floor with your Witcher Senses to uncover the following:

- Markings to indicate a lot of people came through here, carrying something heavy.
- Something was dragged out of here.
- A set of clothing stained with grass; this must belong to the village herbalist, Igor.
- A pig. Through rudimentary snorts, you manage to strike up a conversation with the animal, and discover it to be Igor, the village herbalist!

Further into the chamber is a sunken altar surrounded by statues of swine. The largest of these statues peers down into a giant ornate offering container, which seems to have been stripped of all its gold and valuables; there's only a single coin left.



Return and converse with the pig. Answer as you wish, and you formulate an idea of what happened. Of course, to prove the greedy villagers of Lurtch were cursed for stealing from this shrine, you need to confirm your suspicions with the idiot Yontek.



Fool's Gold

Bringing Home The Bacon

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Yontek.
- Kill the wolves attacking the pigs.
- Gather all the cursed pigs under the windmill (9)
- Use the Axii Sign to make the cursed pigs follow you.

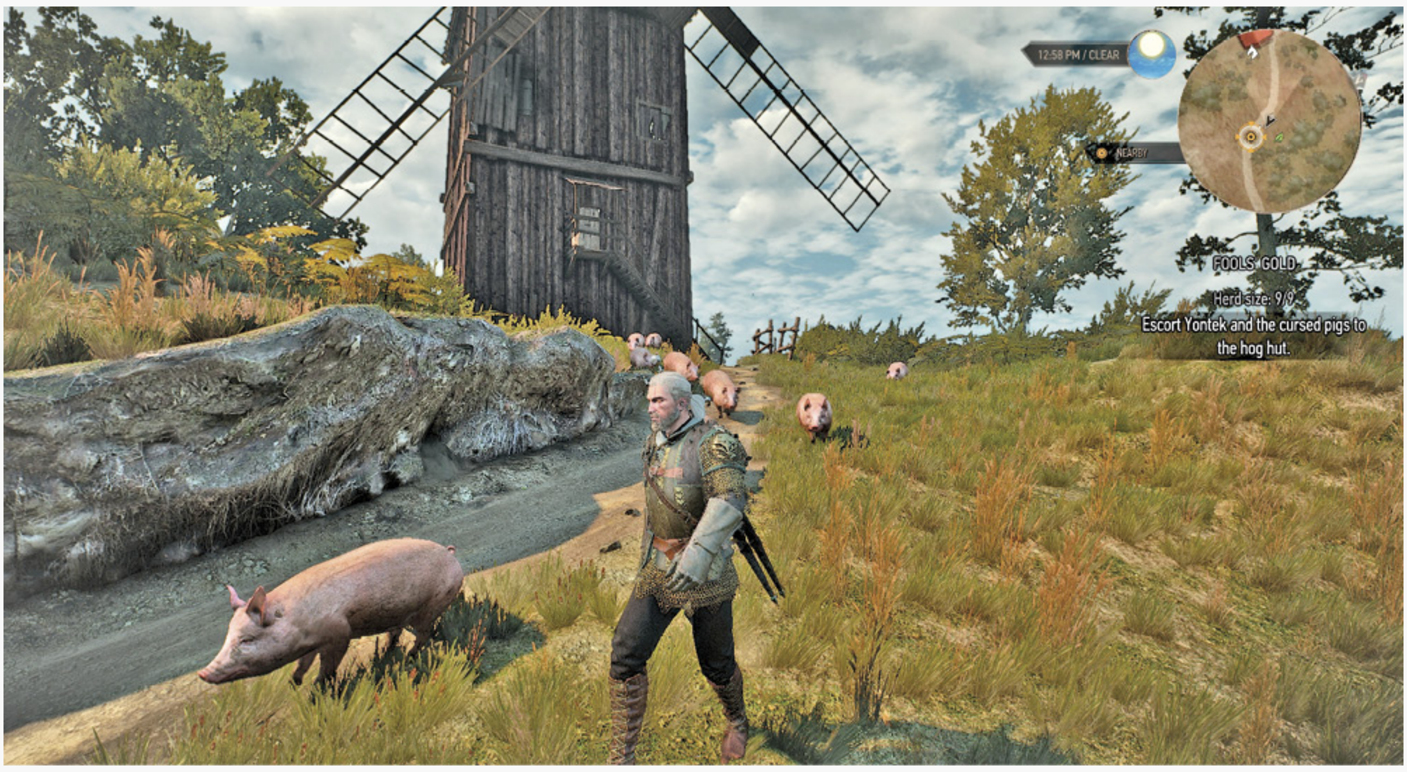
Venture back to Lurtch, and before speaking to Yontek, quickly dash uphill to deliver a killing blow to a trio of wolves intent on eating the piggy villagers. Now speak to Yontek, inquiring why he wasn't cursed if you wish, and finally getting the whole story from him. Fortunately, he's hidden the stolen gold rather than selling it for a bag of magic beans. While he gathers the valuables, you're to round up the cursed pigs in front of the village windmill.

Enter the three village huts indicated on your map, and cast Axii on any of the pigs inside. This effects all the swine within a single location, and then slowly waddle over to the ground near the windmill. Continue this another two times in the other huts, then move to the piggy congregation area and wait for Yontek.

OBJECTIVES

- Herd size (9)
- Escort Yontek and the cursed pigs to the hog hut.

After meeting Yontek and being assured he has the loot, start the process of chaperoning the nine pigs along the winding road down the road to the hog hut. Fortunately, you only need to reach the crossroads at the bottom of the hill to succeed in this task. However, along the way, a group of Nekkers tumbles out of the undergrowth to snack on your herd. Be sure the herd doesn't suffer more than four deaths; watch for attacks from the right (east) and head them off early, as soon as the Nekkers appear. Expect six Nekkers to kill with speed; area-of-effect Signs are a help here.



Back at the hog hut, the treasure is restored to the shrine, and the villagers are transformed back into their human form. Understandably, they're rather annoyed at Yontek, and plan something suitably violent for him. You can:

- Choose to step in, prevent Yontek from being harmed, and tell the imbecile to be on his way. Naturally, he doesn't thank you, or give you anything close to a reward. The quest concludes.
- Choose to leave Yontek's fate up to the villagers, and you receive a reward from them before the quest concludes.

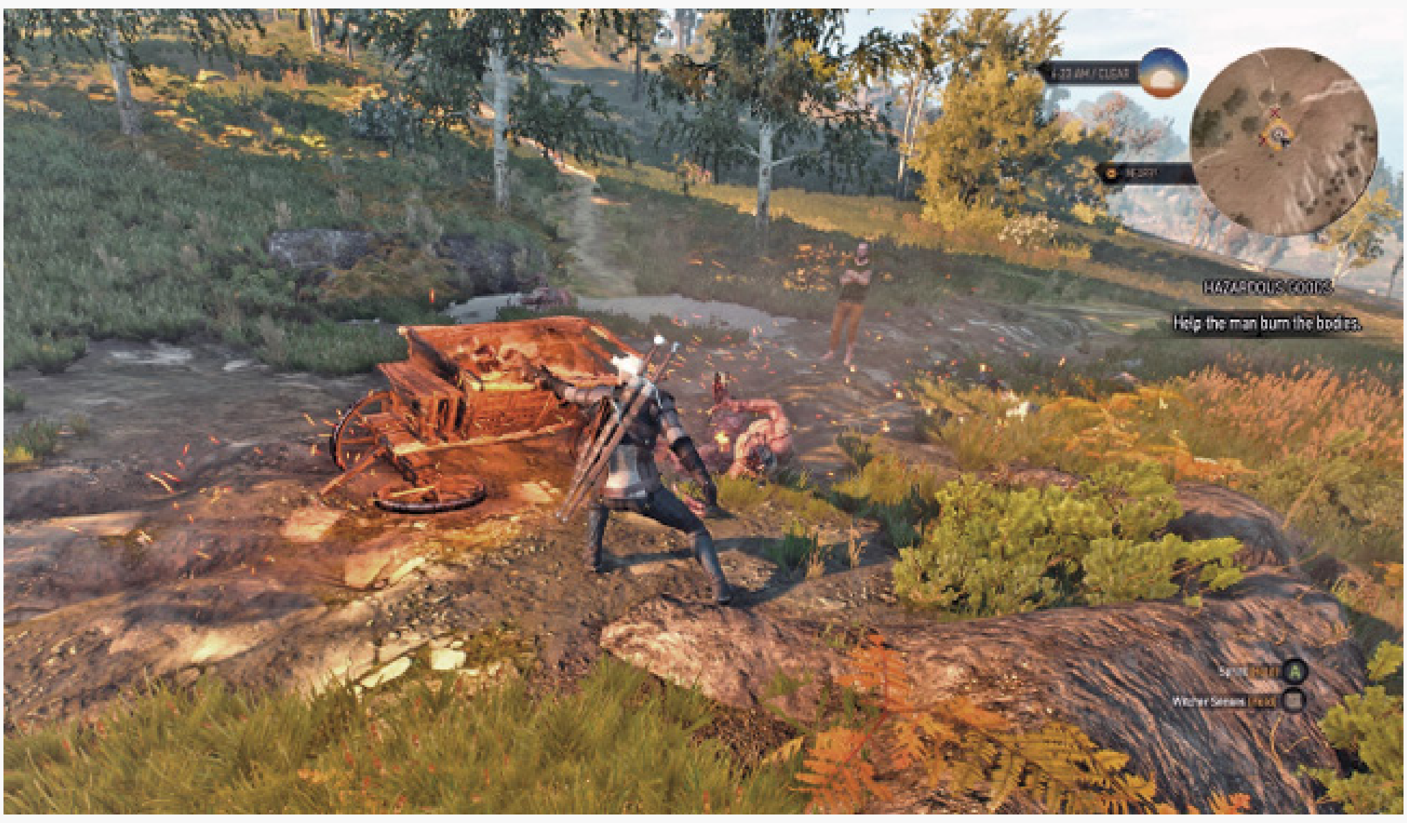
ENEMIES: Ghouls

OBJECTIVES

- Help the trapped man.
- Help the man burn the bodies.
- Nearest Signpost: Lanka Estate.

Gert Borel

While traversing the trail high above the southern river bank, you may come across a group of ghouls attacking a lone man with a cart. After dispatching the fithly fiends, approach the man (Gert Borel) and speak with him about the piles of corpses he's been carrying on his cart. Choose any topics you wish, but with one firm opinion; you need to burn this cart, and the plague victims in the vicinity.



Despite Gert's assurances he's immune to the plague ravaging the area, he agrees to let you torch his cart. Simply aim at it with Igni, and be on your way.

A few days later it is possible to find Gert wandering the battlefields of southern Velen (near a burned-out settlement east of Reardon Manor), begging for death. Despite his instance of immunity, he's come down with the black pox. You can end his suffering (slaying and burning the wretch) if you wish.

The Liar Of Lindenvale

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

WITCHER WANNABE

LOCATIONS: Lindenvale
CHARACTERS: Ealdorman of Lindenvale, Witcher (Charlatan)
ENEMIES: Ghouls, Wraiths

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible five days after the events of Contract: The Merry Widow.

Eldorman of Lindenvale

While striding through the village of Lindenvale, the ealdorman calls you all manner of offensive names, which is worth your while stopping and talking to him. He speaks of another Witcher, who drank the hamlet dry, rutted the ealdorman's daughter under his own roof no less, and departed to slay Lindenvale's cemetery monster. Agree to find this rascal for him.

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to look for the charlatan in the cemetery.

Head east out of the settlement, up the winding path to the top of the hill and look for the church amid the trees. Expect a couple of ghouls and two wraiths to thwart your search of the church grounds. After defeating them, use your Witcher Senses in and around the small church. a set of footprints leads to a stone coffin where a pathetic specimen of a man is lurking.

END: CORPSE EATERS AND A FORNICATING FREAK

This wretch freely admits to buying the medallion he wears from a travelling peddler, and pleads with you not to reveal him to be a fake. Two villagers arrive, allowing you to dish out the punishment you see fit. You can:

- Tell the villagers it took two Witchers to slay the ghoul.
- Or, inform them exactly who this charlatan is.

Then, you can decide the fate of the wannabe Witcher:

- He can toil for the village elder for a year.
- He can be banished from the village forever.

Once your choices are made, the quest concludes.

OBJECTIVES

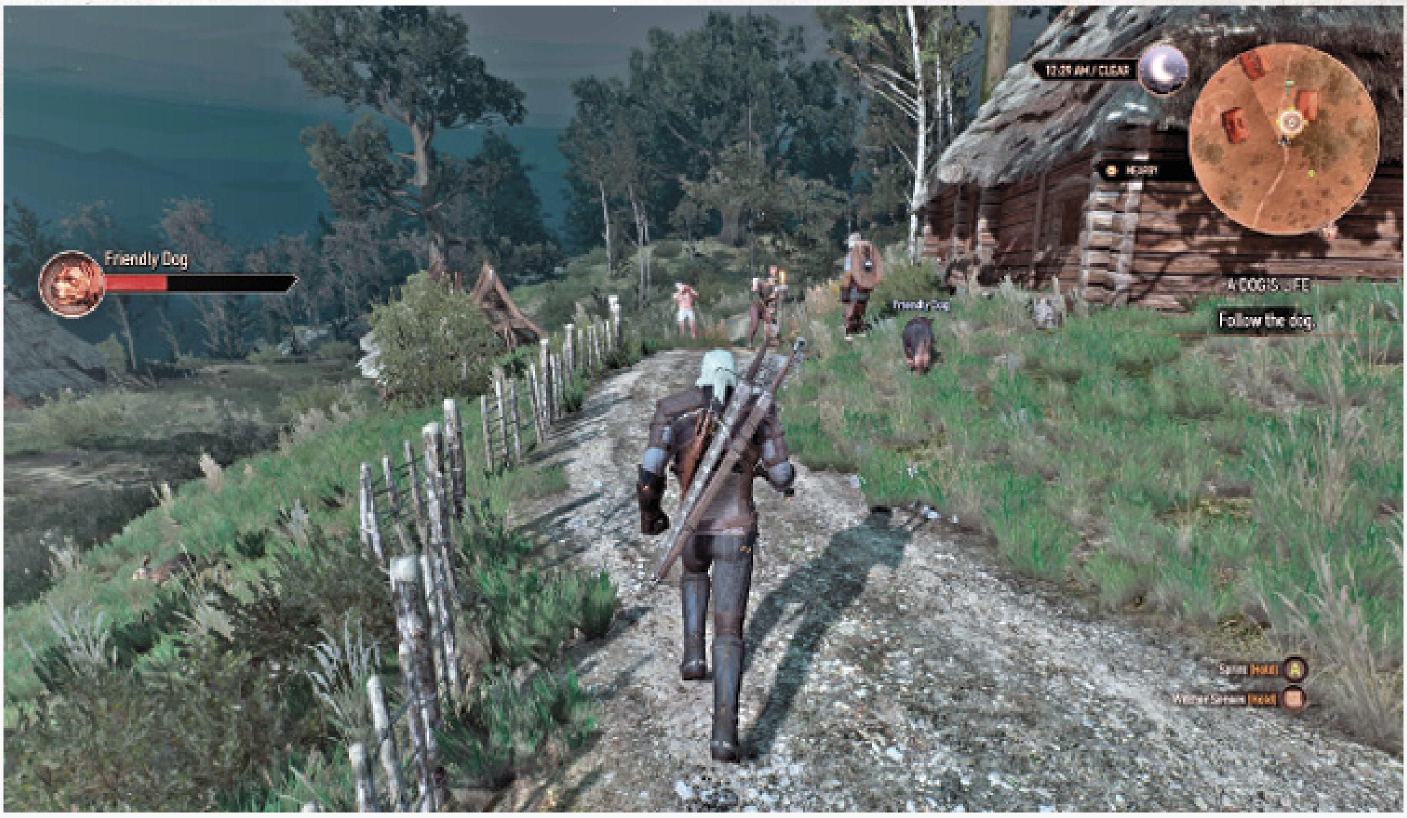
- Follow the dog.
- Search the abandoned house using your Witcher Senses.

On the hilly road just northwest of Drudge, close to the north shores of the lake, you come across a small shrine with a pack of wolves attacking a lone dog. Interject yourself (and your steel sword) and save the pup from the wolves. Afterward, the tame dog seems to want you to follow it. It also has a key sewn into its collar to take if you interact with it.



Oblige the creature, and you head southeast down the hill, into Drudge, where four bandits should be cut down. Watch out, the dog may be killed during this fight! Open the door to the house the bandits were close to (right next to the signpost), and enter. here are loose floodboards to examine. You wedge up one of the boards, and discover a hidden trove; with orens, crowns, and a chest (containing a diary and valuables), opened by the key that the dog was carrying.

CHARACTERS: Bandits

ENEMIES: Bandits

A little farther east than the Boatmakers' Hut (southeast of Crow's Perch) is a trail leading to a bridge over to Bandits' Camp, a wooded island of thugs and thievery. Guarding the bridge are three bandits, who don't attack but instead engage you in conversation. They want your coin to pass safely over the bridge. You can:

- Tell them to try and take your coin, which starts a fight—defeat three bandits.
- Show them your medallion, which causes one of the bandits pause for thought. They recognize who you are, think better of challenging you, and depart without incident.

The quest now concludes. But what of the highwayman's cache? Use your Witcher Senses at the campfire near the bridge entrance, and follow some footprints to a partly-hidden chest in the rushes and weeds under the bridge footing. Pry it open for some coin and a diagram.

A Greedy God

Oratory, Not Omnipotent

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

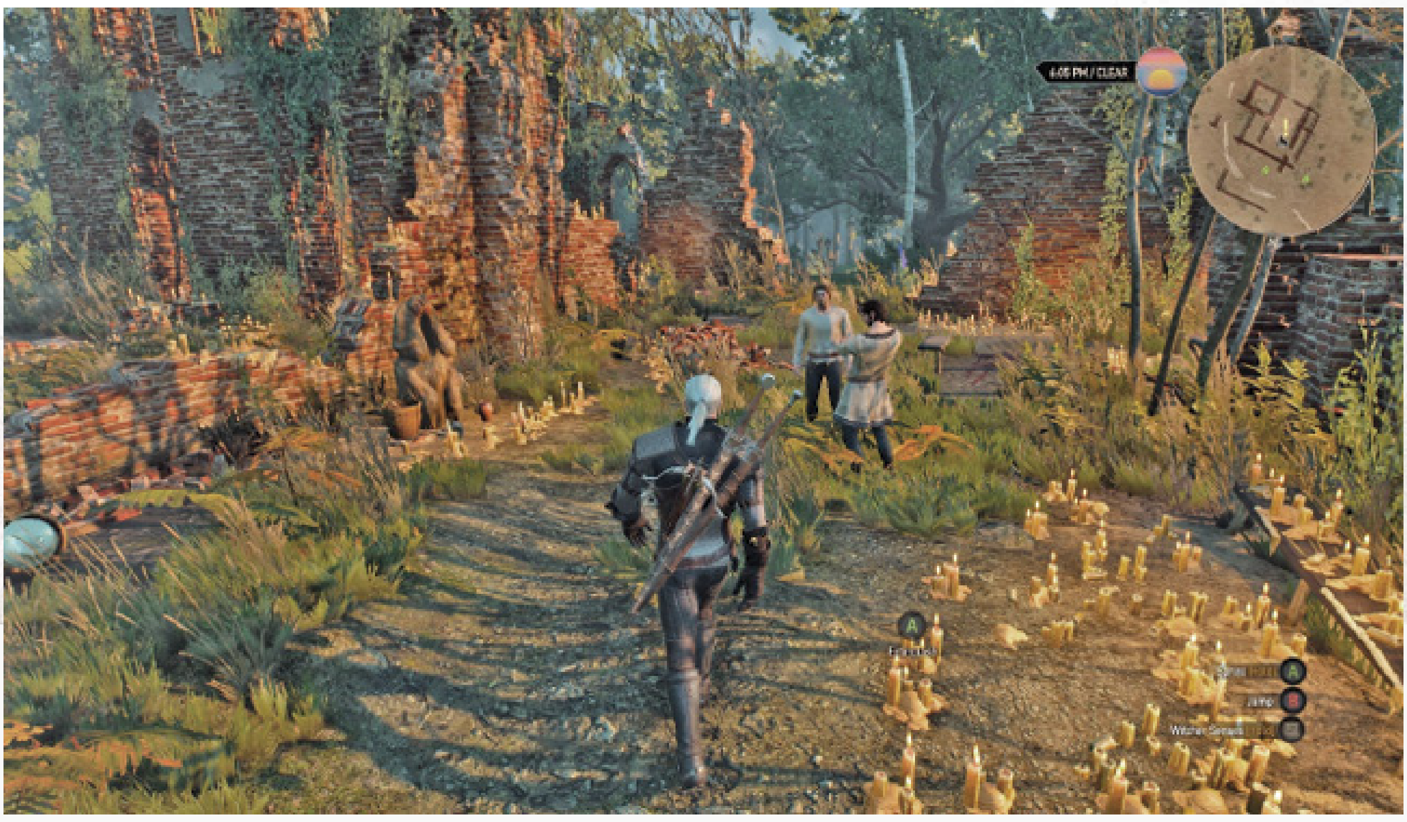
A GREEDY GOD

LOCATION: Wastrel Manor
CHARACTERS: Dagmar, Preben, Allgod
ENEMIES: Sylvan
RECOMMENDED ITEMS: Eye of Nehaleni

OBJECTIVES

- Address the Allgod using the altar.
- Nearest Signpost: Wastrel Manor.

Enter the ruined structure on the southern grounds of Wastrel Manor, ideally after sunset to see the multiple candles lit to appease some strange deity. Two peasants are here that allow further investigation. They make offerings to the “Allgod”, but their prayers don’t seem to be answered. Offer to speak to the Allgod on their behalf.



The nearby altar seems the best way to converse with this “deity”, though its answers are evasive, and seem to come from underground. Heading into the cellar of these ruins requires the banishment of an illusion. Interact with the pile of rubble in the exterior corner of the ruins, using the Eye of Nehaleni Keira gave you, the stone fades away, and reveals a hidden set of steps.

END: CORPULENT, NOT CORPOREAL

OBJECTIVES

- Find the Allgod.
- Talk to the peasants.
- (Optional) Kill the sylvan.

This “Allgod” turns out to be nothing more than a rotund sylvan, a fat devil-like creature that feasts on the offerings given by the peasants. Your conversation with the creature can end in one of three ways. You can:

- Tell the Allgod you’re going to kill him, and follow through with this threat. Then speak to the peasants, who are filled with woe.
- Threaten the Allgod to accept only humble offerings, and he agrees. Then speak to the peasants, who are understandably happy.
- Let the Allgod continue with his little scheme to fleece these simpletons, before telling them they must continue as before.
- Tell the peasants to check the cellar. Return after a day or so, and you’ll find their corpses.

None of these choices affect your reward adversely (though you don’t get the Experience Points if you don’t kill the sylvan).

Hunting For Hrodeberth

DANGER ALERT ☠☠☠☠ SPOILER ALERT

BLOOD TIES

LOCATIONS: Nilfgaardian Central Army Camp

CHARACTERS: Nilfgaardian Noblewoman, Quartermaster Eggebracht

ENEMIES: Ghouls

RECOMMENDED ITEMS: 100 Crowns, Axii Level 2

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the quartermaster about the noblewoman's son.

The wails of a well-to-do woman clad in fine clothing can be heard as you explore the main Nilfgaardian Army Camp in the very southeast of Velen. Her dwarf consort can do little but comfort her, but she perks up when you approach. She pleads with you to find her son, a soldier who served in the Nazairi cavalry. You may speak to her as you wish, ending the chat with an offer to help.

Head south, along the main rutted tracks towards the tents and Notice Board, and enter the grandest structure, bearing the sun insignia of the Emhyr. Inside, speak to the initially dismissive quartermaster, and tell him of the mission you're on. He isn't about to give up the whereabouts of this soldier just yet. You can:

- (100 Crowns) Bribe the officer, which initially seems to be a terrible idea, until your fast-talking convinces Eggebracht to spill the beans.
- (Axii Level 2) Flummox the quartermaster's brain into giving up the whereabouts of the soldier.
- If you previously completed Contract: Patrol Gone Missing, and received a reward from the quartermaster, you may receive this information without need of bribery or magic.

The situation seems grim. Most of the soldiers from the Nazairi cavalry where caught by the quartermaster's men and hung in the swamp northwest of here. Begin your search there—in the area between Nilarius' Farm (to the southeast) and Kimbolt Way (the road to the northwest). When the going gets soggy, beware of ghouls (you should slay at least four), and start using your Witcher Senses to find the following:

- Tracks showing the cavalry members fled into the swamp.
- Dog tracks, showing they were pursued.
- The remains of foes half-sunk into the mire; an easy target for
- an arbalist.
- Corpses in the swamp and hung, but with black hair. Not the red-headed man you seek.

Finally, there is the grim sight of a red-headed man swinging from a makeshift gallows. Don't forget to look up to examine the corpse! Then peer around the ground below the swaying corpse; there is a letter to Hrodeberth's mother on the ground.

END: DIED OR DESERTED: A MOTHER'S GRIEF

OBJECTIVES

- Return to the mother.

Head back to the noblewoman, and inform her of her son's passing, using the letter as evidence. She asks how he died, and you can say he died in battle, or deserted. The latter produces a curt response, but the letter proves your point. Either way, you receive a reward, and she receives closure.

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

DEADLY CROSSING (III)*

LOCATION: Dragonslayer's Grotto

CHARACTERS: Looters, Bandits

ENEMIES: Looters, Bandits

At the bridges and river crossings of war-torn Velen, expect to encounter groups of ne'er-do-wells looting the corpses of the fallen, or guarding valuables of some note. They can be hostile, so use diplomatic conversation choices, avoid them, or engage them. Find them west of the Dragonslayer's Grotto, in the woods by a small wooden log bridge over a ravine. A few steps east are some nekkers to slay, and a group of looters at a path junction.

The Dwarven Document Dilemma

Lies Got Wee Legs And Don't Run Far

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

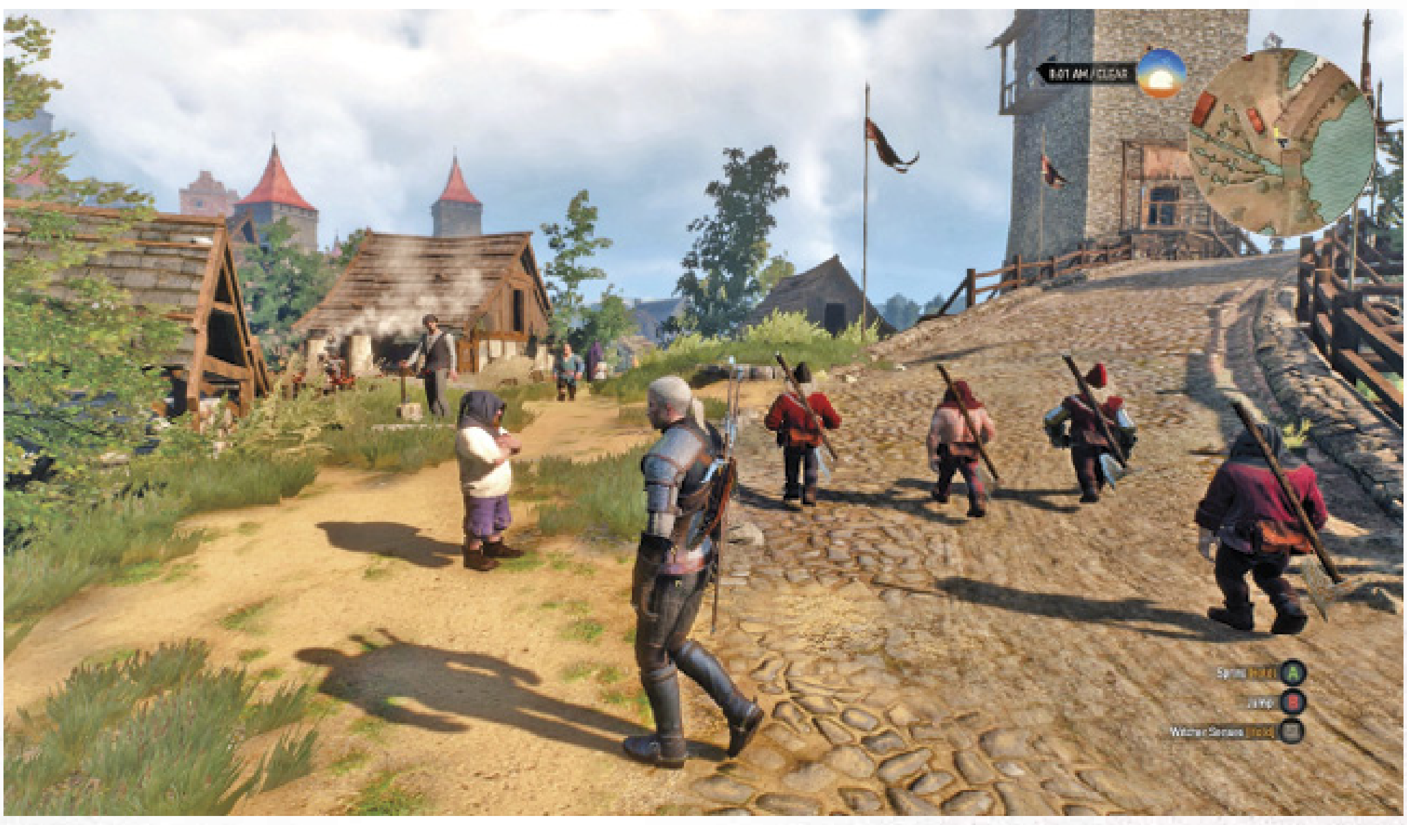
THE DWARVEN DOCUMENT DILEMMA

LOCATIONS: Road near Tretegor Gate (Novigrad), Seven Cats Inn
CHARACTERS: Rostan Muggs, Gerd
ENEMIES: None

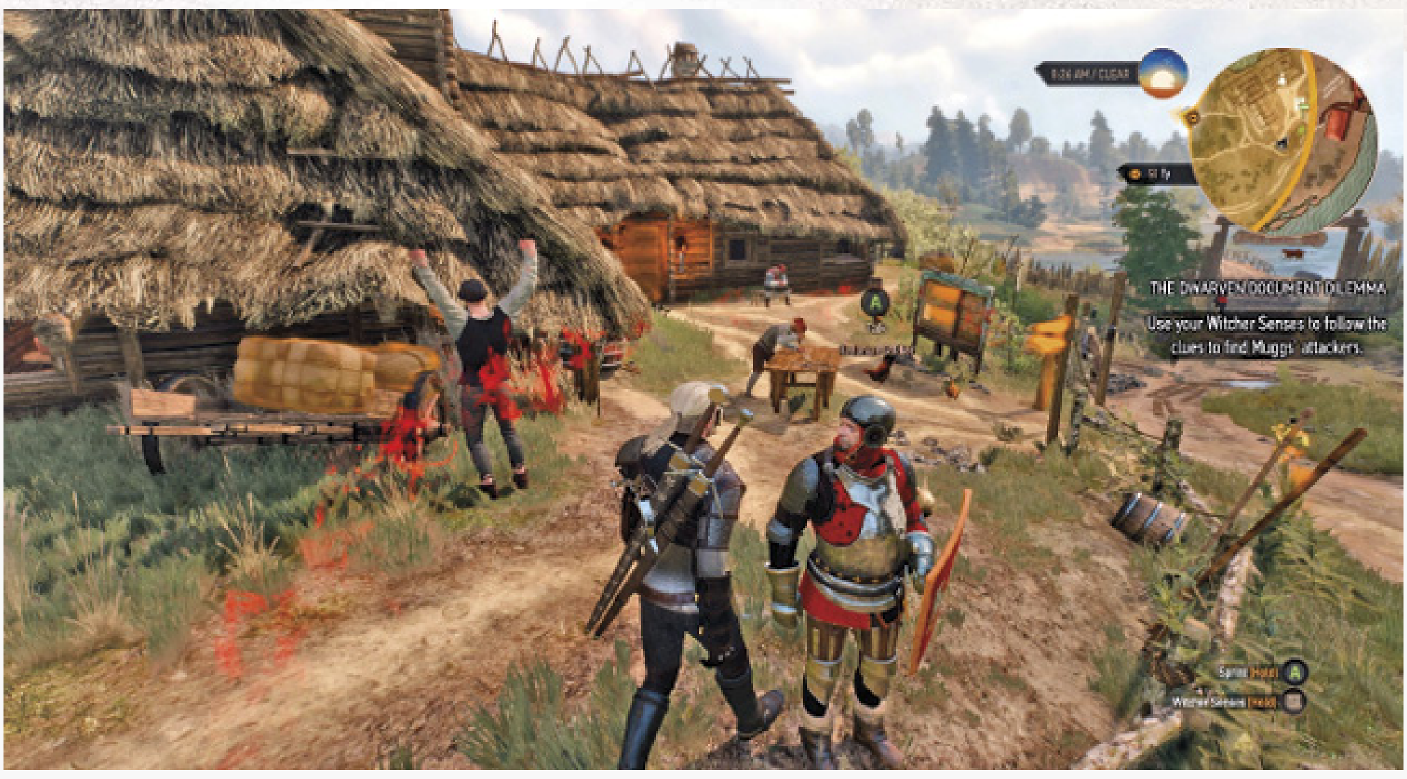
OBJECTIVES

- Go to the place where Muggs was attacked and examine it.
- Follow the clues to find Muggs' attacker.
- Nearest Signpost: Tretegor Gate.

Agree to help recover the documents from the thief, who should be smelling of the dwarven moonshine Rostan brained him with during the mugging.



Cross the main bridge heading east, and use your Witcher Senses to uncover a small puddle of this moonshine. It stinks like a Skelliger's codpiece. Follow this trail of stench down the hill to the southeast, towards the Seven Cats Inn on the outskirts of town. Here you'll find Gerd, who isn't happy about being accused of thievery, and has a remarkably different story about the documents he acquired.



THE DWARVEN DOCUMENT DILEMMA
Use your Witcher Senses to follow the clues to find Muggs' attackers.

You can:

- Tell him "gimme the papers" and start a fistfight with Gerd.
- (Gwent) Offer to play a round of Gwent with him. He agrees. Beat him for the paperwork.
- Ask how much he wants for the papers. They aren't for sale to you, forcing you to choose another option.
- (Axii Delusion Level 1) Gather the documents by addling Gren's brain with your magic. This works.

Items: Quest Item: Title to Property

END: PAPERS, PLEASE

OBJECTIVES

- Compare Muggs' and the attacker's accounts.

Once you have the papers, return to Muggs, and question him about both accounts. It seems the dwarf was a little economical with the truth. A fact you can use to ask for more coin before the quest concludes (he doesn't give you any), or you can hand over the papers for the agreed amount.

LOCATIONS: Supervisor Lund's Building (Novigrad), Seven Cats Inn, Ringvald (Faroe Island), Trottheim, Hammond's Shrine, Nowhere Inn (Novigrad), Karadin's Residence

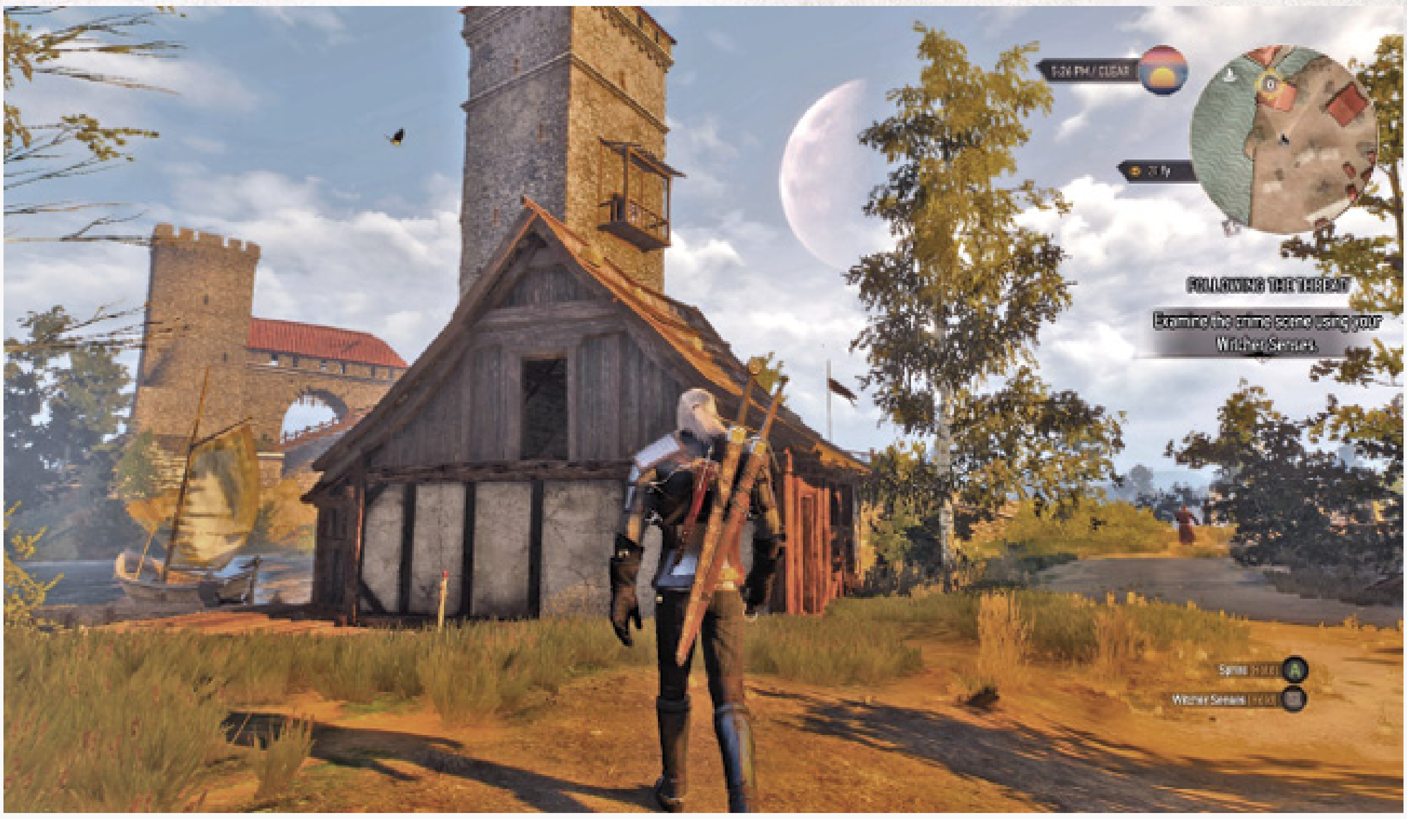
CHARACTERS: Supervisor Lund, Jan Karadin, Lambert

ENEMIES: Ekimmara, Guard, Vienne, Elf, Dagr, Pirate, Warrior, Hammond

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the supervisor.
- Examine the crime scene using your Witcher Senses.
- Find the monster prowling the area by using your Witcher Senses.
- Nearest Signpost: Southern Gate.

A particularly gruesome decree is available once you chance upon it on a Notice Board, such as the one in Novigrad's Hierarch Square, close to the Kingfisher Inn. Find the contract entitled "Monster in The Bits". Head across Novigrad to the area just southeast of the Southern Gate. Approach supervisor Lund's building and chinwag with the guard. He tells you a beast haunts the outskirts. You can ask about the contract (apparently someone else is also interested), what the supervisor does, and ask for more information on the monster, including the last victim (Hubert the beggar) and a nearby shoreline hut where you can begin your search.



The hut is a short jog south, along the river. Slow down and inspect the door by the thoroughfare.

- There are monstrous footprints around a rowboat, up and into the hut.
- Head inside the hut, where there's evidence of monster blood—it was wounded. There's a corpse in the corner with the blood sucked out of him. Was this a lesser vampire? Your objective updates.
- Step back out and head back to the rowboat, then follow the set of claw prints roughly northeast along the shoreline. The tracks end at a short jetty over the river.

Lambert's Lesser Vampire

OBJECTIVES

- Find the place where the ekimmara emerged from the water using your Witcher Senses.
- Find the ekimmara's lair by following its tracks.
- Kill the ekimmara.

Look ahead, across the river to the water wheel. Swim across and climb onto the riverside platform attached to this structure, where more clawprints are discovered. They lead up the wooden dock ramp, and into the water wheel building. As soon as you enter, you hear shouts and fighting—run up the wooden steps to the upper floor.

You're surprised to see fellow Witcher Lambert attempting to thwart this large, gangly ekimmara. Join the throng and slay the lesser vampire. Afterwards, your conversation reveals Lambert is here to tackle a "certain matter". Ask him if he needs help with it. First though, there's the reward. Either head there automatically, or meet Lambert back at the supervisor's building at your convenience.

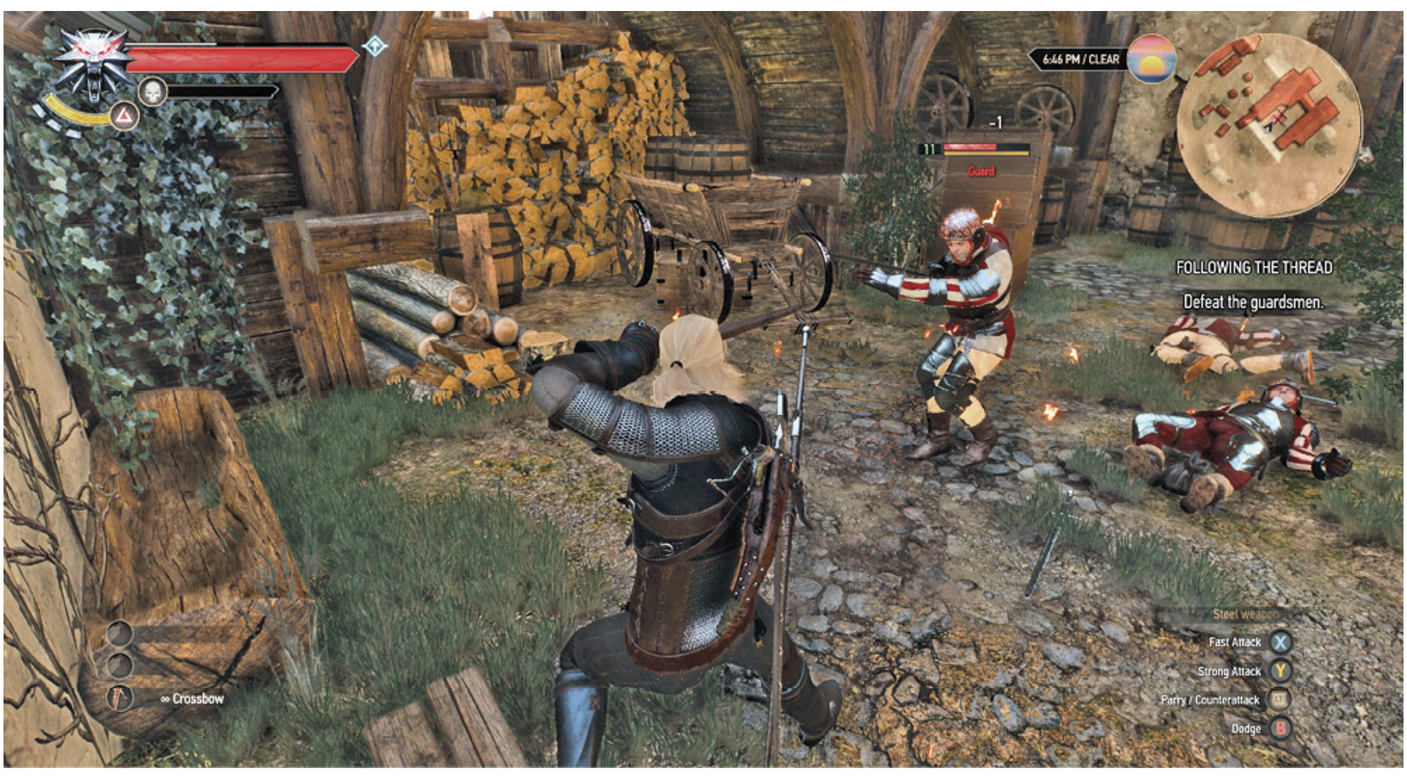
A Hot Head And Cold Steel

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the guardsmen.
- Talk to Lambert.

Back at the supervisor's building, you're waved inside, after which Lambert's hot head starts to boil while speaking with the supervisor, as he shouts about "Jan Karadin". Even if you urge Lambert to calm down, he starts a ruckus, and you're forced to defend yourself.



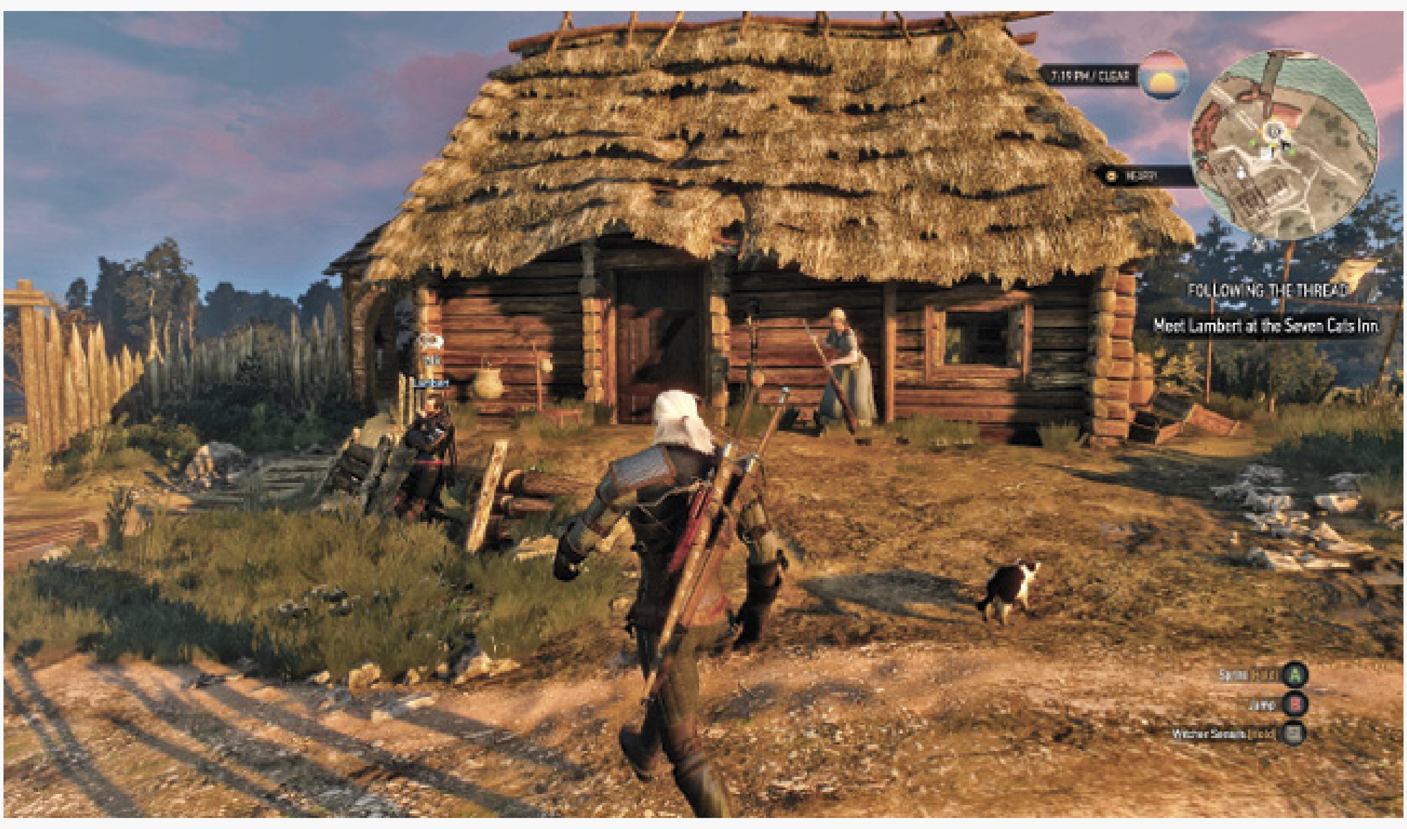
Slay the three guards attempting to jail you, then return to Lambert. Lund is more fearful, revealing Karadin has disappeared, and he only knows where Vienne is (whoever they are). Apparently, she drinks at the Seven Cats Inn. Lambert is zealous with his blade now, dropping Lund in a bloody heap. Time to flee!

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Lambert at the Seven Cats Inn.
- Get rid of Vienne and her defenders.

Vienne

Head northeast, out of the supervisor's building, before running from Novigrad, moving southeast along the far side of the Pontar river, until you reach the watering hole known as the Seven Cats Inn. You force Lambert to tell you what is going on. Choose the long or short version of it. He tells you about his friend Aiden (a Witcher from the School of the Cat), who he slew monsters with. After Aiden took a contract to lift a curse off a duke's daughter, a band of assassins ambushed and murdered Aiden, not happy with the curse being removed. Lund was one of the assassins. Their leader? Jan Karadin.



Vienne, a Scoia'tael in the service of Karadin, is half-drunk within the inn. After some persuasion (threats or offers to buy her a beer), she lists the others in Karadin's group—Selyse, Hammond, and Lund. But they've scattered. Feel free to ask her more about Selyse and Hammond, and that you need to contact them. Gather as much information as you can, for the conversation takes a turn for the worse as Vienne calls upon her brethren to kill you.

- Use polite conversation to end the chat without blood being shed.
- Or choose violence; three elves and Vienne must be cut down.

Afterwards, it is agreed that Lambert heads to find Selyse, while you search Skellige for Hammond. You'll meet back at the Nowhere Inn (in Novigrad).

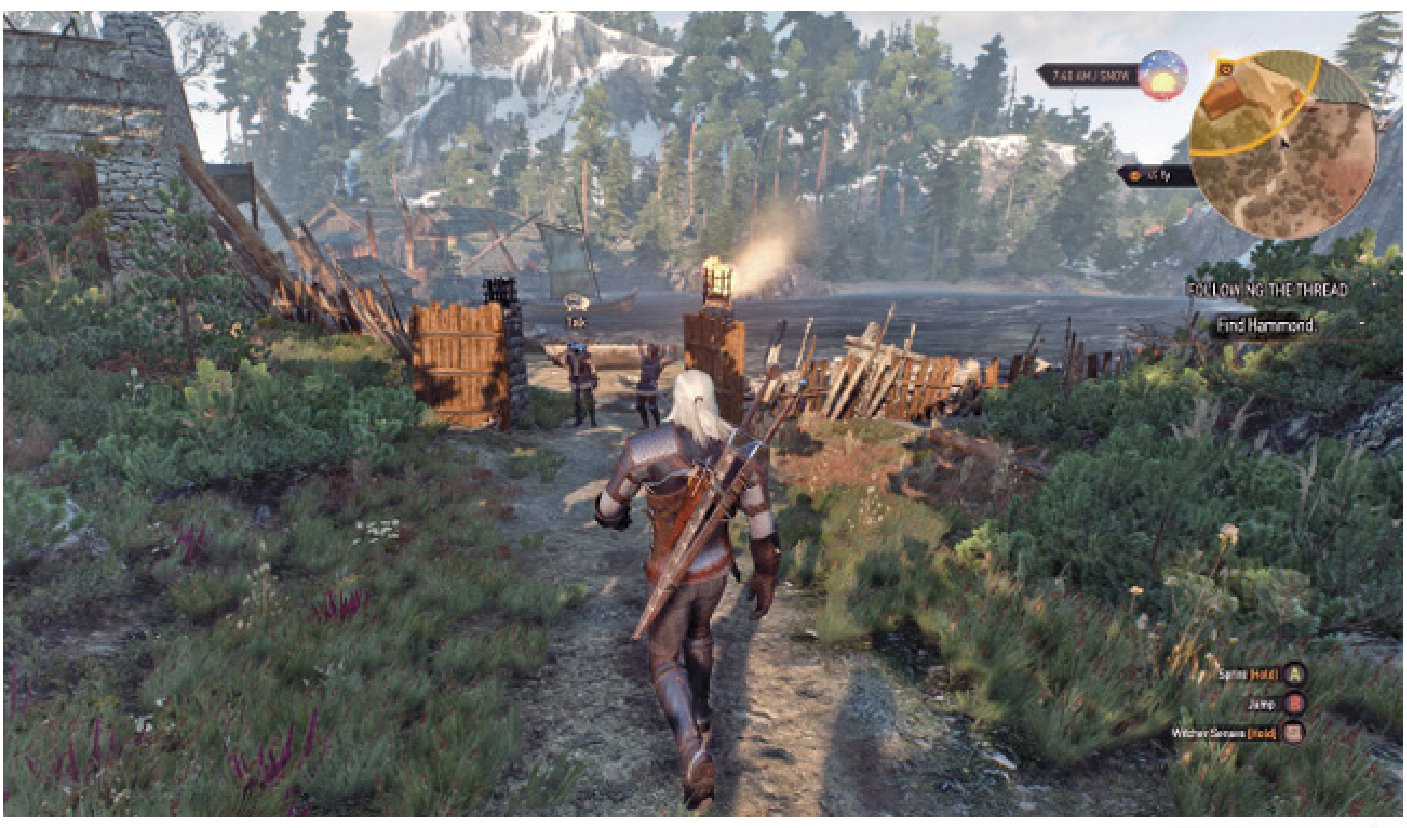
Vengeance On Faroe

OBJECTIVES

- Go to Faroe and look for Hammond.
- Find Hammond.

You have quite a trek ahead of you. Assuming you've visited Kaer Trolde on Ard Skellig (the largest island), head to a previously-visited location, before taking a boat and continuing southeast, to the isle of Faroe. It has only two main villages, and the eastern one (Trottheim) has many dagr and pirates to be wary of (as they are tough and can overwhelm you). Instead, disembark to the west, at Ringvald. Head out of the village through the woodland path heading southeast. Then follow the winding road past the hilltop arena, eastwards past a junction stone, and head down into Trottheim village and talk to the dagr first (at the village entrance, there are two to pick from). Hammond, it seems, prays at the chapel on the nearby hill, and is a slaver. If you answer that you didn't know he was god-fearing, the dagr get suspicious, and attack. So tell them you'll be back if you don't want a fight. Expect up to 16 dagr and pirates to slay in this protracted battle.

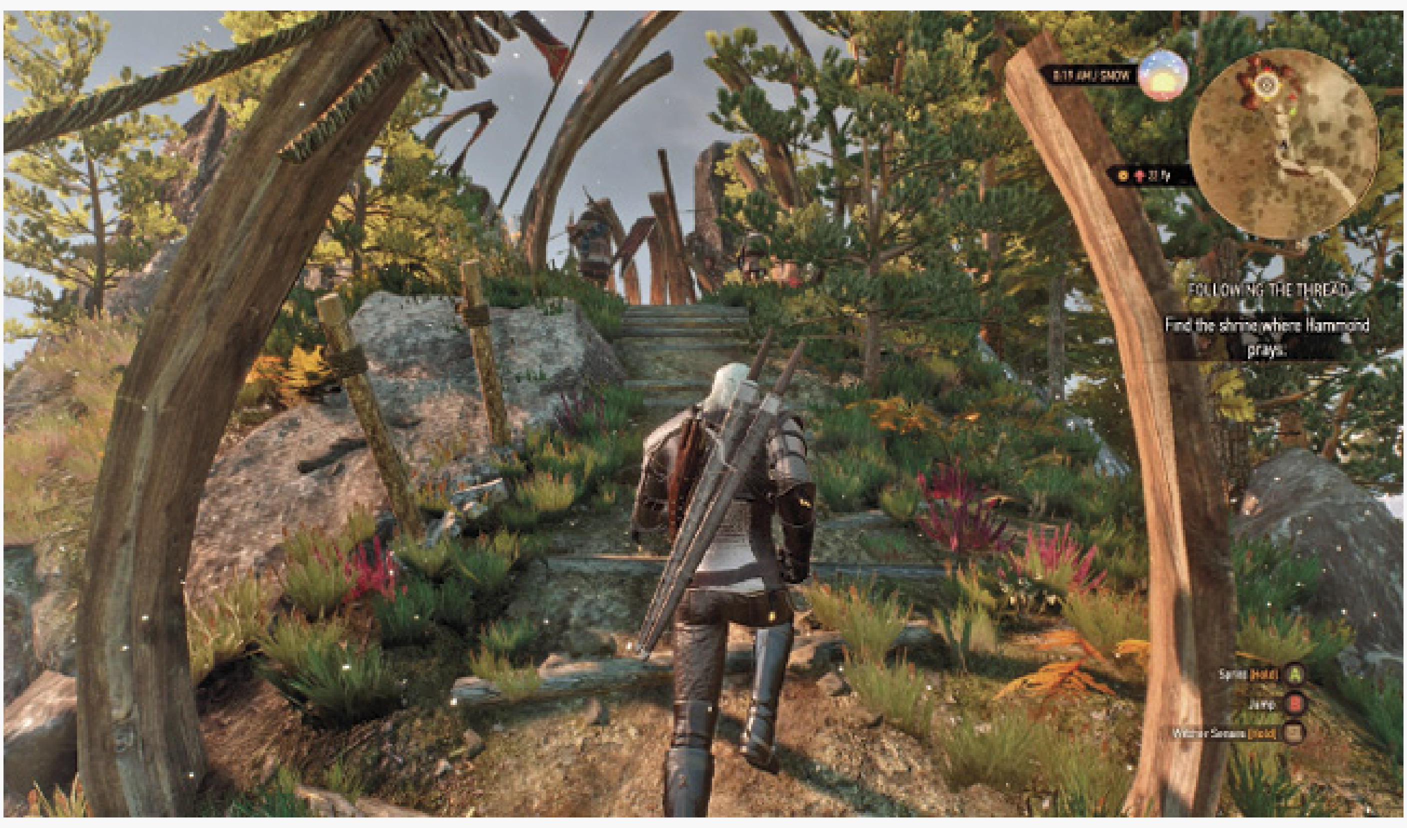


OBJECTIVES

- Find the shrine where Hammond prays.
- Kill Hammond. Search Hammond's body.

Hammond

Hammond's shrine can be approached by following the pathways, or disembarking at a beach just east of the shrine. Check your map, note the location of the shore (the southeastern tip of Faroe), and drop anchor on the tiny spit of sand, guarded by three dagr. Defeat them, then follow the snow-covered trail past some endriaga, and up the trail to a rustic shrine with rough hewed steps and the ribs from the hulls of longboats.



Hammond can't be reasoned with, so defeat him and his warrior guards in combat. Then search his corpse for some trinkets and the following:

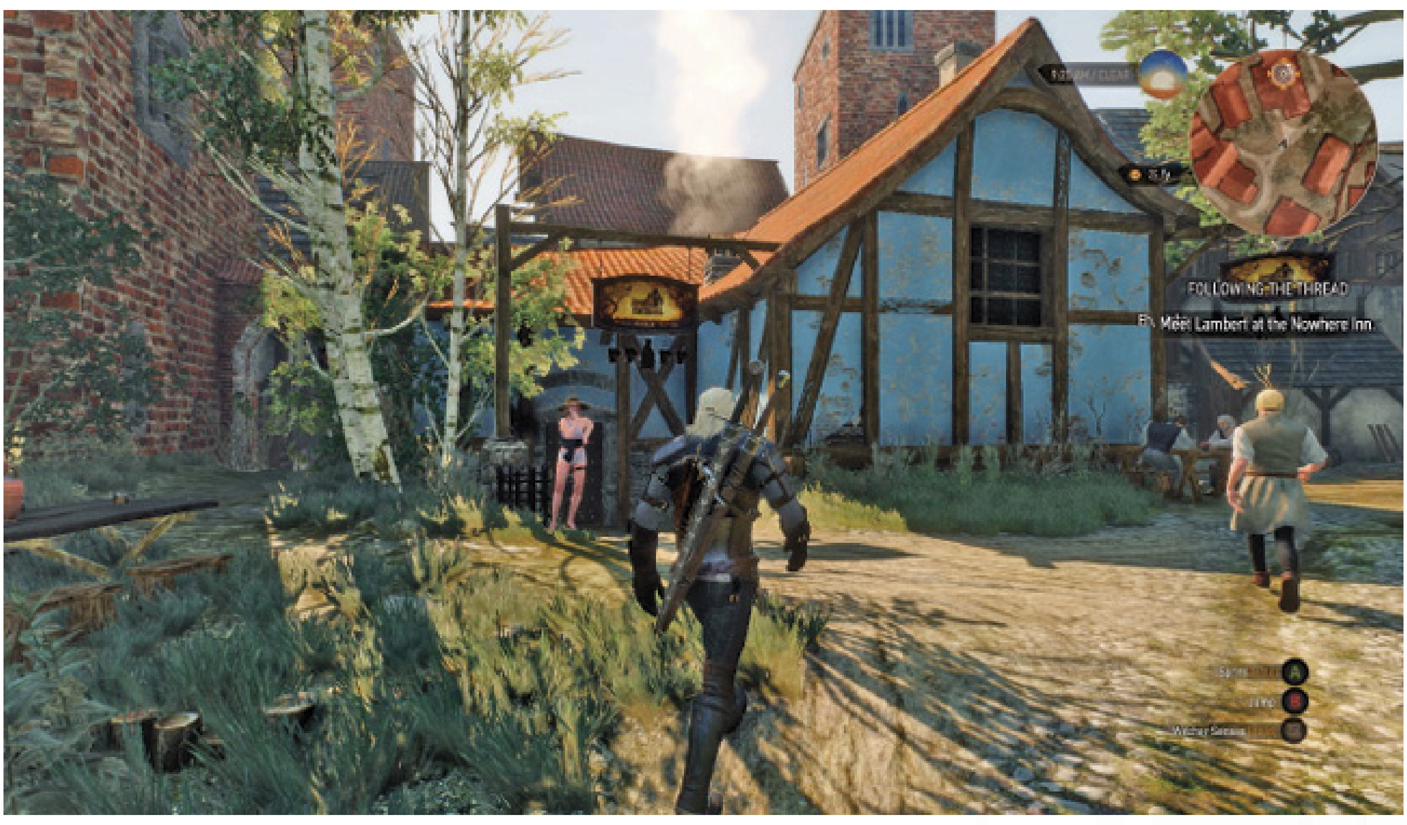
End: An Optional Assassination

OBJECTIVES

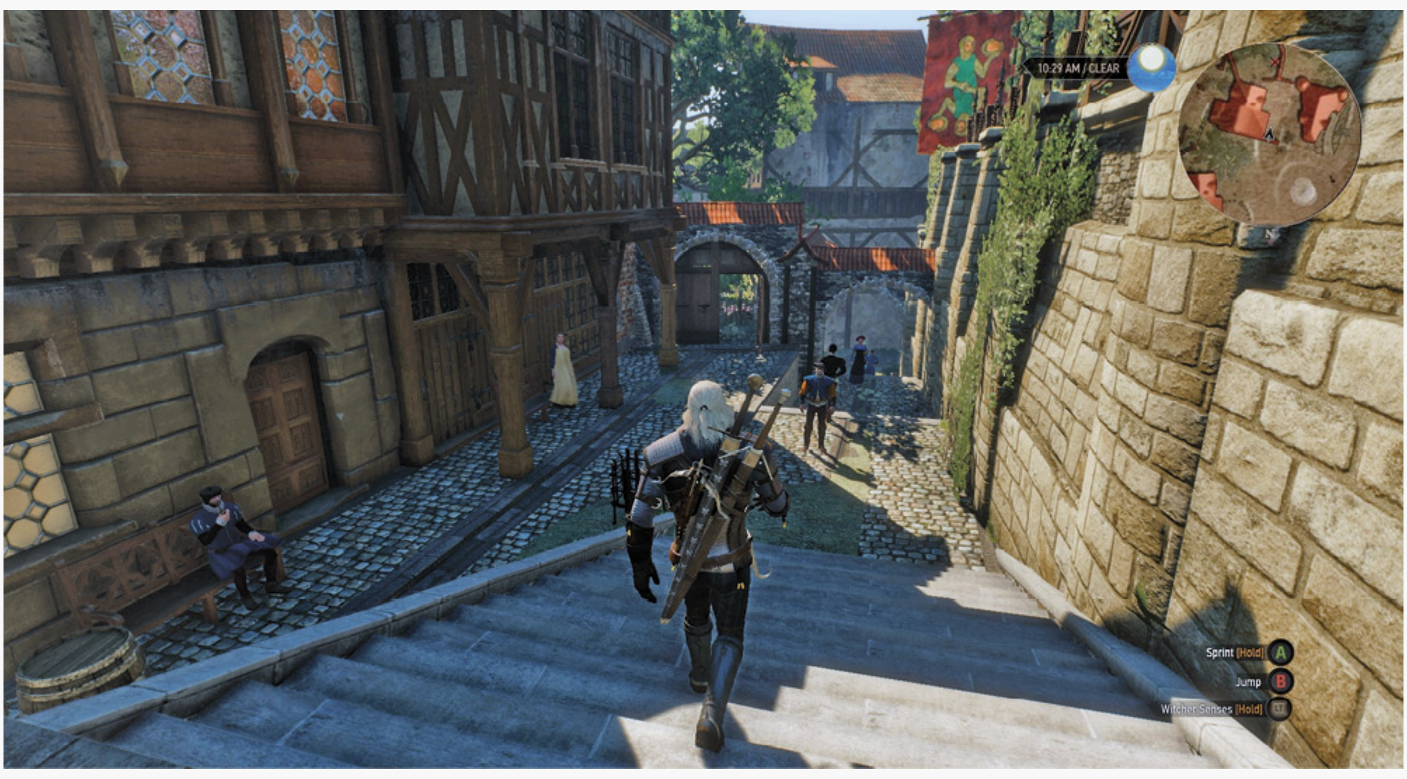
- Meet Lamert at the Nowhere Inn.
- Meet Lambert on Hierarch Square, near Karadin's residence.
- Decide Jan Karadin's fate.
- (Optional) Kill Jan Karadin.
- Nearest Signpost: St. Gregory's Gate.

Now you've fully explored Faroe, journey all the way back to Novigrad, enter the Southern Gate district of the city, and head for the Nowhere Inn (as shown). Lambert is inside playing Gwent. After his usual sullen questioning, you explain that Karadin lives in Novigrad, but never severed ties with Hammond. They are in business. Lambert has been busy too—learning about a trade in sly goods. Answer how you wish, optionally asking about Selyse, until you agree to pay Karadin a visit.



Jan Karadin

Head up to Hierarch Square, then down the steps to meet Lambert. You're planning an infiltration of the Karadin premises when a pair of heavily armored guards invite you into the abode without drawing a weapon. Karadin appears, introducing you both to his wife and small children. You motion for Lambert to talk to Karadin. You learn that he trained at the School of the Cat. Lambert fears he'll throttle the man, leaving you to optionally ask about his house, his past, and importantly, a Witcher named Aiden.



Karadin has regrets about Aiden's death, but had no other choice, since Aiden attacked first. Now you have the opportunity to end this quest (and Karadin's life) or spare it (and see Lambert's personality become even more abrasive). You can:

- Kill Karadin. The three of you spar in his gardens until Karadin is cut down.
- Spare Karadin. Lambert is incredulous. You walk away, telling him you aren't comfortable killing Karadin in cold blood. Lambert is more furious than normal, and you part ways.

After you decision is made, the quest concludes.

Scoia And Tell

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

KARMIC JUSTICE*

LOCATIONS: Southern Gate (Novigrad), Tretogor Gate

CHARACTERS: Merchant, Scoia'tael

OBJECTIVES

- Nearest Signpost: Southern Gate.

At night, in the rough-and-tumble alleyways between the Southern and Tretogor Gates, a trio of Scoia'tael are roughing up a merchant they accuse of dealing fisstech to some young elves—which kills every other one of them. The merchant protests his innocence (and hatred of elves) loudly.

You can step in and intervene. You can (after checking to see if he's carrying any fisstech, which he isn't):

- Tell the elves you have no proof he sold fisstech. This leads to a fight with the three Scoia'tael, and the profound thanks of the merchant.
- Leave the elves to do what they want with the merchant.

Either choice concludes the quest, though there's no crowns if you side with the elves.

SPOILER ALERT

A FEAST FOR CROWS

LOCATIONS: Gate of the Hierarch, Derrick's Den
CHARACTERS: Derrick, Carlos "Cleaver" Varese
ENEMIES: Cleaver's Henchdwarves

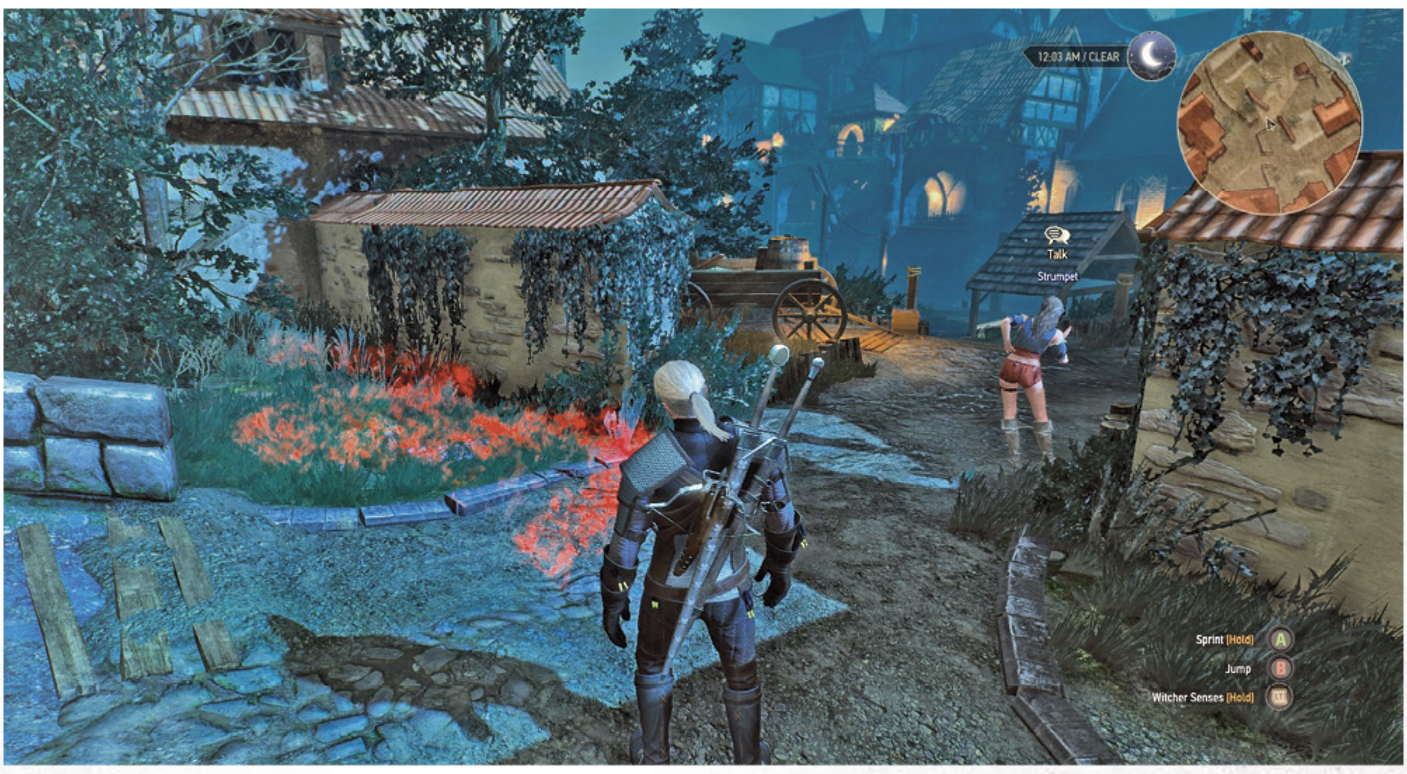
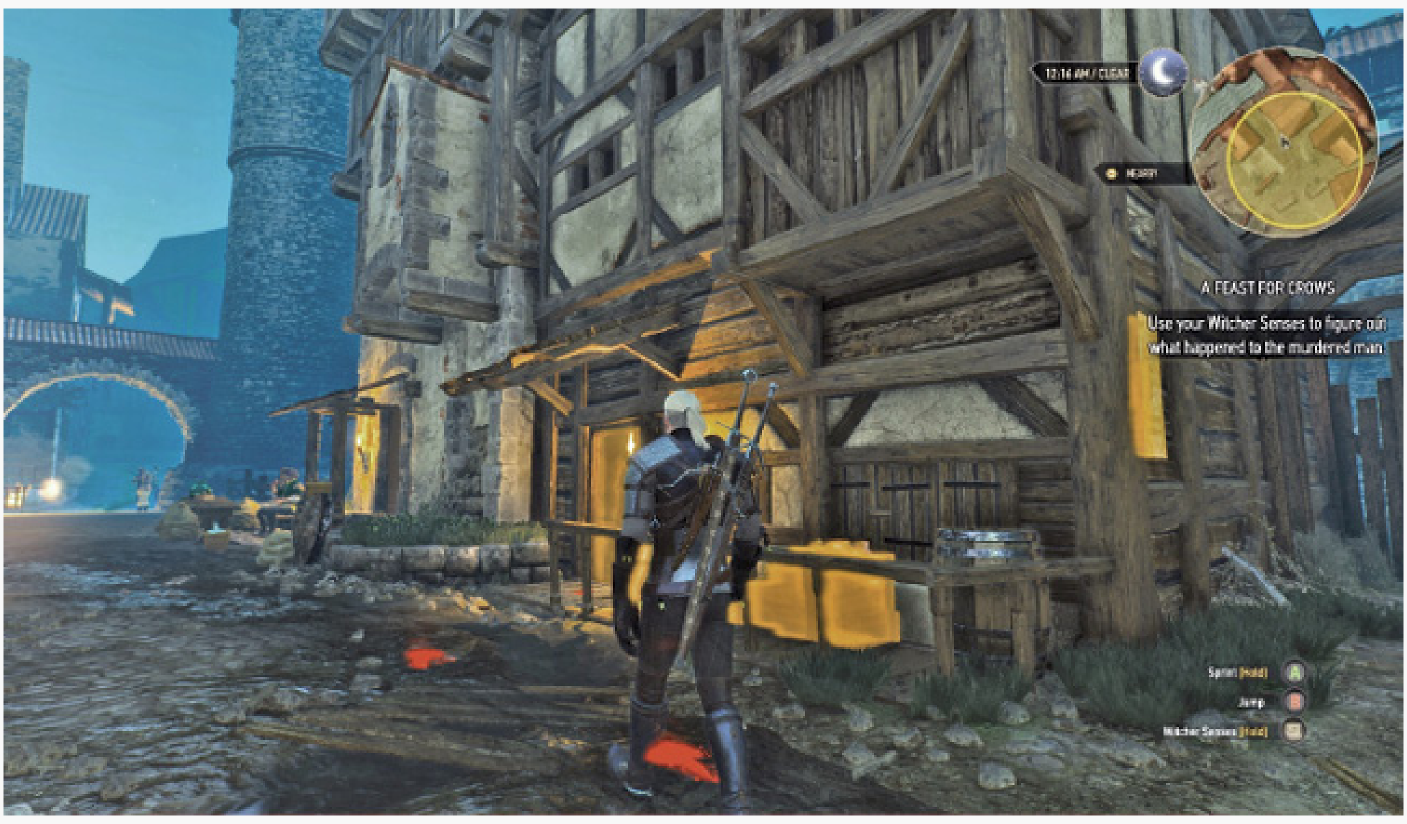
- Figure out what happened to the murdered man.

Something stinks around here worse than Zoltan's posing pouch, and it is hidden in the long grass near the small stone bridge and low wall, just north of the Gate of the Hierarch. When you pick up the smell, optionally use your Witcher Senses to follow the odor to its source. A murder of crows flap away from a corpse. Examine it to see the poor fellow was stabbed by a sword. Then loot a key.



Items: Quest Item: Key

Further examination of the area using your Witcher Senses reveals the murdered man fled to this point before collapsing. Trace his footprints across the street and around a corner to a small wooden structure. Enter, and you find three dwarf bandits allied to Cleaver, ransacking the man's home. They mockingly explain that they slew "Derrick," and have instructions from Cleaver to slay anyone who finds this den.



Use your Witcher Senses to figure out what happened to the murdered man.

END: AVOIDING A CHIB BETWEEN YOUR RIBS

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the bandits.
- Find the treasure chest.

The dwarven bandits present two options:

- Hand over the key. You receive a small reward for your troubles.
- Tell them you don't like being threatened. This naturally starts a fracas with you and the three diminutive bandits. Slay all three of them.

When the situation has been resolved, you can search for the treasure chest, on the north side of the ground floor of Derrick's Den. Use the key to open it, and claim coins (100 orens and 50 crowns), as the quest concludes:

The Flame Of Hatred*

Preaching On A Plinth

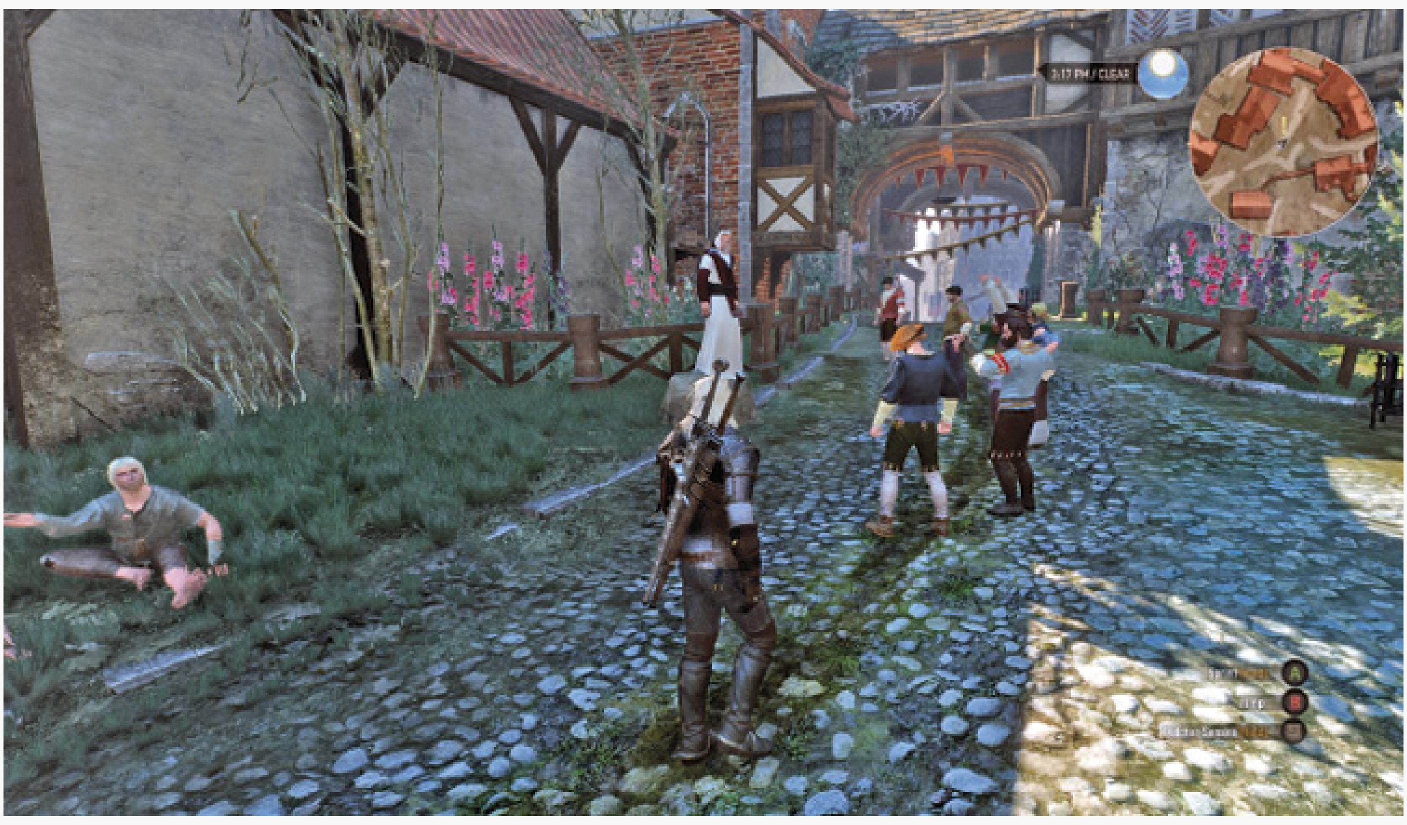
DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

THE FLAME OF HATRED*

LOCATIONS: Novigrad, Hierarch Square
CHARACTERS: Preacher
ENEMIES: Temple Guards, Bandits

Preacher

This occurs in the center of the lower city, east of Hierarch Square. Wherever they can, the priests of the Order of the Eternal Flame attempt to ignite the tinder box of animosity between the populace and sorceresses or alchemists. The preacher standing on the stone plinth in this cobbled street also has some choice words for Witchers. Perhaps this situation is best solved with words rather than violence?



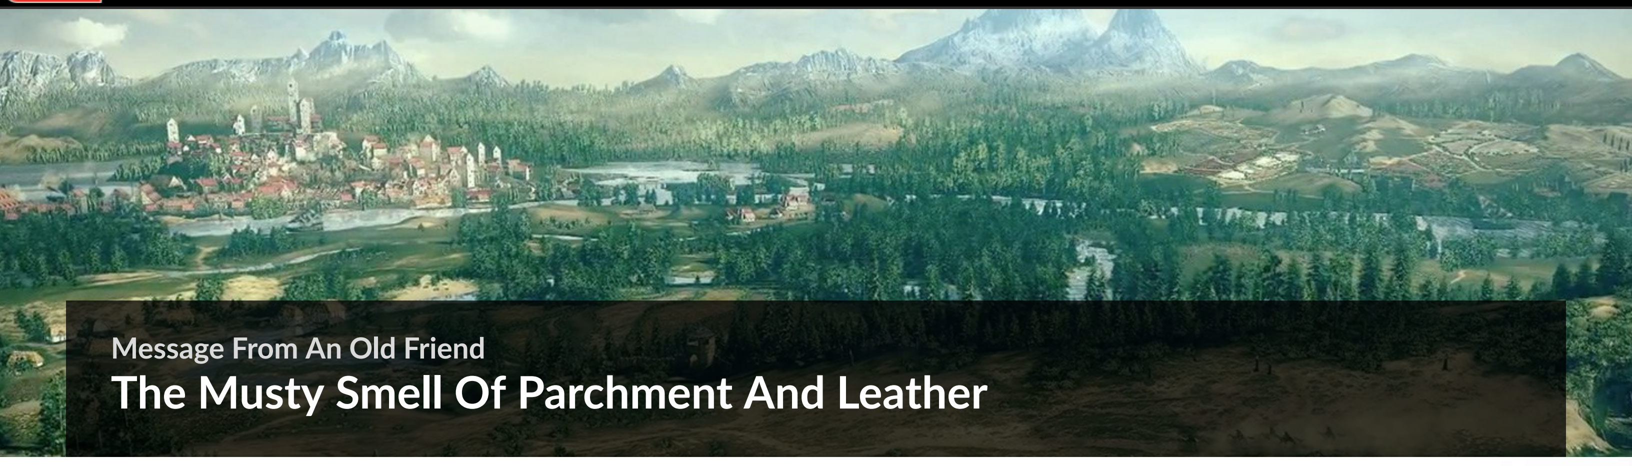
Step up and speak to the preacher. He's almost begging you to react to the venom he spits. You can:

- Ask how many lives he has saved. Press this subject, and the mob turns on him, dispersing as the preacher shrinks under your verbal barrage.
- Tell him you'll shut him up. Not being a man of combat, the priest will shy away, and the crowd disperses, mocking the priest.
- Ignore him and walk away. The preachers are as common as syphilis in Crippled Kate's, and just as difficult to get rid of.

Once you've resolved this verbal altercation, the quest concludes. If you threatened or confronted the preacher, you receive a small XP reward. However, if you threatened the preacher, watch out around two days from now—expect an ambush near the spot the preacher stood. The ambushers try to convince you they are officials, and demand you hand over your weapons. You can:

- Accept. After all, what's there to worry about?
- Tell them no.

In either case, the bandits inform you they were sent by the preacher you embarrassed. Fight the two foes, either with or without your weapons. Pick up your weapons from their corpses afterwards, as this quest concludes.



Message From An Old Friend

The Musty Smell Of Parchment And Leather

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

MESSAGE FROM AN OLD FRIEND

Location (and Map page): Hierarch Square (Novigrad)

CHARACTERS: Marcus T. K. Hodgson, Jacques de Aldersberg

OBJECTIVES

- Find a book with a red cover using your Witcher Senses.

Marcus Thaddeus Knut Hodgson

Enter the "Books and Scrolls" shop along the northern side of Hierarch Square in Novigrad, and speak to proprietor, Marcus. A purveyor of fine and rare manuscripts, he recognizes you from the compendium he was recently tasked to undertake. But he has other interesting information to impart—namely a man who paid him to keep a book for you. Marcus doesn't know the man's name, but the book had a red cover. You can:

- Look at all his books (and purchase his many tomes).
- Tell him you're just here for the one he mentioned.

Either way, you must search this repository for the book Marcus mentioned.

END: FAINT ECHOES OF THE FLAMING ROSE

Even though you may be interested in the scandalous goings on between the pages of "The Many Adventures of Misbehaving Muriel," you're here for a red-leather tome. Head up the stairs, and look for the book on the bookcase by the second set of stairs. Inside "My Manifesto" is a letter to read. It bears the handwriting of Jacques de Aldersberg, the Grand Master of the Order of the Flaming Rose—creator of the "ubermen," thief of the Witchers' secrets, and hater of elves. You put the sword to him many moons ago. Now his words resonate. The quest then concludes.

OF SWORDS AND DUMPLINGS

LOCATIONS: Hattori's Dumpling Shop (Novigrad), The Golden Sturgeon, Von Hoorn's Warehouse

CHARACTERS: Eibhear Hattori, Tinboy, Sukrus, Ernst von Hoorn

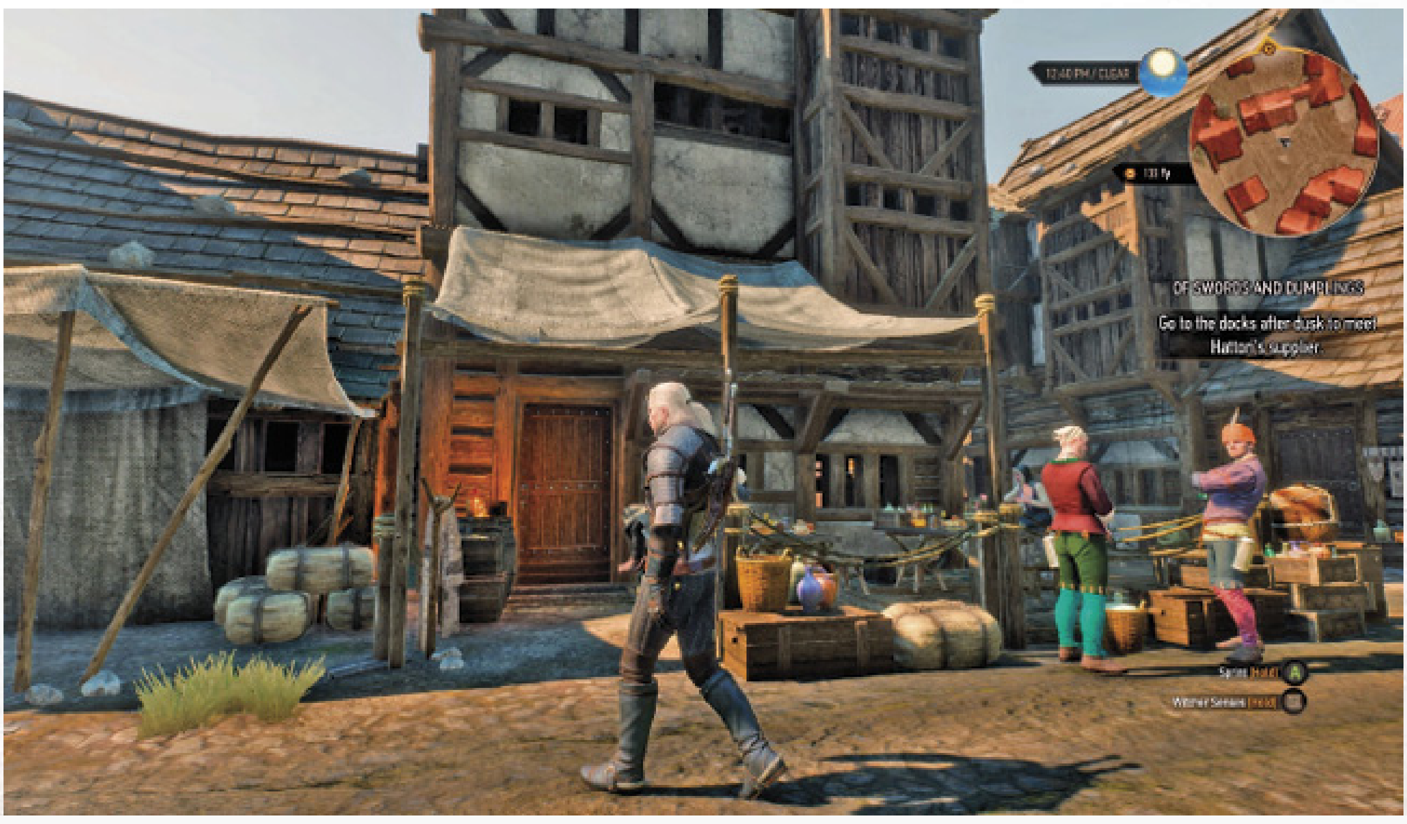
ENEMIES: Cleaver's Henchdwarves, Merchant, Bandits

RECOMMENDED ITEM: 200 Crowns, Axii Delusion Level 3

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Hattori in his dumpling shop.
- Nearest Signpost: Hierarch Square.

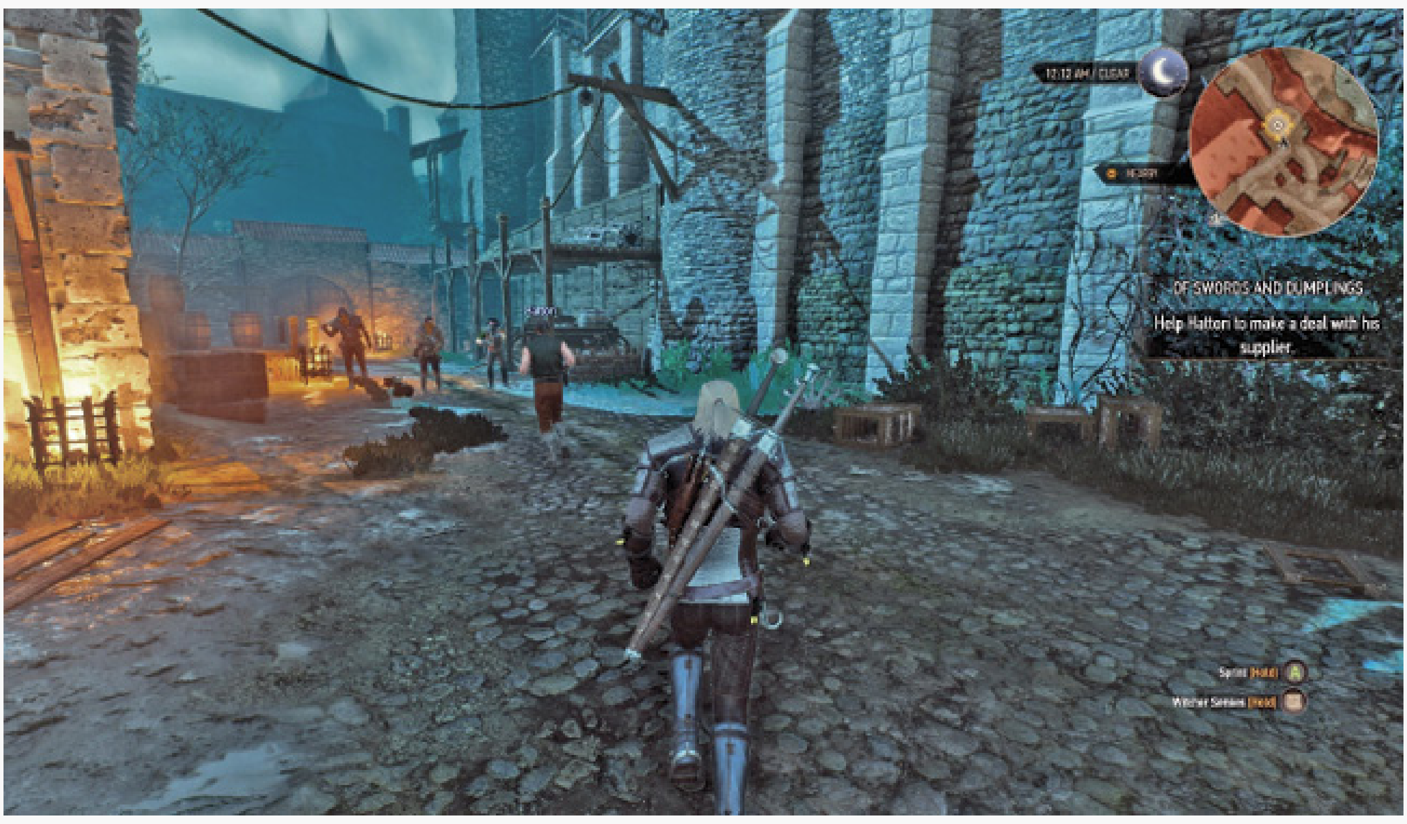
Enter Hattori's modest dumpling shop, and inquire about the food. When the elf turns around, he's much more interested (and knowledgable) regarding your blades. Feel free to try a dumpling when asked, but you're really here for a swordsmith. Hattori shows you some momentos of his past work, but he's retired. Or at least, he isn't part of the gang that monopolize the supplies for metalworking—headed up by Ernst van Hoorn, under the protection of that lunatic dwarf Cleaver. Push the subject, then ask if he's interested in you finding him some supplies. Hattori asks if you'll accompany him to a meeting where supplies are bought. You're the bodyguard. Meet him after dark at the docks.



OBJECTIVES

- Go to the docks after dusk to meet Hattori's supplier.
- Help Hattori to make a deal with his supplier.
- Escape the ambush.

Head west to the docks and mediate, or complete other tasks until after dark. His contact is called Tinboy (one of the King of Beggars' men) who might be able to undercut Cleaver's stranglehold on the supplies. Continue west along the wharf, then south down a warehouse alleyway, and into a stone courtyard. Tinboy is here with some muscle. The initial negotiation is 50 percent of Hattori's profits. You can agree, cut it to 25 percent and agree on 35, or remain steadfast at 25. Not that this matters, as Cleaver's henchdwarves ambush the meeting, and all hell breaks loose!



Tackle five of these henchdwarves while checking Hattori doesn't take too much damage. Remove all of the short threats, then flee to the east, through the door to a stone archway blocked by crates. Use Aard to smash through the blockade, and out to the docks again. Tinboy agrees to the previous deal, but warns you that you've angered one of the Big Four of Novigrad's underworld. You're able to conclude the deal, when Hattori flees the area! Let him go, and retrace your steps back to his shop at your leisure.

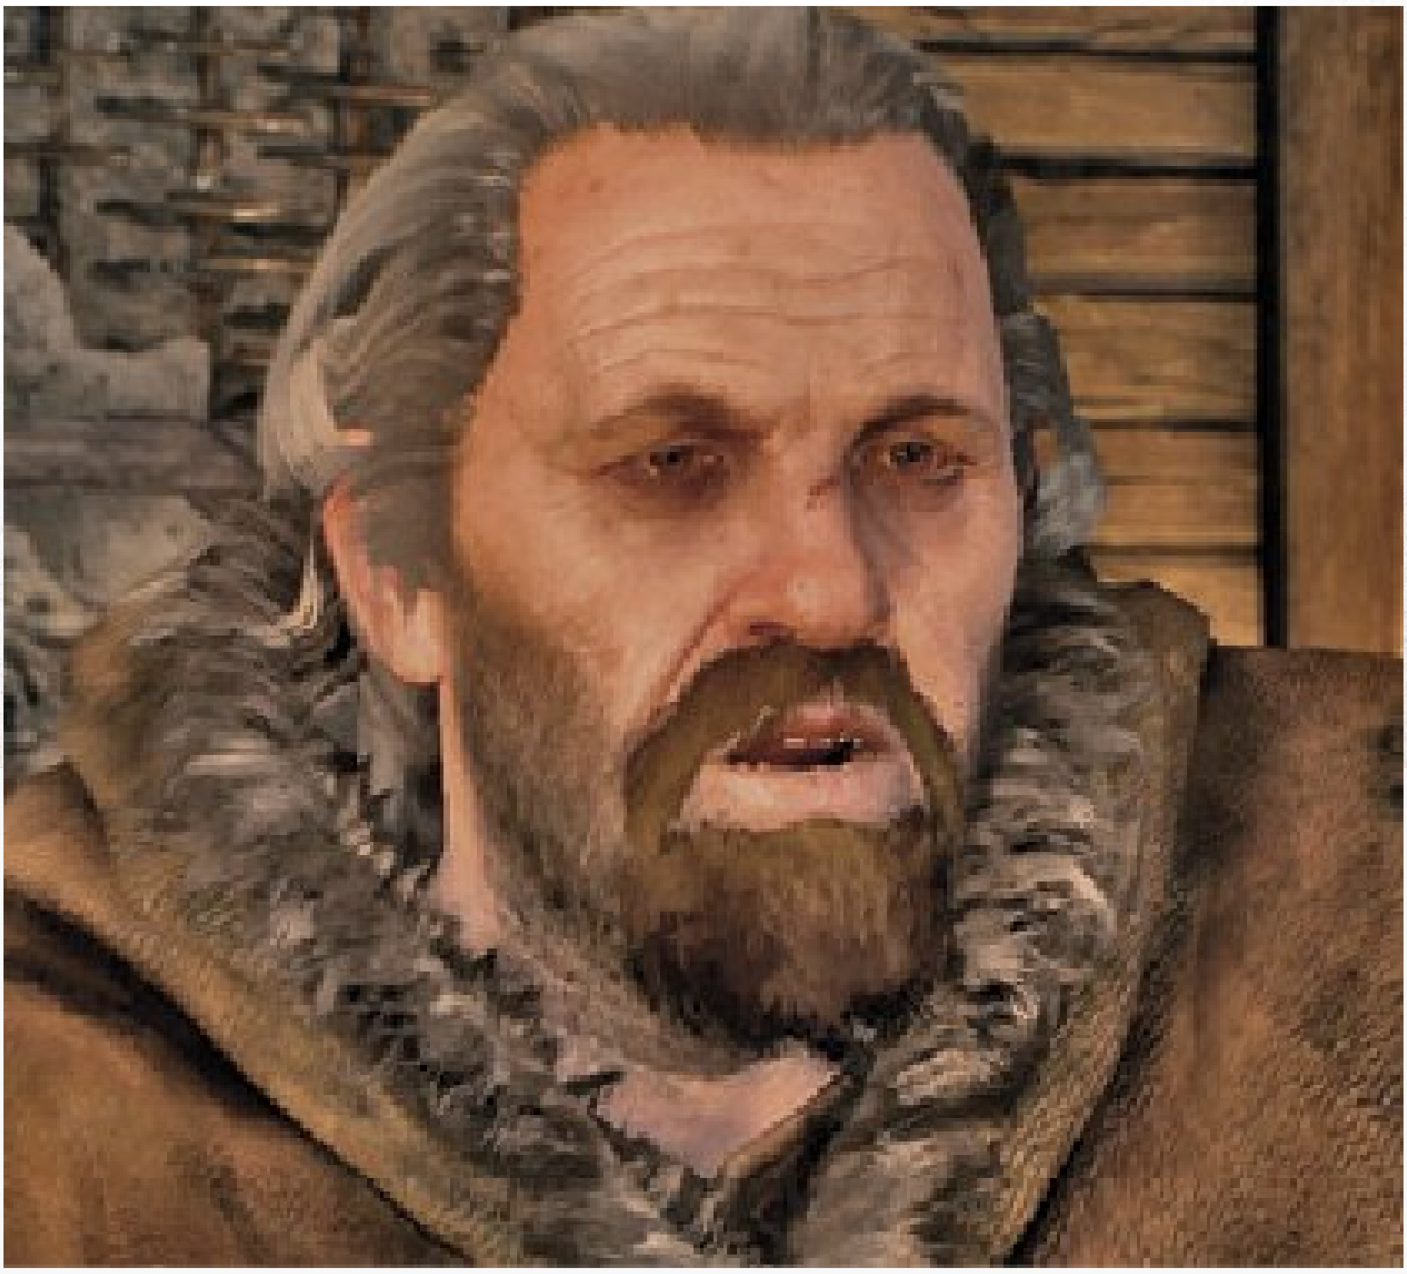
Sukrus Causing A Ruckus

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Hattori in his dumpling shop.
- Enlist Sukrus from Skellige as Hattori's bodyguard.
- Break up the fight at the inn.



Sukrus

Bang on the door back at the dumpling shop. Hattori won't let you in, and pleads for you to find him a bodyguard. Ask him further questions, and he reckons a mercenary named Sukrus (an old Skelliger pirate) might be just the ticket. Find him drinking at the Golden Sturgeon, down at the docks. Agree to find this fellow. A short walk west of the Ubbizi Townhouse is the Golden Sturgeon.

Don't head inside. Sukrus is engaged in some heavy-handed discussions with a merchant, which turns into a brawl. Step in and intervene, before Sukrus turns on you. Then lay him out with your fancy fist-work or a boot to the face. Impressed by your punching power, he beckons you inside.

Sit down with Sukrus, optionally asking him about his beef with the merchant, before telling him you have a job for him. Of course, without any money to offer Sukrus, he wants a favor from you first! Sukrus' brother-in-law owes him some coin. Get it back, and he'll help Hattori out. Or, simply smash the mead they ferried in from An Skellig. Sukrus is the petulant sort.

Too Much Greed About The Mead

OBJECTIVES

- Convince the Skellige merchant to pay his debts to Sukrus or destroy his goods.
- Tell Sukrus you solved his problem.

Stroll out of the Sturgeon, make a right (northwest) turn and head out onto the main jutting dock by the water wheel crane. Board the ship to your left, and speak to the merchant, who is quite insistent he not pay Sukrus, given the man's boorish behavior. You can:

- Ask what the problem is with Sukrus. You receive more or less the same answer.
- (Axii Delusion Level 3) Flummox the merchant into paying his debt.

Unless you're using Axii, a spot of vandalism is in order. Approach the casks of mead, and blast them apart using Aard or Igni. Face two bandits in combat. The merchant flees.

Convince the Skellige merchant to pay his debts to Sukrus or destroy his goods.

Journey back to the Golden Sturgeon, and find Sukrus' table. You inform him the problem is solved, and that he's to keep an eye on Hattori. Sukrus isn't happy as the elf "swindled him on axes once," but once you vouch for him, he seems agreeable, and sets off to round up some brethren.

He'd love to, but lacks certain critical crafting supplies. You quickly surmise Ernst von Hoorn is hoarding them. You're understandably suspicious, but with the promise of fine-crafted weaponry, you listen as Hattori describes the materials—they are in Van Hoorn's dockside warehouse, in heavy boxes, and smell of ammonia.

Step out of the shop, and speak to Sukrus at the entrance. Since violence is guaranteed, he immediately agrees. Spend a few moments preparing if you need to, then wait (or meditate) until after dark, and scurry back to the Sturgeon. Sukrus and his crew are just south of the Golden Sturgeon. Speak with Sukrus. While you remove the single guard at the entrance, and mark the crates to take with chalk, Sukrus will wait.

OBJECTIVES

- Get crafting supplies from Ernst von Hoorn's warehouse.
- Mark the crate Sukrus' boys should take (3).
- Tell Sukrus to take the crates.

Dash along the docks, passing the Sturgeon, to Von Ernst's Warehouse, where a merchant and one of Cleaver's dwarven henchmen are standing. The merchant, who was knocked on his arse by Sukrus earlier (just prior to you interceding with his mead shipment), hopes the dwarf might do the same to you, but the guard knows and admires you (a friend of Yarpen Zigrin's a friend of his) and then asks what you need.

- To wait, which he ignores. Fight anyway!

The combat is with fists, though swords can be employed if you wish. When four thugs and von Hoorn are knocked down, Sukrus' brother-in-law has a change of heart, and asks for friendship again. Von Hoorn will be taking an enforced trip to Skellige with them both. Meanwhile, you can return (once more) to Hattori's shop, and hope there's more than dumplings waiting for you. DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

Racists Of Novigrad (I And II)*

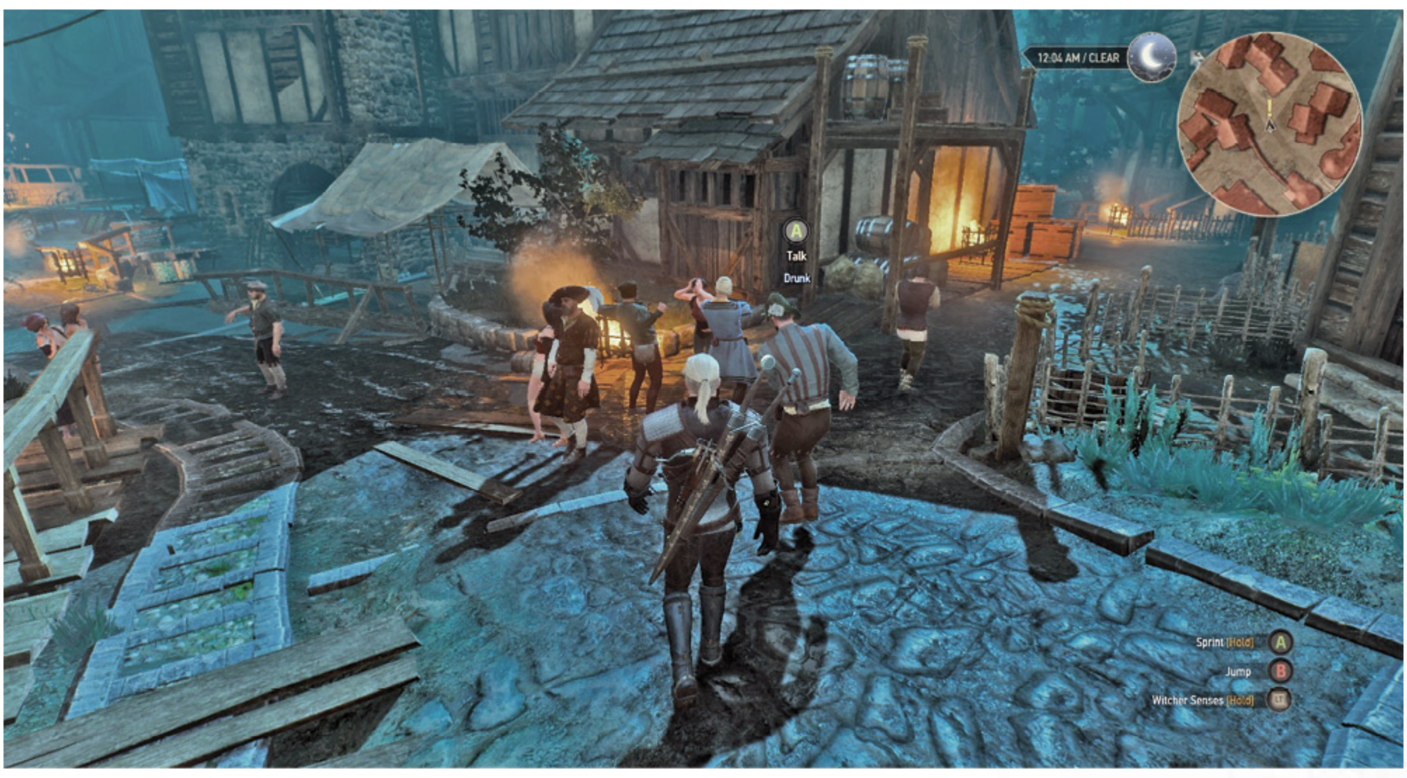
LOCATIONS: Novigrad, Portside Gate, Tretogor Gate

CHARACTERS: Female Elf, Male Elf

ENEMIES: Bandits, Townsmen

Novigrad is a city in turmoil, and the elf population face constant harassment. Step in to prevent verbal or physical abuse if you wish.

North of Portside Gate: At the junction close to a stall, a female elf has a group of unwanted admirers, sickened that she might tempt them into indecent thoughts.



Elf (Male)

When she protests she's only out to fill water from a well, you can step in, and side with either the elf or the group of bandits. No matter what choice you make, the crowd disperses, and the elf admonishes you for getting involved (even if your plan was to save her).

Southeast of Tretogor Gate: This occurs only after encountering the femal elf first. In the archway alcoves close to the tanning leather, a male elf is about to take a beating (and an ear snipping) from a group of unpleasant townsfolk. You can leave well alone, but if you intervene, there are three townsmen to slay. Afterwards, speak to the elf about past atrocities you've witnessed, and be on your way.

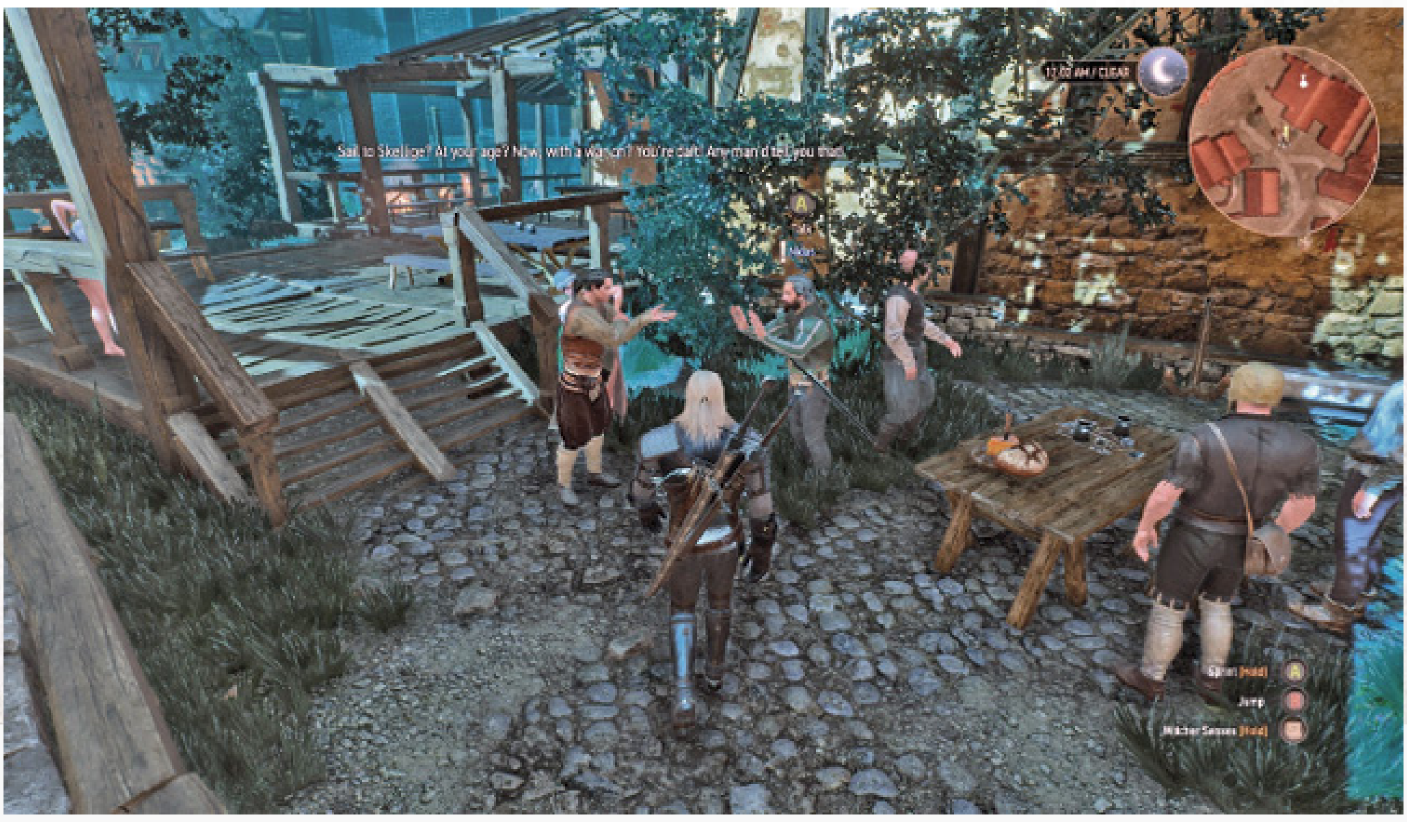
BLACK PEARL

LOCATIONS: The Golden Sturgeon (Novigrad), Arinbjorn (Ard Skellig)
CHARACTERS: Nidas
ENEMIES: Drowners, Sirens

OBJECTIVES

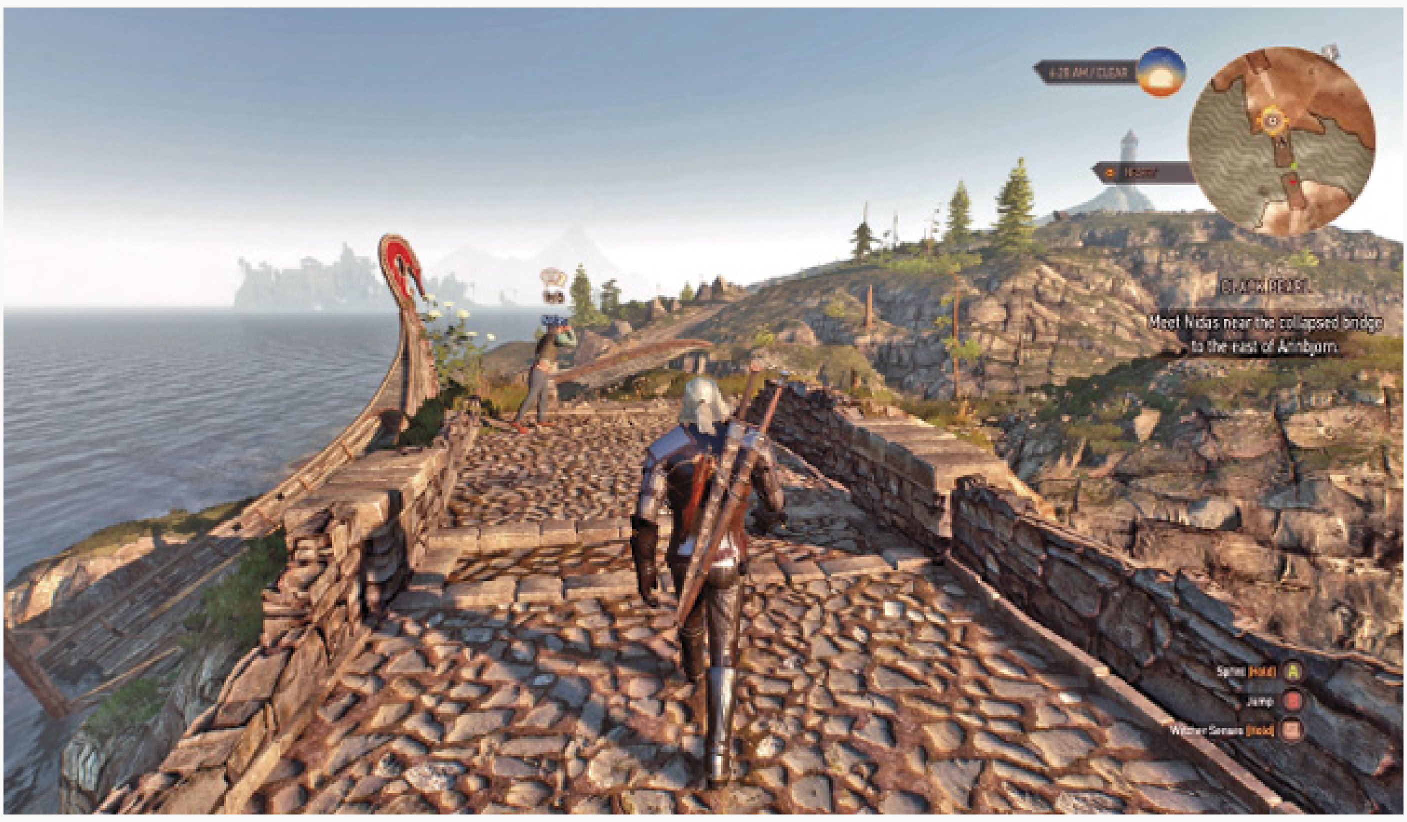
- Meet Nidas near the collapsed bridge to the east of Arinbjorn.

Behind the Golden Sturgeon (by the docks, but round the back), step into a conversation with Nidas, a weatherbeaten soldier who requires a traveling companion for a sea crossing. He's promised his beloved Letta a rare and black pearl before he reunites with her, to boot! Agree to help out, and Nidas arranges to meet you by the collapsed bridge near Arinbjorn, in Skellige.



Sail to Skellige? At your age? Now, with a war on? You're daft. Any man'd tell you that.

Journey to Ard Skellig, and dock at Arinbojorn, on the western side of the main island. You're looking for the three rocky islands partly attached by ruined bridges, with the Eldberg Lighthouse at the northern tip. Expect a cockatrice and other adversaries as you trek to the meeting point—the northern side of the southern-most bridge. Leap the gap along the way.



BLACK PEARL
Meet Nidas near the collapsed bridge to the east of Arinbjorn.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Nidas to the pearl bed.

After a brief history lesson, agree to help locate the pearl, and then let Nidas take the lead. Follow him along the path to the north, before he heads left (west) down a small ravine to the beach.

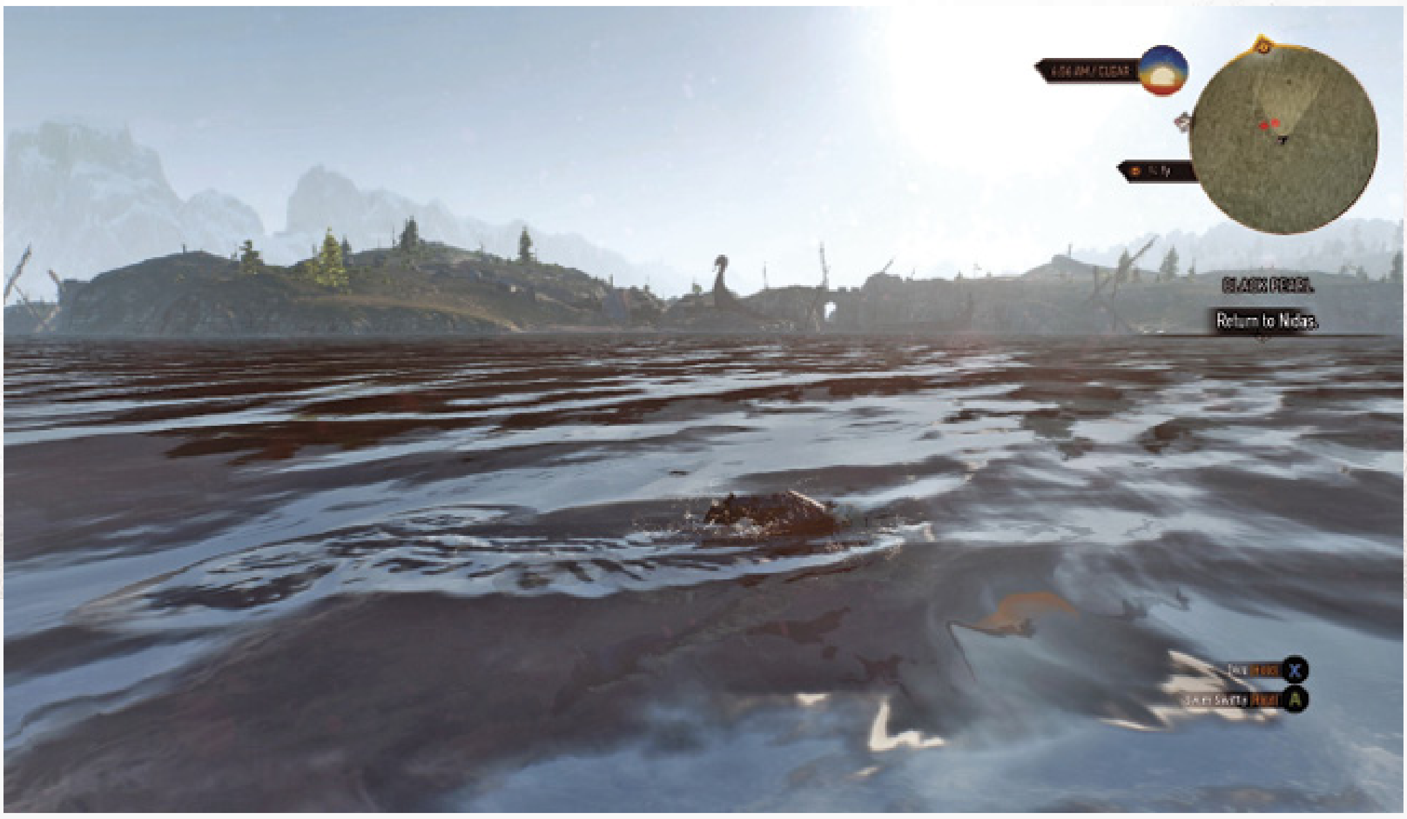
Black Pearl

The Nidas Touch

OBJECTIVES

- Find a black pearl.
- Return to Nidas.

Old Nidas has festering lungs, so you're tasked with the diving duties. Enter the objective area, and dive down to the bottom of the rocky ocean floor, using your Witcher Senses and minimap to ascertain the location of an oyster. Loot it when you reach each one, and continue this underwater search until an oyster yields the pearl you seek.



Items: Quest Item: Black Pearl

Now return to the surface, and extricate yourself from the water immediately. A group of three drowners and a siren may be attacking old Nidas! Quickly place yourself between Nidas and the foes. The quest fails if Nidas dies at the hands of these monsters, or any wandering bandits you haven't slain. Give the black pearl to Nidas, and he's suitably impressed, telling you to meet him at the Golden Sturgeon for your reward.

END: LETTA ISN'T GETTING BETTER

OBJECTIVES

- Meet Nidas in the Golden Sturgeon to collect your reward.

Now journey back to Novigrad's Harborside district, and visit the Golden Sturgeon where this quest commenced. Nidas is inside the bar, with a wistful expression. He hoped the present of the black pearl to his wife would awaken her memory, but she is sick and forgetful, and doesn't even remember his face. The quest concludes with an air of melachony.

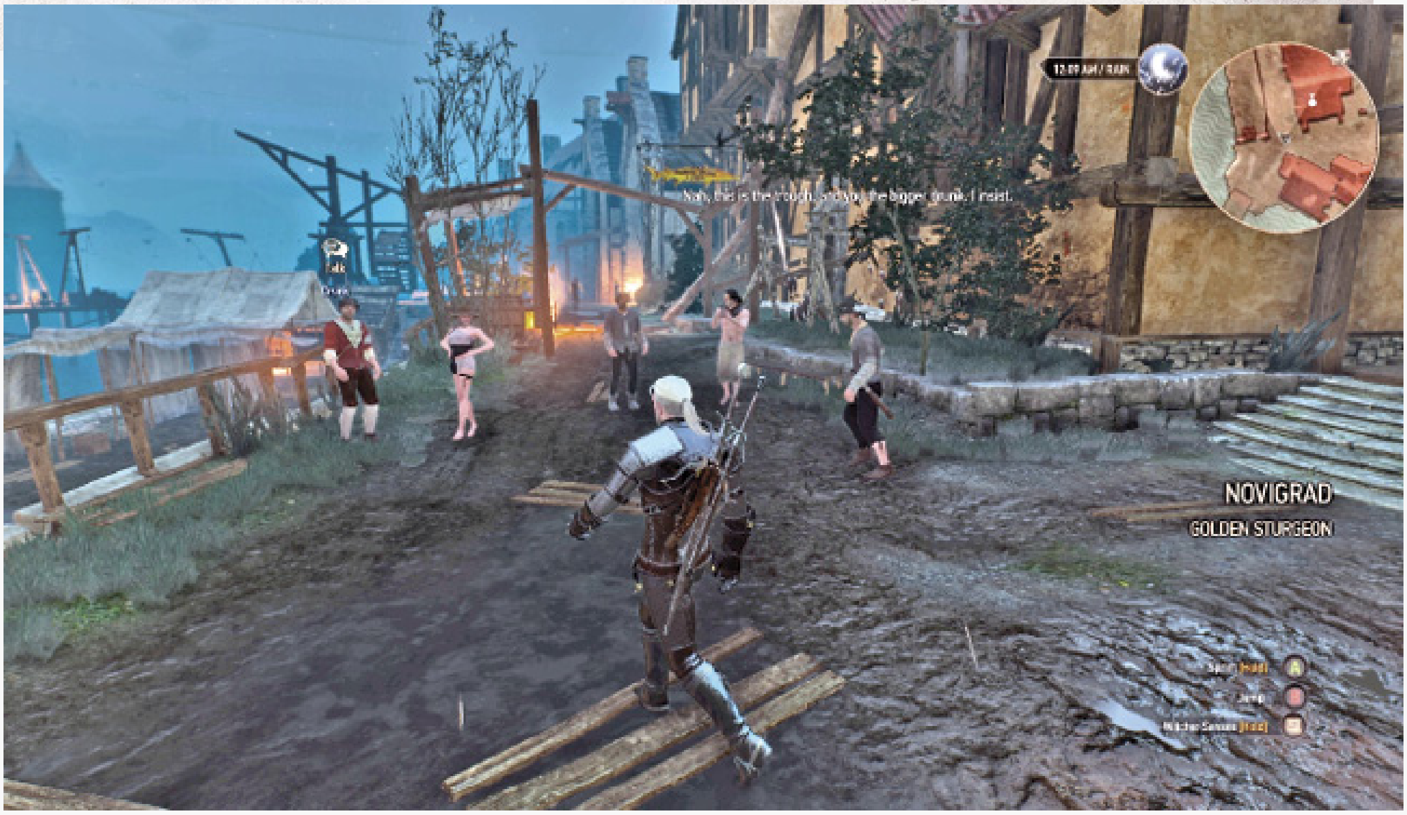
CHARACTERS: Drunks

During your wandering of the streets of Novigrad, expect to be verbally accosted by a variety of drunks at different times. They frequent the pathways around the Golden Sturgeon. Expect bewildered gasps and other nonsensical spew from their mouths, but no rewards. Refuse to give them coin, and expect a fistfight. They are extremely easy to beat, but if you’ve forgotten how to fight and lose, expect to be left in the gutter with a small amount of coin missing. If you wish to avoid the fisticuffs altogether, use Axii Delusion on them and they’ll leave without a fight.



Hey, You Wanna Look At My Stuff?

Everything Is Half Off

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

HEY, YOU WANNA LOOK AT MY STUFF?

LOCATION: Novigrad, Hierarch Square

CHARACTERS: Halfling Merchant, Witch Hunters

OBJECTIVES

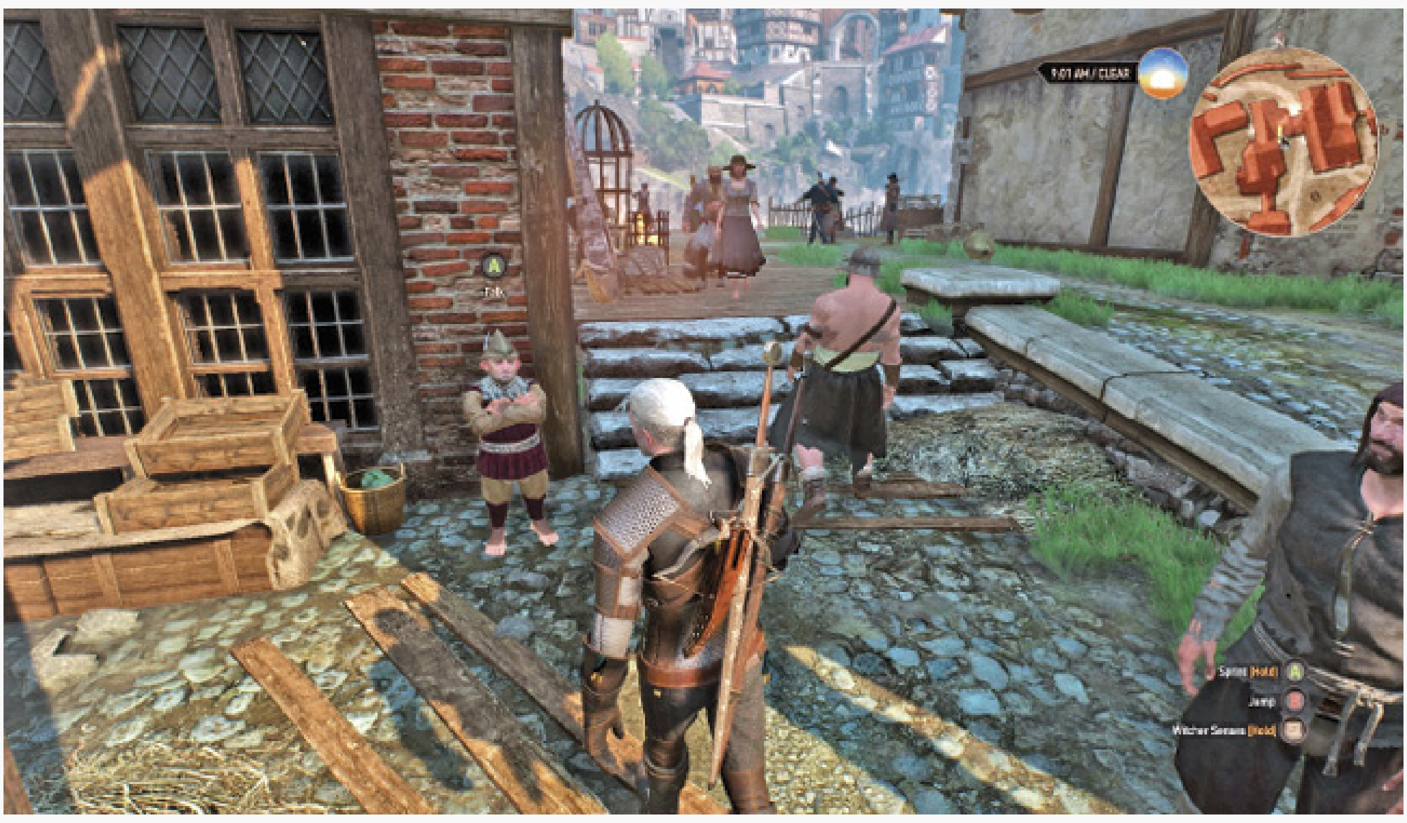
- Search the area using your Witcher Senses.
- Find the mysterious merchant using your Witcher Senses.

Halfling Merchant

While taking a walk along the cobblestone street close to the northwest harbor of Silverton, take a moment to chat to a halfling promising a deal of a lifetime. Feel free to ask him about his wares (or tell him you don't deal with vultures who prey on folks without the knowledge regarding the items they sell to him), but your conversation stops abruptly when the small fellow flees at the sight of a witch hunter patrol. One of them asks what the halfling was doing. You can:

- Tell them the truth (he sells the property of dead mages). Choose this, and you won't be able to find the merchant and the quest concludes.
- Tell them a lie (he left his soup on the burner).

After the witch hunters depart, use your Witcher Senses to examine the ground where he was standing. You catch a whiff of his wares from a dropped bottle. Follow this cloud along the shoreline street, to the halfling who is gazing at the harbor. Speak, and the trader offers you a variety of wares (alchemy recipes and reagents). The quest concludes.



Strumpet In Distress*

Hoes Before Foes

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

STRUMPET IN DISTRESS*

LOCATION: Novigrad Docks

CHARACTERS: Strumpet, Customer

RECOMMENDED ITEM: Axii Delusion Level 2

Novigrad is a city with a seeting underbelly of vice and violence. Step in to prevent verbal or physical abuse if you so desire:

Close to the docks, a gruff, hooded townsman exclaims some truly horrific threats towards a hussy. Speak to the woman. She tells you she can handle the situation, and you can:

- (Axii Delusion Level 2) Tell the man who threatened her to get lost.
- Or threaten him normally. Or ask the prostitute if she wants rid of him. Or leave.

Any option subsequently reveals that the man was acting out a bit of roleplay, and your appearance confused him greatly, not to mention killing his mood. He leaves, and the prostitute (now unable to be paid) is suitably furious with your high morale stance and general inepititude at reading the situation. The quest concludes.

Out On Your Arse!

Whores And Hooligans

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

OUT ON YOUR ARSE!

LOCATION: Crippled Kate's

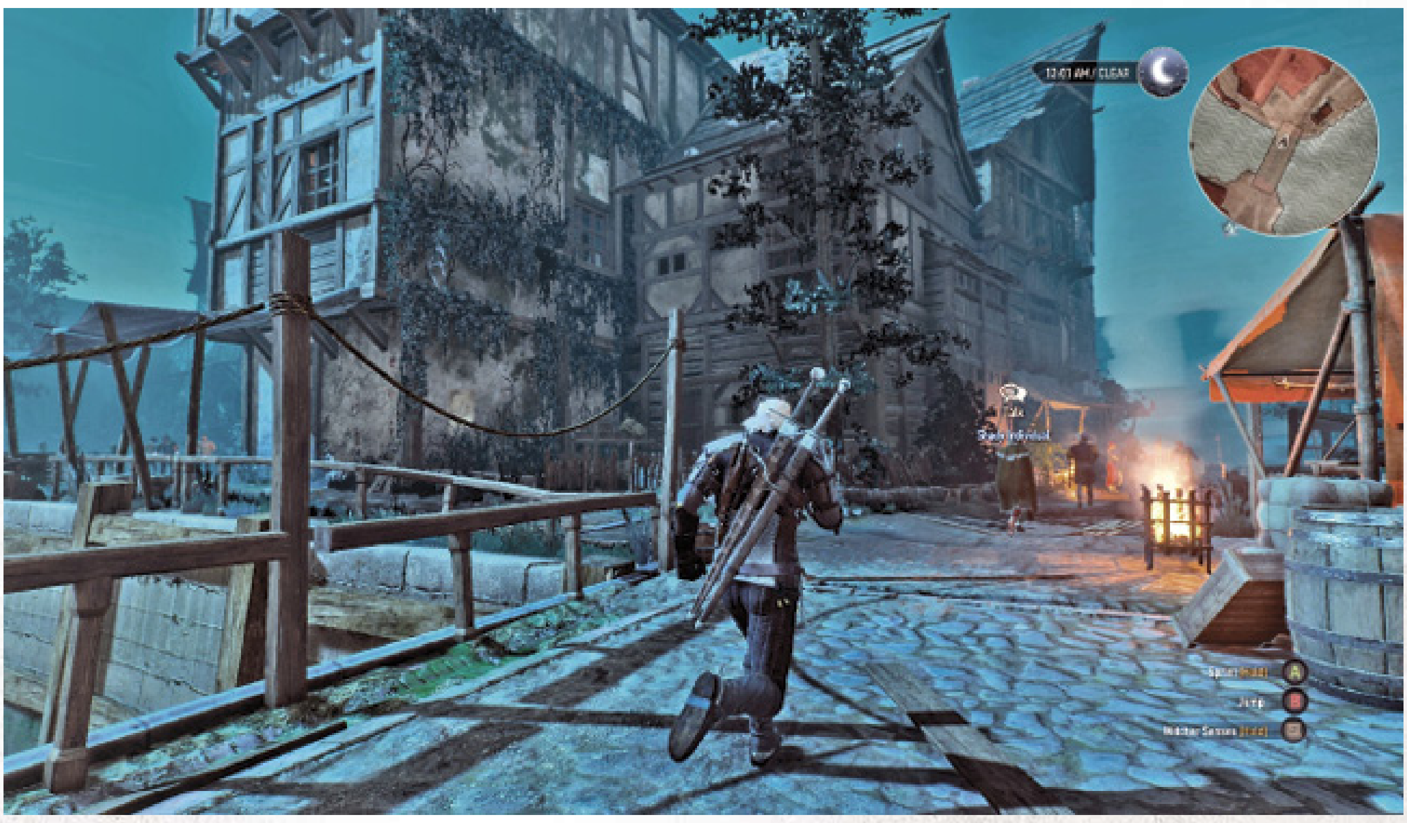
CHARACTERS: Prostitute, Yormund of Faroe, Skellige Man

RECOMMENDED ITEM: Axii Delusion Level 2

OBJECTIVES

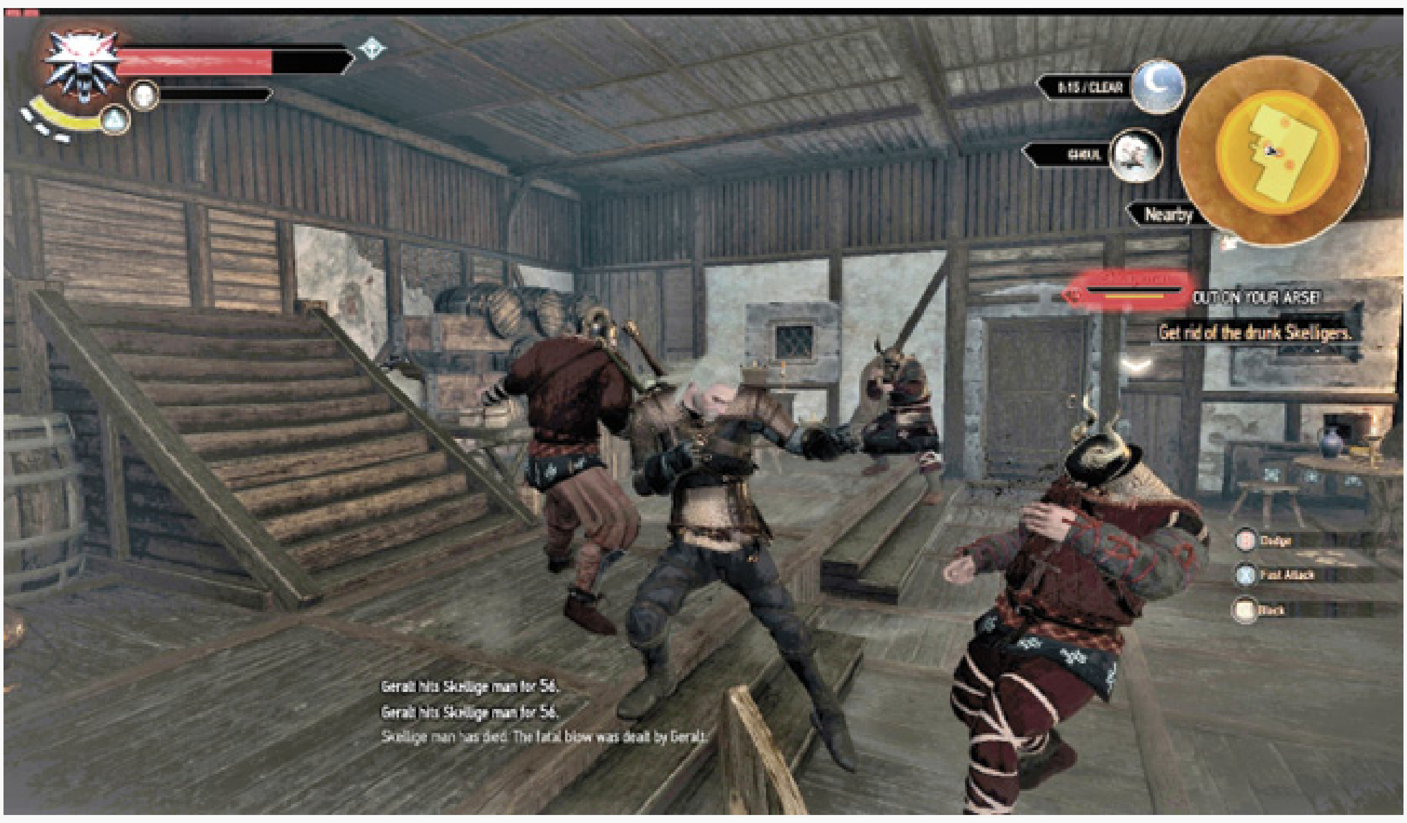
- Get rid of the drunk Skelligers.

Find your way to the seediest of the Novigrad brothels (Crippled Kate's) and speak to the prostitute muttering outside this den of iniquity. She complains that a group of Skelligers have clobbered the innkeep, tossed out the girls, and then set to drinking. And haven't stopped since yesterday. Offer to help.



END: A SMACK OR AN ATTACK, TO TAKE BACK

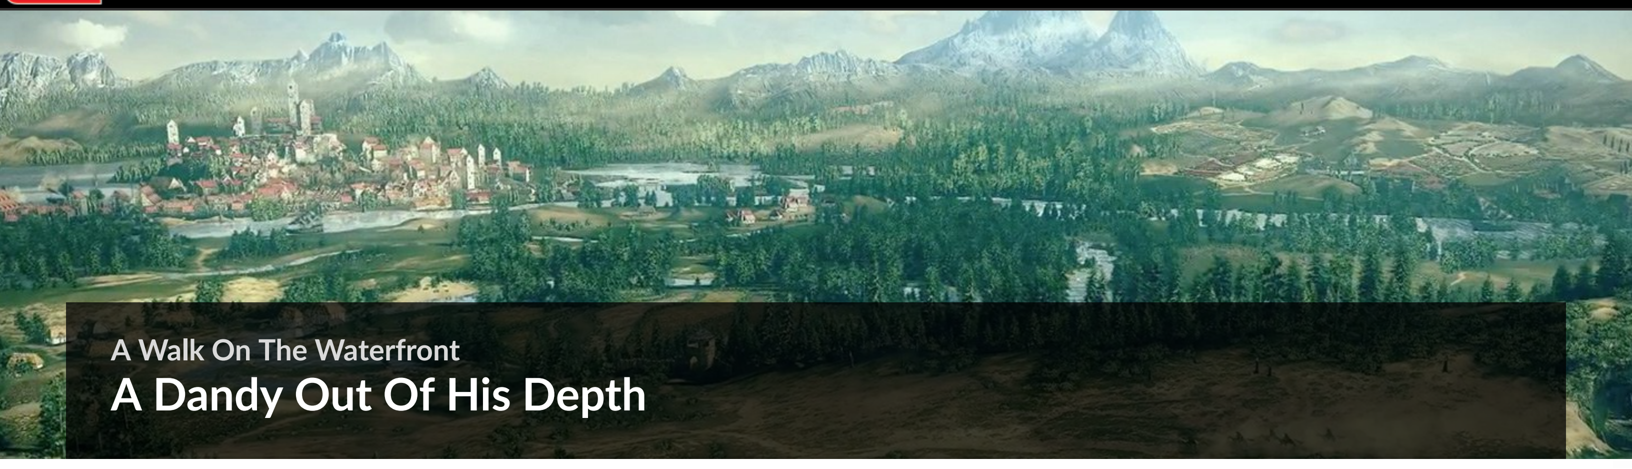
A quartet of slightly sloshed Skelligers from the Isle of Faroe require some of your diplomacy. As your talk with Yormund continues, you can:



Geralt hits Skellige man for 56.
Geralt hits Skellige man for 56.
Skellige man has died. The fatal blow was dealt by Geralt.

- Request you settle this man to man: Challenge Yormund to a fist fight, and if you're victorious, the burly blokes agree to flee.
- Tell them to leave or "taste my wrath." This degenerates into a three-way (and pretty difficult) fist-fight. Try it!
- (Axii Delusion Level 2) Tell them to leave using your flummoxing spell. Yormund and the boys confusedly stumble out of the premises.
- (Secondary Quest: The Lord of Undvik) If you fought the ice giant on Undvik, tell the rabble this, and they are impressed enough to leave without incident.

Speak to the prostitute afterwards to gain your reward, as this quest concludes.



A Walk On The Waterfront

A Dandy Out Of His Depth

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

A WALK ON THE WATERFRONT

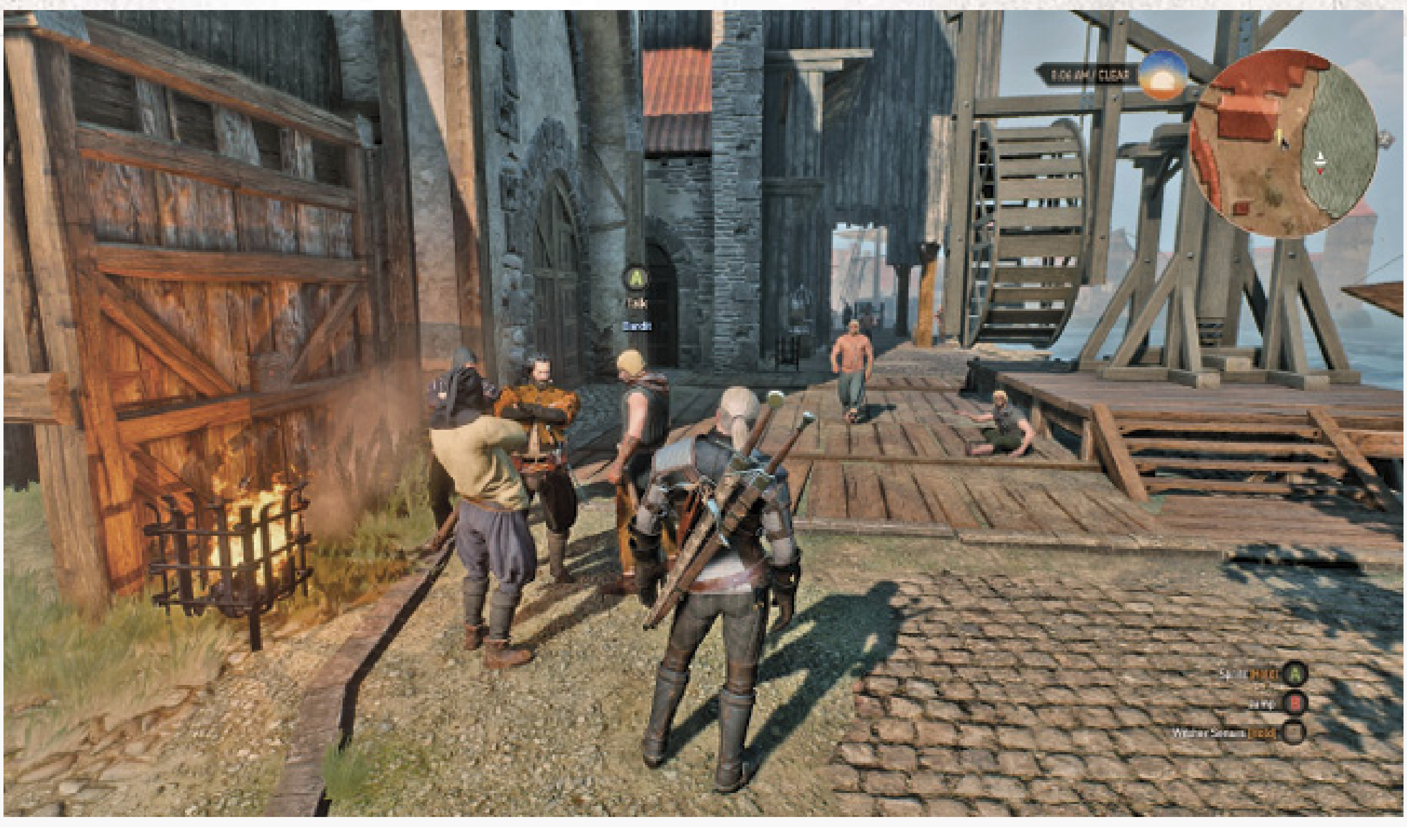
LOCATION: Novigrad Docks
CHARACTERS: Ginter de Lavirac, Fisstech Dealer
ENEMIES: Bandits

OBJECTIVES

- Fix Escort the nobleman.

Ginter de Lavirac

Close to the wooden winch crane, by the warehouses on the western end of the south docks in Novigrad, there's the start of a kefuffle between three bandits and a nobleman. Step in before the dandy suffers a knife in the guts, and the bandits try the same to you.



Teach them a lesson—either with fists a flying or swordplay aplenty. When the three are defeated, speak to Ginter de Lavirac. He requests you join him (a few paces behind, naturally) for a stroll along the docks. Agree.

END: A WALK ON THE WILD SIDE

Stay a few paces behind Ginter as he heads east, down a cobblestone ramp, and a second wooden crane. At this point, barge through and bring down four more bandits before they wound Ginter. This was obviously an ambush, but Ginter doesn't tell you why they knew where he'd be. Continue on, along the cobblestone dockside, and as you head under a deck, prepare for another group of four thugs to slay

DE LAVIRAC MUST LIVE!

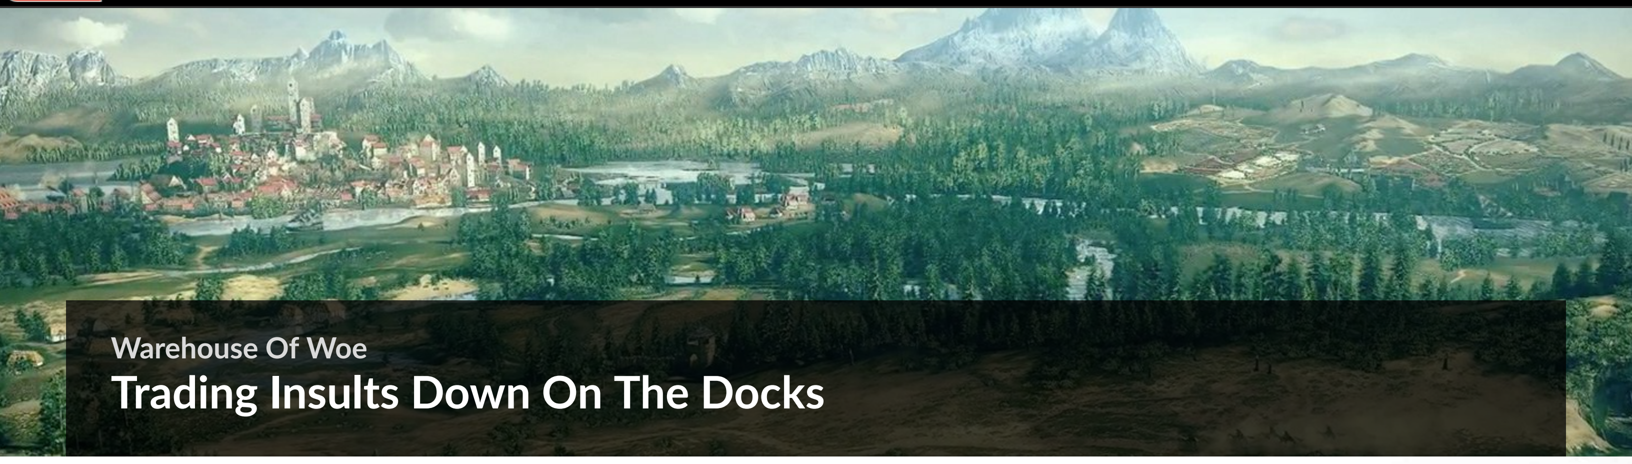
Be sure you keep an eye on Ginter's health, and race to his side to protect him if he's wounded. The quest fails if he dies.

Continue the walk until you reach the end of the docks near the tower, and a couple of fisstech dealers step up to speak to Ginter. It now transpires that Ginter is a hifalutin narcotics buyer for some extremely important clients. He introduces you as his gardener. When the dealers attempt to fleece him for 5,000 crowns instead of 4,000, he asks you to back him up.

You can:

- Agree that you will ("Right"), and the dealers back down.
- Refuse ("Wrong"), and the dealers take care of Ginter, paying you the same amount that Ginter offered you, for your lack of interference.

After the deal, you're paid your fee, and the quest concludes.



Warehouse Of Woe

Trading Insults Down On The Docks

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

WAREHOUSE OF WOE

LOCATION: Novigrad Docks, Portside Warehouse

CHARACTERS: Nilfgaardian Guard, Dwarf Trader, Human Trader

ENEMIES: Nekker

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the monster.
- Tell the guardsman what happened in the warehouse.

On a stroll through the Harborside District, down the alley near the Unmarked Portside Warehouse (between the outer city wall and the warehouses in the southwest corner), you stumble across a disturbance of the peace.

Two traders (a dwarf and a racist human) who share the same warehouse are accusing one another of placing a monster inside the structure. The guard asks if you might slay the fiend? Agree, and enter the warehouse by the adjacent wooden steps.

Fortunately, the beast inside this warehouse isn't a fiend, but a nekker. You find it odd that it appears here on its own. No matter, it must be slain forthwith. Check the warehouse if you wish—there is a cage, with its bars sawn off, next to a dwarf-sized bootprint. It appears the racist was correct (the dwarf brought in the monster).

Outside, speak to the guard again, who pays you for your troubles. Tell him what you found, or cover for the nonhuman (the reward is the same) as this quest concludes.

OF DAIRY AND DARKNESS

LOCATIONS: Novigrad Merchant (St. Gregory's Bridge); Aeramas' Abandoned Manor

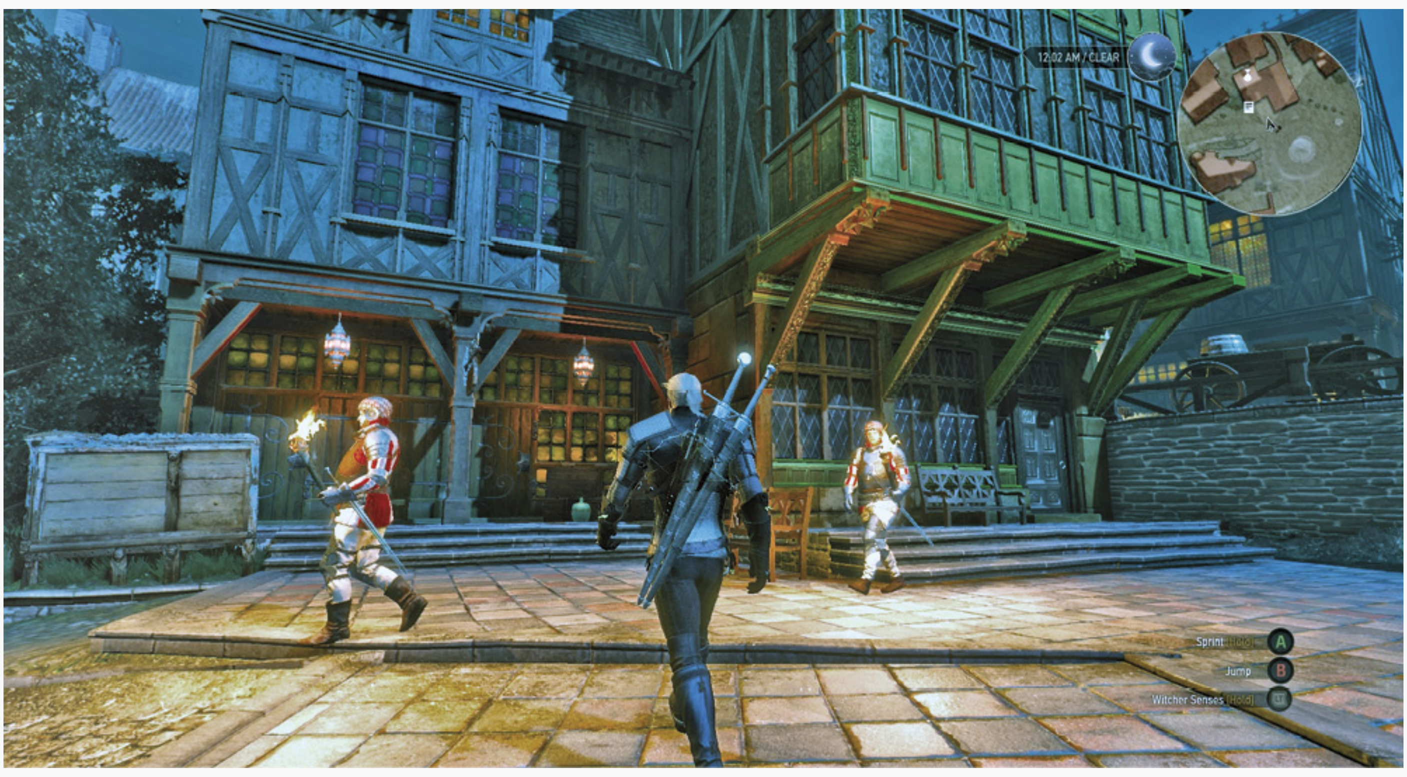
CHARACTERS: Merchant, Aeramas

ENEMIES: Foglets

RECOMMENDED ITEM: 20 Crowns, The Eye of Nehaleni

Merchant

Access the store adjacent to the Notice Board in Gildorf Square, and inspect the store owner's wares. The chap is particular keen on pushing a collection of artifacts belonging to a mage called Aeramas. Recently burned at the stake, a couple of his treasures survived, and apparently unlock secret chambers beneath his razed manor house, just south of Oxenfurt. Purchase the following from him (you'll need a total of 20 crowns):



Items: Quest Items: Lizard Figurine, Jade Figurine

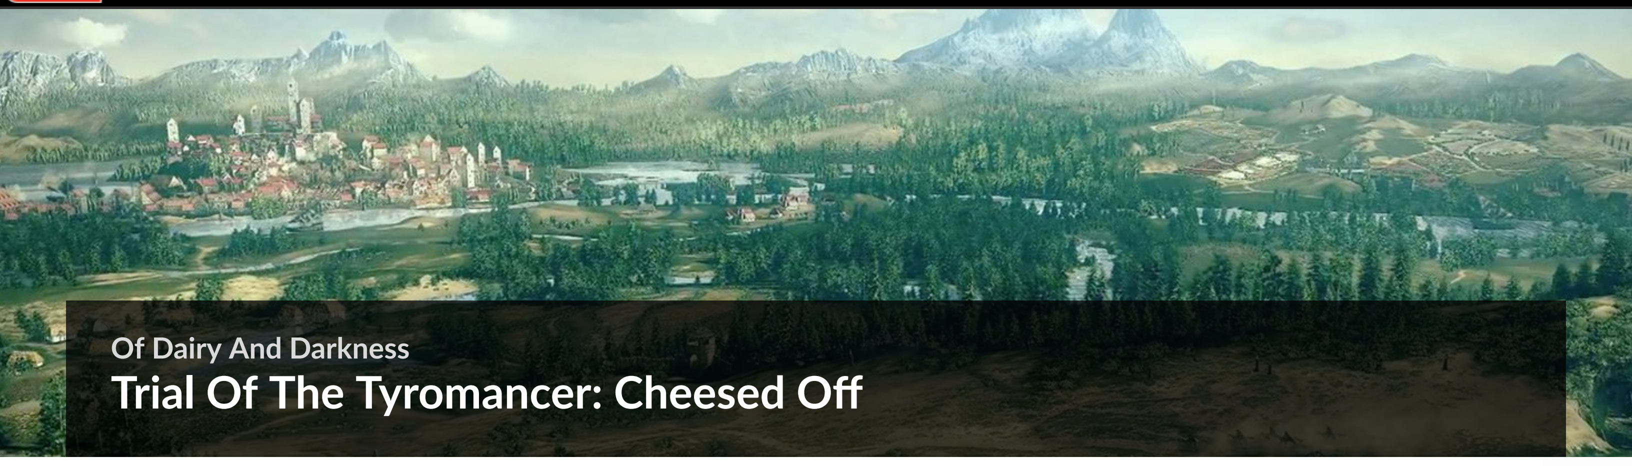
FURTHER CURIOSITIES

The Jade Figurine begins Secondary Quest: The Nobleman Statuette.

OBJECTIVES

- Search Aeramas' residence.
- Use Aeramas' artifacts to activate the portal.
- Use the portal in Aeramas' residence.
- Nearest Signpost: Aeramas' Abandoned Manor.

Travel to Aeramas' Abandoned Manor, where the mysterious stench of cheese hangs in the air, even overpowering the smells of a recently razed manor house. Climb up into the ruins and find the magic circle on the stone floor. Examine it with the artifacts in your possession, and a portal opens up. Step into the portal.



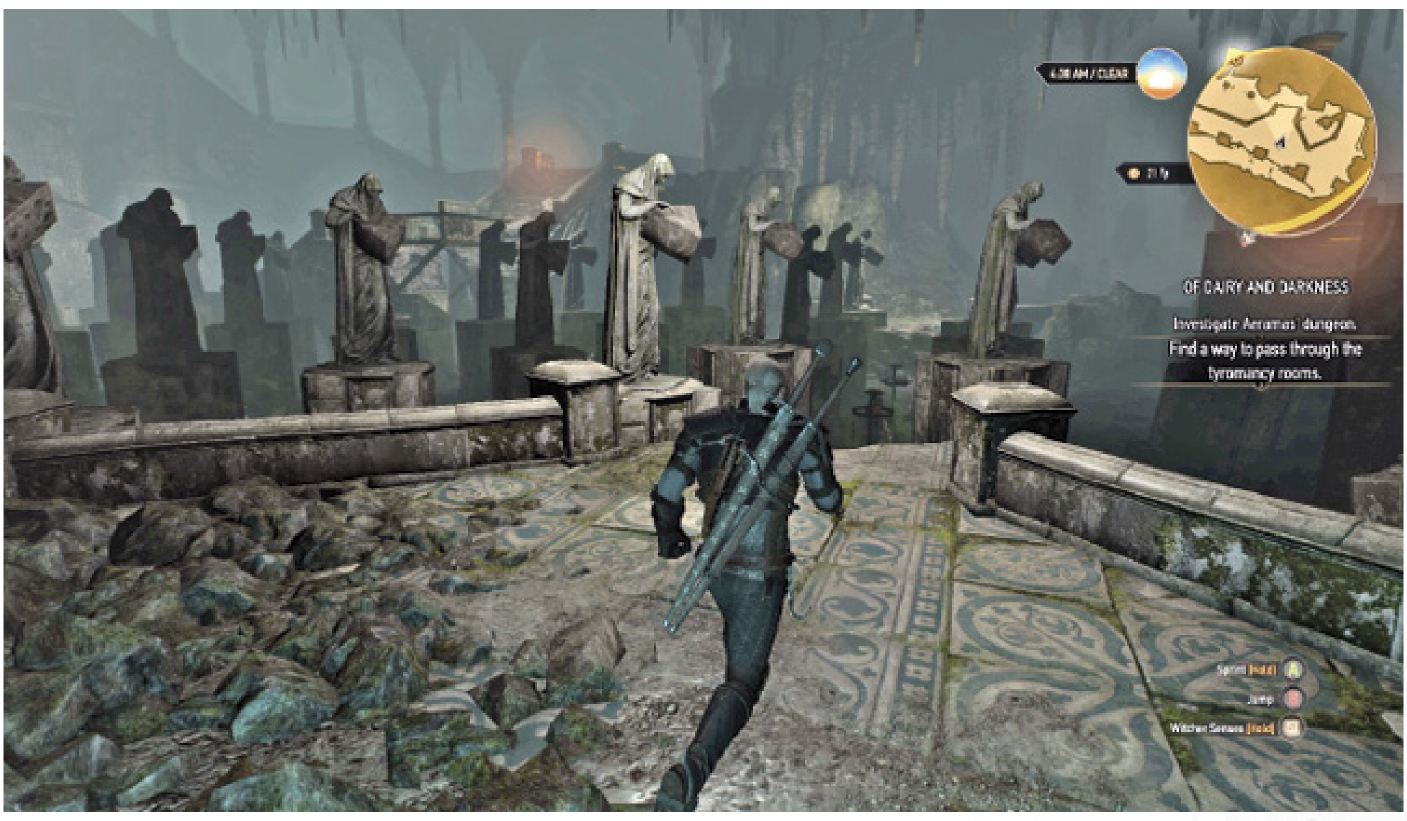
Of Dairy And Darkness

Trial Of The Tyromancer: Cheesed Off

OBJECTIVES

- Investigate Aeramas' dungeon.
- Find a way to pass through the tyromancy rooms.

You're transported underground, to a vast and impressive tyromancer's chamber. Study the rows of statues and giant glass jars, and look for the crumbling remains of a staircase on the opposite side of the room (as shown). Head there directly (you can move left, around the perimeter if you wish), as the smell of cheese becomes overpowering, and can kill you if you run out of air! Climb the stairs, and enter the portal.



OF DAIRY AND DARKNESS

Investigate Aeramas' dungeon.

Find a way to pass through the tyromancy rooms.

OBJECTIVES

- Find your way through the flooded chamber.

Descend some similar stone steps to an underground lake with two branching tunnels. Swim east, and you reach a cavern with walkways above that you can't reach. So swim north, diving down underwater and surfacing in an adjacent cavern, before scrambling up onto wet ground and rocks to climb over.

This has giant natural pillars and ornate floor tiles to traverse, and a broken bridge leading to Aeramas' laboratory. Rid the area of a foglet.

Inspect the area, using your Witcher Senses if you wish, to find some of Aeramas' notes (which you can optionally read) and another of his figurines. In one corner near a burning torch is the carcass of a cow to inspect. The laboratory itself contains a human corpse attached to a contraption of iron (and cheese).

Items: Quest Items: Bull Figurine, Aeramas' Notes

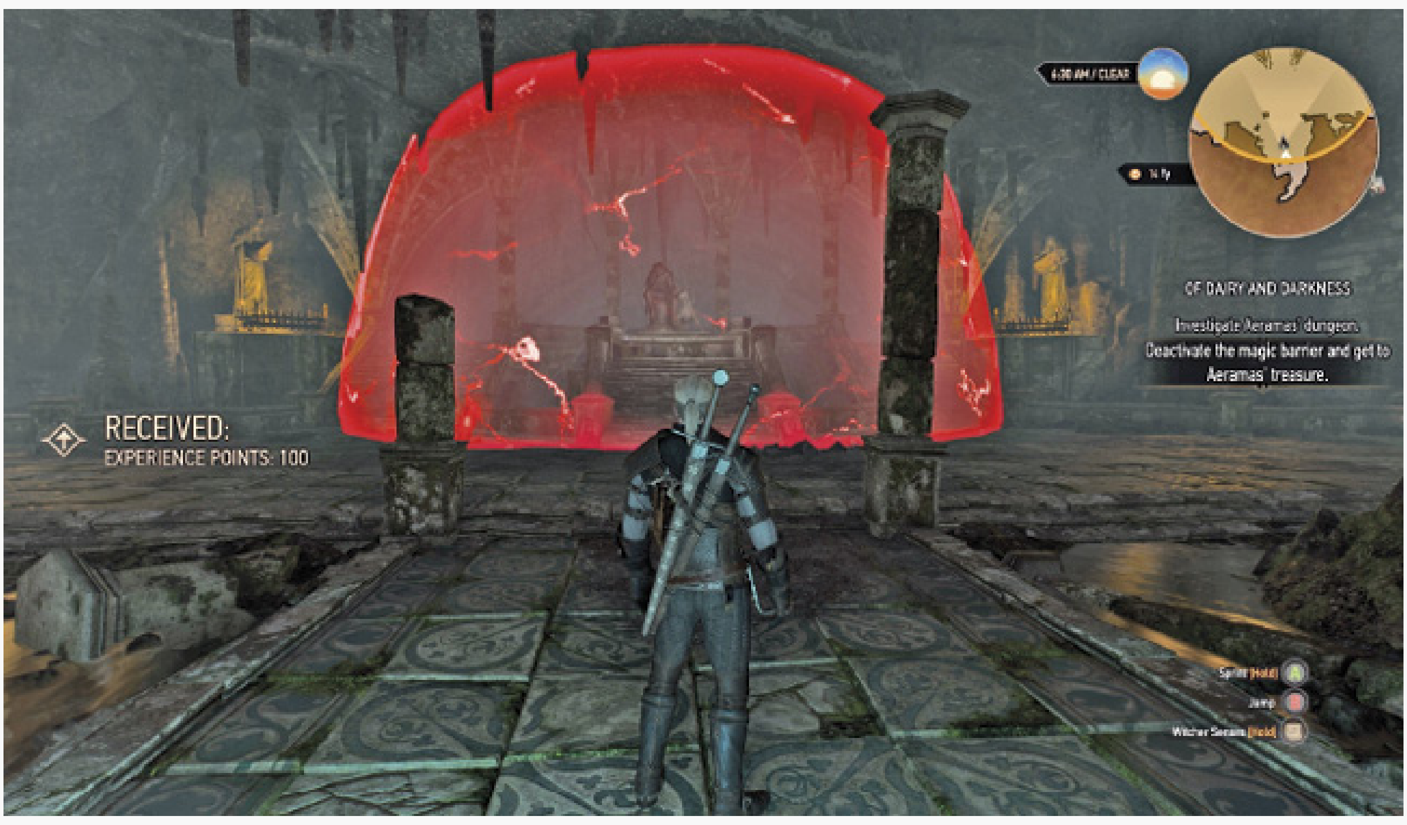
Beyond the cheese collection to the northwest is an archway. Locate another statue on Aeramas' desk, and use it to conjure the portal. You are transported to the final chamber.

END: THE SMELL OF VICTORY

OBJECTIVES

- Deactivate the magic barrier and get to Aeramas' treasure.

A large dome of crackling magic is preventing you from accessing Aeramas' fabled treasures, so investigate the alcove to the right of the barrier to find a small pyramid switch that reacts to your Igni sign. Find a second one on the opposite side, hidden behind an illusion (which you dispel using the Eye of Nehaleni. Light them both up!



RECEIVED:
EXPERIENCE POINTS: 100

OF DAIRY AND DARKNESS

Investigate Aeramas' dungeon.

Deactivate the magic barrier and get to Aeramas' treasure.

Once through, gather the treasure from the chest and the sword from the statue, before heading to a final archway behind the steps, activating it with the final figurine from the treasure chest, and transporting yourself back to the surface, where this quest concludes.

LOCATIONS: Var Attre Residence, Tretegor Gate, Seven Cats Inn
CHARACTERS: Var Attre Guard Captain, Rosa var Attre, Lucas, Kobe
ENEMIES: None
RECOMMENDED ITEMS: 50 Crowns, Axii Delusion Level 2

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the var Attre residence tomorrow to give Rosea fencing lessons.
- Meet with Rosa.
- Nearest Signpost: St. Gregory's Bridge.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible only after Main Quest: Broken Flowers has been completed, and you have waited (or adventured) for a full day after meeting Rosa var Attre and agreeing to return to teach her fencing.

Stride over to the Guard Captain at the Var Attre residence, who tells you Miss Rosa has left the confines of the residence, and walks near Temple Bridge. She requests your presence there.

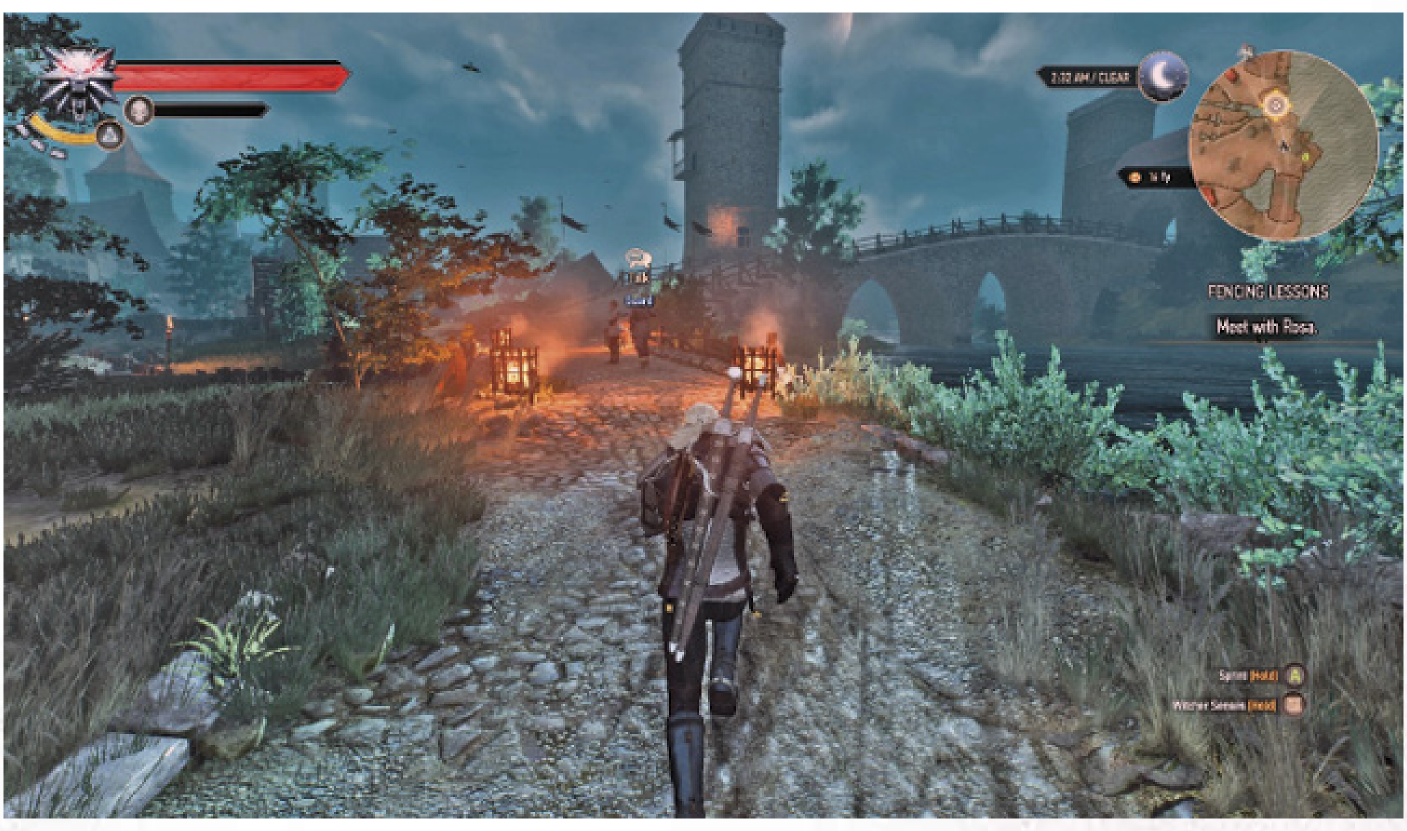
OBJECTIVES

- Follow Rosa.
- Defeat Rosa.

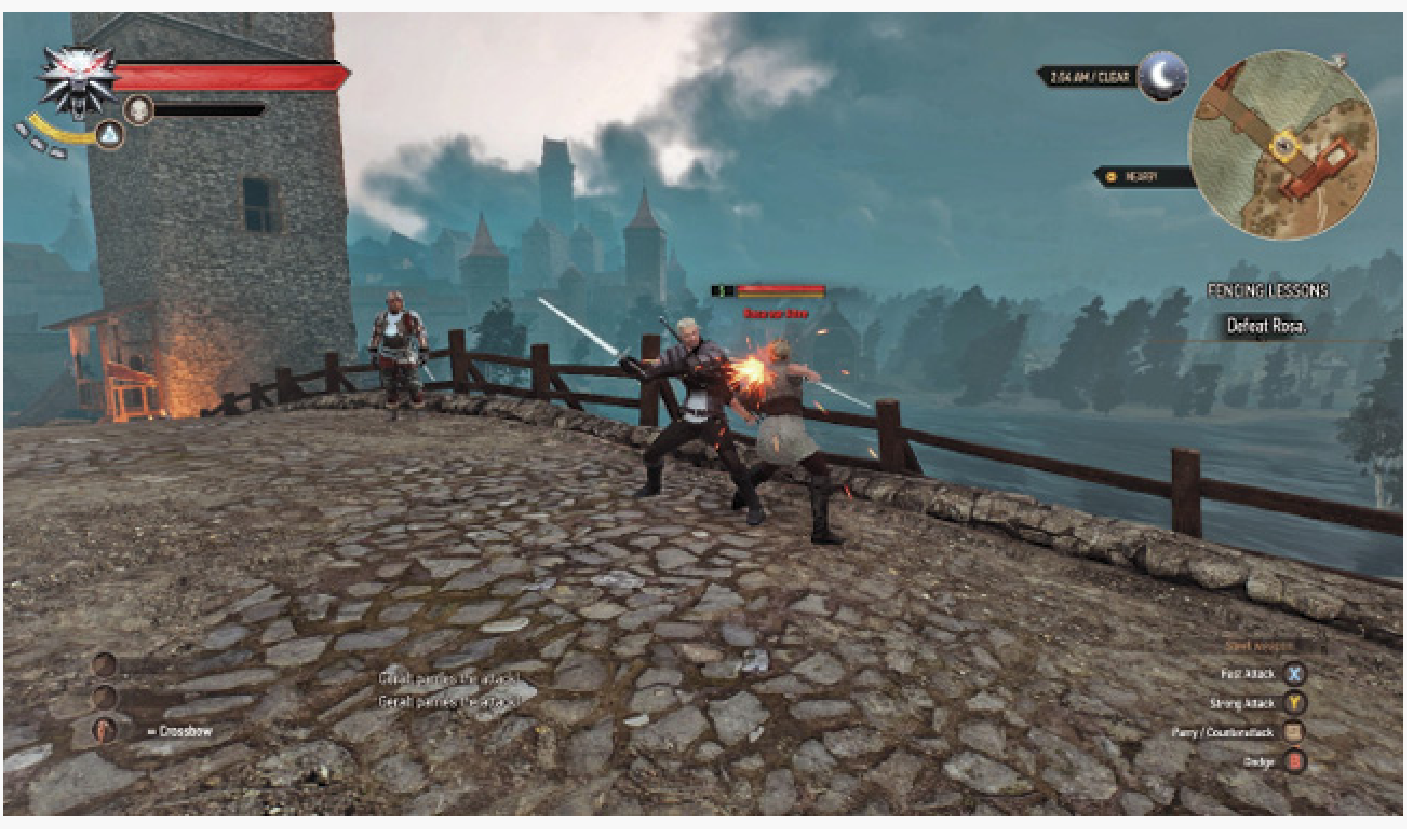
Rosa var Attre

It is a short dash through the city to the eastern outskirts by the Pontar river and the Tretegor Gate (signpost), where Rosa and her Nilfgaardian bodyguard are waiting to greet you. Speak with her and, after dismissing her protection with a petulant bark, she tells you to follow her. So much for the fencing lesson.



Follow Rosa onto the bridge spanning the river, where she orders you to fight her using real weapons, "like in the novels." Begin to battle, but after a few strikes, she thinks better of this tomfoolery, and yields. She asks you to turn as she adjusts the corset that is pinching her.

When you oblige, she disappears. As Rosa's diplomat father is more tiresome (and battle-hardened) than his daughter, you decide to find her.



QUEST CONCLUSION: THE NERVE OF NILGAARDIANS

OBJECTIVES

- Find Rosa.
- (Optional) Defeat the drunks harassing Rosa.

It only takes a moment using your Witcher Senses to find her fresh footprints, and follow them southward, down the road to the Seven Cats Inn just outside town. Rosa is being pestered by two drunk yokels, named Lucas and Kobe. You can tell the two pissants to:

- Piss off. This starts a one-sided fight between you and both of them, and you should quickly cut them down.
- (50 Crowns) Offer some coin for them to leave. They mutter a few more obscenities, and depart without incident.
- (Axii Level 2) Tell them to apologize and leave. They duly oblige, and depart without incident.

Afterwards, Rosa's arrogant and poisonous verbiage continues, leaving you with little doubt as to why the Nilfgaard are hated in these parts. As you part, the quest concludes.

THE NOBLEMAN STATUETTE

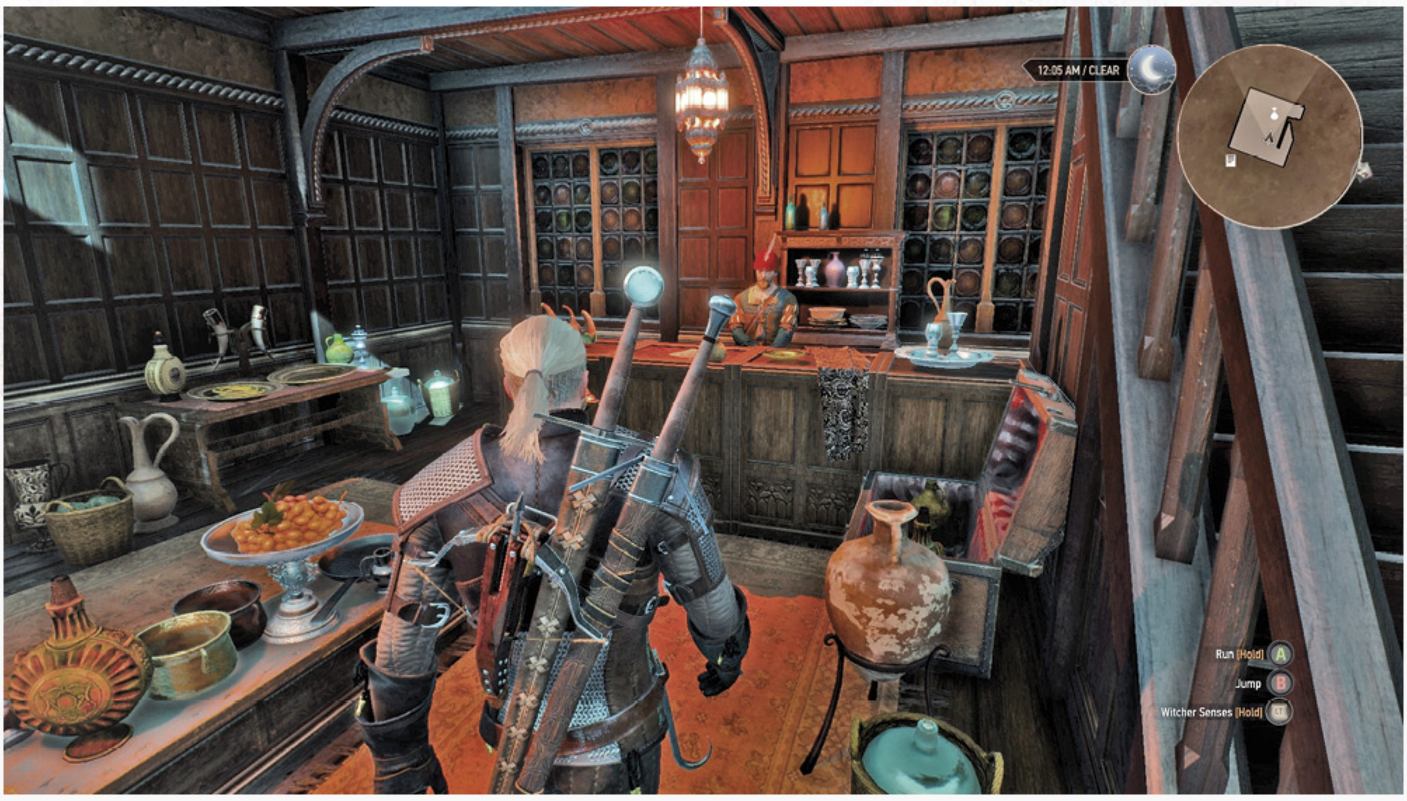
LOCATIONS: Novigrad Merchant (St. Gregory's Bridge)
CHARACTERS: Merchant, Triss, Nobleman, Coral
RECOMMENDED ITEM: 20 Crowns

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Triss about the statuette.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest should be undertaken any time before the end of Secondary Quest: Now or Never. Triss Merigold is needed for this investigation.



Access the store adjacent to the Notice Board in Gildorf Square, and inspect the store owner's wares. The chap is particular keen on pushing a collection of artifacts belonging to a mage called Aeramas. Recently burned at the stake, a couple of his treasures survived, and one of them has strange, mystical properties, apparently. Buy both:

Items: Quest Items: Lizard Figurine, Jade Figurine

FURTHER CURIOSITIES

The Lizard Figurine begins Secondary Quest: Of Dairy and Darkness.

Triss will either be at her hideout (the Crooked House in The Bits) or at the Rosemary and Thyme, depending on your questing status. Speak to her and ask her to take a look at the figurine. She studies it for a moment. It is an artifact compression of a nobleman trapped in the statue! She takes you into The Bits. Ask to lift the spell, and a startled nobleman appears. It transpires he was trapped here by Coral (a name the sorceress Lytta Neyd used). Ask about his entrapment, and receive a small reward before the nobleman bids you farewell.

The Soldier Statuette

Yn All'an Daonna Ar Ais... (Again)!

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

THE SOLDIER STATUETTE

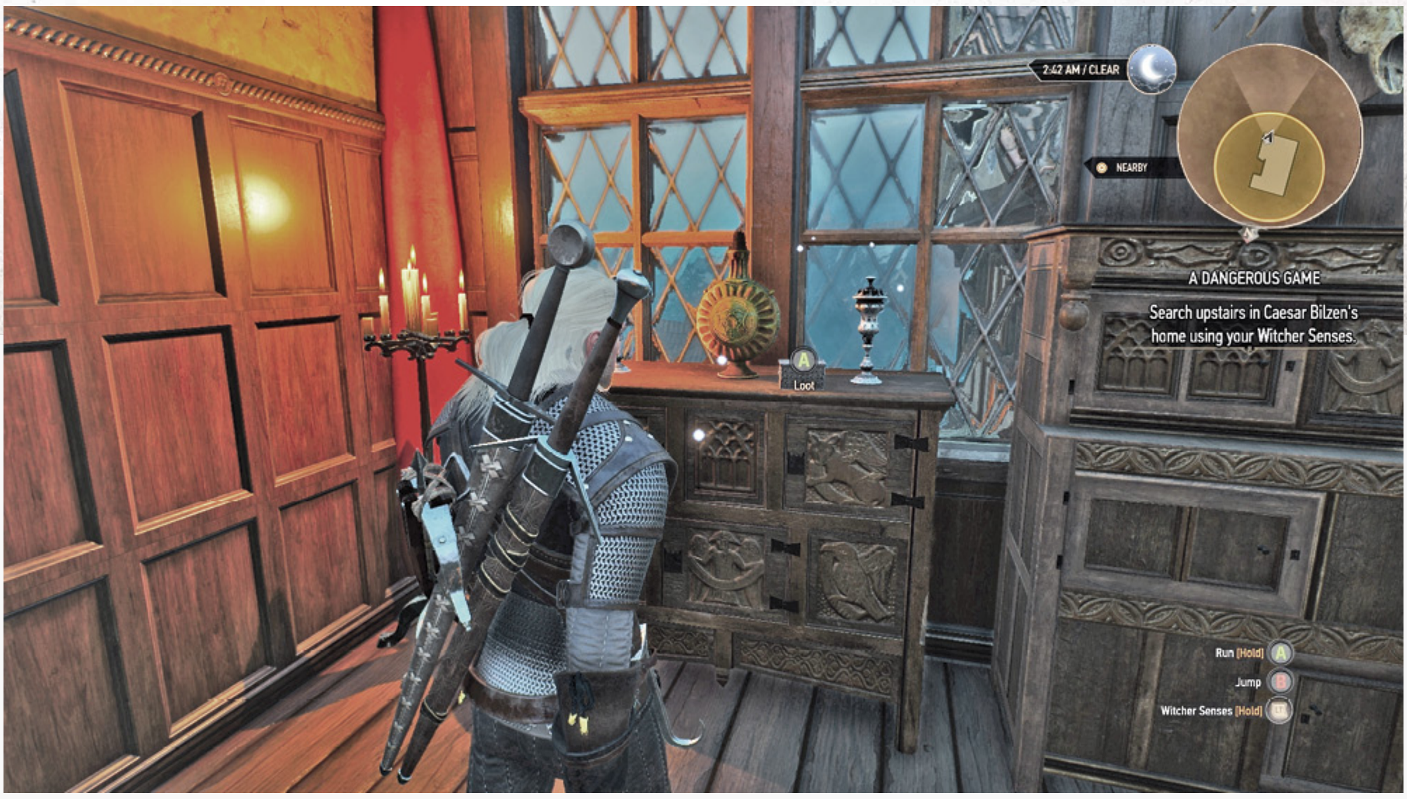
LOCATIONS: Caesar's House, Hierarch Square

CHARACTERS: Caesar Bilzen, Zoltan, Triss, Nilfgaardian Soldier, Coral

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Triss about the statuette.

During your surreptitious stealing of a Gwent card for Zoltan, during Secondary Quest: A Dangerous Game, your pilfering of Caesar Bilzen's townhouse off Hierarch Square nets you an interesting trinket—a strange Jade Figurine. Triss might know more about this.



QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest should be undertaken any time before the end of Secondary Quest: Now or Never. Triss Merigold is needed for this investigation. You must have completed Secondary Quest: A Dangerous Game first.

Items: Quest Item: Jade Figurine

Triss will either be at her hideout (the Crooked House in The Bits) or at the Rosemary and Thyme, depending on your questing status. Speak to her and ask her to take a look at the figurine. She looks it over. It is an artifact compression of a soldier trapped in the statue! She takes you into The Bits. A Tome Entombed

A Grave Discovery

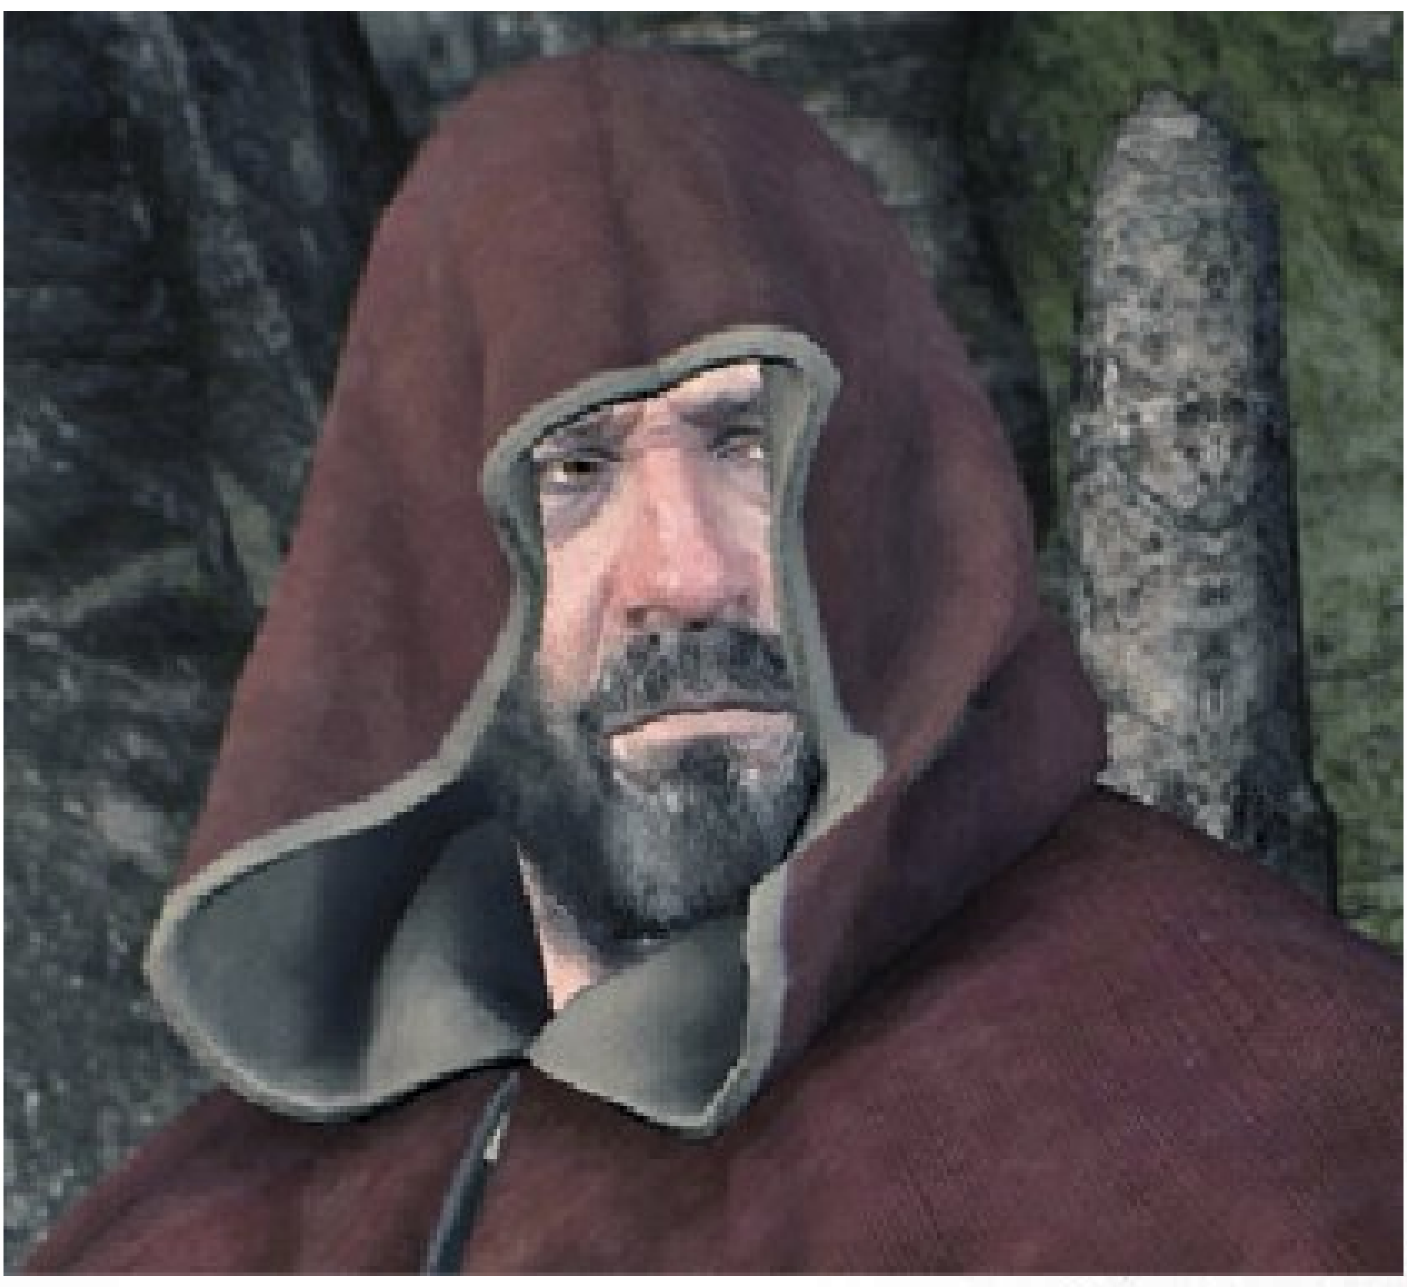
DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

A TOME ENTOMBED

LOCATIONS: The Bits District, Gildorf Sewers
CHARACTERS: Professor Vairmont Jonne
ENEMIES: Katakan

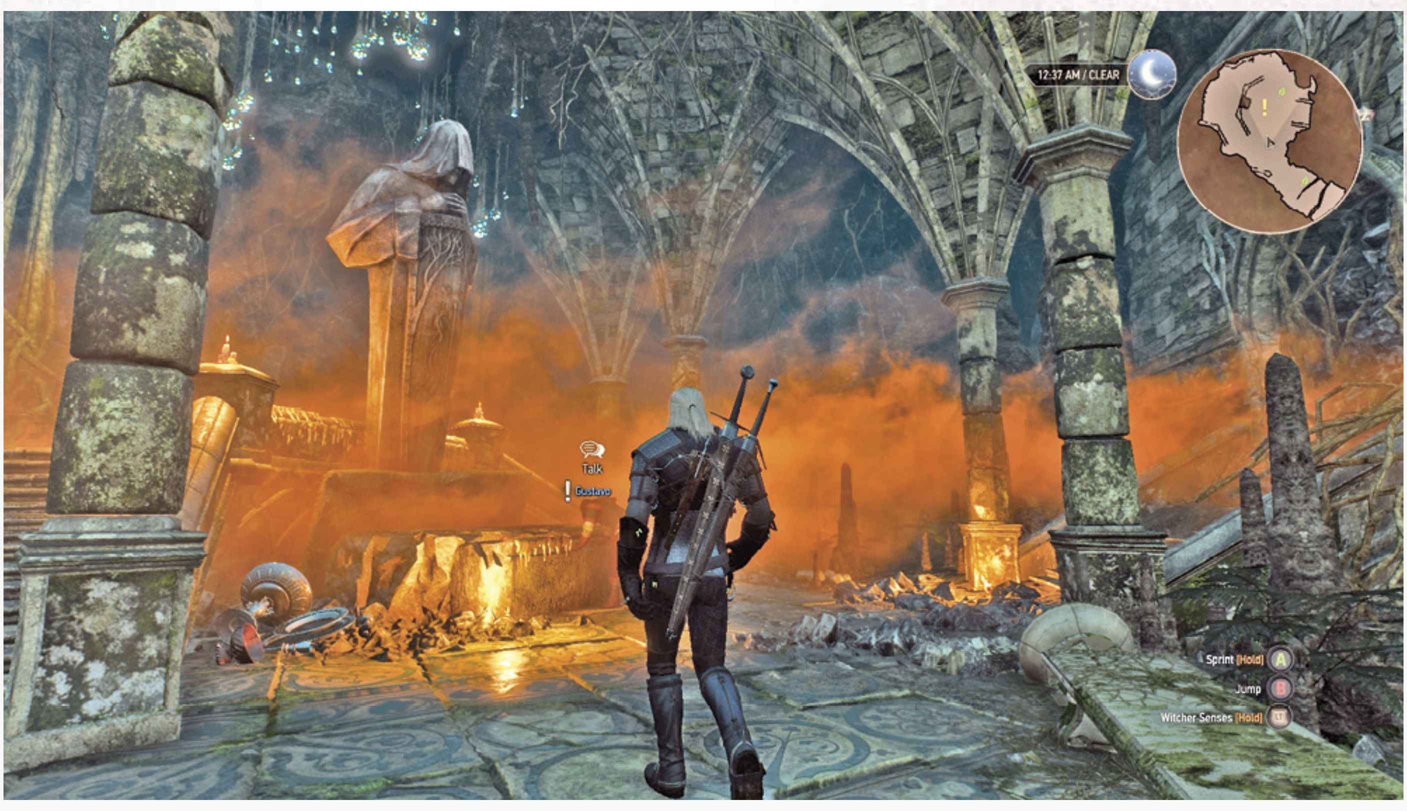
OBJECTIVES

- Nearest Signpost: East of Hierarch Square.



Professor Vairmont Jonne

Enter the sewers (as shown) from this entrance in the central-east part of the main Novigrad island. Turn left at the first junction, left again, and heading down a long flight of stone steps. Continue through a gap in the grating as the stairs continue down, and in the lower junction chamber, head straight across to a brick tunnel that curves to the left. Once in the sub-junction chamber, turn and face the cracked wall to the southwest. With a conjuring of Aard, you pummel the wall to reveal an old crypt entrance. That too, is walled up, so summon Aard again.



Climb down into the large crypt, where a grave-robber is trying (unsuccessfully) to push the huge stone lid off the massive coffin in the center of this mausoleum. Speak to him, and he reveals himself to be a scholar from Oxenfurt University. Apparently, the sarcophagus contains a priceless elven tome (the Dar'Ah Manuscript) and he hopes you can help him find it. Agree to open the coffin.

END: WHO DARES DISTURB MY REST?

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the vampire.

A body clad in black fineries is revealed. It peers up, asking if it is 1358 yet. You explain this is a regenerating vampire, as the bloodsucker pulls its lid back. Jonne didn't have the chance to check for the book, so he asks to push the lid open again. Agree (or don't at the quest stalls). The second disturbance angers the vampire so much, it transforms into its more… "toothy" form. Slay this Katakan (using tactics from the Bestiary chapter). Afterwards, Jonne is still unlucky in his tome search, and the quest concludes.

An Angry Old Coot And A Two-Legged Wolf

Locations: Yanina's Cottage, Dancing Windmill

Characters: Yanina, Petey

Enemies: None

OBJECTIVES

- Find out what's been stealing the old woman's chickens.
- Nearest Signposts: Dancing Windmill, Honeyfill Meadworks.

Seek out a lone cottage amid the fields just west of the Dancing Windmill, and you'll come across a wailing woman, furious that her hens have been taken, one at a time, by a wolf that seems to walk on its hindlegs. Agree to find and slay this dangerous monster.

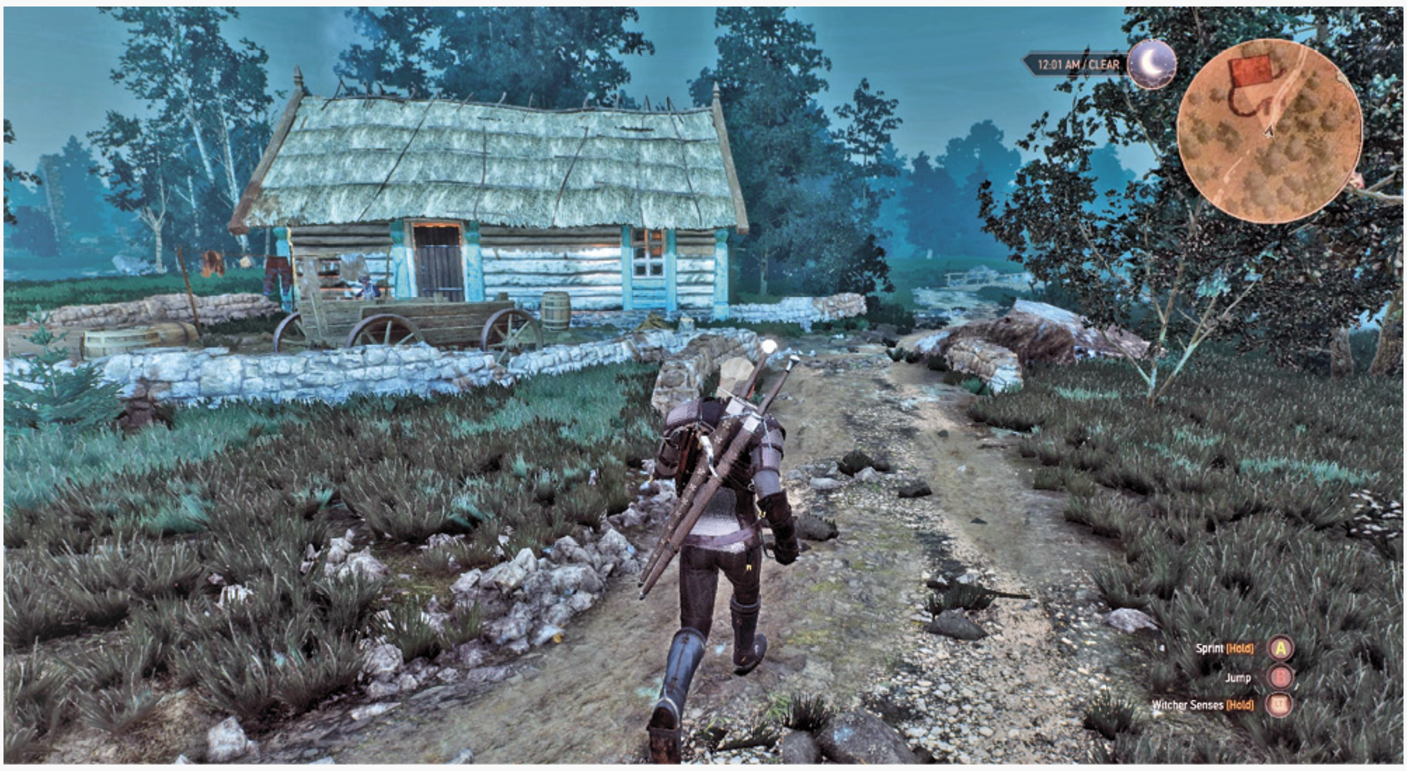
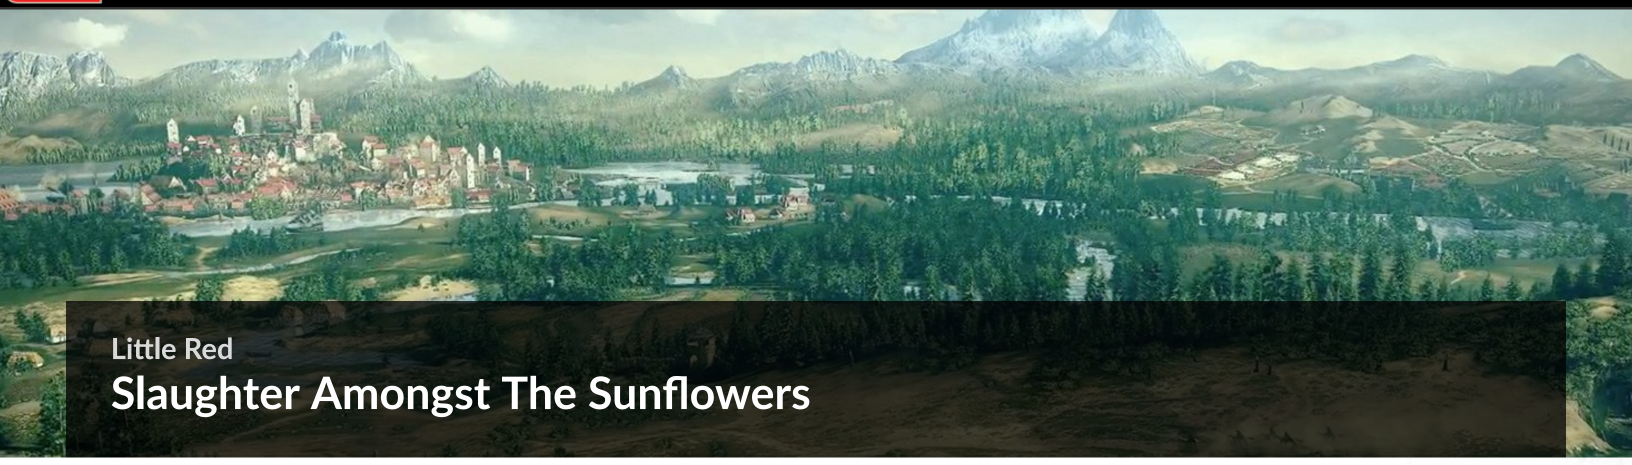
Locate the wolf prints nearby. Then travel roughly southward, toward a pond, and there are small footprints near to the tracks, but no sign of a struggle. Wade across the pond, and look for a small tent, with three children sitting around a campfire. You speak to their leader, and chief chicken-catcher (Petey) about the tracks (which they made), and listen to a poignant story about their predicament.



OBJECTIVES

- Convince the old woman to take in the children.

Leave the urchins and return to Yanina's cottage, and speak to her again. After letting her know about the children, mention they could live with her, and her tone softens. She'll think about your offer. This quest concludes.



Little Red

Slaughter Amongst The Sunflowers

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

LITTLE RED

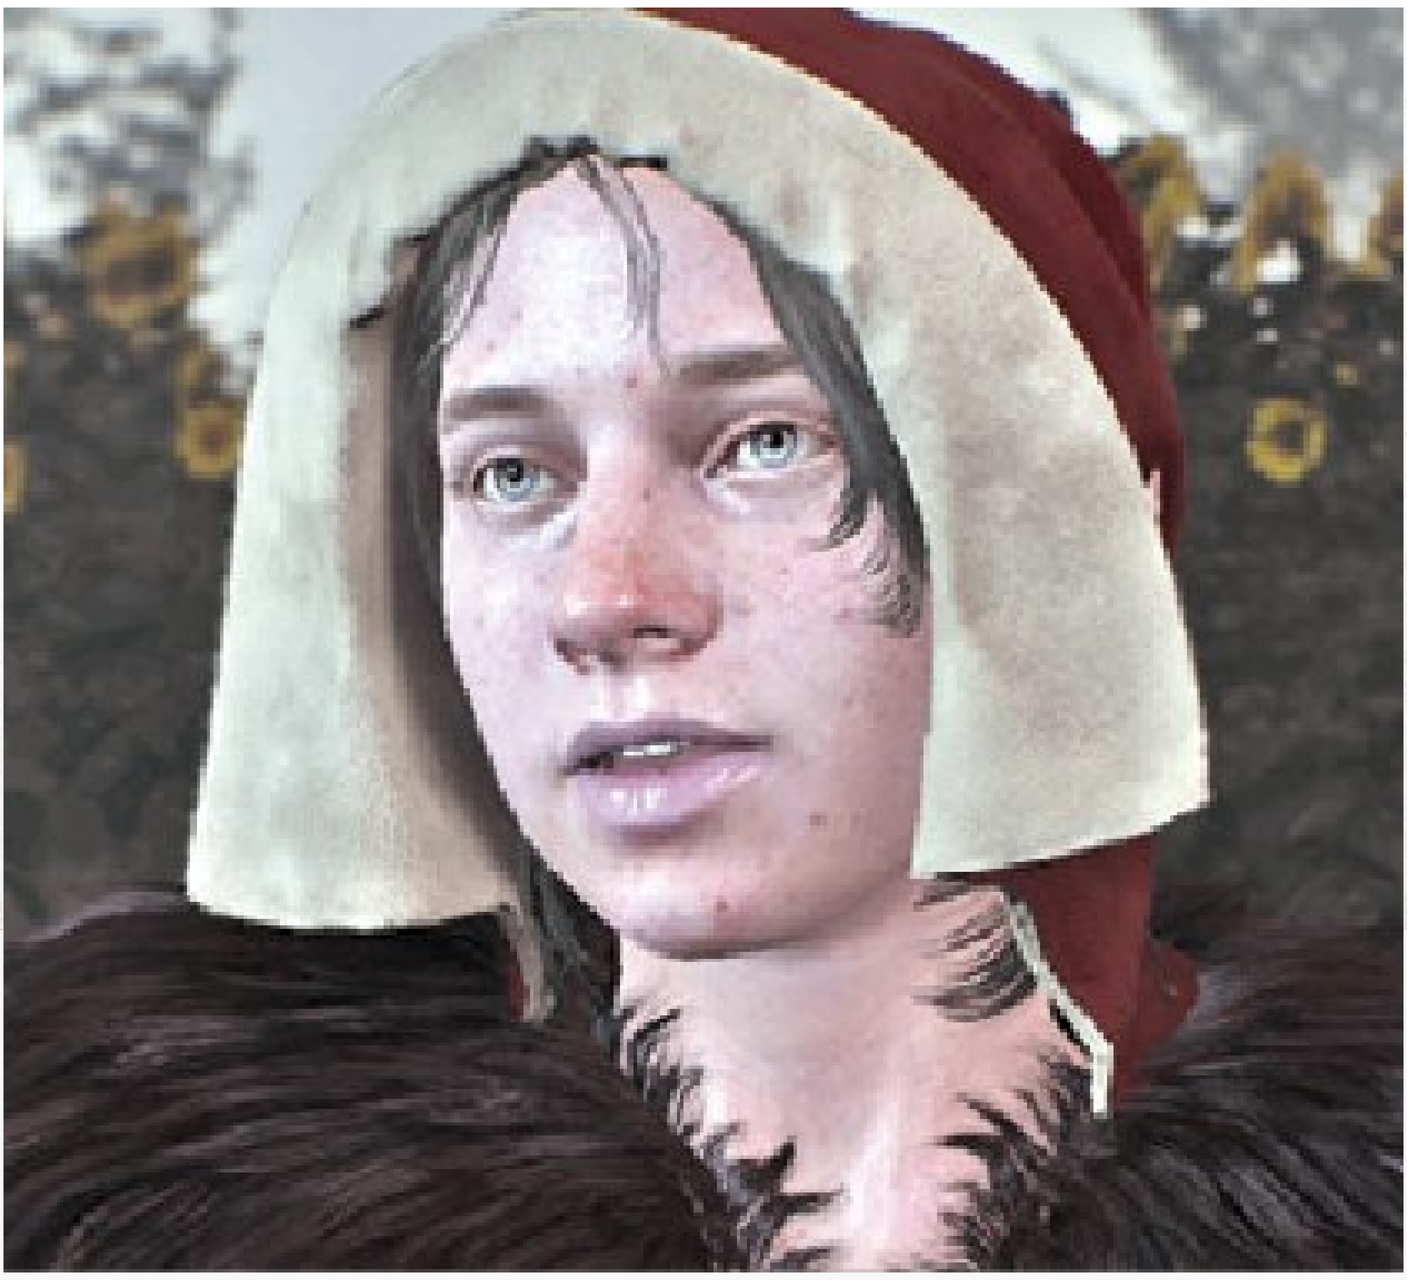
LOCATION: Beanston

CHARACTERS: Bertram, Peasants, Little Red, Ealdorman

ENEMIES: Werewolf, Bandits

OBJECTIVES

- Wait until dusk for Little Red's band to attack.



Little Red, the "She-Wolf"

Enter the village of Beanston during daylight hours (ideally around midday) and looking out for a cluster of villagers on the west side of the settlement, speaking in anxious whispers. Ask what troubles them, and then tell of a band of inhuman bandits that wish revenge on Bertram, one of the villagers. They lay on the description of the bandit's leader (Little Red) a bit thick. She's apparently a she-beast in a human husk! Bertram ratted on Little Red to witch hunters, a fact that seems a little strange, but agree to help anyway.

END: BLOOD OR BANDITRY

Stay in the center of the village and meditate until dusk (around 17:00). Little Red and her band approach from either side of the village. She may not be the "great beauty" the villagers told you about, but she certainly has charisma. Enough to warn you not to test her. She also explains the real reason why she's come to kill Bertram (he's a greedy, double-crossing thief). Now you have a choice. You can:

- Tell her "do what you gotta," and she walks into town, slays Bertram, and pays you for your understanding.

Items: 20 Crowns

- Tell her "leave or there will be blood," and she agrees, transforming into a werewolf, and pouncing on you. Combat can be tricky. Focus on the bandits first and avoid the she-beast by using Yrden to slow her down. Slay her and four bandits with her, before meeting with the village ealdorman for your protection reward. Afterwards, feel free to search Little Red's hairy corpse for her diary.

Items: 10 Crowns, Quest Item: Diary of Little Red

Novigrad Hospitality

Sit, A Spell

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

NOVIGRAD HOSPITALITY

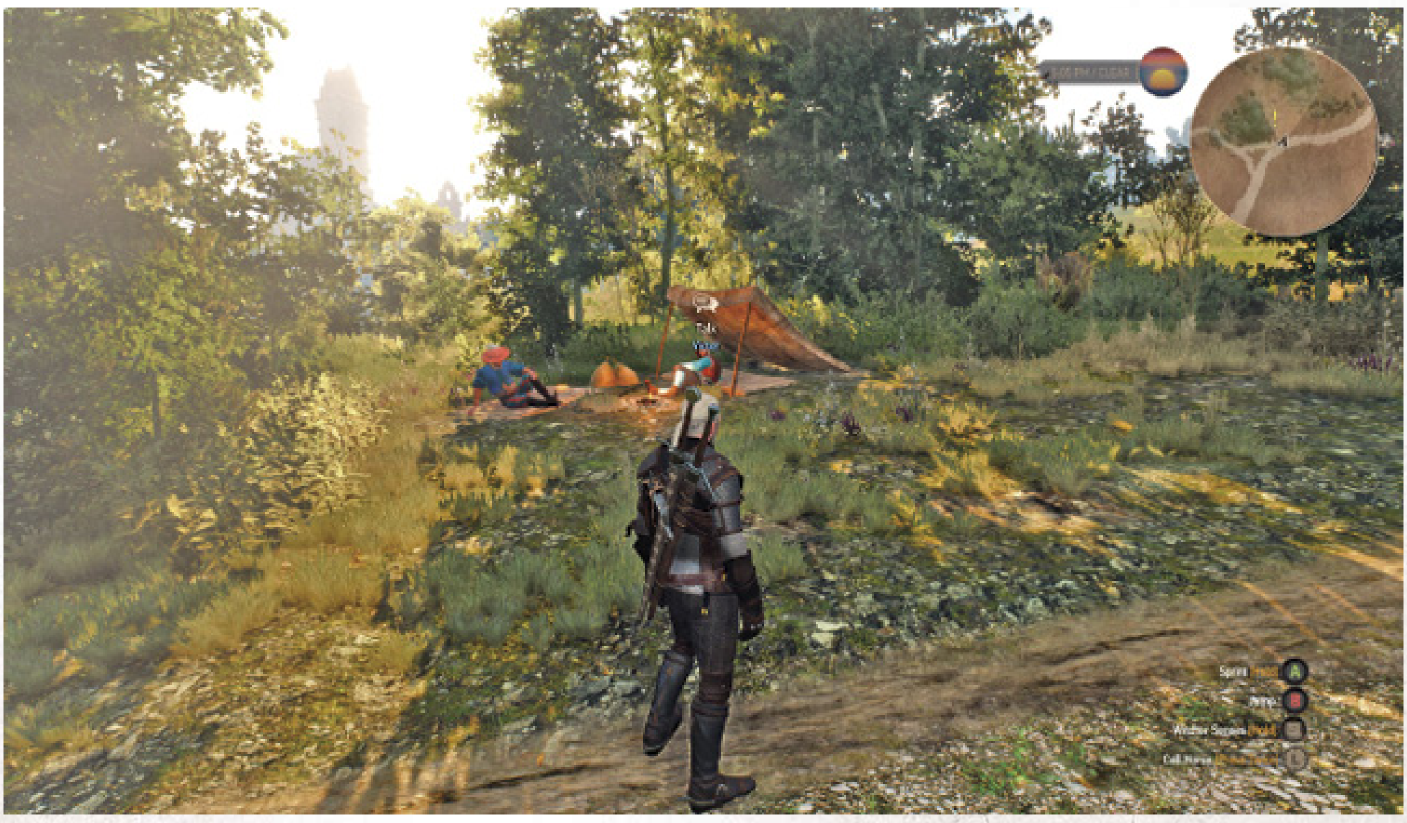
Location (and Map page): Beanston

CHARACTERS: Gascogne, Victor

OBJECTIVES

- Track down the bards using your Witcher Senses and recover your equipment.

At the end of the sunflower fields, on the road from Beanston to Chateau Sarrasin, you may hear the wistful tones of a bard reciting some poetry. Meet Victor and Gascogne, two friendly fellows who seek inspiration anywhere, and summon it using vodka. Would you like to drink? To poetry? Gladly accept to start this quest.

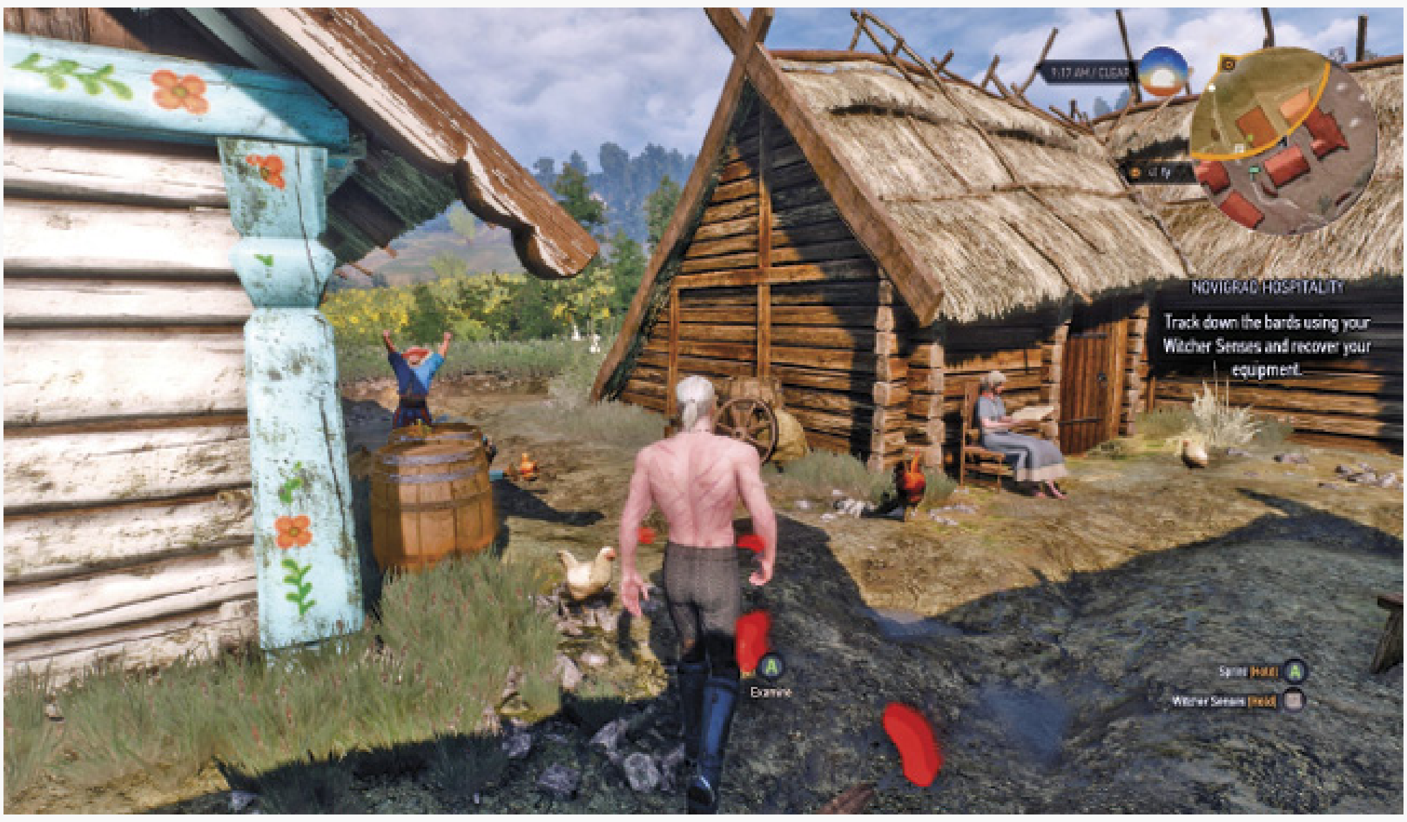


Late into the evening, a heady mixture of roasted apple and various alcoholic beverages has made you tired and inept. You decide that you've had enough, or call for one last round.

You wake with Gascogne and Victor long since departed. They've taken the tent, the alcohol, and all your equipment!

END: TROUBLESOME TROUBADOURS

You don't want to rely purely on your fists for the rest of the adventure, go southeast toward Beanston, and look for footprints in the objective area using your Witcher Senses. These idiots are easy to track—all the way into Beanston. Make a left at the Notice Board, and find the fools celebrating behind the pub.



NOVIGRAD HOSPITALITY

You take the clothes (their garb can only be sold as junk—the real prize is revenge!). Either way, the quest concludes.

Spooked Mare

A Peasant's Plea

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

SPOOKED MARE

LOCATIONS: Peasant's Cottage, Crossroads

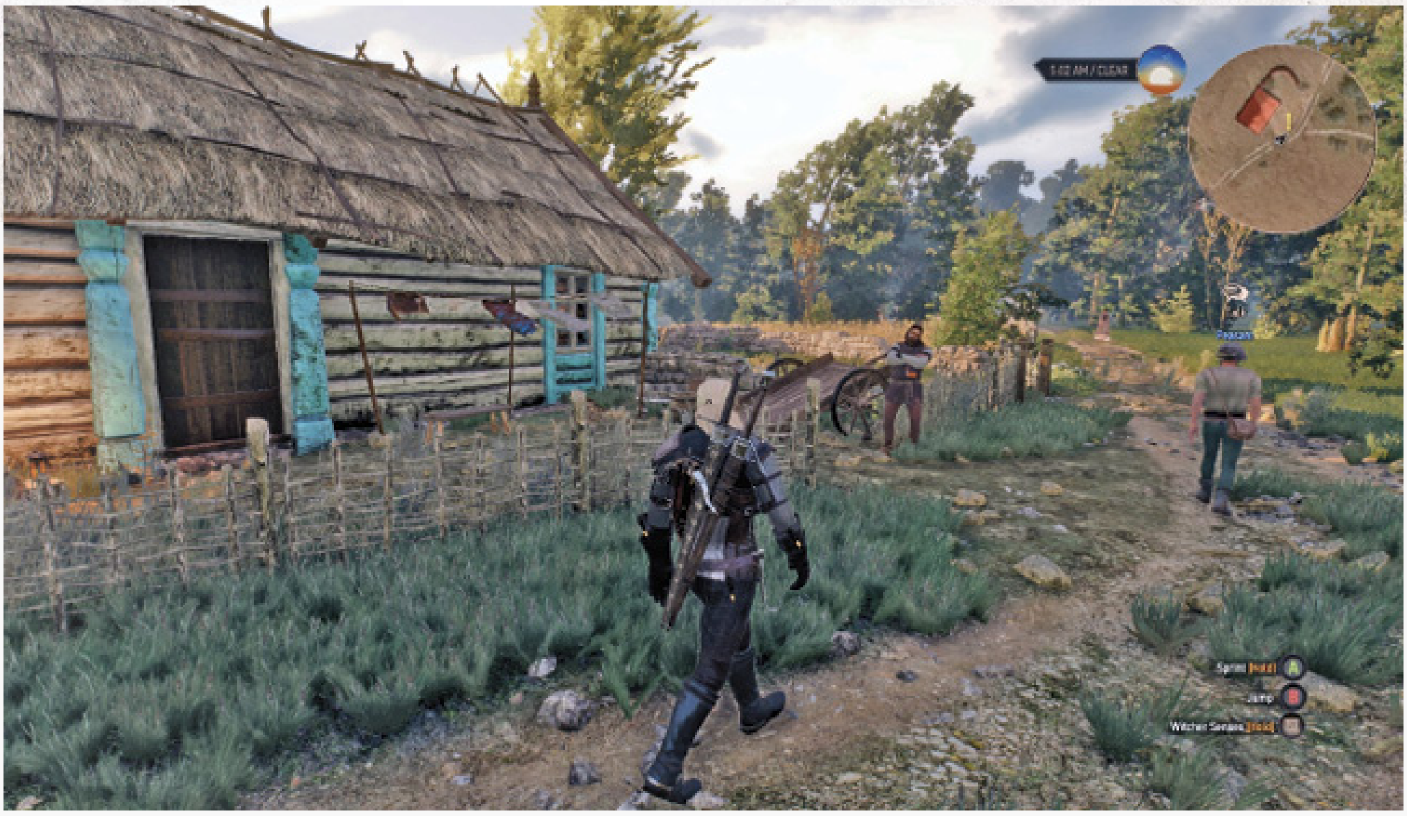
CHARACTERS: Peasant, Scoia'tael Commander

ENEMIES: Wolves, Scoia'tael

OBJECTIVES

- Find the missing horse.
- Nearest Signpost: North of Crossroads.

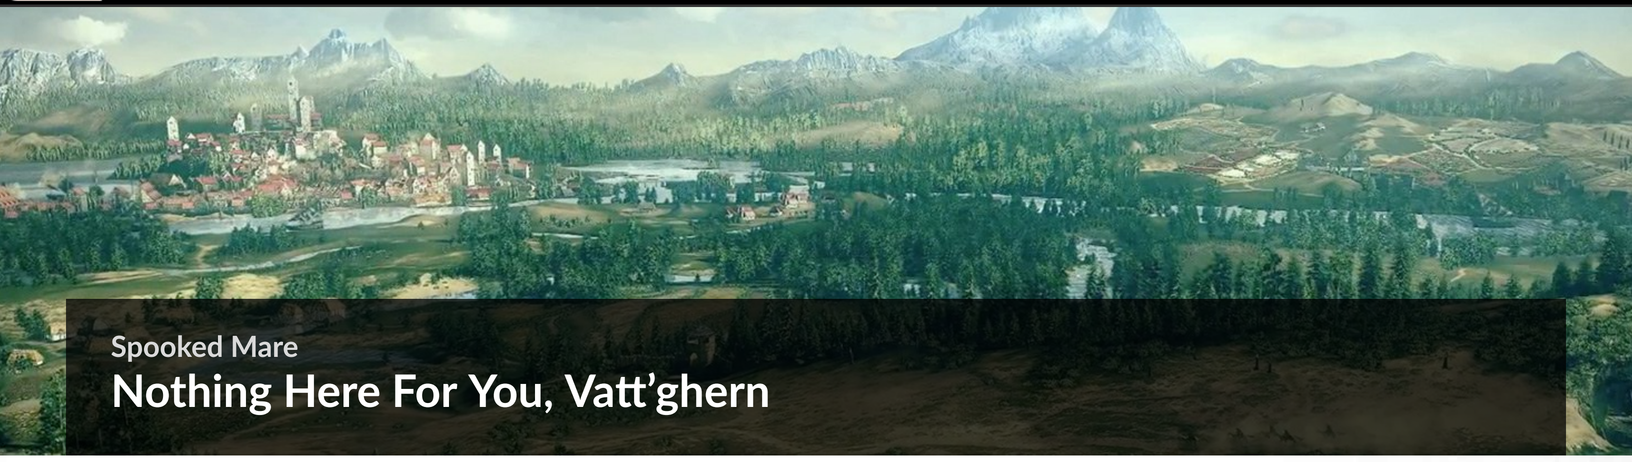
On the riverside pathway north of Crossroads, and southeast of the eastern gate into Oxenfurt, lies a peasant's cottage with a perturbed inhabitant. He pleads with you to find his mare—a "woodland spook" made off with her. Agree to find the horse, and use your Witcher Senses on the hoofprints adjacent to the peasant.



OLD GRAY MARE

When speaking to the peasant, listen to the description of the mare (gray, and twice as old, with legs as crooked as his dead wife's). Now you know which horse to search for.

Track the hoofprints south and southeast, across a pond, and into a forested area heading eastwards and upslope slightly. Pause for a swift fight against a pack of seven wolves, before continuing to track the prints to a makeshift pen, and a group of Scoia'tael.



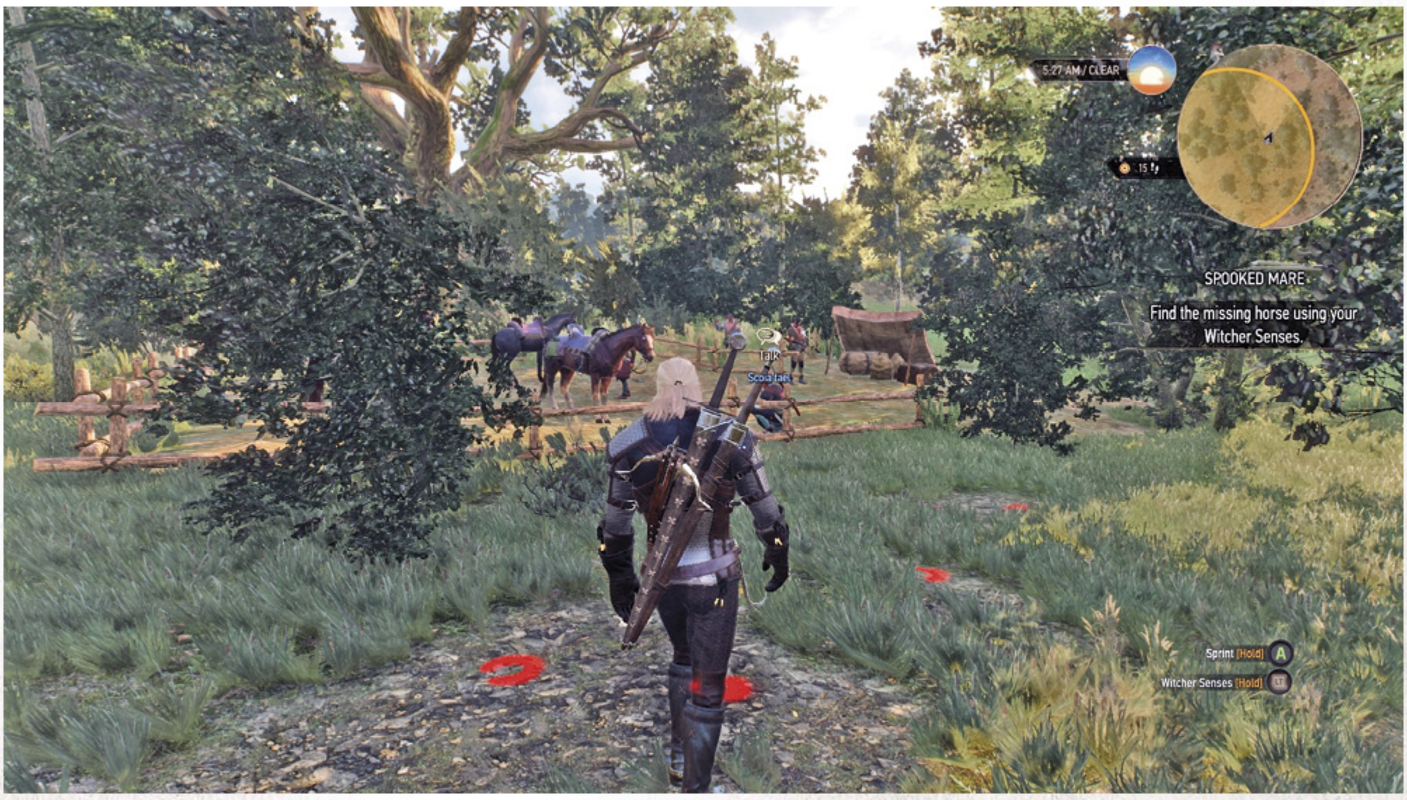
Spooked Mare

Nothing Here For You, Vatt'ghern

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Defeat the Scoia'tael.
- Lead the horse into the enclosure.

Venture into the enclosure, and you're stopped by the Scoia'tael commander, whose imposed stature masks the terrible state he and his brethren are in. They are gathering horses to transport their wounded, and don't have the crowns to buy any. Your reaction to the elf marks you for the rest of this quest. You can tell the Scoia'tael:



That one of the horses is going back to its owner: The Scoia'tael's tone turns threatening. Placate or encourage violence by:

- (100 Crowns) Paying for the peasant's horse. You can now choose the gray mare, and ride it back to the peasant's cottage.
- (Axii Delusion Level 2) Requesting the Scoia'tael give you the horse. Take only one horse; try to pick a different horse or more than one, and the elves turn violent.

Or start a fight with the elves.

- They need the horses more than the peasants. The elf agrees, there is no combat, but your quest fails.

If your meeting with the Scoia'tael ends violently, you have four adversaries to slay, and an additional four horses that become spooked. Calm them using your Witcher Senses, and then use Axii to calm it down, so you're able to ride the horse without being thrown off.

A HORSE, OF COURSE!

The peasant's horse is named "Horse," while the other mares the Scoia'tael have collected are named "Wild Horse."

END: A BIT OF HORSE PLAY

Return to the peasant's cottage riding a horse—any horse except for Roach. If the horse is a gray mare, he thanks you for your diligence. If the horse is a Wild Horse, the peasant remarks that the beast isn't the mare he asked for, but he pays you your reward anyway. Either way, the quest then concludes.

END: DEATH WAS JUST A CHANCE AWAY

Whether you attempt to calm the situation or not, Rufus unsheathes his sword and claims Manfred is a spy! You can, through your conversation, stay out of the fight, help Rufus (and slay Manfred), or help Manfred and slay Rufus. Or just stay out of it. The survivor rewards you justly, with a diagram. Otherwise, you receive nothing. Then the quest concludes.

ENEMIES: Redanian Soldiers

It seems a refugee has had the bad luck to run into a Redanian patrol on the road just southwest of Wheat Fields, and is pleading to let him through to Novigrad. Your conversation options rule the fate of the refugee and guards. You can:

- (100 Crowns) Pay the guards off, allowing the refugee through.
- (Axii Delusion Level 2) Flummox the guards into letting the refugee pass.
- Add a degree of menace to your request, and fight the three guards before the refugee is able to walk freely past.
- Or ignore the refugee, telling him he's on his own.

As the quest concludes, if you helped the refugee, he tells you of a hidden tomb below Downwarren, fair brimming with trinkles of worth. This refers to the Dragonslayer's Tomb. Consult this guide's Atlas to discover what treasures this holds.

LOCATIONS: Borsodi Auction House (Oxenfurt), Books and Scrolls (Novigrad)

CHARACTERS: Yaromir Ivanovitz Zaytsev, Marcus T. K. Hodgson

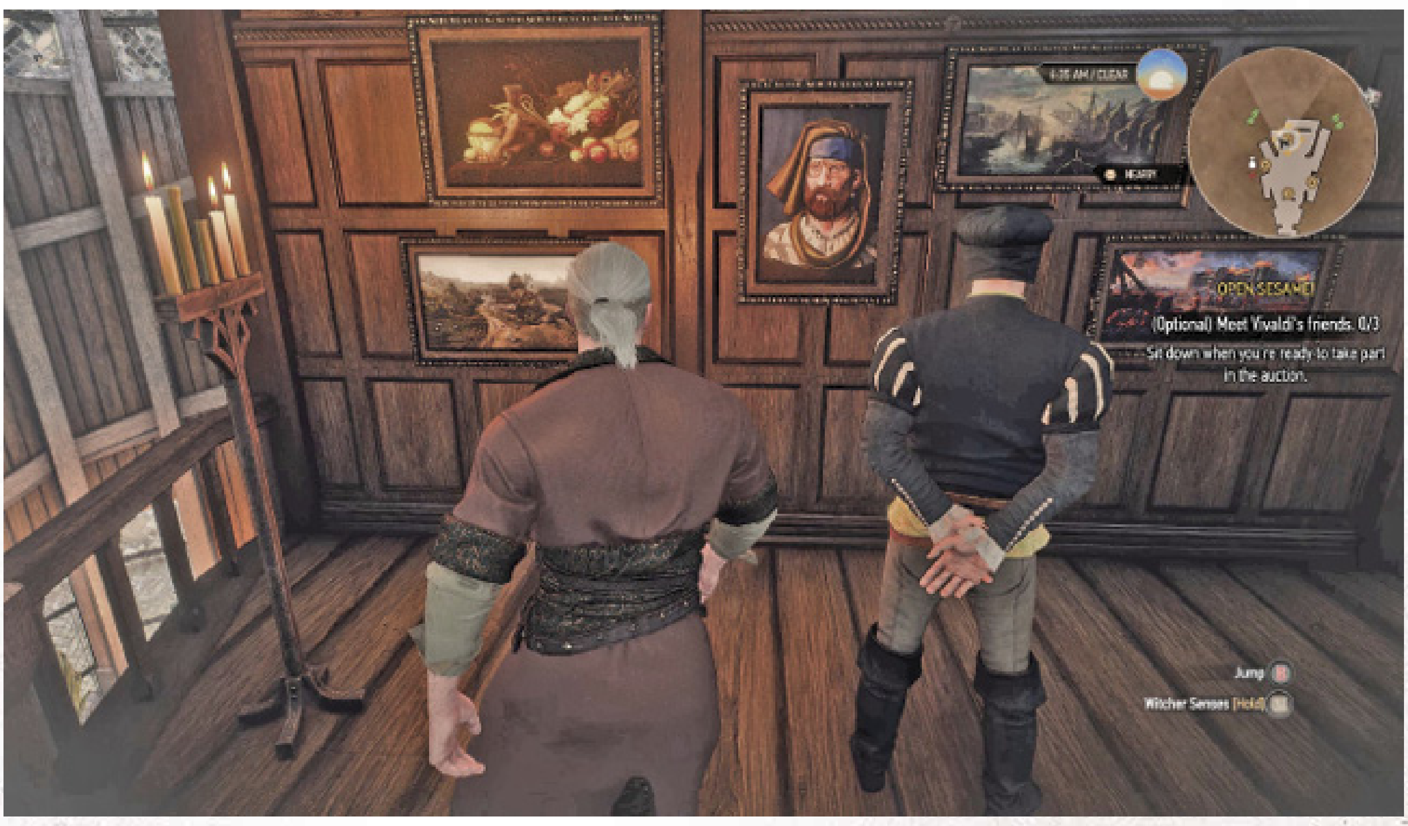
RECOMMENDED ITEMS: Up to 60 Crowns

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This Quest is only accessible during Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame. It starts during the first part of this main quest, when you are meeting some of Vimme Vivaldi's associates before the auction starts. Consult that quest for information not pertinent to this quest.

Once you're inside the auction house, complete part of the Main Quest (Open Sesame) objective "Meet Vivaldi's friends (3)." Walk over to the wall of paintings, which is being admired by the hoity-toity art dealer Yaromir. He has a disdain in his voice, and looks down his long nose at the likes of you. Before chatting to him, you may want to further your art appreciation by memorizing the paintings on the wall.

Start your chat with Yaromir, and tell him you have "a bit" of knowledge about art. Yaromir takes this as an opportunity to embarrass both you and the dwarf, and asks you to point out which painting is by Edward van der Knoob, the master from Maribor.



OPEN SESAME

(Optional) Meet Vivaldi's friends. 0/3

Sit down when you're ready to take part in the auction.

Indicate the portrait of the merchant, and Yaromir is taken aback, asks for a brief word in private, and apologises for his impertinence. He tells you a secret; there's a van Rogh in the forthcoming auction. Though this painter is a virtual unknown, the bookseller Marcus Hodgson is a fierce admirer. Buy the painting at auction, and you might sell it at a good profit, perchance? If you can trust that Hodgson, of course. This begins Secondary Quest: Avid Collector.

After this information has been imparted, Vimme asks you what that chat was all about. You can:

- Tell him you were told to buy the van Rogh. This causes the dwarf to bid for the painting in the auction, forcing you to purchase it at a higher price if you want it.
- Tell him "nothin' special," and the dwarf is none-the-wiser (and you can purchase the van Rogh for a song).

PREAMBLE (AUCTION): "STARRY NIGHT OVER THE PONTAR"

Continue to complete objectives associated with Main Quest: Open Sesame, until the auction begins. Second on the auction block is a charming piece by a young Novigrad artist named van Rogh. Bidding starts at only 20 crowns. You must either:

- Bid on it, after not previously mentioning its value to Vivaldi, and snap up the piece for its starting bid of 20 crowns. A veritable bargain!
- Bid on it, after mentioning its value to Vivaldi, who wants it for his own collection, bringing up the price you'll pay to 60 crowns. Still, a reasonable sum!

If this painting is won, Hearts of Stone Secondary Quest: The Avid Collector continues.

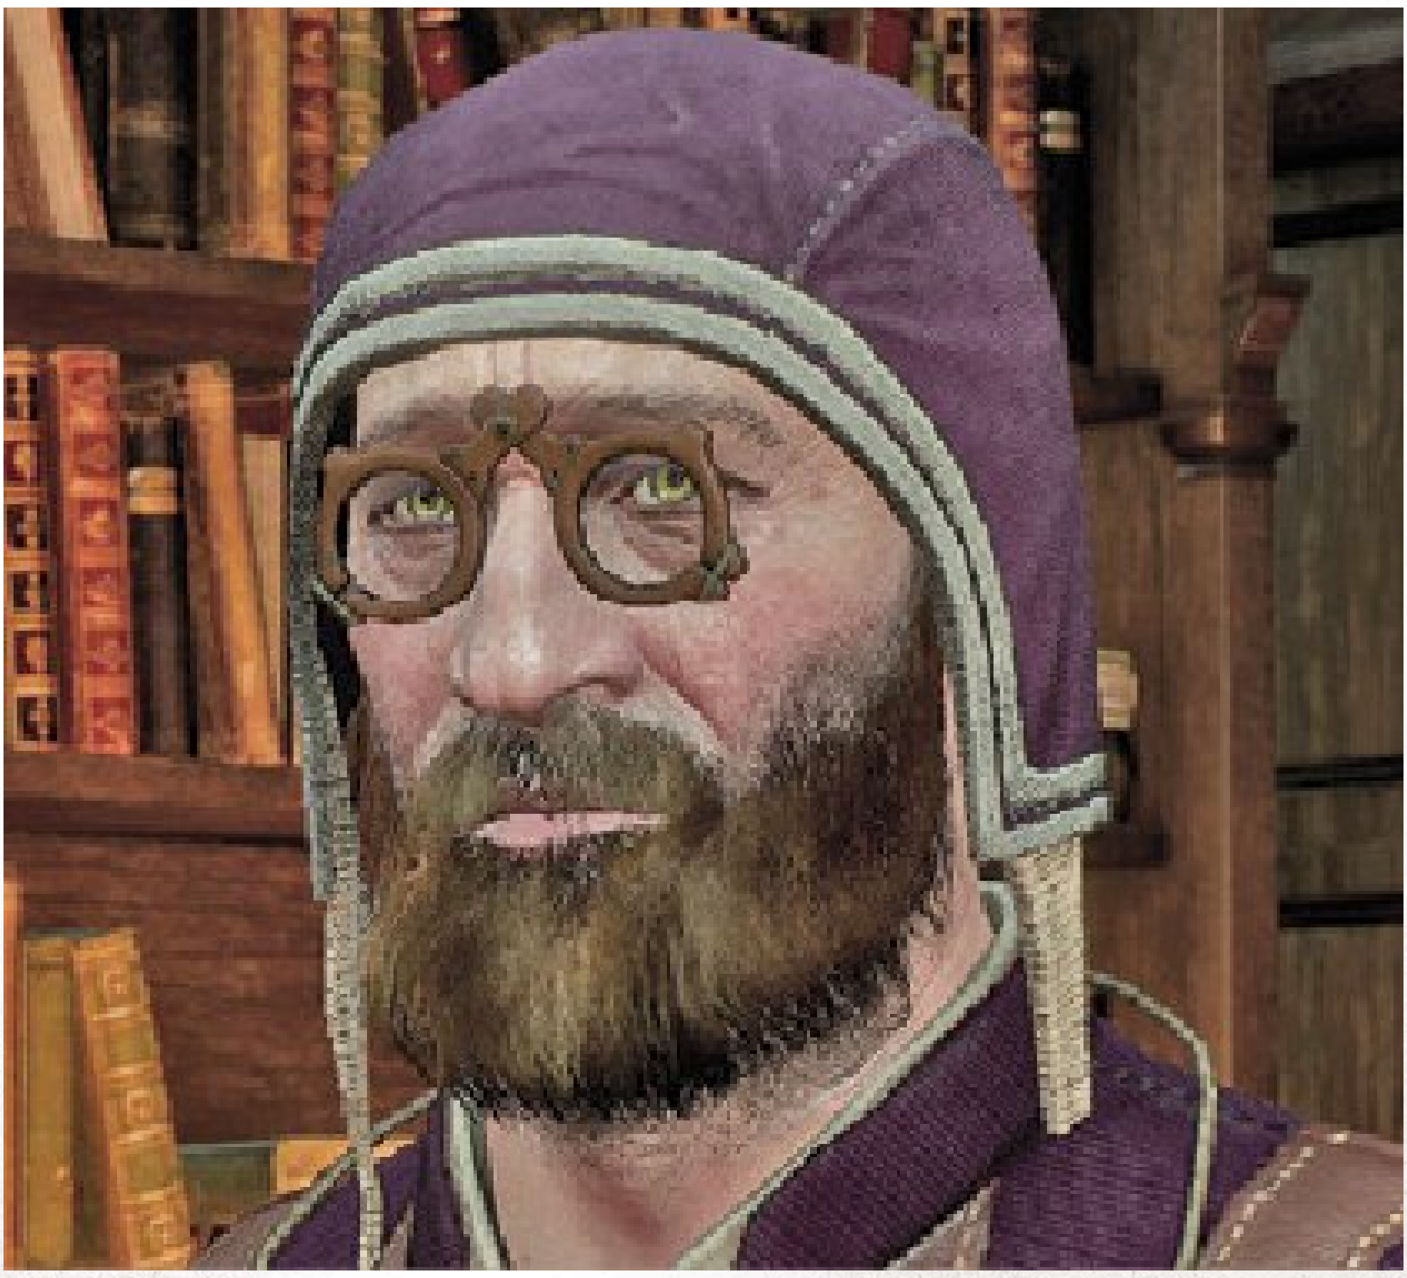
Selling To The Son Of Roger

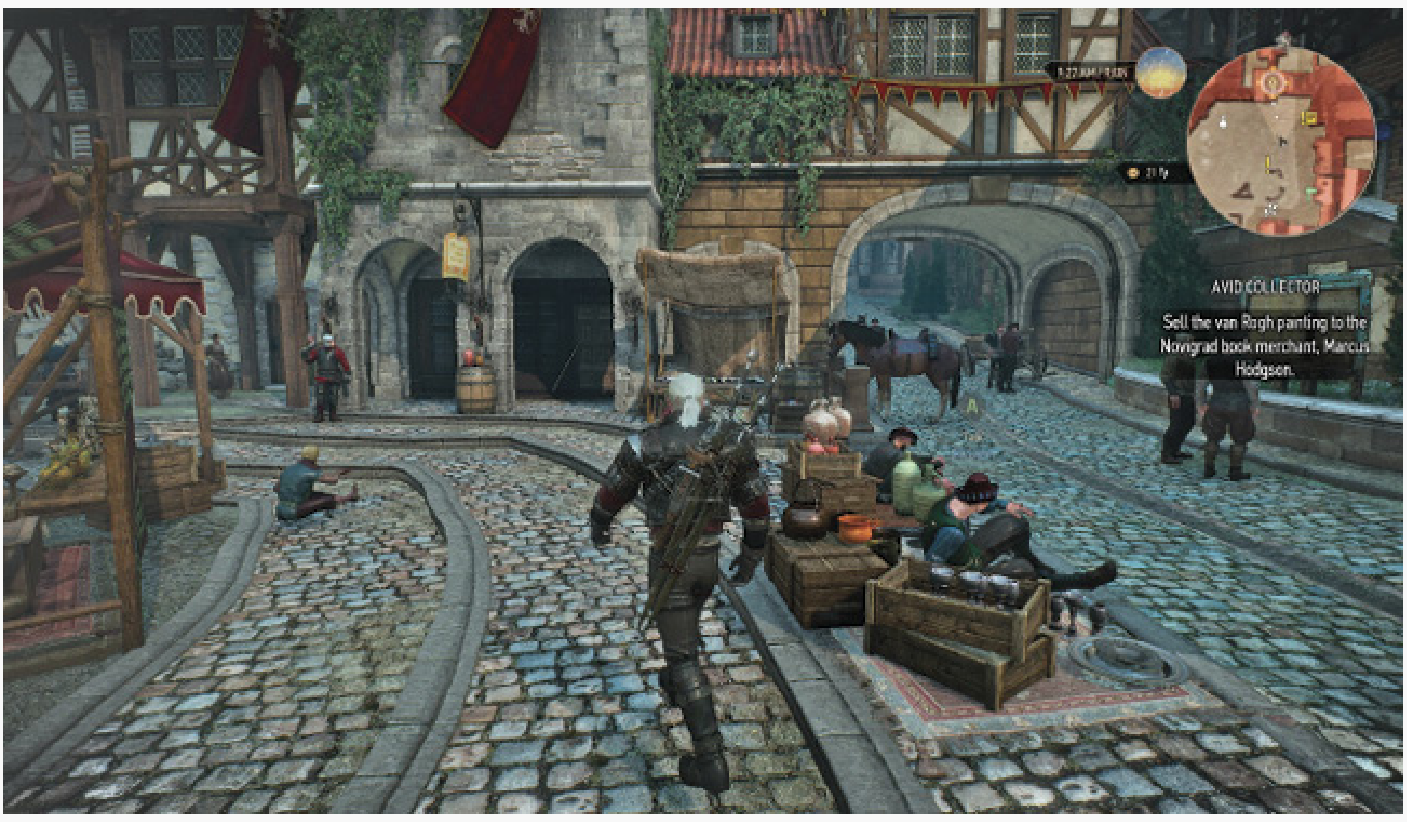
OBJECTIVES

- Sell the van Rogh painting to the Novigrad book merchant, Marcus Hodgson.



Marcus Thaddeus Knut Hodgson

With the painting now in your possession, once you're thrown out of the auction house, or any time you're not engaged in objectives you cannot stall, take a trip to Hierarch Square in Novigrad, and look for the quaint bookseller's shop along the northern perimeter of the square. Enter the establishment, and engage the cagey bookseller, the inimitable Marcus T. K. Hodgson. After mentioning a man who came here years ago to keep a book for you (Secondary Quest: Message from an Old Friend), tell him you're looking to sell a painting.



AVID COLLECTOR

Sell the van Rogh painting to the Novigrad book merchant, Marcus Hodgson.

Hodgson is intrigued, and loses his poker face completely when you mention the daubing is a van Rogh! He's temporarily short on crowns at the moment, so he hopes you'll take some collateral left by a Witcher named Gaetan (who you may have encountered during Secondary Quest: Where the Cat and Wolf Play). You're rewarded with the following, and the quest concludes. The Trophy is of particular note, adding five percent to the total of all gold you might find.

RECOMMENDED ITEMS: 5,000 Crowns

OBJECTIVES

- Visit the runewright and learn more about his craft.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is available once you read the information posted at the Notice Board, located at the Seven Cats Inn just east of Oxenfurt. You can also run into the Ofieri while exploring the world.

During the initial stages of Main Quest: Evil's Soft First Touches, when you're reading the information posted to the Notice Board at the Seven Cats Inn, be sure to also read the note regarding the arrival of a Runewright from far-off Ofier. When you have a moment in your questing (ideally sooner rather than later, so you can take advantage of the runes you can embed into your equipment), gallop to the very northeastern edge of Gustfields Territory, to the eastern side of Miller's Lake, and the windmill of Upper Mill. Below, an Ofieri trader stands plying his trade (and offering his own quests). The Runewright sits in the nearby tent.

The Runewright seems awfully cheerful for someone who has lost all of his tools for crafting runes and glyphs into swords and armor. So he strikes up a deal with you.

ENCHANTING: START-UP COSTS
Visit the runewright and learn more about his craft.

You can ask what his trade is exactly, tell him that you're here to recover what he lost, and most importantly, that you're here to help. This "help" however, is going to cost you.

- (5,000 Crowns) Furnish the Runewright with the not-inconsiderable sum of five thousand crowns. The Runewright deems this a "start".

The costs associated with bank-rolling this artisan are shockingly large, but handing over coin is the only way to further your forays into obtaining swords and armor imbued with Runes. If you want to know more about the bonuses associated with such weaponry, consult the Runewright Enchanting section in this guide's Training chapter.

- Find a pickaxe.

ENCHANTING: THE "GET POOR QUICK" SCHEME?

You've already forked over 5,000 crowns for the chance at even-more impressive abilities for your swords and armor. But the Runewright isn't done yet; for the true quality runes and glyphs, he's going to need the very best forging tools, and those cost money. 10,000 Crowns (for Advanced) and 15,000 Crowns (for Master-level tools); that's another 25,000 crowns of your money, in fact! Be mindful of this before trying to finish this quest, and remember you still have to pay for the Runes and Glyphs after the Runewright is set up, too!

Once you bankroll the Runewright's operation to the tune of 5,000 Crowns, he begins to offer you Basic (Level 1) enchantments. However, the real quality stuff comes through his use of jade, a precious material he urgently requires. Agree to find some for him. First though, you need a pickaxe to excavate the jade from the earth. Exit the tent, passing the Ofieri merchant, and head to the barn attached to the cottage up the road. The pickaxe (which you can pick out using Witcher Senses) is propped against the wall in the far right corner.

Getting Jaded

OBJECTIVES

- Acquire a hunk of jade for the Ofieri runewright.

All three jade deposits are shown on your map, and are roughly north (and sometimes a little northeast) of the village of Yantra, in north-central Gustfields territory. Only one location (the middle one) needs to be visited.

Past a field in the sloping grass and woods northeast of Yantra is a selection of old standing stones. However, the amount of jade you find (using your Witcher Senses) embedded in one of the monoliths isn't enough to justify the excavation. Move on to the next location.

The deposit at the very northern part of Gustfields, along a path within the grassy woodlands, is also too meager to be of use to the Runewright. There's no need to head here.

Enter the cave mouth, and prepare to do battle with around six Arachnomorphs. When these scuttling critters have been slaughtered, head to the middle of the initial cavern, to the natural rock column, and search around the base of it for a skeleton (to ignore) and the jade deposit (to excavate). - (10,000 Crowns) Fund him for the advanced tools, allowing Level 2 equipment to be forged.
- (15,000 Crowns) After funding him the 10,000 Crowns, you abruptly stop him from asking for more scavengable items, and instead can hand over another 15,000 Crowns (yes, that's a total of 25,000!) in order for him to craft the very best Level 3 Master enchantments.
- You can also purchase your own runes and glyphs, as well as diagrams allowing you to craft runes and glyphs yourself.
- Feel free to get your money's worth by getting your gear enchanted by him; he is the only Runewright in the land, so this is the place to do it!
- Also ask how he's liking it here in the Northern Realms.

Once you deliver the jade, this quest concludes.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This Quest is accessible during Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Evil's Soft First Touches. This quest commences once you leave the company of Olgierd in the Garin Estate (northeast Gustfields).

Upon leaving the Garin Estate for the first time, you're verbally accosted by one of the cheekier members of Olgierd's wild crew, a woman named Adela with a new nickname for you. She persists both with her teasing, as well as an interesting proposition for you: to find and slay those responsible for killing her mate, Kluivert. Agree to the job, leave the estate, and gallop west and a little north to the hamlet of Bowdon, where Kluivert was last seen.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the source of the strong odor using your Witcher Senses.
- Search the hut using your Witcher Senses.

Follow the scent trail from the central well, roughly south a few steps to a dilapidated cooking hut. Examine the following inside:

- Rusting laboratory equipment and a still for cooking fisstech. Only broken equipment remains.
- A warning letter, explaining the dangers of trading narcotics.
- A set of boot prints on the bed; someone escaped through a window.

OBJECTIVES

- Investigate around the hut for clues about the man who fled out the window.
- Look around for signs of the man who shot the bolt using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the shooter's tracks using your Witcher senses.

Pick up the trail of footprints outside the window. Follow them into the hay field heading in a roughly southeasterly direction. Examine the following:

- A bush with Arenaria growing, where the fleeing fellow hid.

The trail turns to the east and northeast; hop over the broken fence, and you finally find the corpse of a man with a scar across his head. This must be Kluivert; he's been shot in the back by a bolt.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is accessible at some point during the Hearts of Stone Main Questing (it could occur at any point). You must be maneuvering through the city of Oxenfurt before you are accosted by the tax man. You also need to have 35,000 gold for the taxman to appear.

You're stopped from going about your business by a deputy tax enumerator who is working for the Revenue and Customs for Occupied Temeria (Dorian branch). It appears that you've gathered a great deal of coin, and Walthemor wants to clear up these inconsistencies in how you obtained your wealth, which may be undeclared income. To this end, after noting your name, Walthemor asks you three questions:

QUESTION #1: RAWHIDE RUSTLING

In brief: Have you at any time engaged in the wholesale trade of rawhide in the White Orchard area?

In full: Did you, while adventuring in White Orchard, locate a field of cows, slaughter them, acquire cow hides from the corpses (which could be sold for a tidy profit), before optionally meditating for more than two hours, and then locating more cows and repeating this bovine massacre? Such an exploitative ruse could have netted you a great deal of coin early on.

QUESTION #2: NICK ONE, PEARL ONE

In brief: Have your engaged in the acquisition of bivalves with the express intention of selling the pearls therein?

In full: Did you, while traversing the streets of Novigrad, visit the shells and sea shells merchant in Hierarch Square, and purchase as much of the stock as you could? Then, did you travel to the armorer within Hierarch Square, look at his stock, and "dismantle" your sea shells and shells, turning them into pearls and black pearls, which could then be sold for a huge profit to any merchant?

QUESTION #3: STEALING ANYTHING NOT BOLTED DOWN

In brief: Have you ever unlawfully acquired another man's movable goods, chattels?

In full: During an exploration of a location (that didn't belong to you), did you gather any belongings that weren't explicitly yours?

For each question, you can answer "yes" (that you did the exploit or commit a crime) or "no" (that you didn't). This can occur whether or not you actually did or not.

The Taxman Cometh (Hearts of Stone)

End #1: The Taxman Giveth

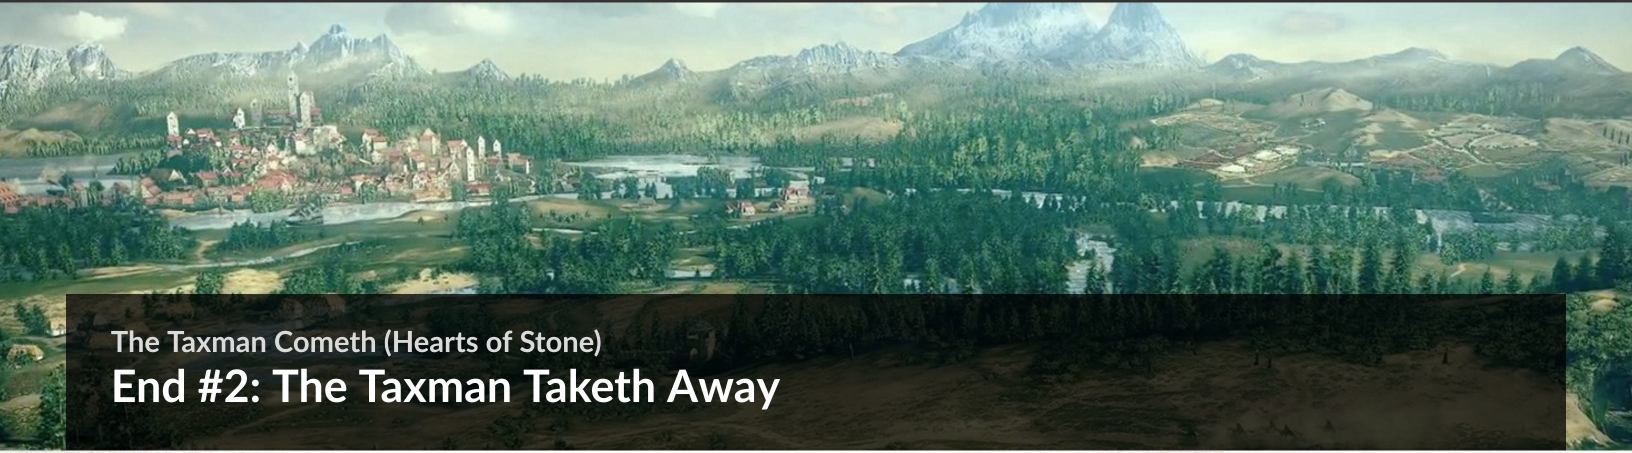
Items: Taxpayer in Good Standing Diploma



End #2: The Taxman Taketh Away

If you answered that you did commit at least two of the three activities you're accused of, the audit ends with the tax man handing you a summons, and a 1,000 crown fine to pay. At your earliest convenience, visit the Vivaldi Bank in Novigrad, and pay the fine. You receive 100 XP for your troubles. If you fail to pay the fine, the Vivaldi Bank won't convert your currency, or offer any loans until you pay the fine.

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Open Sesame

LOCATIONS: Brunwich, Herbalist's Hut, Deadwight Wood (Unmarked), Erde

CHARACTERS: Otto Bamber (Herbalist), Folkert, Judd

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the herbalist.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is accessible at any point during the Hearts of Stone Main Questing, though the optimal time is after you visit the village of Brunwich once Main Quest: Dead Man's Party is over. In order to start it, you must acquire a message from the Brunwich Noticeboard.

Journey to the northeastern corner of Gustfields territory, and locate the noticeboard just next to the signpost for Brunwich. Amid the notes is a contract (but not of the monster-hunting kind) regarding a missing Halfling apprentice named Folkert. It is written by a Halfling herbalist living southwest of this location, in the Herbalist's Hut just northeast of Oxenfurt itself.

You may recognize this place as having an extra-large cellar, which is useful for conducting clandestine meetings during Main Quest: Open Sesame. But you're here about the notice; tell the Halfling this and he tells a tale of woe. After sending Folkert to the troublingly-named Deadwight Wood, Otto the herbalist hasn't heard from him for well over a week, and is understandably worried. Agree to find this light-haired Halfling.

Without A Trace (Hearts of Stone)

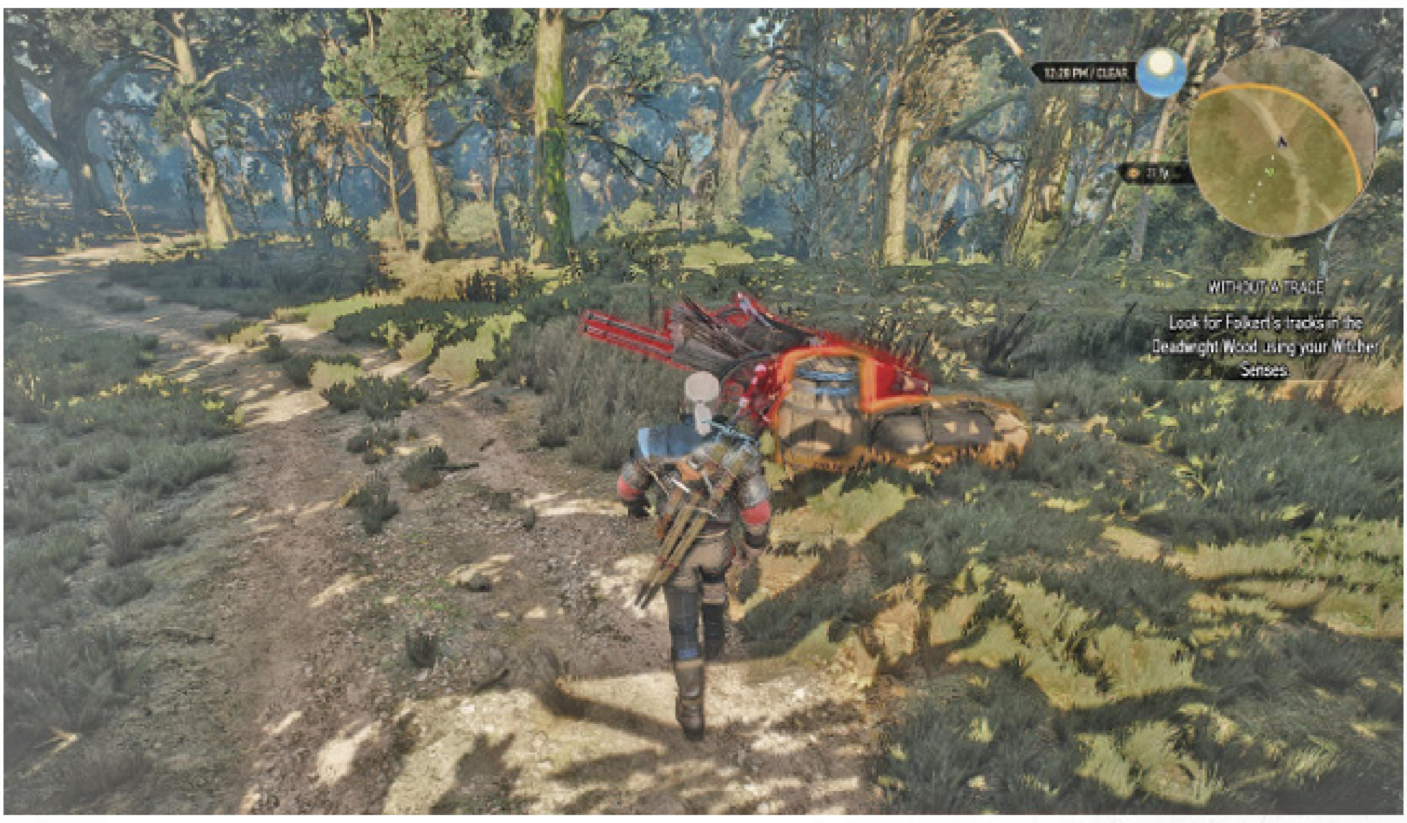
OBJECTIVES

- Look for Folkert's tracks in the Deadwight Wood using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the blood track.

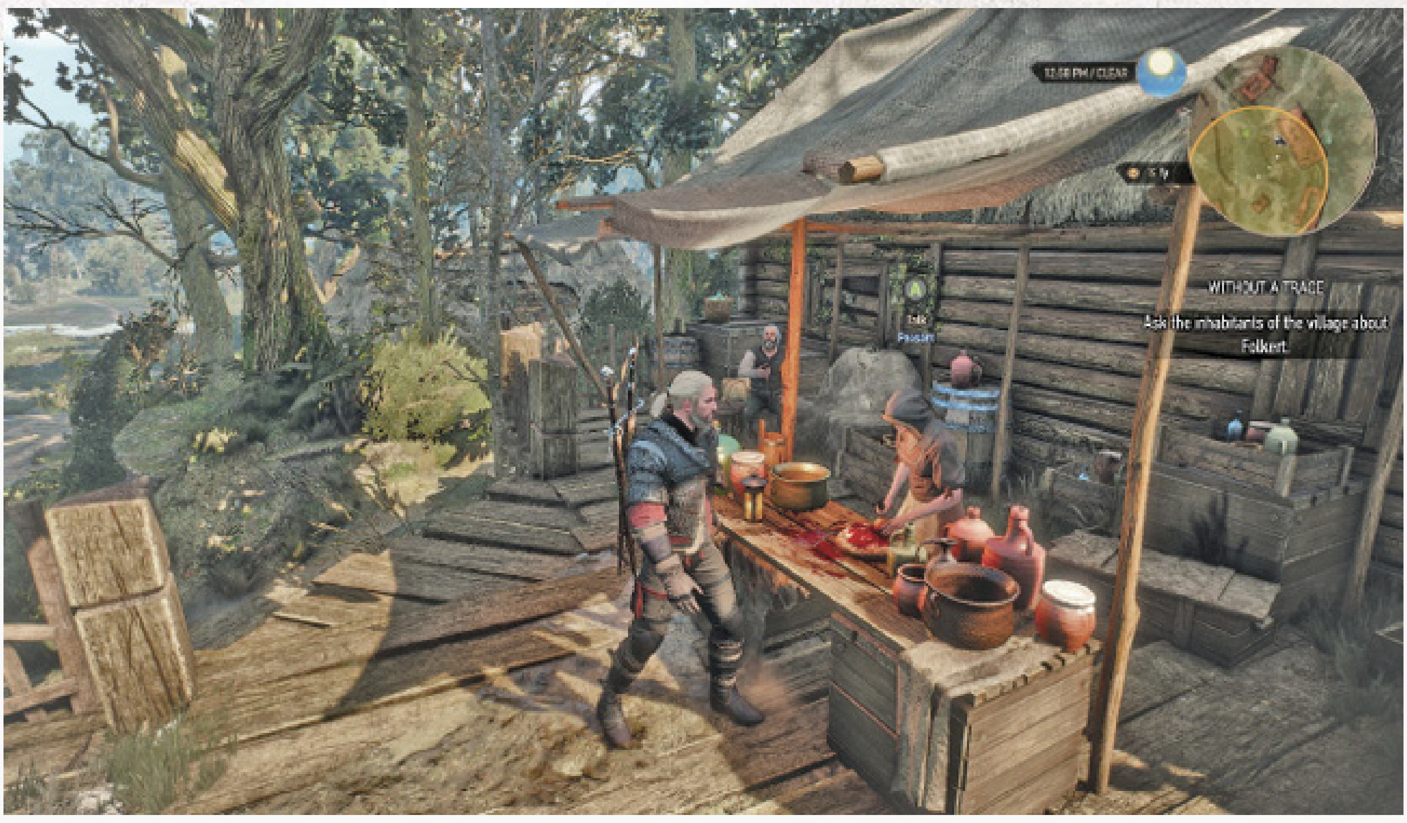


12:28 PM / CLEAR
WITHOUT A TRACE
Look for Folkert's tracks in the Deadwight Wood using your Witcher Senses.

Gallop along the trails in a roughly northeastern direction, passing Est Taylar as you enter the wild northeastern edge of Gustfields territory. Pass the lumber mill, and stop at the abandoned cart on the edge of Deadwight Wood. Use your Witcher Senses and inspect the immediate area to find:

- The cart itself, which has some blood on it. Your objective updates.
- Just north of the cart is blood; dried for a few days. Follow the trail roughly northward.

The trail continues to a signpost for the woodland village of Erde. Perhaps someone has seen the Halfling? Your objective updates again.



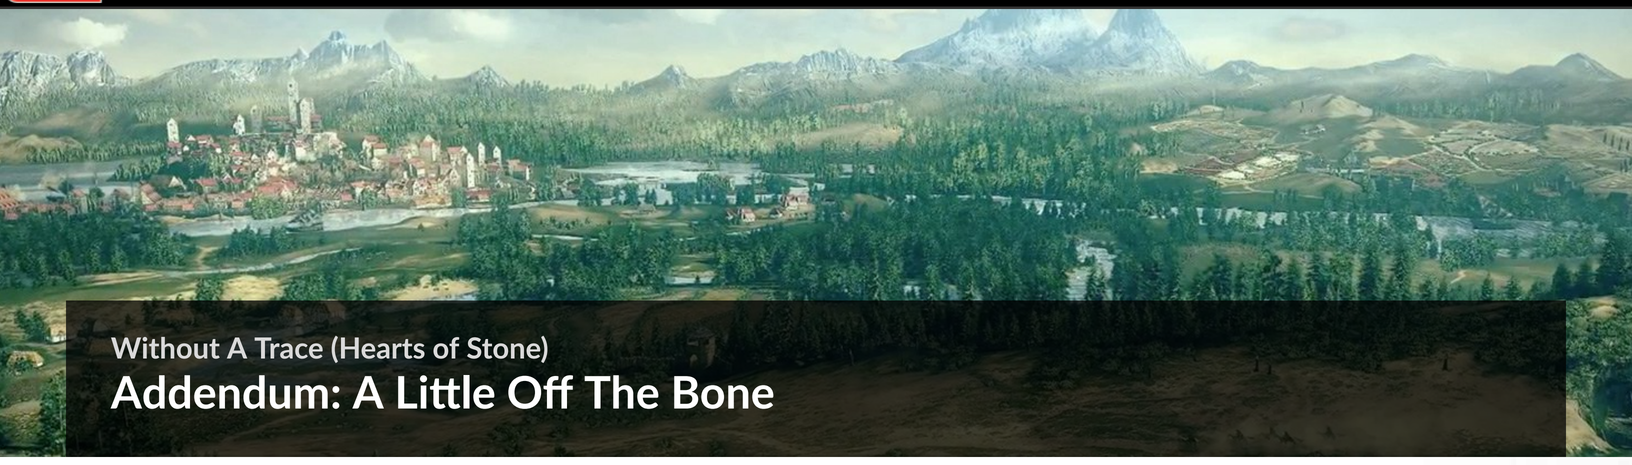
OBJECTIVES

- Ask the inhabitants of the village about Folkert.
- Report back to the herbalist.

Though there are a number of other areas of interest to explore around this strange village, it's advisable to speak to the only two inhabitants; a couple of peasants. The old gent (Judd) is dozing, while his wife is cutting some meat. Speak to her; you can optionally ask about this place, and then about Folkert. She claims she saw him picking herbs, then claims wolves attacked him. You get little more information from the pair, prompting you to choose one of the following conclusions:

- Take this nice old couple at their word, and report back to Otto at the Herbalist's Hut, explaining that wolves took his apprentice. The sad Halfling pays you for your services, and the quest concludes. However, if you don't get the whole story, you receive only half the experience that you'd get if you continue your investigation.

- Take a more thorough approach to your searching for clues within the village of Erde, ignoring the objective. Your quest continues:



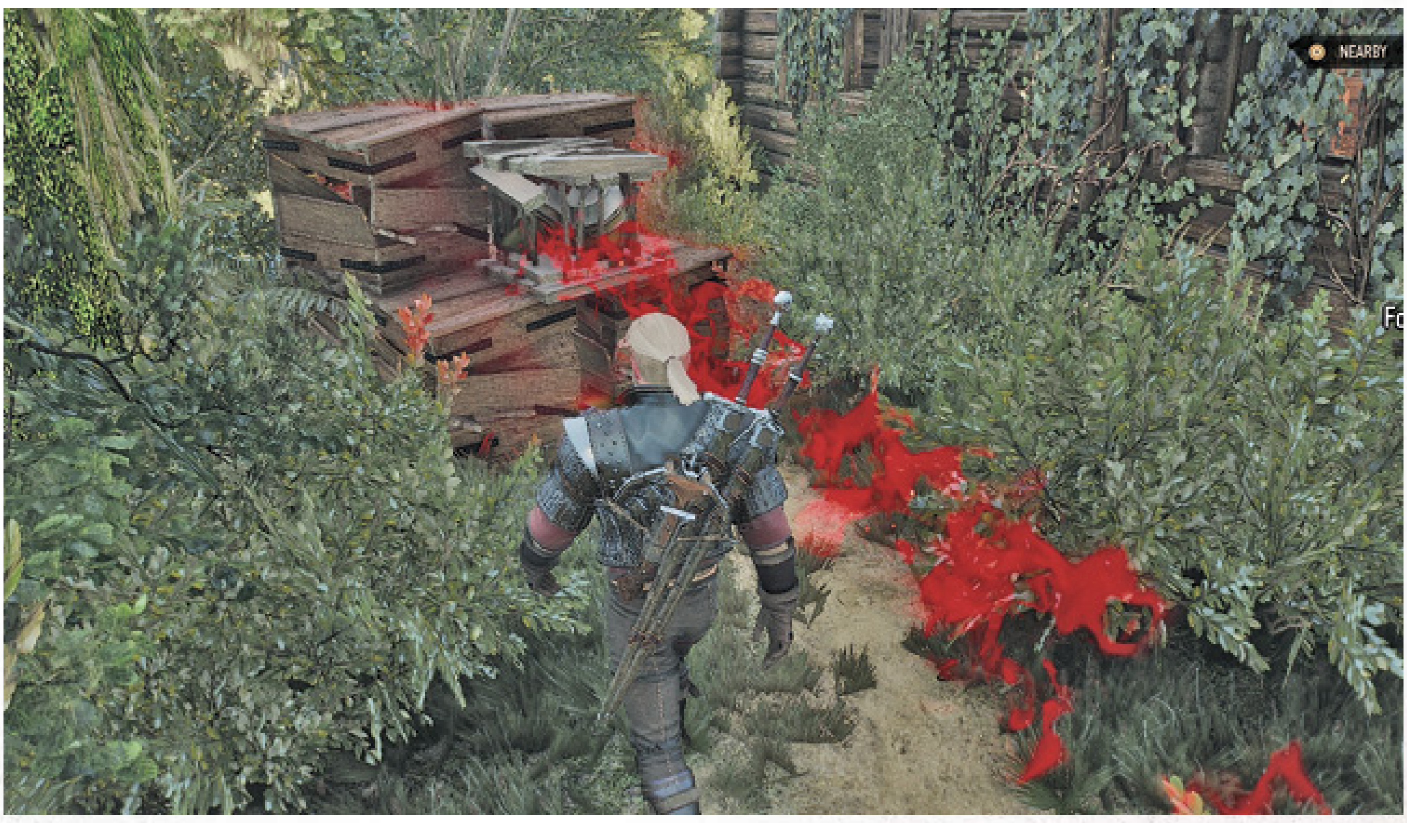
Without A Trace (Hearts of Stone)

Addendum: A Little Off The Bone

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the scent to its source using your Witcher Senses.
- Search the room.

There are a couple of huts with doors that glow red when your Witcher Senses are active. However, they don't yield anything suspicious (there's dried blood inside one hut, but it's months old). The hut behind the old folks is locked too, and there's no way inside. Of more interest is an odd, sour smell lingering in the air, heading southeast out of the village, close to the wooden steps where the villagers are. Follow this smell to a stack of crates behind the villagers' hut. This pile of debris smells like rotting meat.



A quick battering with Aard removes the debris, revealing a trapdoor and ladder down into a hidden cellar below the villagers' hut. There's a lot of blood trailing along the tunnel to the wooden door, along with the continuation of the scent trail. Open the door to reveal a revolting chamber of horrors: carcasses and open cells, and a severe lack of cleanliness. Least pleasant of all are the remains of a light-haired Halfling, ripped open, gutted, and drained.

OBJECTIVES

- Interrogate the peasant couple.
- (Optional) Kill the peasants.
- Report back to the herbalist.

Armed with new evidence of the peasants' atrocities, return to speak to the two of them. Though they admit to being cannibals in a roundabout way, they insist they scavenge the bodies, including Folkert's, and they weren't lying about him being killed by wolves. Choose an appropriate punishment. You can:

- Insist they take a vow never to eat human flesh again, and let them live.

- Tell them death is what they deserve, and make quick work of their despicable forms. Slay them both, optionally rummaging in Judd's pockets for a rusty key that opens their hut. Head inside for some random items to loot.

Items: Rusty Key

Whether you turn the village of Erde into a ghost hamlet or not, your final task is to return to the Herbalist's Hut and explain the fate that befell Folkert. You can choose to reveal that Folkert was killed by the cannibals, or remain vague about the cause of his death (which has consequences if you let the cannibals live). Either way you receive the following reward as the quest concludes:

Items: 200 Crowns

If you return to the village at least 24 hours after reporting to the herbalist, you can witness one of three different conclusions, depending on your choices:

- If you killed the peasants, their bodies are being devoured by necrophages—poetic justice.

- If you let them live, but told the herbalist that they are cannibals, you witness their comeuppance. The herbalist wasn't joking about avenging Folkert.

- If you let them live and didn't tell the herbalist that they are cannibals, you find the distressed husband inside, crying over his wife's body. He blames you for her death due to malnutrition.

OBJECTIVES

- Search the abandoned sawmill using your Witcher Senses (4).

The large forested area of eastern Ard Skellig is an ideal place for lumber harvesting, but the sawmill in these woodlands lies abandoned and unused. Enter the vicinity of the sawmill to begin this quest, which involves searching the area. Use your Witcher Senses to accomplish the following (reading each note as you find it, so you're fully prepared for what is to come):

- Stone hut to the southwest: Use Aard to break down the door, and open the crate inside to gather a letter from a druid to read.
- Main logger's house to the north: Enter the large building and discover the sawmill owner's notes on the floor, and read them.
- Small storage shed to the northeast: Enter the building adjacent to the logger's house, and open the crate to find and read the lumberjack's letter to his wife.

Watch out! As soon as the human bones are inspected, the final part of this quest occurs!

END: A MURDER OF CROWS

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the Leshen.

It becomes frighteningly obvious why this sawmill was abandoned when the giant, bony figure of a leshen appears in a puff of black smoke. Defeat this fearsome entity, and the crows it summons to peck and tear at you. Consult the Bestiary for combat advice. The quest concludes once the leshen is defeated.

How quaint. The quest then concludes.

A Bard's Beloved

Looking For Love In All The Wrong Places

DANGER ALERT — SPOILER ALERT

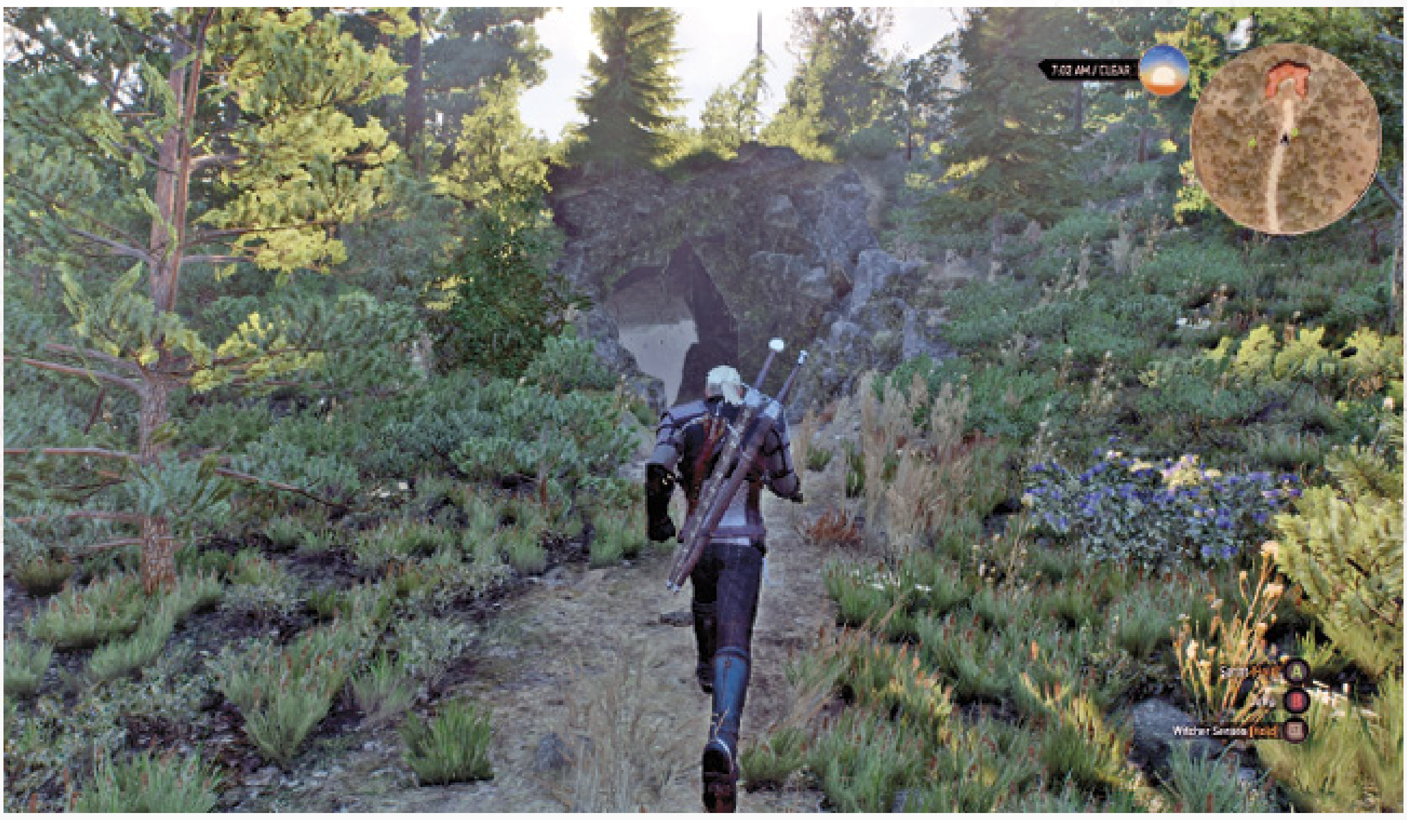
A BARD'S BELOVED

LOCATIONS: Palisade, Troubadour's Cave
CHARACTERS: The Troubadour
ENEMIES: Water Hag, Drowners

OBJECTIVES

- Find the troubadour's "beloved."
- Defeat the Water Hag.
- Nearest Signpost: Northeast of Palisade.

In southeast Ard Skellig, journey eastwards from the Palisade, following the woodland path before breaking off to the northeast and finding a secondary path leading to the cave entrance pictured. Enter the cave, where you'll hear the plaintive cries of a troubadour. He begs you not to wake his sleeping "beloved". He seems agitated. And possibly simple.



END: A SWEETHEART! FRESH AND SCRUMPTIOUS!

Tread deeper into the cave tunnel, under there's water under foot. At the end of this cave, something saggy and grotesque awakens. It seems the troubadour's object of affection is a water hag. Perhaps it's her personality? No, she wants to kill you. Slay this foul monster, and collect the ingredients she carries as the quest concludes. The bard disappears.

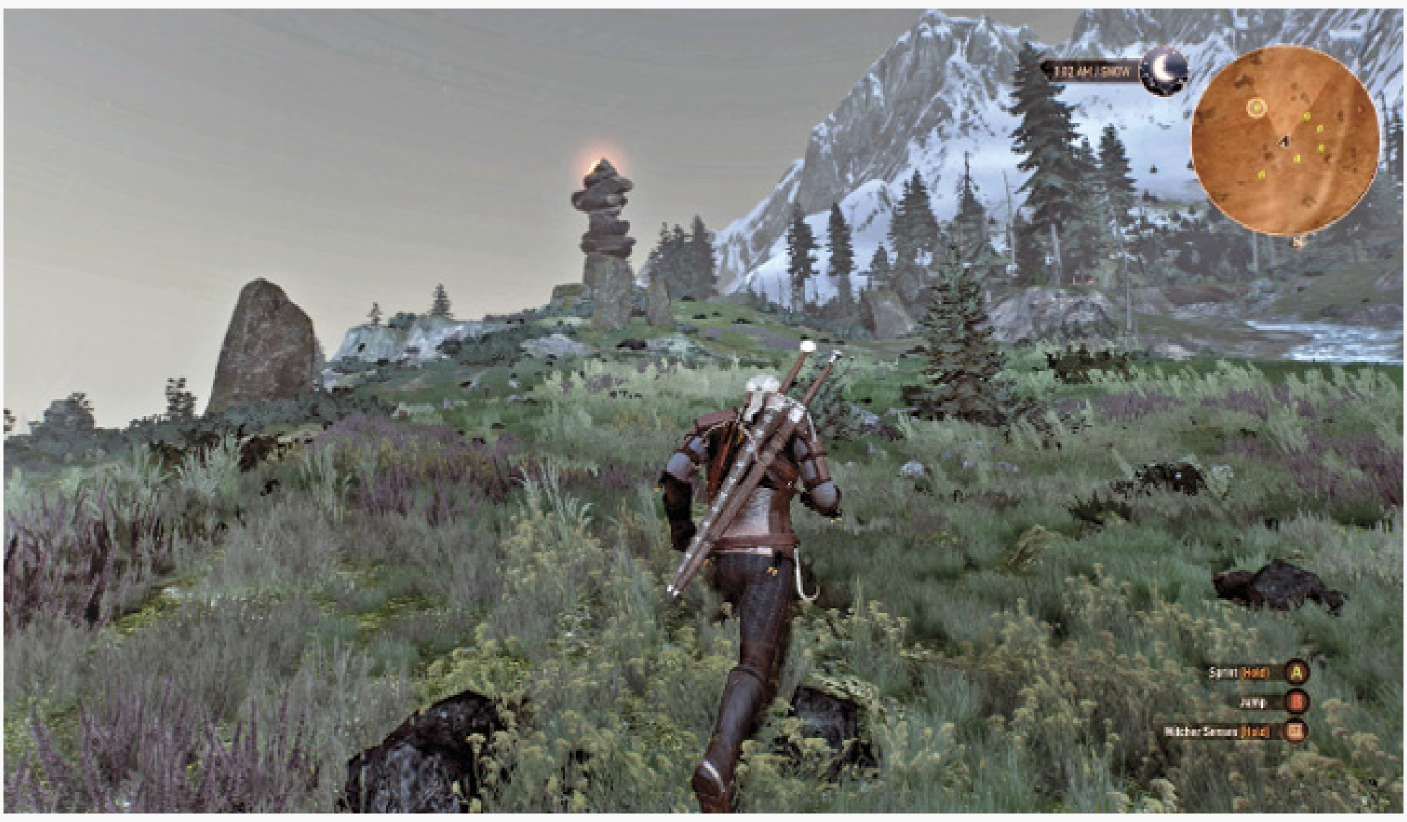
ENEMIES: Wolves, Harpies
RECOMMENDED ITEM: Celandine (Ingredient)

OBJECTIVES

- Find some Celandine.
- Bring celandine to the injured fisherman.
- Nearest Signpost: Southwest of Kaer Nyssen.

Petter

While trekking across the heath and rushing streams up the mountain to the southwest of Kaer Nyssen, be on the lookout for a group of large standing stones, with a central monolith (a rudimentary statue) lit by flame at its zenith. This is the Grymmdjarr Monument, and is sacred—at least to the moaning fisherman who sits at its base. Speak to Petter, whose leg was broken after he fell trying to light the statue. Ask more about the statue if you wish, before agreeing to find the herb celandine, which can aid in dulling the pain (but not the whining).



Run north down the hillside, crossing a rushing stream (and watching for wolves and harpies) before slowing down to methodically check the plant life at the threshold of the forest. Look for the small yellow bushy flowered plant (Celandine) and harvest one or more of them. Then return to Petter, and listen to more of his lamenting as the quest concludes.

OBJECTIVES

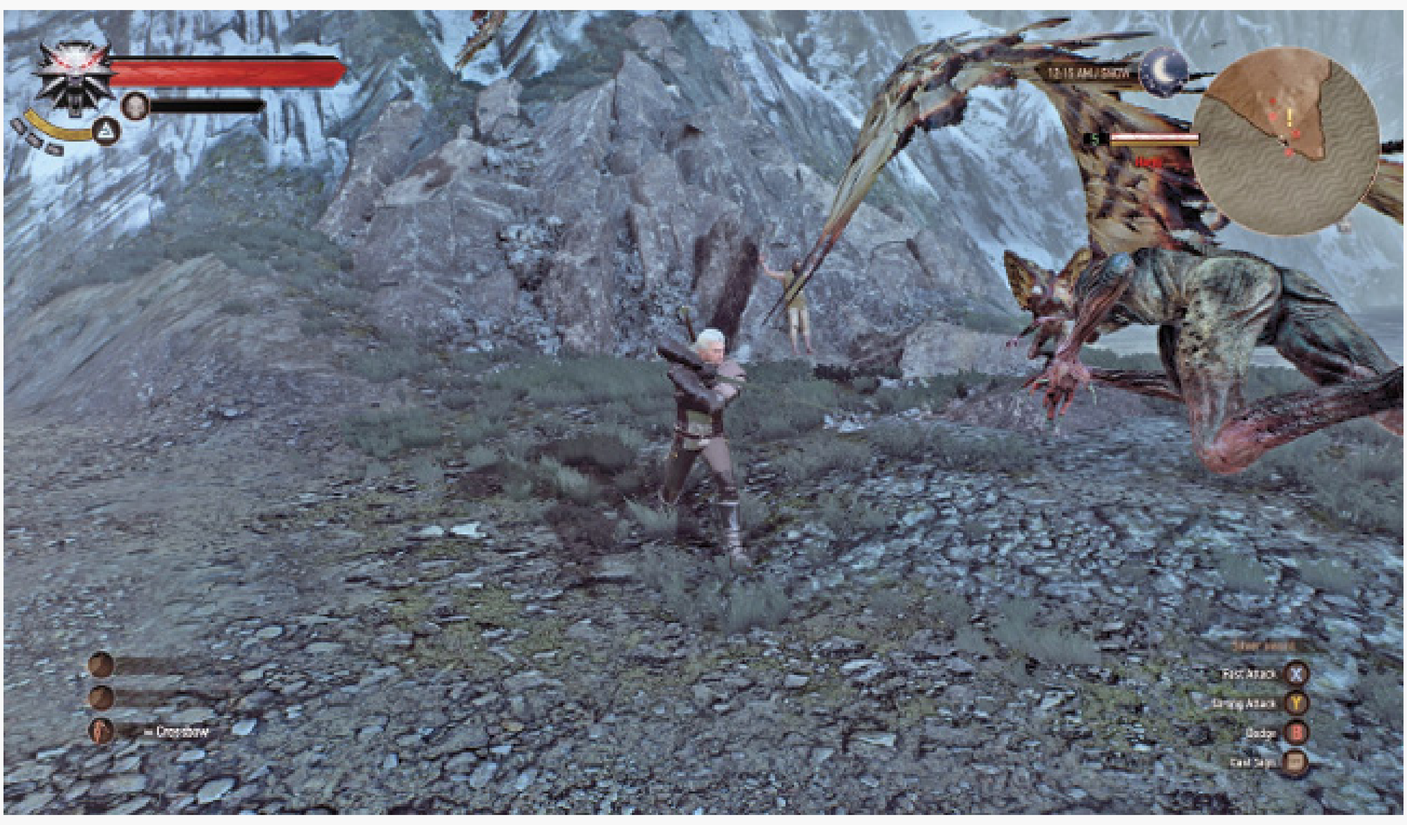
- Help the prisoner.
- Nearest Signpost: North of Rogne.

Yorg the Prisoner

Along the treacherous northern shore of the main isle of Ard Skellige, east of the Ancient Crypt and north of the settlement of Rogne, a lone prisoner is chained to the rocks. Slay the harpies around him. Yorg tells you he was framed for the murder of Gretter. You can leave him be if you don't believe his story, or set him free. Leave him, and Yorg dies at a harpy's talon, failing this quest.



When you're next in Rogne (the village almost directly south of the rocky promontory Yorg was chained to), eavesdrop on some villagers at a camp fire discussing the banishment of Yorg. His sister tries to defend her brother, then dashes off in a tizzy. Follow her and speak to her. She tells you her uncle Gretter "did things to her", and that she told Yorg that, which prompted the killing. Only Gretter didn't really, she lied about the abuse as her uncle was simply rotund and stank. End the quest by letting the sister know you freed her brother, or that she learned her lesson about lying.

Assault At The Obelisk

DANGER ALERT

SPOILER ALERT

THE FAMILY BLADE

LOCATIONS: Kaer Trolde Harbor, Crossroads, Miners' Camp, Thieves' Camp and Obelisk, Fyresdal, Thieves' Camp and The Old Fort, Whale Graveyard)

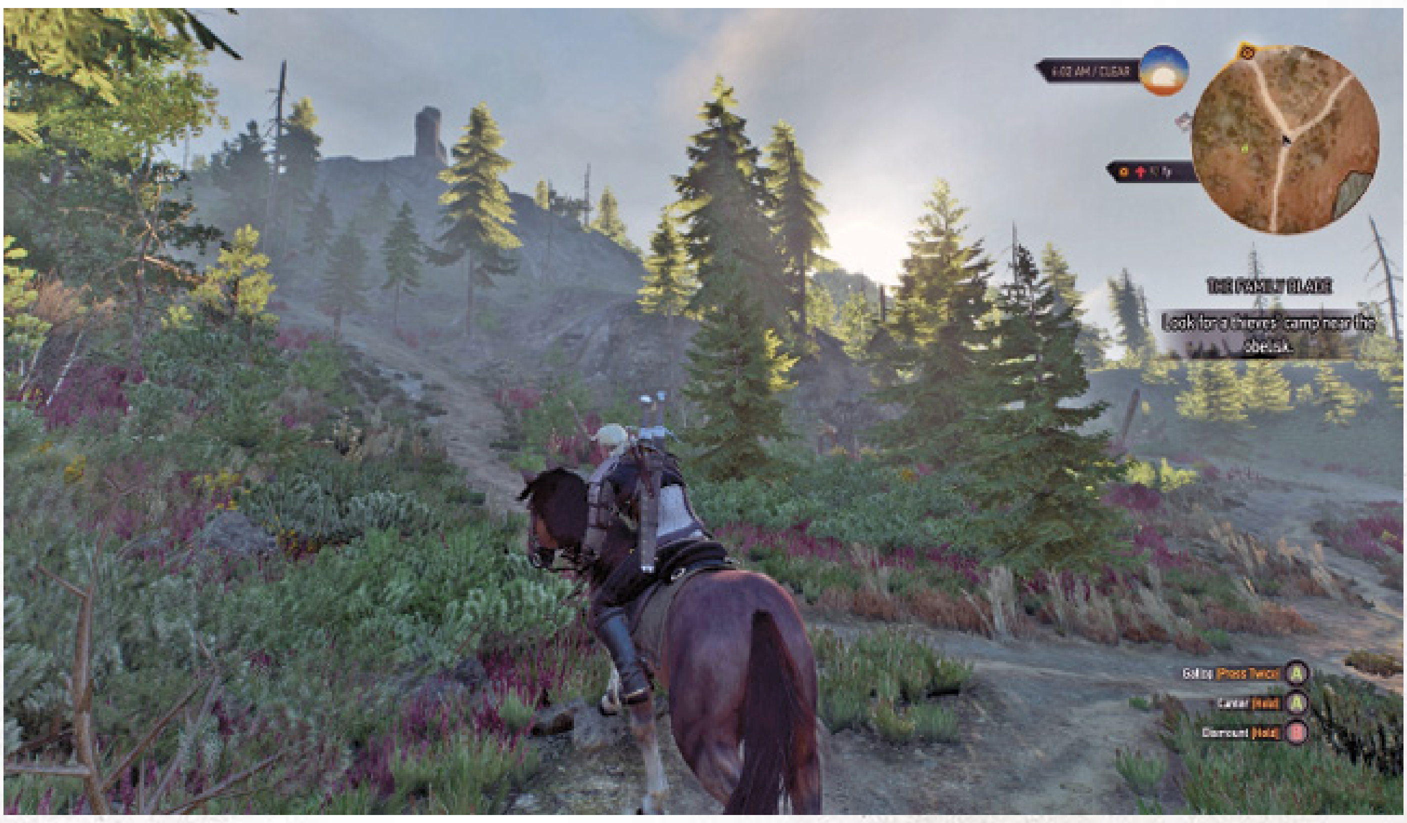
CHARACTERS: Olaf

ENEMIES: Renegades

OBJECTIVES

- Look for a thieves' camp near the obelisk.
- Nearest Signpost: Southwest of Miners' Camp.

Amongst the notices on the board at Kaer Trolde Harbor on Ard Skellig, is one that reads "Contract: Stolen Sword." A missive from the lead guard Olaf regarding the pilfering of a sword named "Kuliu" from the Kaer Trolde armory. The suspect was seen leaving to the south, which is where you should travel.



Assuming you aren't foolish enough to trek off the paths, take the path roughly southward out of Kaer Trolde, down to the Crossroads (signpost), then east around the northern shore of the lake towards the Miners' Camp (signpost). While on the north side of the lake (as shown), you should stop and physically look for the obelisk perched on a cliff towards the northeast.

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the thieves.
- Search the thieves' camp for the sword named Kuliu.
- Read the journal to learn about the sword named Kuliu.

You may wish to approach the hillside tent camp containing four renegade thieves from the south, heading north, to more easily spot the foes settling in under the cliffside obelisk. They aren't friendly, so bring cold steel and strike down all four of them. Now search the corpses of each of them. While their camp holds little of value, one of the thieves holds a journal with a clue to read.

FINDERS KEEPERS

LOCATIONS: Giants' Toes, Svorlag

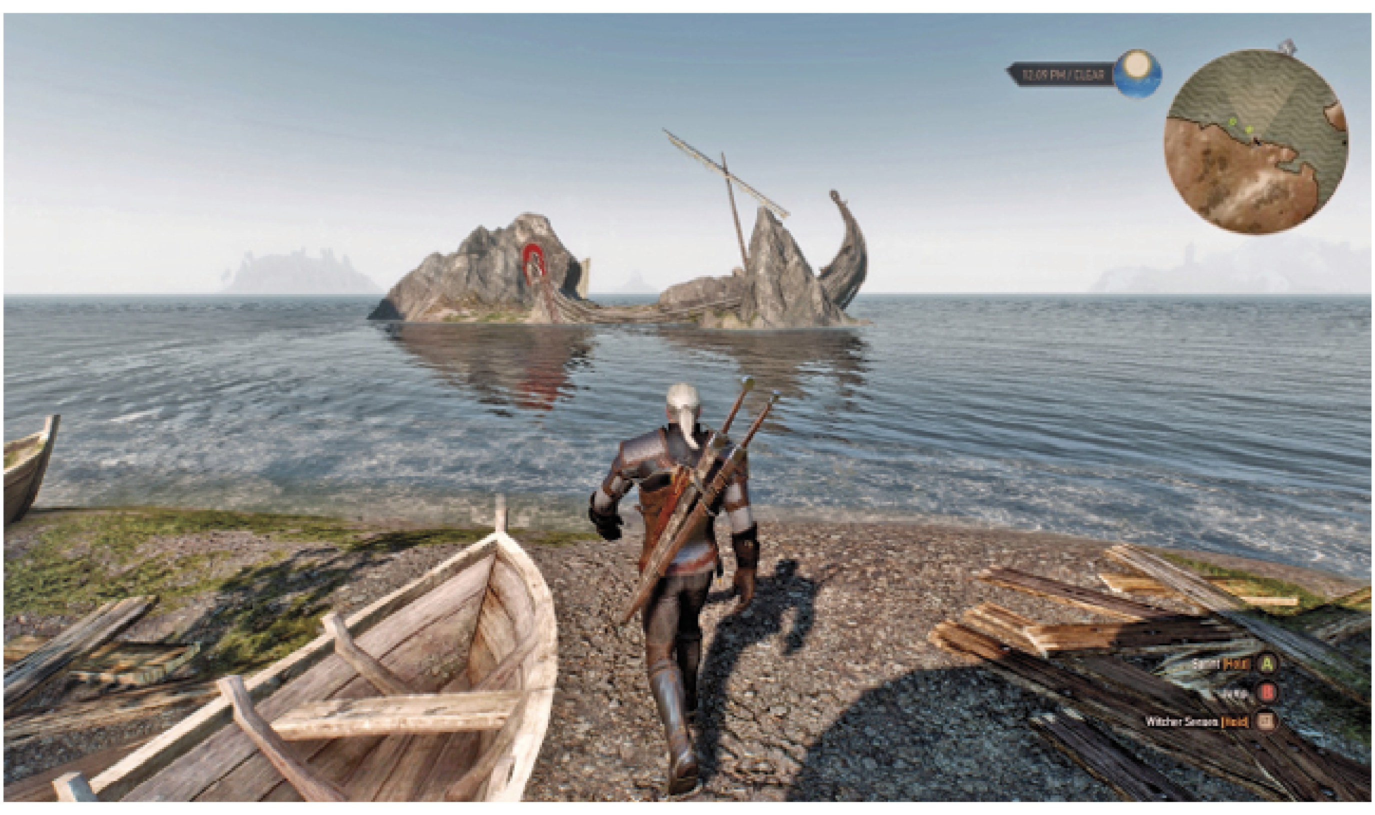
CHARACTERS: Shopkeeper

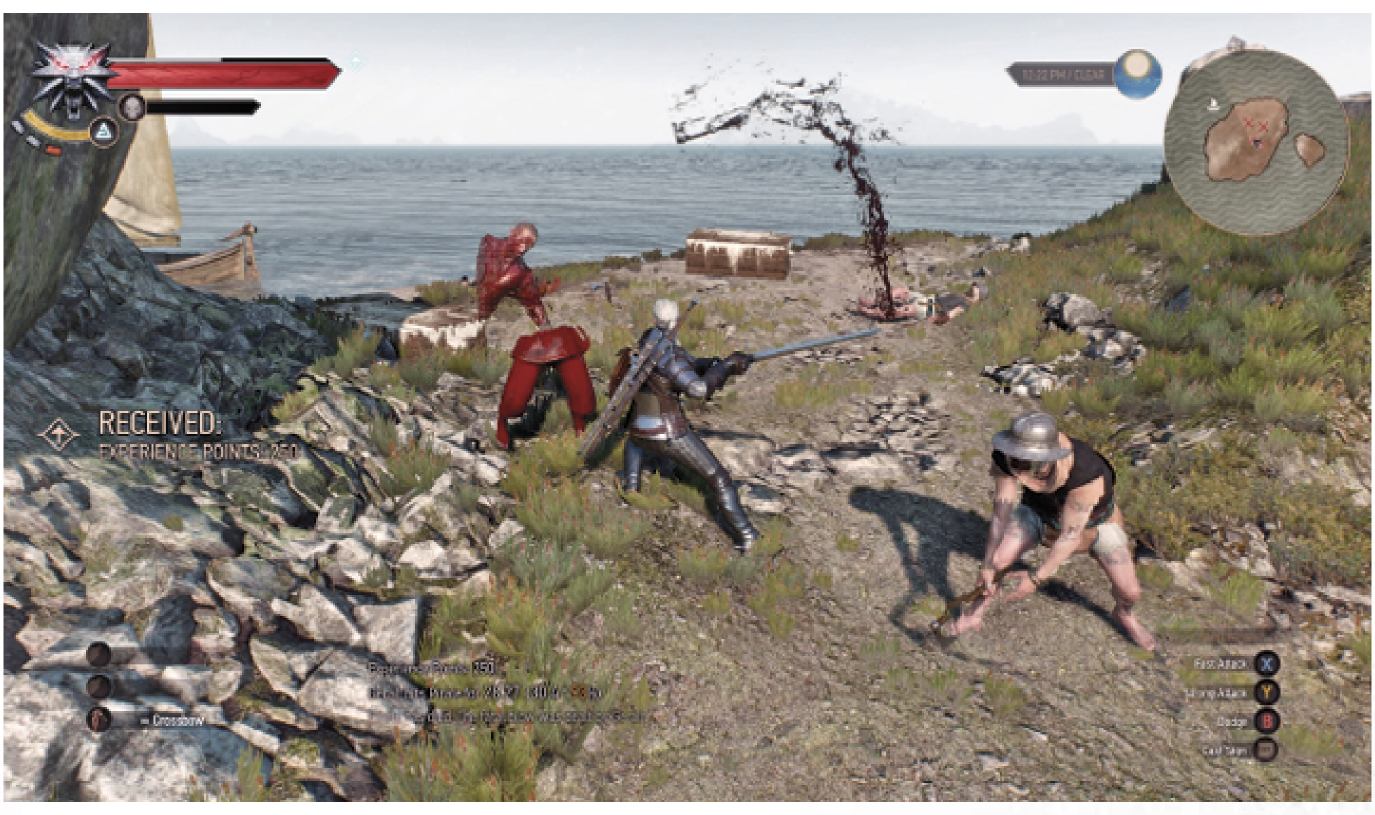
ENEMIES: Dagr, Pirates

OBJECTIVES

- Fix Look for signs indicating the cargo's owner.
- Nearest Signpost: Giants' Toes.

While exploring the northeastern coastline of Ard Skellig, be on the look-out for the rock formation known colloquially as Toes of the Giants. Explore the rugged coast and prepare for a modicum of combat thanks to roving bands of dagr. Slay around five on the beach, near a small campsite and two row boats.





Now look north, and swim across to the largest "toe" of the island cluster. There's a small shipwreck, and a band of four pirates skulking about the area, attempting to gather the ship's loot.

Once they are defeated, the quest starts. Inspect the half-buried crate (it glows red if you use your Witcher Sense). It was hacked apart with an axe, and contains a solid sword you must take. Now inspect a second crate close by—this one has the emblem of Clan Brokvar on its lid.

Items: Common Item: Solid Skellige Sword

END: BROKERING WITH CLAN BROKVAR

OBJECTIVES

- Ask the shopkeeper in the Clan Brokvar village on Spikeroog about the shipwrecked cargo.

Shopkeeper

Plot a course to the small isle of Spikeroog; it lies to the northwest of Arg Skellig. Sail to the village of Svorlag, and find the shopkeeper on the harbor, adjacent to the Notice Board.

Speak to the fellow here, letting him know about the shipwreck. He reckons it's the Hemdall's Wrath, which set out for the Continent a month back, and hopes you might happen across a sword among the wreckage. It's ornate, and belonged to the captain. This matches the blade you found in the first crate. Hand it over for the reward, as the quest concludes.

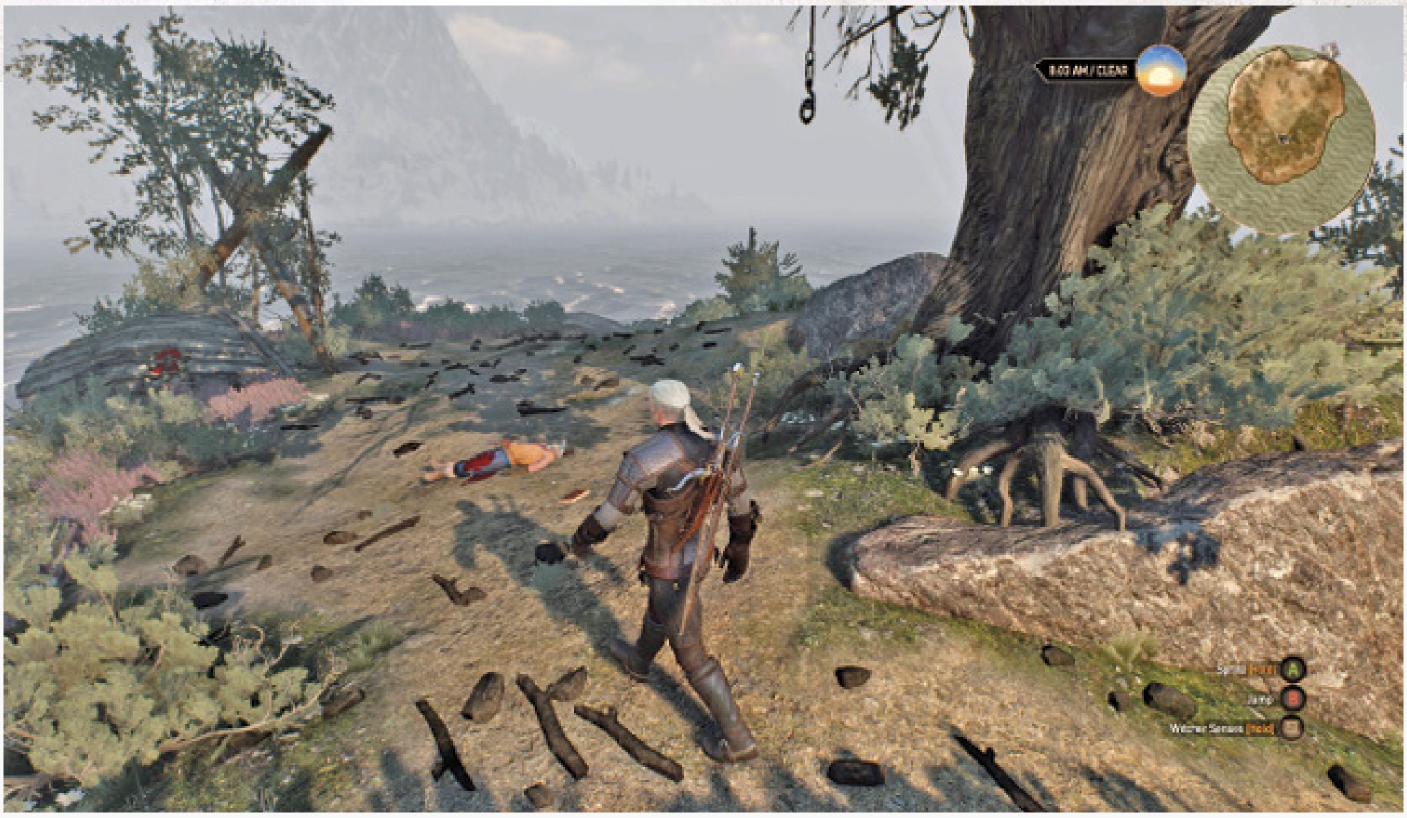
OBJECTIVES

- Find the sunken chest mentioned in the journal.
- Nearest Signpost: East of Redgill (Ard Skellig).

There's a tiny island due east of Redgill (on the eastern side of Ard Skellig), known locally as Hemdall's Finger. Climb ashore to uncover the wreckage of a boat, and a corpse with its legs crushed, under the large oak tree. Use your Witcher Senses to study the crest on the section of boat—it is of unknown origin. The journal lying near the victim (once you read it) makes mention of a delivery to Ursten (back on the Continent), a woman named Viki with a phrase to tell her, and treasure aboard the vessel.



Back at the water's edge, look for the top of a mast poking out the water. Dive down and inspect the underwater wreck. There's another unknown crest on the hull, and the chest itself. Chase her down to the river, to a moored boat close to a cave entrance; the aptly-named Widow's Grotto.

As you enter the cave, so does the foreign soldier, who tells you he's bringing the child back and killing the "woman criminal." You can:

- Refuse to let the woman fall into the hands of the soldier, defeat the soldier and receive a small gift of a medallion from the woman (which you can take or give back).

LOCATIONS: Miners’ Camp, Bridge to Kaer Trolde

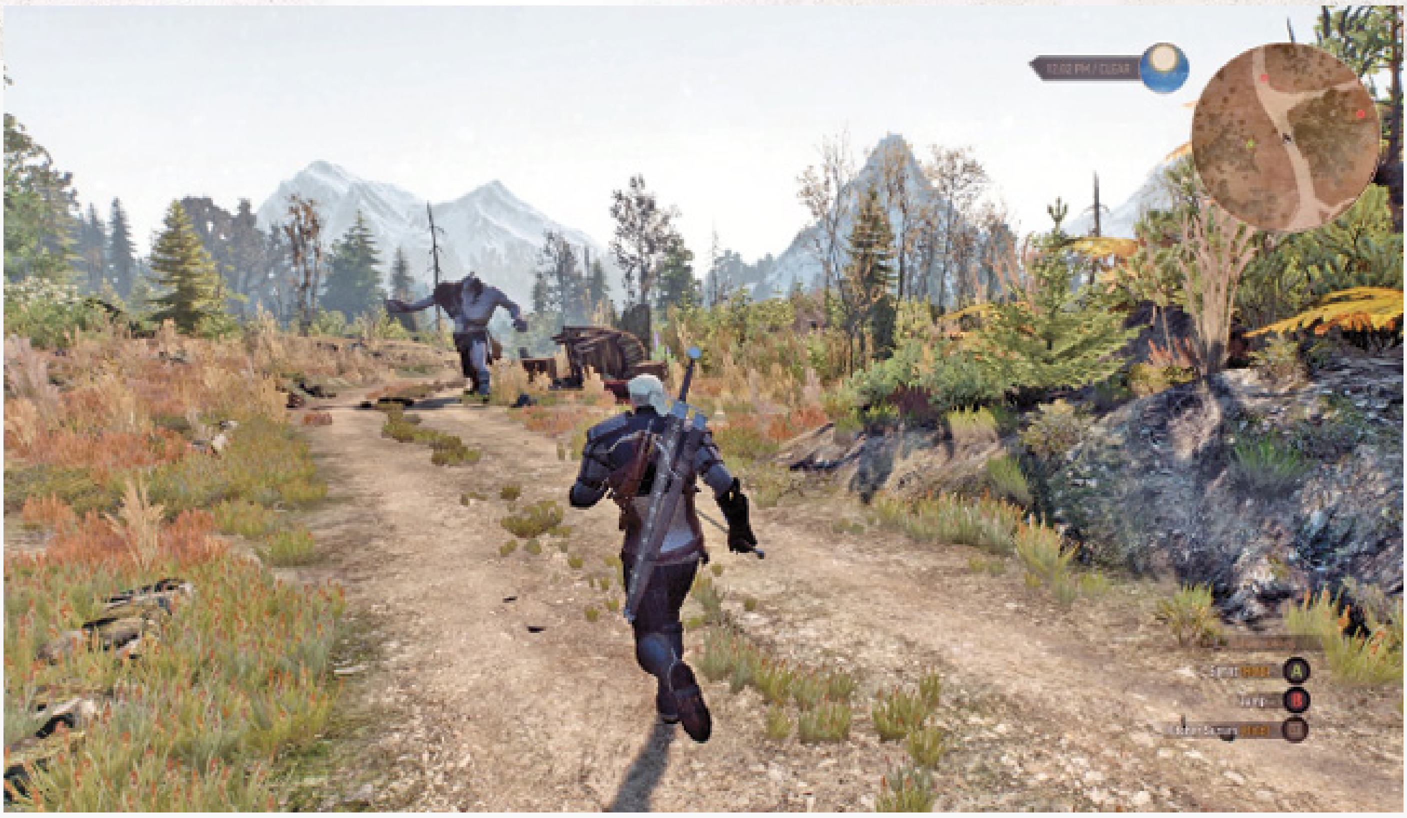
CHARACTERS: Yanne, Blacksmith

ENEMIES: Cyclops, Nekkers

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to investigate the broken cart.
- Follow the tracks leading away from the broken cart.
- Nearest Signpost: South of Miners’ Camp.

While journeying south from the Miners’ Camp, just over the crest of the hill near a large oak tree, you may stumble upon the remains of a merchant’s caravan. A cart strewn to the side with tremendous force, and both horse and human seemingly walloped to death. Beware of a nearby cyclops responsible for this attack—it heads to your location and must be defeated! Look in the Bestiary for takedown tactics. Afterward, the quest begins.



Close to the single cart wheel are fresh footprints. Follow this trail of prints and fresh blood in a roughly southeasterly direction into the undergrowth. You should discover a pack of five nekkers feasting on the remains of a woman. Rid the corpse of its attendees, and search the body for a letter. It is written to Yanne, who you presume is the brother of the deceased.

Items: Quest Item: Letter to Yanne

Harald is at the edge of the village, having buried the brambled man. He speaks of history, and when you tell him of ridding the area of the leshen, he argues that this entity is what made them warriors in the first place. He also has another way; a method to appease the woodland spirit. You must roam the woods with knife and spear, fighting on even terms to prove valor. You should go to the Covenant Stone within the woods, and submit to this trial by burning a sacrifice of wolves' hearts. You can:

- Agree to try it Harald's way (you can always change your mind).
- Disagree, and vow to simply slay the leshen.
- Think things over (and get Sven's side of the story).

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Sven about the leshen..

Sven is near the village merchant, usually flirting with Hilde (a villager). He speaks about the beast's appetite for killing. You can agree (or disagree) that this is just an "ordinary monster," before telling Sven the leshen has marked one of the villagers and that as long as the individual lives here, the leshen cannot be completely killed.

You'll usually find her near the irrigation stream to the north of the village, that bears the leshen's mark. Return to Sven, who's making unsubstantiated claims about the village elders mating with beasts. He's taken aback when you reveal the marked villager is Hilde. His hubris shrivels away, and he agrees to the banishment you recommended. However, if you told Sven that they need to get rid of the marked person, and he doesn't know it's Hilde, she is taken away and killed. You are now free to destroy the leshen's three totems (see below).

The Nithing

End: Sowing His Seed With The Herbalist Hussy

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Lothar about how to lift the curse.

It seems Lothar has been more than economical with his lovemaking, and Jonna wants him back in her arms. He doesn't want this though, as it will shame his wife and family.

You can coax him into one of the following, when Lothar wishes death upon Jonna:

- Say "can't do that", and he reluctantly heads to Jonna, to save his son and take responsibilities for his actions. The quest concludes.
- Say "so be it", and help Lothar, despite the newly gathered information. You need to reverse the nithing's curse. Head to it and inspect it and inscribe a new target on the shaft. Now return to Lothar for your reward. Afterward, when you return to Rannvaig, your inscription has resulted in the death of Joanna (though you aren't suspected). You've lost a prime source for rare herbs and recipes.

After either decision is made, the quest concludes. If you reverse the curse on Janna, Lothar awards you with crowns.

PEACE DISTURBED

LOCATIONS: Crossroads, Wraith's Crypt

CHARACTERS: Skellige Women

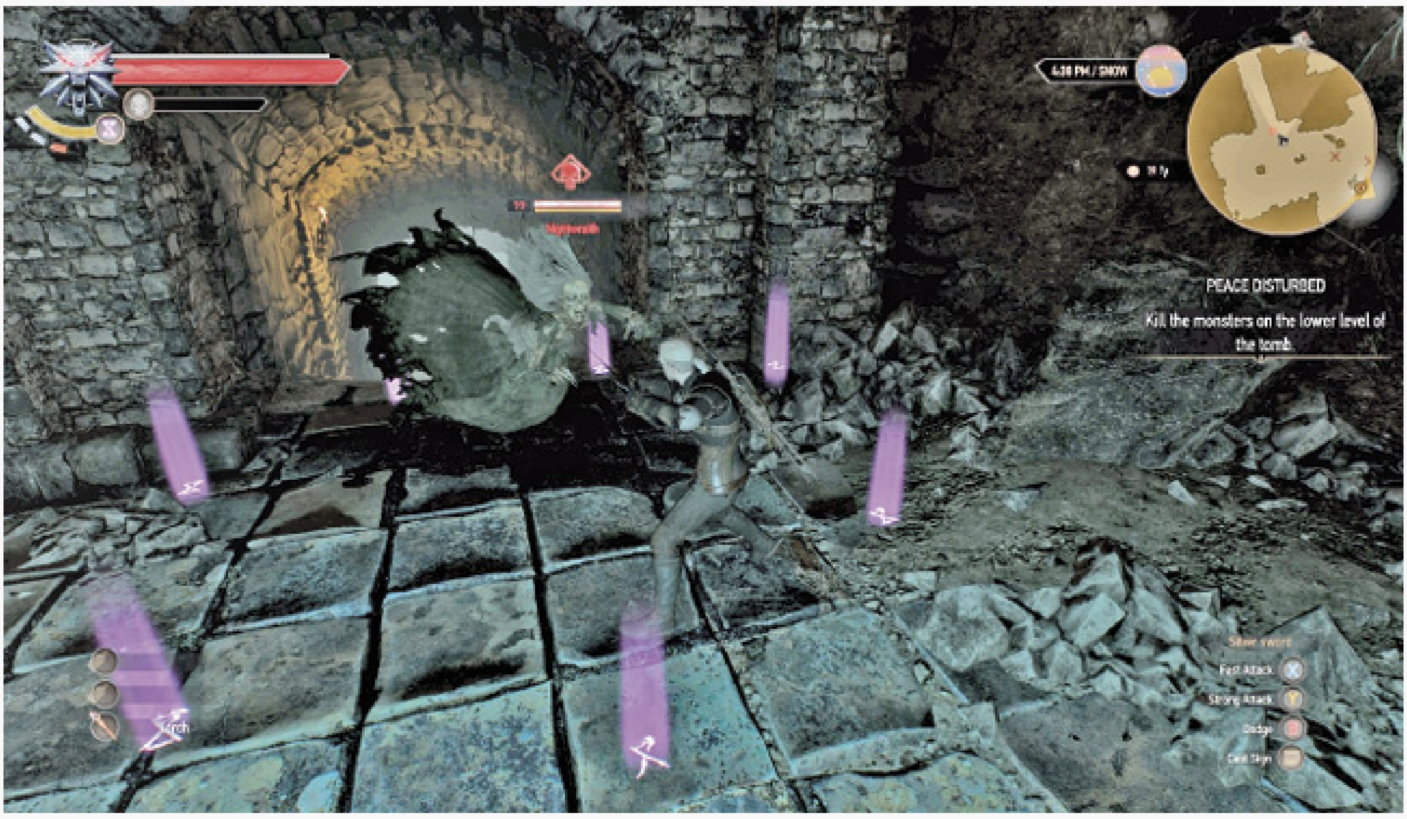
ENEMIES: Wraiths, Nightwraith-

OBJECTIVES

- Enter the tomb.
- Kill the monsters on the lower level of the tomb.
- Talk to the women waiting outside.
- Nearest Signpost: Crossroads.

Take a right turn down a dirt path just north of the Crossroads signpost on the on the central western coastal path of the main isle, southeast of Kaer Trolde Harbor. The trail leads to an ominous crypt entrance, and two Skellige women who tell you they're collecting nails cut from corpses to build cursed longships with. They're also hoping you'll rid the nearby crypt of any ghosts to increase their haul.

Enter the large entrance crypt, where you're able to blow out (and re-ignite) the candles atop the many coffins. Head into the tunnel to the northeast, down the steps, and slay a single wraith at the alcove corner. Then venture deeper into the lower chamber. Two more wraiths must be snuffed out in this alcove tomb.



Then it's a wander down a tunnel to the north, to the lowest tomb sanctum. Two wraiths and a nightwraith are lurking lurking in the lowest level of this crypt. Kill the nightwraith, and all other wraiths are banished. Once you are victorious, retrace your steps back to the surface, and explain that the tombs have been cleansed. Well done, Witcher. A sacrifice to Freya will be made in your name.

Gremist The Venerable Alchemist

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

PRACTICUM IN ADVANCED ALCHEMY

LOCATIONS: Gedyneith, Morskogen Forest, Succubus' Cave, Distillery, Blandare

CHARACTERS: Quarreling Druid, Gremist, Druid Tracker, Ramund, Succubus, Fritjof

ENEMIES: Ghouls, Cyclops, Foglets

OBJECTIVES

- Ask the druid about Gremist.
- Nearest Signpost: Gedyneith.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is available when you visit the druid's sacred oak in the ceremonial heath of Gedyneith, in eastern Ard Skellig. It can also be started by asking alchemists throughout the lands (including Velen and Novigrad) for a master alchemist once you have this option.

Gremist

Travel down to the cave by the pond, at the foot of the heather slopes, and listen to a conversation between two druids. Approach the less senior of the two and ask about Gremist.

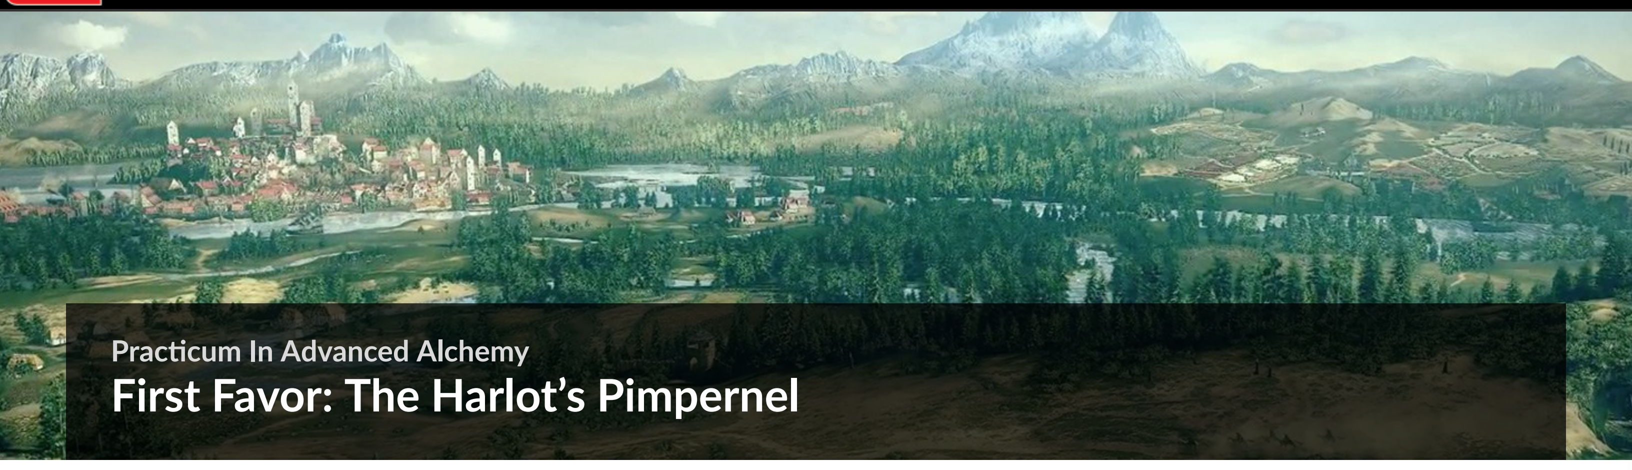
Apparently he is an exceptional alchemist, but as stubborn as an ass. He has many formulae in his head, but will not share them. Move on to Gremist himself, who isn't the friendliest of sorts. Ask him to teach you alchemy. The answer is emphatically negative. Ask how he can be convinced (or that you'll be a good student). He softens a little. He is preparing a tricky ritual, and requires assistance—three favors before he'll accept you as an apprentice:

- Bring him a pimpernel from the Morskogen Forest.
- Obtain and return with a bottle of spirit from the old distillery on Hail Hill.
- Finally, convince Fritjof (who lives near Blandare) to help Gremist perform the rite.

Agree to these demands, and don't forget to ask for further information on each favor before you depart.

THREE FAVORS

The three favors can be attempted in any order (though the quickest route is to complete the Blandare favor first, then the forest, and then the distillery). All three favors take place on Ard Skellig, between the center of the island (Blandare) and the southeast (the distillery).



Practicum In Advanced Alchemy

First Favor: The Harlot's Pimpernel

OBJECTIVES

- Find a pimpernel in the forest.
- Search the woods for the missing apprentice and some pimpernel.
- Nearest Signpost: South of Druid's Camp.

SECOND FAVOR

This favor should be completed second, if you're concerned about an optimal route between each favor.

Ride south until the calm forests become more windswept, and the pine trees a little more ragged. In the large Morskogen valley (where the magical cataclysm took place), attack any white wolves you wish, then gallop to the objective area where pimpernel is said to grow, and inspect the bush the ingredient grows on. It seems it was picked recently.

Someone else is in the undergrowth—a druid also sent here by Gremist. In fact, a multitude of apprentices have attempted to find this flower, but all have returned unsuccessfully, and unwilling to explain what they found. Recently, one druid failed to return at all. You agree to search the vicinity with this druid tracker. Use your Witcher Senses:

- You uncover some hoof marks in the undergrowth. Head southeast.
- The marks become a trail leading up-slope, to the south. They are bipedal, so not from a horse.

A number of footprints (some fresh, others faded); they all lead up the slope roughly southeast. Follow them.

Succubus

Ramund

There is sound of torture ahead. No wait, it's the sounds of tickling. A young druid named Ramund is giggling with a succubus (now you know why the apprentices were reluctant to explain what they experienced). The tracker druid is most perturbed, and claims Ramund has had an addling spell cast upon him. He readies his staff for combat. You can:

- Agree with the druid (that the succubus needs to die) and she will defend herself.

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the Succubus.

This is a tricky fight. The succubus is a powerful creature that uses magic, and the terrain is not condusive to dodging. Be mindful of her spells and get in close when you can to deliver blows. Slay the succubus and witness a very disturbed Ramund curse you and storm off, with the druid you helped thanking you before he chases the perturbed apprentice.

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to find and pick a pimpernel.

You can detect the succubus' scent easily once she is dead. Use your Witcher Senses to follow it, eventually finding a cave. Enter the cave and find that the succubus has been collecting flowers for a while. Maybe she wasn't so bad after all? Regardless, using your Witcher Senses you can identify and pick the pimpernel.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the succubus into her lair.
- Find and pick a pimpernel.

Or, you can side with the succubus, explaining that she's mostly harmless. The fuming druid storms off, muttering something about returning with reinforcements. Ramund is sent off to pick flowers.

COMPLETE THIS THIRD FOR SPEED

This favor should be completed third, if you're concerned about an optimal route between each favor.

Hike up past the snow line in a southeasterly direction from the succubus' cave, utilizing the rocky path to ensure you don't slip and kill yourself (should you venture into the steep slopes of this part of Ard Skellig). At the top of the mountain peak is a flat icy ground, where ghouls are prowling.

The cave is currently home to a lumbering cyclops. Not for long. Once it has been cut down to size, use your Witcher Senses, and inspect the premises:

- The huge boiling vats are intact, though tarnished.
- The wooden scaffold has a ladder to climb, and a platform where you can find some mash.
- A small raised cabin has some distilling recipes on a bed. On an adjacent bed is an open log book. Gather and read both of them.

Items: Quest Items: Mash, Distiller's Letter, Distiller's Log

Now step over to the distilling machine, examine it closely, and look for a metal vat to add your mash to. Once added (from your Quest menu) it must be boiled. Use Igni a number of times to light the fireplace and rapidly heat the base of the vats. When you mention the vats are hot enough, and must be cooled down, move to the levers on the side of the brewing machinery. Remember the instructions you read—pull the right lever first, then the left, opening a series of valves that cool the vats down with water, and complete the brewing process. Gather the Skellige spirit from the barrel and leave, watching for encroaching ghouls as you go.

Third Favor: Fritjof Is Feeling Parched

OBJECTIVES

- Find a druid in the nearby village and convince him to talk to Gremist.
- Go to the ritual site with the druid.
- Defend the druid while he completes the ritual.
- Nearest Signpost: Blandare.

FIRST FAVOR FOR THE SAKE OF SPEED

This favor should be completed first, if you're concerned about an optimal route between each favor.

Make the trip to Blandare in the center of Ard Skellig. Visit the crossroads in the middle of the village, where Fritjof the druid is located. He agrees to meet Gremist, but he has other concerns at the moment; the drought ravaging the village, for starters. Agree to defend the druid after he summons the rain, should Mother Nature be angered by such a ritual. Head northeast, across the planted field, following the druid who has already instructed his pet warg to round up a couple of goats and sheep for the sacrifice.

Fritjof is almost immediately successful after he slaughters his animals. Sitting cross-legged at the sacrificial altar on the field, he continues his prayers while foglets are summoned with alarming frequency. With one eye on Fritjof's health, advance and defeat the foglets that appear. Expect around eight or nine in groups of three. Don't venture too far from Fritjof as the foglets immediately swarm and attack him, and he cannot take too many strikes.

END: STIMULATION AND ASSIMILATION

OBJECTIVES

- Return to Gremist.
- Wait till the next day.
- Talk to Gremist about your reward.

Make the journey back to Gedyneith, finding and opening the wooden door at the cave entrance by the pond. Gremist is inside, puffing away at a pipe with Fritjof. As you've completed the three favors, Gremist agrees to begin his lengthy ritual, but you are forbidden from watching. Step outside, and wait. Once you've completed other quests, or simply meditated for one entire day (or multiple times during a day and night cycle), return to the cave, where Gremist and Fritjof are lolling around, drunk off their feet. A complicated rituatl indeed! Join them for a tipple, while collecting the following rewards:

OBJECTIVES

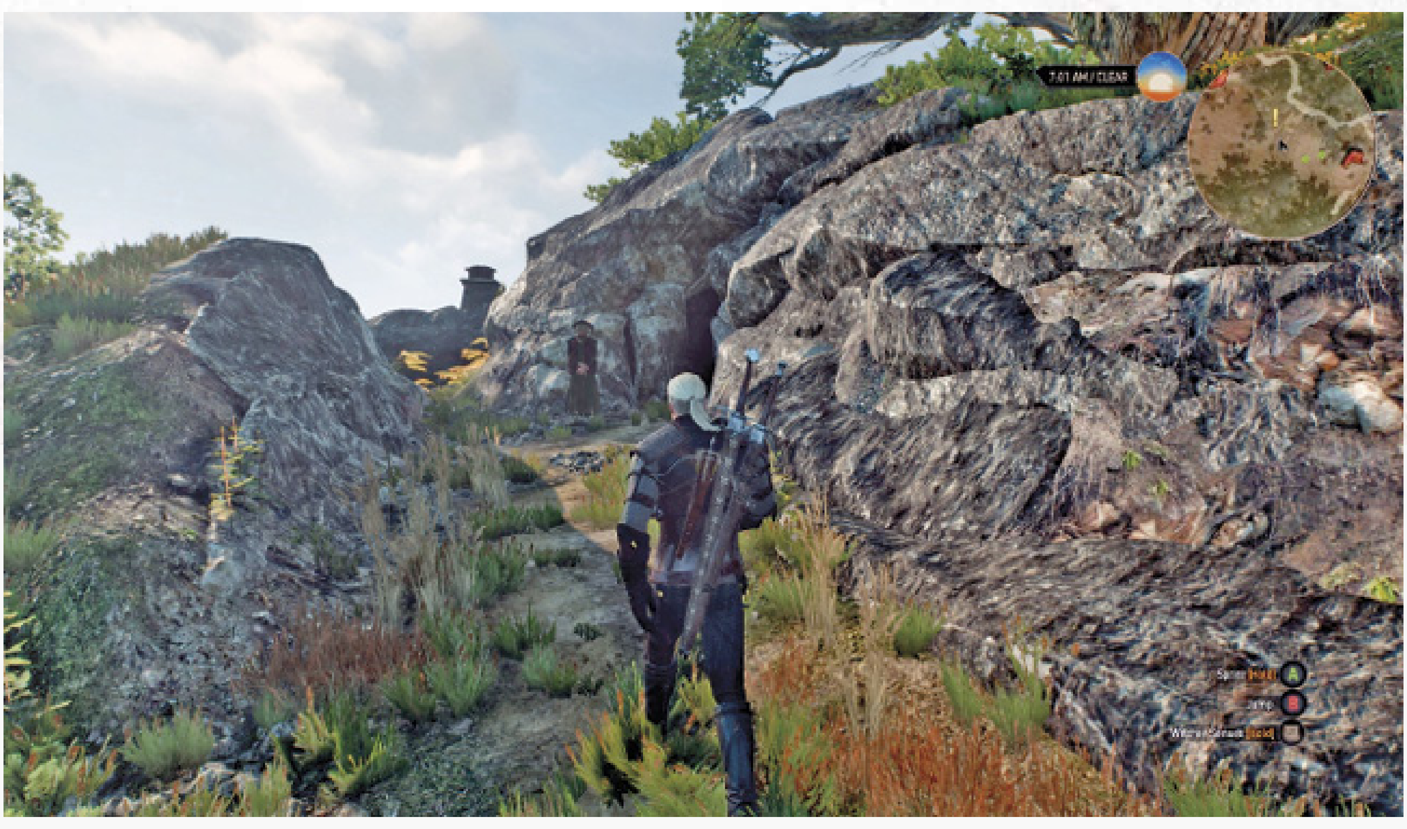
- Go visit Egill.
- Help Egill recover his voice by giving him a scare.

Egill

The ancient oak tree of Gedyneith is a place of meditation for many of Skellige's religious folk, but a few have taken this to an extreme. Head up the craggy hillside just east of the marker, and you'll speak with a concerned druid, who hopes you might jolt his friend Egill out of his imposed silence. You're offered the prospect of an excellent Gwent card for your troubles.



The silent druid is sitting or standing around his campfire, close to the woods just below you. Speak with him for a one-sided conversation, which ends in a one-fingered gesture of displeasure.

As you're here to scare him into speaking, it's going to take a few magical encouragements (the following steps can be done in any order, but only when he moves close to each area).

SHOCK THERAPY
Keep trying to scare the druid until he recovers his voice. 3/3

OBJECTIVES

- Keep trying to scare the druid until he recovers his voice (3).
- Return to the druid who gave you the task.

- Step 1: Find the hornet's nest on the tree stump, close to the rock and where Egill is dozing. Step back, and cast Aard, blowing the hornets out of the nest, and causing them to swarm Egill. That helps.
- Step 2: Take your pestering to another level by locating the small campfire that Egill is standing near, and then blow it out using Aard. You can see the druid is silently seething. That helps, too.
- Step 3: Walk to the rack where the druid keeps his pots and pans, and launch an Aard wave into them, so they clatter and make a din.

After the third step, the furious Egill launches a verbal tirade in your direction, which snaps him out of his silence. He's furious with you, but his anger is worth your while. Simply leave him and head up the hill to the small cave entrance where the initial druid requested your help. He's having a laugh about the chaos you've caused. He lives up to his end of the bargain, and rewards you for your troubles as the quest concludes.

LOCATIONS: Arinbjorn, Kaer Muire

CHARACTERS: Jorund, Leif, Simun Brambling, Madman Lugos

ENEMIES: Kori, Kraki

RECOMMENDED ITEM: Axii Delusion Level 3

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the warriors who picked a fight with you.
- See what's happening outside.
- Nearest Signpost: Arinbjorn.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is only accessible once you complete Contract: The Phantom of Eldberg.

The last objective during Contract: The Phantom of Eldberg involves claiming a reward for banishing a troublesome wraith from the Eldberg Lighthouse. You reconvene with Jorund at his longhouse tavern in the village of Arinbjorn in northwest Ard Skellig. After speaking to Jorund, two warriors approach you. These two bigots are known to you, since they hassled you at the start of the contract. They aren't letting up now, either.

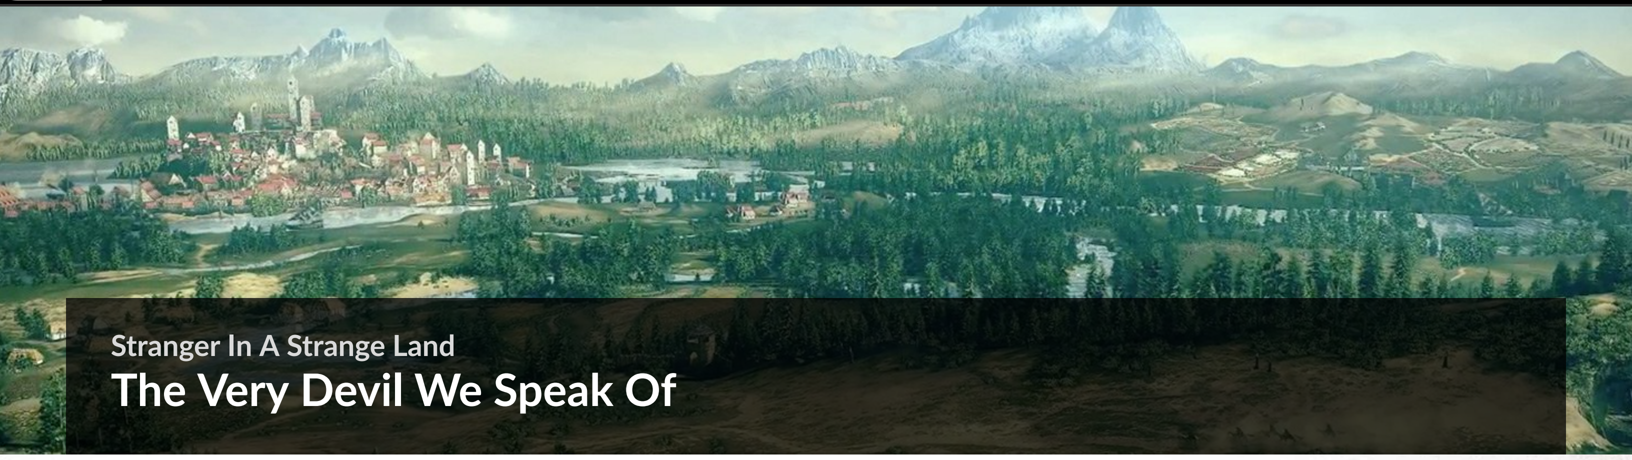
Kori

Kraki

Leif

After some harsh words are exchanged, choose a conversation as you wish. Either option results in a fight to the death, with Jorund by your side against Kori and his easily-lead brother, Kraki. Despite your prowess with a blade, the combat ends with Kori cutting down Jorund. Finish off the two fools immediately afterward. Jorund asks for a last nip before he visits the afterlife, and passes away. Wait, what's that commotion outside?

Leave the longhouse tavern, where you're stopped by a mob of angry villagers. Kori's father Leif brandishes you a murderer. You may answer them as you wish, but you are made to stand and defend your actions before the jarl—alarmingly named Madman Lugos. You're not expecting a fair trial.



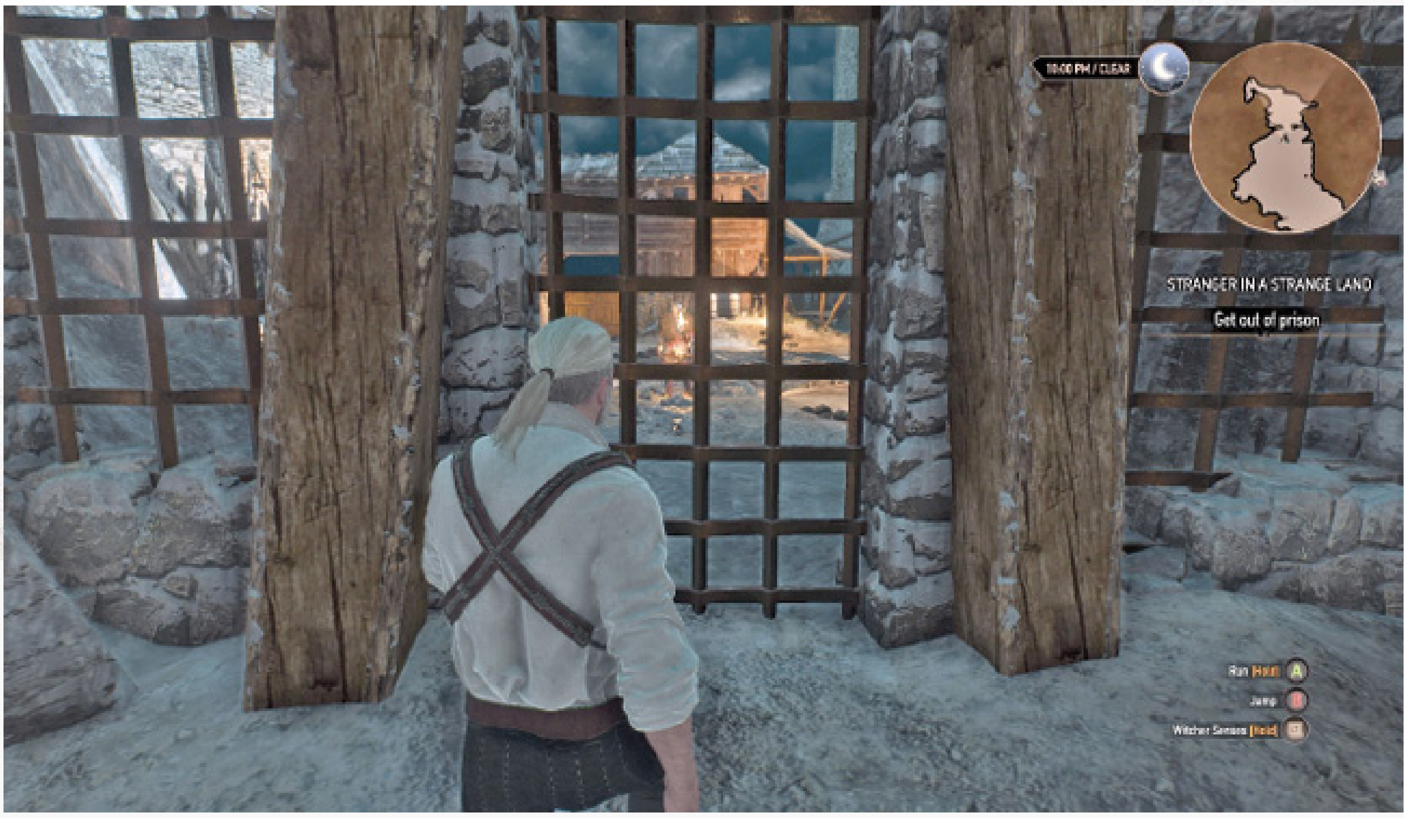
Stranger In A Strange Land

The Very Devil We Speak Of

OBJECTIVES

- Get out of prison.

You have no weapons, and you're languishing in prison. Run past the rock-crackers and speak to a bare-chested man named Simun Brambling. He has little to say except for the need to escape. Head to the prison gate and speak to the guard. It seems your trial has been postponed… by at least a year. You can:



- (Axii Delusion Level 3) Befuddle the guard into letting you out of the prison.
- Tell the guard you have no time, or that you can make a deal. Either offering falls on deaf ears.
- Talk to Simun and take his offer. He agrees to help you convince the guard to let you out, but you'll owe him a favor (Secondary Quest: An Unpaid Debt he'll ask you for later on.
- Or, you can start punching any other prisoners, engaging in a fistfight. Win, and the guards are impressed, taking you to see Lugos.

You are brought before the Jarl where Leif is making an impassioned plea for your head. He asks you for your opinion. Answer how you wish (it makes no difference) you're found guilty of murder, and sentenced to death by suffocation. Or by paying Kori and Kraki's weight in silver. Neither option is terribly appealing, so you're surprised when Lugos pays off Leif. You are now in Lugos' debt of pride.

- A debt that must be paid. Secondary Quest: The Cave of Dreams now begins.
- If you already completed Secondary Quest: Cave of Dreams already, you are simply let go as your debt to Lugos has already been paid in full.

King Bran of Skellige

Blueboy spies a totem, and you wolf down some herbs to bring on the nightmarish hallucinations. This has some interesting effects on Uve.

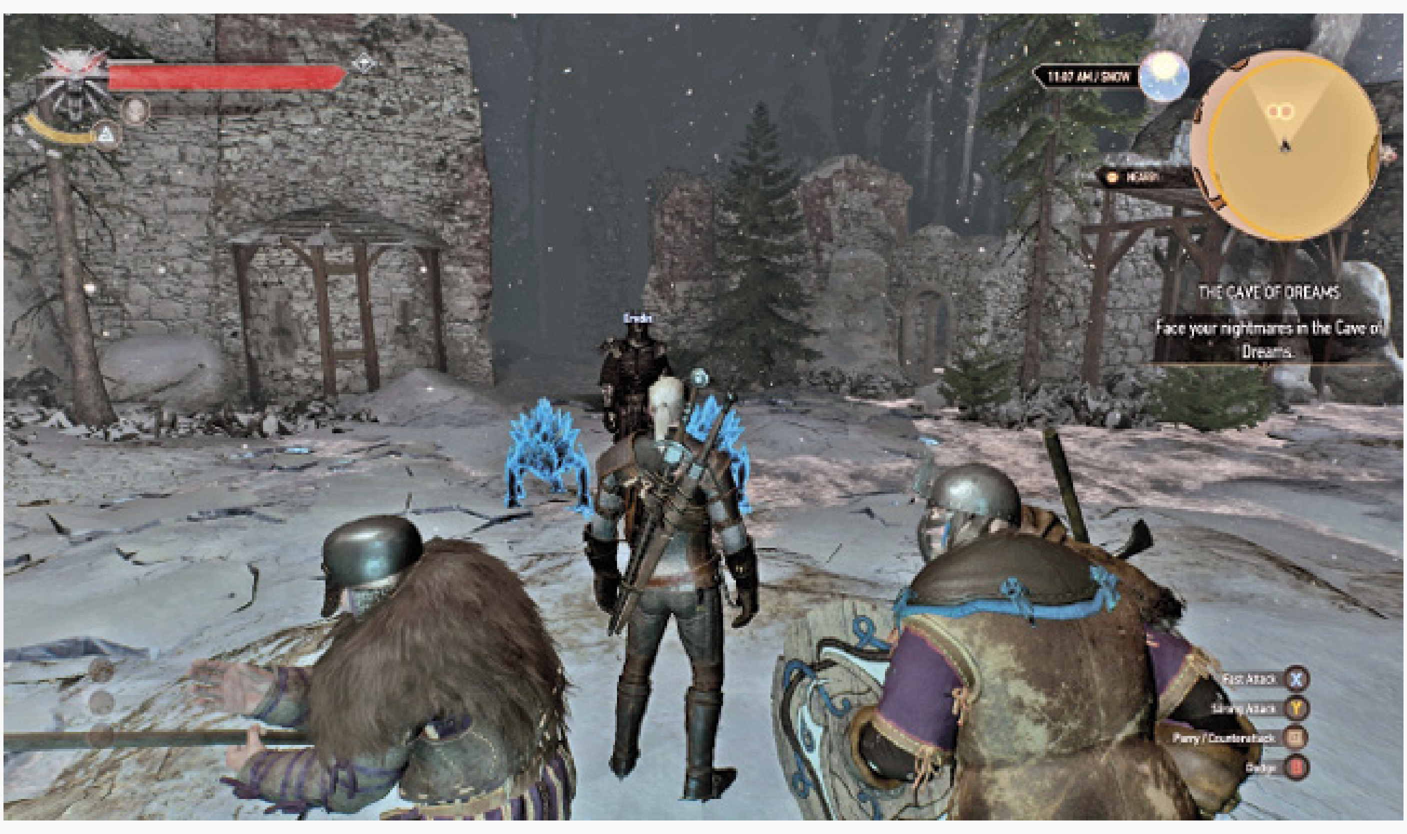
You are about to make merry with the clan, when Uve Jabberjaw finds his voice, insults the king, and forces you into combat with all six Tuirseach warriors! It is the one that he dashed into the rocks the night his father died. Sirens sing the song of guilt, and should be stopped and slain immediately.

After Jorulf's nightmare, you may face water hags in the silty and elongated tunnels. Continue to push onwards the next totem, where a vision of Madman Lugos appears to Blueboy. It seems Blueboy fears his father, and the specter of Madman Lugos challenges you all to combat. Slay him.



THE CAVE OF DREAMS
Face your nightmares in the Cave of Dreams.

After Blueboy's nightmare, continue north up the sloping tunnel, before dropping down to the next totem. A vision of belting sleet, and two baying hounds of the Wild Hunt, from which strides Eredin—the leader of the hunt you seek to kill. You have that chance now, though this is a simple spectral form. Ignore the hounds and slay Eredin's image.

The Cave Of Dreams

End: Blueboy's Buddy

You wake up at the entrance totem. Your nightmare is over. Blueboy now has no fear of his father, and was honored to fight by your side. A reward is offered (if you asked for money while being in debt to "Madman" Lugos, Blueboy insults your honor, but still pays you), and the quest concludes. Leave the cave the way you came in.

Approach and you'll discover that the instructions you're about to receive involve the murder of a man named Volund. Inquire what Volund's crimes were, and Volund pipes up, telling you Simun is the one in the wrong—he killed Volund's brother. Not that this matters to Simun; you're ordered to slay Volund. You can:

- Tell Simun you're not a murderer, and refuse. You must then kill Simun, who is furious you didn't repay your debt.
- Tell Volund it isn't anything personal, and attack. You must slay Volund, who is a pushover with you and Simun both attacking.

Johann Bohner

While exploring the port of Kaer Trolde Harbor, you may be drawn to a smartly-dressed merchant by the name of Johann Bohner. His fancy get-up masks a set back in his business dealings. His ship was wrecked and he's lost everything. He requires a loan, just a paltry 150 crowns. You can:

- (150 Crowns) Offer the monies to him (and the quest continues).
- Deny him the loan (and the quest concludes).

If you suspect you'd never see your loan again, you'd be wrong. The next time you're in Kaer Trolde, you meet him heading out of this area. He momentarily forgets that he already asked you for coin.

You can choose to turn him in, resulting in a fight. Pick your money off his corpse. Or trust that he will pay you back at a later date. The next time you're in Fyresdal village (Ard Skellig), he has your money with interest. The quest then concludes.

YUSTIANNA DISTURBED*

LOCATION: Yustianna's Grotto

ENEMIES: Bandits

RECOMMENDED ITEM: The Eye of Nehaleni, Axii Delusion Level 3

The strange cave known as Yustianna's Grotto, in northern Ard Skellig, offers a chance to loot some good treasure chests, as well as uncover some illusionary rock walls to fully explore this locale (but only if you have the Eye of Nehaleni from Keira Metz, having completed Main Quest: Wandering in the Dark). The central chamber, however, is being ransacked by bandits. Speak to their leader. You can:

- (150 Crowns) Stay alive by paying them.
- (Axii Delusion Level 3) Tell him you'll leave, but not pay.
- Or slay these idiots and claim the loot yourself.

After your encounter with the leader, this quest concludes.

IN WOLF'S CLOTHING

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Nameless
LOCATIONS: Lofoten, Freya's Garden, Morkvarg's Cave
CHARACTERS: Yennefer of Vengerberg, Priestesses of Freya, Einar, Morkvarg, Craven ENEMIES: Wolves, Morkvarg, Warriors

QUESTING DECISIONS

Main Quest: Nameless is a closely related quest, and much of the activities present in that quest are completed here, so you may wish to complete these quests simultaneously. This quest also becomes active if you decide to visit the Skellige island of Hindarsfjall and Main Quest: Nameless is yet to be completed. Simply read a notice at Larvik ("Contract: Morkvarg") that requests your help ridding the priestesses of the foul beast known as Morkvarg.

While exploring the isle of Hindarsfjall, and learning about the werewolf Morkvarg (from a notice pinned to the board outside the tavern, as shown), travel north from the cemetery into the center of the village of Lofoten. If you came here without Yennefer, before Main Quest: Nameless begins, look for a group of priestesses in Freya's Garden, in the temple area to the northeast. The Skellige women (priestesses of Freya) are conducting some kind of ritual. If Yennefer is with you, she interrupts the ceremony, and you ask the whereabouts of Ciri, the "ashen haired" one. Apparently, Ciri was seen before the Wild Hunt attacked, in the stables with a man named Craven (who is cursed by the other priestesses).

You may speak the women at length about Craven (Main Quest: Nameless). To clear his name, this Craven character attempted to clear his name by traveling to Freya's Garden to defeat Morkvarg; "the vilest man ever to inhabit Skellige," who stole, killed children and pregnant women, and attacked his own clan's lands. Answer how you wish. Afterward, you realize this monsterous Morkvarg has a complex curse upon him. You both decide to head to Freya's Garden in the hope of finding, and dealing with both Morkvarg and Craven. One of the women also hints that Einar, the only islander to escape with his life from a confrontation with Morkvarg, might have further information.

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Einar about the curse.
- Find the garden where the monster dwells.
- Nearest Signpost: Larvik.

Einar

Einar is situated across the island to the southeast, in the village of Larvik. Head towards the wharf between the rugged rocks of Larvik harbor. He is preparing to hunt some Nilfgaardians, but stays to tell you what happened in Freya's Garden. Morkvarg had bound the priestesses of the garden, slit their throats, and laughed as he was doing it. Archpriestess Ulve cursed him to remain a monster forever, and Morkvarg grew fur and transformed. This is going to be a difficult curse to lift. Bid Einar farewell.

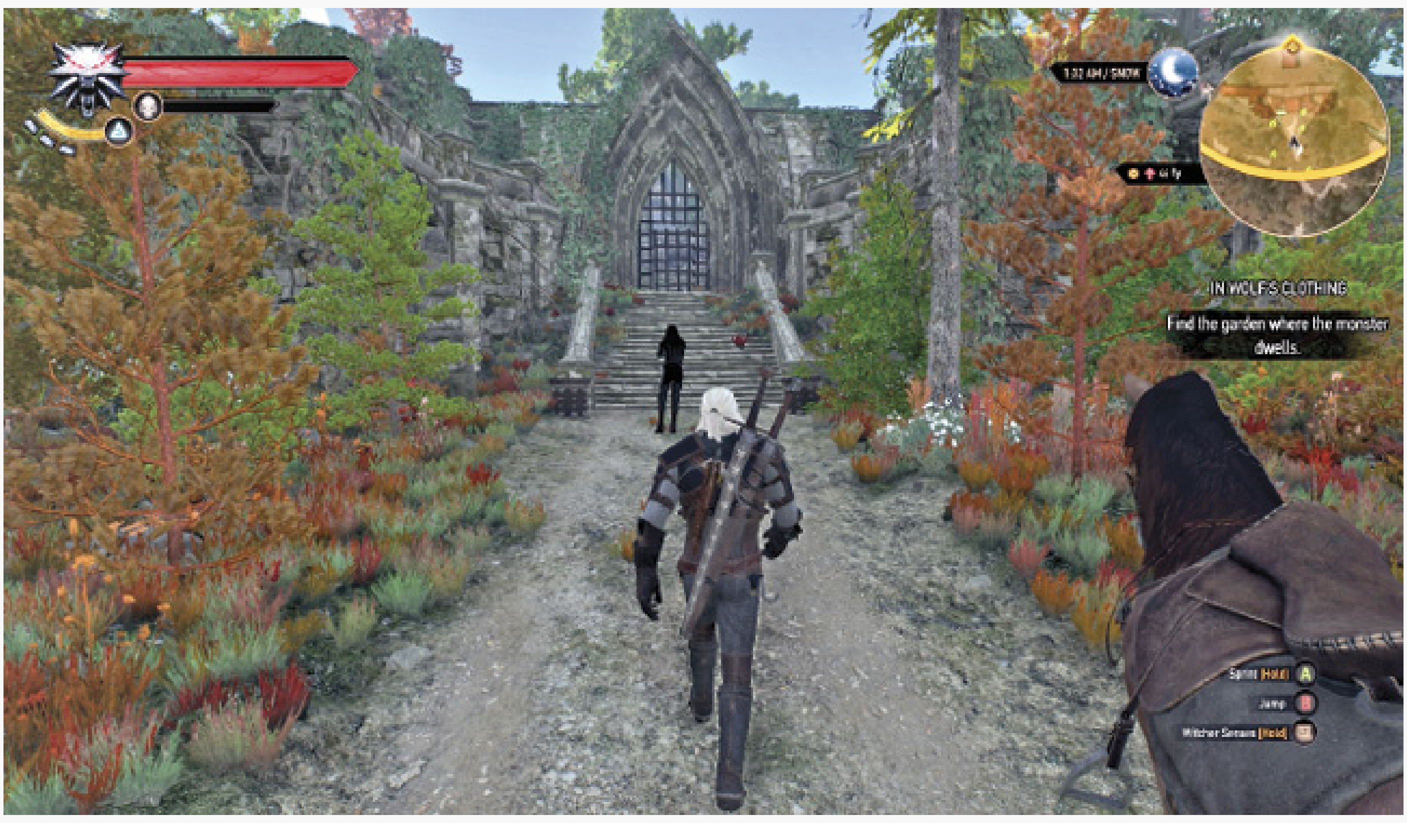
Craven Some Werewolf Combat

OBJECTIVES

- Find the garden where the monster dwells.
- Find Morkvarg.
- Nearest Signpost: Freya's Garden.

Morkvarg

Head to Freya's Garden; a walk along the main road heading northeast. At the gates, you hear gnawing sounds and muttering. A huge, sinewy werewolf is devoring some meat, lashes out at you through the gate, and flees towards a large oak tree deeper into the gardens. He doesn't seem to be receiving visitors.



OBJECTIVES

- Find Morkvarg.

The gate is locked, so continue up the steps to the right, across the ivy-covered stone bridges connecting various parts of the garden together, then head northwest, and into the very middle of the garden to a huge and sacred tree. You pick up a trail of blood immediately (someone cut himself to make a blood offering). Even though you can utilize your Witcher Senses at the tree, and begin to follow a variety of clues, this is part of Main Quest: Nameless. Ignore Craven's trail, and press on, further into the gardens.

In Wolf's Clothing

Overcoming An Undying Lycanthrope

Sprint past the sacred tree, drop down heading northeast, up some stone steps, and into an overgrown grassy stepped courtyard where there's a wolf to cut down. Then head to the edge of the raised garden and look down onto a lean-to and small canal.

Drop down from the lean-to and check the following with your Witcher Senses. There are many prints both old and new. Morkvarg's lair is close.

Climb the stone ladder embedded into the wall, and clamber onto the higher ground overlooking a sluice gate and two levers. There is a ruined bridge in this area with a locked gate on the other side.

You can't reach that to continue, so inspect this area closely. Utilizing both levers should allow you to open the flood gates. Save your progress, and start yanking those levers!

- The left lever changes the gears of the mechanism to lift up one of the three sluice gates. You can see which gate is able to be lifted by watching the three wooden mechanism dowels move up and down between the two levers. Simply use the left lever until the sluice gate you want is ready to be moved.
- The right lever moves the actual sluice gate you have chosen. There are three gates:
- The left gate opens a watery exit outside, and out of Freya's Garden, if you wish to leave easily.
- The middle gate allows access to the further part of the gardens, where both a well and a secondary structure is accessible; to further this quest.
- The right gate is under the waterfall, leading to an underwater cave where a key can be found. This is critical during Secondary Quest: In Wolf's Clothing, but don't head there yet; raise the gate in preparation before continuing.

Once the right sluice gate is open, you can continue.

Ramund's Assistance

OBJECTIVES

- Find the key Morkvarg mentioned using your Witcher Senses.
- Get rid of the werewolf in the garden.

From the gate mechanism turn right (roughly north) and run up and into a cave at the edge of the garden. A few steps into the cave, you witness Morkvarg speaking to the skull of an old friend Ramund about a key he needs. Your objective updates. Though you can "meet" Morkvarg now, it is far better to find the key first.

If you lack clues, step into the werewolf's cave, and slay this beast. Once he's down, Morkvarg pleads for you to undo the curse. You can speak at length about his pitiful existence, Craven, a reward, and learn that simply slaying him doesn't end his life. Morkvarg also mentions he eats his own flesh; it boils his tongue. Interesting. Finish him off, as you don't have the wherewithal to end his life. While Morkvarg is temporarily dismissed from his lair, use your Witcher Senses to check the ground; there's a draft from below.

OBJECTIVES

- Find a way into the flooded cave under Morkvarg's lair.

Ramund isn't much use (since he's a skull on a pole), so return to the garden (having raised the right sluice gate), dive into the canal, swim roughly northwards under the gate, and enter a second cave directly under Morkvarg's lair. Aside from a chest, there's the rest of Ramund's bones here. It seems he is useful after all—grab his key.

The Cursed Fang Of Torador

OBJECTIVES

- Ask Einar of Larvik why he lied to you about Morkvarg.
- Use the fang to lift Morkvarg's curse or find another way to lift it.

That scheming cutthroat Einar knows more than he is letting on! Back at Larvik, speak to Einar, who threatens to attack you with all his men. You can:

- Meet them gladly, and slay all five of these warriors. Afterwards, loot Einar's corpse of a cursed fang. However, you require information from Einar to understand how to use the fang; a more measured approach is needed if you wish to use the fang to complete this quest.
- Use conversation, not swords, to obtain information about a cursed fang, a gift from Einar's dad, telling him to hand it over for the priestesses' sakes.

Either way, you leave Einar with the fang, and a plan.

Items: Quest Item: Cursed Fang

Head back to Freya's Garden, using the wooden mechanism to lift the middle sluice gate this time. Swim through, climb the stone steps to the right, and up onto the higher garden ground you couldn't access from the broken stone bridge earlier. OBJECTIVES

- Collect your reward from the contract giver.

Inside the hall is a crudely constructed symbol of Freya on the ground, where the werewolf was lured. Use your Witcher Senses:

The offal and body parts in here are untouched, with no signs of feeding (some are werewolf-shaped!). .

Items: Quest Item: Morkvarg's Flesh

Once inside, Morkvarg appears again. Listen to his tale of woe if you wish, before facing him in combat once more. Now kill him, and while he lies on his side, remove his curse using either of the following:

- Feed him his own flesh. This must have been taken from Morkvarg after you "slew" him previously, and talked to him while he lay dying, before he disappeared.
- Hand him the Cursed Fang of Einar. However, this only works if you've been told how to use the fang by Einar. If you killed him, the fang is useless.

Either item has been previously picked up, and should be accessed from your Quest Items inventory. An unsteady Morkvarg rises to his feet, now in human form, and ready to dash to the nearest tavern. He has a reward for you; promise to let him go and he tells you of a specific loanshark in Novigrad to visit, who keeps his loot safe, and you can have it for dis-enchanting the curse. Agree to this, or find this information out first, and then kill him! Slay him like the deviant he is, then return to the priestesses of Lofoten for your reward, and the conclusion of this quest.

Items: Saimain Brigandine (Armor): If you use his own meat. Nothing if you use any other method.

Items: Deithewn (sword), Werewolf decoction (recipe): From Novigrad loanshark only.

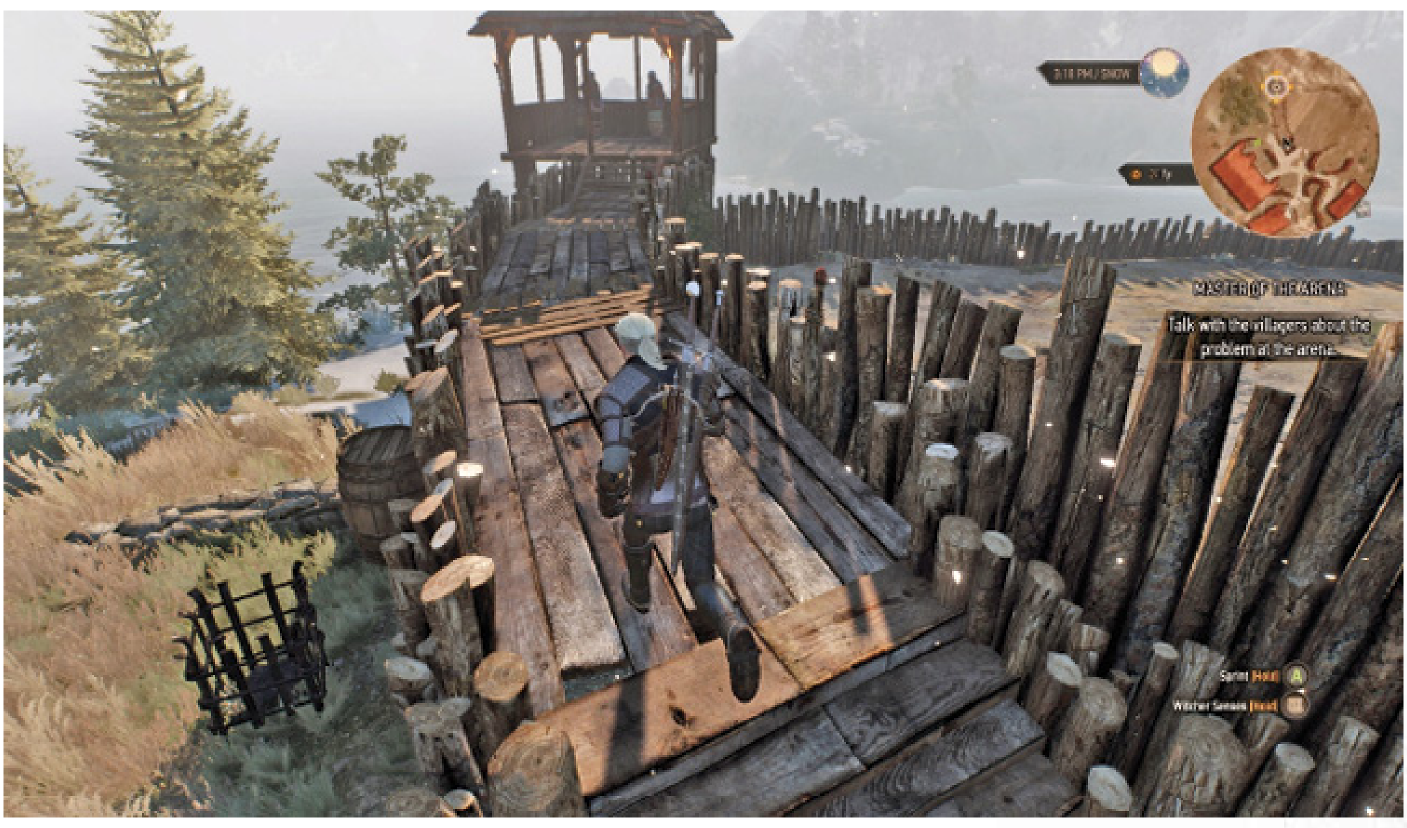
LOCATION: Hov

CHARACTERS: Gunnar, Lydrik

ENEMIES: Ulle the Unlucky

Visit the wooden sentry hut overlooking the ocean, on the hillside village of Hov, and speak to the two warriors chatting about the arena. They are having trouble ridding the arena of a wraith.



Offer to help, and ask about the arena (it was where the best warriors across the islands clashed), and the wraith itself (named "Ulle the Unlucky", a man who lost every bout, but couldn't die in the arena, slew a Jarl unjustly and is now cursed to haunts the fighting grounds).

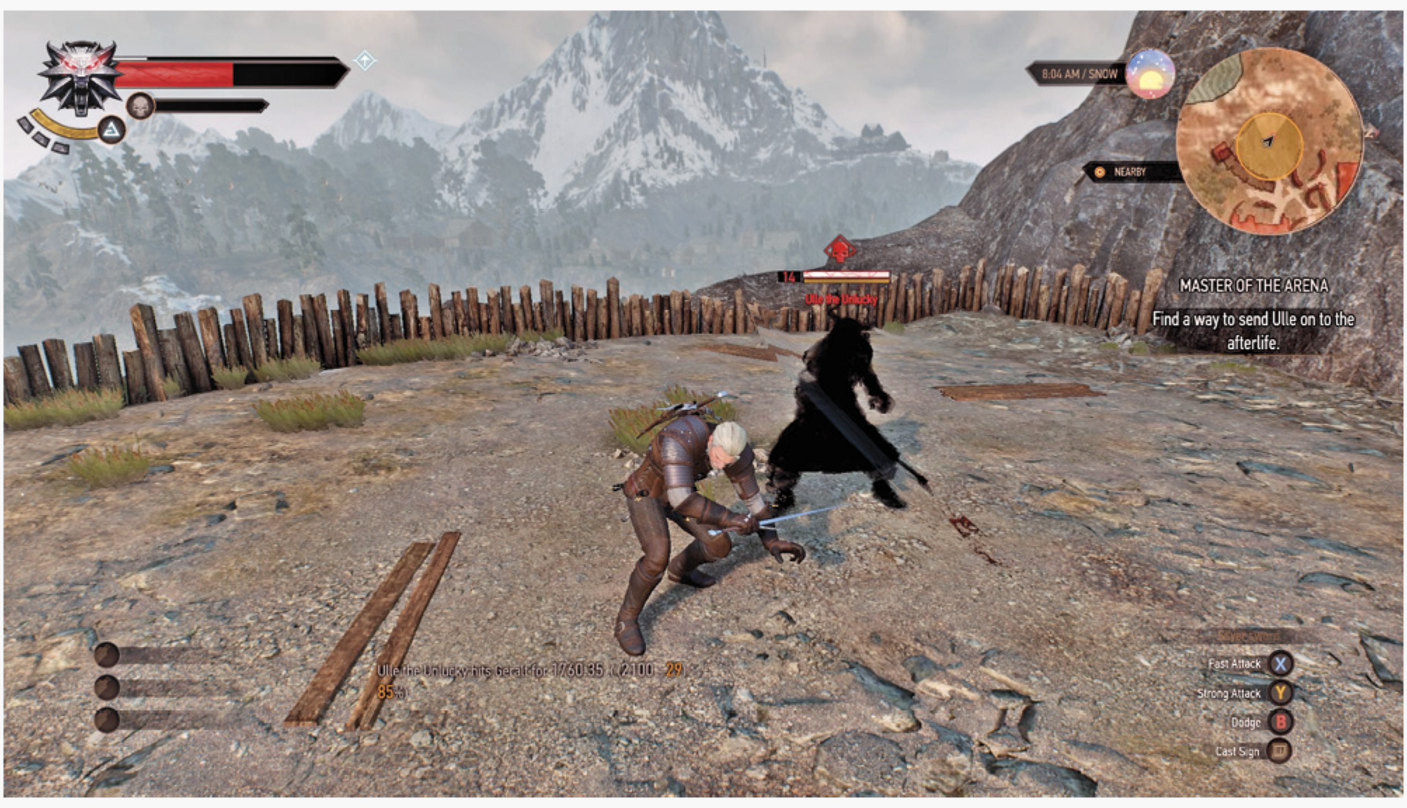
Ulle the Unlucky

The double gates to the clifftop arena are adjacent to the battlements. Push open the door, and speak to the strange congealed collection of vapors—the wraith Ulle the Unlucky. Speak to Ulle (remarking he's not typical of this type of monster as he's speaking, not shrieking at you), who is resigned to his fate ever to return here. You must now draw your weapon, and fight Ulle.



END: GERALT THE SELFLESS

OBJECTIVES

- Find a way to send Ulle on to the afterlife.
- Return to the warriors.
- (Optional) Return to the Spikeroog arena later to collect your precent of the takings.

Your bout with Ulle isn't that difficult. Three or four parries and strikes, and he admits defeat, doomed to repeat this process another day from now (meditate and return here to face him again, if you win). After a little lateral thinking, you may figure out that the only way to dismiss this specter is to actually let him win the fight! Accomplish this by simply allowing him to strike you. When your health is almost depleted, the combat stops. Ulle is incredulous. He hears laughter, chalices clanking, and is summoned to join the feast of heroes in the afterlife.

Return to the warriors, telling them their ghost problem has been dealt with.

- If you talked to the warriors before you handled the wraith, return here in a few days to claim a reward of the profits.
- If you ignored the warriors, let Ulle defeat you, and then talked to the warriors, you receive a smaller reward, and no profits.

The quest concludes.

The Path Of Warriors

Two Trials On This Tiny Isle

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

THE PATH OF WARRIORS

LOCATIONS: Urialla Harbor (An Skellig), Mount Aardeklove

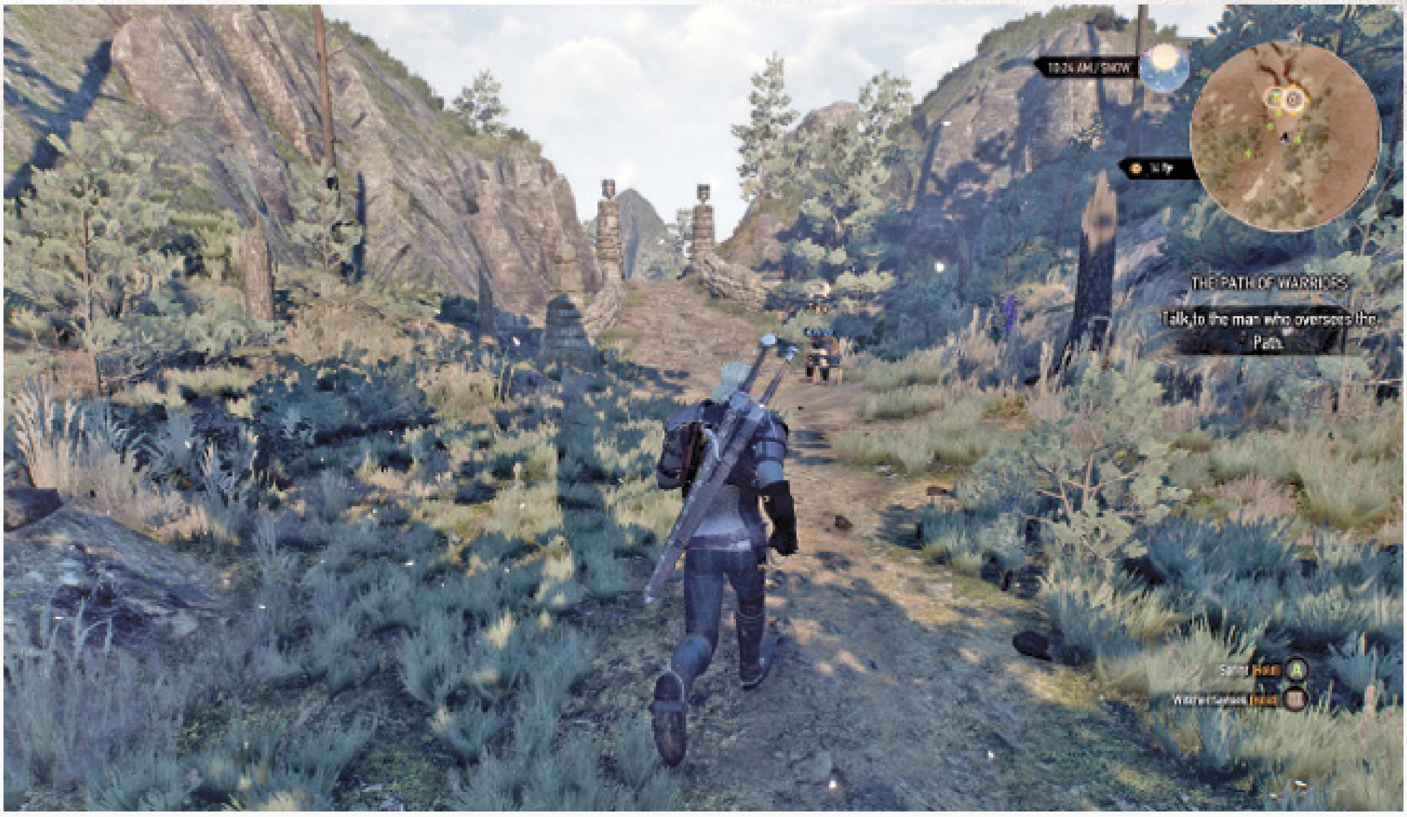
CHARACTERS: Skellige Women, Old Gunnar

ENEMIES: Endriaga, Sirens, Wraiths, Gargoyles

OBJECTIVES

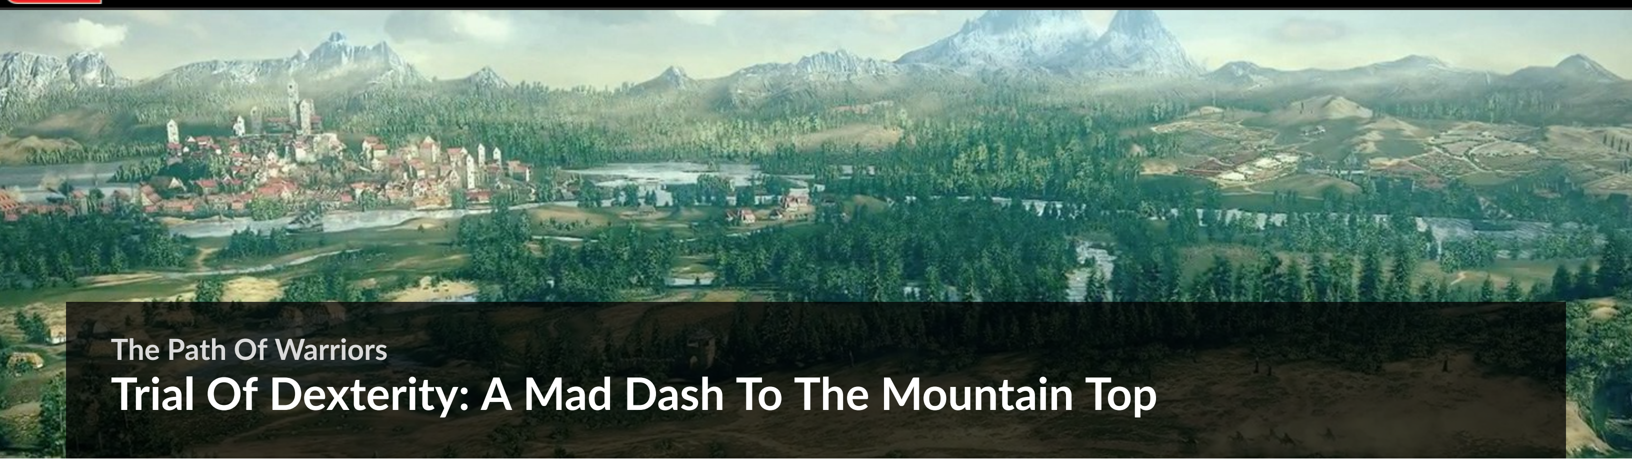
- Talk to the main who oversees the Path.
- Reach the start of the Path.

After arriving at Urialla Harbor on An Skellig, eavesdrop on a couple of Skellige women, who make mention of the Trial of the Path. Speak to them to find out this is an age-old tradition—only those that return from the trial can consider themselves true warriors. Old Gunnar can tell you more, he lives at the foot of Mount Aardeklove.



Bring your best endriaga-slaying implements with you, and travel along the path to the northeast, slaying at least two of these beasts as you pass a sunken homestead, and finally meet an older warrior sitting on a bench, at the Trail to Yngvar's Fang (a signpost). He isn't the friendlist of sorts, but he has some information on the paths:

There are two offshoots. One leads to the mountain peaks, and the other into the bowels of the earth. Traverse both to prove your valor. Speak with Gunnar at length to gain further insight into the trials if you wish. You're now able to choose which of the paths to start first, though it's easier to try the Trial of Dexterity (the mountain climb) first.



The Path Of Warriors

Trial Of Dexterity: A Mad Dash To The Mountain Top

OBJECTIVES

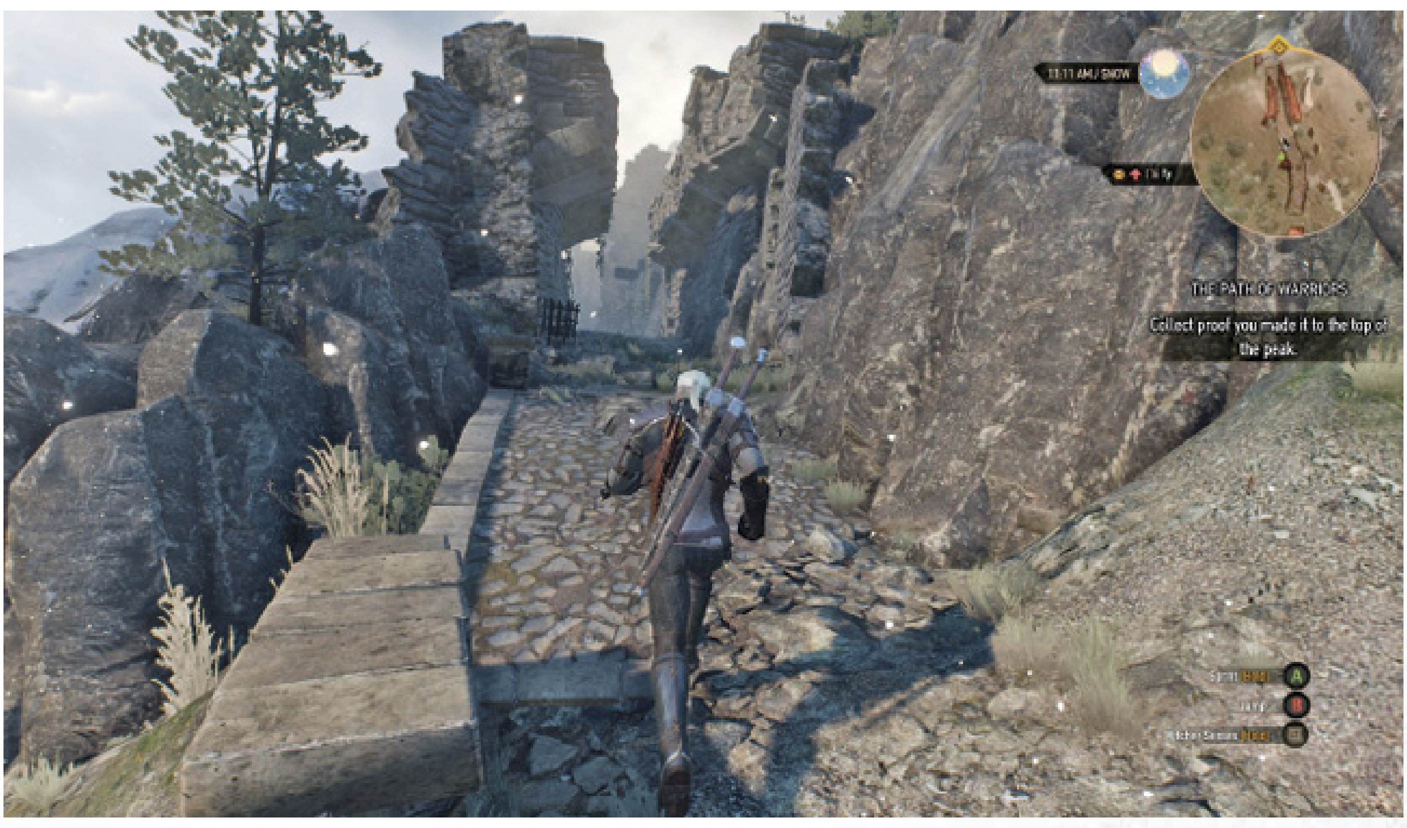
- Collect proof you made it to the top of the peak.

Head up the steps to reach the start of the path. Run forward, over the wooden bridge, and leap the gap before slaying a siren. Wait for two more and defeat them as well. Coax them over with Axii or crossbow bolts. Then move right along the path, leap a gap, and make a tight left turn as you climb up and onto the natural rock bridge. Now dash across the moss.

MORE HASTE, LESS SPEED

Falling while maneuvering across this increasingly dangerous pathway, full of leaps and precise landings, requires you to keep a steady head, and a degree of patience. Save your progress before each new leap. And look for rocks stained with bird droppings to climb on as you continue onwards and upwards. If you fall, there's usually a period of backtracking.

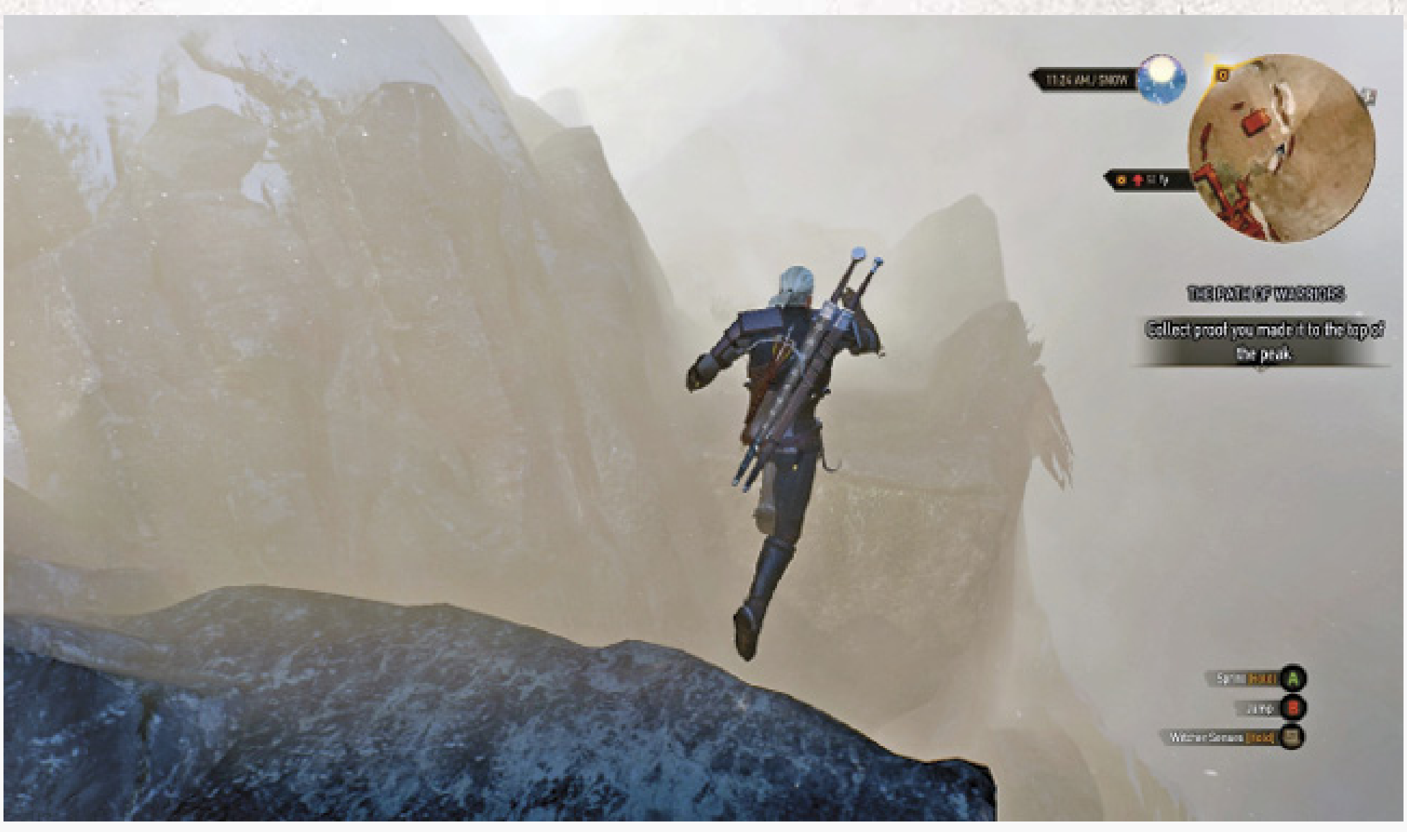
From the mossy bridge, leap and grab the ledge. Pull yourself up, and make a series of sharp switchback turns as you zig-zag up the mountain trail. Leap the gaps and pass by two tattered flags showing your progress. Continue west along the trail which flattens out slightly, and leap the gaps along the slope, after sliding down a little. When you can't continue, look left, and perform a series of climbing moves up the stone ledges of the ruined castle battlements above you, in a counterclockwise pattern.



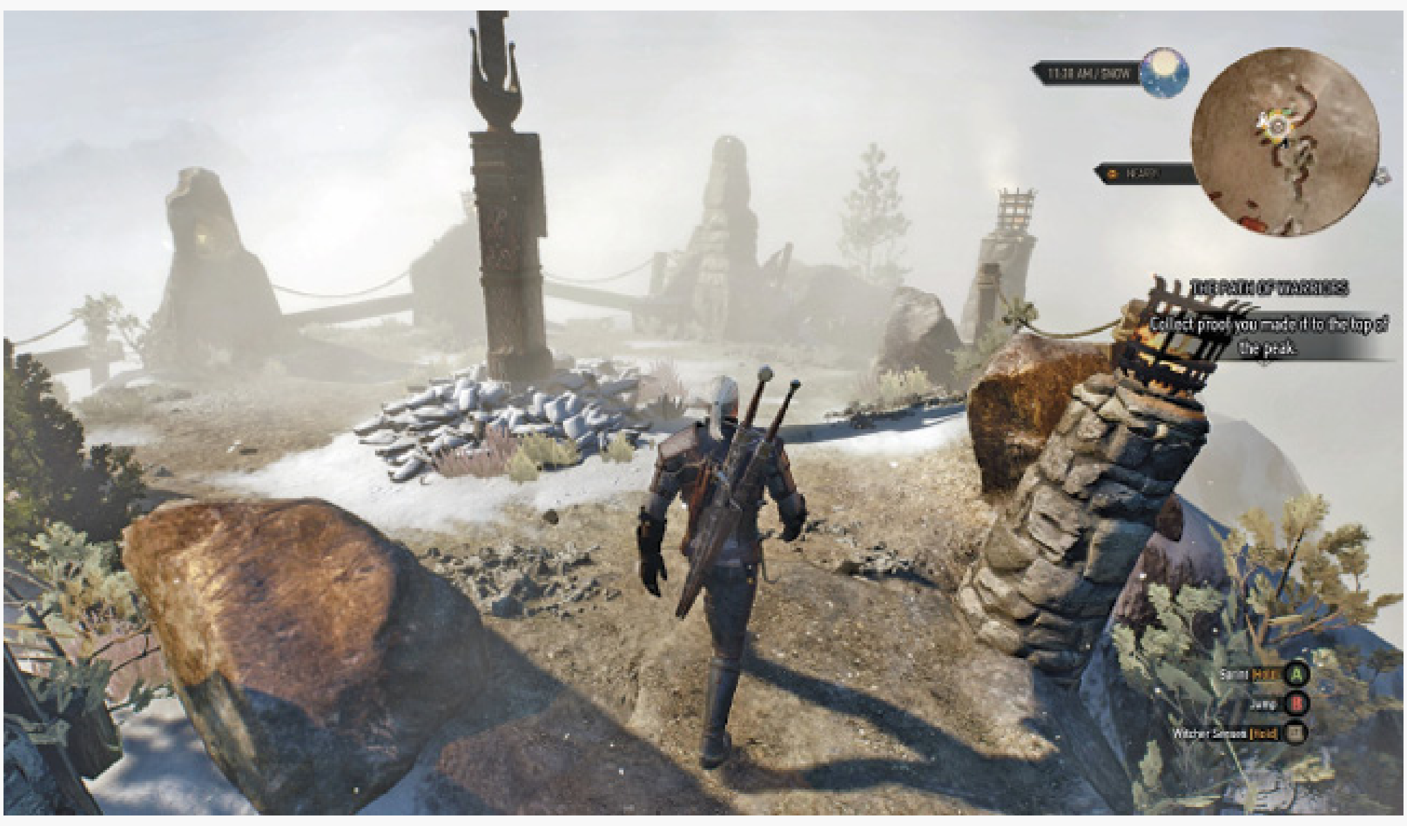
WITCHER SCHOOL GEAR IS HERE

During your climb, you pass through an old, ruined castle that holds some valuable treasure belonging to Witcher Gerd from the Bear School. If you choose to explore, be mindful of the wraiths roaming the abandoned halls. Read more about this by checking Scavenger Hunt: Bear School Gear.

Save your progress and, as the mists descend, make a large leap across the gap and another along this treacherous upper path, and slow as you spot a strange old man sitting by a door. He doesn't rate your chances. Ignore the door he sits by, and continue along the outer ledge, leaping again and ascending further. Leap a broken bridge with adeptness. Turn back and leap again, and after a final climb, you reach the zenith of Mount Aardeklove.



Now you're at the top of the peak, you must fight any harpies before you find evidence to support your dexterity. Rummage around the base of the totem marker, and discover the following token (amongst other items and a treasure chest). Then examine the Place of Power and gather an additional Ability Point before descending. Your descent involves either of the following:



- Taking exactly the same route as you did to get here. As always, slow and steady is better than fast and falling!
- Or, turn to the right and continue along a new path leading to a long and extremely entertaining slide all the way down to the next path.

Items: Quest Item: Trial of Dexterity Completion Token, Place of Power

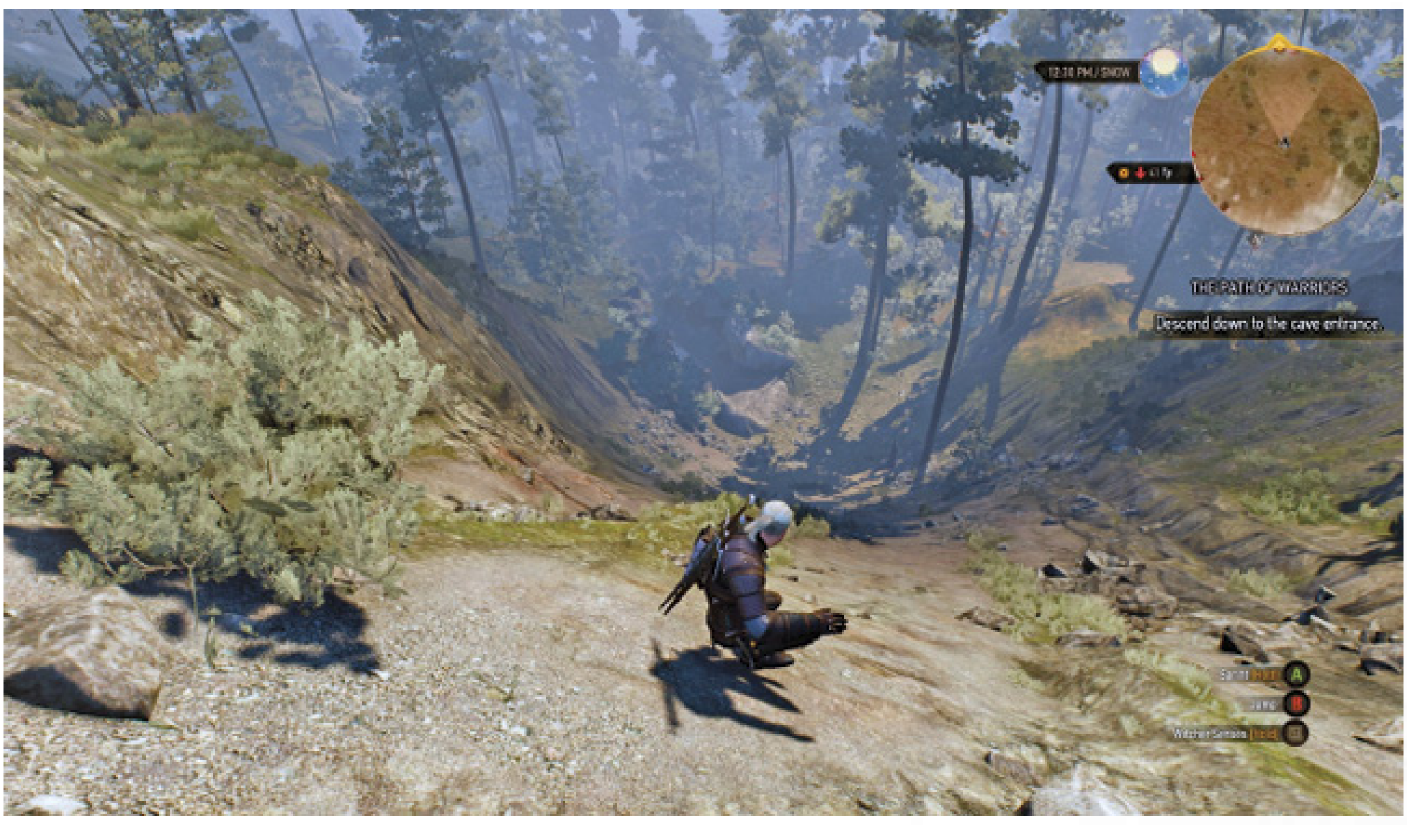
The Path Of Warriors

Trial Of Conviction: A Breath-Taking Journey Underground

OBJECTIVES

- Descend down to the cave entrance.

Although it is possible to slide down the slope from the mountain path, leaping off the path usually results in an agonizing death. Instead, you should retrace your steps to where Gunnar was sitting. Then use the main road, before a small detour into the wooded area, to reach the cluster of rocks marking the start of the Trial of Conviction.



DON'T DROWN—WHEN TO BREATHE

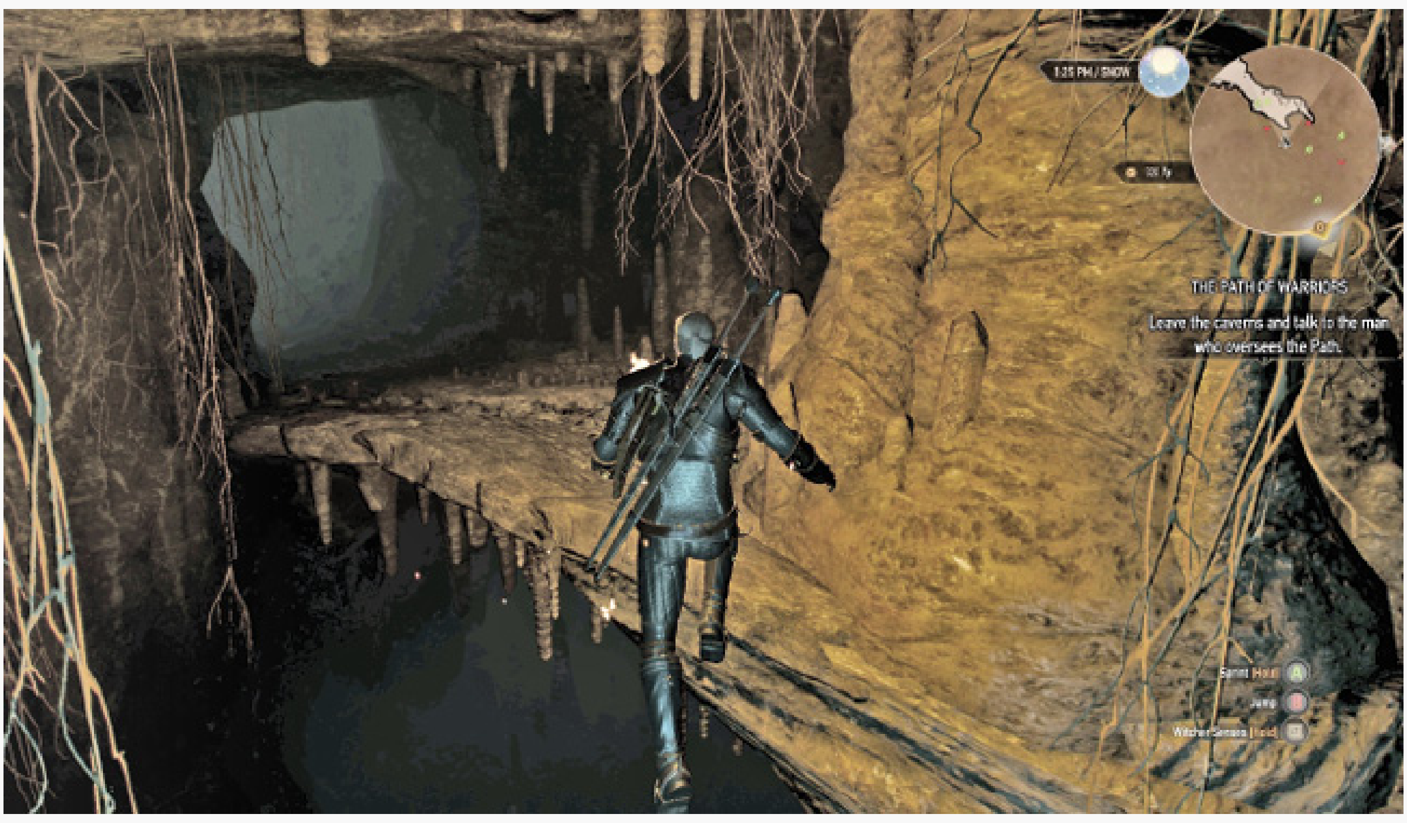
This trial involves holding your breath, swimming, and not succumbing to panic. Consult the Training chapter on swimming to help you progress, and use your minimap to spot the direction you must travel in.

OBJECTIVES

- Travel through the tunnel and collect proof you made it to the end.

Enter the cave and drop into the green water. Then, swim southwards as rapidly as your legs and lungs allow. Swim swiftly, and stay as close to the ceiling of this underwater tunnel as you can. Ascend into the air-filled cavern that you eventually reach.

When you surface in this small grotto, be mindful of climbing out. There is a reason Skellige warriors do not rest here because gargoyles reside in this cave! There's skeletal remains showing what happened to the warriors who did not heed Gunnar's warning.



THE PATH OF WARRIORS
Leave the caverns and talk to the man who oversees the Path.

Continue to dive through the passage. Near the end, you should notice a chest at the bottom. Pry it open and take the token within. Keep an eye on your air supply. If you are dangerously low, go to the end of the tunnel and surface to regain air before returning to get the token. Finally you can surface and climb up a ledge here. Follow the path through the cave, performing some more climbs and jumps until eventually you reach the exit of the cave.

Items: Quest Item: Trial of Conviction Completion Token

QUEST CONCLUSION: A DEED WORTH SHOUTINGTO THE FIVE ISLES ABOUT

OBJECTIVES

- Leave the caverns and talk to the man who oversees the Path.

It is now simply a matter of returning to Old Gunnar, who is usually at his tent near the seat at the start of the mountain path, and reveal the two tokens you've obtained. He is situably impressed, and offers a variety of rewards for your dexterity and conviction. The quest concludes.

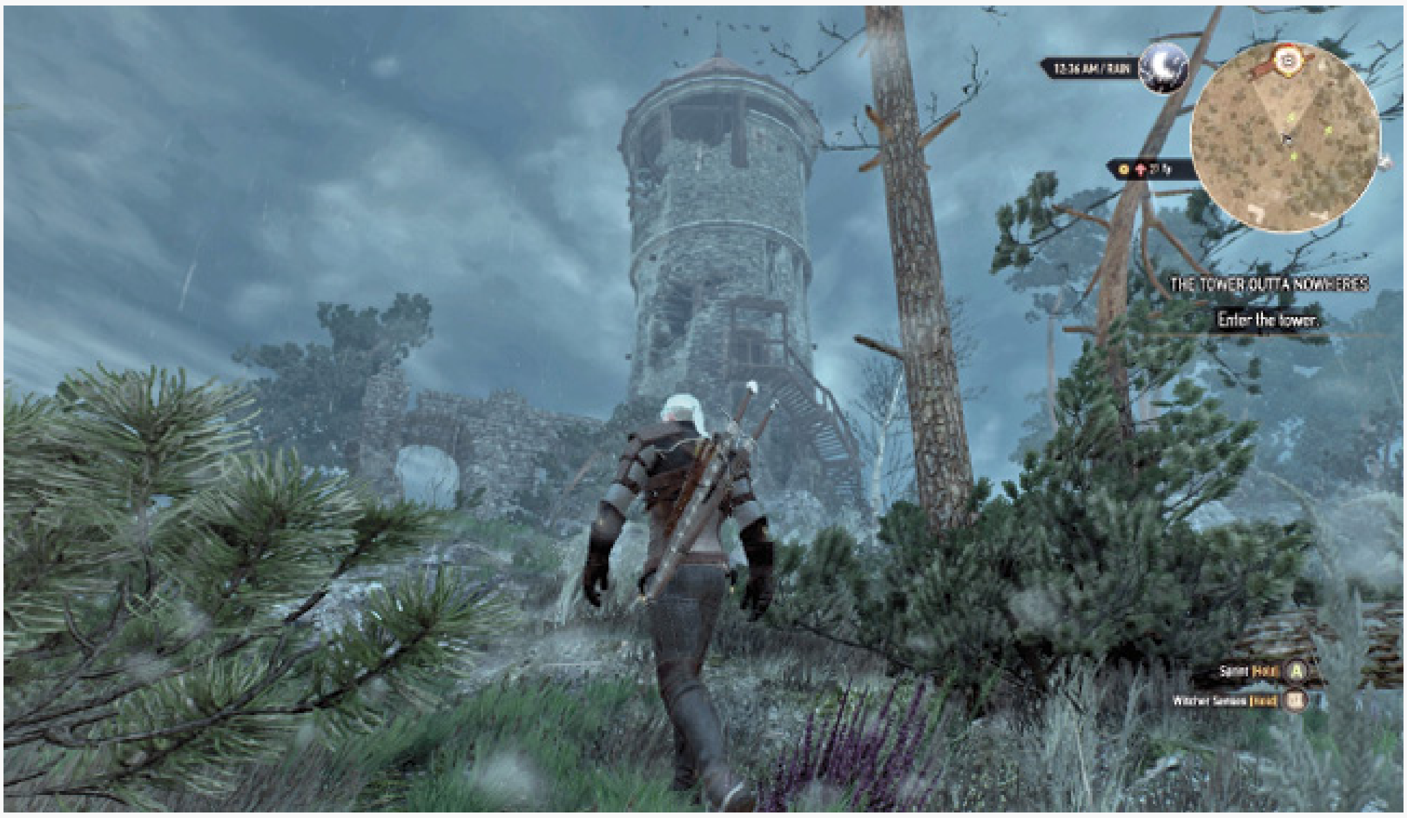
OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the villagers.
- Enter the tower.

After visiting (via a trek across the island, or by boat) the permanently soggy village of Urialla Harbor, you encounter a group of warriors and fishermen muttering in the gathering spot in the middle of the settlement. Approach them, and one fishermen beckons you out of the rain to tell you about a knoll beyond the village.

For centuries, everything was normal until one day a tower appeared on top of it! Lightning started arcing down from the structure, and it has been responsible for the incessant rain the island has experienced ever since. The waves are too strong for fishing or raiding. Agree to look into this anomaly.



Set off on a roughly northwesterly path from the village. Use the path and and you may discover a wandering cyclops on your way to the strange turreted tower that is responsible for the inclement weather. OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the golem.
- Talk to the man trapped behind the magic barrier.

Sigo Buntz

How very strange. The tower is smaller on the outside than the inside! There's little time to ponder spatial awareness, as the main chamber has a golem guarding three archway barriers of magic.

The guardian awakens, and must be battered. After slaying the golem, move over to a magician trapped behind the southwestern barrier. You inform him the entire tower teleported here, and in return, you're told the tower is outfitted with a "Defensive Regulatory Magicon," which essentially means the structure repels intruders. Apparently, to deactivate the defenses, you must find a treatise (Gottfried's Omni-opening Grimoire) hidden somewhere in this tower. Find out more about Sigo the mage if you wish.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the key to the library.

Aside from the crumpled remains of others that woke the golem, there's little else in the barrier chamber, so head northeast, out of the chamber and into a strange waterlogged cave tunnel. Swim left (north) at the tunnel junction, and climb out of the water into a rough-stoned cavern with old ruins jutting out of the ground. The tower informs you that beasta countermeasures are in effect!

- Two ghouls and two alghouls then warp into view—slay them.
- Uh-oh! There's an incoming gargoyle to deal with soon afterwards.
- Warning! Then a werewolf is teleported into this chamber.
- Phew! The tower runs out of resources and only manages to teleport in a cow. This shouldn't be slain.

When the variety of foes are vanquished, move to the small laboratory area in the northeastern part of this cavern, and loot the box on the table to gather the key you need.

The Tower Outta Nowheres

End: Aburraghi V'arathern...

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the villagers.

The mage speaks to you and, after you request he move the tower away from An Skellig, he duly obliges, and the entire tower departs leaving you standing in midair. A moment later, you're falling into the water. After this enforced exit, swim back to the fisherman, and inform the villagers that the tower (and the inclement weather) are gone for good. They are thrilled with the news (though less so if you inform them their hunting party was killed within the tower's walls). After some fine rewards, the quest concludes.

Slave-Driving A Hard Bargain

DANGER ALERT

SPOILER ALERT

FLESH FOR SALE

LOCATION: Trottheim

CHARACTERS: Dagr, Slave Driver, Slaves

ENEMIES: Dagr, Pirates

RECOMMENDED ITEMS: 500 Crowns, Axii Delusion Level 4

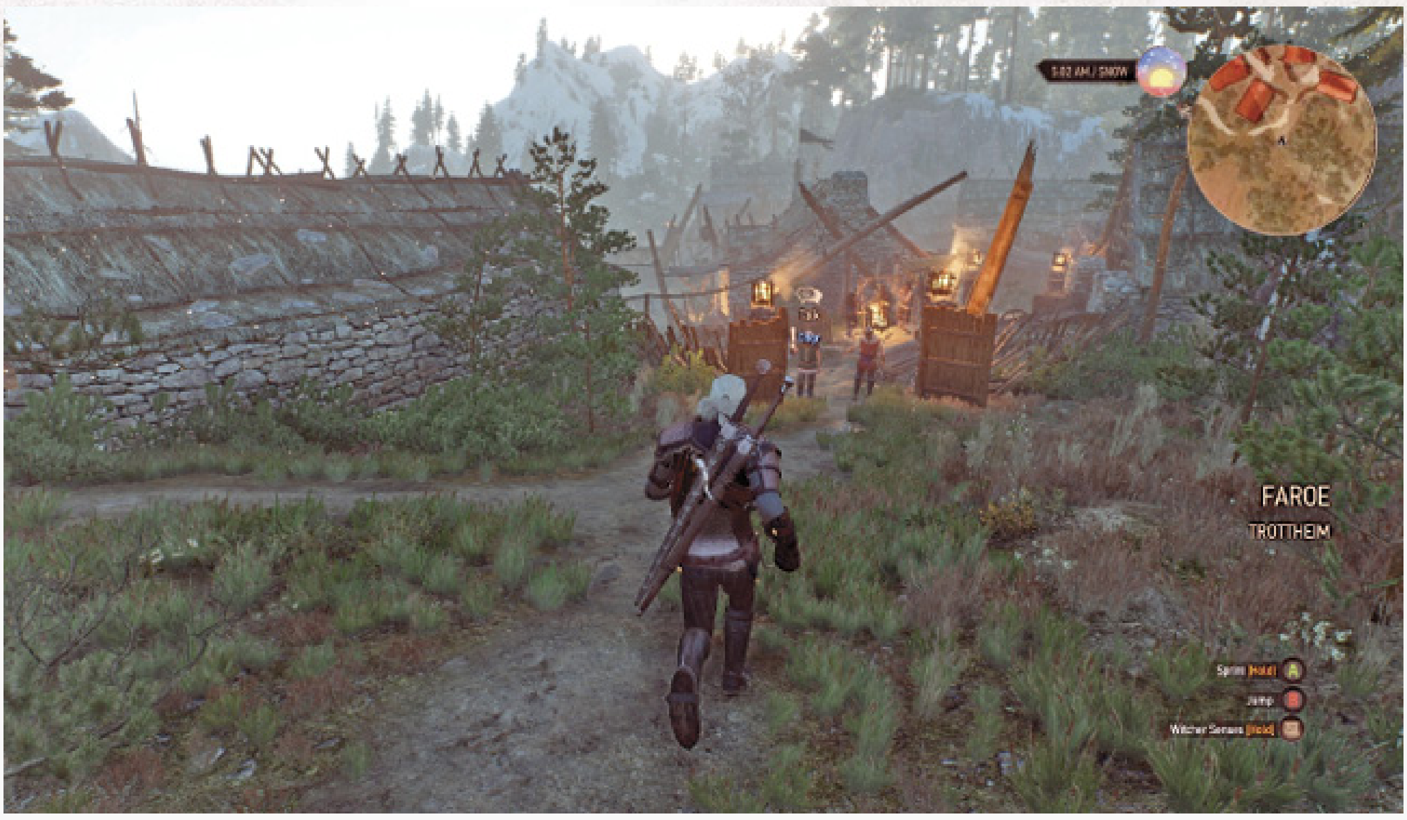
OBJECTIVES

- Follow the pirate to his boss.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible as normal, unless Secondary Quest: Following the Thread is active, and you are searching for the location of Hammond.

You may have been warned about the cutthroats who call the remote isle of Faroe home, but a visit to the village of Trottheim only reinforces the lack of decency the dagr on this rock have for human life. Speak to the two dagr guards (approach from either path into the village), who mistake you for a Nilfgaardian sent here from a man named “Ville” to collect some “goods” from the pirate chief. Play along to start the quest.



As you follow the dagr through the village, you may wish to optionally look around at your own pace, discovering how many dagr there are in your general vicinity (around 16, though a couple are inside the building you’re heading to). When you reach the Slave Driver’s Hut, the dagr leader is waiting to complete the deal. The chief isn’t sure you’re the agent of Ville’s, but you can play along again, or tell him the truth (which results in violence). Finally, you can choose how to end this conversation:

- Tell him you’re not a slave trader. This results in a long bout of carnage where dagr and pirate blood is spilled.
- (500 Crowns) Pay the coin he wants, and free the islanders without bloodshed.
- (Axii Delusion Level 4) Flummox the slave driver by telling him you already paid, and free the islanders without bloodshed.

Flesh For Sale

Quest Conclusion #1: Death To The Degenerate Dagr!

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the pirates.
- Find a key to the slaves' cell.

If you wish to rid Faroe of these thugs, begin with combat against the slave driver and his minions. Methodically work your way through the village, culling the remaining pirates. Stay in one location, chopping through small clusters of foes instead of dashing around and possibly becoming overrun. When the last of the pirates falls (and there are around 16 to slay), head over to the leader's corpse (which should be "glistening"), and remove two key from the body. These allow you to free the slaves, and ransack the hut for valuables (listed below).

- Lead the slaves away from the pirate village.

Once the crowns have been paid, the leader's mind has been addled, or the pirates have been slain, you are able to reach the slave cells at the opposite end of the village, and unlock the door using the key the leader was holding. A number of grateful islanders stumble out. If you haven't slain the pirates, you need to lead the group to safety. Simply walk out of the village, up the hill, and say your goodbyes.

Aside from the Experience Points, if you've slain the pirates the slaves, mention a chest inside the leader's hut that contains some treasure. Unlock the hut, and open the chest by the bed for the following items:

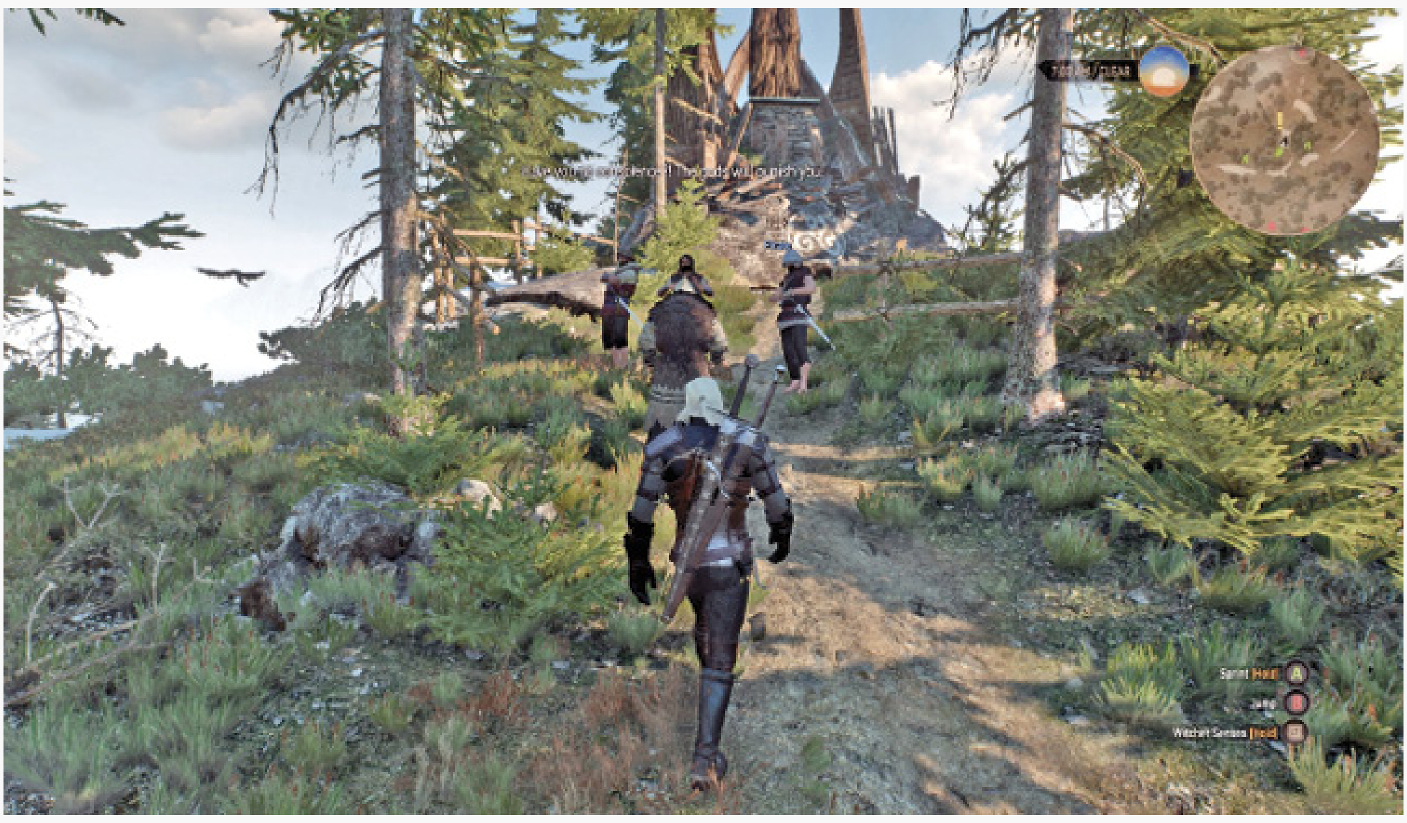
Although you may have more to worry about that a motley band of thugs stopping the pilgrimage of a druid, you should still assist the wise man, in the hilly region between the two villages. Beware of endriaga in the immediate area, before closing in on the discussion between three pirates and the pilgrim. You can ignore the pilgrim's plight, or force the pirates to let him through to the shrine they are guarding. They aren't about to, forcing you to slay all three of them.



Afterward, you can speak to the pilgrim about his journey to the Four Faces of Hemdall, and the forthcoming prophecies. Then he bids you farewell and sits at the shrine. Afterwards, you may run into him again, at one of the other three shrines on Faroe. Can you find them all? Jutta an Dimun

While in the Faroe village of Ringvold, find the path heading east out of the settlement, and follow it up the nearby hills to the top of the peak, where the Skellige warriors spar. Step into the ring, and speak with Jutta an Dimun, a formidable swordswoman. No man has bested her in combat. Ask to fight, and she ponders this:

- She challenges you straight away if you slew the leader of the slavers, after completing Secondary Quest: Flesh for Sale.
- She challenges you immediately if you bettered Einar of Faroe during Secondary Quest: Fists of Fury: Skellige.

Otherwise, your deeds aren't known to her, and you'll need to prove your mettle first. She tells you one of two tasks you must complete:

- She'll face you if you defeat Gundar, back in town.
- Or, she'll face you if you dive into the ocean, and bring back an old sword from a sunken ship.

Be Quick Or Be Dead

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Gundar.
- Tell Jutta you have performed the feat.

Gundar

Jog back into town, and find a moping Gundar sitting in his combat circle close to the harbor, by Jutta's home. Request a bout of fisticuffs with the fellow. After a little convincing, Gundar agrees to a bout. Put up your fists, and pummel him without stepping out of the ring of stumps. Then trek back to the top of the hill, and inform Jutta of your feat. She seems impressed, and allows you to face her. Choose an immediate bout, or (optimally) prepare for the fight first.

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

BERENGAR'S BLADE

LOCATIONS: Kaer Morhen, Chort's Cave

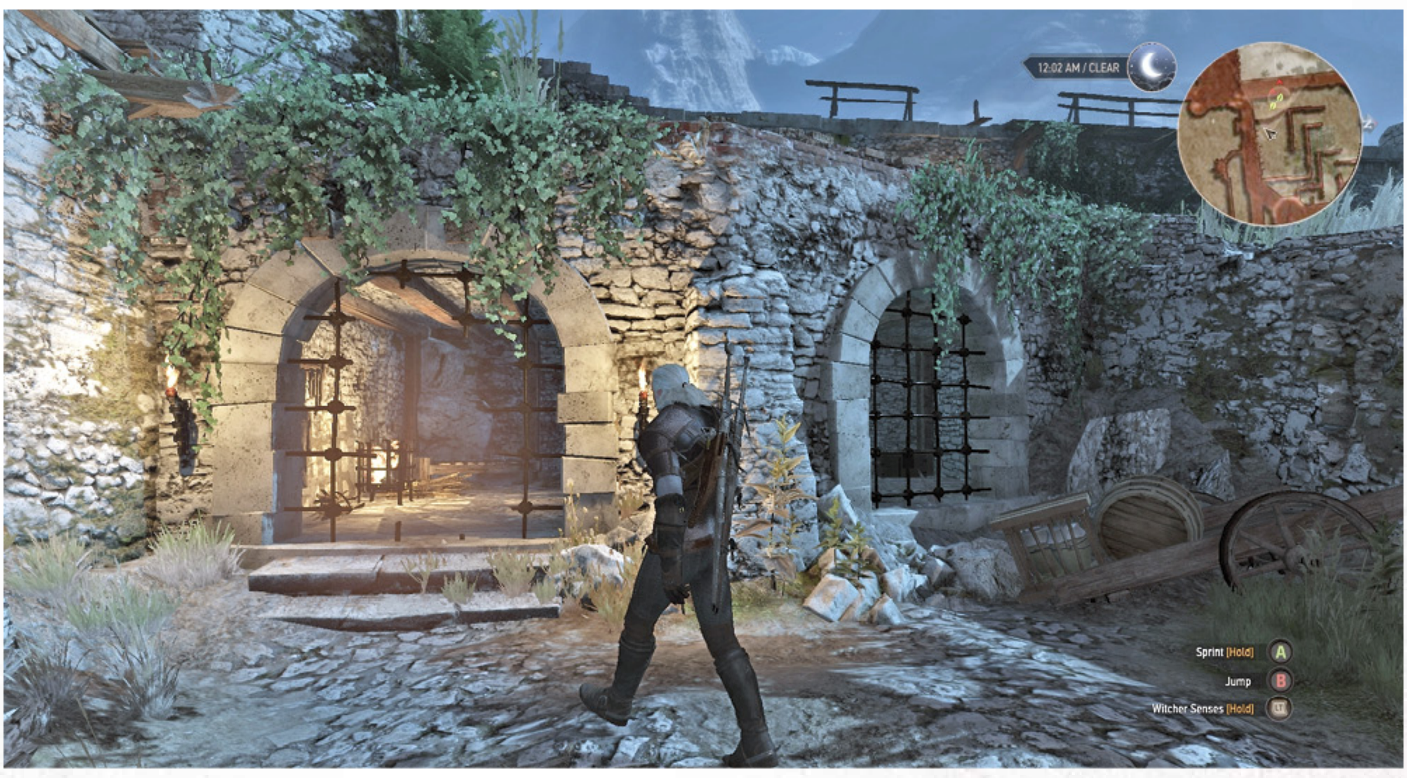
CHARACTERS: Berengar, Vesemir

ENEMIES: Bear, Drowners, Worker Endriaga, Chort

OBJECTIVES

- Read Berengar's notes.
- Talk to Vesemir.

An inspection of the ruined exterior battlements of Kaer Morhen leads to an interesting discovery. Pass through the open iron-barred arch (as shown) to reach an abandoned sleeping quarters with an old chest to pry open. There's nothing but some old papers written by a man named Berengar. Read the notes, which make reference to a consultation with Vesemir. Head into the main fortress interior, across the grand hall, and speak with him. He tells you of Berengar's unsuccessful attempts at forging the blade, and how it all went to hell. He set off to hunt a chort with all his equipment, and wasn't seen again. Vesemir is pleased you're attempting to finish what Berengar started.



Items: Quest Item: Berengar's Notes

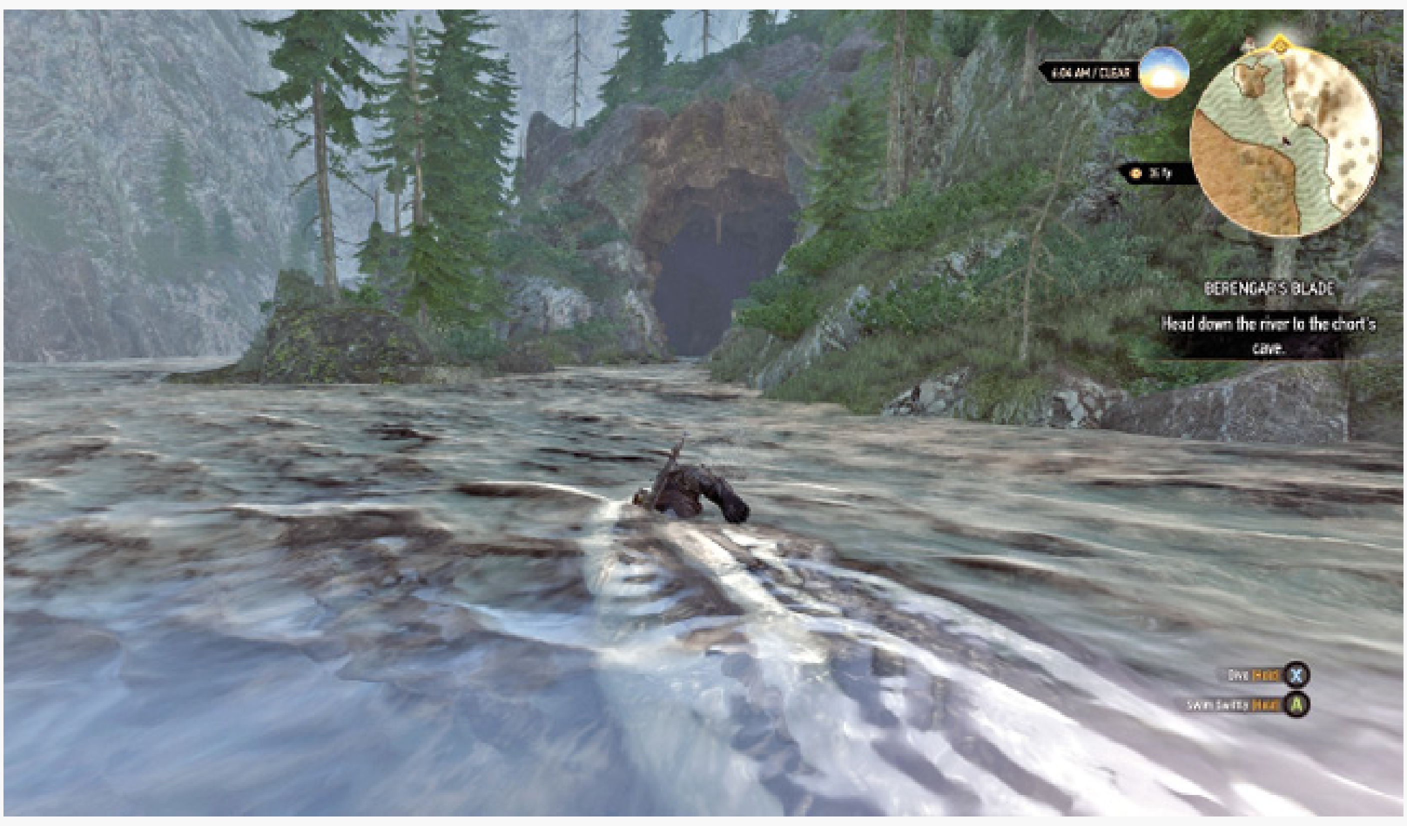
END: MAKING CHORT WORK OF THE ENEMY

OBJECTIVES

- Head down the river to the chort's cave.
- Kill the chort.

Depart Kaer Morhen, but don't try a direct path to the cave, as you're likely to fall down the mountain and break many appendages. Instead, head south along the path to the river, before following it eastwards downstream. Continue northwards as the river bends, slaying any bears and at least four drowners that you may encounter. The cave entrance is close to the tiny island, on the east side of the river bank (as shown).

Clamber up into the cave tunnel by the stalagmites, and travel roughly southwards until the tunnel opens into a large cavern. Down below is a strong bull chort. No wonder Berengar got into trouble. Prepare for a ferocious fight, before bounding down and slaying six worker endriaga, and then face this immense fiend.



OBJECTIVES

- Look for a silver sword in the cave.

With the devilish beast defeated (Quen is useful to defend yourself with), begin a methodical search of the chamber for Berengar's belongings. Check the small alcove in the southeastern part of the cave for a piece of parchment showing a diagram. Though the silver sword "Tor'haerne" isn't in this place, methodology to make it is. QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible at any time, but can only be completed after you obtain the Eye of Nehaleni from Keira, during Main Quest: Wandering in the Dark.

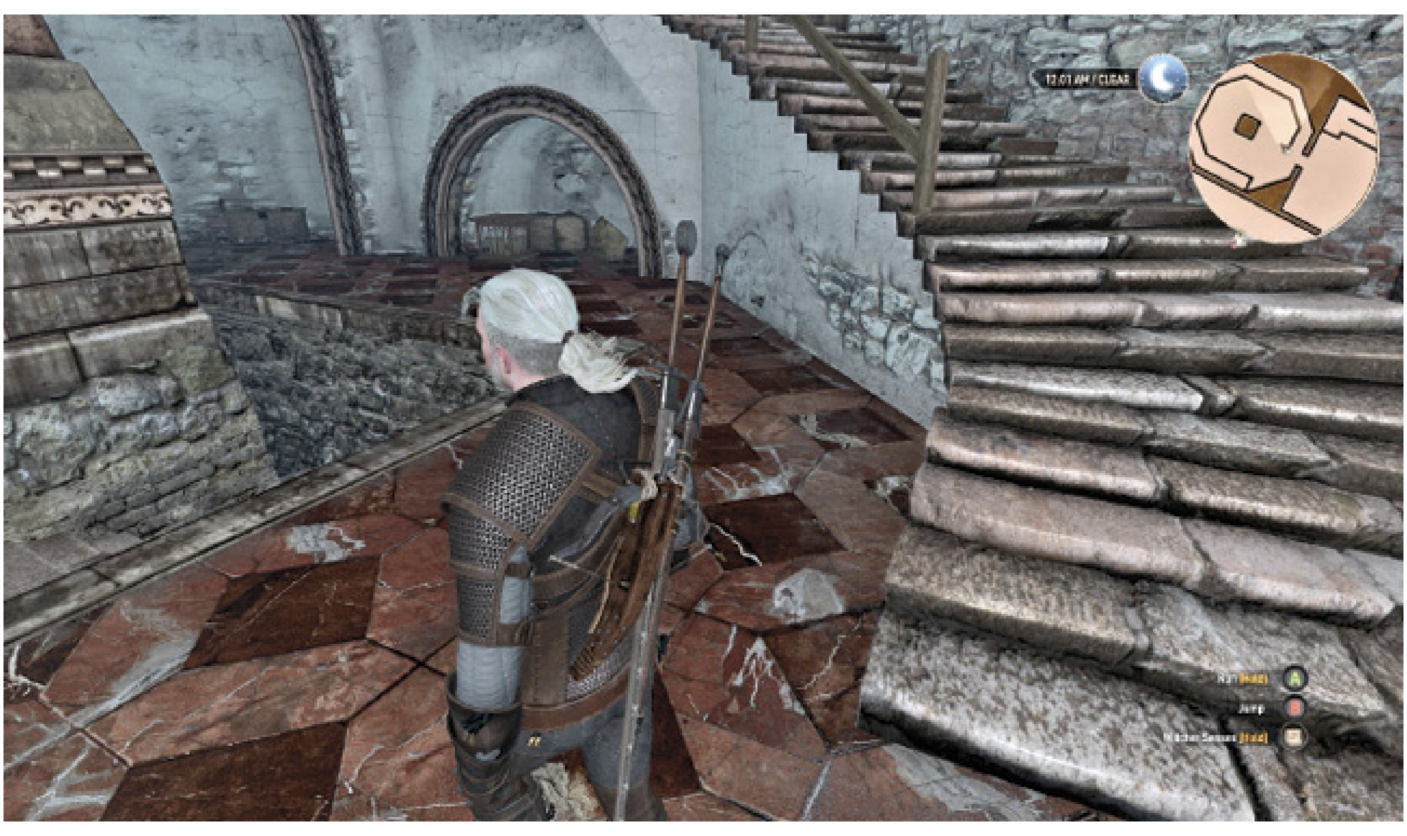
From the Grand Hall of Kaer Morhen, head to the southeast tower and spiral staircase, with the massive stone pillar in the center, and more steps leading down. Ignore all the stairs and instead inspect an old chest in the middle of the three archway alcoves. It contains an interesting book which you should immediately read in your Inventory menu. There is an odd margin note regarding the breaking of an illusion, and the key being this book. Apparently, all shall be revealed in the mines nearby.



Items: Quest Item: Monstrum, or a Portrayal of Witchers: Volume 2

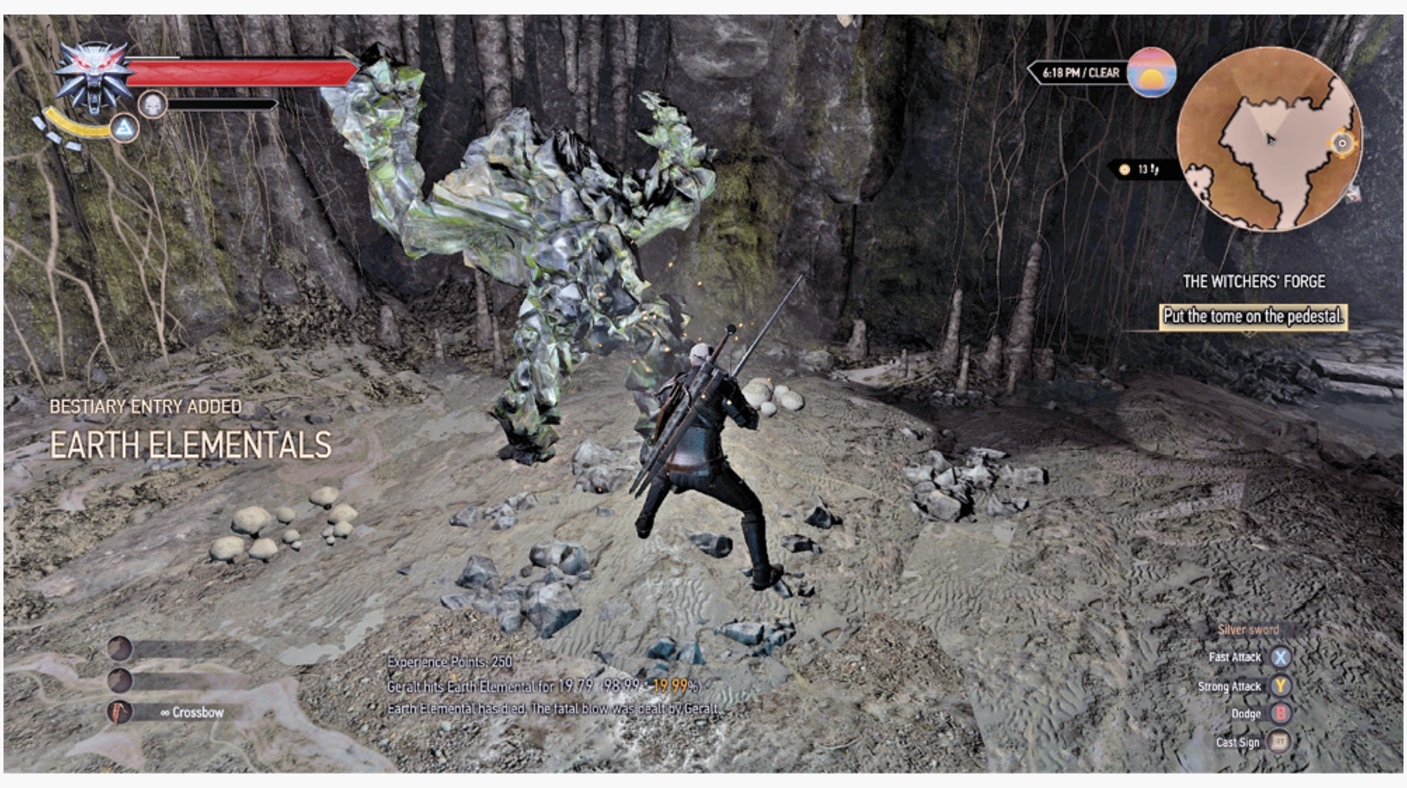
OBJECTIVES

- Search the mine.
- Kill the earth elemental.

Follow the tunnel into the first cavern, where your inspection of a rough-hewn pedestal is interrupted by a lumbering earth elemental. Face this burdensome sentry, and once it succumbs to your blade, move back to the pedestal and examine it to place the book you found on this plinth. Candles flicker to life, and a section of cave wall rumbles open. Continue west.



END: STAND DOWN! THIS PLACE BELONGS TO RADMIR!

OBJECTIVES

- Search the mysterious chamber.
- Kill the Ifrit.
- Remove the illusion.

You explore a forge that is humming with magic. Go to the raised area with the fireplace, blacksmith bellows, and anvil. It seems the Eye of Nehaleni is picking up an illusion in this area. Interact with the bellows, and the fire speaks to you, warning you this place belongs to Radmir of Tor Carnedd. Reply how you wish, but mention to the soul of the fire that you wish to look around. This doesn't sit well with the Ifrit, and it stands up, blasting you across the chamber. Face the Ifrit in monstrous combat.

CHARACTERS: Marlene Trastamara, Barnabas-Basil Foulty

ENEMIES: Foglets, Barghests

OBJECTIVES

- Visit Corvo Bianco and see how Marlene is doing.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible once Blood and Wine Main Quest: La Cage au Fou has been completed. However, you must have made a specific decision during this Main Quest, in order to access it, to whit:

During your time investigating the Wight Spoon Collector, you must have chosen "Plan B" during your dinner with the Wight, and eaten her broth without using spoons. After that, you must have followed the stench of the Wight's brew, and discovered the transformed Wight; now changed to the elderly Marlene Trastamara. You must have taken her to Corvo Bianco, told your majordomo (Barnabas) to look after her, and spoken to him about her. Two days later, this quest starts, and you are prompted to return to Corvo Bianco to check up on Marlene.

Marlene Trastamara

Enter the main building of Corvo Bianco; you'll find Marlene looking much better, washed and well fed, and wearing an outfit that doesn't consist of soiled rags. She thanks you profusely, but weeps for her lost loved ones, and fears she has nowhere to go. You can:

- Tell her to go to town and start a new life. She reluctantly agrees, and leaves Corvo Bianco. This quest now concludes.
- Offer to let her stay here, at Corvo Bianco. She's extremely grateful, and vows to prepare food that fortifies, nourishes, and delights! Every day a new dish out of 16 different types she can prepare appears in the breadbox just behind her in the kitchen. Geralt can use it to regenerate his health. Of course, her previous cooking left a lot to be desired...but she was a Wight then.

She also makes mention of some assembled valuables hidden back at Trastamara Manor, that remain unclaimed. You can also optionally ask her where she learned to cook, and whether she is lonely.

LOCATIONS: Dantan Glade (Unmarked), Lynx Crag
CHARACTERS: Woodcutter Jacob, Morholt, Witch of Lynx Crag, Lynxes
ENEMIES: Lynx (Panthers), Witch of Lynx Crag, Daphne (Banshee), Kikimores

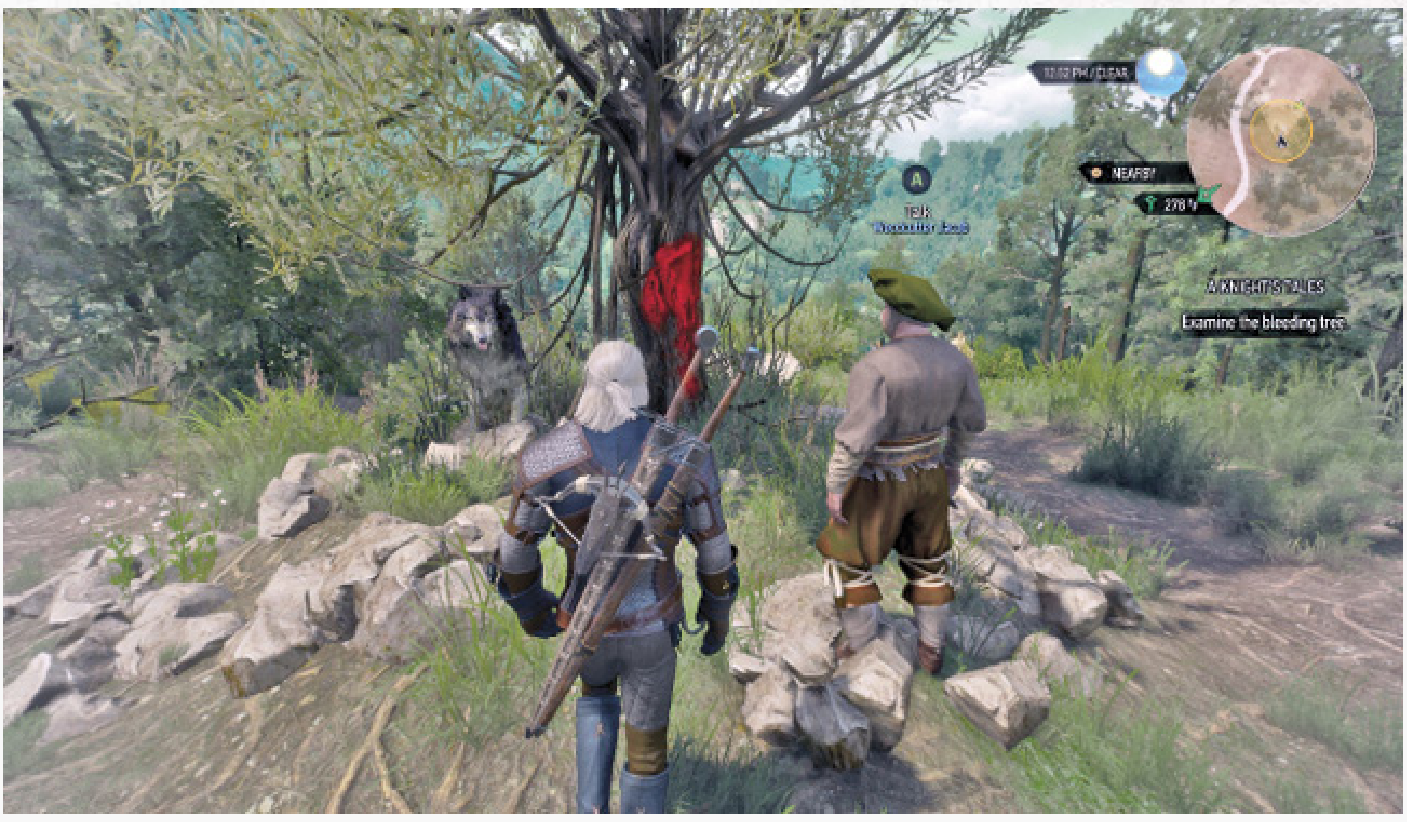
OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Jacob the Woodcutter.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest begins once you read the notice marked "Needed: Master Magicker!" One such Notice can be found at the Castel Ravello Estate's Notice Board. You can also stumble upon this quest while adventuring along the road close to the unmarked location Dantan Glade, where Jacob is located.

Venture just west of Castle Ravello Vineyard, to Dantan Glade; a location where the Vermentino wine company has recently started clearing. You find the stout-looking Jacob, and his wolf-looking pet, looking over a strange tree. It seems this fellow, taken by fables and fairy tales, firmly believes this tree is Daphne, the cursed lady of legend. You can optionally ask if Jacob isn't too old to believe in such tales, before asking what makes him think the tree is a cursed girl. He mentions the axe (currently burrowed deep in the trunk) caused the tree to spurt blood when he struck it! Jacob seems especially fond of fairy tales; ask him why if you wish, before agreeing to examine the tree.



OBJECTIVES

- Examine the bleeding tree.
- Talk to Jacob the Woodcutter.

Using your Witcher Senses, you can "see" a faint sound coming from the tree. Is that wailing? An inspection of the following reveals more evidence:

- The tree trunk is actually bleeding, and looks like human blood. The bark resembles hypertrophic scars in places.
- A rock by the tree has seeped blood on it.
- The tree stumps surrounding this bleeding willow tree has no other trees near it. Inspecting any of the stumps nearby confirms this.

Speak with Jacob again and confirm his suspicions. Agree to further investigation of the matter, and optionally bargain for more coin before you go. Jacob points northwest, toward Fox Hollow, indicating Miss Daphne (the possible imprisoned girl) and Sir Gareth shared a terrible and fearsome love for each other. To prove himself worthy, Gareth was to face the witch of Lynx Crag. Jacob gestures yonder, and makes mention of a kerchief given to Sir Gareth by Daphne, as a token of her favor. Perhaps finding this would help? You're also given a book to (optionally) read to further your knowledge of this fable. Take the time to read the book. This opens up an option later on for you to prove your humility, giving you an optimal resolution.

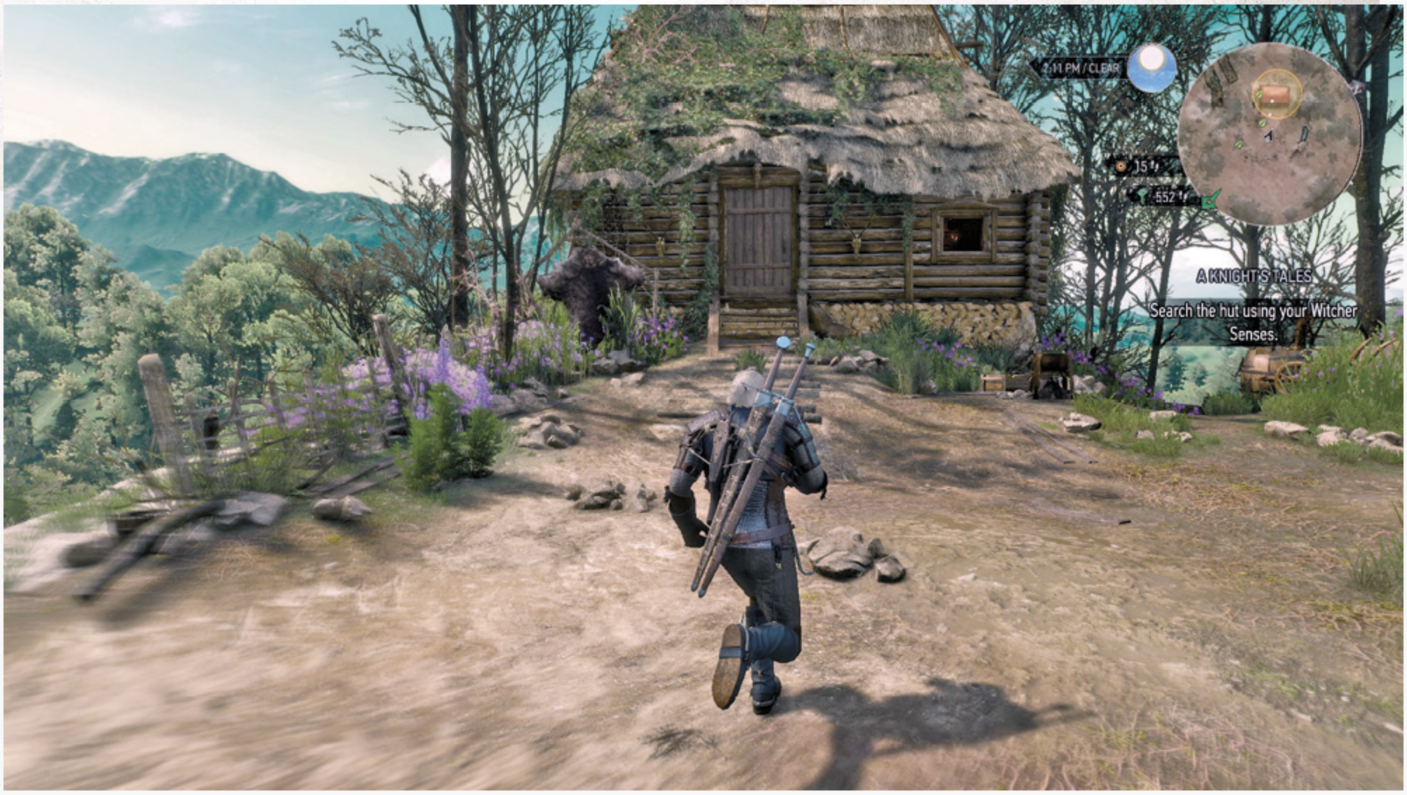
OBJECTIVES

- Go to Lynx Crag.

Run northwest, down the hill, toward a fast-flowing stream on the outskirts of Fox Hollow, looking for the crag with the small witch's cottage perched atop of it. As you close in, you see a number of large wild cats, but they aren't violent unless you provoke them, how odd. Scale the crags (via the consecutive boulders you can grab and haul yourself onto, or by crossing the stream and running up the steep meandering path behind the crag).



There are two small cave entrances beneath the summit of the crag, leading to a small, underground cavern where two Kikimore Workers and a Kikimore Warior can be slaughtered. Further big, brown Lynx cats are also navigated around on your trip to the crag's peak. Here you discover a witch's hut, visible all the way from the bleeding willow tree.

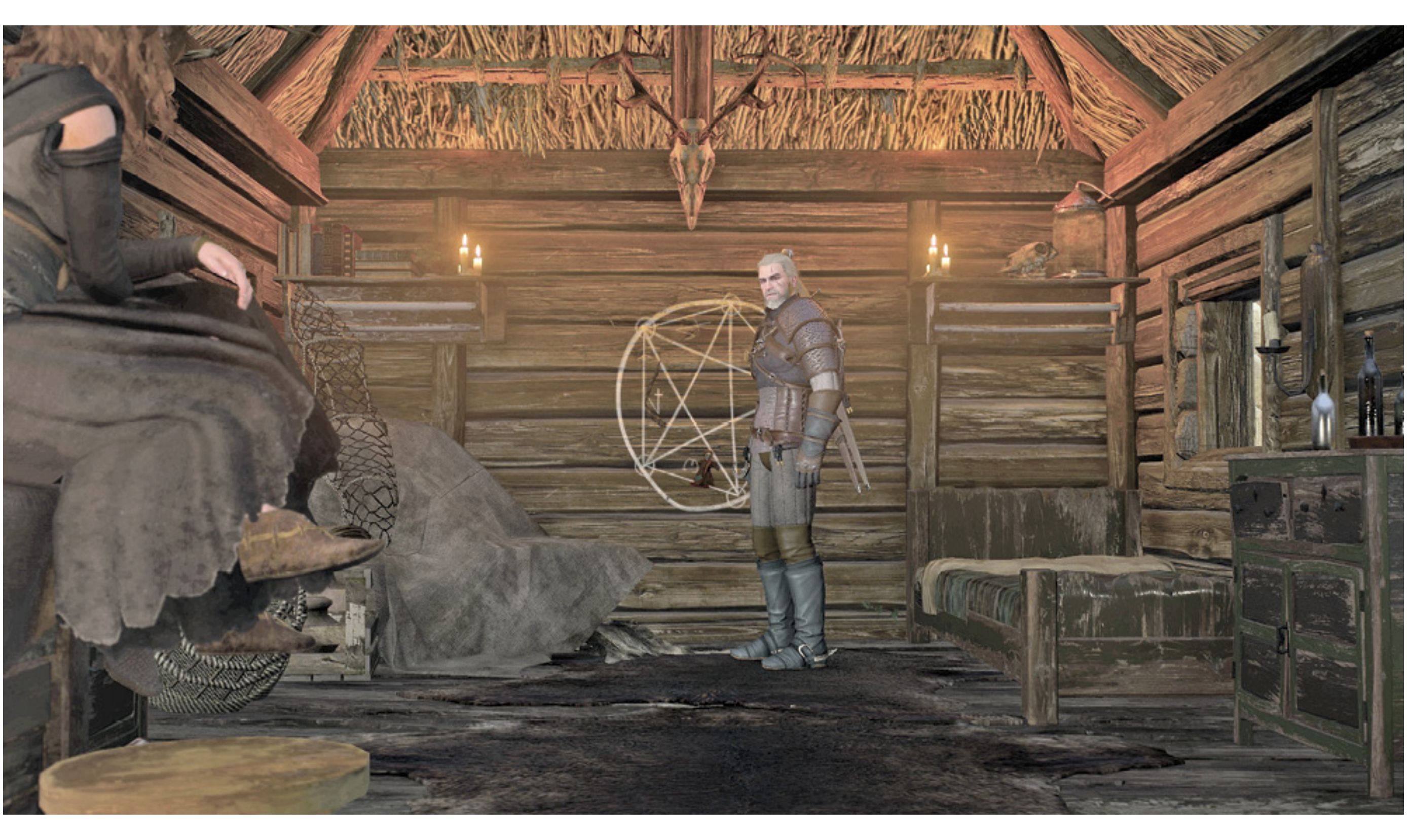
Overcoming The Power Of Love And Longing

OBJECTIVES

- Search the hut using your Witcher Senses.

Enter the hut, which appears to be inhabited, but is currently empty. Begin a quick sweep of the area:

- The hearth has a small cauldron of ingredients, but none you can identify.
- The preparation table against the window has two books, one of them banned by the Conclave of Mages!
- The right side of the table has some bones ground into dust.
- To your right on a small table is parchment regarding proper administration of Yarrow; worth gathering for an optional read later.
- On the far wall is an animal skin. You pull it off the wall to reveal a strange scratched pentagram; with spell enhancements (or trophies?) nailed to different points around the circumference. Inspect each, one by one:(Examine arrow) An arrow broken in half, possibly to bring bad luck.(Examine branch) From a gravevine, to ensure a good or bad harvest.(Examine kerchief) Silk, monogrammed "D.F.", and useful to break the curse if it belongs to Daphne. Pick this last, as you're greeted by the owner of this hut once you inspect the kerchief.(Examine doll) This looks like an accessory for casting curses.



Items: Book: On the Transmutation of Bodies, Book: Liber Ivonis, Remarks on the Proper Administration of Yarrow, Silk Kerchief

When the kerchief is taken off the wall, the witch of Lynx Crag reveals herself to you. She asks what you are doing in her home, and quickly informs you the curse of the bleeding tree is almost impossible to be undone. You can optionally ask what happened to Sir Gareth the knight (it transpires he was seduced and killed by the witch), and you are left with three choices to make regarding the lifting of the curse. You can:

- Tell the witch you'll lift the curse yourself. This leads to Path #1.
- Plead with the witch to lift the curse. This option only appears if you've read the book on fairy tales and know that the witch respects humility. This leads to Path #2.
- Threaten the witch to lift the curse, or else. This leads to Path #3.

PATH #1: STUBBORN AND PIGHEADED

OBJECTIVES

- Return to the bleeding tree.

You leave the witch's hut, confident in your own abilities to save Daphne from her tree incarceration. Back at Dantan Glade, Jacob is puffing on a pipe, and asks how your meeting with the witch went. You can optionally mention it wasn't as bad as Jacob had described, before mentioning you know how to lift the curse. You want to use Daphne's kerchief, after lighting fires to the four winds.

OBJECTIVES

- Light the southern, eastern, northern, and western fires.
- Defeat the wraith from the bleeding tree.

A few hours later, Jacob has made four small bonfires, and you must visit each one, igniting it with a click of your fingers, or a blast of your Igni. You order the prisoner within the tree to recall today who she really is, before tossing the kerchief on one of the blazing fires. With a shrieking moan, the spirit is ejected from the tree. But it isn't happy! Face this Banshee in combat, using all the guile and cunning you learned from reading the Bestiary entry for this creature.

After you finally dismiss this screaming wraith, you explain to Jacob that you went about lifting the curse the wrong way; tearing Daphne from her prison rather than freeing her from it. But as Jacob says, "That's what I get for hiring a bungler." Now take your coin and go, as the quest concludes.

Items: Crowns (100)

PATH #2: HUMBLE AND PROSTRATE

Choose to plead with the witch to lift the curse, and she asks you why she should help. You can reply with the following:

- You'll humble yourself. This continues this path.
- You'll make her do it; leading to Path #3, or you can lift the curse yourself, leading to Path #1.

Assuming you humble yourself, you kneel before the witch, who is surprised at your bending of the neck. She explains that Daphne cannot have her lost years restored, but she can be made to depart in peace. But that information comes with a price: a lock of your hair. She says the hair is needed for a spell to conceal herself from you for all time, but you aren't so sure. You can:

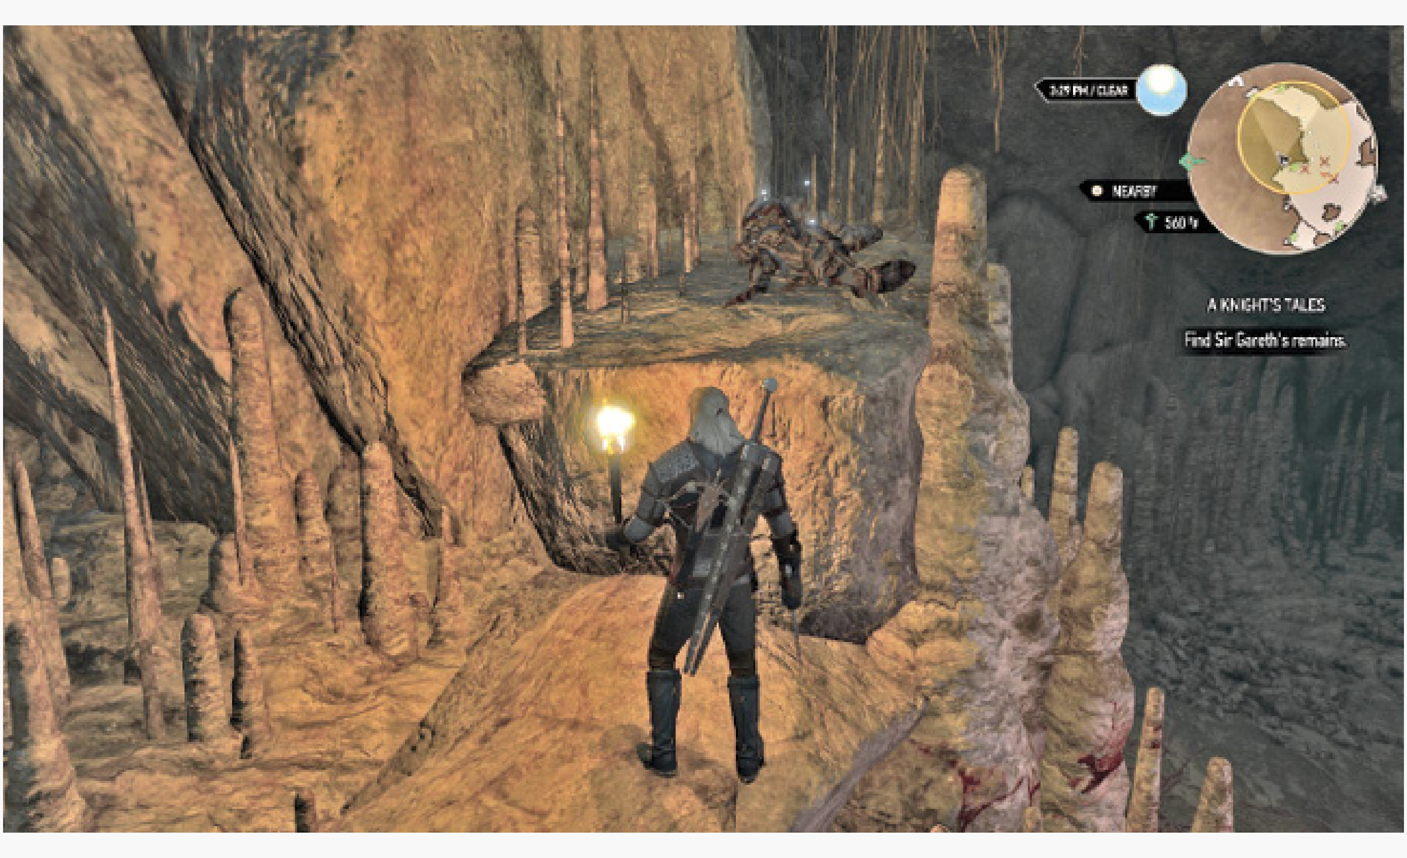
- Agree to this deal. This continues this path.
- Say "no chance" and threaten her (Path #3) or that you'll manage on your own (Path #1).

Assuming you slice off a lock of your hair, give it to the witch, and listen to her advice, you are to convince Daphne that her beloved yearned to return but perished in the attempt. Take the silk kerchief, and a fragment of Gareth's remains; his bones lie bleaching in a cave beneath this hut. Fire must consume both the kerchief and bones, and your intentions must be pure.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the entrance to the cave under Lynx Crag.
- Find Sir Gareth's remains.

Exit the hut, and descend to the bottom of the crag, looking on either side of it for one of the two cave entrances to enter. Once inside either one, face three Kikimore Workers, and burn a clutch of eggs if you wish, before searching this small cavern. Look on the narrow ledges by the southern cave wall of a glittering suit of armor, with the skeletal remains of Sir Gareth inside, and gather his bones.



Items: Remains of Sir Gareth

OBJECTIVES

- Return to the Bleeding Tree.
- Talk to Jacob the Woodcutter.
- Light the Southern Fire.
- Light the Western Fire.
- Light the Northern Fire.
- Light the Eastern Fire.

The ghost of Daphne emerges peacefully from the tree and tells her sad version of the story. She asks if her betrothed remained faithful. Answer as you wish. She leaves the world and passes on. Now that you have successfully freed Daphne, you receive payment from Jacob, who is satisfied at the result, and the quest concludes.

THE FIVE VIRTUES: A CHIVALROUS PATH

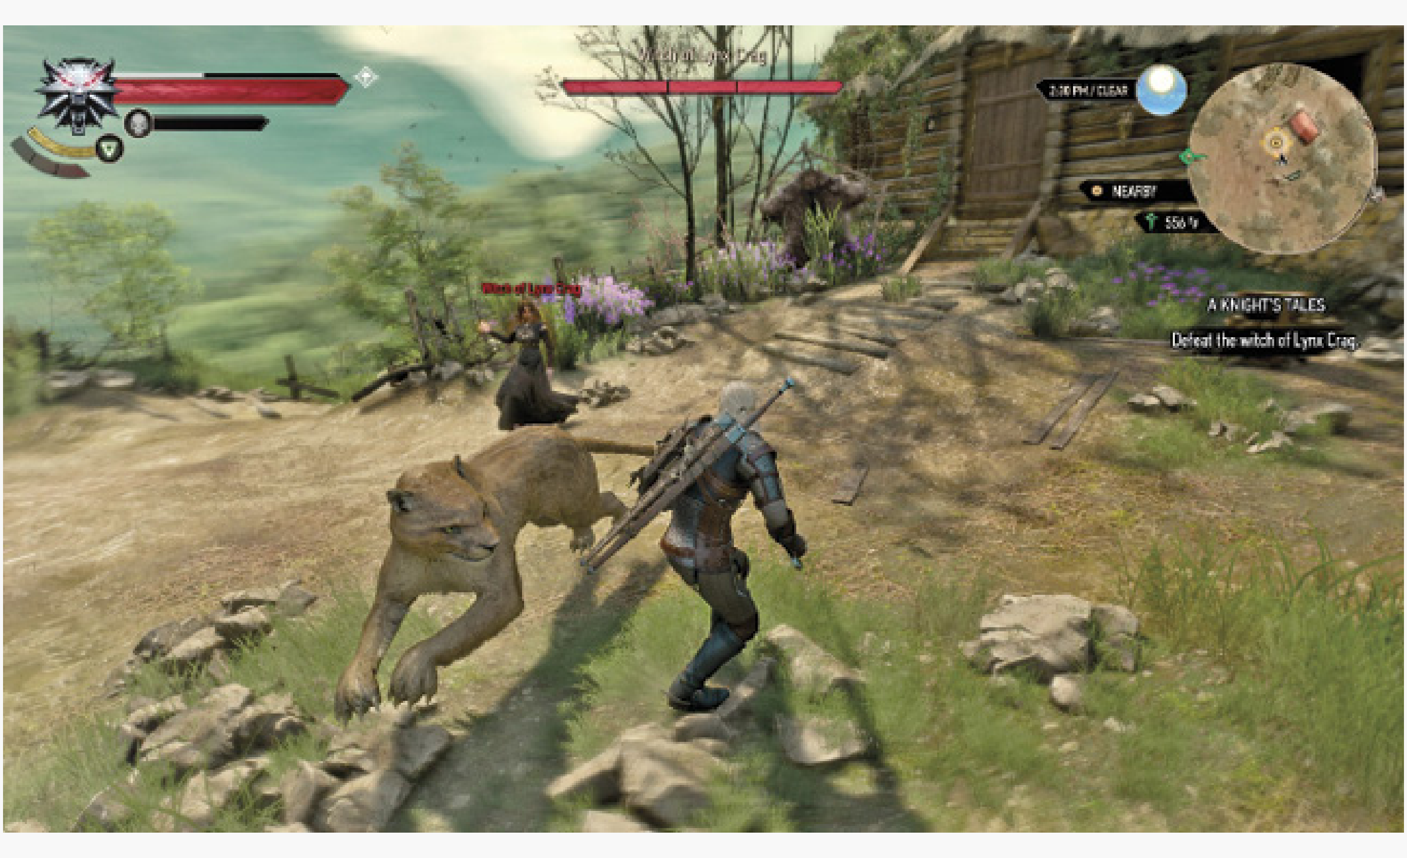
If you are completing Secondary Quest: There Can Be Only One, properly lifting Daphne's curse proves your wisdom.

PATH #3: THREATS AND BLUSTER

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the witch of Lynx Crag.

Threaten the witch in return for her help, and she is understandably furious. She doesn't react well to bluster, especially under her own roof! As she summons a ball of fire, you leap out of the window, and must face the witch in battle! She has offensive fire and lightning magic that can wound you if you aren't protected by Quen, she lifts up small boulders to float in the air before flinging them at you, but she has little to stop your melee blows. You must defeat one of her big cats as well as the witch herself.



After bettering the witch in combat, she agrees to try and lift the curse. Whether you trust her or not is irrelevant, so answer as you wish. She vanishes in a cloud of birds and feathers, leaving you to return to the Dantan Glade and the bleeding willow tree.

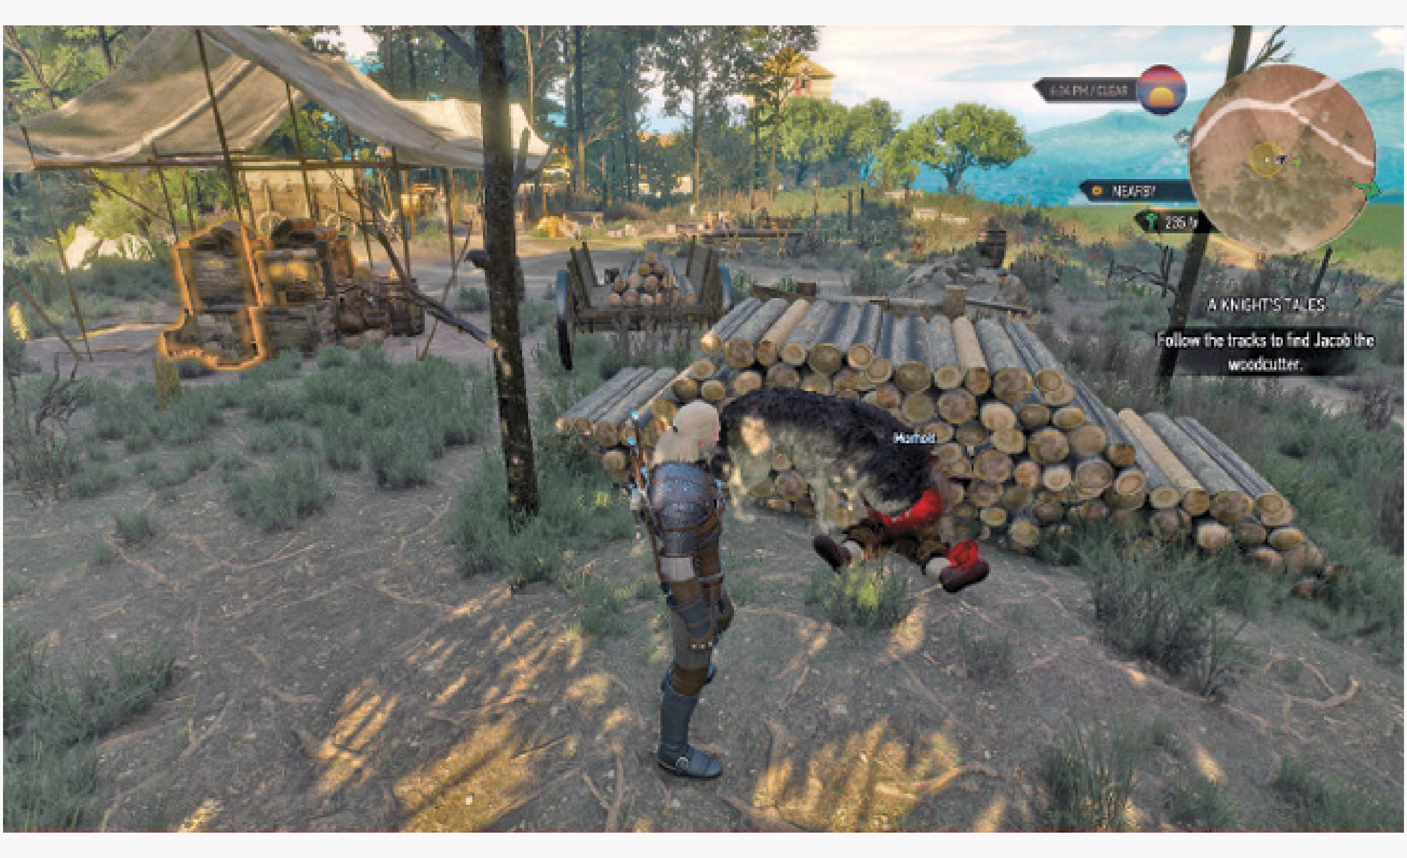
OBJECTIVES

- Return to the bleeding tree.
- Use your Witcher Senses to find Jacob the woodcutter's tracks.
- Follow the tracks to find Jacob the woodcutter.
- Kill Morholt.
- Examine the woodcutter's body.

Retrace your steps to the tree. When you arrive, it seems Jacob has vanished, and he'd never leave the tree of his own free will. Begin to search for him using your Witcher Senses. You find the following:

- Fresh blood and clear deep prints near the tree.

Follow the tracks along the wooded side of the camp to an area behind a pile of logs where you can hear low growling. Oh dear, Jacob's pet is savaging his master's corpse. Morholt turns and leaps at you! The wolf must be quickly put down using combat.



Afterward, approach the remains of Jacob. It seems the witch freed Daphne's spirit from the tree, but didn't mention the specter would be insane and full of rage. Daphne possessed the first living creature it ran into—Jacob's dog—which then savaged Jacob. You say a soft farewell to the chivalrous woodsman. Life is rarely like a fairytale…and this quest concludes.

Foulty Towers

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

BAW

NO PLACE LIKE HOME

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, Secondary Quest: The Hunger Game

LOCATIONS: Corvo Bianco Vineyard

CHARACTERS: Barnabas-Basil Foulty, Marlene Trastamara

Required Items: Up to 14,000 Crowns (improvements to Corvo Bianco)

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, once you defeat the Shaelmaar in the Tourney arena, and first meet Duchess Henrietta. You're given the Corvo Bianco Ownership Deed, and from this point, when you have a free moment (ideally at the end of the previously-mentioned Main Quest), you can visit Corvo Bianco.

It is also possible to begin this quest during Main Quest: La Cage au Fou (if you transform and bring Marlene back from the Trastamara Estate), or after Main Quest: Be It Ever So Humble (which causes you to return here). During either occasion, you speak to your majordomo and can begin touring the place.

OBJECTIVES

- Go to Corvo Bianco.

Now you have the deeds to a sprawling vineyard with spectacular vistas of the Sansretour Valley, you should spend some time enjoying the fruits of your labor. Return to Corvo Bianco, and head up to the slightly dilapidated main tower house. Thankfully, the unpleasantness you encountered the last time you were here has been cleaned up. Waiting outside for you is your majordomo Barnabas-Basil Foulty, a most excellent dogsbody. Ask him to tell you more about the place and he obliges in exquisite detail. Then request him to show you around the vineyard itself.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow your majordomo.

Barnabas-Basil Foulty

You begin with a wonderful view of the valley, after which you stroll through the grounds, as Barnabas-Basil regales you with stories of his own ancestry, and a smattering of facts about the history of the place. Feel free to continue the tour, or abruptly stop and wander off yourself; the latter isn't recommended if you wish to learn where every area of interest is.

The tour stops at the following Locations:

- The servants' quarters (your majordomo occupies the green home).
- Olive groves, and your vineyard where a strain of Carvanere is grown.
- The vineyard gardens, once a supremely lovely place. Now? A supremely weedy place.
- The old herbarium greenhouse, where the aroma of delicate flowers is said to still hang in the air.
- The stables and smithy, the former which served as an additional wine cellar.
- The cellars, now without a lesser vampire and horrific corpses.
- You head into the main house, which has a master bedroom, a dining room, kitchen, main hall, and an upstairs guest room (currently used for storage).

With the tour complete, Barnabas-Basil is confident that your innovations (the hanging of paintings, and upgrading of facilities) would breathe new life into the abode. In fact, that's what the rest of this quest is all about!

BARNABAS-BASIL: YOU CAN'T 'FOULT' HIS GWENT PLAY!

In addition to making improvements to your winery, your majordomo is a particularly skilled Gwent player. In fact, should you challenge him, you can request he play as any of the five factions (or "surprise" you and play as a random faction), and then request he uses a strong, middle, or weak deck depending on the challenge you require. This is an excellent way to train for the Gwent tournaments both in Toussaint, and across the Northern Realms!

CORVO BIANCO: A TOUCH OF CLASS (PART 1)

The following services are now available:

Stash Chest (1): Store any unwanted equipment here.

Hang Paintings (3): Place any shields, works of art, or posters on the wall, where indicated.

Armor Stand (1): Display a piece of armor here.

Weapon Stand (1): Holds one weapon of your choice.

Display Trophies (3): Decorate your abode with up to three trophies or statuettes.

Display Shelves: Your bedroom now has upgraded display shelves for you to place trophies you may have won during quests.

OBJECTIVES

- Restore Corvo Bianco to its former glory

Once you've optionally wandered around your new home for a bit, you can speak to Barnabas-Basil and request some renovations be carried out. He is thrilled, and asks what you'd like to do specifically. You have the following choices:

- (5,000 Crowns) "Let's do some work on the interiors": This transforms the paintwork on the exterior of the main house, and adds interior decorations and fine furniture to the main hall, master bedroom, dining room, kitchen, and guest room. This requires three full days to complete.
- "The grounds – be nice to improve those." Barnabas-Basil agrees, and asks whether you want to install an armor repair table or grindstone:
- (1,000 Crowns) "Order a table," and in one day's time, you have an Armorer's Table to hammer on.
- (1,000 Crowns) "a Grindstone to sharpen my swords," and in one day's time, you have a Grindstone.

No Place Like Home (Blood and Wine)

Renovations Part 1: From Tatty To Tremendous!

OBJECTIVES

- Wait three days for the general refurbishment to finish.
- Wait one day for your armorer's table to arrive.
- Wait one day for your grindstone to arrive.

At this point, you must wait (either by Meditating or adventuring) until this quest objective updates, and then return to see the transformation of your dwelling. The effect is stunning!

OBJECTIVES

- Search the cellar.
- Use the Aard Sign to destroy the damaged wall in the cellar.
- Search the hidden room.

CORVO BIANCO: A TOUCH OF CLASS (PART 2)

The following additional services are now available:

Armor Stands (3): Display up to three pieces.

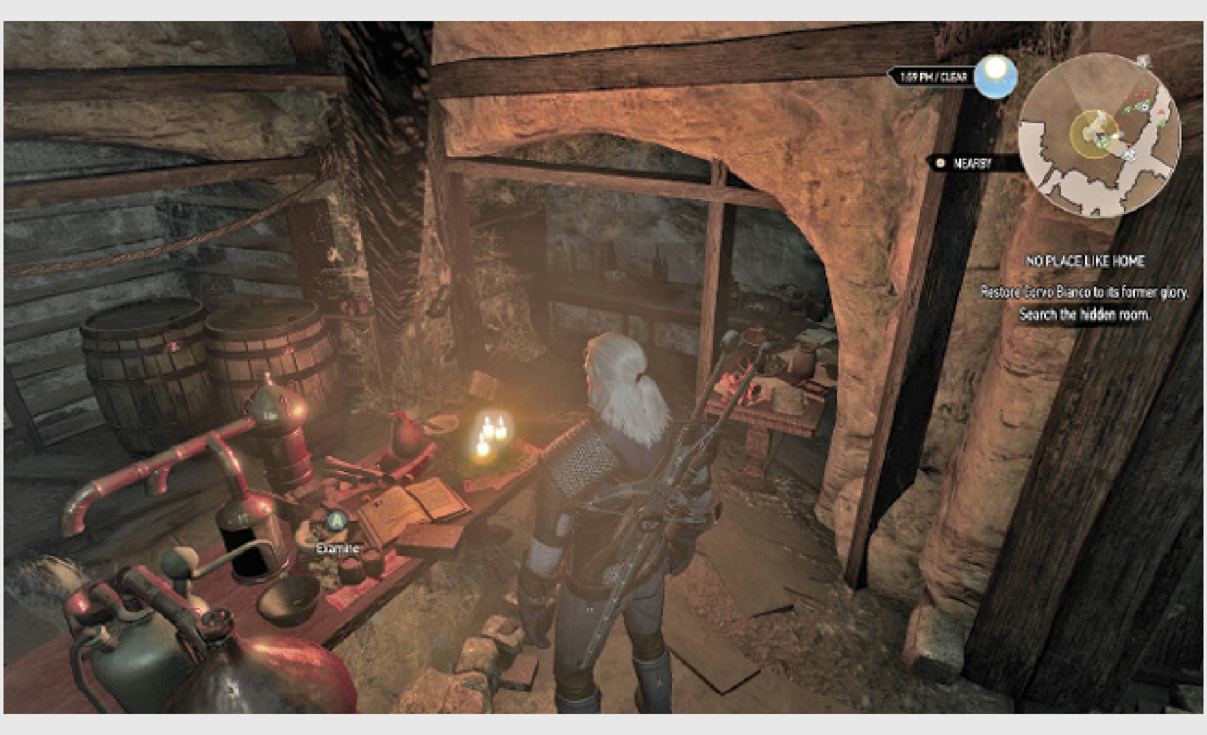
Weapon Stands (3): Holds up to three weapons.

Hang Paintings: Place any shields, paintings, or posters on the wall, where indicated.

Armorer's Table (1): Improve armor protection (temporarily) here.

Grindstone (1): Improve weapon effectiveness (temporarily) here.

Alchemist's Laboratory (1): Improve potions and bombs with one additional charge, and dismantle mutagens.



Not only are the renovations coming along swimmingly, but laborers have made a most unusual discovery in your cellar! You can head there now or later. When you decide to descend into the location where you fought the Bruxa, you notice an uncovered brick wall. Break it open using Aard, and venture into what appears to be an alchemist's laboratory of exceptional quality! Examine the lab table, pick up a letter to gain more historical knowledge of the place, and use both the benches here:

- One grants any bomb and potion you have with one additional charge (return here each time you obtain or make more to improve more bombs and potions).
- The other allows you to dismantle monster mutagens to normal mutagens, without having to pay for this privilege!

Items: Julius ban Gavh'e's letter

OBJECTIVES

- Restore Corvo Bianco to its former glory.

When you've explored the improvements to your abode, and perhaps started to display your Witcher gear on the armor stands and weapon racks, speak to Barnabas-Basil and request some further renovations be carried out. It is, of course, his pleasure to serve. You have the following choices:

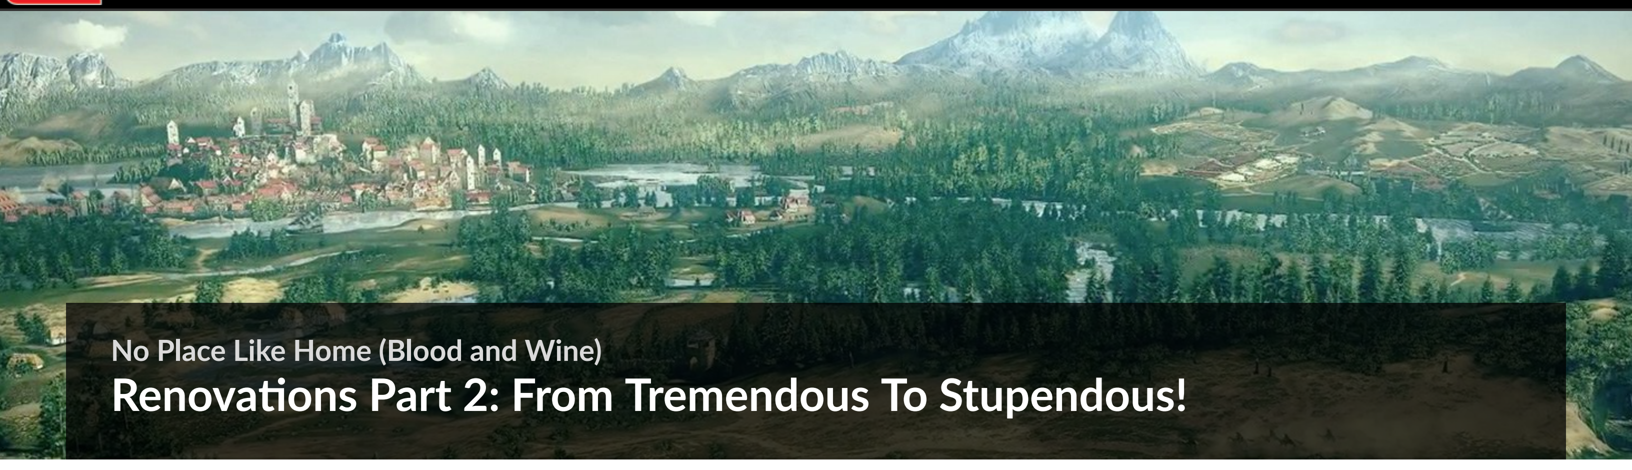
"Let's do some work on the interiors": This time around, you have a number of improvements you can make:

- (1,000 Crowns) "Could use a better bed," and in one day's time, a lavish place to rest your head (with a Health bonus) is yours.
- (500 Crowns) "Order another weapon rack," and in a day's time, you receive two more weapon racks to display your blades.
- (500 Crowns) "I need more armor stands," and in a day's time, you receive two of them; a perfect spot for your newly-colored armor sets!
- (1,000 Crowns) "Let's see to the guest room," and in two days, you won't believe what the upstairs storage room has been turned into!

"The grounds – be nice to improve those." Barnabas-Basil concurs, and a wealth of options is presented…providing you have the wealth to purchase everything!

- (2,000 Crowns) "Roach deserves a roomier stable," and in two days, your faithful steed has a roof over her head, and a bonus to her stamina.
- (2,000 Crowns) "Herbs in the garden," and in one day's time, you have the ability to sow herbs in the herbarium greenhouse (useful for growing herbs that create mutagens or change mutagen colors). In addition, Corvo Bianco Orchard allows you to harvest plants you need to create dyes to change the color of gear in your Witcher sets (plants grow back after a certain amount of time).

Feel free to order as many or as few of these improvements as you wish.



No Place Like Home (Blood and Wine)

Renovations Part 2: From Tremendous To Stupendous!

OBJECTIVES

- Wait one day for your armor stands to arrive.
- Wait one day for your new bed to arrive.
- Wait one day for your weapon racks to arrive.
- Wait two days for the guest room refurbishment to finish.
- Wait two days for the garden refurbishment to finish.
- Wait two days for the stable refurbishment to finish.
- Talk to the majordomo of Corvo Bianco.

Now you can continue your exploration of Toussaint, or simply Meditate for two full days and return to Corvo Bianco, and take in the last of your upgrades. This place is simply breathtaking!

Final Touches

Not only is your place looking fit for a Witcher facing semi-retirement, but when you speak to Barnabas-Basil once all improvements are made, he's discovered a bottle of Sepremento (the 1250 vintage). You uncork it on the veranda, and more stories are told as the sun slowly sets in over the spectacular Sansretour Valley, and this quest concludes.

An example of the Main Hall, resplendent with trophies, wall-hangings, swords, and armor displays (including differently colored Witcher gear).

CORVO BIANCO: A TOUCH OF HOME COOKING

If you completed Secondary Quest: The Hunger Game, and rescued Marlene Trastamara from her life as a cutlery-collecting Wight, and allow her to stay at Corvo Bianco as part of her quest, she bakes one sample of baked food each day for you to eat, if you wish. It can be found in the breadbox (behind her before improvements are made, and on the furniture near the fireplace afterward).

CORVO BIANCO: A TOUCH OF CLASS (PART 3)

The final additional services are now available:

- Weapon Racks (+2): Hang weapons and armor here for display.
- Armor Stands (+2): Display armor here.
- New Bed (1): Sleep in your master bed to earn certain buffs. Level 1 – Heals you, Level 2 - +500 max health, Level 3 - +1000 health.
- Greenhouse and Orchard: Grow and pick herbs for mutagen creation and color change. Grow and pick plants for dye, to change the color of your Witcher gear.
- Stable: Roach's stable increases her Stamina (by 100 percent).

CORVO BIANCO: A TOUCH OF WALL ART AND TROPHIES

Whether you're affixing an elven shield, or a picture of a buxom wench from a prison poster on your wall, there are a number of locations (and quests) where you can find artwork to hang, as well as display piece trophies to show off. In addition, you can also purchase decor from Dupont & Sons Emporium of Diverse Merchandise, an unmarked shop in Beauclair (near Metinna Gate). Bring a big coin purse if you want them all!

The Warble Of A Smitten Knight (Blood and Wine)

Tour Of The Tourney Grounds

DANGER ALERT · SPOILER ALERT

BAW

THE WARBLE OF A SMITTEN KNIGHT

LOCATIONS: Tourney Grounds, Rosetree Hill (Unmarked), A Hidden Clearing (Unmarked)
CHARACTERS: Guillaume de Launfal, Lady Vivienne, Baron Palmerin of Launfal, Llinos of Mettina, Rainfarn of Attre, Horm Akerspaark of Maecht, Donimir of Troy, Guy de Bois-Fresnes, Delwyn of Creigiau, Count Tailles of Dorndal, Prince Anseis of Lyria and Rivia, Sir Gregoire de Gorgon, Le Papillon
ENEMIES: Tailles' Bodyguards, Boars, Panthers, Barghests, Wight

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

This quest becomes accessible once Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint concludes, you then finish Main Quest: Blood Run, and Main Quest: La Cage Au Fou is active. Return to the Tourney Grounds north of Beauclair and locate Guillaume in the lazaret to begin.

As Guillaume may become "indisposed" later into your questing adventure (once Main Quest: The Night of Long Fangs begins), you are encouraged to complete this quest before this point.

Guillaume de Launfal

Seek out the well-meaning knight named Guillaume de Launfal at the medics tent on the eastern edge of the Tourney Grounds, near the arena walls and hill down to Corvo Bianco. Guillaume, if you remember, was challenging the giant named Goylat when you first arrived in Toussaint, and he was wounded during the Shaelmaar battle in the arena. Now he has a matter of prime urgency and import! Due to his arm, he's unable to take part in the chivalrous tournament currently occurring, and wonders if you'd stand in for him.

Furthermore, he believes something foul has occurred to a certain maiden—nay, a lady—that he's had his eye on; a spell or curse has befallen Vivienne, one of Duchess Henrietta's ladies in waiting who is overseeing the tournament. Optionally jest you can guess her symptoms, before asking why she seems cursed. Guillaume explains Vivienne shuns the company of others, shrieked strangely when they were walking, and ventures into the woods where she seemed to melt into thin air. You have two optional conversation choices (noticing anything else unusual and mentioning the odd behavior might not be as strange as Guillaume remembers) before asking for more information about Vivienne. He tells you about her mother (also a lady-in-waiting) and her father (a knight). Little more is known.

Now for the tourney plan; optionally ask Guillaume more about it, before agreeing to help (and upping your fee if you wish). Now Guillaume wishes to see how well you shoot, ride, and fight; as the three tournament events showcase one or more of these talents. Tournament rules should be learned, and put into practice. At this point, you can choose what to practice (in any order you like, though the events are in the following order):

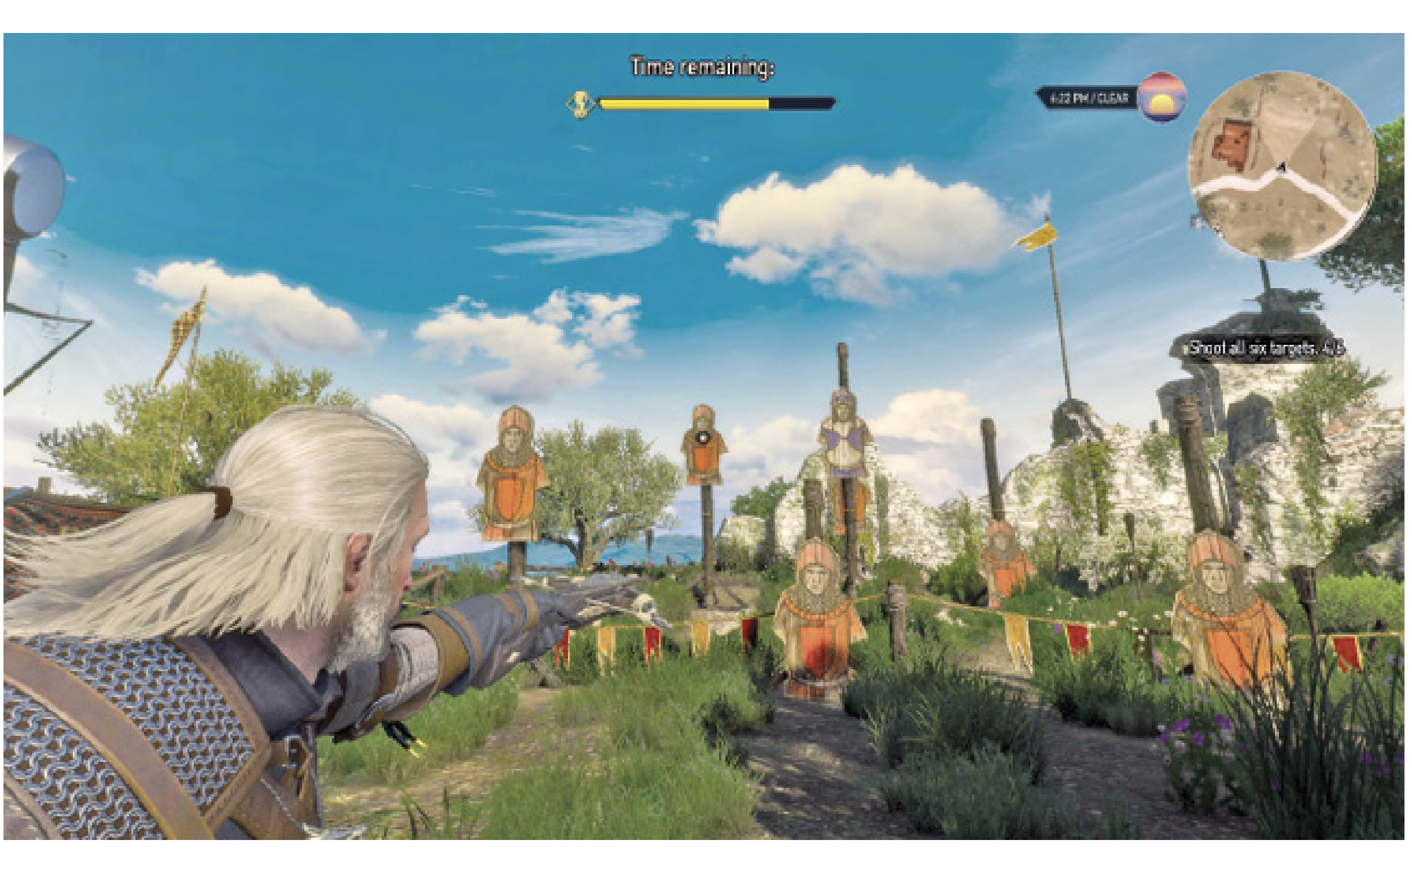
- "Target practice": This begins Practice Makes Perfect Part #1 (below).
- "Horsemanship": This begins Practice Makes Perfect Part #2 (below).
- "Let's try sword fighting": This starts Practice Makes Perfect Part #3 (below).
- "Don't need any practice": This skips the practicing sessions, which isn't recommended, and starts the competition.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT #1

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Guillaume to the shooting range.
- Shoot all six targets (6).

It is a short walk to the shooting range, where Guillaume explains the simple premise; you must simply shoot the six red knights before the time ticks down to zero, and ignore any of the white and blue knight targets. Whether you complete the task or not, Guillaume asks afterward if you wish to practice again. You can practice as many times as you wish. Then you can opt to practice for the other two events, or temporarily halt the quest.



STAYING ON TARGET

Shooting six red knights within the allotted time (around 30 seconds) is straightforward, and uses your crossbow.

Employ your regular bolts (so you don't waste any special bolts), and use manual aiming.

Work from left to right, or right to left, so you are making small aiming adjustments when moving from one target to the next.

Tag each target in order (passing over targets to return to them later slows you down).

A most proficient Witcher should be able to knock all six targets down with around three-quarters (around 22 seconds) left in the "Time Remaining" bar.

You can increase this still further by bringing a better crossbow with you, and/or purchasing crossbow-related Abilities; read up on these in the Training section, starting on page 56.

It's worth perfecting this so you can easily win the Tournament Event itself.

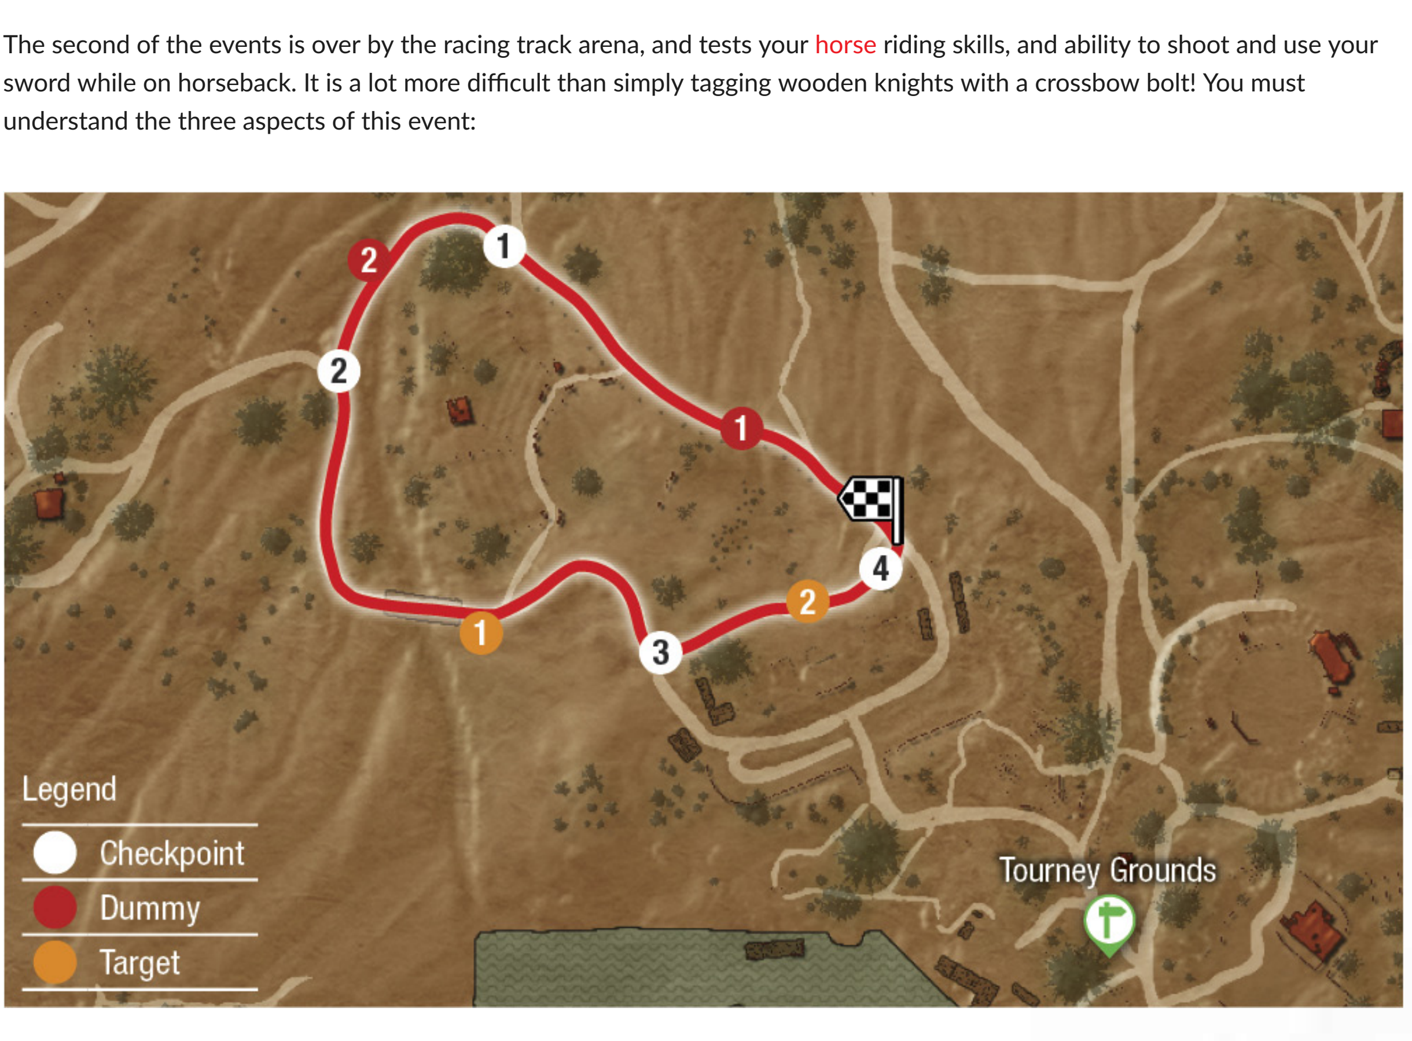
PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT #2

OBJECTIVES

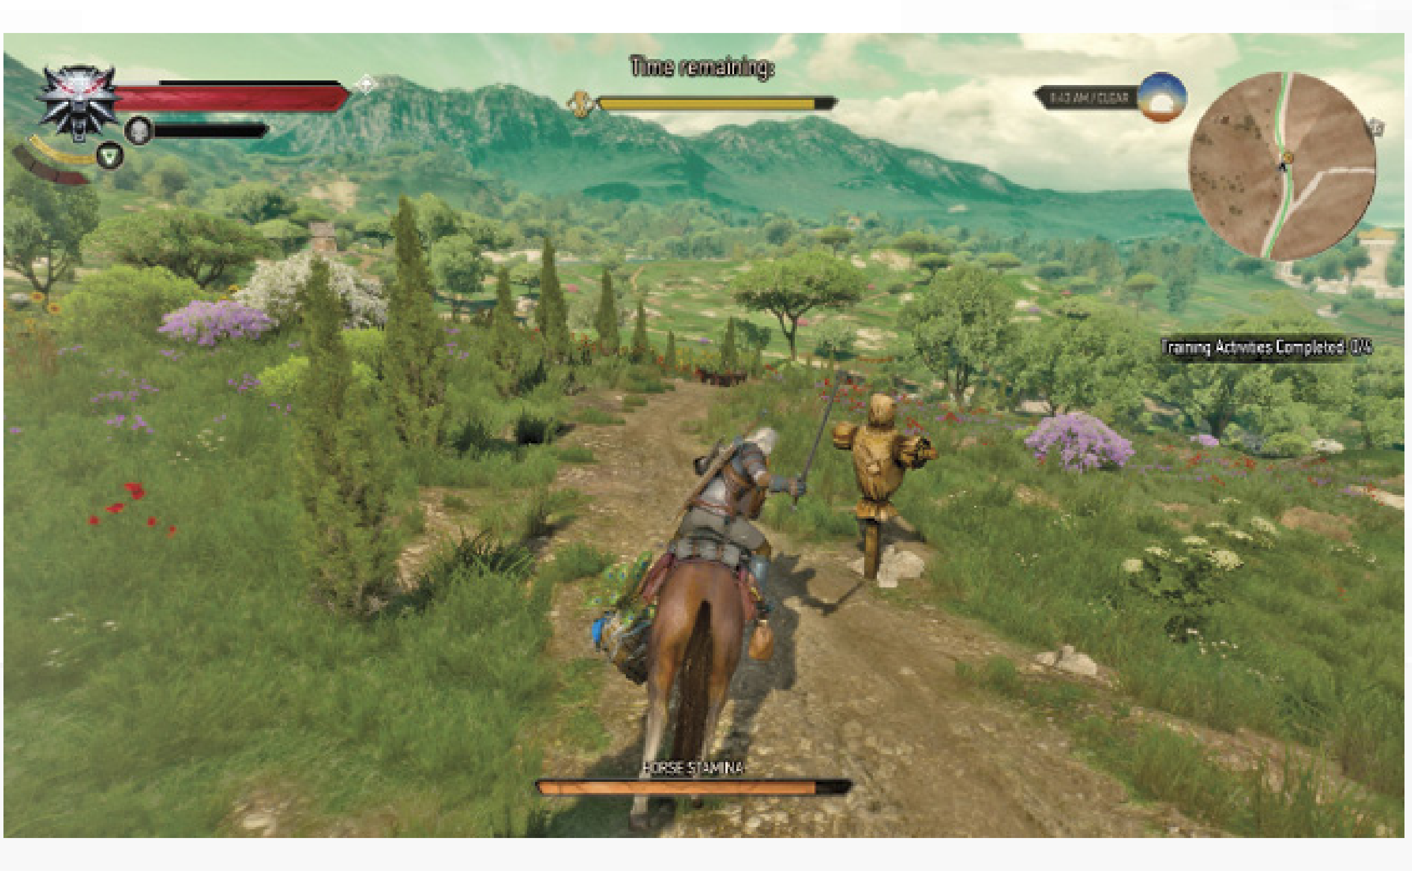
- Follow Guillaume to the race track.
- Training Activities Completed (4).

The second of the events is over by the racing track arena, and tests your horse riding skills, and ability to shoot and use your sword while on horseback. It is a lot more difficult than simply tagging wooden knights with a crossbow bolt! You must understand the three aspects of this event:

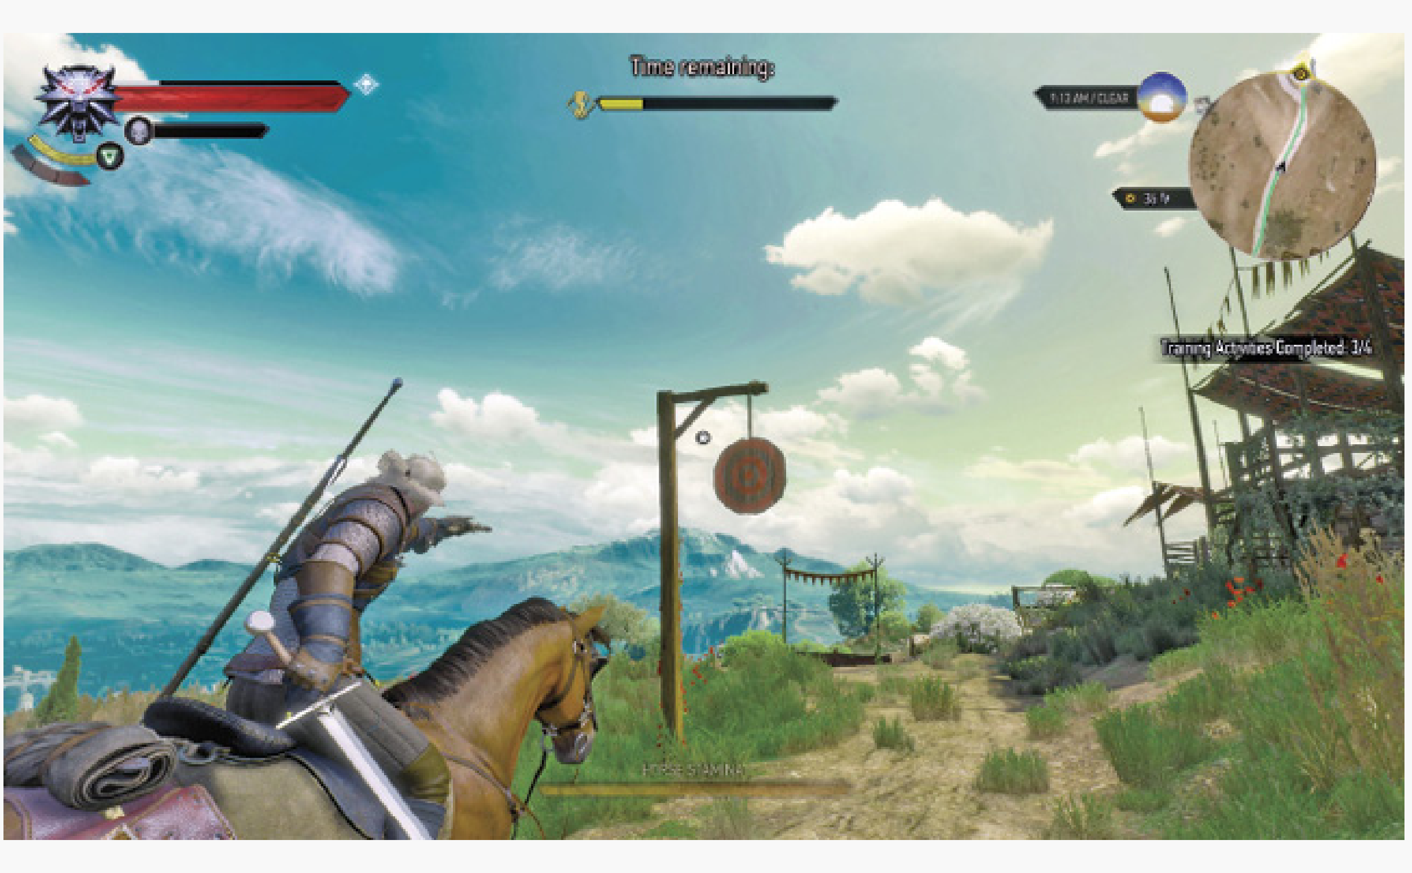


Tourney Race: Practice Course

- You must ride as if attempting a horse race; although no others are racing with you at the same moment (either in practice or at the event); they attempt the same course, and each knight earns a point if they beat the clock.
- There are a number of dummies on the route; these can (but don't have to be) cut with your blade.



- There are a number of targets along the route; these can (but don't have to be) shot using your crossbow.
- The reason to strike each dummy and target with your blade and bolt is that a successful hit increases the time you have left to complete the course, essentially giving you a better time.



Whether you complete the task or not, Guillaume asks afterward if you wish to practice again. You can practice as many times as you wish (and it is well worth perfecting this). Then you can opt to practice for the other two events, or temporarily halt the quest.

STAYING THE COURSE

This practice course has a dummy, a checkpoint, a dummy, a checkpoint, a target, a checkpoint, a target, and the finish line. You have 60 seconds to complete this course. For each dummy you strike, eight seconds are added. For each target you hit, eight seconds are added.

Track: Just like Races, you must gallop through each checkpoint, though you don't need to be on the track between each checkpoint; so study the map to see any possible shortcuts you can take. Be careful, though. You lose the race if you move too far from the track.

Track: Some checkpoints are around tight bends and easily missed. Fail to pass through one, and you must turn Roach around, and try again, which effectively takes you out of the running for winning this in the event itself. Treat checkpoints as more important than any other activity in this event.

Track: Every time you approach a dummy or target, time slows down so you can more accurately strike them. Why not raise your sword when approaching an obstacle (like a checkpoint or bridge) so you can more accurately steer over or through it?

Track: Obviously, a quicker horse means a quicker race! You should gallop as often as possible, easing off only when sharp corners, or obstacles you are in danger of missing, appear.

Track: Augment Roach with quality saddles and blinders to help him maintain a higher top speed and stamina.

Dummies: Hold down your sword-swinging button and release it around five feet before you reach the dummy, so you knock its head off at the correct time. This is relatively easy providing you look ahead and manually spot each dummy. Feel free to hold down the sword button earlier than normal.

Targets: These are much more difficult to strike, as Roach continues in a straight line while you're aiming, which can mean he veers off-course. So look for targets as early as possible. They are always on the right side of the route.

Targets: You usually only have one chance to hit a target before you become too close to the target to aim properly, or before Roach veers into a ditch or off a bridge; it's more important to keep your speed up and ignore a target than to keep aiming at one. If you haven't struck a target with your second bolt, ignore it and keep going!

Targets: When hitting a target, look for the timer bar to increase, and the target to rock back and forth slightly (and the objective to update); this is easier than manually peering to see if you struck the target successfully. There is also an indication on the screen that you just hit a target.

Targets: It isn't necessary to strike each target or dummy to win this event; so expect to miss around four or five (in total) and still have a chance to win, providing you pass through every checkpoint at a relatively quick speed.

A proficient Witcher should be able to strike both dummies and hit both targets, then complete the course with around two-thirds left in the "Time remaining" bar.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT #3

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Guillaume to the training grounds.
- Go to the center of the arena.
- Defeat [the named knight].

Move to the open area where a group of knights are practicing their parrying, and Guillaume introduces you to infantry combat. Each knight has a different method for attacking, and it's up to you to defend yourself while looking for an opening. Expect to face well-armored foes armed with halberds, or a sword and shield (this depends on which knight you randomly face). Whether you win the fight or not, Guillaume asks afterward if you wish to practice again. You can practice as many times as you wish (subsequent knights have different types of weapons and possibly shields, so you are encouraged to repeat this). Then you can opt to practice for the other two events, or temporarily halt the quest.

"SLAYING" THE KNIGHTS

This requires you to perform with your steel sword at the height of competence. No Signs are to be used—magic gives you an unfair advantage in chivalric battles such as these—and instead you must learn the openings of your opponent. Signs are temporarily inaccessible during these bouts; even defensive Signs such as Quen.

Certain knights, such as Guy de Bois Fresnes, use a spear in combat, striking from range. This can easily better you if your timing is off. Learn to block the strikes, dodge, and retaliate when Guy is finishing a strike and is vulnerable.

Other knights, such as Donimir of Troy, opt for a sword and shield, and can be met at a closer range, but can be difficult to penetrate from the front. Dodge or roll around him when he tries to strike, and cut him at his flank. Or push him back and strike after a parry when he's off-balance. However, if a knight fights with a two-handed sword, striking after parrying might not work, as they will jump back.

Be much more defensive in your posture than normal, as you don't have Signs to fall back on, and these are no simple bandits you're facing! However, the timing for blocking and parrying is very similar to those of a toughened bandit.

You don't need to worry about dying, just surviving, in the combat arena. In the main event, expect multiple opponents and a much more chaotic atmosphere. Perfect your blocking, dodging, rolling to strike, and parrying right here.

If you can't parry a foe using either a halberd, or a sword and shield, and whittle them down to a victory, you should practice here until you can. That is, if you wish to win this tournament!

Quest For A Crest

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the registration tent and enter the tourney.

Once you've practiced all three events to your satisfaction, Guillaume instructs you to head to the inscription tent; your scrolls must be in order. Head to the southern part of the Tourney Grounds, to the tent showing the standings of the different Heraldic Houses (no scores are visible yet, as the competition hasn't begun, but you can check here as the tournament progresses). Enter the tent and speak to the Scribe.

Sir Geralt of Rivia (knight armor).

The Honorable Sir Ravix of Fourhorn (knight armor).

The Scribe has spent some considerable time looking into your personal history (in heraldic terms, fortunately), and offers you two crests which you can fight for:

- As Geralt of Rivia. No surprise there.
- As the honorable Ravix of Fourhorn.

Choosing one crest over another influences a minor scuffle with a rival knight, later in this quest. Feel free to ask the Scribe more about "Geralt of Rivia" and "Ravix of Fourhorn;" both are related to your past exploits in your younger days. Make your choice, and you receive a commemorative shield, which isn't used in combat, but can be hung on a wall in your Corvo Bianco compound.

After you've optionally asked about the challenges, the vows, and the prizes (of particular interest is a special sword, forged by Cornelius of Assengard, no less, for the winner of the tournament should he defeat the reigning champion), you may make a vow:

- Swear on the heron.
- Swear on your lady's love (though you don't mention which particular lady it is).
- Swear on the garter of the Duchess.
- Don't make a vow.

Vows only influence what is said during the final victory, should you better the current champion. Then you sign up, and are given some particularly shiny armor:

Items: Sir Geralt of Rivia's Shield, Sir Geralt of Rivia's Armor, Toussaint Knight's Gauntlets, Toussaint Knight's Trousers, Toussaint Knight's Boots

OR

Items: Ravix of Fourhorn's Shield, Ravix of Fourhorn's Armor, Toussaint Knight's Gauntlets, Toussaint Knight's Trousers, Toussaint Knight's Boots

HEAVY STEEL IS THE NEW STRIPE: WHAT TO WEAR

Whether you're representing Rivia or Fourhorn, your attire is identical aside from the coat of arms and color scheme. As this is heavy armor, and you may not have focused your previous adventuring on the wearing of such attire, you may also remove this armor, and don protective equipment more suited to your adventuring. Though this isn't in the spirit of the tournament, wearing your preferred armor (for the infantry combat particularly, as well as adventuring outside the Tourney Grounds) is an excellent idea.

INSPECTING THE TOURNEY TENTS

Consult the Tourney Grounds Atlas entry to discover the various vendors at this location. In addition, you may look around the various tents, and examine the banners and tents of the nine major heraldic houses that knights are fighting for the honor of. This isn't necessary, but you can learn who's here, and where they hail from.

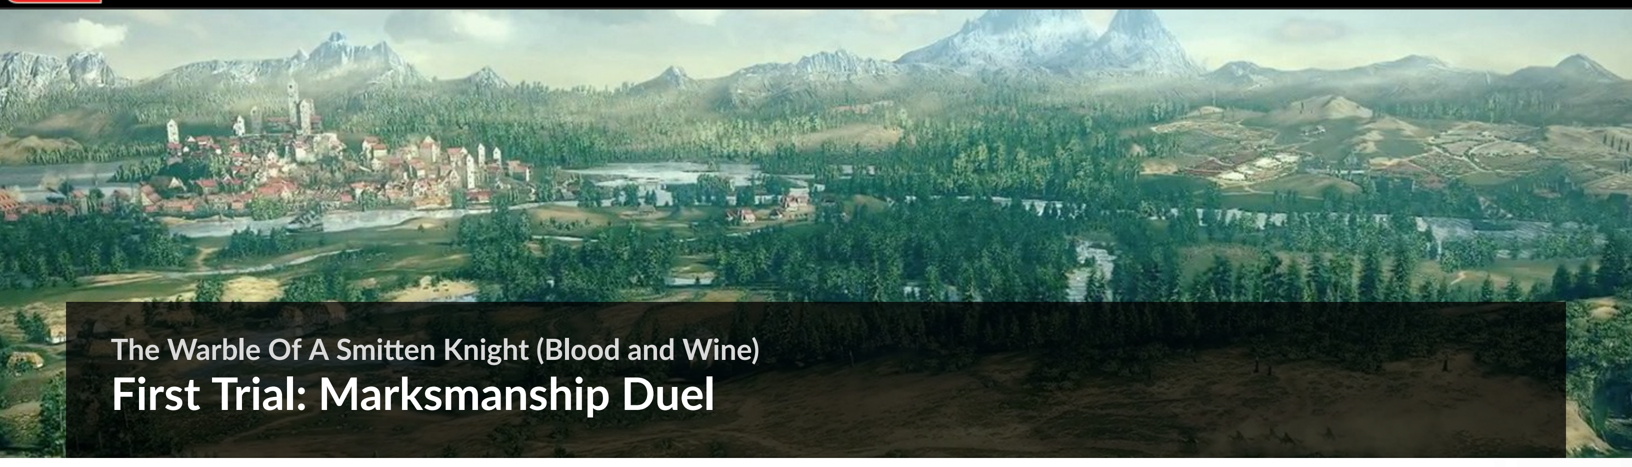
Chivalry And Rivalry: Meet The Tournament Knights

Sir Gregoire de Gorgon of Mount Gorgon

Before you face your first rival at the marksmanship duel, it is worth sizing up your opponents. You may have fought a few of them during combat practice. All hail from across the globe, fighting under different crests; some familiar and others new to you. You face off against some or all of them during the competition. The biggest threat is the terrifying Sir Gregoire of Mount Gorgon; an Iron Borg more than twice your size!



The Warble Of A Smitten Knight (Blood and Wine)

First Trial: Marksmanship Duel

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the shooting range.

The tournament is about to begin! When you're ready to face your first challenger, head down to the shooting range. You're waylaid by your friend Palmerin, who is waiting his turn at this challenge; he faces Rainfarn of Attre, who seems to be preparing for archery by inhaling fisstech. Palmerin mentions that the marksmanship duel may be slightly trickier than you may have thought, as the sun will be in your eyes. Palmerin, even though he's a southerner, suggests you play a quick round of Gwent. Win, and you swap places in the duel, with a more favorable view of the targets. Palmerin plays a strong Scoia'tael deck.

You can:

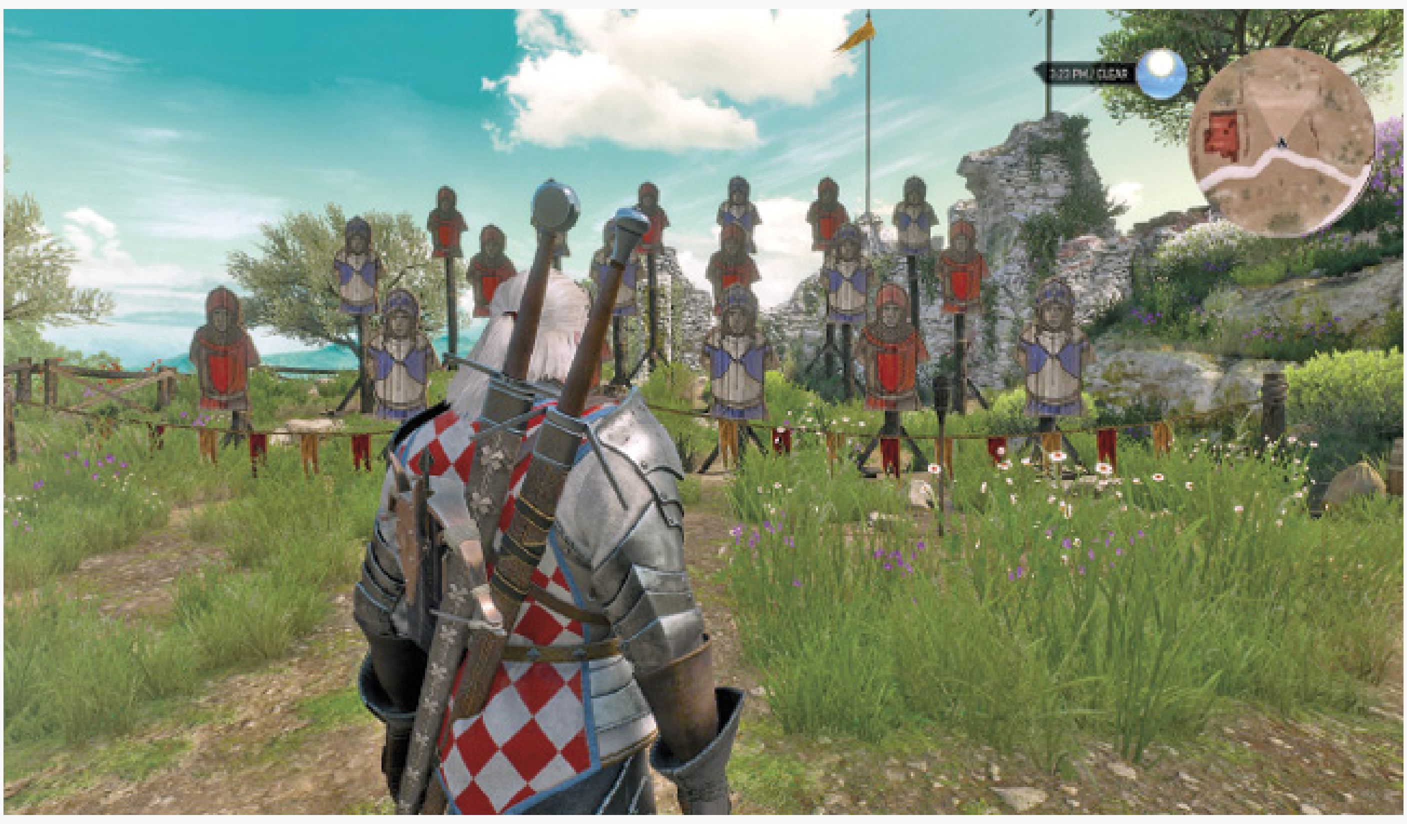
- Agree, challenge him to Gwent, and win. The sun won't be in your eyes during the duel, which now takes place in late afternoon.

- Agree, challenge him to Gwent, and lose. Or refuse the game of Gwent. The sun is in your eyes during the duel.

OBJECTIVES

- Geralt's Score (9). Horm's Score (less than 9).

The tournament now begins (in the morning with the sun in your eyes, or late afternoon if you beat Palmerin at Gwent). After a fanfare and some pomp and circumstance from Le Papillon the bard, you begin your duel with Horm Akerspaark.



Unlike in practice, there are 18 targets, with nine for you to hit (red) and nine for Horm to strike (blue and white). If the sun is in your eyes, it's a little more difficult to make out the colors, so refer to the nearby picture to see where each red target is (Geralt's head obscures one red target, and his sword hilt obscures one blue and white target).

Depending on the difficulty, Horm can be quite adept. Utilize the tactics you learned during practice to soundly thrash him, but you shouldn't expect an easy victory on the higher difficulty levels.

After the duel, you have a brief opportunity to speak to Lady Vivienne (and if you win, she presents you with a crossbow adorned with your crest). You can ask her about the other prizes, or that your medallion is humming when she is close by; the latter results in an evasive answer from Vivienne. After a brief congratulation (or commiseration) from Horm, you meet up with Guilaume again. You agree Vivienne is cursed in some way. Guilaume has found which tent she occupies, and reckons searching it might grant you further clues.

Investigation: Guillaume Doesn’t Give A Hoot

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to investigate Vivienne’s tent.

You arrive at Lady Vivienne’s tent. Guillaume tells you to search inside for any clues while he keeps watch outside. He’ll hoot like an owl if anyone approaches. Oblige, and head inside, finding the following upon examination:

- Claw marks on a bookcase; big marks from a beast.
- A jar of concealing ointment; powerful magic is at work here.
- An oriole feather on her writing desk. Does she keep one as a pet?
- Naezan salts atop a cabinet, used to make compresses.
- Some draped clothing with a dark green and yellow hue; someone other than Yennefer with a fixed color scheme.

When he finds both the claw marks and the feather, Geralt will suspect that Vivienne might be a Bruxa. He will mention his suspicions in later dialogues with Vivienne.

There’s also some notes on her writing desk; a simple list for clothing, a saddle, and a lot of “magic cream.” You are able to uncover four of the five examinable items before Guillaume gives you a “stage whisper” to let you know someone approaches. One of Vivienne’s servants catches you in the tent, and orders you to leave. The investigation halts as the next event begins.

Second Trial: The Great Race

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the entrance to the racing course.

The racing event is about to begin! Pass the snack vendor, head between the two guards, and wait in line as Le Papillon introduces each of the knights; your first introduction to every single one of your rivals in this competition! After Lady Vivienne inspects the line of knights, you catch your first glimpse of Sir Gregoire of Mount Gorgon; a mountain of a man who waits to be challenged at the end of the third event.

After Le Papillon's flowery introductions, he asks if anyone requires the rules of this event to be spelled out in lavish, poetic utterances. Remain silent, or request this if you wish; it could be helpful to listen to this dandy spout off, as you learn that (according to him) there are five targets to strike with bolts.

SIR GERALT OF RIVIA: AN OFFENSE TO HONOR

- If you chose the Rivia crest (even if you're not wearing the armor), Prince Anseis leans out and says your presence here is an offense to his honor, for the way you deserted his mother, Queen Meve. He stands back in line, seething.

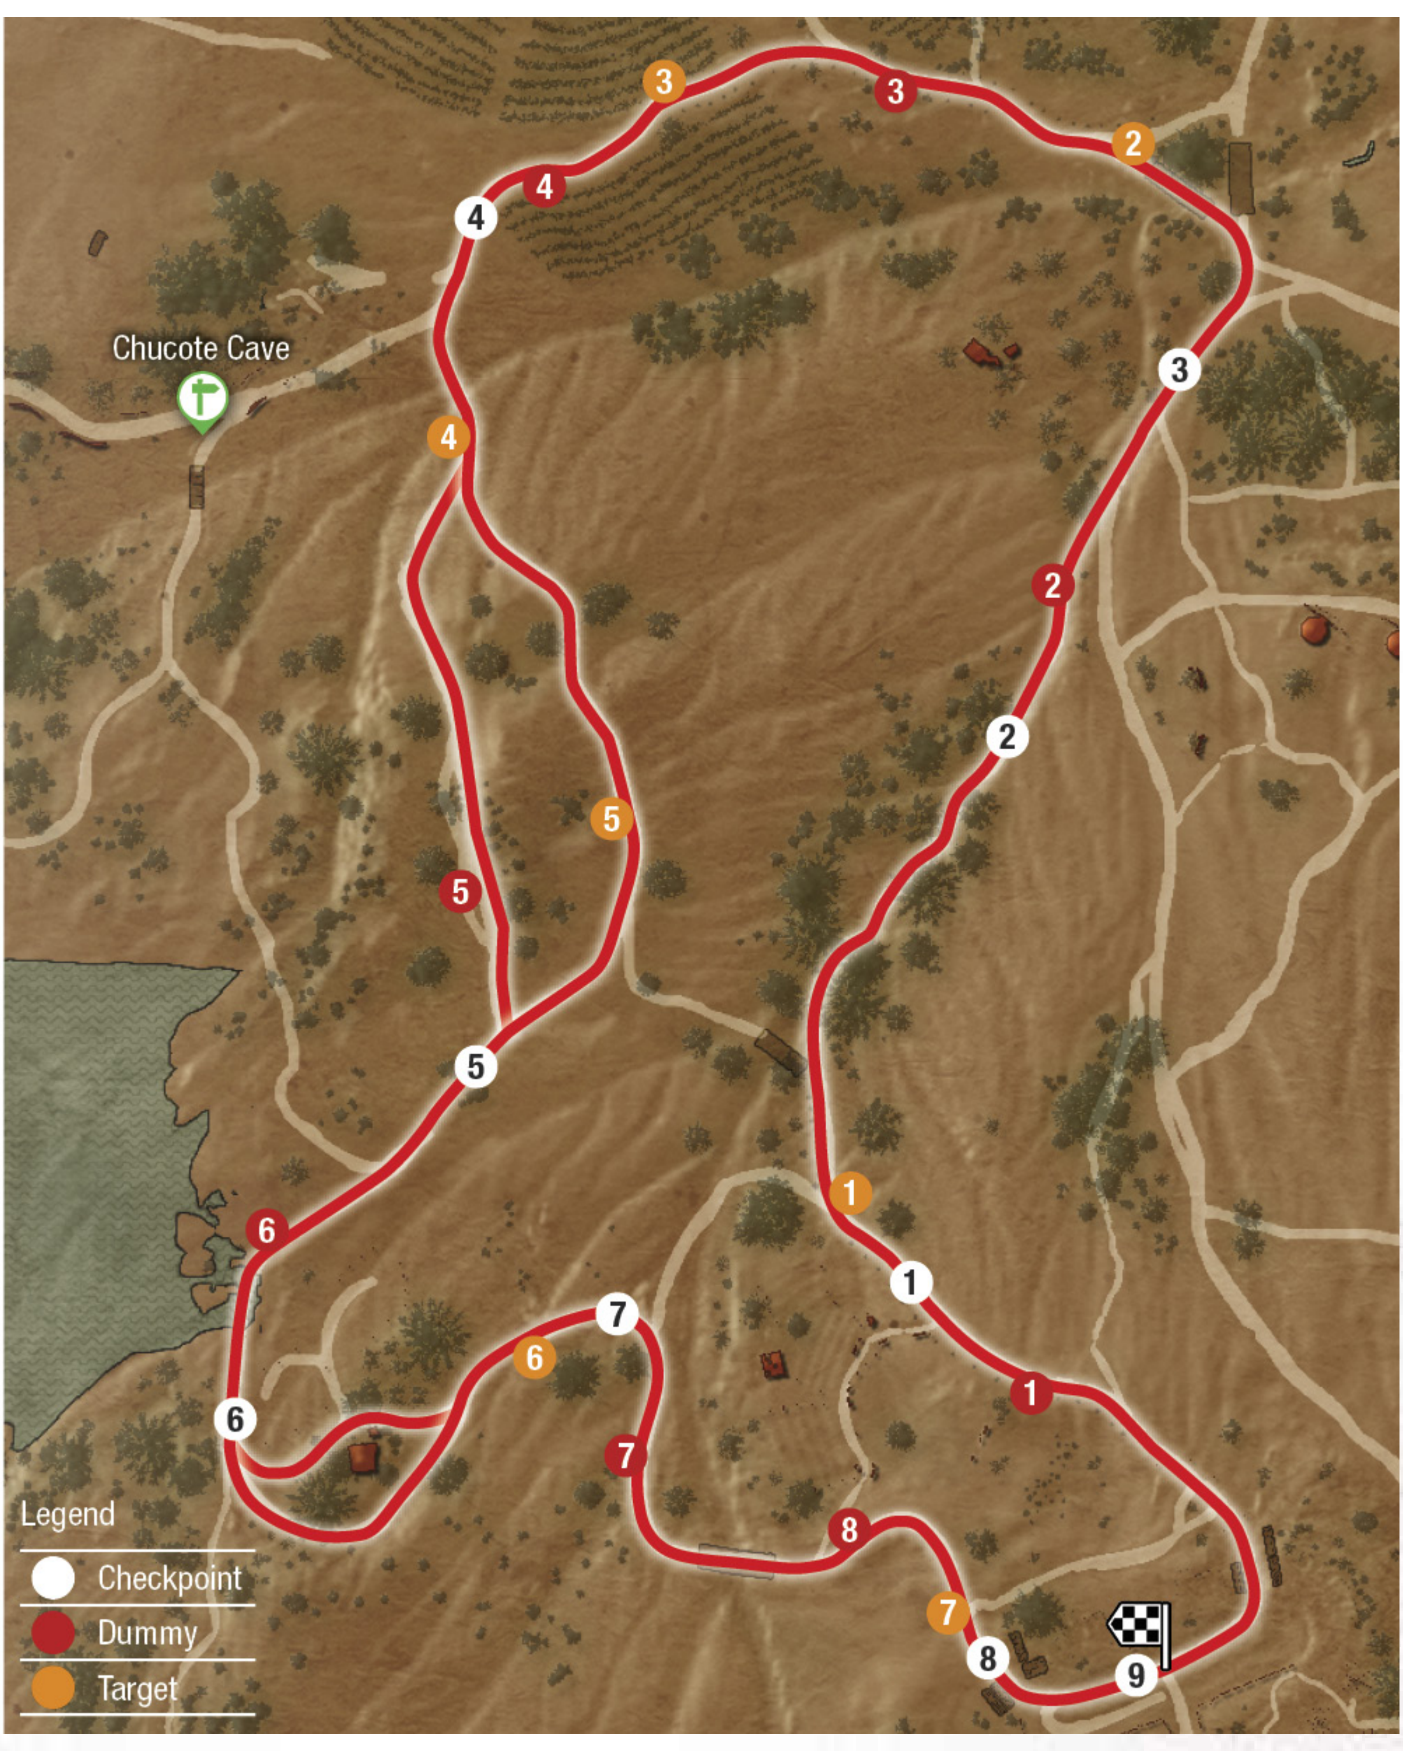
FAVIX OF FOURHORN: ANOTHER POCK TO MARK YOU

- If you picked the Fourhorn crest (even if you haven't donned the armor), Count Tailles leans out and tells you he bears marks where he met your steel, and swears he'll add another pock to your face by tourney's end!

OFF TO THE RACES

OBJECTIVES

- Checkpoints to pass (9).



Tourney Race: Competition Course

Now for the race itself! Gallop off the starting line, with a long left turn, and learn the route by studying this guide's map, and learning the order of everything:

- Dummy #1: A race downhill to your first dummy (on the left).
- Checkpoint #1: Downhill to your first checkpoint.
- Target #1: Downhill and a slight right to the target (on the right).
- Checkpoint #2: Down the stream to the next checkpoint.
- Dummy #2: Slight left turn to a dummy (left) just before the bridge.
- Checkpoint #3: Over the wood bridge, straight to the next checkpoint.
- Target #2: Sharp left turn, over a stone bridge and a target (on the right).
- Dummy #3: Uphill gallop, relatively straight, to a dummy (on the left).
- Target #3: Slight left curve uphill, to another target (on the right).
- Dummy #4: Uphill gallop to a dummy (on the left).
- Checkpoint #4: The checkpoint is almost immediately afterwards, medium left turn.
- Target #4: Down into a narrow stream bridge, with a target on the other side (on the right).
- Dummy #5 (right route), Target #5 (left route), Checkpoint #5: The track splits. The left route is longer, has a target along the trail, and you can cut across the hillside to the right to reach the checkpoint. The right route is slightly shorter, and has a dummy on the lower parallel goat trail. When the routes join, pass the next checkpoint.
- Dummy #6: Uphill gallop to a dummy (on the right).
- Checkpoint #6: A slight left turn over shallow water, then through the checkpoint.
- Target #6: The route splits with a very sharp left turn, or a medium left turn. The former is shorter but more dangerous. Both routes head either side of a small hut, then they join up with a target ahead and slightly downhill (to the right).
- Checkpoint #7: A checkpoint before a sharp right turn.
- Dummy #7: A slight uphill gallop, past a dummy (on the right).
- Dummy #8: A long medium left turn, over a stone bridge, and a dummy on the left as you pass over a rise.
- Target #7: A sharp right turn, with a target almost immediately on your right.
- Checkpoint #8 and #9: A medium left turn through the checkpoint, back into the racing arena, and the finish line.

Available Time:

- Easy: 85 seconds
- Medium: 75 seconds
- Hard: 55 seconds
- Death March: 45 seconds
- Dummies: +15 seconds
- Targets: +10 seconds

If you win, you are presented with a saddle showing the crest you are representing, and Lady Vivienne asks about the white-haired man sneaking out of her tent. She's ticked off at your juvenile response. If you fail, no such conversation (or prize) is awarded. Soon, the apple-crunching Guillaume beckons you over for an evening's festivities; there's a feast to enjoy while you both wait for a more appropriate time to speak to Vivienne.

Interlude: Chivalry And Revelry

Some time later, both you and Guillaume are at the open-air tavern by the lake, talking about what you've found out regarding Vivienne. Either agree to a tipple before she arrives or don't. Then your conversation is interrupted by a knight with a bee in his bonnet, and an axe to grind:

SIR GERALT OF RIVIA: A DUEL FOR MOTHER MEVE

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Anseis in a mounted duel.

➤ If you chose the Rivia crest, Prince Anseis makes good on his offer to challenge you for offending his honor, and demands satisfaction! He challenges you to mounted combat, which you can agree to, or face getting kicked out of the tournament. The action moves to the (now deserted) racing arena, where you must charge with steel sword aloft, and swipe it into the armored form of Prince Anseis. If you've previous experience of mounted combat, apply it here. Otherwise, use the same technique you perfected on the dummies, starting your attack so you're hitting the knight on the upswing before he hits you. Gallop from one end of the arena to the other before turning round, so you can line up your swipe exactly and have time to accurately strike your foe.

After the bout, you explain, in no uncertain terms, the reasons why you needed to leave Anseis' mother's camp. The explanation is accepted, and Prince Anseis now accepts you as a man of honor. The feast continues.

RAVIX OF FOURHORN: OUT FOR THE COUNT

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat Tailles and his thugs.

➤ If you picked the Fourhorn crest, Count Tailles (flanked by two bodyguards) makes good on his offer to challenge you for offending him twice, and demands satisfaction! You aren't interested in his nonsense, prompting him to surround you with his thugs, and the chat degenerates into a bout of fisticuffs. Guillaume proves his worth by tackling one of the bodyguards, leaving you to pummel the other thug and the Count himself. The usual fist fighting rules apply.

After the pummeling punishment, Count Tailles (or you) stands up off the floor, and leaves either in embarrassment or with a taste of victory. The feast continues.

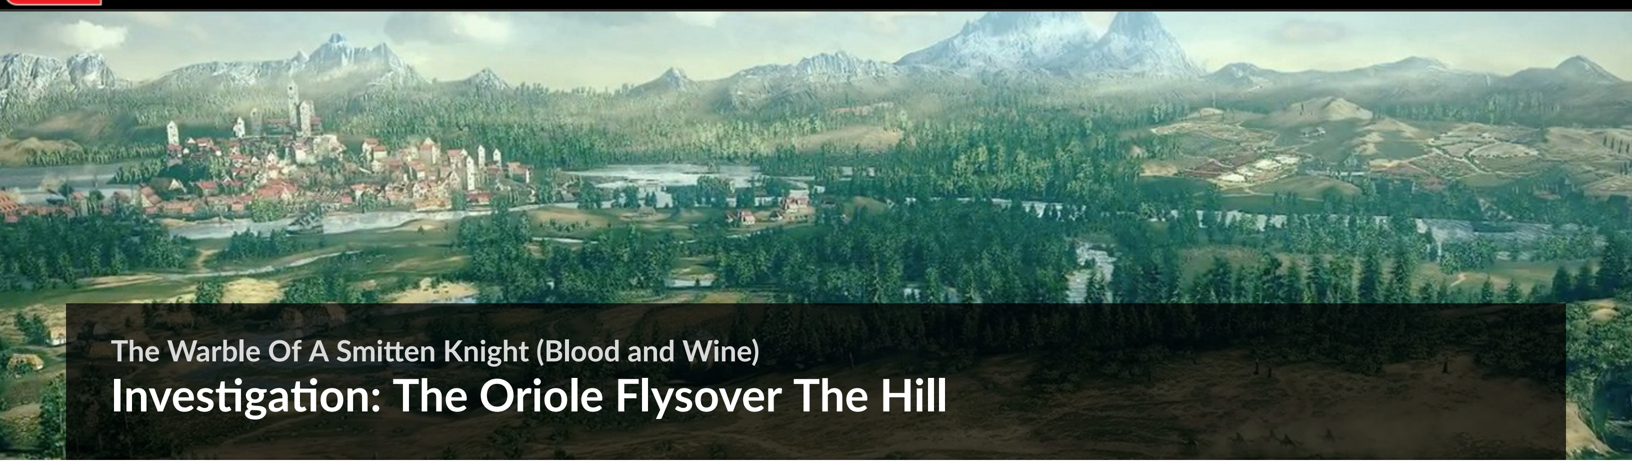
She reminds the knights that the best among them may yet face the reigning champion Sir Gregoire. She warns everyone to be mindful of the trial tomorrow; the final event where the winner is decided. Then she retires to her tent.



The Warble Of A Smitten Knight (Blood and Wine)

Investigation: The Oriole Flysover The Hill

OBJECTIVES

- Confront Vivienne. Find Vivienne.
- Follow the bird.

PREFERRED PREPARATION

It is worth spending a few moments preparing for an unintended hike (and monster combat); as you're about to ascend up into the Gorgon Foothills.

Visit Vivienne's tent (where you and Guillaume went to earlier), and she is nowhere to be found. Step out onto the lake-side deck, where you spot a golden oriole which takes to the skies with a chirrup. Use your Witcher Senses to "see" the songs it sings as it flies off across the lake in a roughly westerly direction. The bird seems to want you to follow it.

You head into a narrow goat trail winding further west into the hilly wilderness. You may be startled by a Boar, then a Panther, and a second big cat. Fight off these adversaries, then home in on the bird's location. If it lands, move to the source of the sound and it takes off again. Climb a hill heading southwest, crossing two small wood bridges while battling another Boar and Panther.

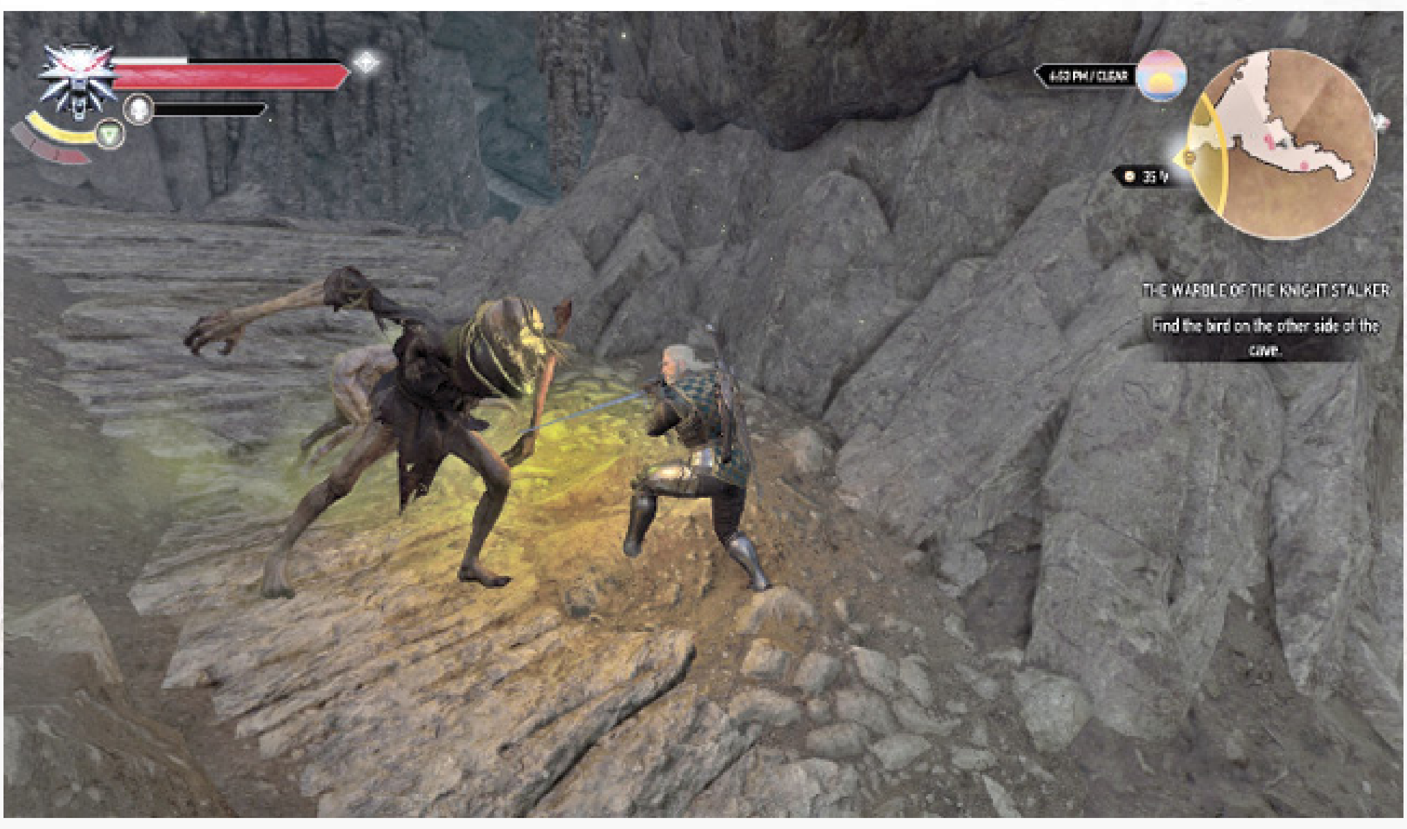
OBJECTIVES

- Find the bird on the other side of the cave.

Cross more bridges as the terrain becomes increasingly steep, and the bridges more rickety. Running south, then southwest, ascend into some wooded thickets, before the bird takes off and flies over a cave entrance, and over Rosetree Hill. It seems the only way onward is up through the cave. Unfortunately, this cave is the lair of a Wight, and up to three Barghests! Battle these forsaken foes, using tactics from the Bestiary.

Exit the cave where the bird sits, and it flies off again, leading you up an overgrown path, then into the forest, and to a lake in the woods.

You approach a creature sitting on its haunches, staring at the lake. Lady Vivienne's curse is true; she seems afflicted with a mutation resulting in a distinctly bird-like appearance. If you found the clues that made Geralt suspect that Vivienne was a Bruxa, he may comment on it. She waits quietly for you to kill her. You explain you only hunt monsters, and she isn't one (to your eyes at least). When she asks how you see her, answer as you wish. You seek to help her, and Guillaume's motives should be clear to her too. When she asks whether you'll turn on her, answer as you wish (though more pleasant responses are first and second).



THE WARBLE OF THE KNIGHT STALKER
Find the bird on the other side of the cave.

Vivienne explains how her parents were cursed by a creature dwelling in these woods. Optionally ask what it looked like, then ask her to continue the story. She explains the curse, and how she maintains her "normal" appearance using magic, after which you can optionally mention the dangers this entails. Then explain you're here to lift the curse. You explain a method to lift the curse (transferring it to someone else), which is quickly dismissed. Optionally ask why, before mentioning a second method: This one is an ancient ritual involving an oriole egg. It could work, but there may be side-effects (including having the seven-year lifespan of an oriole). While Vivienne thinks it over, she dresses, and you can remain here or return to the Tourney Grounds.

Some time later, you meet with Guillaume again at the Rivia tent. He's out of his mind with worry, and demands to know what ails Vivienne. Your choice here affects the outcome of this quest. You can:

- End #1: Mention that a powerful curse afflicts her (even though you promised Vivienne you wouldn't mention anything), and that she is transforming into a bird. Guillaume pleads for you to help her, and you mention a method of ridding the curse, but shortening her life in the process. This isn't what Guillaume had agreed to; answer him as you wish, before mentioning a second method (via her reflection and a transfer of the curse to another). Guillaume is quick to volunteer to sacrifice himself for Vivienne, but asks which you'd recommend. Choose either the egg ritual or the water method. Then Guillaume asks if you'll finish the tourney.

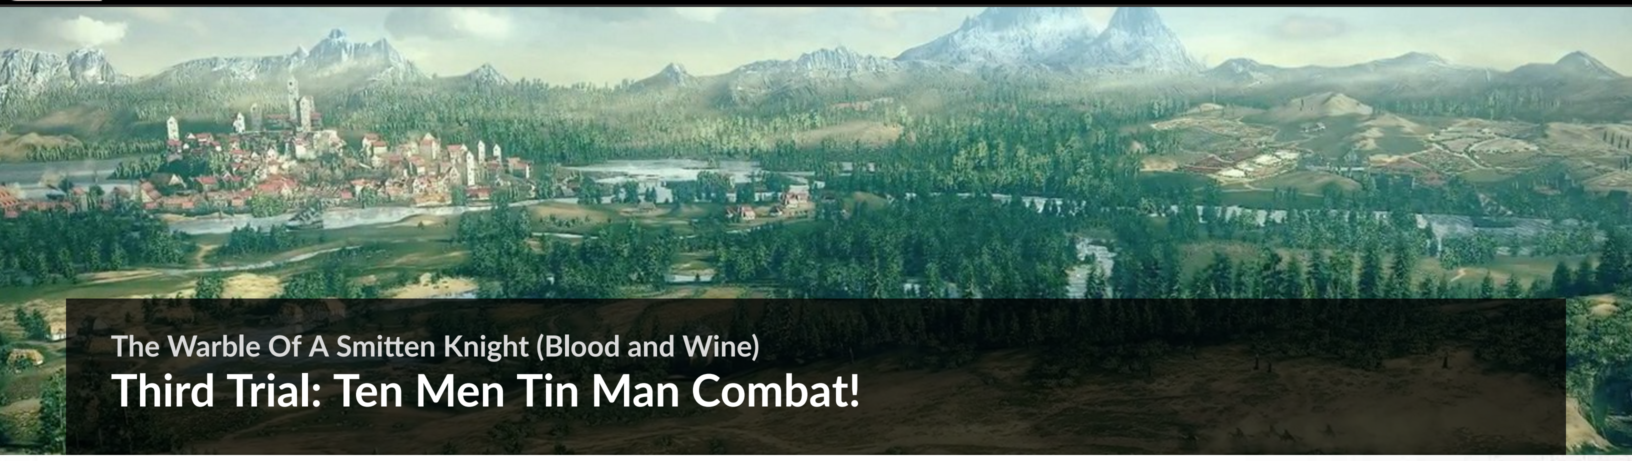
- End #2: Tell Guillaume you promised Vivienne you wouldn't tell anyone. An incredulous Guillaume pleads to know what the problem is, then is furious, demanding to know if you'll even finish the tourney.

Your choice here has a major implication regarding how this quest, and the fates of Guillaume and Vivienne, conclude.

- Agree to finish the tourney, and the Third Trial occurs early next morning.
- Ignore the tourney, and await Vivienne's decision at her tent, and you miss the combat trial entirely, skipping to the "End Investigation" section of this quest.



The Warble Of A Smitten Knight (Blood and Wine)

Third Trial: Ten Men Tin Man Combat!

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the opposing team (5).

Assuming you agreed to the combat event, you amass with four of your fellow knights under the arena. The haughty Prince Anseis is the self-appointed leader of your team, proudly describing that this mock battle commemorates the Battle of Fox Hollow of 1218. After a suitable amount of pomp and circumstance from Le Papillon, this five-on-five battle begins!

CREST FALLEN: BEATING THE OTHER KNIGHTS

Though the tactics to achieve victory should have already been studied and learned during the practice combat battles, there are a few additional rules to be aware of, and tactics to exploit, to ensure your victory (or lack of victory, as you can lose this without dying if you wish).

During combat, you can hang back, let your comrades take on the five foes, and then step in and challenge enemies that are already engaged in combat; effectively getting some free hits in from the flank or behind.

Palmerin is the single biggest threat to your chances of facing Sir Gregoire in the final duel; even if your team wins, only the knight with the most individual victories goes on to face Sir Gregoire. If you want that to be you, begin combat by immediately rushing Palmerin (in the gold armor) and bringing him to bear.

To ensure you face Sir Gregoire, aim to take out three knights in combat, including Palmerin. Then choose two other knights armed with the weapons you have the least amount of trouble circumventing.

Need to cheapen your victories somewhat? Then constantly cycle through your targets after you defeat Palmerin, looking for foes engaging in combat that have very little health left; then pounce on these enemies and snatch the win from your comrade!

The large arena allows you to easily out-flank and slice your foes at their sides or rear, which is a quicker way to bring your foes down that clanging your sword off their well-guarded fronts (with shields or halberds to hamper your progress).

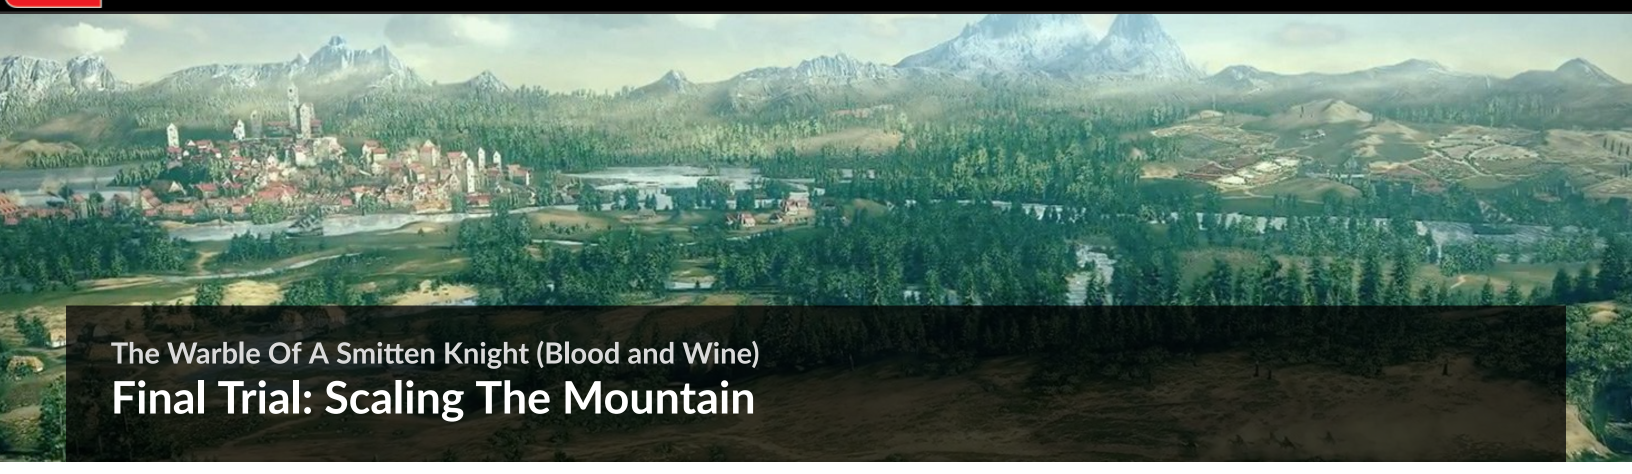
Remember you can utilize potions to increase your Vitality, though those may be best left for the battle to come!

The battle ends when one of the following occurs:

- Your Vitality is emptied due to enemy prodding, and other team mates are still standing.
- Your Vitality is emptied due to enemy prodding, and you're the last man standing on your team.
- Your team brings down all five enemy foes, no matter how helpful you were.
- You slay all of the enemies (which is usually impossible; the most you're likely to take down is four of the five).

Time for everyone's favorite bard narrator that isn't Dandelion to read off the final scores:

- If Palmerin's team wins, he goes on to face Sir Gregoire, leaving you to end Vivienne's investigation.
- If you brought down more knights than Palmerin, and won all other competitions, he gracefully concedes, and the ultimate battle of the tournament begins!



The Warble Of A Smitten Knight (Blood and Wine)

Final Trial: Scaling The Mountain

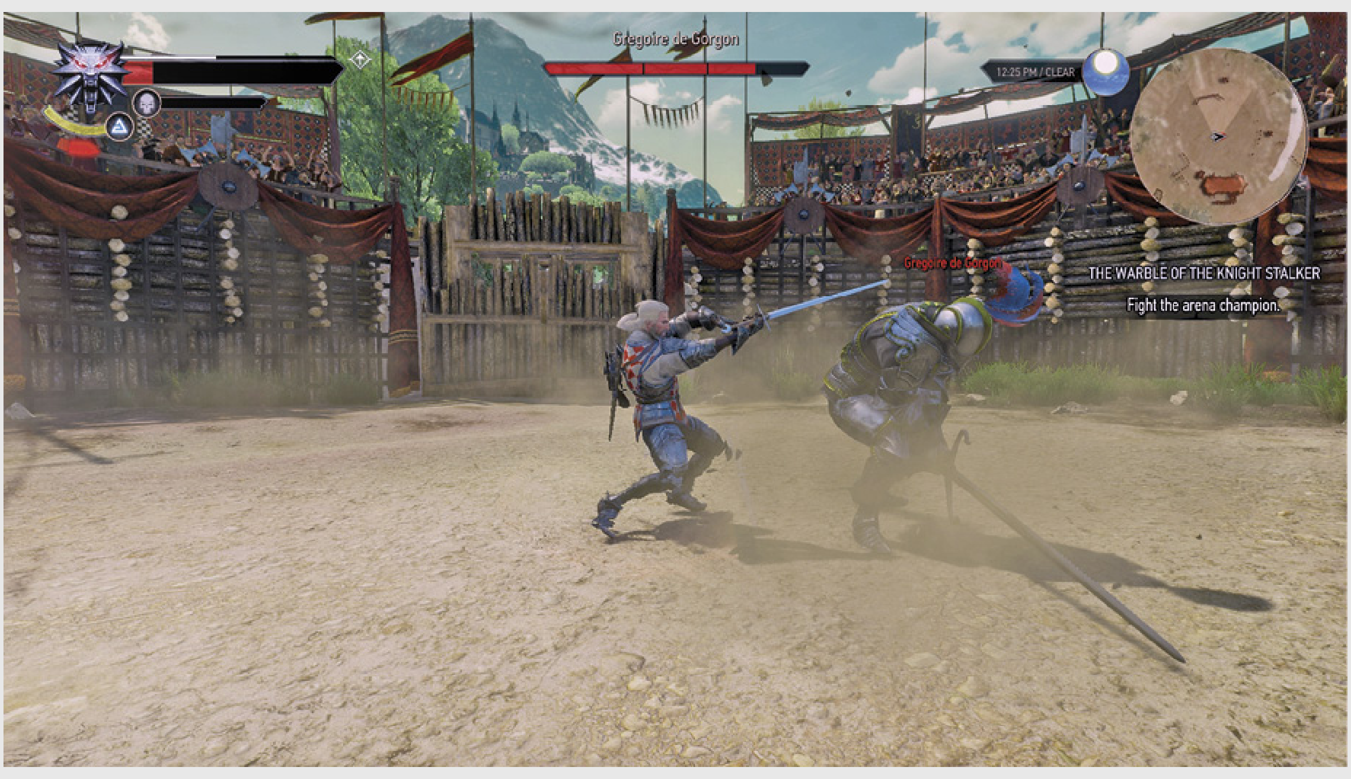
OBJECTIVES

- Fight the arena champion.

Assuming you won all competitions so far, including defeating the other team in the arena, Le Papillon asks whether you have any last requests before you face the titan of infamy, Gregoire de Gorgon himself!

DEFEATING SIR GREGOIRE DE GORGON: HIS ATTACKS

This lumbering mountain of a man is a giant knight with a mysterious past that has taken a vow of silence; he lets his sword do the talking. He has the following attacks and maneuvers to be aware of:



No Vulnerabilities: As you cannot use Signs, bombs, projectiles, or oils, this opponent has no vulnerabilities to exploit, aside from those inflicted by your steel sword, and the tactics you learn about while fighting him in sword combat. Remember that healing potions are accessible, however.

No Parrying, No Countering: This plate-metal monster has attacks that inflict such damage and are swung with such force, that they cannot be parried or countered. This means you have ever fewer combat options than for any other battle fought previously!

Punch and/or Kick: He occasionally employs a gauntlet punch or boot kick if you're close to him, and usually at his side, to knock you back so he can regroup and begin his sword swinging.

Quick Horizontal Slice: A rapid slice through the air in front of him, offering damage to those caught in the arc of his large sword.

Quick Vertical Uppercut: A step forward and a swing upwards that can knock you back and deal nasty damage (like all his attacks).

Quick Overhead Strike: A vertical (and sometimes slightly diagonal) strike down in front of him, with a small window of opportunity to hit him as he recovers and pulls his sword back afterwards. This sometimes occurs with a step forward.

Heavy Overhead Strike: A step forward and a more pronounced strike down in front of him, and a second or two afterwards where he pulls his sword back to his chest afterwards. This is an excellent visual clue to retaliate at this point.

DEFEATING SIR GREGOIRE DE GORGON: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

Tackle this prolonged battle as the ultimate test of your sword skill and maneuvering! Though this towering knight has some truly grotesquely damaging attacks, he has one overall weakness to exploit; a lack of speed. He isn't slow by any means, as his attacks are reasonably rapid, but he lacks extreme dexterity and quickness, and hasn't bothered to learn the fine art of dodging around a foe.

Whittle down his vitality by reacting to his recovery time; it is far safer than timing slashing attacks between his sword swings. Wait for an attack, dodge around to his flank, and retaliate with one or two light strikes or a heavy attack. Then retreat so you aren't caught by a punch or wild slash of his sword.

Of particular merit is the recovery time after his Heavy Overhead Strike, which is the very best time to lay into him. While a flurry of light attacks is reasonable, this is the perfect opportunity to hit with a strong attack (covering any ground from retreating). Better yet, try a Rend Strong attack with quick timing to punish this move.

Continue with these tactics until the battle is over. Remember parrying and countering are out, but dodging (backward and around) are in! You may also wish to bring your very best steel sword with you into this combat; one that ignores armor, and causes criticals is a fine choice.

Gregoire does not stick to the honorable rules of the arena and will strike you down if your health gets too low. Only loading a previous saved game is now an option. END #1: THE LIGHT OF VIVIENNE'S LIFE

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the glade with Vivienne and Guillaume.

If you told Guillaume "a powerful curse afflicts her" and told him about the exact nature of Vivienne's curse on the night before the final Tourney Trial, you meet her gazing across the lake at her tent. She asks if you might explain the exact nature of the egg ritual to her, but you think an alternate method might be best, despite her protests. A heroic Guillaume appears from his hiding place, hands proudly on his hips, telling Vivienne he will save her. Vivienne is furious at this interruption of a private conversation. Answer her as you wish.

Guillaume explains to Vivienne that she no longer bears this burden alone. Vivienne flashes an angry look your way at betraying her trust, while Guillaume explains he understands how she feels, for he had an aunt who contracted a strange illness. He wants her curse to rest on him, to take it away from her. When she asks him why, he simply states "Because I love you." Guillaume realizes he's been a fool facing a Shaelmaar in the arena; risking his life for no purpose. Now he can do something truly important for her. Vivienne's demeanor softens, and you're asked if this is a good idea. Answer as you wish. Vivienne is coming around; she was prepared to die. Now she is also prepared to attempt something mad. When you're ready to perform the reflection ritual, let Vivienne know, and the three of you ride off into the Gorgon Foothills.

You finally arrive at the Hidden Clearing, dismount, and follow both Vivienne and Guillaume to the glade. A panther is prowling the area, and must be dispatched. You kneel by the water's edge. Guillaume waits for Vivienne to reveal her true self. Guillaume thinks her beautiful, even as she stands before him in her feathered and cursed form.

He holds out his hand. She takes his hand, and Vivienne quietly tells Guillaume she will not leave him, even if he becomes cursed. You give the couple instructions, and they plunge into the waters.

Crawling from the pool, you can mention to Guillaume that you didn't think the ritual would work, before asking how he feels. Only a slight itch! Vivienne dresses and returns; the curse is lifted, and the ritual complete as the pair were truly in love. Answer them as you wish one last time, before they depart; balls must be attended, and distant lands to be seen! After a couple of classic bird-related puns and a reward for your troubles, the two lovebirds flutter off into the woods, and the quest concludes.

EPILOGUE

When the Night of Long Fangs starts and Geralt witnesses the start of the attack on the city, he can find Guillaume and Vivienne with Anna Henrietta and the other nobles.

After finishing the Night of Long Fangs, you can encounter Guillaume and Vivienne on an observation deck on the northern side of the palace. You can have a short chat with them, during which you can learn that the curse does not seem to have great effects on Guillaume. He just started to sprout some "pubic feathers." Vivienne likes it. After that, you can encounter both of them strolling around the marketplace of Beauclair now and then.

When you get the medal from Anna Henrietta for defeating the Beast of Beauclair, you can also spot Guillaume and Vivienne in the audience.

END #2: GUILLAUME KEPT IN THE DARK

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the glade with Vivienne.

If you told Guillaume "sorry, promised her I wouldn't tell" and kept him in the dark about the exact nature of Vivienne's curse on the night before the final Tourney Trial, you meet her gazing across the lake at her tent. She has decided not to endanger anyone, and chooses the method to rid herself of the curse involving the oriole's egg. She knows there is one in the clearing you met her at. Before you explain the precise nature of the curse removal, you inform Vivienne her tent has ears. A sheepish Guillaume appears from his hiding spot. Vivienne is furious, thinking you've hatched a scheme unbeknownst to her. Answer her as you wish.

Guillaume kneels before Vivienne, telling her he lives to serve her. She sharply asks if he's hers to command before ordering him to leave the tent, and disappear into the Duchy's northern-most marshes. He must leave now. She wags an accusing finger at you. Comment about him figuring out everything by himself (which is true) if you wish, before inquiring whether she did the right thing. She tells you, in no uncertain terms, that she has no need for lusty knights, even though only one of the rituals is now possible. When you're ready to continue to find the oriole egg, let Vivienne know, and the two of you ride off into the Gorgon Foothills.

You finally arrive at the Hidden Clearing, dismount, and follow Vivienne to the glade. A panther is prowling the area, and must be dispatched. You inspect the oriole nest Vivienne mentioned, and find the eggs have fallen on a moss patch. One is cracked. You take an egg, holding it to Vivienne's true form. Optionally ask if she wishes to continue, before telling her to focus and repeat an incantation. As she complies, the egg you're holding at her forehead begins to glow and pulse, before finally exploding, sending you both flying in opposite directions.

When you come to, Vivienne has dressed and is excited to feel different; the curse has been lifted! She is excited to attend balls, travel to Oxenfurt, and even Novigrad! She is most grateful, and you mention Guillaume is the one to thank. She pauses for a moment, and asks you to tell him so if you see him. Optionally ask whether she should tell him herself, before agreeing, and bidding Vivienne a farewell. She wanders into the woods.

You now get the task to let Guillaume know what happened. You find him at the open air tavern at the tournament grounds, but he won't be happy when he hears what you have to say. You will still get your reward, but Guillaume walks away, not wanting to talk to you anymore.

EPILOGUE

After the Night of Long Fangs concludes, you can find Guillaume close to the Pheasantry. He seems to be completely drunk and falls over once we talk to him.

You can then also find Vivienne in the harbor of Novigrad, where she will tell you about the places she already visited. She seems very happy and gives you the last feather that she had. You can wear it behind you ear. Vivienne gives you a hint that she might want to see Skellige next.

After six days, we can find Vivienne living in the tavern of Kaer Trolde Village (once Yennefer moved out in the main story). After seven years, she dies.

ALTERNATIVE EPILOGUE

If you don't finish the quest by the time The Night of Long Fangs starts, you can find Guillaume's corpse in the city. He perished fighting vampires. After the night is over, we might find Vivienne mourning at his grave.

BAW WINE WARS: BELGAARD (PART 1)

RELATED QUESTS: Secondary Quest: Wine Wars: Coronata, Secondary Quest: Wine Wars: Vermentino

LOCATIONS: Plegmund's Bridge

CHARACTERS: Ducal Clerk, Liam de Coronata, Matilda of Vermeninto.

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the clerk at Plegmund's Bridge and learn more about the sale of Belgaard.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint or at any time afterward. The quest begins once you read the rather bureaucratic missive: "Announcement from the Office of Internal Revenue of the Duchy of Toussaint." You can also start this quest by simply turning up at the Plegmund's Bridge Signpost.

Visit Plegmund's Bridge in the Sansretour Valley, and you'll notice it is also the headquarters for the Toussaint Office of Internal Revenue. Walk up to the exterior table, where the ducal clerk is administering a squabble over the sale of the Belgaard winery estate. Two possible purchasers, Liam de Coronata and Matilda of Vermentino, both wish to stake a claim at the Belgaard vineyards, but the Ducal Clerk doesn't deem them responsible stewards, being as it is their own wineries are in chaotic disrepair. After some verbal sparring between the interested parties, Liam and you strike up a conversation. Answer him as you wish.

LIAM: AN OAFISH OGRE OF THE WORST SORT?

Liam de Coronata

Once Liam realizes you're a Witcher, he's eager for you to sort out the troubles the Coronata vinery is suffering from. He lists the following problems:

- The herbarium is infested with monsters.
- His steward has gone missing with an entire transport of wine.
- Someone has abducted his herbalist.

Liam is sure Matilda is part of this sabotage! After agreeing to help (or optionally bargaining up to 10 percent more payment and agreeing to the job), Secondary Quest: Wine Wars: Coronata now begins.

MATILDA: SUGAR-SWEET, BUT A TEMPER SHARP AS HORSERADISH?

Matilda of Vermentino

Before you can begin your reconnoiter of the Coronata wine estate, Matilda beckons you over for a chat. She firmly believes Liam is responsible for the rotten things going on at her own vineyard, Vermentino. She remarks that the following problems have occurred:

- Both her cooper and blacksmith have mysteriously vanished.
- Man-eating plants have sprouted on her paths.
- Strange things are afoot on Pheasant Hill.

After agreeing to help (or optionally bargaining up to 10 percent more coin and agreeing to the task), Secondary Quest: Wine Wars: Vermentino now begins.

Secondary Quest: Wine Wars: Belgaard now temporarily concludes. Before you choose which vintner to help, you can optionally return to the Ducal Clerk and inquire what's so special about Belgaard; it was the winery that belonged to the late Count Crespi, and has some rare grapes in cultivation.

LIAM OR MATILDA? WHO TO HELP FIRST.

Good news! Both Wine Wars quests that are currently active (Coronata and Vermentino) can be completed in any order you like, and you don't need to fully finish one before the other. There isn't an optimal order either; the quests are presented in the order they were received.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest begins once you've spoke to Liam de Coronata at Plegmund's Bridge, and agreed to help him. Feel free to solve the following five problems in any order you wish; they are presented as an optimal path with minimal backtracking. Note you do not need to visit Coronata Vineyard at any point until the problem areas are neutralized.

The sprawling Coronata vineyards and estate are east of Plegmund's Bridge. Coronata Vineyard is at the center of it all, with the five problem areas in the usually-idyllic lands to the north and east.

Wine Wars: Coronata (Blood and Wine)

Problem Area #1: Monster Nest In The Northwest Vineyard

Take the road along the western edge of Coronata Vineyard, into the northern vineyard and prepare for some Archespore weeding. A couple of these oversized sunflowers have taken root at the foot of the vineyard hill. Destroy all active foes, before dropping a bomb into their nest, and watching for the explosion.

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Read the notes found at the Coronata Vineyard.
- (Optional) Search Coronata and Vermentino and find proof of sabotage.

Journey roughly north, out of the woods along the main thoroughfare, to a ruined camp where more Archespores must be defeated. Slice through these beasts, and then examine the corpse of Liam's dead steward. On his person is a parchment to read, which reveals the vintner's suspicions to be true! Someone is sabotaging the Coronata winery! But it isn't clear who.

Items: Orders on elegant stationery

QUESTING DECISIONS: WHAT THE DEUS?!

An optional objective now begins to search for proof of sabotage in the Coronata area: This isn't tracked as the solution becomes clear during the completion of this, and Secondary Quest: Wine Wars: Vermentino. You are encouraged to complete both tasks, as it reveals the answers you seek. If you completed Wine Wars: Vermentino already, Secondary Quest: Wine Wars: The Deus in the Machina begins.

Wine Wars: Coronata (Blood and Wine)

Problem Area #4: Treasure Hunt At Pittapatte River Crossing

From the corpse of the steward, you can run along the road in a roughly easterly direction, following the curve of the path southeast toward Dun Tynne Crossroads. Before you reach there, you must reach the Pittepatte River Crossing, which is guarded by two Rabid Rock Trolls. Defeat both of them, before investigating the corpse at the northwest end of the crossing, near the large tree. Loot his remains for a letter and key. This updates the objective for this area, as well as starting a special Treasure Hunt: Coin Doesn't Stink, which is only available during this quest! The details for this Quest are located (below).

Problem Area #2: Abandoned Site At Tilly Field

Due south of the Belgaard Vineyard, and southeast of the Hortense Estate is Tilly Field, where some of the finest wines in Toussaint were being readied to grow before an infestation of Giant Centipedes. There are four of these colossal pests to remove from this farmland, after which, Belgaard's workers return to till the land.

RELATED QUESTS: Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Manticore Gear
LOCATIONS: Prophet Lebioda Statue
CHARACTERS: The Great Beggar
ENEMIES: The Great Beggar

OBJECTIVES

- Find an empty sarcophagus and place the bones in it.

QUESTING DECISIONS

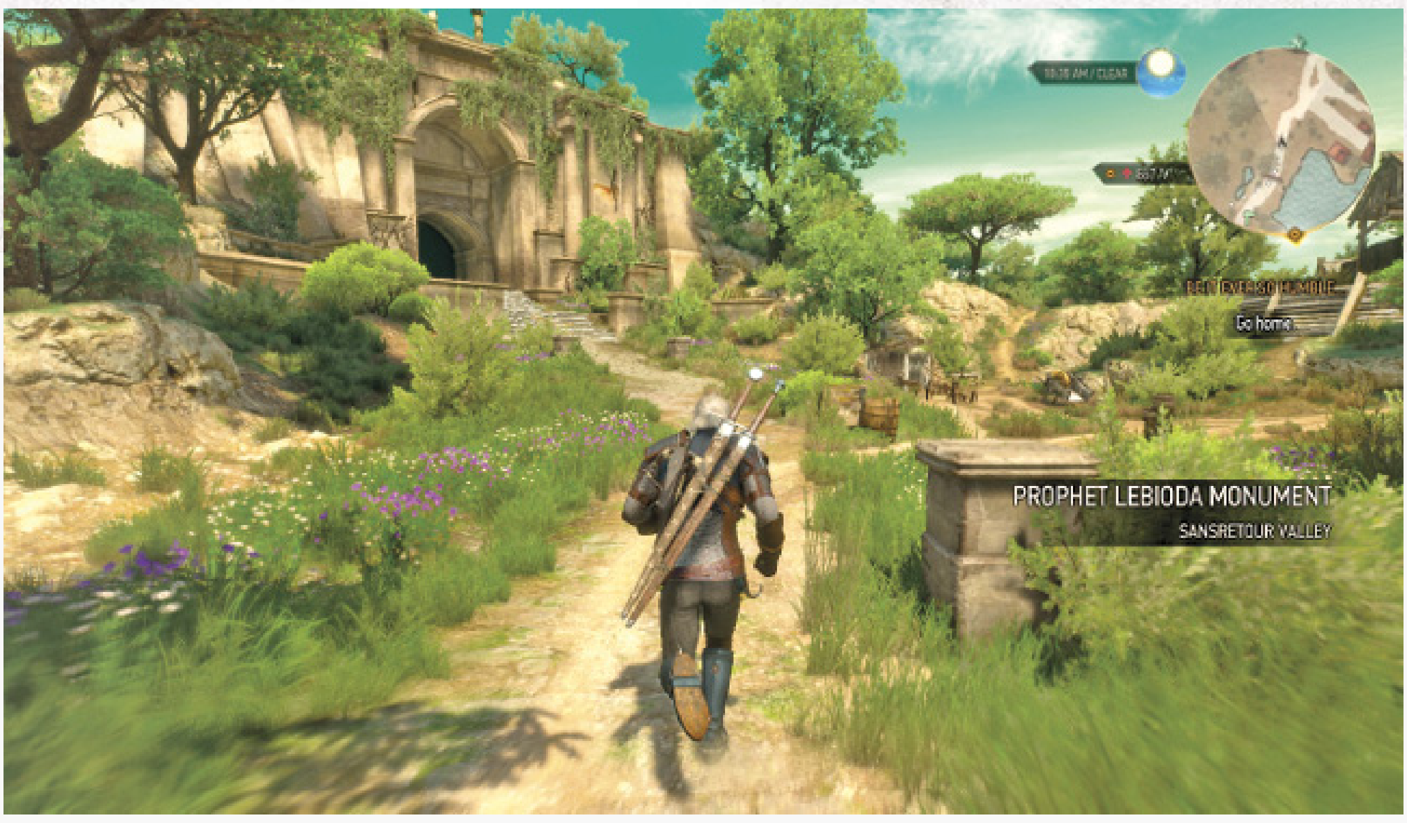
This Quest is accessible at any point during your adventuring across Toussaint. It is recommended you begin this quest during Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Manticore Gear.

While inspecting the monumental statue to the great prophet Lebioda in the Sansretour Valley (along the western shores of this river), head into the silent temple itself, just west of the statue. The place is seemingly empty, but a quick crack of the weakened (and sealed) archway wall allows passage into a hidden vestibule.

Here, you awaken a tormented spirit; a specter of the Great Beggar, who immediately attacks. Treat him as you would a specter (in terms of coating your blade in specter oil), but watch his staff attacks. Step back so you aren't staggered by his area-of-effect shockwave, and parry his staff strikes.

Using Quen to absorb these magical attacks, and following up with swordplay (or Aard), allows you to dismiss this strange specter.

Search the room. Aside from some Manticore Witcher gear on a small table in the raised area, there are also bones of the Great Beggar, and reading material in a nearby chest that revealed that this wandering hermit had foretold Lebioda's coming, until his fate was sealed. Literally.



Items: Bones of the Great Beggar

Gather the bones, and locate the empty sarcophagus to the side of the entrance chamber (the one with its lid slightly open), and inter the bones there, so the spirit of the great beggar may finally rest. The quest now concludes, but further revelations about the beggar can be found during the scavenger hunt.

RELATED QUESTS: Contract: Bovine Blues

LOCATIONS: Ardaiso Quarry, Lebioda's Footsteps (Five Locations), Prophet Lebioda Statue

CHARACTERS: Foreman Pafnuzio, Workers, Merchant, Architect

ENEMIES: Bandits, Wolves, Spriggan, Kikimores

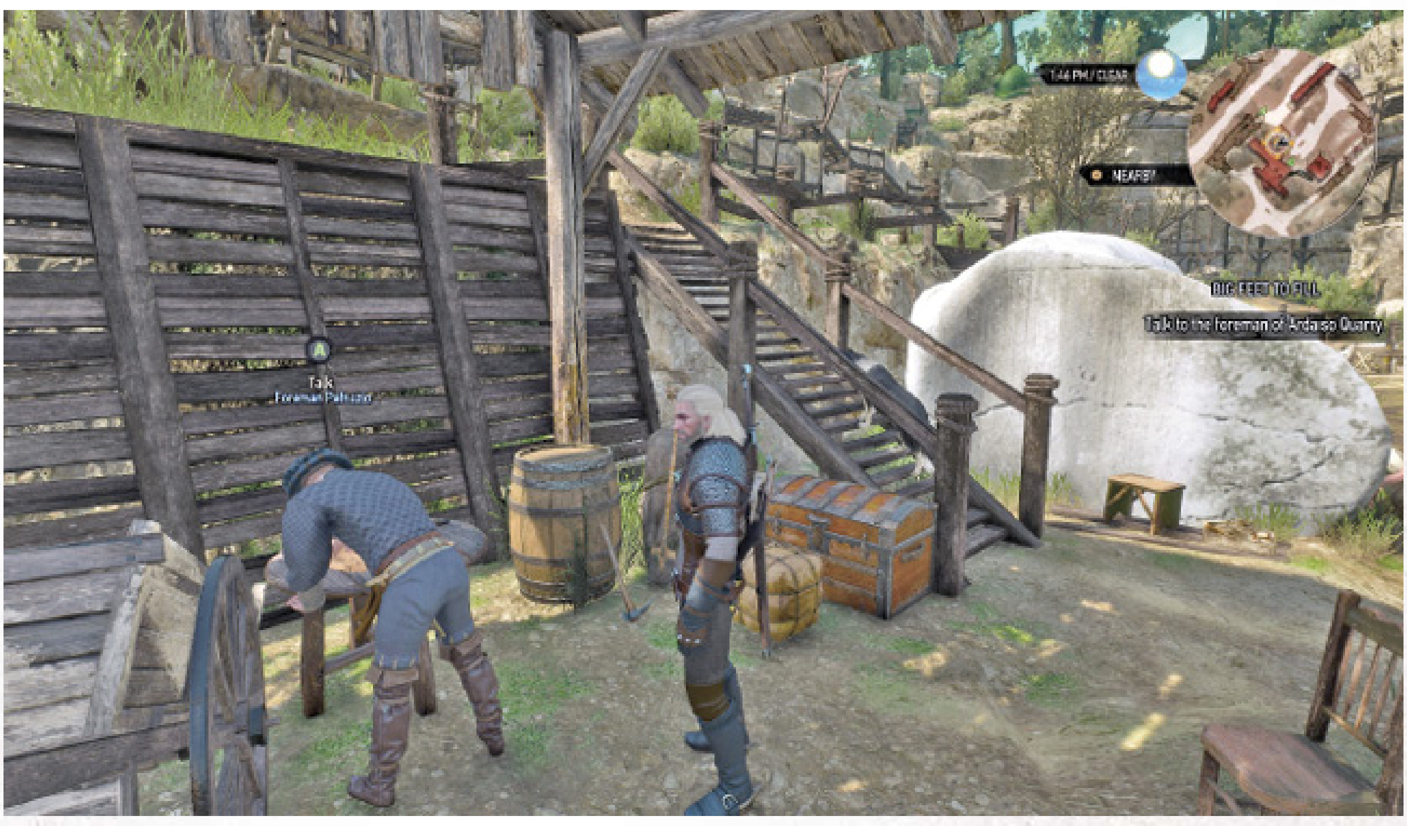
OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the foreman of Ardaiso Quarry.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible once Witcher Contract: Bovine Blues is completed. It automatically begins after the conclusion of that quest.

Now you've solved the mysterious flying cow of Ardaiso Quarry, you can return to speak with Foreman Pafnuzio at his lean-to hut on the lowest level of the sprawling Ardaiso Quarry. Dotted around this gigantic hole in the ground are supremely-carved sections of stone that appear to be part of a gargantuan monument. Previous chats with the Foreman have revealed worker caravans taking these sections to the build site have simply vanished: Ask Pafnuzio what that means, and he tells you more than a dozen wagons reached the building site, but five were lost along the way; including tools, food, building materials, and even the chief architect! Pafnuzio begs you to help quickly; he has some hard taskmasters financing the creation of this monument to Lebioda.



OBJECTIVES

- Help all the builders who are working on the monument (5).

SAINT LEBIODA'S FOOTSTEPS

New map locations marked with a statue of Lebioda appear on your World Map (and this guide's maps) to indicate places where transports carrying materials needed to finish Saint Lebioda's statue or engineers responsible for its construction have run into trouble. For each one you provide with aid, another section of the giant statue shall be erected, until finally a wonder of the world is unveiled!

Feel free to approach each of the five Lebioda map areas in any order you wish; the following lists each in a numbered path based on Secondary Quest naming, though you can investigate each of the five transports at any point during your adventures across the Vedette Valley into the Sansretour Valley. As soon as you reach each Caravan Transport group, a new Secondary Quest begins. These are detailed below.

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Visit the building site.

This optional objective enables you to locate the Prophet Lebioda Statue signpost, and inspect the massive monument to the deity currently under construction. It matters not when you visit this construction site (though before the last Transport Caravans is recommended, or this objective isn't available any more). If you've finished Bovine Blues and one of the Trasport Caravan quests, Foreman Pafnuzio is there, fretting about construction costs and deadlines to make. This gives you a chance to simply stare at the monumental statue, at any time during construction.

ENEMIES: Kikimore Workers, Kikimore Warrior, Hunters

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the men who gave you the contract.

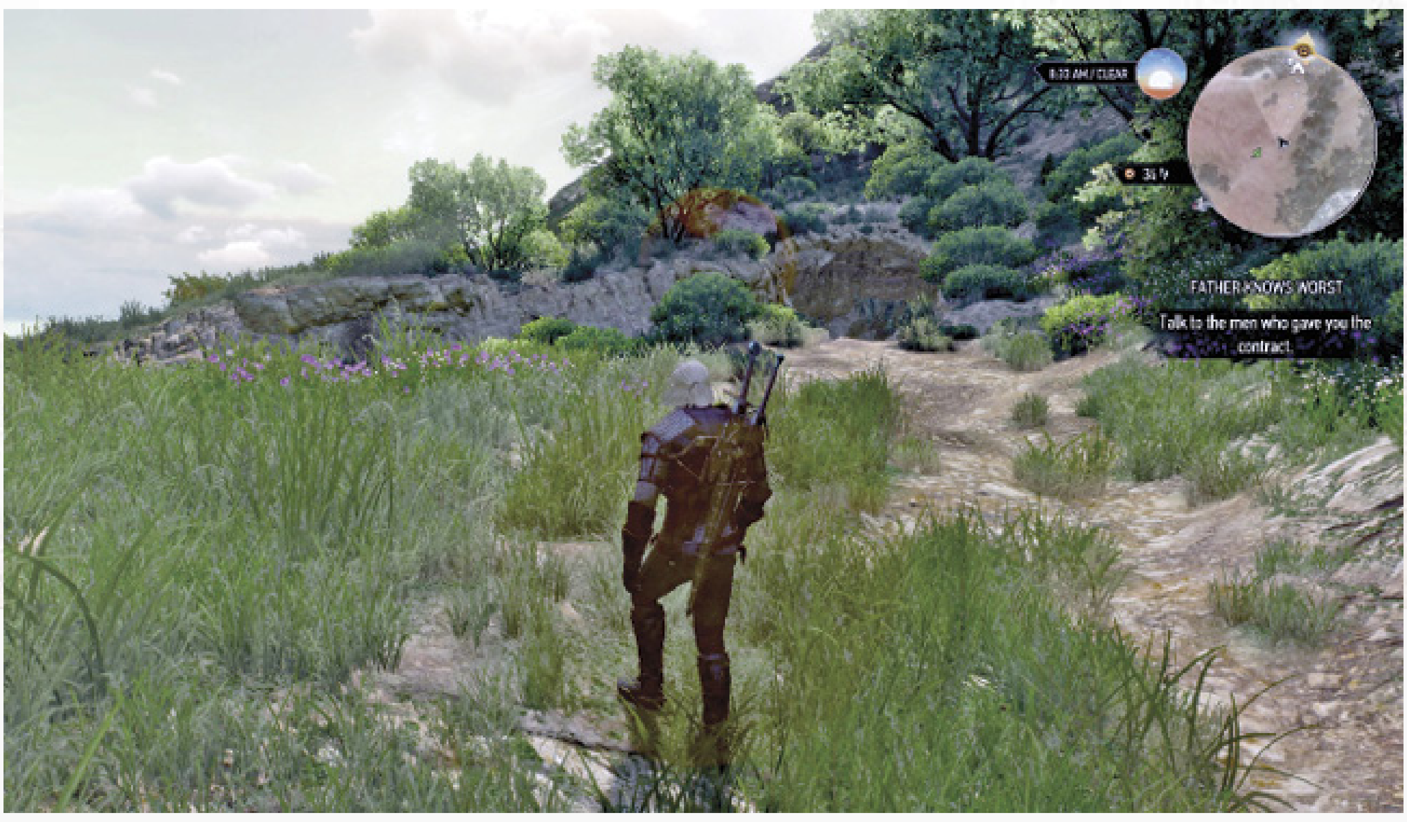
QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest can begin in one of two ways:

You can read the following missive pinned to a Notice Board, such as the one at The Gran'place (Beauclair), entitled "Armed Escort Wanted!" which requests a hired hand to protect an exploration into the Albertus Cavern.

You visit the Albertus Cavern itself, an unmarked cave complex, and meet two of the brothers Monnart at the entrance.

The three brothers Monnart are currently requesting help from a known Monster Den deep in the western Gorgon Foothills Territory, due north of the Rioux-Cannes Outpost, and reasonably easily accessible from the Beauclair Palace Signpost, and a romp northwest. Atop the hill the cavern is buried under, expect an encounter with a flock of Harpies. This is optional, and you can dash in from the opposite direction if you wish. Step into the hole in the ground known as Alberstus Grotto, where you hear two voices screaming for help.



Auguste and Lucien Monnart arrive panting from inside the cave, claiming their brother Hugo is still inside. You can optionally ask why they are here, what attacked them, if they're the ones that wrote the notice (if you you read it), and then agree to help (for an increased fee if you wish). Though their answers are vague (they don't know what attacked them, for example), you can't tell if they're being purposefully evasive, or are simply out of their depth. Enter the cave.

Auguste Monnart

Lucien Monnart

OBJECTIVES

- Find out what happened to the missing brother.
- Defeat the Kikimores.
- Using your Witcher Senses, look for signs of Hugo.

Though the Knights Errant deemed this area safe, they obviously missed the Kikimore nest you uncover as you progress into the large subterranean cavern. Expect around five Workers and a Warrior to contend with. Afterward, burn any egg clusters you see, use Aard to break through some rubble in the southeast wall if you wish, and conduct a thorough search of the immediate cavern area. There's a tunnel high above you at the end of the large initial cavern (to the southwest), but it's for exiting back here. Close to some eggs, at the southern end of the chamber, you can discover the following:

- A dropped sword with fresh blood on the blade. Was this Hugo's weapon?
- A trail of blood. It could be that Hugo is wounded.

Follow the trail of blood, climbing up a rocky ledge and look for a hand print that hasn't even dried. Follow the splatters of blood into a cavern with a natural hot spring. In fact, the water in this pool is so hot, it's likely to boil you alive without protection! Thouogh you could cast Quen and dive in, ignore the water for a moment, and work your way to the right (northwest), passing the stalagmites daubed in blood, to a secondary cavern where you spy a man slumped against the rock wall.

Father Knows Worst (Baw)

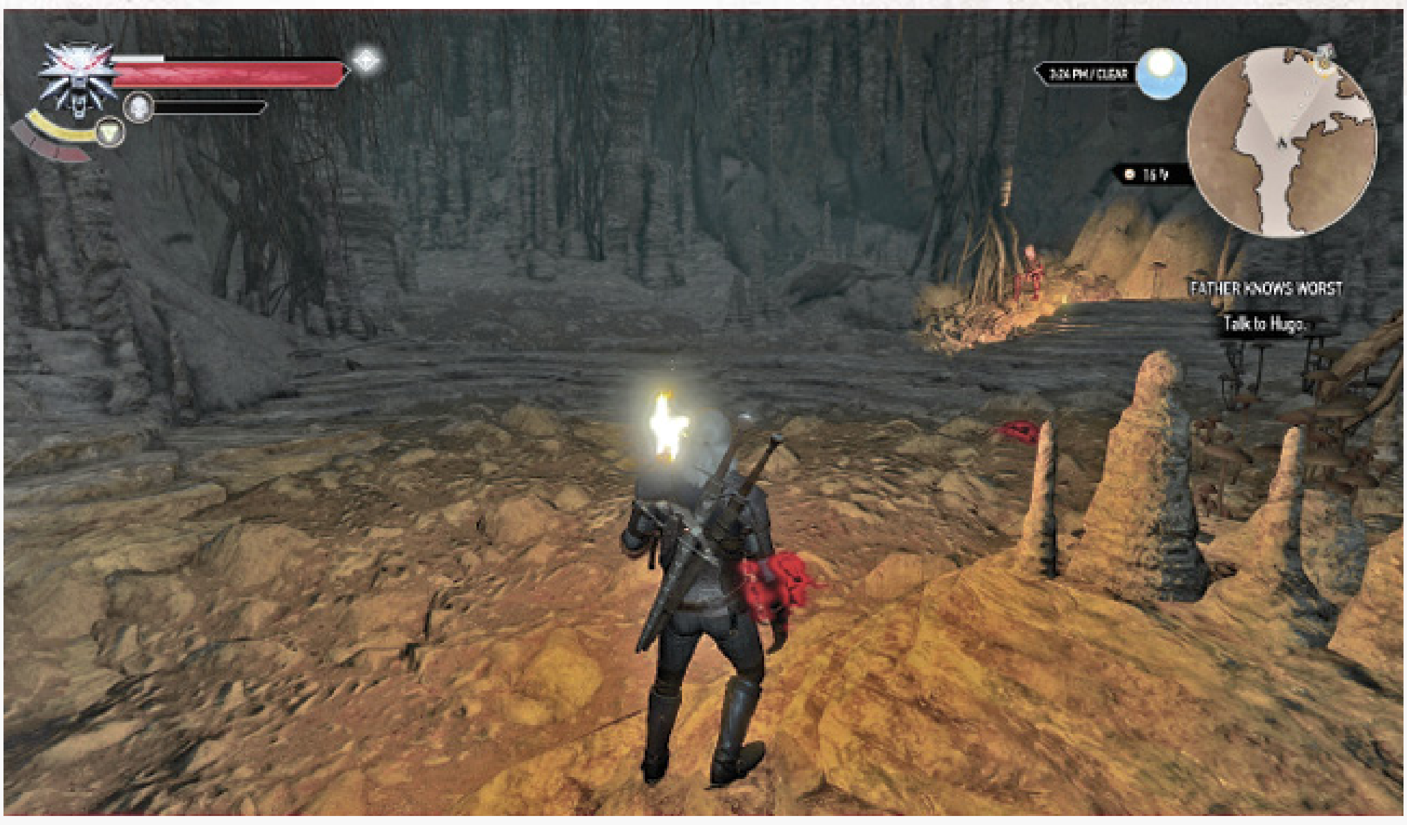
Parts Unknown

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to Hugo

Hugo Monnart

Hugo doesn't look happy, and he's even less thrilled when he sees you, thinking you're here to "finish him off" after his brothers attacked him. Answer as you wish, before Hugo explains his father, Victor Monnart (a famed cognac distiller), forced his three sons to work together before he passed.



To this end, he broke down his fabled still into three parts, hiding each one with a message to each son regarding a part's location. When Hugo's brothers learned the last part of the still was hidden here, he was "cut" out of the business.

An argument ensues, which woke the beasts, and the brothers fled for the surface, while Hugo hid here. You can ignore the story about the still, or ask more about it; choose the latter, and Hugo tells you the still is likely to be in this cavern; at the bottom of that hot pool. You can agree to help find the still part in return for a discount on his cognac.

- If you couldn't care less about the still, you simply skip the following objective, and escort Hugo out of the cavern.

- If you agree to find the still, the following objective becomes active:

OBJECTIVES

- Retrieve the missing part from the lake.
- Return the filter to Hugo.

Walk toward the edge of the boiling lake, and use your Witcher Senses from the dry land to peer into the depths until you spot the red glowing still filter. This way, you can minimize the swimming you need to do in this highly-damaging water. Now cast Quen, so you're not boiled alive. Dive into the lake, retrieve the still, and surface again quickly, before returning to Hugo. He promises a discount once the tavern gets up and running, and offers a small reward for your troubles.

Items: Still filter, Crowns (100)

Father Knows Worst (Baw)

End: Managing The Monnarts

You return to the surface, and spy Auguste and Lucien conversing with a group of meaty-looking gentlemen. Hugo is sure these are hired thugs sent to kill him. He asks if you wouldn't mind killing everyone, then (after you question him) asks you to spare his brothers. Answer with one of the following:

THE BROTHERS GRIM

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat your opponents.

- "Yeah, I'll make sure you're not hurt." You draw your weapon, and much to the confusion of the other two brothers, you teach everyone some decency; a fight is automatically assured. Although you may notice you're attacking a group of Huntsmen, and not bandits. Slice your way around six of them, including a couple of archers you may need to chase and slaughter.

Auguste and Lucien lie wounded (but not dead; you automatically made sure your incapacitating blows didn't kill them), and Hugo tells you the split between him and his brothers is now more of a fissure. This also occurs if you didn't fish out the still filter. He's off to hang a shingle in the market and sell wine. Or perhaps leave Toussaint altogether. Whatever the case, you part ways and the quest concludes.

Afterward you can find Hugo running a small stall in the Gran'place. He doesn't have much to offer but relates the aftereffects of the brothers' feud.

THE BROTHERS KIN

- "No one dies. Not today." With you by his side, Hugo and his two brothers bury the hatchet, figuratively for once, as their little altercation in the cavern has lead them to realize they must work together as Father wished it. You can ask about the "muscle" they brought with them; Auguste explains these fellows are some hunters they saw nearby, and who came to aid them. All that remains now is the payment for your services. The quest then concludes.

Items: Crowns (300)

Afterward, assuming you found the still filter, you can visit the three brothers Monnart over at the Clever Clogs Tavern in Beauclair (pictured), which now has three additional barkeeps; though speak to Hugo if you want to purchase some discounted cognac.

Investigate, and it appears a quintet of workers are sleeping off the mayhem of a previous night's drinking. Approach and talk to each of the workers and raise them from their slumber. The first three are easily spotted on the beach.

The architect is leaning on the second wagon, a little farther along the bank to the main river's edge. The last, more cunningly-hidden worker is behind a small thicket of bushes by the water, on the river's edge overlooking Plegmund's Bridge. If you can't find any of these workers, use your Witcher Senses to listen for pulses of sound from their snoring. The fourth transport caravan group seems rather off course; deep in the Vedette Valley on a road equidistant between The Silver Salamander Inn (to the west) and Trading Post (to the southeast). As you approach, the camp shows signs of attack. Conduct a brief examination using your Witcher Senses:

- Near a burned tent are blood marks; lots of blood.
- On the road are Kikimore tracks.

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the Kikimore tracks.
- Search the Kikimore nest.

Pass the dead horse, following the tracks in a roughly north to northeast direction, to the edge of a swamp. Look north to see the continuation of the tracks across the water, leading to a Kikimore nest. Dash in with Igni blazing, and reduce the two Kikimore Workers, and single Warrior to burning piles of goo. Then incinerate the revolting egg sacs they've laid. When combat is over, conduct a final search; a worker's corpse sits on the nest, near piles of bones. This is what became of the missing workers here. QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest is completely unmarked, and it is recommended you visit Lac Celavy as soon as possible, so you are more fully aware of your objectives as early as you can. There are three ways to begin this quest:

Visit the Tourney Grounds, and overhear two knights talking about adventures, and a strange hermit on a lake in the Gorgon Foothills. This automatically starts this quest.

Or visit the unmarked Lac Celavy due west of Corvo Bianco Winery, and just south of Chuchote Cave, and stumble upon the hermit yourself.

Or visit Beauclair's notice board for a note summoning all brave knights to an isle on Lac Celavy.

RELATED QUESTS: See below

LOCATIONS: Lake Celavy (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: Percival, Bors, Hermit of Lac Celavy, Lady of the Lake

OBJECTIVES

- Investigate the isle on Lac Celavy.

When you first arrive at the Tourney Grounds, usually when you're trying to find Palmerin to take you to the Duchess after fighting the Bruxa at Corvo Bianco during Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, you may spot two knights having a conversation under a tree. Percival (who stands under a tree) and Bors (on horseback) chat about the latter's journeys, and Bors mentions an isle floating on Lac Celavy, where destiny calls. He gallops off. You can't talk to either fellow, but this starts the quest.

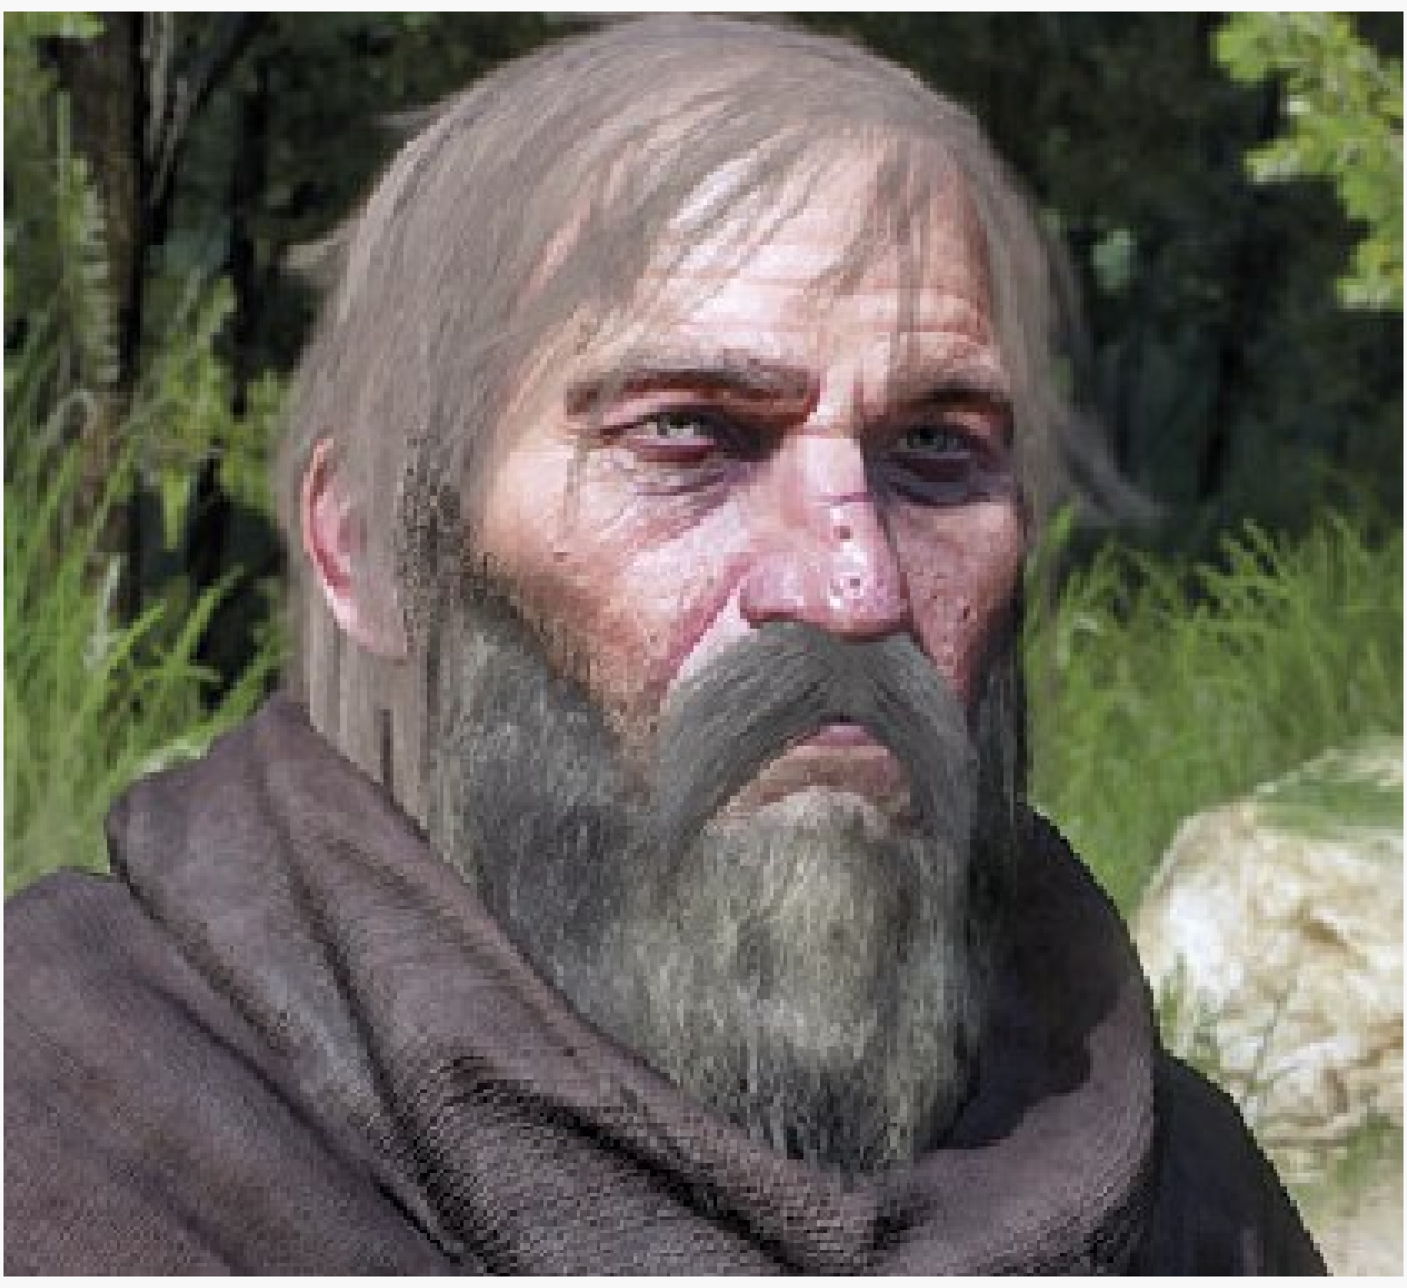
THE BEAST FANTASTIC AND WHERE TO FIND IT
Find Palmerin and ask him to take you to the duchess.

Within the Gorgon Foothills in west Toussaint, south of Chuchote Cave, is a lake of azure blue water. When you find Lac Celavy, be sure to take in the view of Beauclair to the south, and an odd, wooded island to explore on the lake itself. Swim across, and look for a smaller pond of vivid blue water within the island itself.

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Read the inscriptions on the stones.
- Wait for a chance to prove your valor.
- Wait for a chance to prove you are a man of honor.
- Wait for a chance to prove your wisdom.
- Wait for a chance to prove your sympathy.
- Wait for a chance to prove your generosity.



Hermit of Lac Celavy

This pond has a few surprises, not least the fact you aren't getting your feet wet! Sitting on the pond on an even smaller island is a ragged-clothed hermit. The hermit seems strangely powerful but benevolent. In fact, he has been here since time immemorial, and can testify to the extraordinary nature of the lake. He watches over a "sword most wondrous;" a blade only grasped by one who possesses the five chivalric virtues. The hermit then deems whether you have proved yourself worthy.

QUESTING DECISIONS: NO GOOD DEED GOES PUNISHED

At this point, the hermit lists the times during your adventuring in Toussaint where you displayed elements of each of the five virtues in your decision-making, or proved lacking. For those virtues you have not yet proven one way or another, a rather nebulous objective is given; you must wait for a chance to prove yourself chivalrous in each virtue.

When the conversation with the Hermit concludes, earn some experience points by reading each of the five carved stones, and learn about each chivalric virtue. Then this open-ended quest continues: Within many the other Toussaint-related quests you undertake (or have already undertaken), your decisions reflect whether you prove yourself worthy of the sword or not. The following table shows which quests have an effect on this:

There Can Be Only One (Blood and Wine)

Chivalric Choices: A Table

This table shows a number of occasions where you can prove your chivalric virtues. You only need to complete one choice for each virtue (not all of them), for a total of five choices from this list. Note that if you decide not to complete every single available choice to prove a particular virtue, this quest fails.

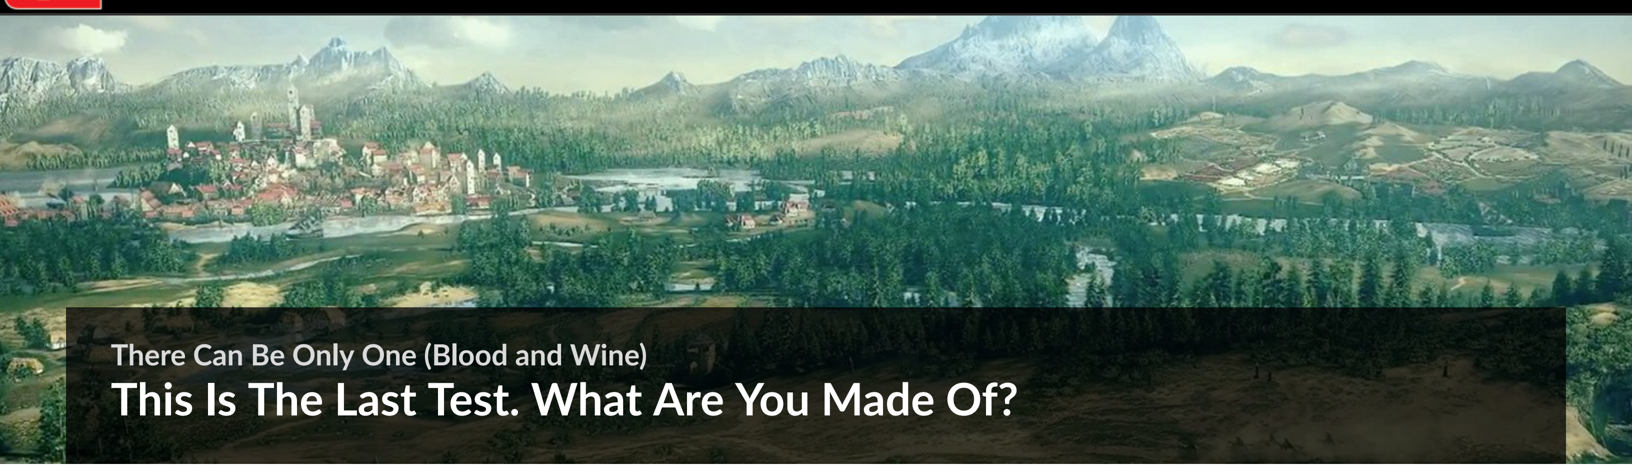
Now return to the hermit on the lake, who deems the five virtues dwell in your heart. However, the sword deserves the hand of a master; now you must prove your combat skills. When you agree, the hermit stands, creates an impenetrable wall of water around you both, and stands to face you in combat!



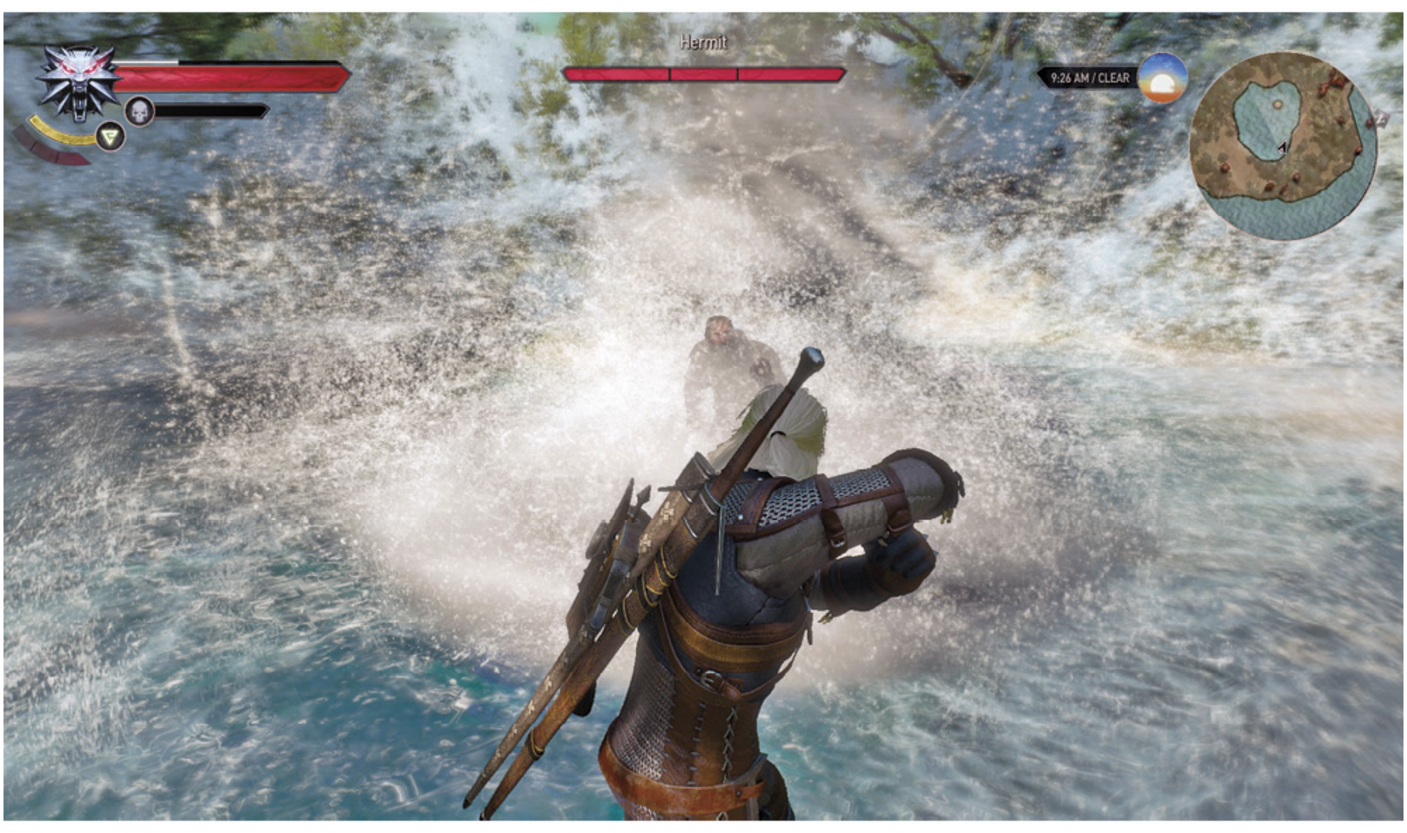
There Can Be Only One (Blood and Wine)

This Is The Last Test. What Are You Made Of?

OBJECTIVES

- Fight the hermit.

With no way out (walls of water prevent you from leaving), your final test is against the Hermit. Win, and the sword he guards is yours. Lose, and you cannot claim this weapon and must try again.



DEFEATING THE HERMIT OF LAC CELAVY: THE HERMIT'S ATTACKS

Blue Staff Attack: At close combat range, the hermit employs his wooden staff with glowing blue gem as a physical weapon. He employs quick single strikes to the left and right, single heavy overhead strikes, as well as multiple rapid strikes. Simply parry and counter or dodge these close range attempts to hit you, as you would a normal opponent's strikes.

Vanish in the Mist (Defensive): He may avoid combat, or move to another part of the lake by simply vanishing in a column of water, only to appear a few moments later; usually to begin conjuring a water tornado. Simply scan the area until you see him again, rolling or dodging away if you're in the path of a large-scale attack.

Vanish in the Mist (Offensive): Sometimes, after vanishing the hermit appears extremely close to you, conjures a water spout or uses his staff, and can stagger you, so be prepared for this.

Invisibility: Occasionally, (and usually if you've struck him a few times), the Hermit simply blinks out of existence, with only his blue glowing staff orb showing. Simply look for that, and launch a ranged attack to coax him back to show himself.

Water Bolt: With his left hand outstretched, he pushes a bolt of water forward to strike you almost instantly, like a snowball. This projectile doesn't deal heavy damage, but it is fast. It can be parried or dodged. After the bolt, he sometimes summons one or two ground waves that splash in a circular target; dodge both of them.

Water Vortex (Horizontal): A more pronounced version of the bolt, the Hermit launches a twisting column of water directly out from his staff, in a long cylindrical attack that can knock you back or stagger you. Dodge left or right of it. If cast at close range, this pushes you back and staggers you.

Tornado Storm: The Hermit's most impressive attack is when he whips up the water surrounding him into a maelstrom of vapor and slowly walks toward you inside this raging storm. There's little to do except get out of the way here (dodging is better than running as the storm sucks you in and heavily damages you), and follow up with a ranged attack (or Igni) after the storm dissipates, and the Hermit is recovering.

Hermit Vulnerabilities

Hanged Man's Venom

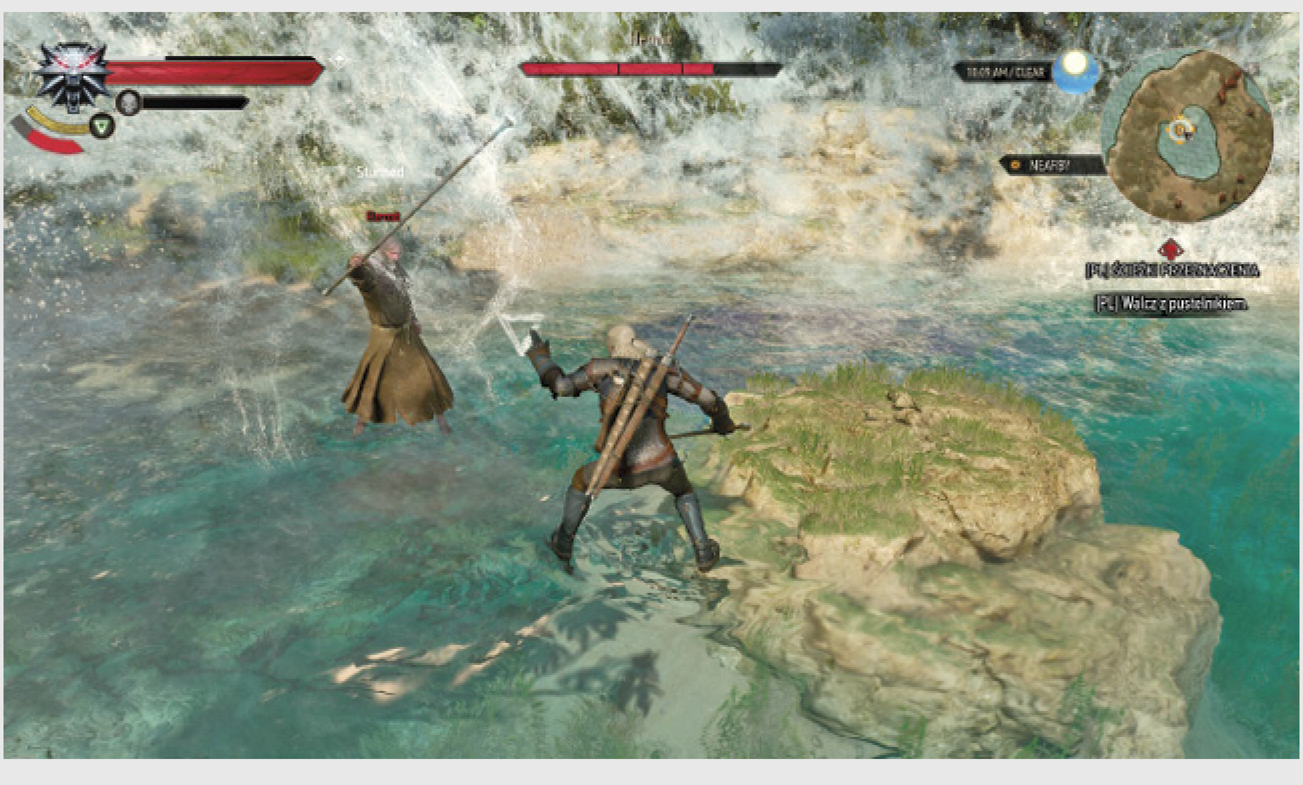
Axii

Aard

DEFEATING THE HERMIT OF LAC CELAVY: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

This fellow, much like the Ofieri Mage you may have encountered during Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Evil's First Soft Touches is an extremely dangerous and competent foe, and becomes more potent at longer distances. Close the distance between you both, so fewer large-scale attacks can be launched by him.

When you can easily leap in with a sword strike, employ Aard or Axii to temporarily stagger and incapacitate him, and immediately strike with two or three fast attacks, or a single, nasty strong attack (like Rend). Then retreat (roll or dodge) before you're caught by him reacting.



Axii and Aard are also excellent for interrupting the Hermit at range, before he launches one of his spectacularly-brutal water conjuring attacks. Axii is better, as it flummoxes the Hermit no matter what the range.

You can repeat this technique for as long as you can cast Aard or Axii (before needing to rest your Signs), and catch him in a continual "stagger loop" where you cast Aard or Axii, leap in and strike with your sword, then cast again. Igni also works to a lesser extent. Continue with this "attrition" plan, and don't get too greedy with the sword strikes!

Once the Hermit succumbs to your superior sword and Sign play, the walls of water surrounding you vanish, and the Hermit slowly descends into the lake. A soothing woman's voice speaks to you, holding the Aerondight sword aloft above the water. 'Tis the Lady of the Lake, whom you met long ago. Perhaps you'll keep her sword safe this time?

The silver sword is left floating above the water for you to take. After gathering this fabled relic, you fall into the lake, but the dip is worth it; this weapon charges up for each successful hit you inflict, until it becomes fully loaded, and always deals critical hit damage. This quest now concludes.

STARTING THIS SECONDARY QUEST

Occasionally, when you've adventured through Toussaint and completed a particularly heroic deed, you receive a message entitled either "Reward from the Ducal Camerlengo" or "Knight for Hire". The following information details exactly what deeds you can undertake, and what rewards to expect. You can also start this quest by visiting the Ducal Camerlengo himself, in the Knights Dormant Square (Beauclair).

OBJECTIVES

- Complete the contracts you took on from the Camerlengo (15).
- (Optional): Go see the Ducal Camerlengo to collect your pay.

The Ducal Camerlengo, who monitors bandit activity and pays Knights Errant for protecting the Duchy of Toussaint, has his offices on Knights Dormant Square in Beauclair. Look for the building with the sign bearing the same name, in the square close to The Gran'place, across the palace bridge (eastern side). Step into the Ducal's office and speak with him. The Ducal sells rare books, is proficient at gwent (beat him to claim the King Bram card), and can give you additional information on the coin he pays the knights. Visit him whenever you like. Request coin from him once you've performed any of the 15 heroic deeds (which each net you 100 Crowns). In addition, other bandit-heavy locations are totaled, though those don't net you profit from the Ducal. The following table details the locations to find:

Knight For Hire (Blood and Wine)

Heroic Deed #1: Person In Distress (2)

Just like Velen, Toussaint is having trouble with bandits kidnapping victims to hold for ransom or for other nefarious purposes. Consult the previous chart and this guide's Atlas to find the two locations where a Person in Distress is being held. As the bandits there (which number up to eight) don't attack the victim, employ your usual bandit-slaying techniques. After freeing and speaking to the victim, claim your reward. Note there are two other Persons in Distress in Toussaint, but these aren't part of this quest.

Items: Crowns (100 per Person in Distress)

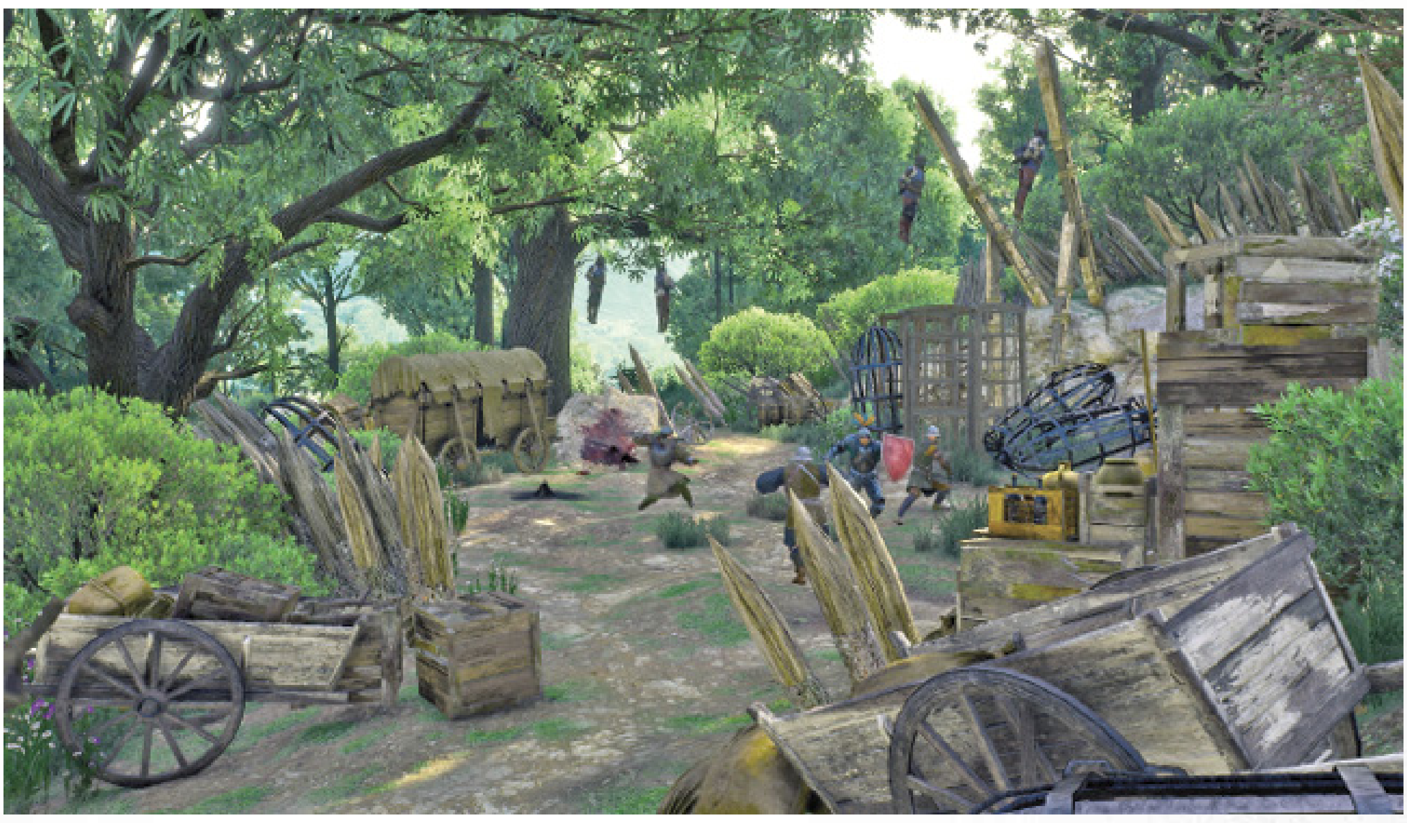
Knight For Hire (Blood and Wine)

Heroic Deed #2: Knight Errant In Distress (3)

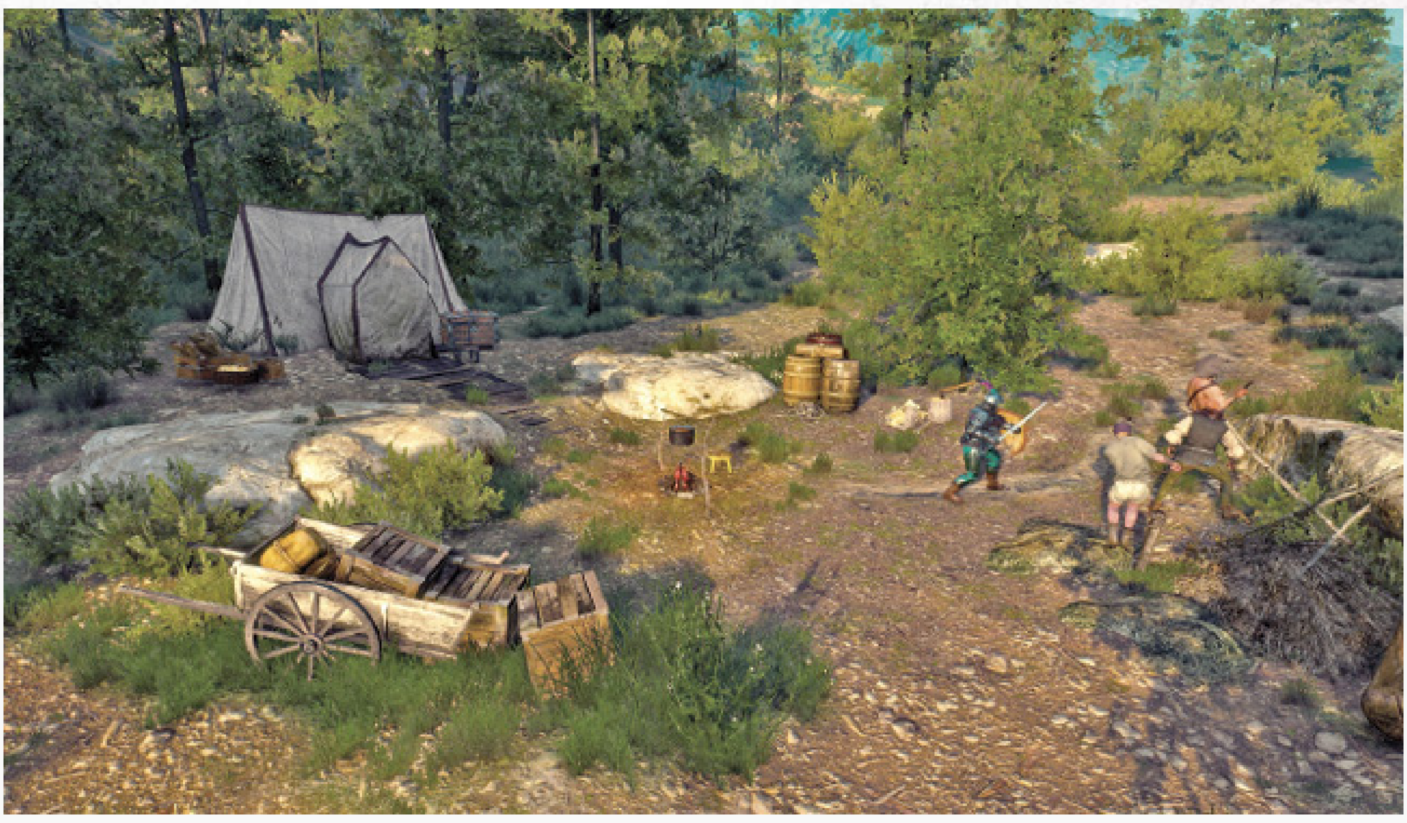
Throughout Toussaint, there are three Bandit Camps with an additional area of concern: a valiant but overwhelmed Knight Errant that must be rescued. The three camps are pinpointed in the Atlas, and are located in the following areas:

Location 1: A forward fortification west and a little south of Mont Crane Castle in The Champs-Désolés Territory. The thick ruined walls can prevent complete accessibility, but the area is relatively open and the Knight Errant easy to reach.

Location 2: North of Fox Hollow, in the gently sloping woods east and a little north of the Tulasens Caves Hanse. The area is surrounded by defensive stakes, and there are only two entrances, so check the area first so you can reach the Knight Errant in time.



Location 3: South of Seidhe Llygad Amphitheater, in the far southern reaches of the Gorgon Foothills, southwest of the Seidhe Llygad lake area. The camp is close to the lake shore, and is reasonably easy to infiltrate.



In each location, expect three bandits. Your job is to stop the bandits from killing the Knight Errant (which they can easily do after about four attacks). Shrug off attacks yourself and reach the Knight Errant as quickly as possible, or the victim is likely to die. You can progress even if he dies, but you would then need to kill all of the bandits and loot the container.

KNIGHT ERRANT: NO ERRORS

Try some or all of the following to ensure each Knight Errant is saved:

Reach the Knight Errant and interrupt the enemies specifically attacking him, so they focus on you.

One enemy fighting the Knight Errant usually buys you some time, but your friend cannot cope with two or more enemies.

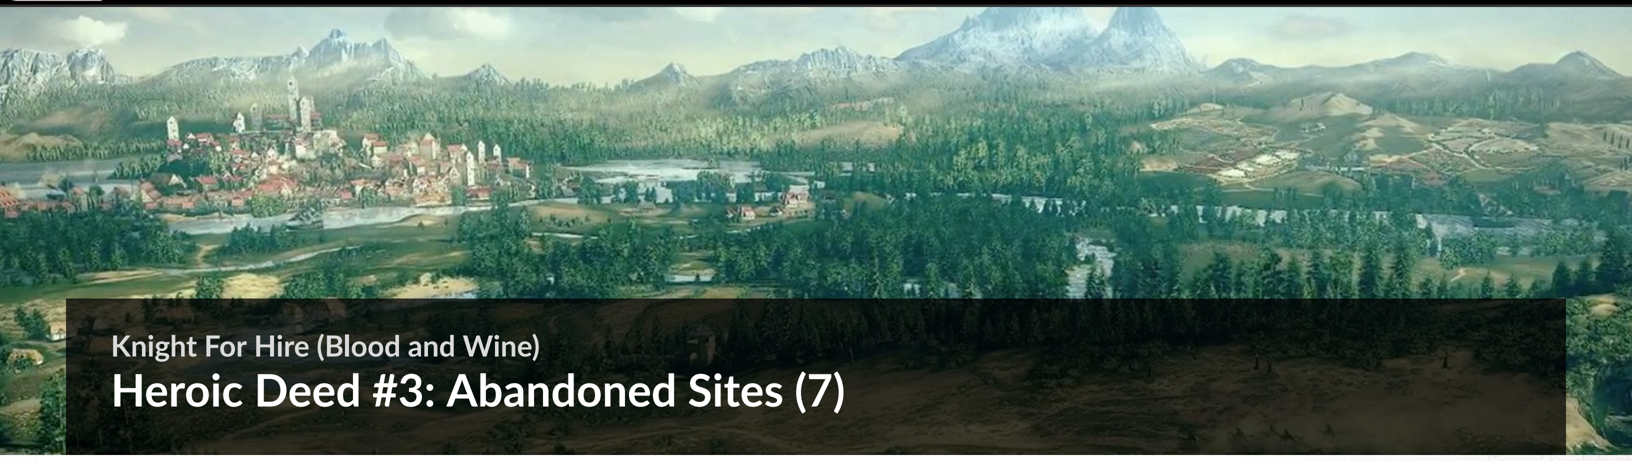
Your Signs become extremely important here; incapacitate your foes with Aard and Igni (stagger multiple targets). Use Axii to a lesser extent (as it only affects a single foe until bolstered with Abilities).

Other plans are to use bombs that stagger or stop foes from moving, such as Northern Wind. Your Knight Errant friend is unaffected by these.

Normal bandit camps, with no Knight (or other victim) to save, are not rewarded if cleared.

After the battle, assuming the Knight Errant lives, you are thanked, and can visit the Ducal Camerlengo for your pay

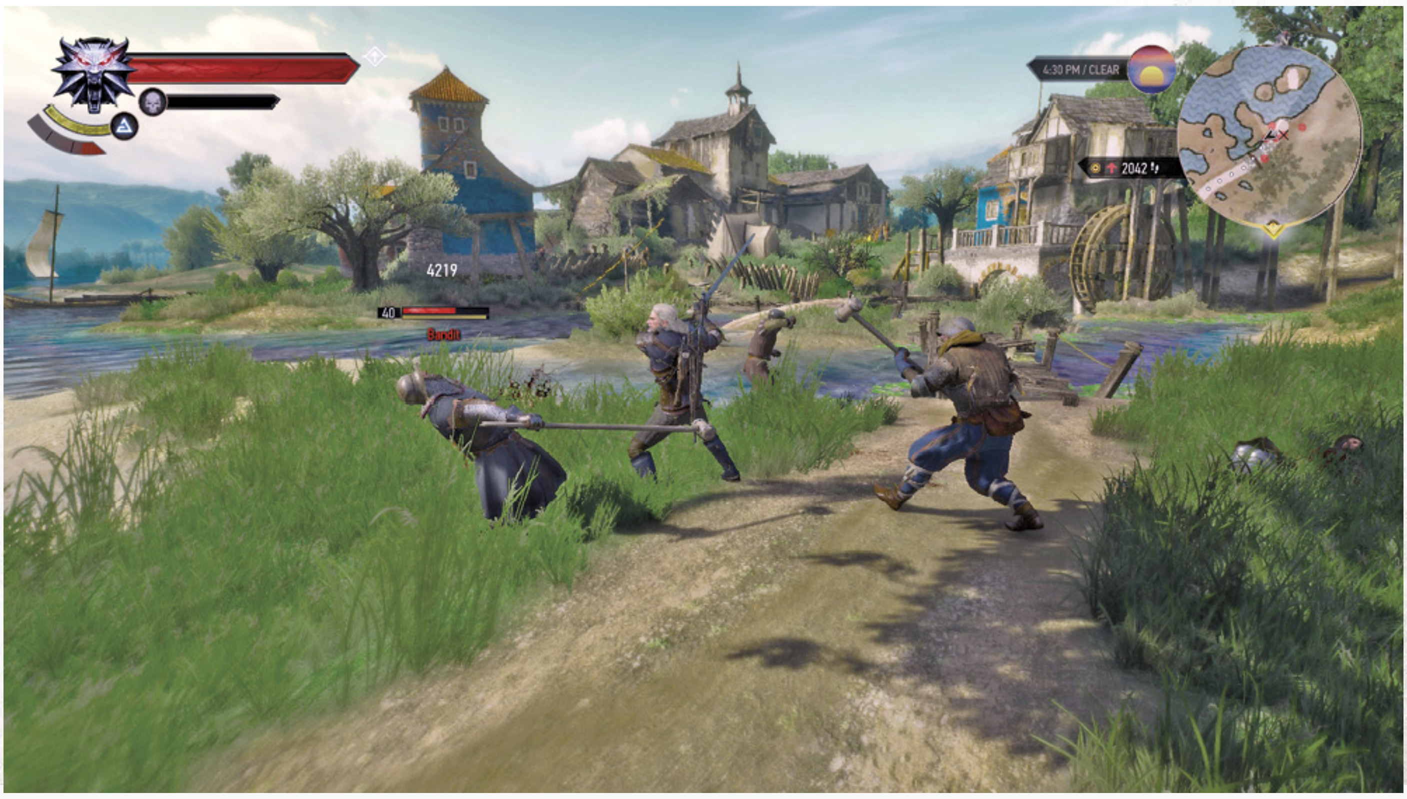
Items: Crowns (100 per Knight Errant in Distress)



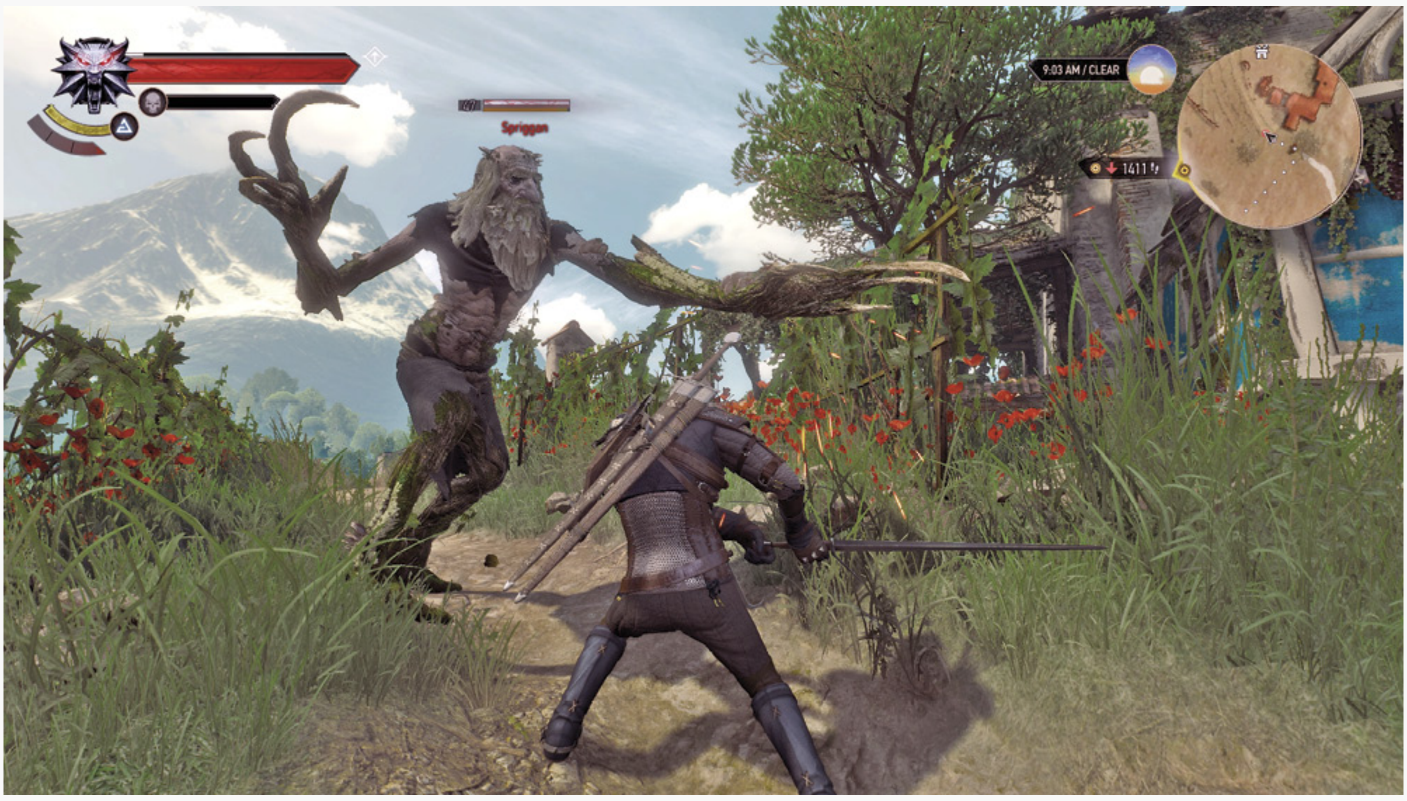
Knight For Hire (Blood and Wine)

Heroic Deed #3: Abandoned Sites (7)

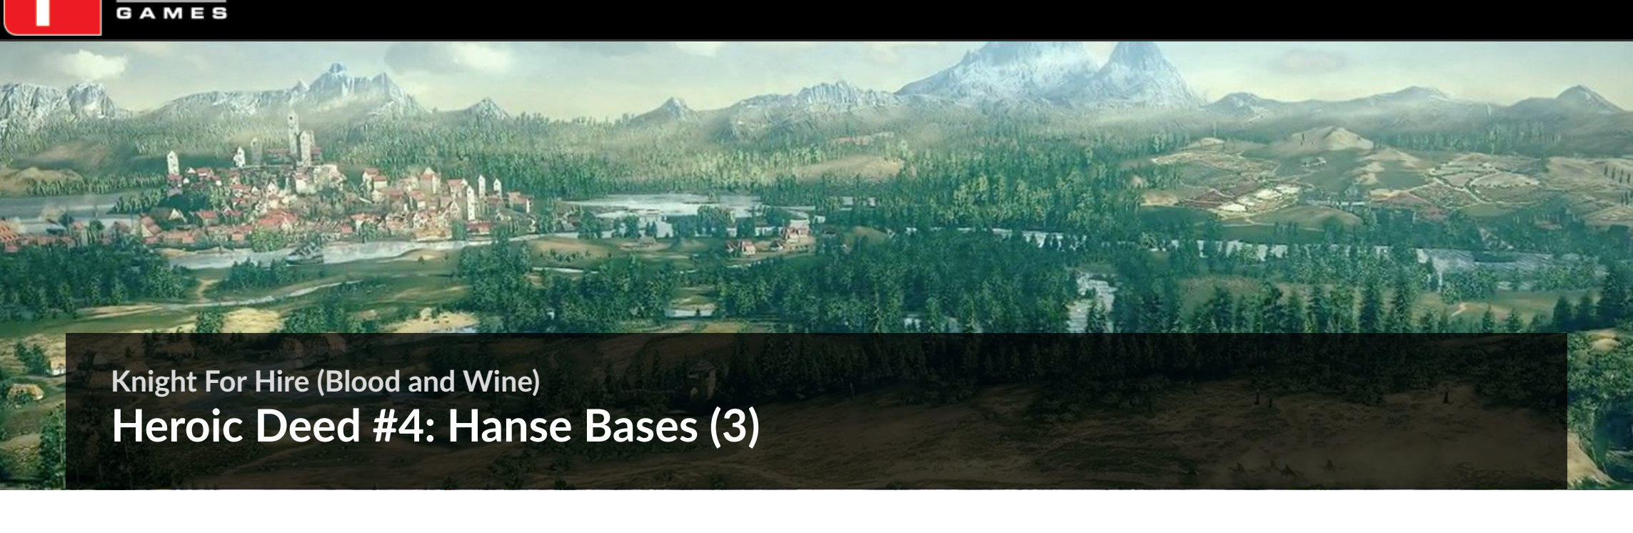
Throughout Toussaint, there are 11 places (usually villages, wineries, or taverns) that have been overrun by monsters or bandits, and clearing seven of these forms part of this quest. Just like the Abandoned Sites you encountered in the Northern Realms, entering such a location and slaying all the adversaries allows the peasantry to return, sometimes with an added merchant. Fortunately, some (but not all) Abandoned Sites also allow you to collect payment from the Ducal, as well as the coin you receive from the grateful villagers. In the example shown above, Geralt is seen removing over a dozen bandits to The Silver Salamander Inn (Vedette Valley Territory) can reopen for business.



Some abandoned sites, such as Dantan Glade in the Gorgon Footfills which is being plagued by Archespores, does not offer a Ducal reward if cleared. However, other locations (even those not populated by bandits) do offer the Ducal reward, such as Cutterin Manor (west of Chuchote Cave) which is being terrorized by a fearsome Spriggan (pictured).



Items: Crowns (100 per Abandoned Site)



Knight For Hire (Blood and Wine)

Heroic Deed #4: Hanse Bases (3)

The toughest job, if you're helping the Knight Errants, is the clearing of three huge bandit bases. These take considerable time, preparation, and skill to emerge victorious from, and the odds are the most overwhelming you've ever faced!

Each of the three Hanses is a base of operations for an infamous outlaw gang commanded by a particularly unhinged leader. These bandits are well-organized and when attacked, they call for help from neighboring camps. To prevent this, kill bandits running with torches (that show up on your mini-map) toward signal fires (also on your mini-map). Your goal is to kill the hanse's leader. Once this occurs, the Knights Errant take over this location, and you can claim a reward.

Items: Crowns (100 per Hanse)

In each location, you should expect upward of 20 bandits, and around 10 Hanse Dogs to face. Some bandits have long swinging hammers, while others carry shields. Tucked away in a separate area of the camp is the Hanse leader himself; a particularly hardy specimen. Your job is to remove all enemies from the Hanse.

HANDLING A HANSE BASE: GENERAL TACTICS

Each Hanse base has some particularly troubling topography to navigate, and specific advice is given below. However, there are some general pieces of pertinent advice to follow before every Hanse massacre:

Only Witchers of Level 48 and over are recommended to try these Hanse assaults.

Look at the guide's Atlas maps for the general area surrounding the Hanse, and methodically remove any bandit camps that are nearby. If you need to retreat, you don't want to run into further trouble. Ensure the Hanse is the only bandit-related area left in the vicinity.

Consult the Atlas for each Hanse to pinpoint the exact location of the Hanse's signal fire; keeping your foes to a minimum is the recommended strategy here.

When launching a raid into a Hanse, your overwhelmingly important plan is to stop the torch-carrier before he reaches the signal fire. It's even worth shrugging off some damage while pushing through to reach the bandit with the torch.

Study the layout of the Hanse and read up on the exact route the torch-carrier takes, so you can stop him before he lights the signal fire, and 20 or so more foes come to slice you into morsels for their hounds.

Bombs that freeze foes are particularly useful (like Northern Wind), and can help you reach a fleeing torch-carrier (by incapacitating those between you and the target).

Deal with the torch-bearer himself by casting Axii, confusing him so he stops in a daze, and then cut him down; this is the easiest way to deal with the torch-carrier by far!

Other methods of stopping the torch bearers include using explosive-tipped crossbow bolts, northern wind followed up by crossbow shots, or other ranged attacks. Sprinting up behind and slashing with your sword works, but is far less effective as you need to be very close to the torch-carrier, and he usually has a head-start on you.

There is only one torch-carrier and one signal fire. Once you nullify the carrier, the only way reinforcements arrive is if you "accidentally" set fire to the signal fire with Igni. Some Witchers prefer a challenge, and leave the torch-carrier or light the fire themselves!

Once the torch-carrier is slain, take your time and slay foes without becoming surrounded, stopping to check your mini-map for stragglers before progressing further into a Hanse.

After dealing with the torch-carrier, gradually retreat. It's worth fighting in surroundings you're familiar with than dashing further into these strongholds and alarming yet more foes! Find areas such as stairs or courtyards, or corridors where a minimal number of foes can be faced at once.

Remember you cannot jump high or climb ladders during combat, so don't rush into dead-end areas with no way out of them except through an overwhelming bandit force.

As you haven't seen as many foes attack at one time before, area-of-effect attacks (such as your Witcher Mutations, and improved Aard, Axii, Igni, and Yrden), as well as bombs, are all excellent choices to soften up multiple foes at once. The carnage can be immense!

After all of the footsoldiers are culled, the Hanse isn't cleared until the leader is faced. Expect a tougher bandit, but one that succumbs to your usual combat tactics. If you're having trouble, just use Axii and cut him down.

Check the Hanse afterward; there are always high-value diagrams, armor, and other trinkets that make this prolonged bloodshed worthwhile!

HANSE BASE #1: ARTHACH PALACE RUINS

Located at the very northern part of the Vedette Valley Territory, this old elven ruin slowly sinking into the marsh features a central island, shallow waters you can fight in, and a few scattered bandit camps.

HANDLING A HANSE BASE: ARTHACH PALACE RUINS

This base can be struck from all sides, which is helpful and allows much more flexibility to your ranged attacks. If you're overwhelmed, you can retreat out of the mayhem to rest before returning.

The signal fire here is on the north side of the base, on an open but raised ruined bridge walkway. The torch-carrier starts outside the central structure, before running into the west arch, and north across to light the fire.

Attacking from the west allows you to easily intercept the torch-carrier, daze him with Axii, and cut him down.

Defending the bridge walkway with the signal fire at the end of it (where the chest with the Witcher diagrams is) can be dangerous if you're swarmed with foes, as you can't leap off with your sword drawn, though you have opportunities to cause mass casualties as the foes cluster on the bridge.

Darting in and out of the center of the arched ruins is a good way to quickly reach foes (rather than navigating around the swamp exterior), and the arches make good cover from archers.

The swamp (particularly the large trees) can also help you thin out groups of bandits to tackle at once. The biggest help (a wide open space) can also be a hindrance as it's easy to get swarmed.

Try leading groups of foes to the raised walkway bridge to the south; it has no low walls to get stuck near, and the bridge can easily be fallen from. This allows you to use the low stone walls to protect you from archers, and cluster foes so you can use area-of-effect projectiles or signs.

Antoine "Starling" Straggen is the leader of this Hanse. When combat is abated, climb the ladder on the south stone walkway, move along the rickety wood balcony, and face him on the upper central area of the ruins. He uses a heavy two-handed hammer. But if you use Axii, he's less of a threat. Check his area for some notes of his machinations

Once the Hanse is cleared, Knight Errant forces appear to take over this position. Expect a deep discount from a Journeyman Blacksmith that is now at this location.

HANSE BASE #2: MONT CRANE CASTLE

Resilient against the winds of Mont Crane is the sprawling castle atop this mountain, in the northeastern part of The Champs-Désolés. Expect the majority of combat to occur within the crumbling walls of this fortification.

HANDLING A HANSE BASE: MONT CRANE CASTLE

The two roads to the west and south of the castle are each patrolled by bandits on horseback; tackle these enemies (one pair, one group of three) before assaulting the castle itself.

Charge into the lower courtyard, and a torch-bearer tries to flee up the steps. Concentrate on him first if you aren't wanting to face reinforcements. Expect around six foes in this lower area.

You can use the gap in the exterior battlements left of the main gate, below the ballista, and with some careful jumping you can leap up, past the ballista, and more easily catch the torch-carrier.

Try to keep the torch-carrier in the lower courtyard (by blowing him up, using ranged weapons, or sprinting and hacking at him).

If you ignore the torch-bearer, the fire is usually lit when you reach the upper bailey and fight for a minute or so; a large walled area of grass with tents at the top of some long stone steps. Around 12 reinforcement foes charge in up the steps behind you, and may overwhelm you.

Charging the signal fire isn't feasible, as it's too far away and high up to reach before the fire is lit, so cut down the foe running as early as possible.

You may wish to actively encourage more foes to arrive, to gain additional experience and enjoy much more carnage! If you do, retreat to the northwest ruined castle chambers, where you have cover and foes (plus their hounds) can only approach one at a time.

Stealthy Witchers may wish to enter the lower courtyard, turn right, and climb up through a ruined tower to reach an upper covered deck where you have more cover, and access to the top of the main open stairs to the upper bailey, though this isn't the best way to catch the torch-bearer.

Well-timed bombs thrown at the reinforcements streaming up the steps can cause mass casualties, especially if you quickly switch from a Northern Wind bomb to an explosive or Igni blast. Drop area-of-effect magic or bombs at the top of the steps, when the foes show up en masse.

Fighting in the open usually makes you susceptible to archers, though by now your activity point allocation should make ranged attacks moot. If you need to hide from the archers on the upper bailey, dip below the wall on the stone stairs at the upper bailey entrance, while coaxing foes into an easily-dispatched group.

Fighting on the signal tower spiral steps is unwise, especially at the top, as you can easily fall after being struck by a foe. Incapacitate enemies with Northern Wind, Signs, or crossbow bolts to lessen the chances of losing your footing.

Need to flee? Leap from the upper bailey, down to the lower courtyard, and back up to the stream, using the high castle walls as cover.

Remain in the northwest castle ramparts after the main fighting has died down, find a ladder, and climb onto the wooden platforms, facing a couple more armored foes as you reach a second ladder, and more platforms leading all the way to the top.

Filibert Fourfingers

This is where Filibert Fourfingers – the Hanse leader – resides. He is clad in heavy armor, and tough to hack apart easily, though you can parry and push him back toward the red explosive barrel, then light it with Igni or a flaming crossbow bolt (or explosive bomb). Or just Axii his brain. Then check his perch for some notes. You'll find some orders from Filibert at the nearby Knight Errant in Distress.

Once the Hanse is cleared, Knight Errant forces appear to take over this position. Expect a deep discount from a Journeyman Armorer that appears at this location.

HANSE BASE #3: TULASENS CAVES

In the far northern climes of the Gorgon Foothills, north of Fox Hollow (which is an Abandoned Site full of bandits, and a recommended culling spot before the Caves are assaulted), is a deep gorge in the wooded hills. You can fall to your death from above. A better plan is to assault from the river, into the mouth of a small cave.

HANDLING A HANSE BASE: TULASENS CAVES

Though the map marker of this Hanse shows it just south of a deep fissure leading to a shallow underground stream, the only real way to actually engage the foes in this base is to search the river to the southwest, and uncover a small bandit camp at the cave mouth. Tackle the four foes here before heading into the cave. Note there's a second cave entrance to the east of here, but it has an iron gate that is locked and cannot be accessed now.

Watch the left side of the stone passage; you don't want to fall into the rock-walled streams of this Hanse at any time, as it's difficult to get out, and you'll attract unwanted attention.

Reach the first wooden footbridge, before sprinting across and through the first set of foes, focusing on the torch-carrier. He runs up the long right-curving path, then up the wooden steps to the signal fire at the top of the open cave fissure. Use Axii before he reaches the steps to ensure this doesn't happen.

Now turn your attention to the assembled bandits. As the cave complex is dark and confusing, a good idea is to face foes where you killed the torch-carrier, retreating back to the first wooden bridge and using that narrow opening to funnel foes into your attacks (so you aren't overwhelmed). Retreat to the cave mouth if you wish; then slay bandits in a much more manageable manner.

The steps up to the signal fire are difficult to navigate, and you can easily be swamped by foes. As the only way to escape is a death plummet, stay away from here (even if the signal fire is about to be lit).

There are side passages, the watery stream below, and other small bridges and ledges to explore. Do this after combat, and not before, to minimize risk of becoming lost or trapped.

Head roughly south, passing a waterfall gorge to your left as you cross a wooden bridge, push open an iron gate, and enter the lair of Loth Halfbreed, the Hanse leader in these parts. He favors a sword and shield. You should favor an Axii flummoxing and quick murdering.

Once the Hanse is cleared, Knight Errant forces appear to take over this position, with a Journeyman Armorer (found in the north part of the cave). Search Loth's corpse for his notes and a key to unlock the southeastern cave exit, off this area, allowing a quick access out to the river.

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

BAW GOODNESS, GRACIOUS, GREAT BALLS OF GRANITE!

LOCATIONS: The Gran'place, Art Gallery (Unmarked), Hughes de Saberre's House (Unmarked)
CHARACTERS: Art Curator, Reginald d'Aubry, Hughes de Saberre, Rosalinda ENEMIES: Cuckold

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the art curator.

QUESTING DECISIONS

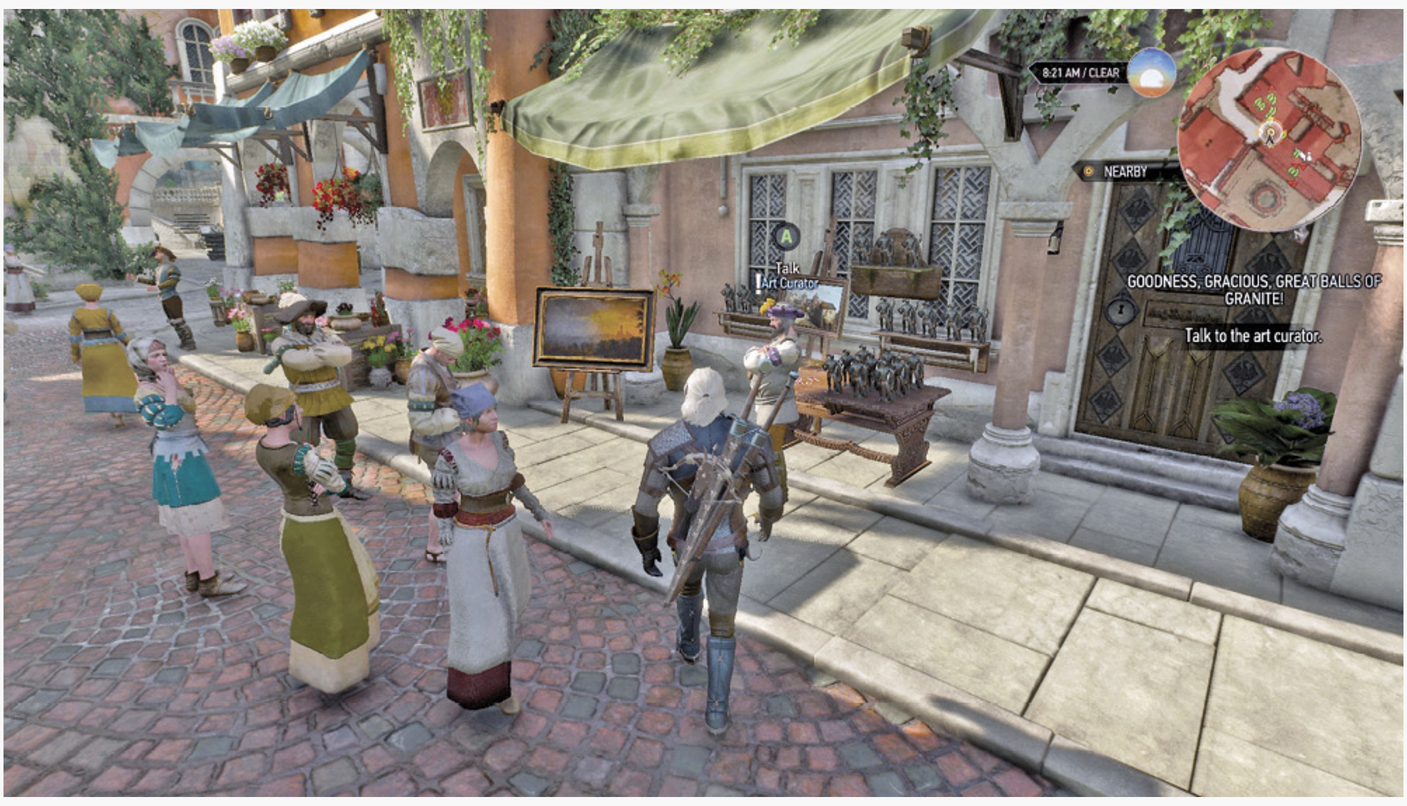
This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest can begin in one of two ways:

You can read the following missive pinned to a Notice Board, such as the one at The Gran'place (Beauclair), entitled "Wanted: Discreet Specialist", which refers to a particular sensitivity and knowledge of modern sculpture, and concerns the statue of Reginald d'Aubry.

You visit the Art Curator, an exhausted curator who is busy turning away customers from his art gallery on the promenade above the wine tavern, close to the Gran'place Signpost.

Art Curator,Rolande de Flakfizer

From the Notice Board at The Gran'place, head east down the cobblestone street that curves right, onto a promenade over the Adder and Jewels winery below. Visit the Art Gallery of Rolande de Flakfizer, who is busy turning away guests as his Reginald d'Aubry exhibit is closed until further notice. After he recognizes you, he hopes you might help with a somewhat delicate matter, and he pays well. Agree, and he beckons you behind the door.



You are shown a massive granite statue of the fabled Reginald d'Aubry, a giant among lovers and a puncturing swordsman to boot. He also diddled harps and other organs. And speaking of organs…it seems someone has made off with the statue's dangly bits! This is a terrible theft for the tourist-attracting Rolande, as anyone who strokes the baubles are granted unparalleled virility. Optionally ask for more information about Reginald, before questioning Rolande about possible suspects ("everyone") and when the theft took place (in the last few hours). Tell Rolande you need to look around.

With your Witcher Senses, make a thorough inspection of the, uh…"area":

- The statues bits and bobs were sawn off; this was a precision castration.
- There's a dried blood stain at the base of the statue.
- The arched rose trellis at the top of the steps has a piece of coat fabric caught on it, with a heavy cologne smell. That might lead somewhere.

OBJECTIVES

- Using your Witcher Senses, follow the scent.

Head down the steps, turn left, step through the door out onto the promenade, and make a left turn (facing northwest). Jog up the cobblestone thoroughfare, passing the Gran'place signpost, make a left turn past the Notice Board, turn right (west) at the edge of the market, and a right (north) up the stone steps just past the Perfumery. Step onto the curved street and head up a few townhouses to a door where some particularly loud rutting sounds can be heard.

Getting Teste With Old Man Hughes

OBJECTIVES

- Enter the house.

Access the door, and you open it to discover an older gentleman going at it with a younger woman. She runs off to get a towel, while Old Man Hughes blusters about his predicament.

Items: Rust-covered key, Loth's diary

He gets a little annoyed when it's discovered you're not Rosalinda's husband. Answer as you wish, mentioning the man's virility, and casually dropping Reginald d'Aubry into conversation. Hughes is ready to drop everything, when you hear shouting. It's Rosalinda's husband, and he's shocked Rosalinda would have two lovers; and both at the same time! The cuckold isn't about to let you fish in another man's pond, and steps to you, prompting the following:

- "Not gonna repeat myself": You don't have time to tell the cuck again that you're not in flagrante delicto with his wife, so you let your fists do the talking: Punch him on his arse, and he leaves.
- (Axii) You quickly flummox his brain, and he agrees that it's time for him to leave, and he obliges.

Hughes asks Rosalinda to leave, then admits he stole the stones. You'd never believe it, but they work! He's been at it three times today and counting! That's more than the entire last decade! Hughes pleads that you and he come to some arrangement to keep the granite knackers, prompting the following:

- "Fine": This leads to Epilogue #1.
- "Willing to lend them to you": This leads to Epilogue #2.
- "Nope. Needed to take 'em": This leads to Epilogue #3.

Epilogue #1: Absolutely Knackered

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the art curator.
- Wait seven days and return to Hughes for your reward.

You agree to let Hughes have the cojones, in return for his discretion and a bag of coin. He hands you a down payment, and tells you to return in a week for twice the amount.

Items: Crowns (50)

OBJECTIVES

- Return to Hughes for the second part of your reward.

Leave the art gallery, and adventure, mooch around, or meditate for seven entire days until the quest objective updates. Return to the Hughes house for your additional coin. You find Rosalinda weeping at the front door, and a note hammered into the wood, announcing the passing of Hughes. Oh well, he died happy. This quest now concludes.

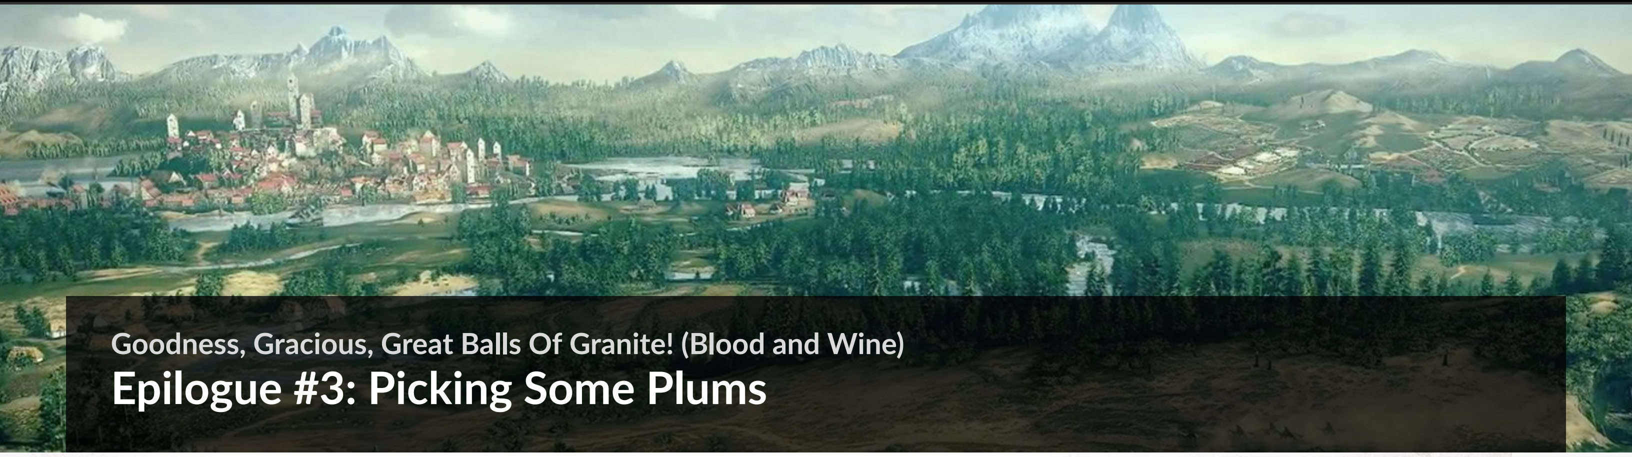
Epilogue #2: Never Mind The Ballocks

OBJECTIVES

- Wait one day. Return to Hughes.

You agree to let Hughes have the “meat and two veg,” but only for a single day; a compromise he is more than willing to agree to. Leave the residence, Meditate or adventure for 24 hours, then return to the townhouse. You’re told to keep your voice down, as Louisa is the “happy recipient” this time and has an inexhaustible appetite. You’re given the granite gonads, and a fond farewell. Epilogue #3 now begins.

Items: Reginald Statue’s Genitals



Goodness, Gracious, Great Balls Of Granite! (Blood and Wine)

Epilogue #3: Picking Some Plums

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the art curator.

Whether you asked for Reginald's dangler and acorns immediately, or came back one day later, you should now have it in your possession. It is a simple matter of returning to the art gallery, heading up the steps to the statue, and speaking to the Art Curator once more. Lebioda's luscious lips, it's really them! You receive a wonderful reward, a scale model of Reginald to proudly display in Corvo Bianco, and even better, you can stroke Reginald at no charge! The Art Curator hammers the fruits of your labor back into place. Wait a couple of hours, and optionally return to Reginald and see him fully rebuilt. You can reach out for the tickle if you like, too! This grants you the "Power of Reginald" which lets you sprint whenever you are out of combat for one hour, as well as increasing your stamina regeneration. Helps explain Hughes' exploits, doesn't it?

OF SHEERS AND A WITCHER I SING

LOCATIONS: Nilfgaardian Embassy, A Cut Above Hairdressing Salon (Unmarked), The Barber's Cave (Unmarked)
CHARACTERS: Le Papillon, Jean-Louis Ludovic
ENEMIES: Archespore, Beau Duvall, Squires

OBJECTIVES

- Force open the doors to the hairdresser's salon using the Aard Sign.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible after the tournament part of The Warble of a Smitten Knight quest is concluded, on the raised promenade above the lake docks, just south of the Nilfgaardian Embassy.

Le Papillon

While walking the upper promenade just south of the Nilfgaardian Embassy, by the closed barber's shop known as "A Cut Above," you're stopped by a dandy named Le Papillon, a troubadour you may remember. He greets you using the name you used during the tournament. Le Papillon is a devoted fan of Dandelion, and prone to interrupt you with verses, especially as you're about to undertake a valiant rescue mission as La Papillon's coiffer, Jean-Louis Ludovic, has gone missing. Optionally ask for more information about the barber, then agree to look into it, bargaining up the bard if you wish. The shop is currently closed. Open it up again with a quick blast of Aard on the front door.

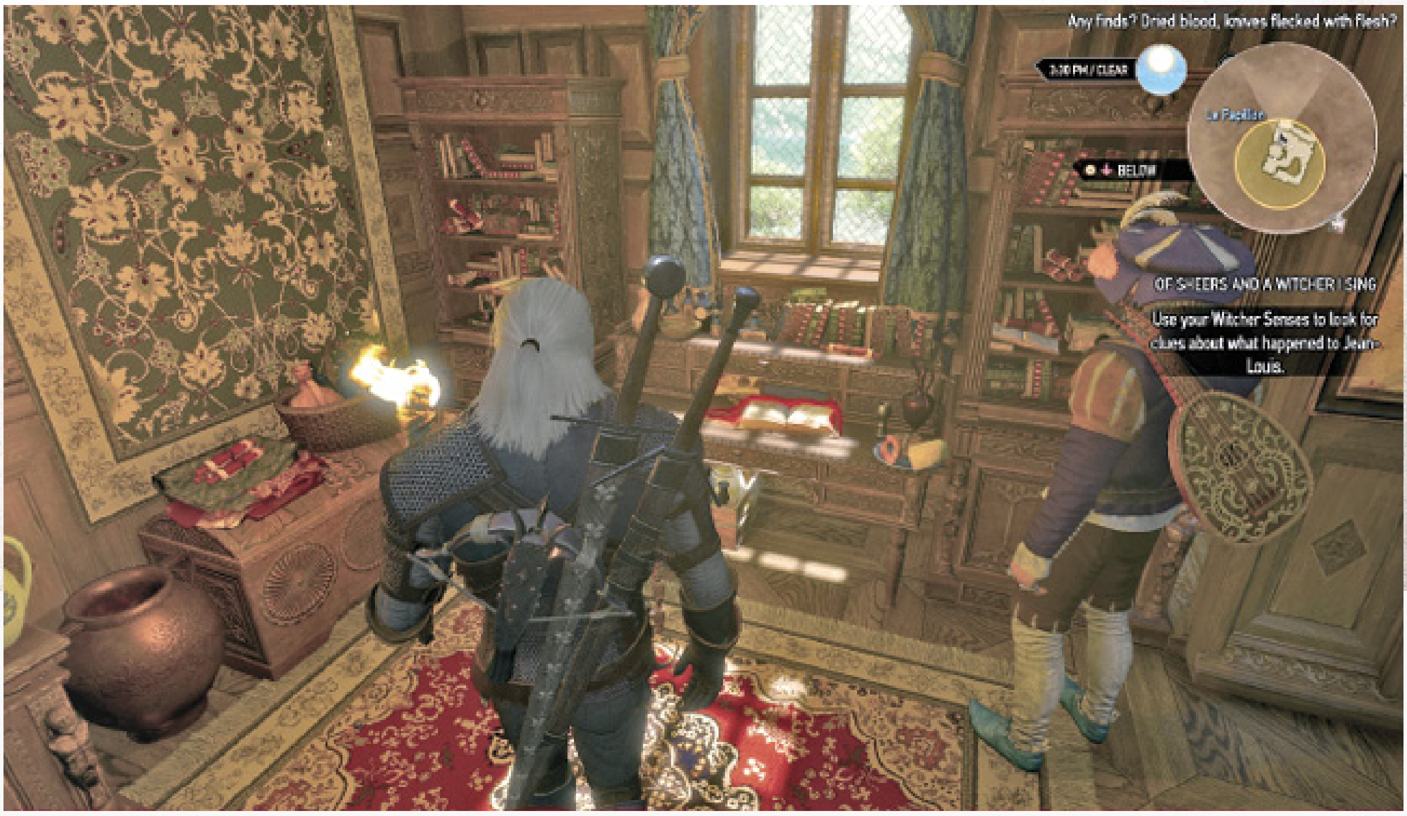
OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to look for clues about what happened to Jean-Louis.



Any finds? Dried blood, knives flecked with flesh?

OF SHEERS AND A WITCHER I SING

Use your Witcher Senses to look for clues about what happened to Jean-Louis.

Conduct a thorough search of the interior of “A Cut Above” Barber’s shop, beginning with the customer chairsand mirrors:

- There are empty pomade jars; they stink more than La Papillon’s poetry
- The scissors are dull; they haven’t cut hair for a while.

Head upstairs to continue your search:

- The chest at the foot of the bed hasn’t been touched, so there’s no forced entry here. There’s another empty jar of pomade, too.
- Over by the window is a coiffer’s log listing hair styles long out of favor in Novigrad. His last client was a Lady le Pompidou, but there are no leads there. Of greater interest is a map sketch; it seems to indicate (after you request Le Papillon shut up) the barber went out to find ingredients for his pomade. Gather the map.

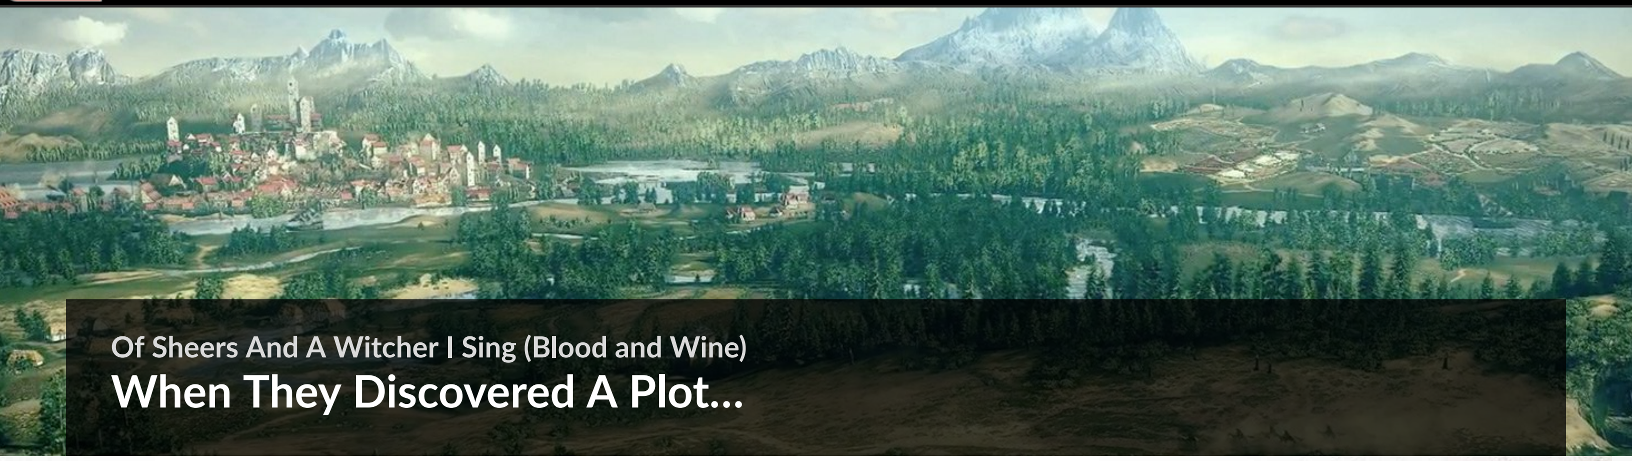
He Helped (Not A Lot)…

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Le Papillon.
- Kill the monster.

While Le Papillon serenades you with verbose verse, resist the temptation to throttle him and follow him out of the barber's, and roughly south out of Beauclair, passing through the Orlemurs Cemetery and Lebioda Gate, and along the road heading south. When you reach the general area where Jean-Louis was searching for ingredients, La Papillon shows he's a lover, not a fighter, and leaves you to lop the head off an unruly Archespore.



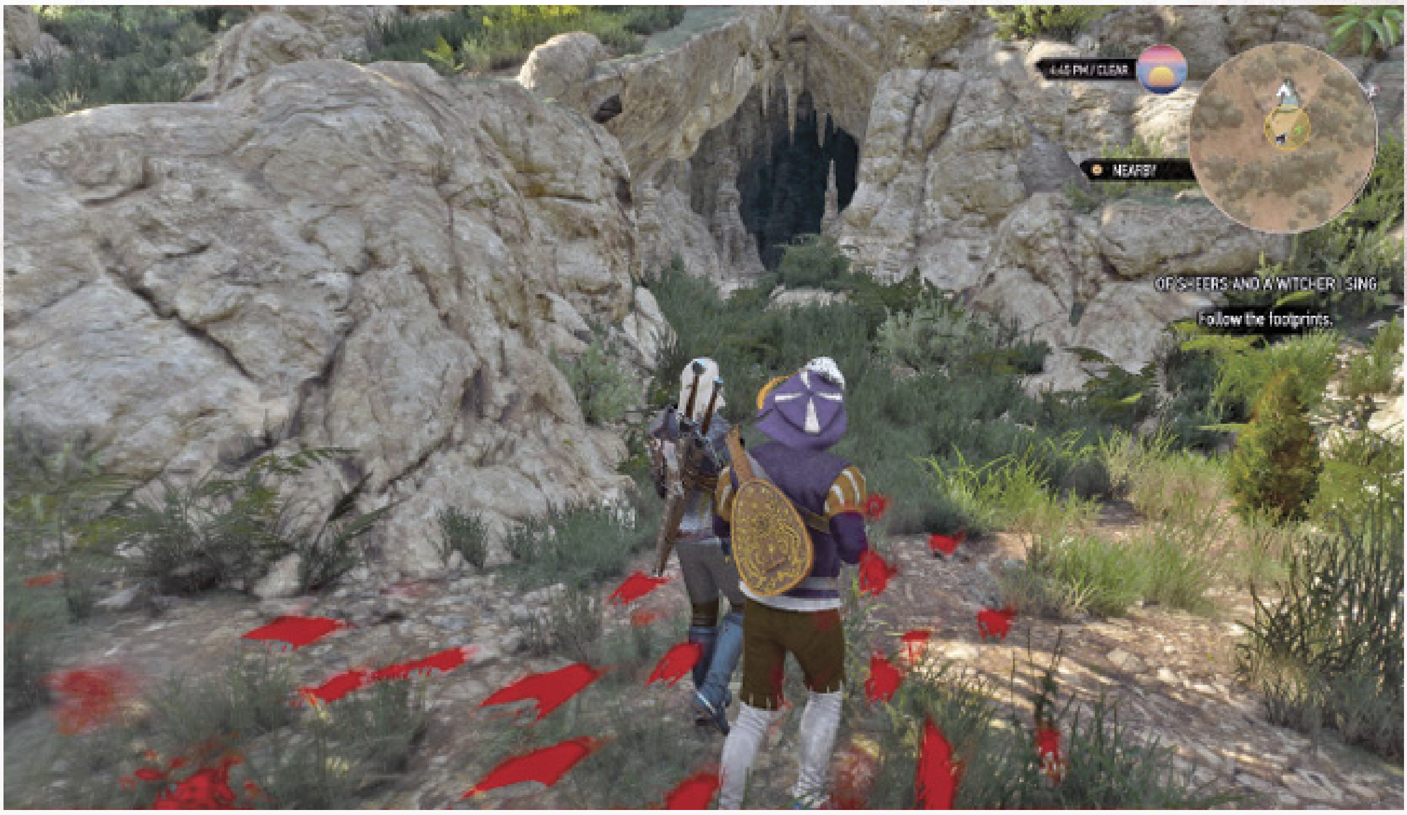
Of Sheers And A Witcher I Sing (Blood and Wine)

When They Discovered A Plot...

OBJECTIVES

- Search the meadow using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the footprints.

This prompts more treacly tunes from La Papillon as you follow him to the second location where Jean-Louis was picking flower petals. Sure enough, a basket is found in this meadow, with the same smell as the pomade. Close by are some trampled grass, multiple footprints, and a sprinkling of blood! Use your Witcher Senses, and follow the trail of footprints roughly south, down a hill, to a rocky outcrop and a cave entrance. Here, the trail goes cold.



OBJECTIVES

- Search the cave.

Oh good, more singing. Head into the cave, and the flickering shadows gives Le Papillon cause to quieten down a bit. This is fortunate, as you can hear voices from below. Drop down, and listen to a helmeted knight vent some of his own, decidedly less lilting poetry, on Jean-Louis, who has given him a haircut he's extremely displeased about.

Of Sheers And A Witcher I Sing (Blood and Wine)

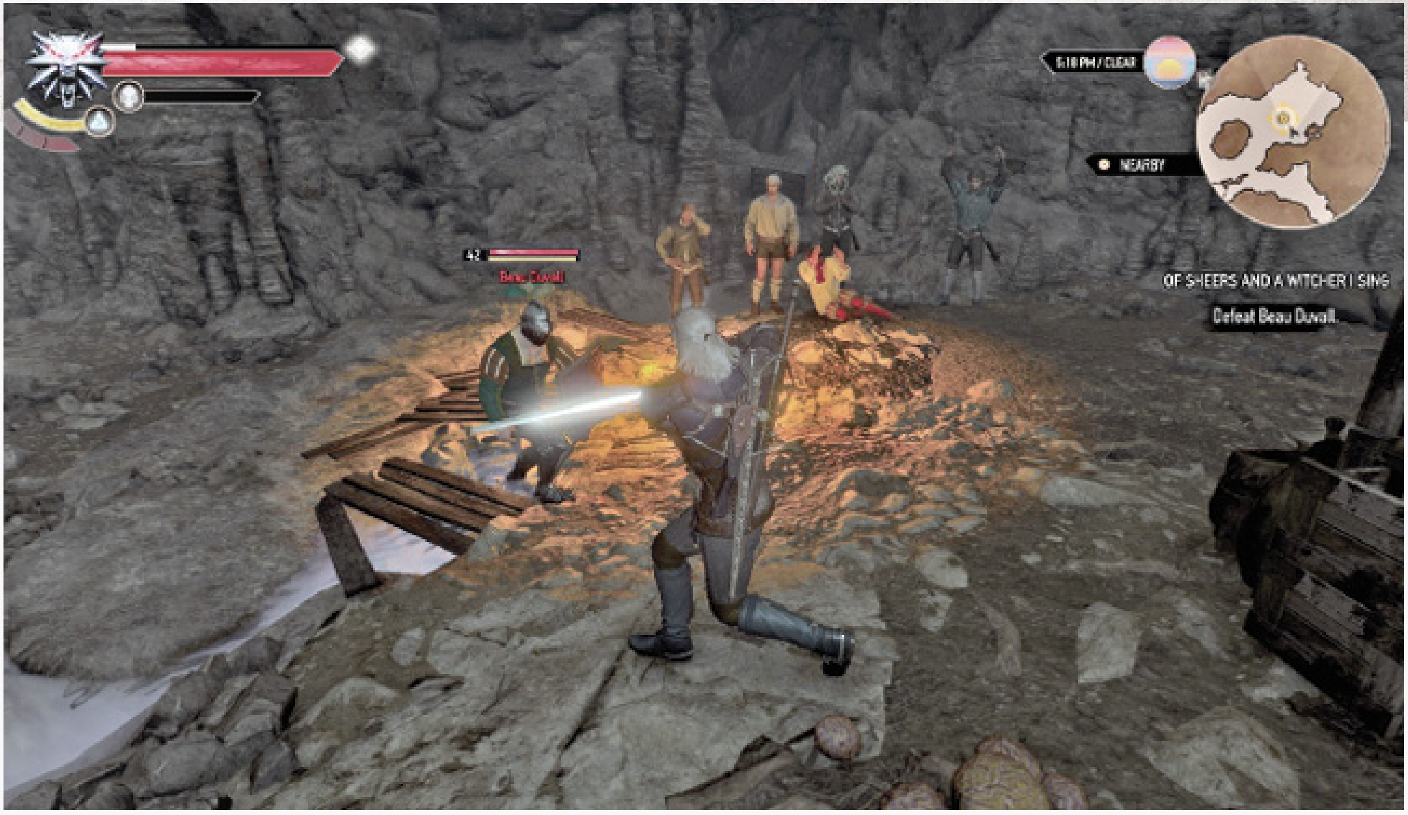
...And Brought A Barber Back To His Salon

OBJECTIVES

- Save the hairdresser.
- Defeat the knight (and his men).

As you arrive, Beau Duvall (for that is the knight's name) turns his frustrations onto you, once he threatens to snip off something a little more permanent that's attached to the barber. Intervene with one of the following:

- "Doesn't seem chivalrous," which causes Beau to challenge you to a duel; one-on-one. Cut him down, while his entourage of squires watches.
- "Hair grows back," which infuriates Beau and he orders his men to battle you, five-on-one. Cut them down, including his entourage of squires.



Jean-Louis is suitably impressed that his hide's been saved. Alas, Le Papillon is allowed to finish his bard's tale, which you can critique with enthusiasm or derision. Then comes the matter of payment. Of course, La Papillon has no funds, and it falls to Jean-Louis to provide you some crowns. Visit him at "A Cut Above" and receive a discount in hair and beard grooming, too. The quest then concludes. You can now select a unique haircut, called the Queen's pageboy, if you so choose.

DANGER ALERT BAW PAPERCHASE SPOILER ALERT

LOCATIONS: The Gran'place, Cianfanelli Bank (Unmarked), Perfumery (Unmarked)
CHARACTERS: Vineyard Owner, Bank Clerks, Marianne, Bank Customers, Giacomo Cianfanelli
ENEMIES: Bank Customer, Dwarven Bouncers

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the Cianfanelli Bank.

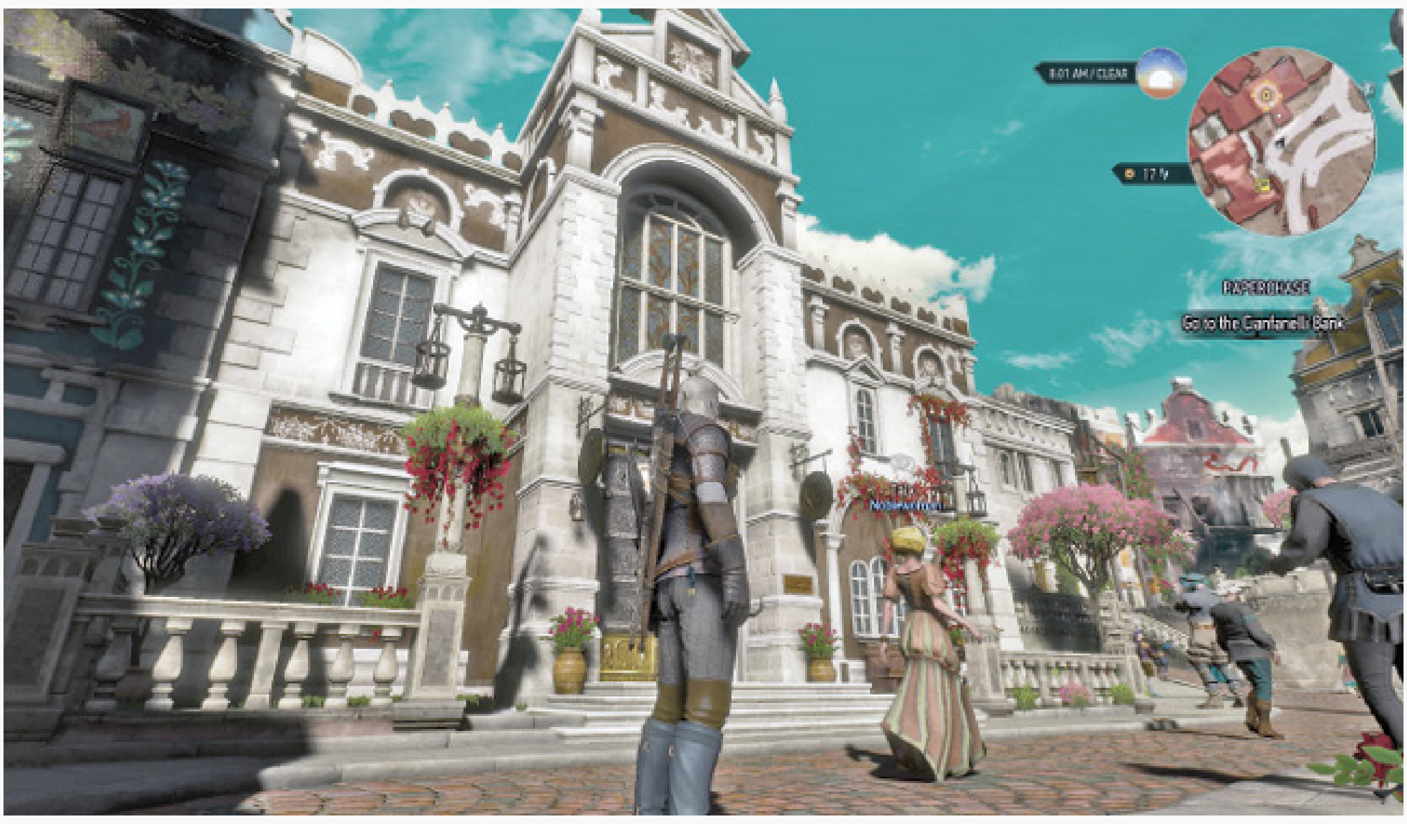
QUESTING DECISIONS

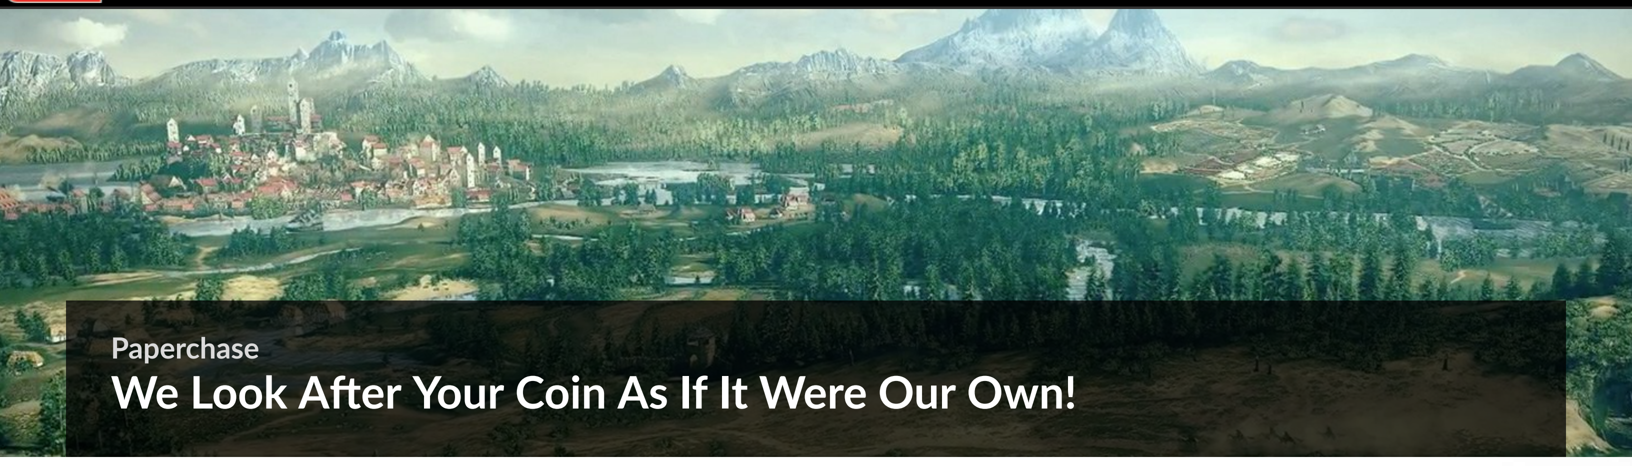
This Quest is accessible at any point during your exploration of Toussaint, though it is easiest to complete when you're exploring the streets close to the Blacksmith's and Armory, just south of The Gran'place Signpost.

Vineyard Owner

Do you remember your first exploits in Beauclair, many years ago? The Vineyard Owner standing close to the Armory and Blacksmith's shops just south of The Gran'place Signpost certainly remembers, and he's been good enough to pay you for the services you rendered now that he's out of his bind. As you off gallivanting around elsewhere, the merchant placed your funds in a savings account at Cianfanelli Bank; it should be a substantial sum by now, and it will be simplicity itself to withdraw the funds when the need arises.

Head north, through the market stalls and pass the Notice Board, to the area close to The Gran'place signpost. Look for the imposing stone building to your left (west), and enter. Inside, the place is quiet, save for the quiet snoring from one of the clerks.





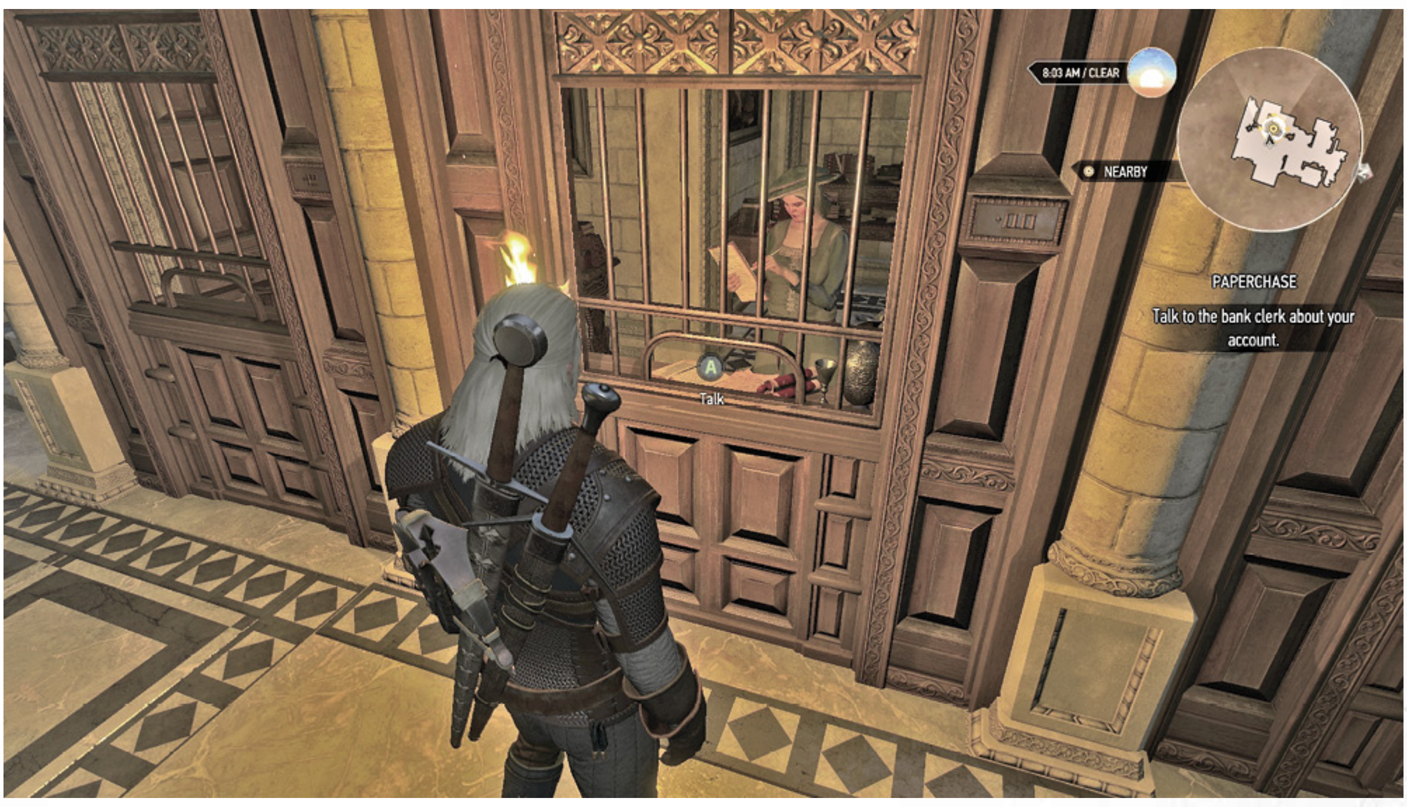
Paperchase

We Look After Your Coin As If It Were Our Own!

OBJECTIVES

- Obtain an A38 Permit from Window 1.

Head to Window 3 (the different clerks have plaques to read to determine where they are), where you're greeted by a reasonably cheerful clerk. You can optionally change coin to Crowns (something which can be done irrespective of this quest), but you're really here to "withdraw some coin." She asks your name, then goes off to find the relevant records. You wait. She returns with news; "extraordinary circumstances" prevent you from accessing your account, as the holder is dead. The note is clearly in error, and the account can be activated, providing you acquire the correct documentation; Permit A38. That can be found at Window 1.



Cross the foyer, passing the Bank Customer on the window bench, open the door by the plaque that reads "Window 1" and enter. Speak to the clerk at Window 1, who doesn't seem quite as cheerful. Request Permit A38 from her, and you are informed this is the wrong window. Answer as you wish: You're told to calm down (or you'll rupture a vein), and the clerk recommends you check upstairs in records. Or downstairs, in the archive. One of them should have the documentation. Your jaunt to the records or archives departments can be completed in either order:

OBJECTIVES

- Ask in archives about an A38 Permit.

Quickly stroll north, then down the marble stairs down and around to the Archives, across from the vault. Visit the Bank Clerk in this room, and you're asked curtly what you want. Request Permit A38. Fiddlesticks! He's just run out! But not really, he doesn't have this form because this is the Archive! You can try to optionally "make a small donation," but the clerk is taken aback. How dare you!

OBJECTIVES

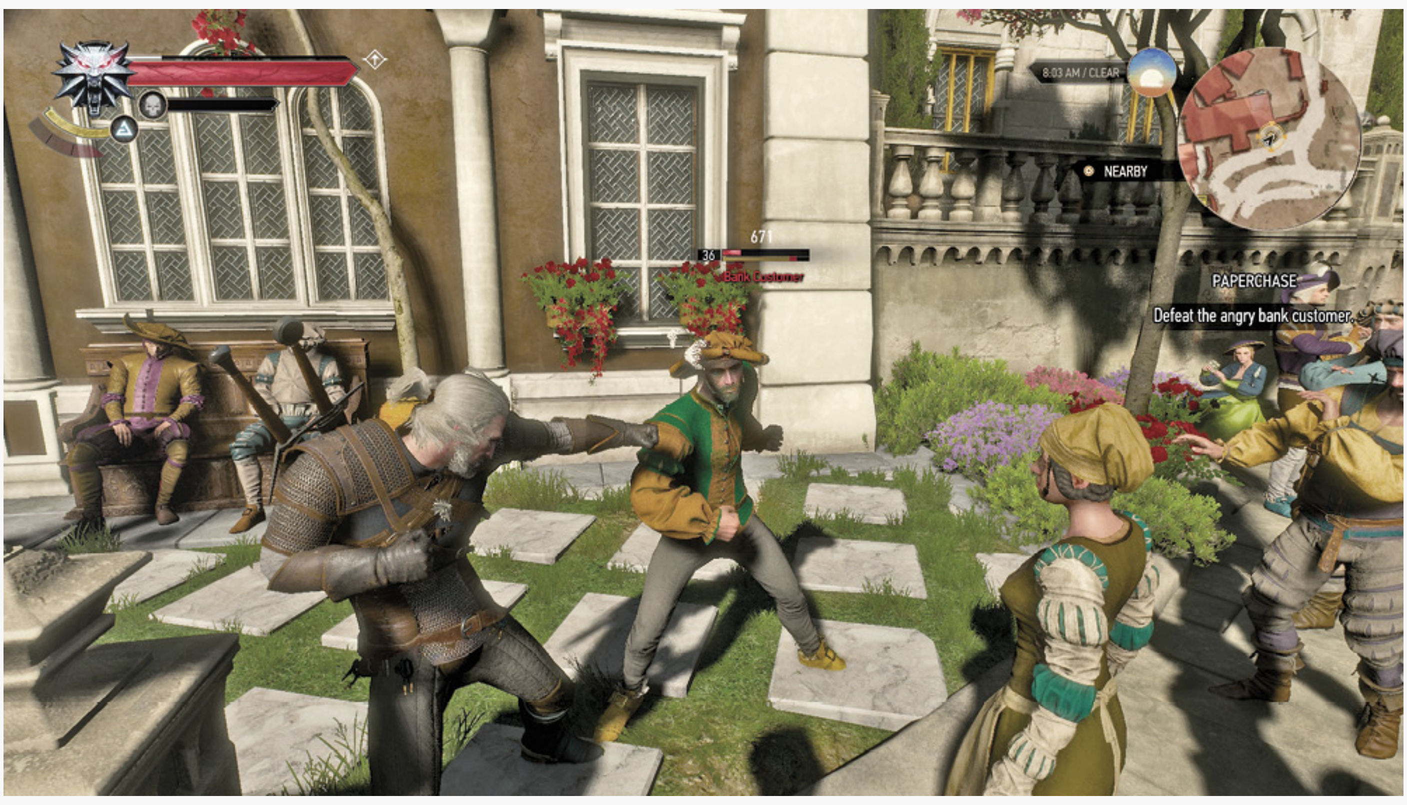
- Ask in records about an A38 Permit.

Quickly wander south, then up the marble stairs, and north toward the Records office, passing two waiting customers. Speak to the Bank Clerk despite the protests, and ask if this is the place to get Permit A38. It certainly is! Simply hand over your Form 202. Which of course, you don't have. After asking again, the Clerk explains this is all reasonably simple; Permit A38 can only be issued upon presentation of Form 202, as stated specifically in Ordinance N60. Window 1 should have Form 202.

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the angry bank customer.

On your way out of the Records office, one of the bank customers isn't about to let you get away with cutting in front of him. Answer him as you wish, until he threatens to pummel you. After a pregnant pause, one of the dwarven Bouncers orders you to fight outside. On the forecourt, put your dukes up, and throw punches at the Bank Customer until one of you falls on your derriere.



Paperchase

The Customer Is Always Right!

OBJECTIVES

- Return to Window 1 to get Form 202.
- Using your Witcher Senses, find the clerk from Window 1.

Return to the ground floor of the bank, and head to Window 1...which is deserted. Examine the window, and the smell of hair pomade, and follow the trail of scent across the foyer, to a locked door leading to Window 3. You can hear the clerks nattering behind the door. Speak to them to learn that they are on their break and will serve you when they are done. It would behoove you to stop being rude, and wait until the clerks have finished their break.

OBJECTIVES

- Sit and wait until the break ends.

Look around the foyer for a bit. Sit down next to the Bank Customer you haven't punched, who sits near the door to window 1, to the side of the entrance. You strike up a conversation; count yourself lucky, as this fellow has the challenge of locating Certificate P! At this point, the customer asks if you're up for a round of Gwent. You can:

- Agree, wager, and win or lose a bout of Gwent. This is your only opportunity to play the Bank Customer.
- Mention that he knows his way around here; he recommends some finesse and subtlety to get what you need.

After the game or the chat, the clerk at Window 1 returns from her break.

OBJECTIVES

- (Optional) Buy a present for the bank clerk.
- Return to Window 1 to get Form 202.

Return to Window 1. You may, if you wish, head out of the bank, and locate the Perfumery that's a couple of buildings away to the southwest, enter, and purchase either some Flowers or Perfume, before returning to Window 1. Request Form 202, admonishing the clerk as she could have told you this information beforehand. She asks for your name, before looking it up in the ledger. You're then informed that Form 202 cannot be issued; the applicant in question has been declared officially dead.

Resist the temptation to burn Beauclair to the ground, and instead rely on your wily charms. You can:

- (Give flowers or perfume) The clerk is taken aback, but pleasantly surprised at your gift.
- Tell her you're really here to see her, and lay on the charm about visiting her.

Either option does the trick, and she goes off to fetch the bank owner, Master Cianfanelli himself.

Paperchase

Red Tape, Or Red Mist

OBJECTIVES

- Follow Cianfanelli into the vault.

A few minutes later, the Bank Clerk returns with Giacomo Cianfanelli himself. He apologises for the delays, and you mention the permits you've had to find. Cianfanelli starts stalling, prompting you to ask what happened to your coin. He tells you proper paperwork is needed, and you resort to showing him the scroll detailing the Duchess' request, and to act as her personal emissary. You demand access to your account!

This seems to do the trick. Follow the dwarf downstairs, to the vault with the guard at each side. Cianfanelli unlocks the gate, and tells you which vault your deposit box is in. Head inside, inspect box 256 (the last one on the right)...which is empty!

You turn and see the two Bouncers preventing your progress, and Cianfanelli on the other side of the vault gate, explaining that because of your "deceased" status, it was decided that the monies in your account would be spent; on stocks, bonds, vineyard investments. Cutting to the chase? They don't have your money. You can:

- Tell Cianfanelli he has a week to recover your funds. This leads to Epilogue #1.
- Inform Cianfanelli you'll rip the coin out of his throat. This leads to Epilogue #2 or #3.

EPILOGUE #1: FULLY VESTED

OBJECTIVES

- Wait a week and talk to Cianfanelli.

You leave the bank. Waiting outside the bank for seven days to pass, or meditating for that length of time, is arduous but possible. A better plan is to simply continue your adventuring, returning every so often until you spot Giacomo outside the steps. Speak to him; he has your coin, and he thanks you for the trust you showed. As an apology, he also includes a blade, "The Reckoner," and he apologizes for the whole minging kerfuffle. The quest then concludes, and you may change monies at the bank whenever you wish.

You remain in the locked vault with the two dwarven guards, and must batter the both of them into submission. After some dwarf slaying, search the body to secure an overly-large key, use it to unlock the vault, and sprint up the steps. You find Cianfanelli in the foyer, extracting your funds. He hands them over, though they aren't as much as you thought. But that's taxes and inflation for you. The quest then concludes, and you're asked not to return here again, your face having been added to the banned clients board.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is available after the tournament during The Warble of a Smitten Knight. The quest begins when you visit the painter standing at the southwest corner of the market square.

After being called out by a gushing painter in the southwestern corner of the market square south of The Gran'place Signpost, stop and listen to the man gush over your "attributes." The fellow isn't looking for a date, but a fellow with your jawline to model for him. Naturally, you'll be compensated for your modeling services. OBJECTIVES

- Follow the painter.

When you reach the western gate (unmarked, but very close to the Beauclair Palace signpost), the painter mounts his steed, and gallops off down the palace gardens on a winding pathway. Follow him as he talks about losing his favorite paintbrush to that damnable hack Pierre-Auguste Moustacherois (his cat). He soon halts his gallop near the top of Rosetree Hill, and you both walk the rest of the way to the top. A group of noblefolk are busy having a picnic, which may impede the painter's ability to find a spot at which to paint you.

But an even worse fate has befallen the painter; the painting supplies he left here have gone missing! You can optionally ask about using different paints or that you're not going to look for them, but you are quickly rebuffed. If you tell the painter you won't look for them, you fail this quest. Time to look around.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the painter's paints.
- Give the painter his paints.

It seems the noblefolk are standoffish, but aren't maliciously hiding the paints themselves, forcing you to look a little farther afield, behind a small thicket just a little further along the path. Here, you find some spilled paint, which reeks to high heavens of turpentine. Follow the smell to a set of clear, but curiously-small footprints. Track the scent trail over a broken fence, and down a steep, grassy hill where another stain can be spotted. Continue roughly northeast, then right and up to the mouth of a cave.

Why did the Nekkers steal the paint? You find an empty paint container, splatterings of paint on the rock wall, and finally the painting accessories. They aren't in too bad of a state. On the cave wall itself, it seems the Nekkers have shown some rudimentary artistry, painting a fight between them and a—troll? Return to the Painter with the news; he couldn't care less about the cave daubings, and isn't happy that so few of his paints are intact, but he's ready to paint now. In fact, he's secured a superior spot!

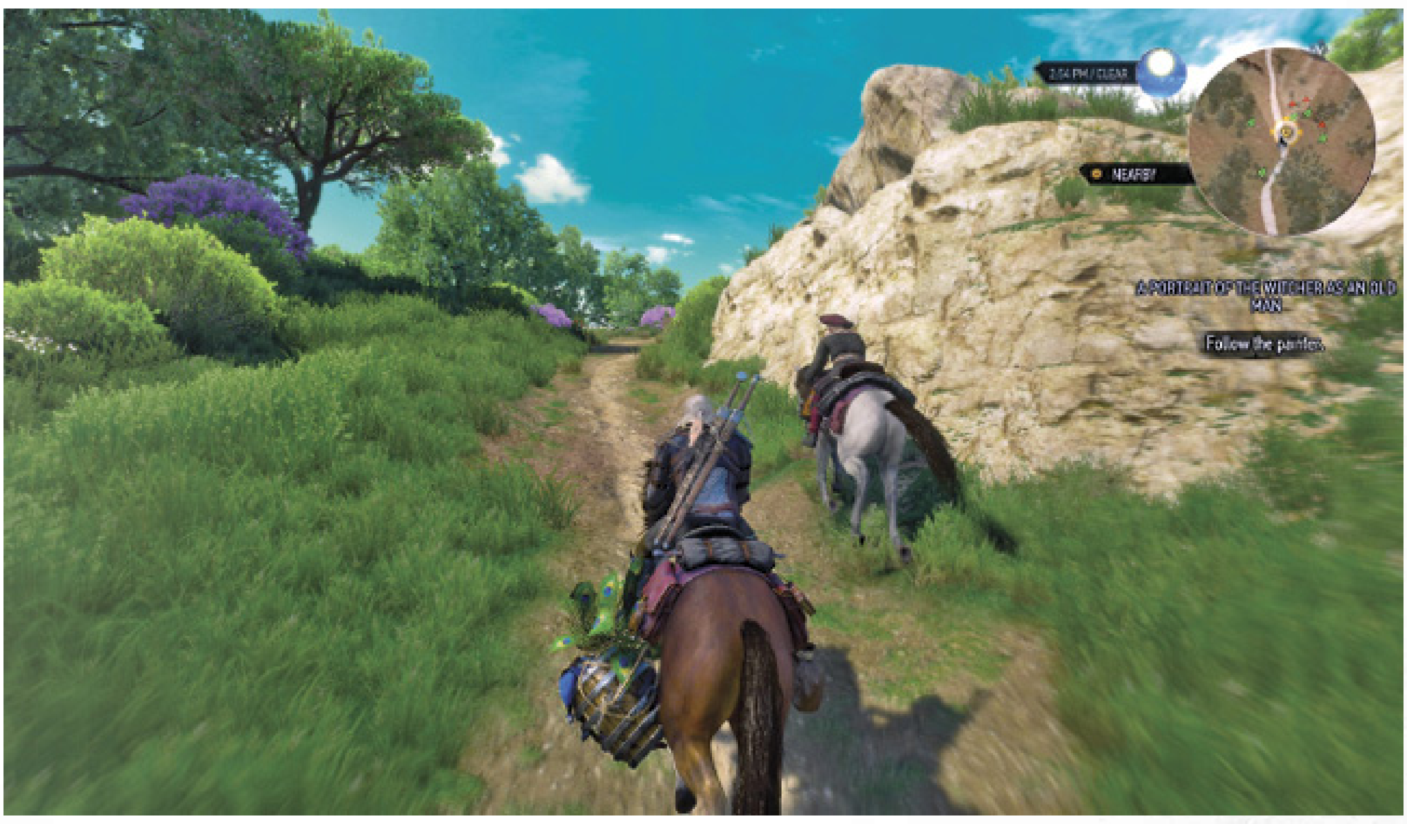
Paint Me Like One Of Your Beauclair Girls

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the painter.

Stroll back to the horses, mount up, and ride the Gorgon Foothills, winding your way along narrow paths and trees, to Duchaton Crest; a high cliff offering impressive views of the Palace and most of Toussaint. When you dismount, the Painter sets up his easel and asks how you'd like to be immortalized on canvas.



Answer with one of the following:

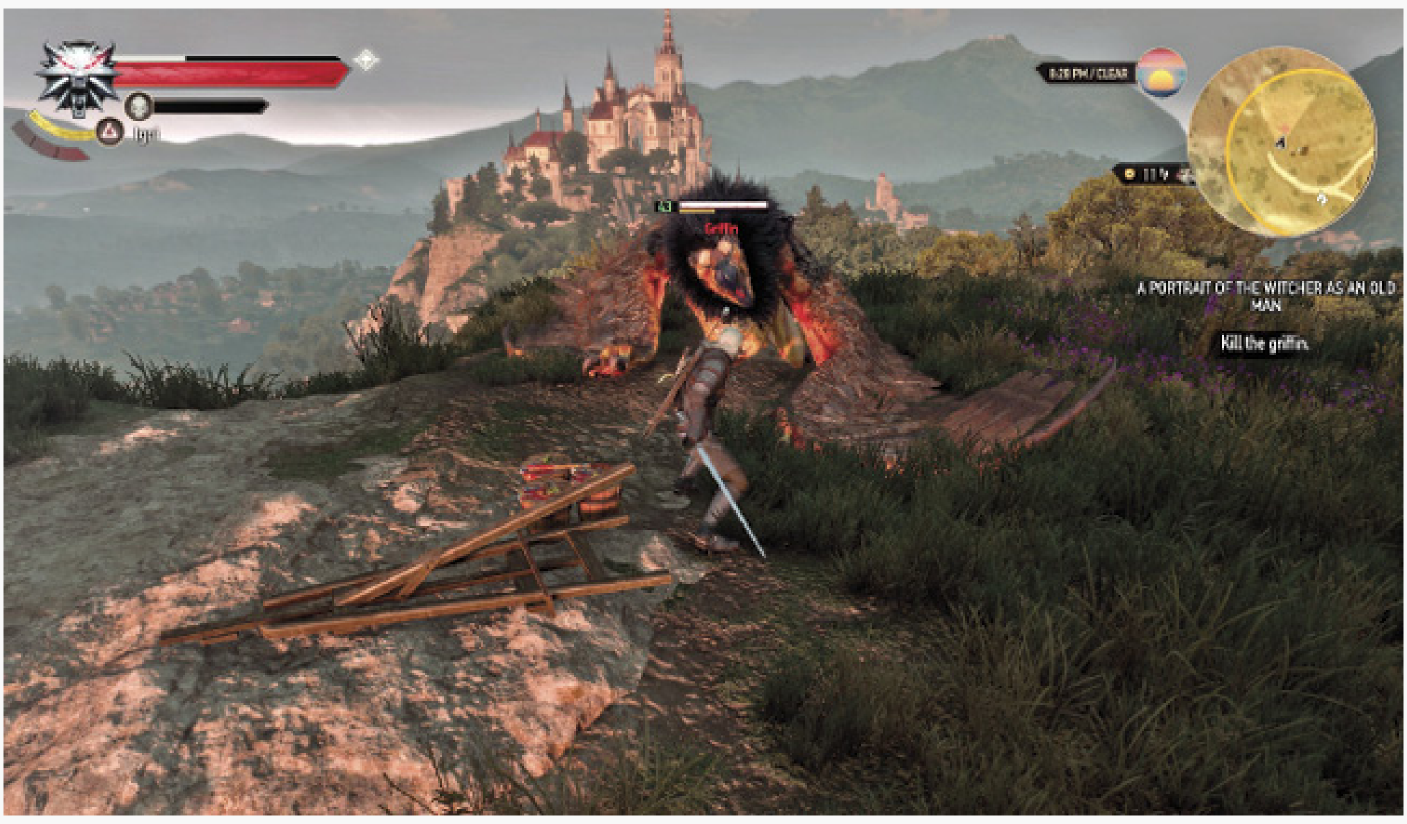
- On horseback. You'd like Roach to be in the painting, but the Painter's prancing filly is used instead. With sword raised aloft, you hold the pose.
- Heroic. You'd like to stand, sword in hand. With a snarling grimace, you clutch your blade in both hands, and hold the pose.
- Reclining. You'll lie down, so you can nap while he works. You rest, propped up on your elbow, and hold the pose.

You have one additional chance to change poses before the painting begins.

OBJECTIVES

- Kill the griffin.

At sunset, the Painter yells "Griffin," which you're sure he's adding to the painting afterward. But the terror in his shriek indicates he's seen the real thing; a swooping beast circles the crest you're standing on. The Painter flees for cover, while you must use the previous Griffin-killing knowledge to drop the beast. Seek Bestiary information if you need it.



After the battle, the Painter wrestles with the artwork and easel, having saved the work, but isn't about to reveal an unfinished masterpiece just yet. You're to meet him back at the market square, tomorrow after midday, where all will be revealed! For now, he asks whether you want to see the Griffin in the painting. Answer:

- "Yeah, paint it in," and the painting includes the vanquished beast.
- "Rather not have the griffin in the painting," and the painting omits the beast entirely.

You're given a fee for saving the day, and the painter parts ways with you.

CHARACTERS: Charles Lanzano, Louis de Corentin, Margot de Corentin, Trentin

ENEMIES: Grave Robbers, Archespore

OBJECTIVES

- Find Charles Lanzano at the Clever Clogs.

Charles Lanzano

After obtaining a notice of impending madness due to lack of sleep, head over to the Clever Clogs Tavern in the Lassommoir District of Beauclair, to help out the sleepless fellow, a man named Charles Lanzano. He’s being kept awake at night by a horrendous racket, and the Ducal Guard has done nothing to help. Optionally ask if the noises occur regularly, before (optionally) bargaining up your fee and agreeing to this quest.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest can begin in one of three ways:

You can read the following missive pinned to a Notice Board, such as the one at The Gran’Place (Beauclair), entitled “Contract: Quarrelling at the Cemetery,” which refers to an infernal racket coming from the nearby Orlemurs Cemetery, and offering payment for some peace and quiet. This is the optimal path, and shown below.

You visit Charles Lanzano, a tired chap who can’t get to sleep, and who resides in the Clever Clogs Tavern (Lassommoir District of Beauclair).

You head to Orlemurs Cemetery itself, then up into the Temple Cemetery (the walled area between Leboida’s Gate and Metinna Gate), in the southern part of Beauclair (Lassommoir District), and after nightfall, you hear strange sounds from around the main crypt. At this point, you can investigate.

Remember! If you begin this quest without speaking to Charles Lanzano, be sure to find him and let him know once the quest is successful, so you can collect an additional reward!

Items: Portrait of Geralt

You can purchase it for 1,000 Crowns (after which it can be hung in Corvo Bianco), refuse, or return when you have enough coin. The quest then concludes.

Till Death Do You Part (Blood and Wine)

Strange Sounds After Sunset

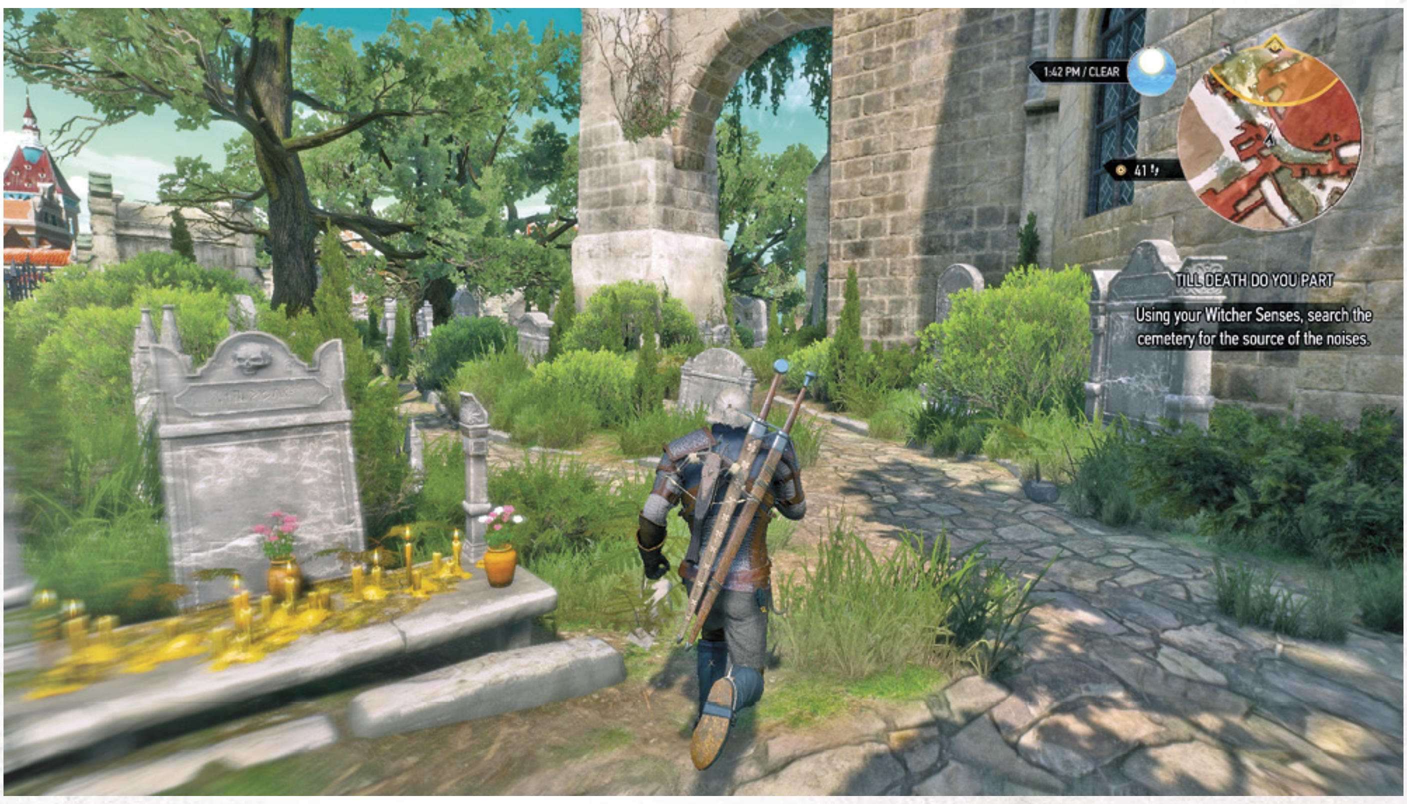
OBJECTIVES

- Using your Witcher Senses, search the cemetery for the source of the noises.

The Temple Cemetery (which is the upper walled graveyard, rather than the lakeside crypt further south) is due east of the Clever Clogs. Enter via one of the iron gates, and start some snooping. This can be done at any time of day. The following evidence is found:

- Tracks! Leading to the foot of the chapel wall, where you discover trampled grass and a pair of bloomers. Not the kind of moaning you're looking for!
- An open grave! Thing is, grave robbers don't usually wail and moan that much.

It seems your trail has gone cold, as there are no more physical signs to find. The place is eerily quiet, though there are grave robbers to seek out in the catacombs beneath the Temple Cemetery. Meditate until after sunset, and begin your searching anew. Head to either set of steps leading down into the catacombs, and you chance upon sounds of muffled fighting. It's coming from down below!



Using your Witcher Senses, search the cemetery for the source of the noises.

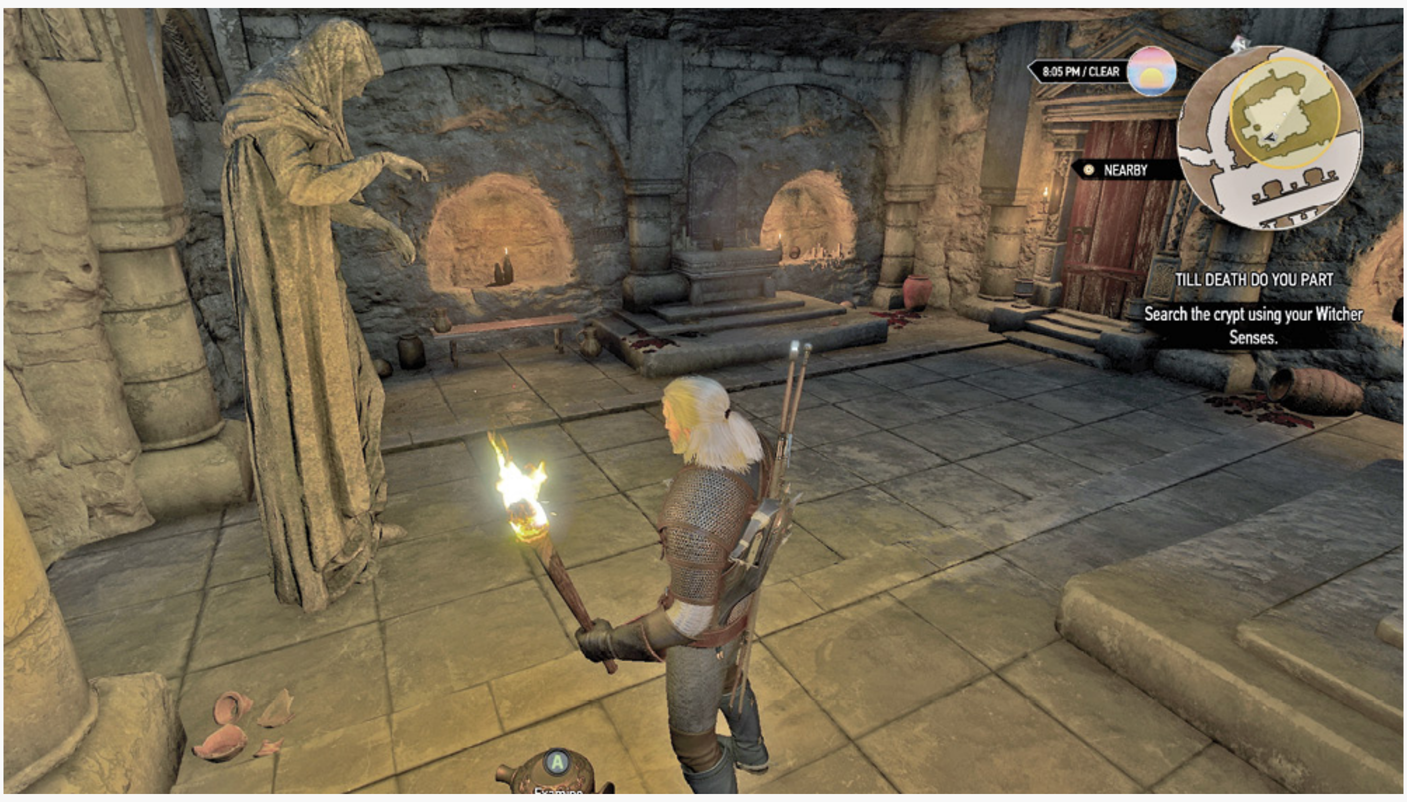
OBJECTIVES

- Search for the source of the noises in the catacombs.
- Search the crypt using your Witcher Senses.

Enter the catacombs by pushing open the gate, and move immediately to the crypt door on your left; this is where the noises are coming from. The place is weirdly empty, though a thorough examination of objects using your Witcher Senses reveals the following:

- A smashed pot in one corner, as if someone threw it against the wall.
- A tomb plaque of one Louis de Corentin. The flowers in his tomb are pretty fresh, so the funeral wasn't that long ago.
- A tomb plaque opposite of one Margot de Corentin.
- A gold urn; no grave robber worth their salt would have left this, so they aren't the cause of this.

Perhaps this isn't the place after all? The objective reverts back to finding the source of noise in the catacombs. Leave the de Corentin crypt, and start your descent down into the deeper catacombs. Wait! The sounds are back! Time to search the crypt again!



Search the crypt using your Witcher Senses.

Till Death Do You Part (Blood and Wine)

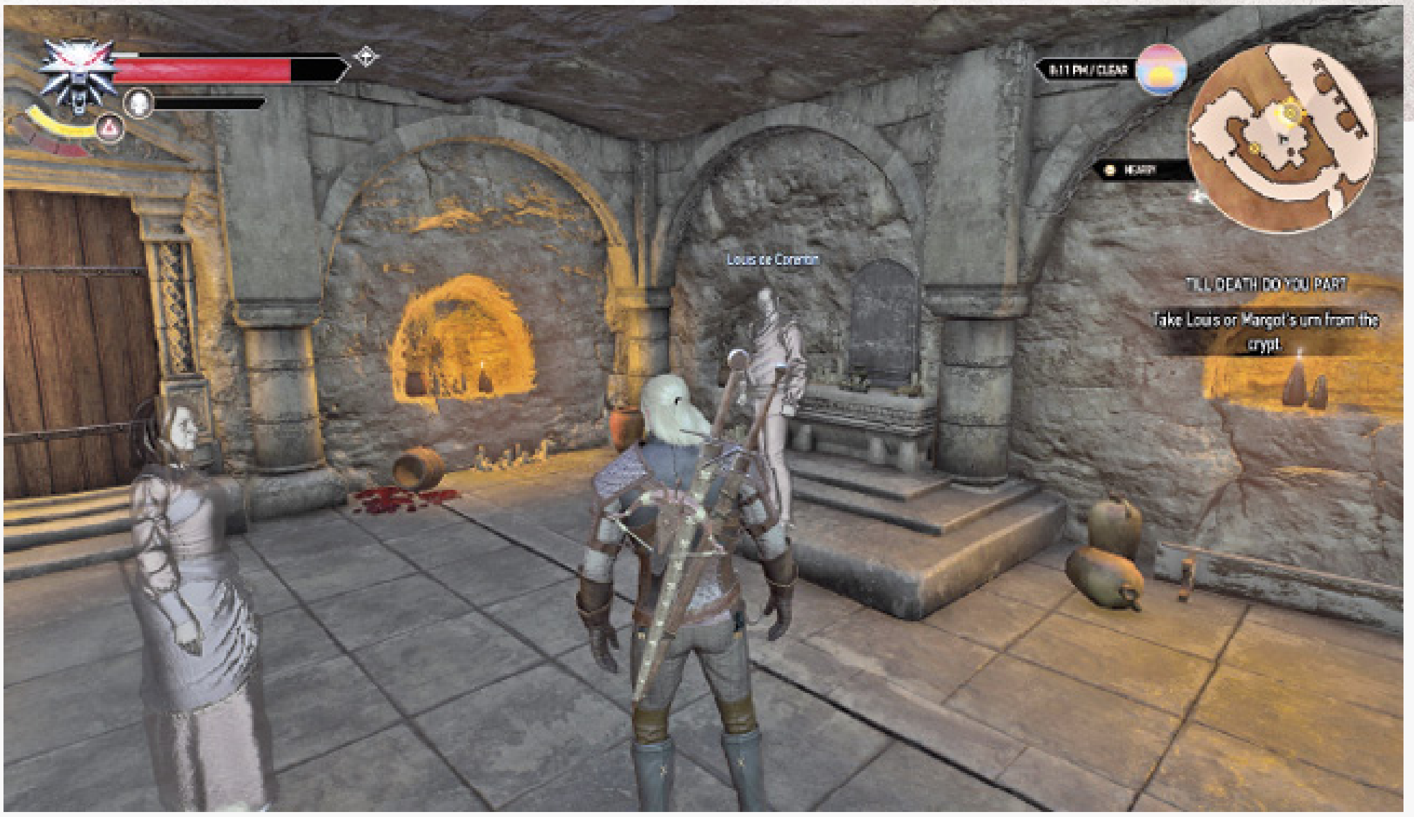
Till Death: Do Your Part

OBJECTIVES

- Hide to find out what's making the noises.
- Take Louis or Margot's urn from the crypt.

Step into the crypt again, and you decide to find a hiding spot behind the statue, so you can find out once and for all what is going on. A fierce argument breaks out between two departed spirits; the ghost of Louis de Corentin (a gambling degenerate, if you believe his wife), and Margot de Corentin (a Lebioda-bothering zealot, according to her husband). The only thing they agree on is that you're intruding into their squabble. Answer as you wish. The row continues, and it seems the only sensible course of action is to remove one of the couple from their internment. You can either state this, or ask whose crypt you're standing in, but both have equal rights to this usually peaceful rest. Then comes the bargaining:

- Margot de Corentin says that if you side with her, you'll be told where Louis hid his lucky Gwent cards. Intriguing...
- A clearly-furious Louis de Corentin, who was murdered because he actually needed those cards, says he'll tell you where the cards are...if you side with him.



The objective updates, and it seems you have a choice to make (which you cannot go back on). You can:

- Side with Louis de Corentin, and remove Margot's urn from the crypt. This begins Path 1.
- Side with Margot de Corentin, and take Louis' urn from the crypt. This starts Path 2.

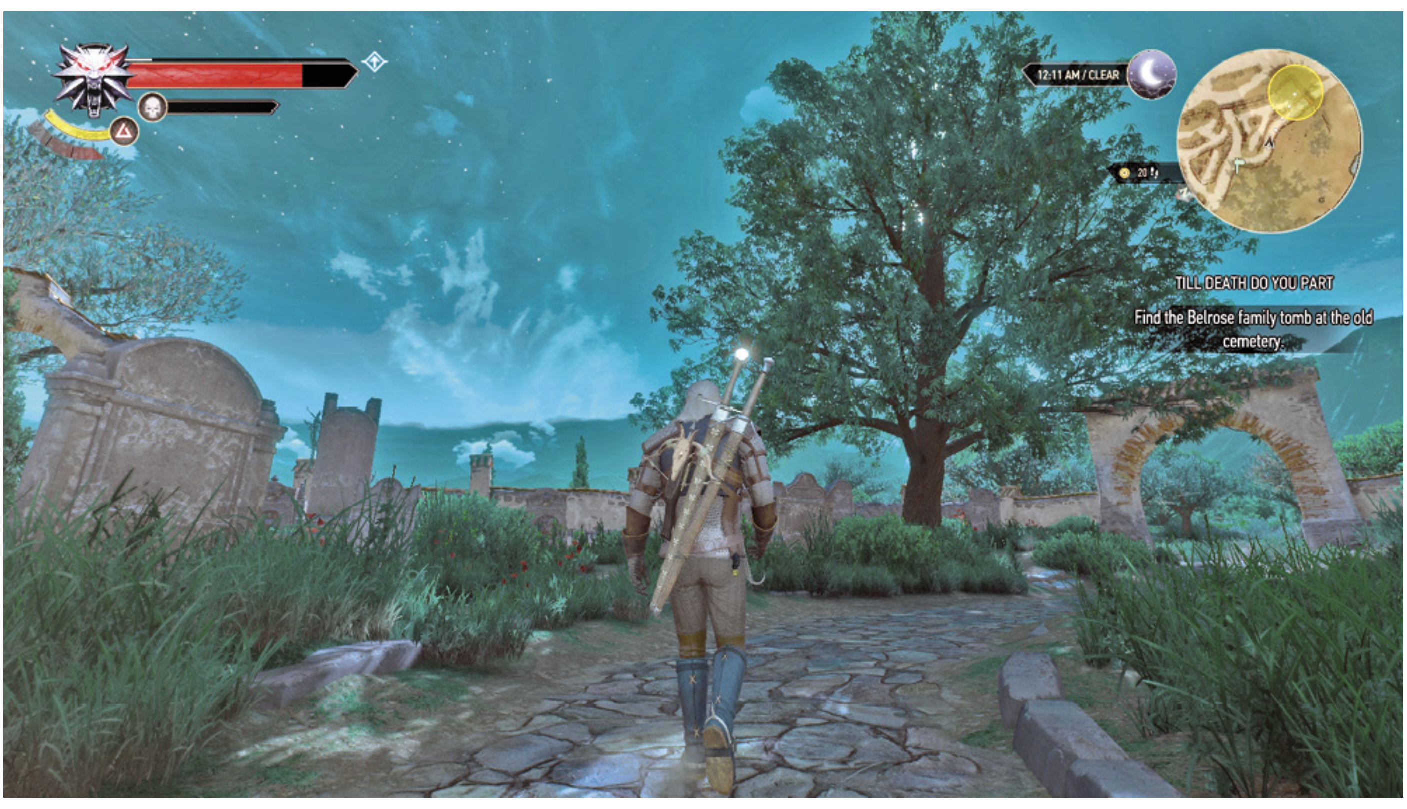
Till Death Do You Part (Blood and Wine)

Path #1: Siding With "The Gambling Heathen", Louis.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the Belrose family tomb at the old cemetery.

Choose to side with Louis, and locate Margot's urn, behind the ghost of the Lebioda devotee. Margot appears, and pleads that if you truly must remove her from her resting place, that she should be deposited somewhere more pleasant. She wishes to be buried with her mother, in the old cemetery, just outside the city walls, and beneath the outspread arms of a chestnut tree.



Exit the de Corentin Crypt, and head out of the Temple Cemetery, moving south to Lebioda's Gate, and the "old Cemetery," also known as the Orlemurs Cemetery. You're looking for a tombstone bearing Margot's mother's name, Micheline Belrose, at the family tomb here. It is located just by the southern entrance arch. Inspect each gravestone until you find the one bearing the Belrose name, and put the urn there.

Items: Urn with ashes of Margot de Corentin

OBJECTIVES

- Return to Louis to discuss your reward.
- Make Louis show himself.

Back at the de Corentin Crypt, Louis is nowhere to be found. You possibly expected as much from this cad. The objective updates, and Louis remains hidden until you gather up his urn, and threaten to remove it.

Items: Urn with ashes of Louis de Corentin

Louis appears, admits to being a fraud, and has no idea where the hidden stash of Gwent cards are! But he'll think of something as a reward…and remembers a swordsmith by the name of Trentin, who had promised him a blade after he was skinned in a game of Gwent. Alas, Louis passed on before claiming this prize. Why not collect it in his stead? And just like Louis, Trentin's wife would summon Master Mirror himself if she found out her husband partook in such gambling; so you have all the verbal ammunition you need.

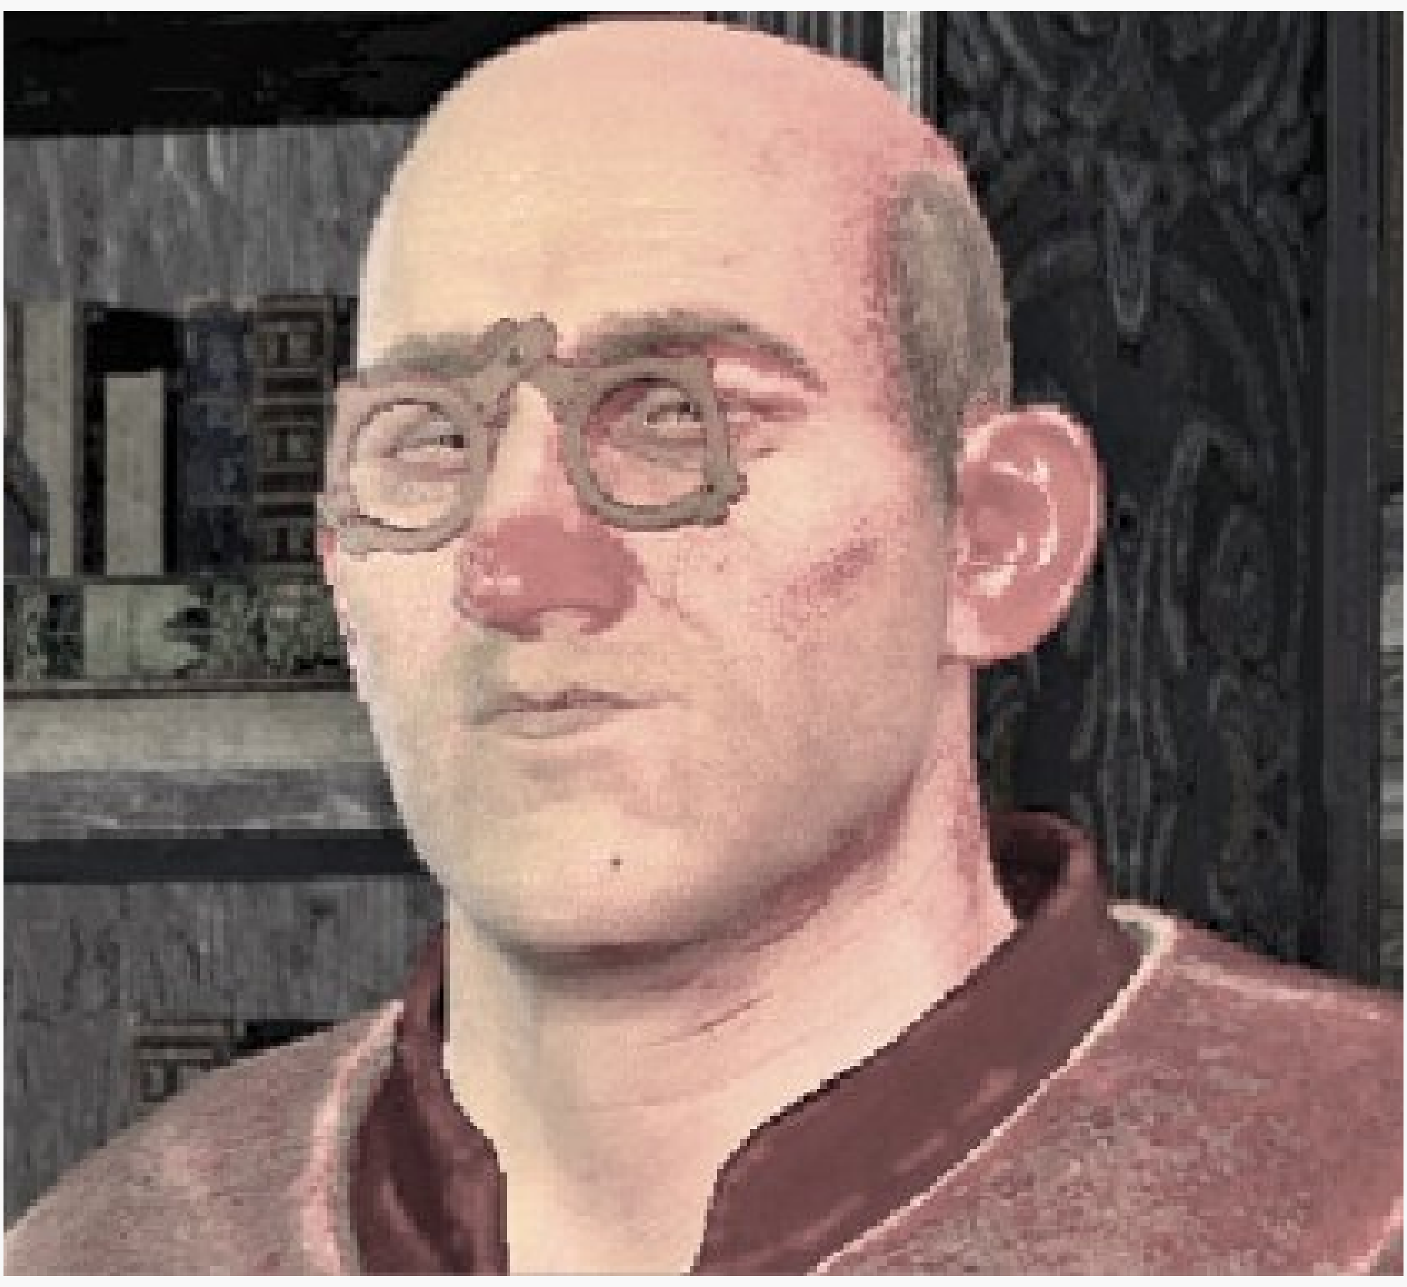
PATH #1: BLAGGING THE BEAUCLAIR BLACKSMITH

OBJECTIVES

- Talk to the swordsmith named Trentin about Louis' sword.

H-H-HALT! WH-WHO G-GOES THERE?!

If you haven't spoken to Charles Lanzano yet, you're stopped by a frightened guard and asked about the noises in the catacombs. After describing what you found out, the guard makes mention of Lanzano and the Objective "Find Charles Lanzano at the Clever Clogs" begins. This occurs only if you chanced upon the noises without properly starting this quest. You can finish up Margot's objective, or speak to Charles (at the quest conclusion) at any time you wish.



Trentin

Visit the Beauclair Blacksmith, in the rather well-to-do shop Trentin owns next to the Armorer, equidistant between the Nilfgaardian Embassy and The Gran'Place. Head upstairs, and explain that you're here for Louis' sword. Mention the Blacksmith's Gwent habit, and he soon realizes he must give the sword over. Once in your possession, Trentin asks whether you might wager some coin for a game of Gwent? Agree or reject his offer (you cannot play him later, but he's got no unique rewards, so whether to engage in a game is up to you), and this Path concludes.

Items: Sword: Forged in Fire

Till Death Do You Part (Blood and Wine)

Path #2: Siding With “The Saintly Shrew”, Margot.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the Gwent Friendship Society of Beauclair’s chamber.

Choose to side with Margot, and locate Louis’ urn, behind the ghost of the gambling degenerate. Louis appears, disappointed you fell for “that pious tart’s drivel.” He has one request, that his remains are set in the chamber of the Gwent Friendship Society of Beauclair, where departed members of the club are laid to rest.

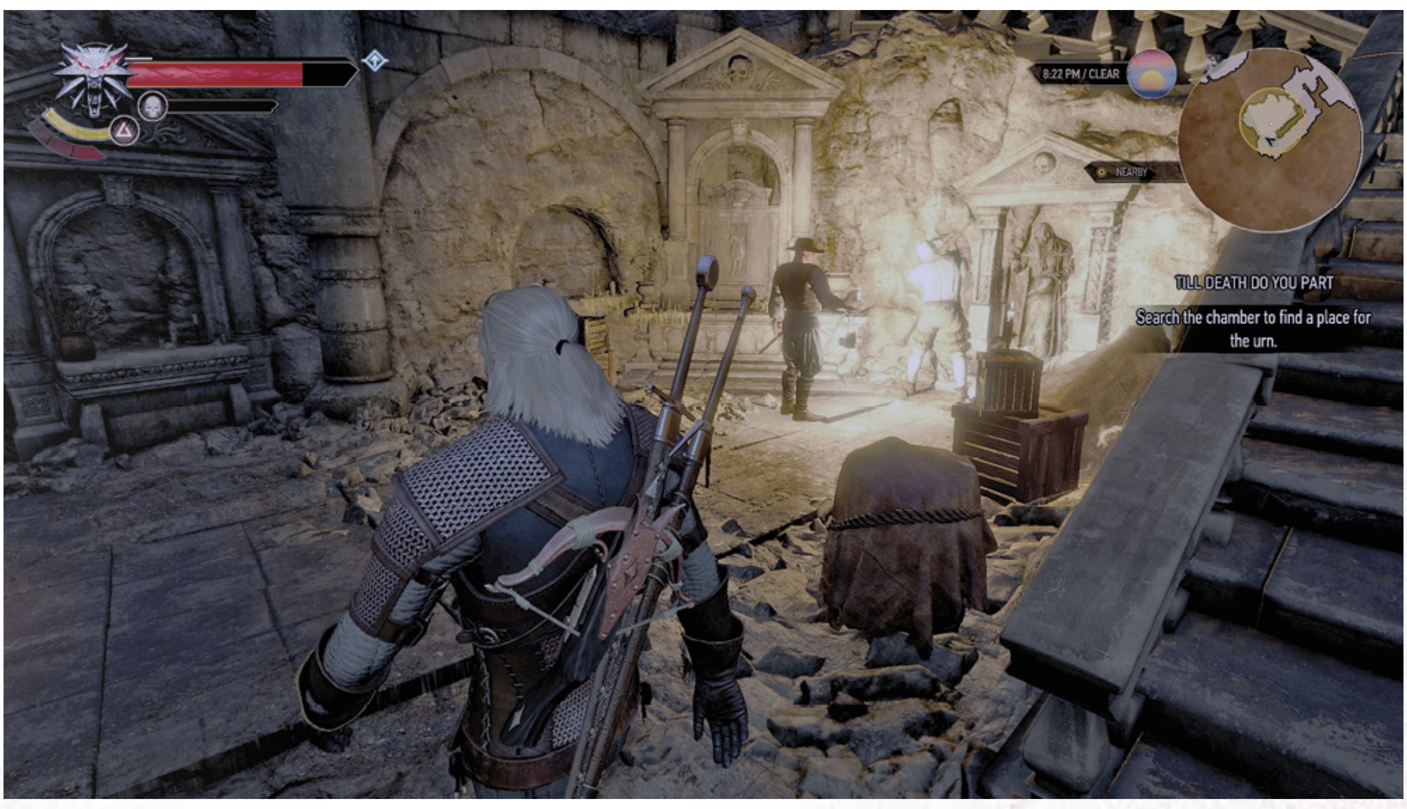
Exit the de Corentin Crypt, make a long left turn into the entrance to the lower catacombs, head down the curved steps, and across the first mausoleum area, into a subsequent corridor until you spot a sign on the right wall that indicates the entrance to the Gwent Friendship society.

Items: Urn with ashes of Louis de Corentin

OBJECTIVES

- Search the chamber to find a place for the urn.
- Defeat the grave robbers.

Once inside the chamber, head down the stairs, where you disturb a trio of Grave Robbers. After a conversation that seals their doom, dispatch the three of them (with relative ease), and then use your Witcher Senses to secure a spot on one of the tomb ledges to place Louis’ urn on. Don’t forget to acquire a book of Gwent verses before you leave!



Items: Gwent Card: Skellige Storm, Book: Ode to Gwent

OBJECTIVES

- Go to Margot to discuss your reward.

Back at the de Corentin Crypt, Margot is thankful for your help, and describes the path leading to where the stash of buried Gwent cards is hidden. She describes a path to the chest, hidden under a rose bush, before asking where her husband ended up. Answer her before you leave the cemetery.

PATH #2: HIDDEN CARDS IN HAUTEVILLE

OBJECTIVES

- Search for a house with a tree-shaped crest outside the walls of Hauteville.
- Find a way into the garden.

Head north, into the Hauteville District of Beauclair, and walk through Coopers’ Gate, heading downhill to the east. Turn right (south), and look for the red-walled house with the sign of the tree; the De Corentin Residence. The side gates to the garden are barred, forcing you to walk in a clockwise direction around the house, up some stone steps, and to climb up some crates to the low roof.

Find Charles Lanzano at the Clever Clogs.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the hidden cards using your Witcher Senses.

Drop down into the garden, which is barred for a reason; an Archespore is lurking in the undergrowth! Once it’s been chopped into more manageable segments, continue your search. If you remember what Margot told you, she mentioned the chest was buried beneath the rose bushes. Look there, in the southeast corner of the garden, and sure enough, the stash is found! Gather both the Gwent cards. Afterward, look for the small chest on the west side by the door, which holds the Garden key, allowing you to unlock either iron gate, and depart. The Paths now merge.

Items: Gwent card: Vampire: Bruxa, Gwent card: Barclay Els, Garden key

Conclusion: Catacombs Cleared (Of Screaming Spouses)

OBJECTIVES

- Find or return to Charles Lanzano at the Clever Clogs.

Head to the Clever Clogs, and find Charles Lanzano upstairs. Explain that you solved the noise problem. He's very excited, asking what "ancient filth" was entombed deep in the catacombs. You can answer:

TURN AND FACE THE STRANGE

RELATED QUESTS: Main Quest: Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Griffin Gear

LOCATIONS: Lebioda's Gate, Orelemurs Cemetery (Unmarked), Valley of the Nine (Unmarked), Ruins of Dol Naev'de (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: Postboy, Yennefer of Vengerberg, (or Triss, depending on your relationship in The Witcher 3), Professor Moreau, Jerome Moreau

ENEMIES: Drowners, Guardian Panthers, Gargoyles, Pale Widow Centipedes

Required Items: Crossbow (you can use bombs instead)

OBJECTIVES

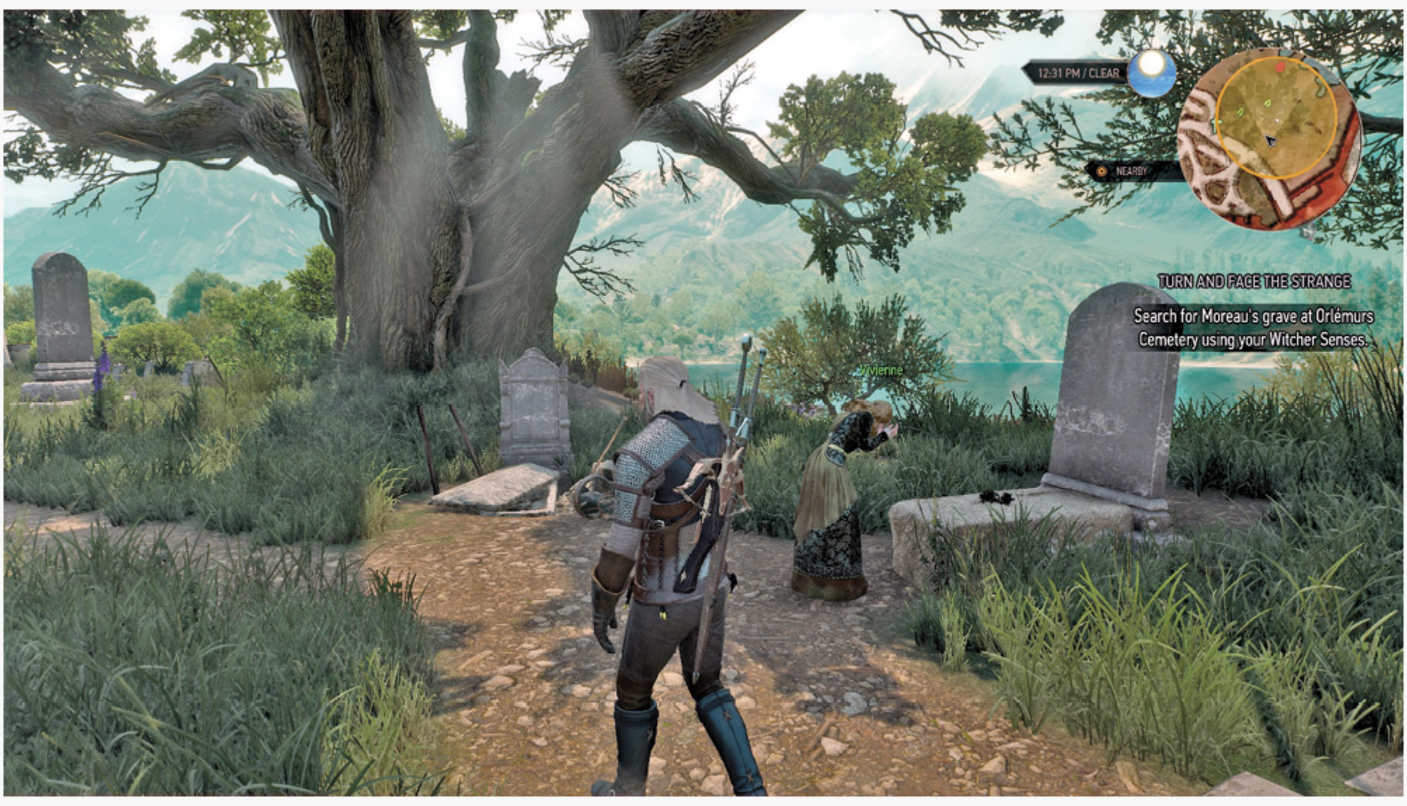
- Search for Moreau's grave at Orlemurs Cemetery using your Witcher Senses.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is brought to your attention during your first visit to Beauclair, where you receive a missive from Yennefer of Vengerberg (or Triss. There are three possible letters based on player's actions in TW3. Romancing Yen gives a letter from Yen, romancing Triss a letter from Triss, and romancing both or neither provides a letter from Yen, but less amicable than the first one). During Main Quest: The Night of Long Fangs, this quest stalls, and a new objective, "Before continuing with Professor Moreau, fight off the vampire attacks," prevents you from continuing this quest until after the completion of Main Quest: Tesham Mutna. (Only the cemetery part in Beauclair, you can proceed with the quest if you have the objective "Search for the entrance to the professor's laboratory in the flooded ruins of the Valley of the Nine.")

While on your adventures, usually when entering one of the town squares or courtyards in Beauclair for the first time (such as the wonderful stone wishing well close to the Pheasantry Inn just north of the Nilfgaardian Embassy), you are stopped by an urgent missive carried by a small child. Shoo him away or pay him five crowns for his troubles. The letter is from your old friend Yennefer or Triss, who has discovered references to a "Professor Moreau of Beauclair" who conducted research into Witcher mutations. It seems his journal, which was laid with the Professor's remains in his tomb, makes mention of a secret laboratory! Furthermore, Yennefer or Triss has provided a partly-legible map with which to begin your search.

The old cemetery just north of Lebioda's Gate is where the Professor's grave is located. Find it at the foot of the sprawling oak tree, close to a weeping woman named Vivienne (if Main Quest: The Night of Long Fangs has been completed) who mourns her slain knight Guillaume the Hapless. She isn't relevant to this quest. Examine the open grave to her left. The headstone is carved with Elder Speech, but his journal has been stolen, and the professor is in no shape to help you (after you examine his skeletal remains).



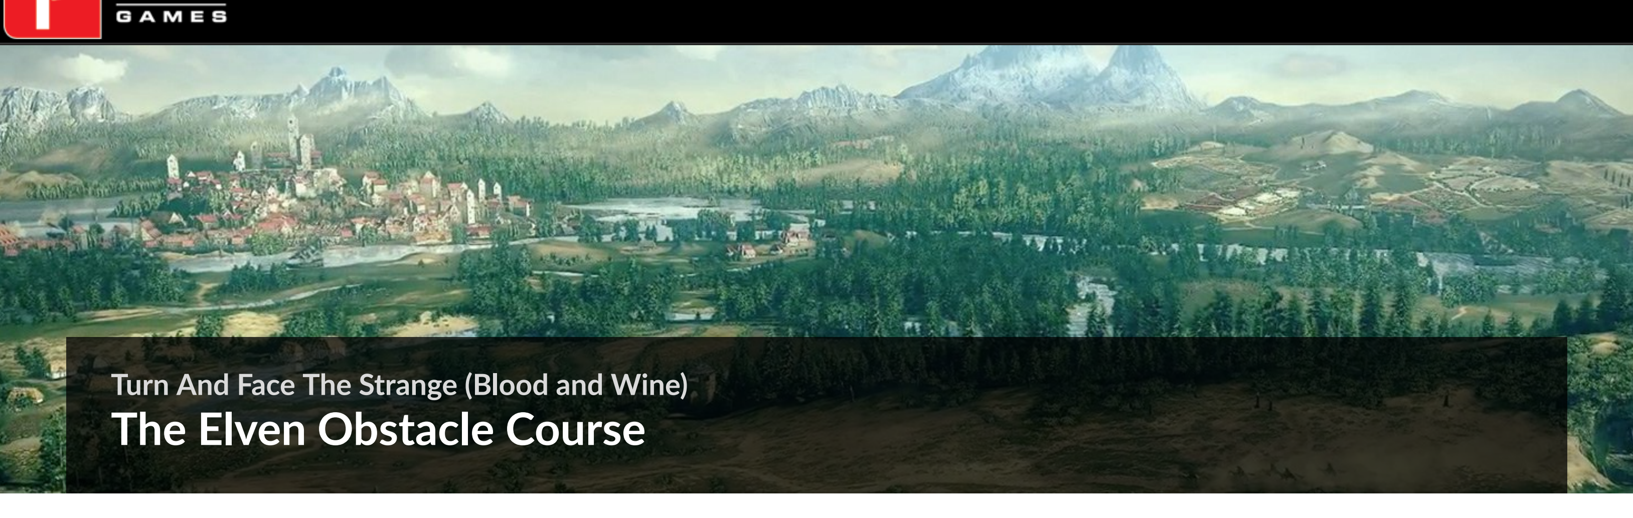
TURN AND FACE THE STRANGE

Search for Moreau's grave at Orlémurs Cemetery using your Witcher Senses.

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to follow the grave robber's trail.
- Check the location of Naev-de on the map Yennefer sent you.

Use your Witcher Senses to discover a set of shallow footprints leading away from the grave, but the trail is lost when you reach the road. Only the map can further your progress, while the headstone referenced "Aelirenn" and "Dol Naev'de," as well as "Valley of the Nine." After checking the map, it seems the Sansretour River flows through the area where the Valley of the Nine once lay.



Turn And Face The Strange (Blood and Wine)

The Elven Obstacle Course

OBJECTIVES

- Search for the entrance to the professor's laboratory in the flooded ruins of the Valley of the Nine.

Almost due east of the cemetery, along the southern shore of the Sansretour River, between the Mere-Lachaiselongue Cemetery and Toussaint Prison, is a stretch of water with something mysterious hidden beneath the surface. Take a boat or swim out to the investigation area, and dive down. Beware of Drowners (notch a crossbow bolt if you need to retaliate).

BELOW
TURN AND FACE THE STRANGE
Search for the entrance to the professor's laboratory in the flooded ruins of the Valley of the Nine.

You discover the sunken remains of an elven ruin! Not only that, but if you swim around to the north side of the main, cross-shaped structure, there's a shimmering portal, ready to transport you into the ruins. Swim in, if you dare!

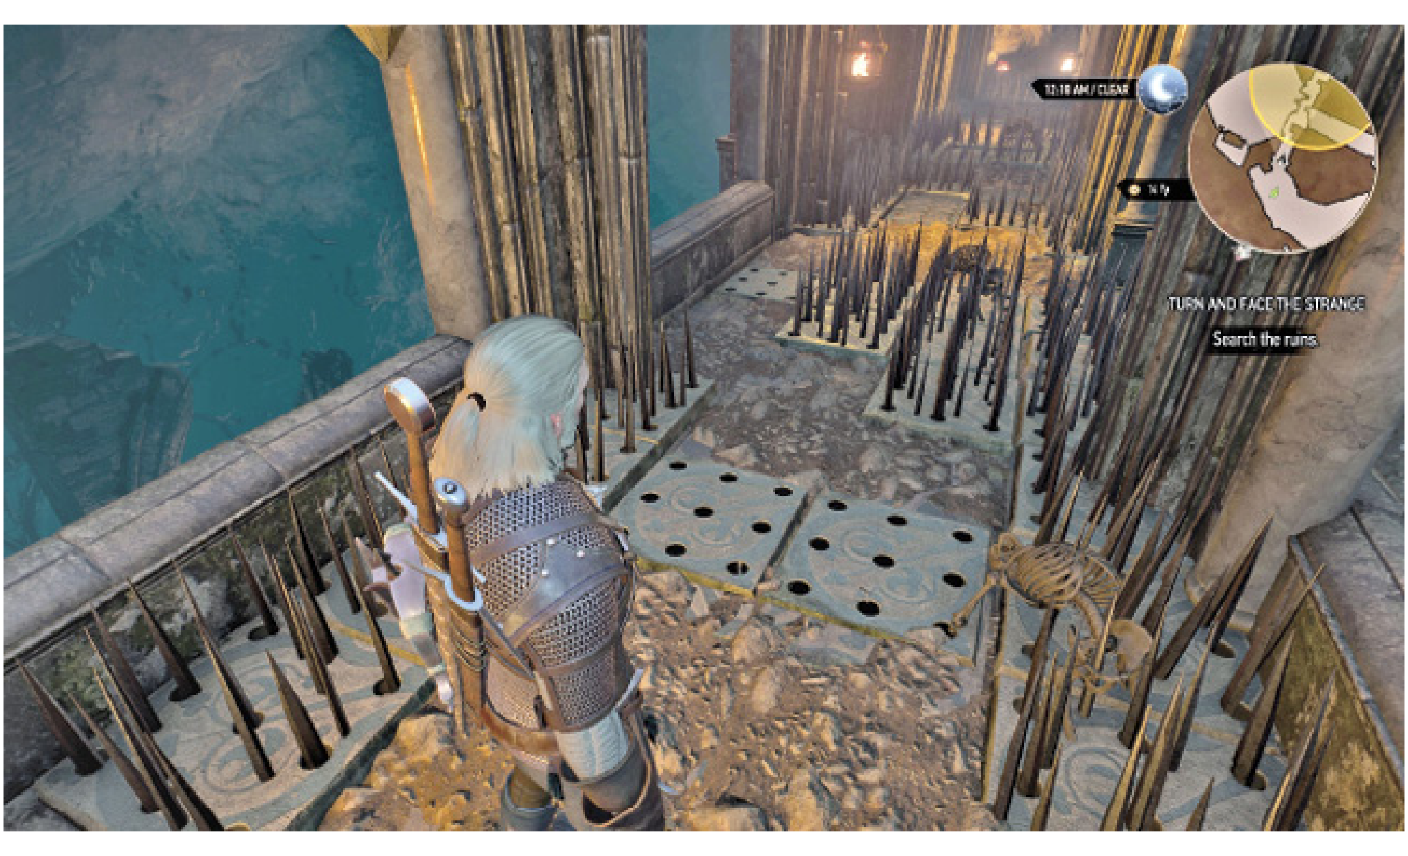
DOL NAEV'DE: BRIDGE OF SPIKES

OBJECTIVES

- Search the ruins.

You appear inside the ruins of Dol Naev'de, and must start exploring. Optionally check the entrance area for some skeletal remains to loot, then press forward, down some steps, passing a second skeleton near some rock ore you can loot. Head to a large cavern, and a bridge of floor spikes.

At the first and second floor tile of spikes, time your walk to step over the spikes as they are retracting.



At the set of four tile spikes moving in unison, use Quen to protect yourself, walk across the first two when they retract, then jump across the rest.

At the set of six tile spikes moving in unison, use Quen, walk across the first two tiles when they retract, ignore the "path" of spikes and instead leap over the stationary spikes ahead of you. Alternatively, avoid the spikes altogether by dropping down a ledge on the right shortly before them. Use your Witcher Senses to detect the grave robber's passage and go right or left, parallel to the bridge.

At this point, you can turn right and continue your descent. Or, you can optionally use Quen, and make a quick couple of jumps (with a roll to finish) across a large number of moving spikes to a chest with some better loot inside, at the end of the bridge.

THE LOOTING OF DOL NAEV'DE

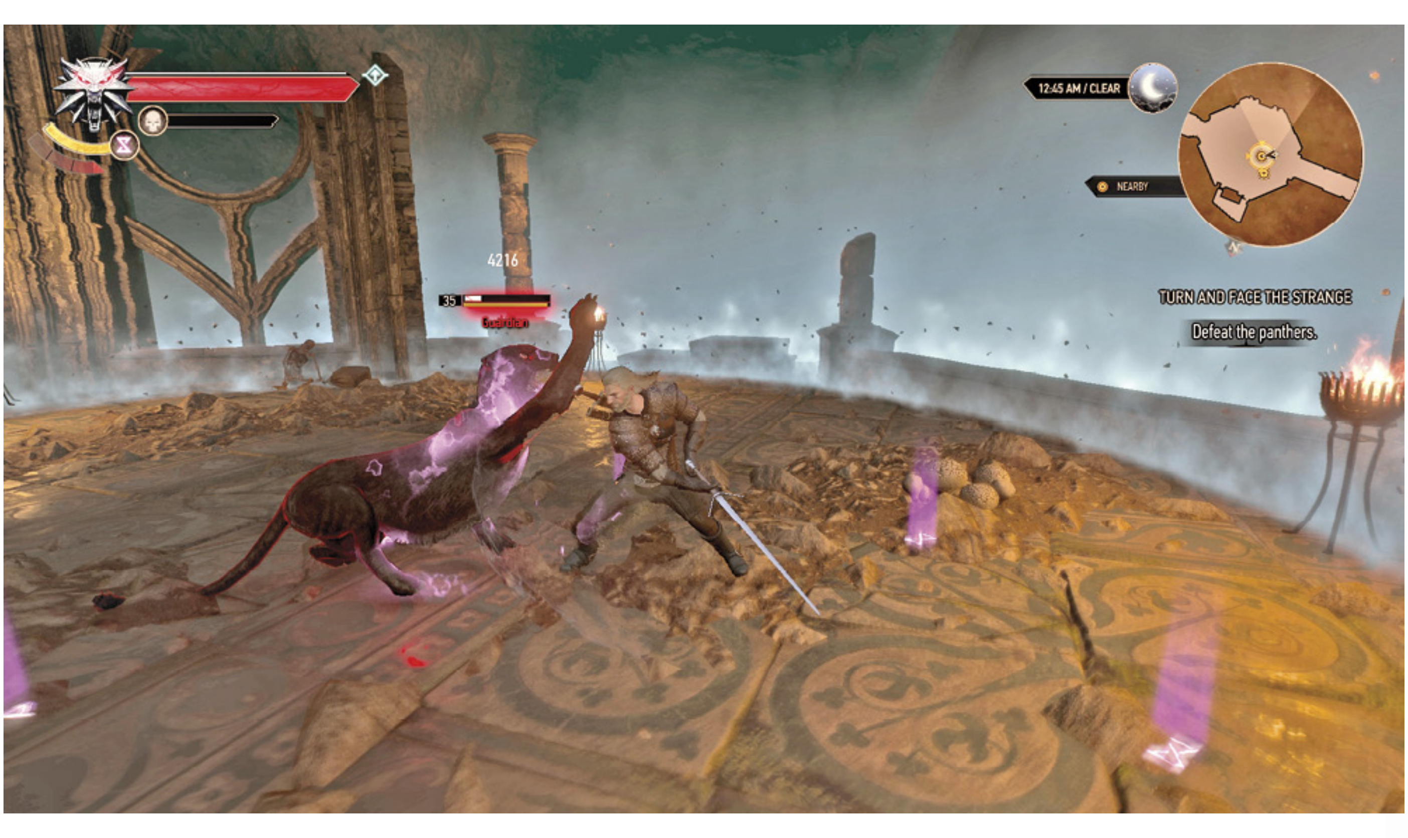
The ruins have intermittent looting places where you might find skeletal remains, as well as small ore deposits. Feel free to loot as you go.

DOL NAEV'DE: GUARDIAN PANTHERS

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the guardians.
- Find a way into Professor Moreau's laboratory.

Head down the steps, dropping down to another impressive bridge structure, and walk into the circular platform, which suddenly seals up, and two Guardian Panthers transform from stone to flesh. Treat them as you would a normal fight with a big cat (see Bestiary entry), though these are specters, and require a different oil to coat your blade with. When both guardians are dispatched, the magical barrier dissipates.



OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the Guardian.

Continue east, up the steps, and into a chamber with a hole in the floor to your right, near a candle-filled altar to a long-forgotten deity. Ahead, the corridor continues to another hole, before a rock fall prevents your progress. Drop into the sagging floor to discover a small mining tunnel underneath, some implements, and (using your Witcher Senses) some blood-soaked rags from a wounded grave robber, near a lantern. Head along the tunnel of broken walls moving southwards, passing a skeleton, until you find Professor Moreau's diary lying in an extinguished camp fire, close to a crossbow.

Items: Professor Moreau's diary, Crossbow

It seems the robber triggered a trap, as in front of you is a giant, globe-like boulder that has fallen through the floor. Climb it, and peer into a circular chamber with a Guardian panther statue in it. It doesn't take a genius to figure out you have another fight on your hands!

DOL NAEV'DE: DOOR OF STONES

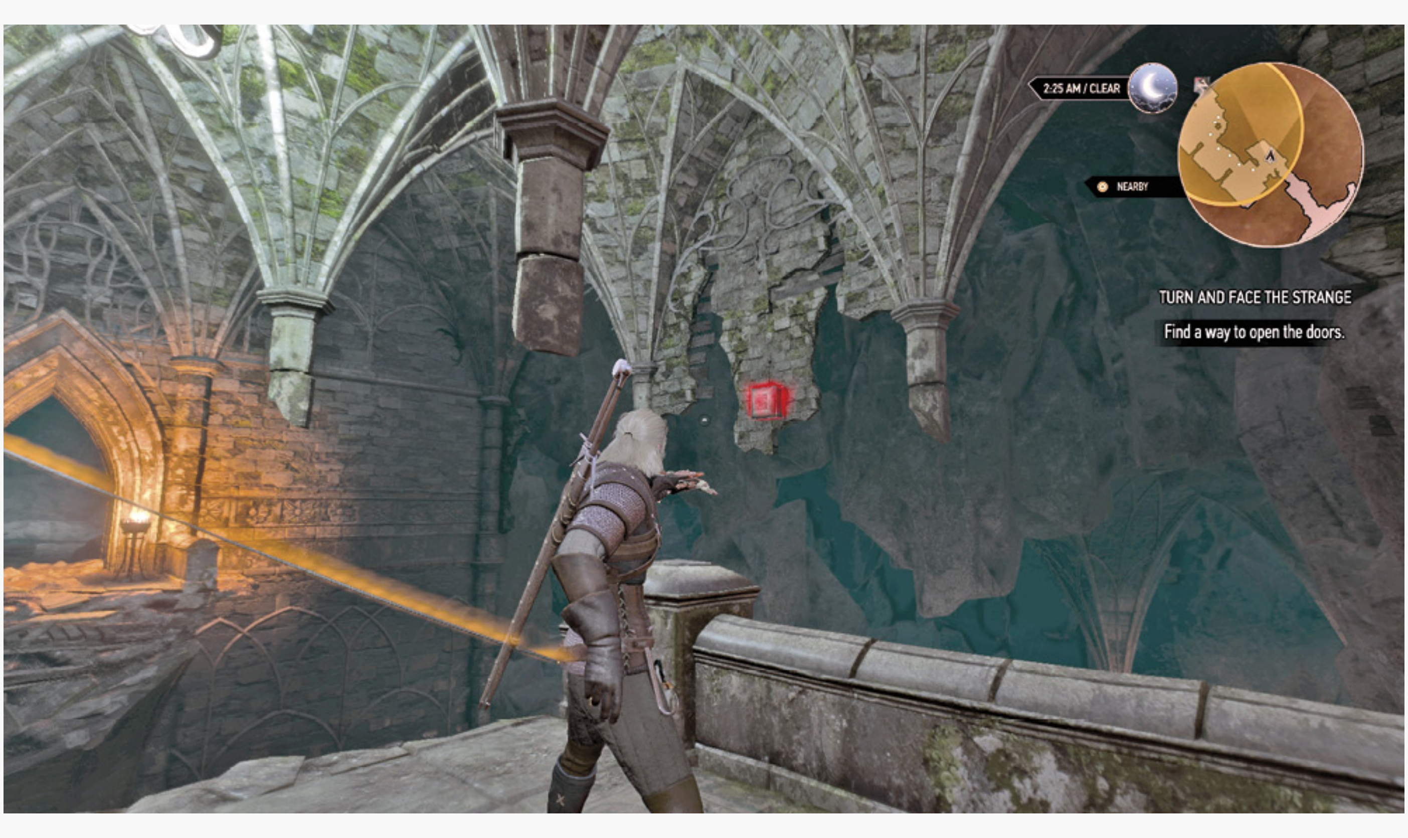
OBJECTIVES

- Go deeper into the ruins.

Once you've dispatched the Guardian panther and the magical barrier recedes, head south, into an adjoining chamber with some particularly unsafe flooring! Watch you don't fall to your death as you inspect the remains of this bridge balcony over a high chasm, and locate the following using your Witcher Senses:

- A column with rope tied to one end, and the other down below on a ledge you can't reach.
- A locked door at the south end of the balcony. If you've read the notes, they mention "four protruding stones."
- Four protruding stone blocks, poking out of each of the walls, which glow red when you use your Witcher Senses.

Produce your crossbow (or return to where you find the diary notes and grab the crossbow there), and aim a bolt at each of the four protruding blocks. You can alternatively use bombs, or even Aard, on the first three, the last one being out of reach. The locked door rumbles open: Success!



DOL NAEV'DE: CHAMBERS OF PORTALS

OBJECTIVES

- Find Professor Moreau's laboratory.
- Find a way to go forward.
- Defeat the gargoyle.

Step through the arched door you just unlocked, and into a large and ornate circular chamber of many arched alcoves, with a central cowled statue to gaze at. Don't gaze for long though; a Gargoyle transforms from stone to attack! When you've demolished this foe, search it for a gargoyle paw. Now peer around the statue with your Witcher Senses, and place the gargoyle paw on the vase-shaped plinth. It slowly descends, triggering…portals. Great.

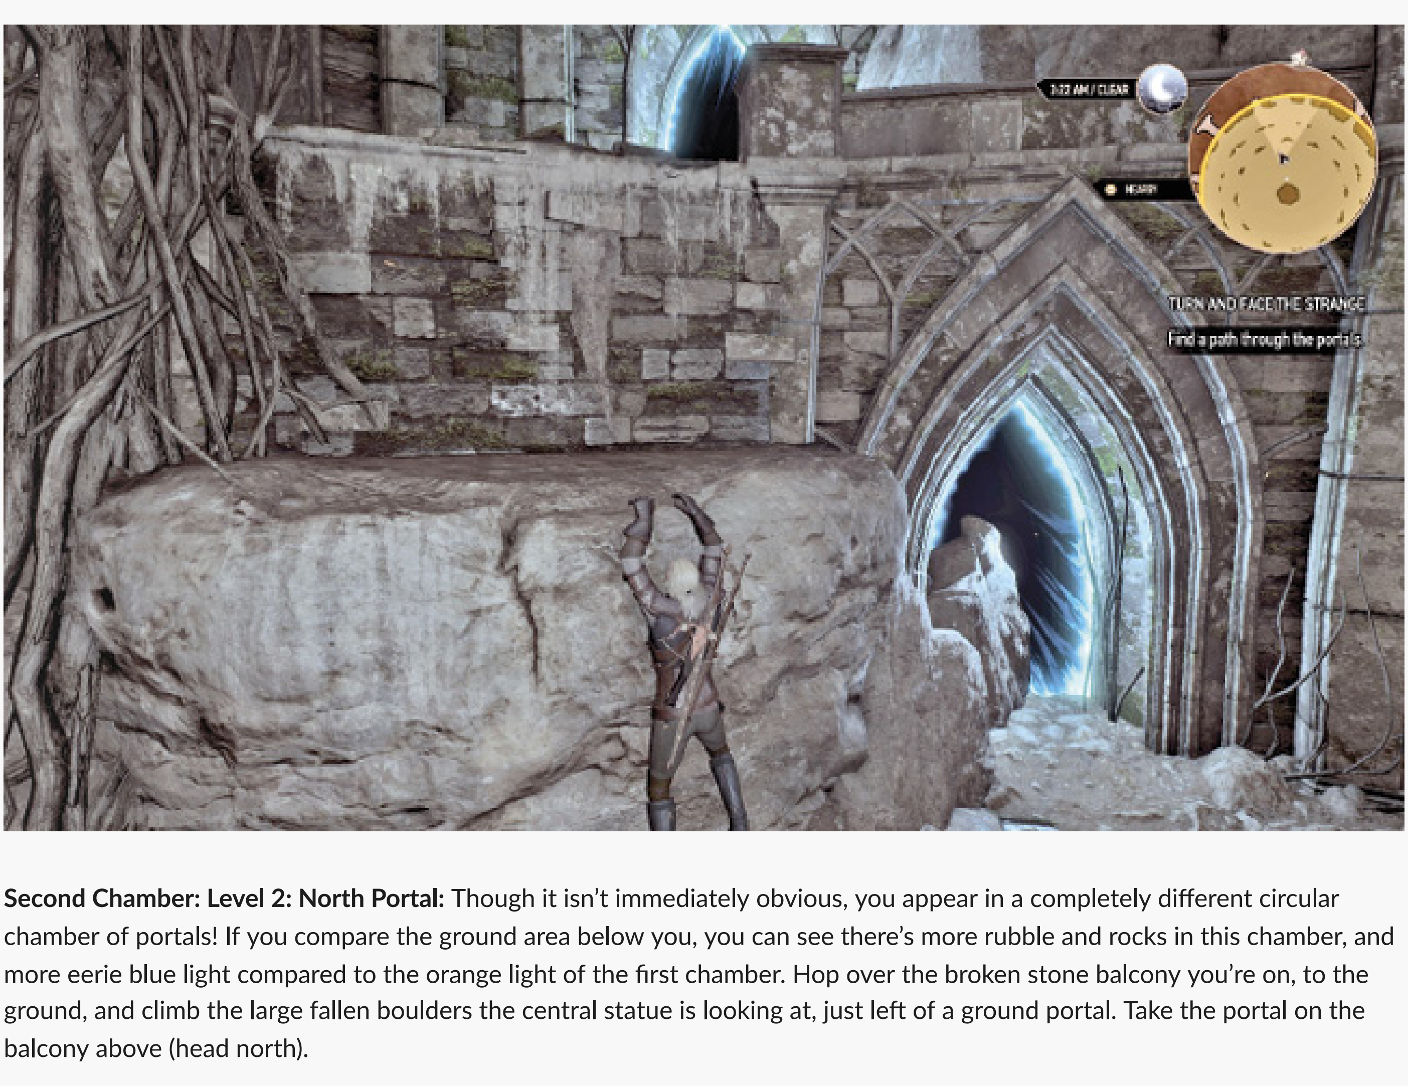
Items: Gargoyle paw

OBJECTIVES

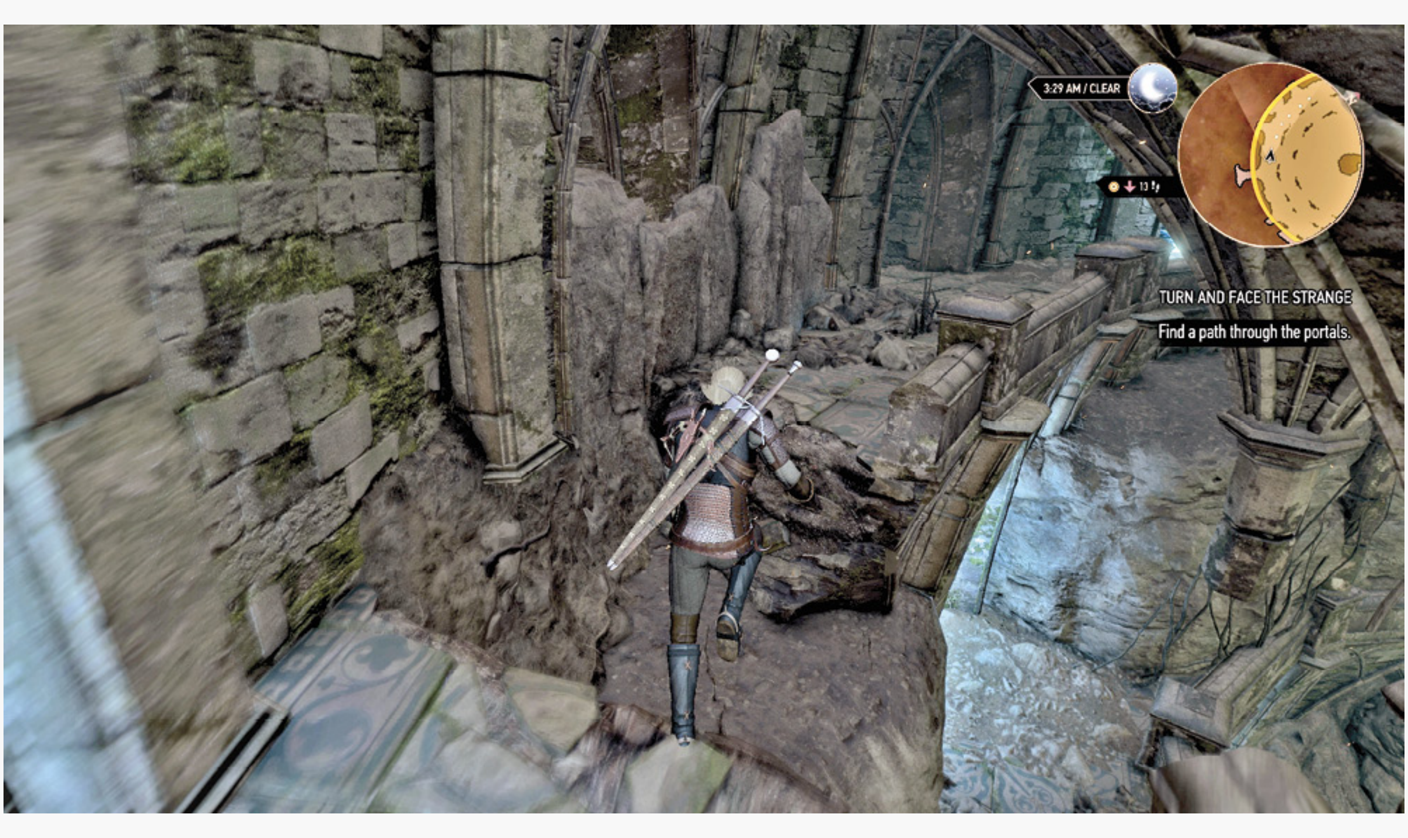
- Find a path through the portals.

Portals have appeared in many of the alcoves on this level, and the two circular balcony levels above you. The only way is up, and as you'd expect, all but one of the portals on each level progresses you forward; while the others deposit you back where you fought the gargoyle. The path to further your progress is as follows:

First Chamber: Level 1: East Portal: Take the portal one alcove clockwise from the room entrance you came from. The central cowled statue faces this portal.



Second Chamber: Level 2: North Portal: Though it isn't immediately obvious, you appear in a completely different circular chamber of portals! If you compare the ground area below you, you can see there's more rubble and rocks in this chamber, and more eerie blue light compared to the orange light of the first chamber. Hop over the broken stone balcony you're on, to the ground, and climb the large fallen boulders the central statue is looking at, just left of a ground portal. Take the portal on the balcony above (head north).



Third Chamber: Level 3: Northwest Portal: You appear in a brand new circular chamber (peer down and you'll see vegetation below). Remain on this upper stone balcony, and run clockwise around the edge of it, ignoring the first two portals on your left, and leaping the gap below you. Land on the subsequent section of balcony, the one the statue is facing.

Ch-Ch-Ch-Ch-Changes

OBJECTIVES

- FUse your Witcher Senses to search the laboratory.
- (Optional) Find the missing megascope crystals (2).
- (Optional) Place the missing crystals in the megascope (2).ix

You've reached the laboratory of Professor Moreau. Now to conduct a search into exactly what he was researching. Discover the following using your Witcher Senses.

- A vat with the remains of an unwilling test subject.
- A piece of intriguing machinery; a contraption looking a little like an iron maiden, but you lack the knowledge to start it up.
- A bookcase with tomes on mutations and genetics. There's also a long, carved shelf with a row of preserved organs.
- A megascope with five entries to view. Entries #2 and #4 are missing the required megascope crystal. Assuming you've gathered the crystals, you can watch the late Professor explain his findings at each major point during his experimentation period.
- First Entry: The start of the Professor's great endeavor, begun to help save his son, Jerome. A device has been devised to study mutations in the hopes to reverse those that have plagued his child.
- Second Entry (Crystal required): Despite applying toxicity to his experimental subject, Moreau records no overdosing symptoms. His mutations allow better toxicity toleration!
- Third Entry: Research indicates the mutation must be applied continuously, and to prevent this from killing his subjects, he adds the albumen of a mutated giant centipede egg.
- Fourth Entry (Crystal required): A method is discovered by which one type of mutagen may be transmuted into another through the addition of ingredients.
- Fifth Entry: All the years of experiments are for nought! Each "cure" that was applied only deepened his mutations, further augmenting his speed and strength. What was a failure for Moreau could be a boon for you!

Items: Megascope crystal (2), Book: Witcher Mutations, Book: Centipedes

OBJECTIVES

- Acquire mutated giant centipede albumen.

It seems centipede albumen is likely the catalyst to help with your pursuance of augmenting yourself with the Professor's mutations. Look for the open cage door near the bookcase, and step through the hole in the wall to where the professor's centipedes have burrowed. Enter the cave and slaughter the two Pale Widow Giant Centipedes. If you're having trouble, consult the Bestiary entry. Head to the back (roughly south) of the cave, climb a rock ledge to an upper tunnel, and face a third Pale Widow. This one is guarding three egg sacs. Use your Witcher Senses to spot them, gather the albumen (only one is needed) and return to the laboratory.

OBJECTIVES

- Place the mutated giant centipede albumen in Professor Moreau's contraption and start the machinery.
- Take off your clothes and step into the contraption.

Locate the contraption that looks a little like an iron maiden, and open the hatch in the back, placing the albumen in there. The contraption opens up, but doesn't start up. Enter your Inventory Menu, and remove all your armor and swords. You can keep your pants and boots if you suffer from gymnophobia. Step into the contraption, and hold your breath...moments later, you are imbued with powerful new capabilities; mutations that normal men could never even hope to acquire! Welcome to the mutations system!

MUTATIONS AND YOU: WANT TO BE A BETTER MAN?

To learn more about Mutations, open the Character Panel Menu, and you' see a new Mutations Panel, as well as four additional ability slots! This brings the total number of abilities you can use at once from 12 to 16. Enter the Mutations Panel Menu, and discover 12 powerful new Mutations you can research using Ability Points and Greater Mutagens.

Learn more about all the Mutations, including recipes to obtain different Mutagens, and alchemy to change a mutagen's color, in the Training chapter of this guide, on page 44.

Acquire Ability points to spend on Mutagen research by leveling up, finding Places of Power, and completing two quests. See page 60 for more details.

Complete Secondary Quest: No Place Like Home, improve the Corvo Bianco Greenhouse, and grow herbs specifically tailored to creating Mutagens. Look for that quest.

OBJECTIVES

- Leave Professor Moreau's laboratory.

All that remains is to leave this elven ruin, and you're fortunate that an exit portal is accessible at the end of the laboratory corridor to the northeast. Find the crystal on the right wall, and charge it using a blast of Aard. This opens the portal. Step through, and you appear underwater, on the opposite side to the portal you entered the ruins from. This quest concludes, though you're only getting started researching your Mutations!

EXTREME COSPLAY

LOCATIONS: Francollarts, Gelenser Farm, Doren Alma Estate (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: Gaston

ENEMIES: Living Statues

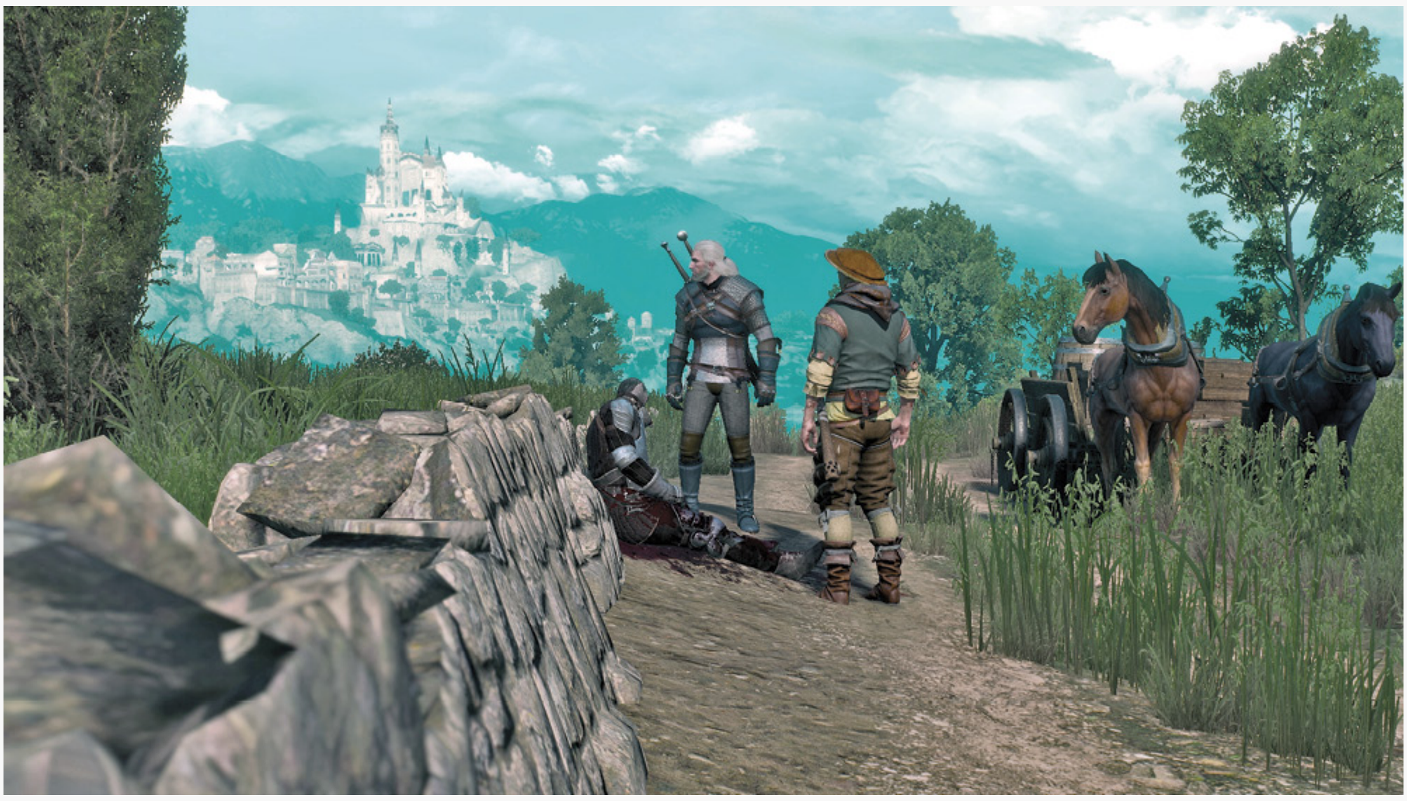
OBJECTIVES

- Follow the tracks of the murdered man using your Witcher Senses.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible at any point during your exploration of Toussaint, though it is easiest to complete when you're heading from the Mere-Lachaiselongue Cemetery to the Trastamara Hunting Cottage during Main Quest: La Cage au Fou.

On the tree-lined hillsides of southwest Caroberta Woods, just off the main road between Francollarts and Gelenser Farm, is a side track leading to the entrance to the Doren Alma Estate. At the threshold of the estate entrance, a merchant named Gaston is tending to a slumped knight, though when you arrive the knight has already passed on. Gaston the merchant explains he heard screams. Answer as you wish. Tell Gaston you plan to figure out what killed the knight if you wish to start this quest. Gaston plans to tag along too.



The "knight" was wearing a breastplate that looked like an antique. Use your Witcher Senses to uncover a blood trail leading to the house on the hill. Approach the Doren Alma Estate.

To the left of the door is a spot where the knight fell, breaking his legs. The helm sits there, near the ruined gate the knight didn't quite manage to break apart. Fortunately, you have Aard to cast, and the door splinters open. Enter the estate grounds.

OBJECTIVES

- Investigate the estate grounds using your Witcher Senses.

The tiered formal gardens show signs of a struggle. Use your Witcher Senses, and follow the trail of clues:

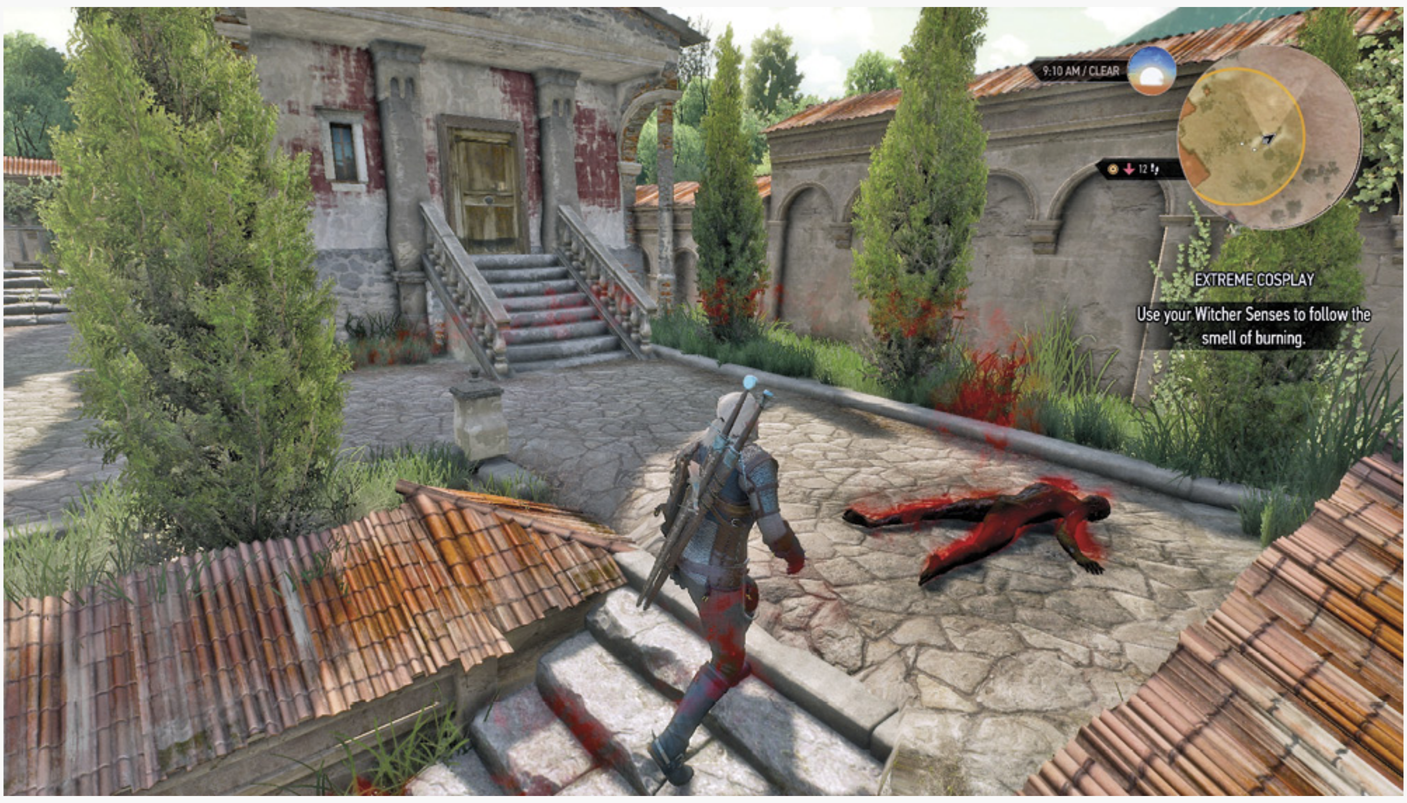
- An immolated man slumped by the main door.
- Overturned tables and benches show signs of seating for a banquet.
- A dead servant, stabbed to death with some blows taking place after death.
- A small table with silver tableware and Elven engravings.
- Between the statues is another corpse; this one punctured with great force. He wears an identical breastplate to the dead "knight" on the high road.
- Another corpse shows signs of throat massacre with a mighty blow. By the body is a sword and shield that look ceremonial.
- Either side of the "throne" chair are ceremonial bowls.
- Over by the far corner, on the two benches are a bowl of fruit and a book. Gather the book, and read it if you wish.

Items: Book: Civil War in Toussaint

- Near the fountain (which contains florens) are burn marks and a strong stench.
- A slumped corpse at the foot of the steps shows puncture wounds. He's wearing elven attire.

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to follow the smell of burning.



Once you examine the patch of burned ground, you can start to follow the smell of burning.

- At the top of the steps is a corpse of a man who fled while on fire.
- At the foot of the manor house is a scorched doublet.
- There are sounds from inside the house. Follow the smell of burning to the rear door, and knock on it. A clearly fearful man, still bearing signs of soot, peers out. Ask him whatever questions you wish. He is Lord Durand Fucher-Plamondon de Savarin, chairman of the Society of Friends of the History of Toussaint. He is in this current predicament because of "spirits." The society was in the middle of staging a scene (the elf Divethaf paying homage; the surrender of Toussaint's last elven king) when he saw fire and fled. You surmise the society accidentally summoned a specter. In order to rid Durand of this menace, the reenactment needs to be performed again. With a Witcher!

OBJECTIVES

- Light all the lamps in the garden (6).

A few hours later, Durand de Savarin has set up the lower grounds for the newest reenactment, and is playing the part of King Ludovic. You will play the Aen Seidhe ruler. But everyone must be in costume! While Gaston reads from his book, you are tasked with lighting all the torches in the garden. These are either side of the main path, between the statues, and two are either side of the fountain.

Items: Ceremonial Mask

OBJECTIVES

- Take a loaf of elven bread. Take a bottle of elven wine.
- Place an offering of elven bread and wine in front of Durand's throne.

Gaston reads the next passage, which talks of a gift of elven wine and bread. Use the large offering plates to place both items, which are gathered from a small chest on the left side of the garden near one of the torches.

Items: Elven bread and wine

OBJECTIVES

- Pick up an elven sword and shield.
- Draw the elven sword and shield.
- Kneel before Durand.

Another passage is read aloud, as you locate an elven sword and shield. Both are located between the torch and the last statue on the right side, near Gaston. With both sword and shield in your Quest Items part of your inventory menu, equip them both (the sword takes the place of your steel weapon, and the shield sits next to the mask in your pocket). There are six to fight; four armed with long pikes and two with spells offering ranged combat. Treat these entities as you would ghostly bandits, and don't forget to reequip your best sword before starting cut down this squad of statues.

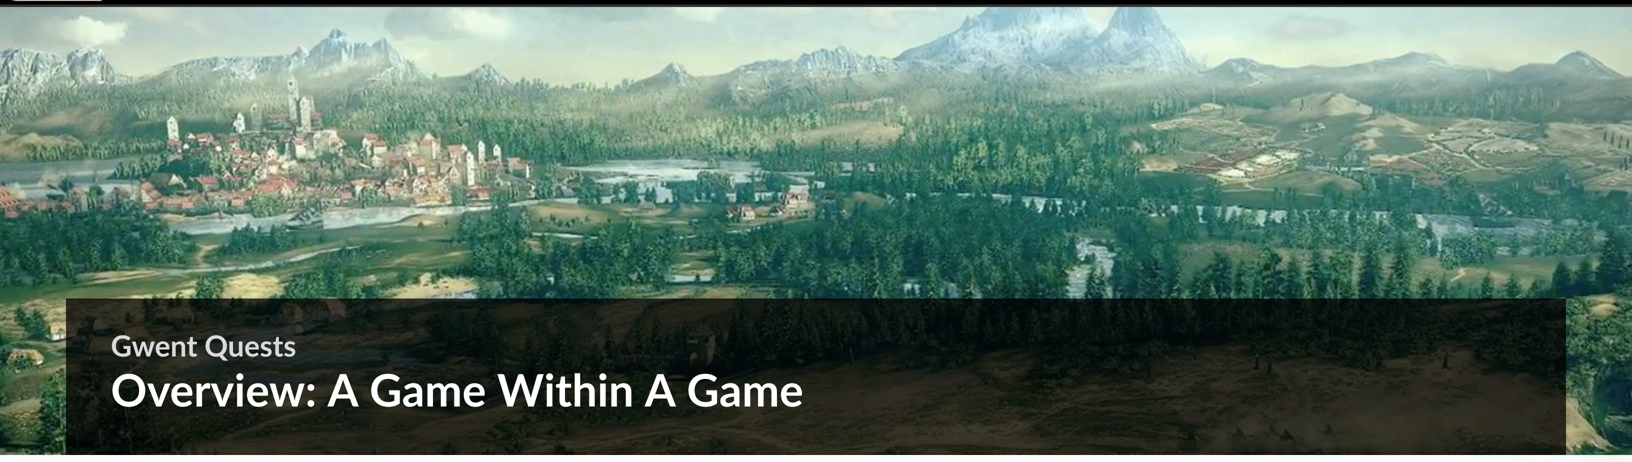
After combat concludes, Durand appears to know what these statues were; they once stood in the palace of Divethal and he only recently acquired them. These were his golems. Gaston has a few choice words for elves, which you can disagree with or ignore before you leave. Durand won't let you leave empty-handed; he hands you some coin before this quest concludes.



Gwent Quests

Overview: A Game Within A Game

From the revolting inns of Velen to the spectacular Royal Castle at Vizima, it seems anyone who is anyone is enjoying the dwarven card game known as Gwent. However, this enjoyable pastime can become hopelessly addictive when you realize there are a large number of cards to find to bolster your deck, improve your chances of victory, and complete your collection. While innkeepers and merchants may sell some cards, the following quests allow you to gather many high-value cards, which are critical to your collection.

Before you start your search for Gwent cards, here are a few tactical tips to help you:

ON THE CARDS: GWENT COLLECTING TIPS

Gwent cards are acquired in a number of ways. Be sure you thoroughly inspect the Complete Card Checklist (starting on page 782), and the Gwentlefolk of the Northern Realms (page 800) to further your search. In general, remember to find cards from the following places:

In your Base Deck: You begin with a fair number of cards (mainly from the Northern Realms deck) which you should employ in your initial games.

Purchased: Some cards can be bought from a vendor (a merchant, innkeep, or other shop owner) at a variety of locations.

Won (Randomly): Some cards are won when you find a Gwent player, challenge them to a game, and beat them for the first time. You claim their card, which is random. Most of these Gwent players are no-name fans of the game, and almost always merchants, armorers, blacksmiths, herbalists, and the like.

Found: When a player becomes “indisposed,” usually through death, you may find their cards left behind.

Won (Specifically: Gwent Quest): Some cards are acquired during the Gwent Quests listed in this chapter. You face individuals in the different realms, one after the other, and acquire their cards when you beat them.

Won (Specifically, Secondary Quest): There are cards to acquire during a couple of Secondary Quests too. These are listed in the adjacent table. Secondary Quest: High Stakes is primarily about completing a Gwent tournament, and thus detailed in this section of the guide. Other Secondary Quests have Gwent cards or tournaments as a small part of an overriding quest, and are listed in the Secondary Quest chapter.

There is a simple pleasure in challenging Gwent players across these lands, and learning from them. Before returning and fleecing them for a card and coins, obviously.

OFF THE CARDS: KNOW WHEN TO HOLD ‘EM!

You may be wondering what happens if someone who is holding a unique Gwent card becomes “indisposed” (usually by dying). Do your chances of gathering cards vanish? Not usually; any foes that die or depart an area leave their cards in the place they are usually found, or give you their cards automatically.

For example, you may be attempting to locate Lambert, one of the Gwent players to challenge during Gwent Quest: Old Pals. Usually, you challenge him either at Kaer Morhen, or during Secondary Quest: Following the Thread, at the Seven Cats Inn.

However, if you started the Gwent Quest after Main Quest: The Battle of Kaer Morhen, and didn’t have an opportunity to talk to Lambert, he may have departed for pastures new. Fortunately, his card is still available (in this case, in the great hall at Kaer Morhen, by Lambert’s bed).

OFF THE CARDS: DON’T BE COY: PLAY MY GAME!

Sometimes you’ll be chatting with a particular character in the hopes of starting a Gwent bout, but the conversation topic never comes up. Why? Because you either have to exhaust all other conversation topics first, or you’ve visited the character out of order, and there are previous characters to win cards from first. Remember this!

Gwent Quests

Available Quests

There are a total of ten quests specifically related to Gwent, and all of them are freeform in nature. In addition, there are five Secondary Quests where one or more Gwent cards form part of the reward structure, and are usually the only chance of obtaining specific cards. Secondary Quest: High Stakes is detailed after the Gwent Quests. The other Secondary Quests are in their appropriate part of the Secondary Quests chapter Finally, when you visit the Duchy of Toussaint, there are two more Gwent quests involving the brand new Skellige Clans deck.

Gwent: Playing Innkeeps

Playing For (Inn) Keeps

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

GWENT: PLAYING INNKEEPS

LOCATIONS: The Alchemy Inn (Oxenfurt), Inn at the Crossroads, The Kingfisher Inn (Novigrad)

CHARACTERS: Stjepan, Innkeep, Olivier

BEGINNING THIS QUEST

This quest becomes available when you visit Stjepan the Innkeep of the Alchemy Inn, Oxenfurt. Feel free to start this quest as early as possible, during Act I of the Main Quests when you are first exploring Velen. Of the three available Innkeeps, Olivier may be "indisposed."

Name of Innkeep	Location	Deck Faction Used	Possibly Indisposed?	Gwent Card to Win
Stjepan	The Alchemy Inn (Oxenfurt)	Nilfgaardian Empire	No	Yennefer of Vengerberg
Innkeep	Inn at the Crossroads (Velen: Mudplough)	Nilfgaardian Empire	No	Menno Coehoorn
Olivier	The Kingfisher Inn (Novigrad)	Monster	Yes	Tibor Eggebracht

STJEPAN: ACTION AT THE ALCHEMY INN

OBJECTIVE:

- Win Stjepan's unique card.

Stjepan (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

In areas where there's an inn—the more populated villages and towns across Velen, Novigrad, and Skellige—there is sometimes an innkeep with some Gwent cards to sell or win. However, some Innkeeps are particularly proficient at Gwent, and have a unique card to play for. The first one to choose is Stjepan. Visit the second city of Oxenfurt, and locate the Alchemy Inn (toward the center of town) to challenge him. Remember to purchase the cards he has for sale at the earliest point (to augment your deck).

Stjepan favors the Nilfgaardian Empire. Beat him, and claim the following card. Afterward, you can challenge the remaining two Innkeeps in either order.

Items: Gwent Card: Yennefer of Vengerberg (Neutral Card)

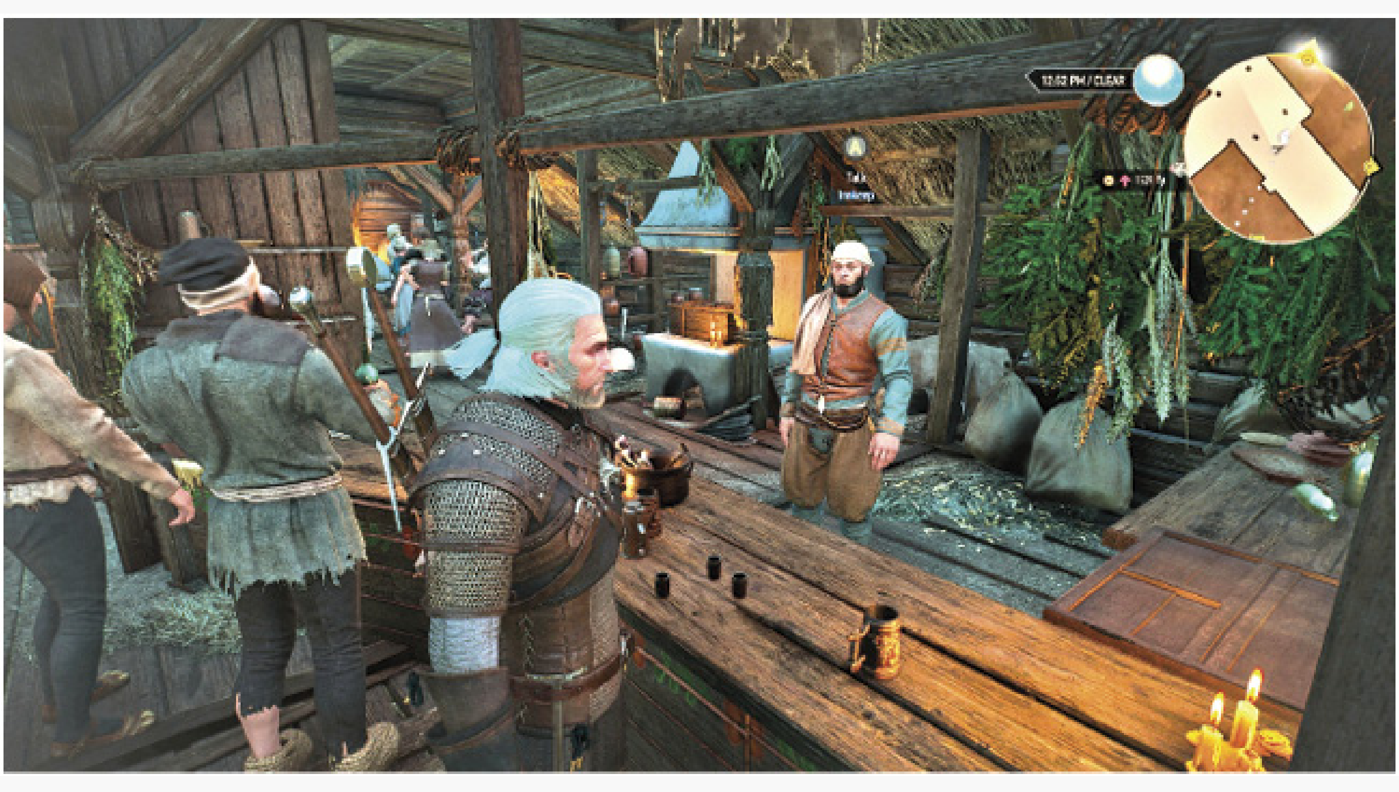
INNKEEP: CROSSING PATHS AT THE CROSSROADS

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from the Innkeep at the Inn at the Crossroads.

Innkeep (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

Journey to war-torn Velen, and locate the Inn at the Crossroads in southern Mudplough territory. After talking to the Innkeep about the Baron and his men and purchasing the Gwent cards he has for sale, speak to him again and request a game of Gwent. When you beat his Nilfgaardian deck, you receive the following card:



Items: Gwent Card: Menno Coehoorn (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

OLIVIER: THE CARDS ARE STACKED AT THE KINGFISHER

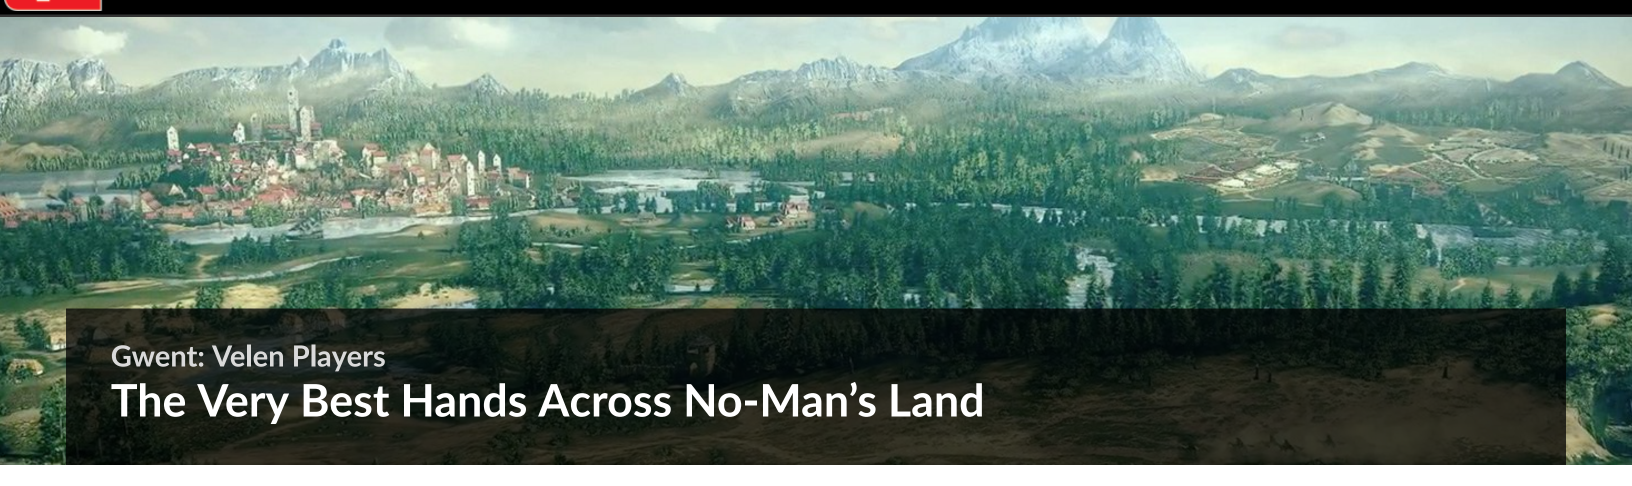
OBJECTIVE:

- Win Olivier's unique card.

Olivier (Monster Deck)

Head to Hierarch Square, and locate the Kingfisher Inn at the northeast corner of the square. Enter and speak to Olivier; make sure you purchase all the Gwent cards he is selling too! Then challenge Olivier to the final match. If you already completed Secondary Quest: Now or Never, Olivier may be indisposed. If this is the case, you cannot purchase any cards from him, but you can claim his unique card; check the back room in this Inn. Beat Olivier's Monster deck and you receive the final available Gwent card for this quest.

Items: Gwent Card: Tibor Eggebracht (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)



Gwent: Velen Players

The Very Best Hands Across No-Man's Land

DANGER ALERT
SPOILER ALERT
GWENT: VELEN PLAYERS

LOCATIONS: Crow's Perch, Benek, Oreton, Midcopse

CHARACTERS: Baron Phillip Strenger, Old Sage, Boatwright, Haddy

THE BLOODY BARON: DON'T BE A STRENGER

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from the baron.

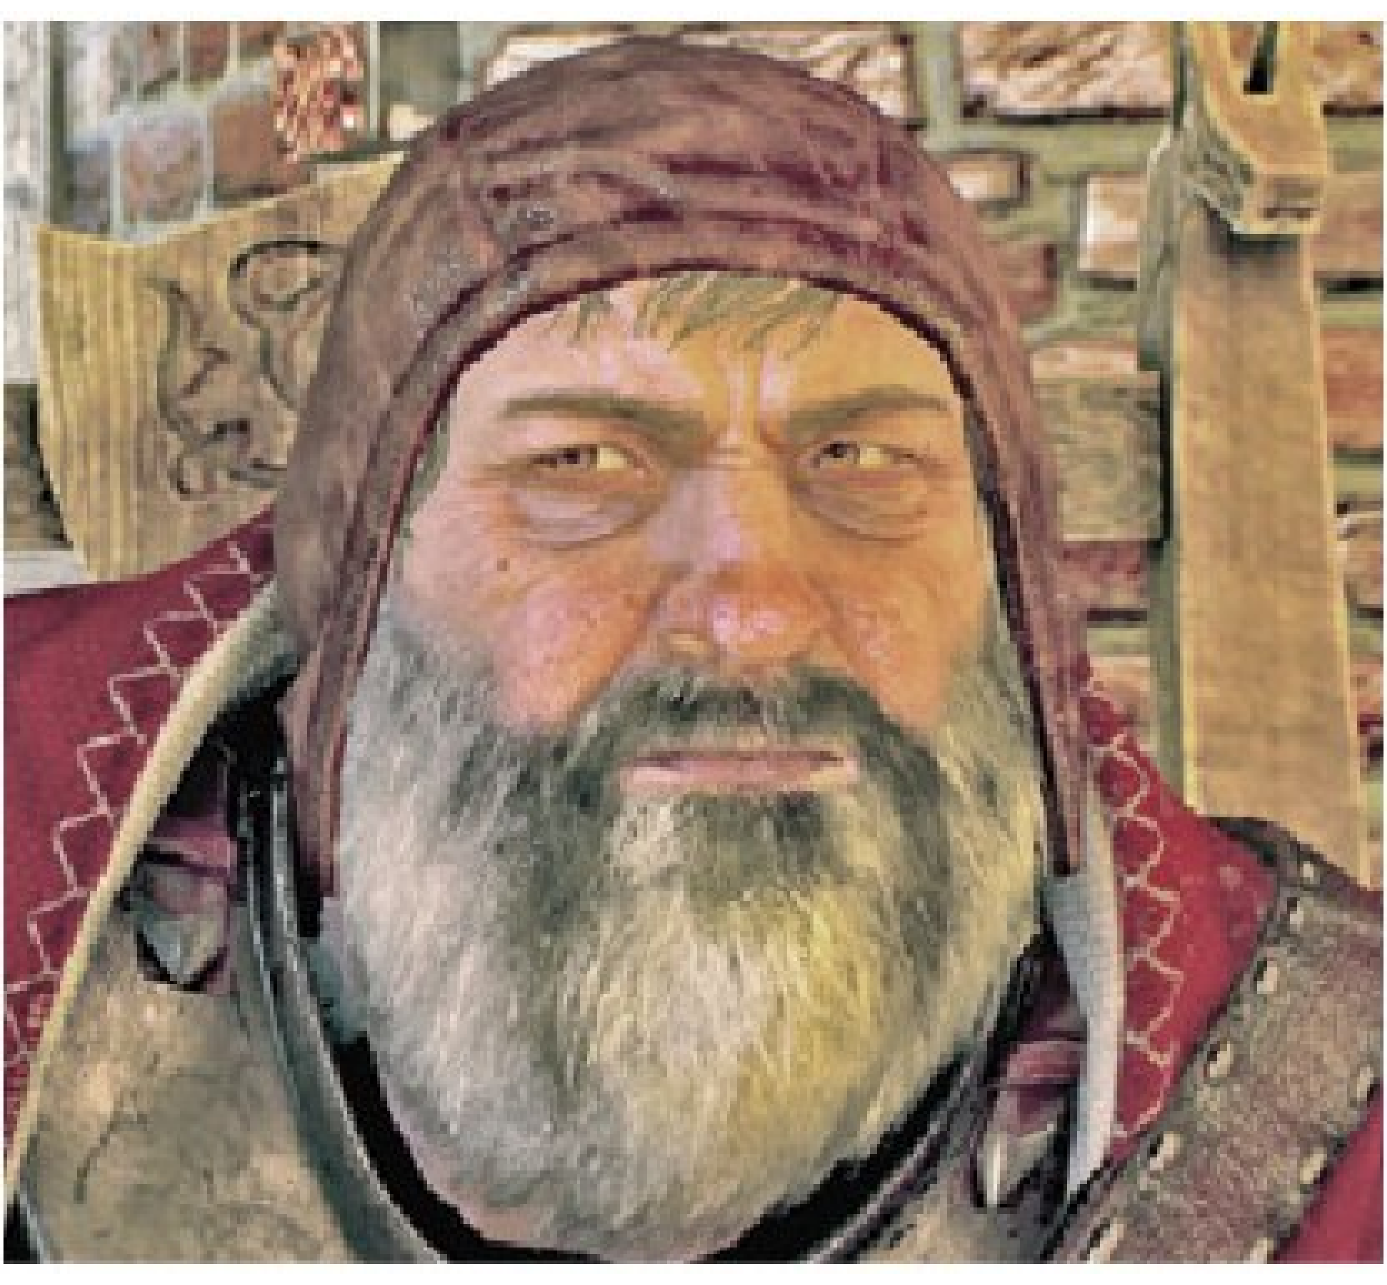
BEGINNING THIS QUEST

This quest becomes available when you visit Baron Phillip Strenger after completing Main Quest: Bloody Baron. It is advisable to challenge the Baron before starting Secondary Quest: Return to Crookback Bog (as this is when the Baron's fate is sealed, and he becomes "indisposed").

Start the quest by visiting the Notice Board in Crow's Perch, and read the notice entitled "Gwent: Looking for New Players." This prompts you to find the Bloody Baron and begin your first bout. Of the four available players in Velen, the Baron may be "indisposed."

Name of Player	Location	Deck Faction Used	Possibly Indisposed?	Gwent Card to Win
Baron Phillip Strenger	Crow's Perch	Northern Realms	Yes	Sigismund Dijkstra
Old Sage (Soothsayer)*	Benek	Monster	No	Crone: Weavess
Boatwright*	Oreton	Nilfgaardian Empire	No	Letho of Gulet
Haddy	Midcopse	Northern Realms	No	Vernon Roche, Eredin: Bringer of Death

Beat either the Old Sage or the Boatwright (or both) to access Haddy Beat the last of the four players and finish the quest to claim the Eredin card*

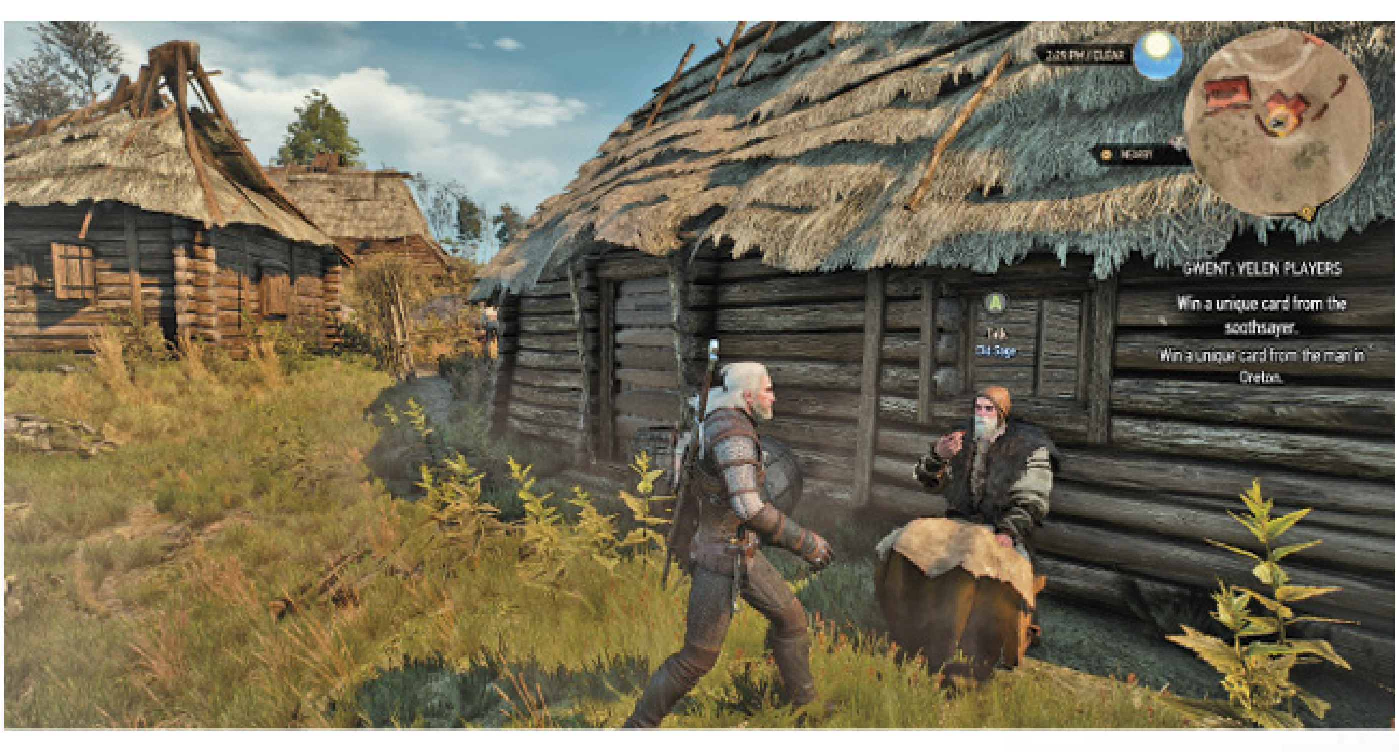


Baron Phillip Strenger (Northern Realms Deck)

After reading about a local Gwent group, first on your "to fleece" list is the Bloody Baron himself; you'll find him in his main hall, in the upper stronghold at Crow's Perch. However, if you started Secondary Quest: Return to Crookback Bog, finish this up first, and once the Baron has met his fate, look for a tiny chest on a sideboard in the hall instead, which has notes of who is next to face. Whether you challenge the Baron or not, you receive the following card, and the ability to challenge both the Old Sage of Benek, and the Boatmaker of Oreton.

Items: Gwent Card: Sigismund Dijkstra (Northern Realms Deck)

OLD SAGE: THE SOOTHSAYER SUBMITS



2:25 PM / CLEAR
GWENT: VELEN PLAYERS
Win a unique card from the soothsayer.
Win a unique card from the man in Oreton.
Talk
Old Sage

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from the soothsayer.

Journey to the eastern hamlet of Benek, and locate the Old Sage sitting outside his cottage. Bring some food with you in case the geezer requests some sustenance. The Old Sage has a quest (Secondary Quest: The Truth is in the Stars), but it doesn't need to be completed first. Challenge him and secure the following from his Monster deck. Then you can challenge Haddy.

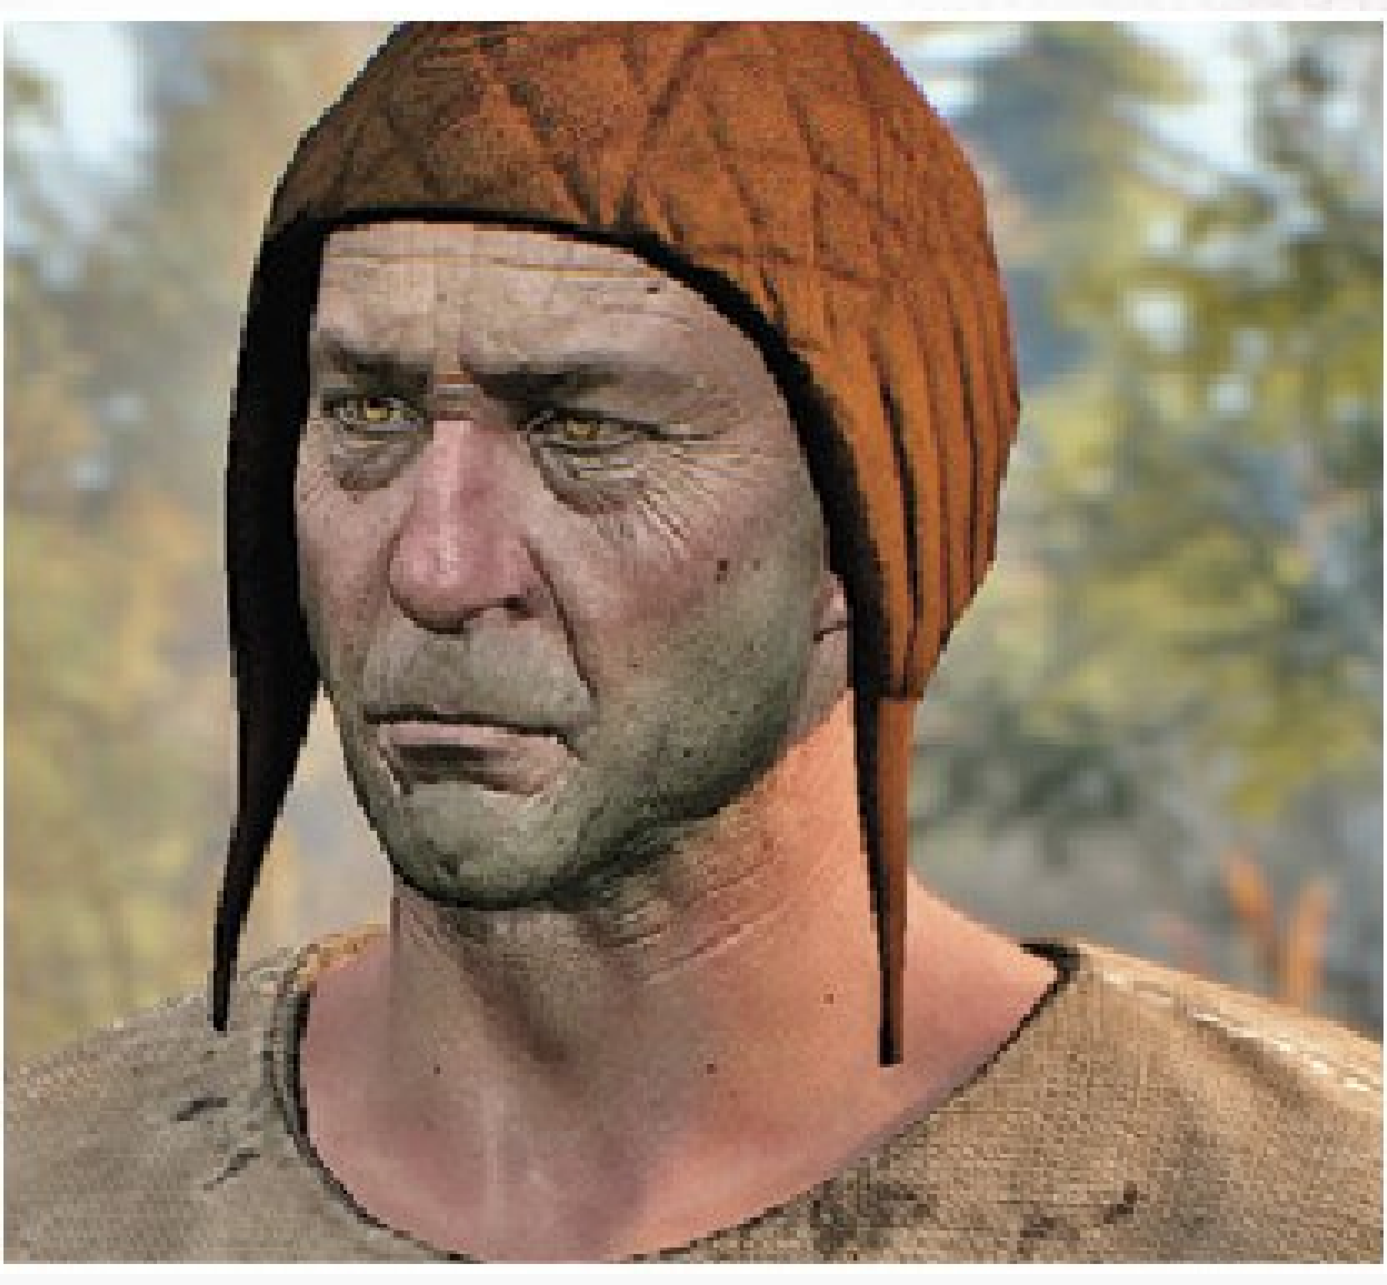
Items: Gwent Card: Crone: Weavess (Monster Deck)

BOATWRIGHT: DON'T BET ON THE BLACK ONES

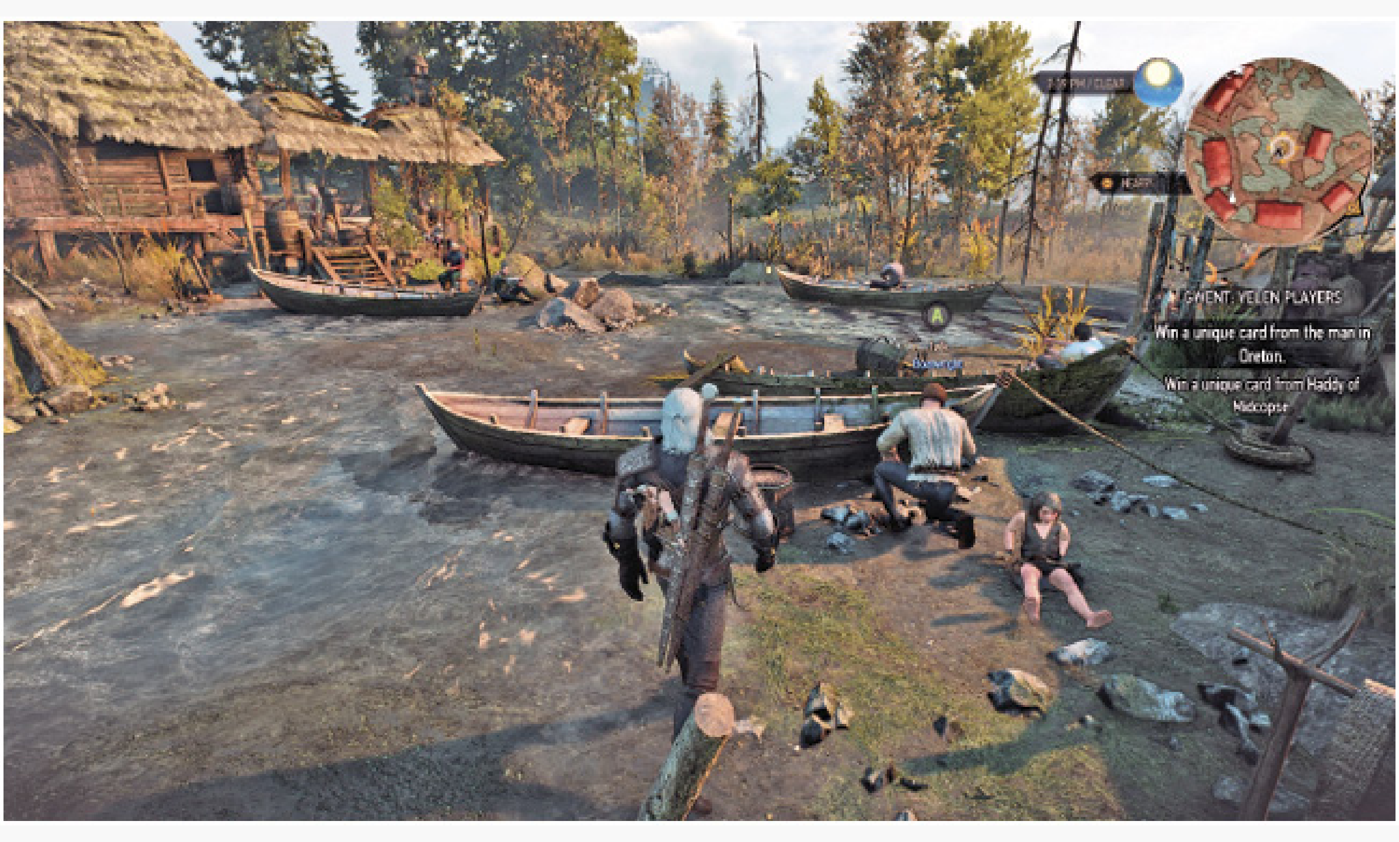
OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from the man in Oreton.



Boatwright (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

In southern Velen, on the northern shore of Lake Wyndamer, is a Boatwright who's happy to challenge you to a Gwent battle. Perhaps it's the Black Ones who have commandeered the village that persuaded him to pick a Nilfgaardian Empire deck? It matters not; claim victory and the following card. At this point, you can also challenge Haddy.



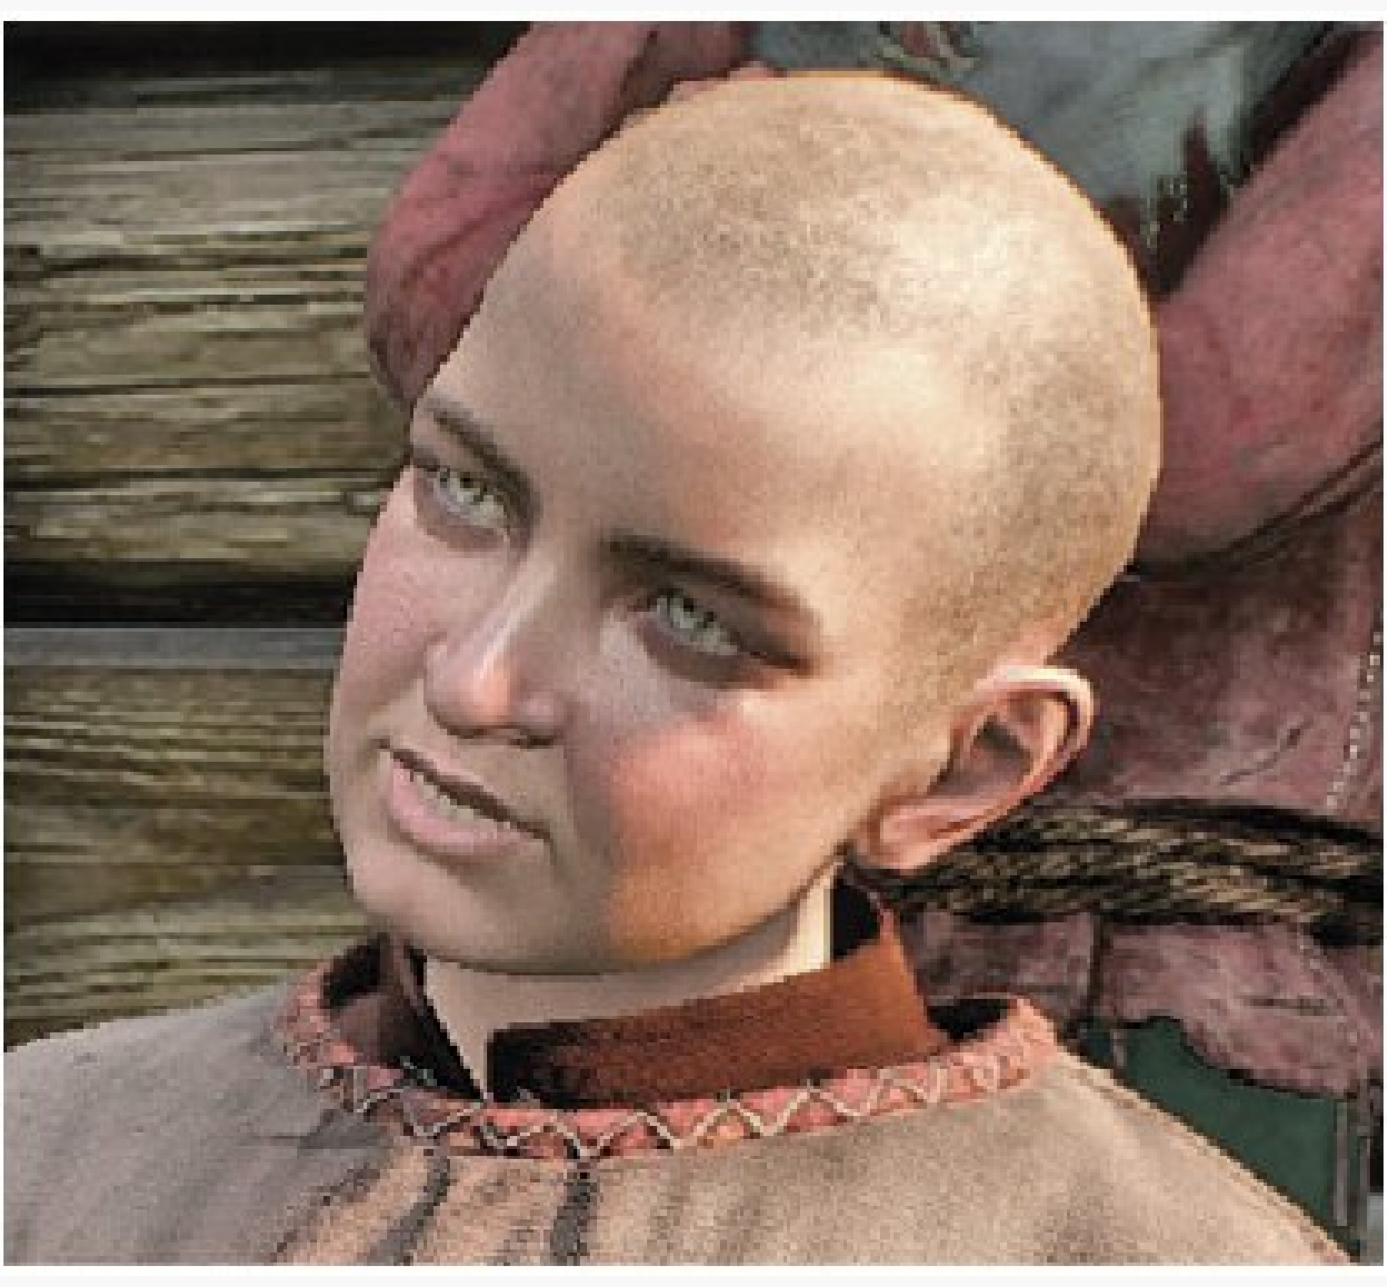
GWENT: VELEN PLAYERS
Win a unique card from the man in Oreton.
Win a unique card from Haddy of Midcopse

Items: Gwent Card: Letho of Gulet (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

HADDY THE CARD PRODIGY: HADDY-NUFF YET?

OBJECTIVE:

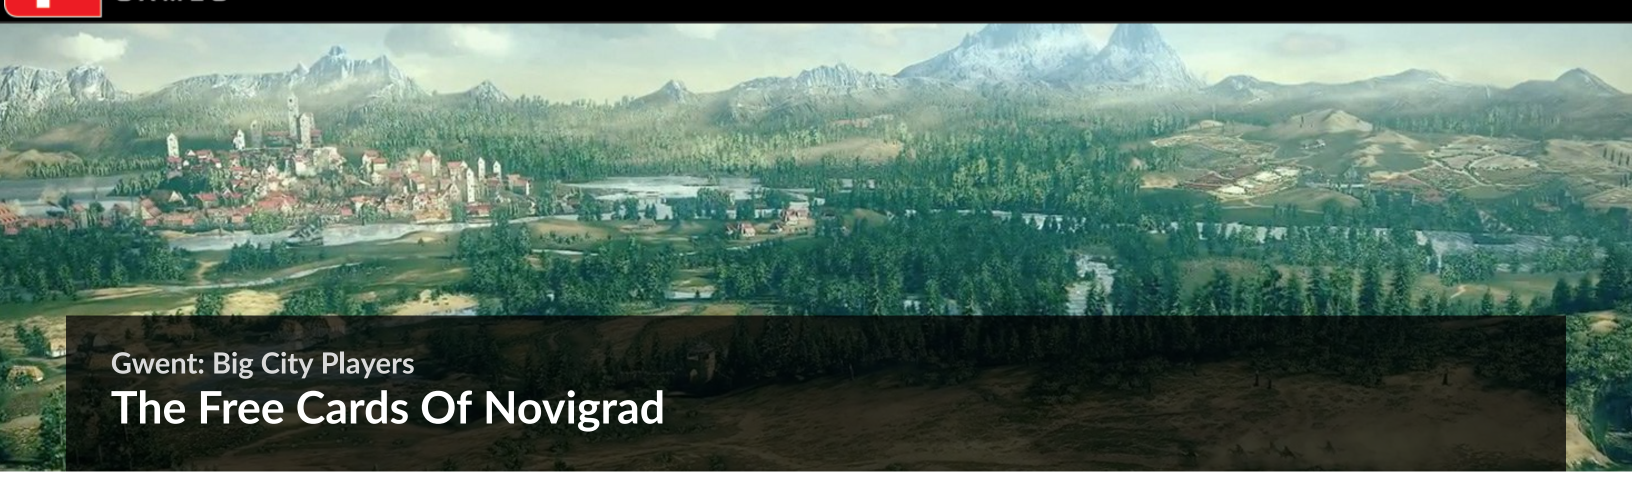
- Win a unique card from Haddy of Midcopse.



Haddy (Northern Realms Deck)

To the west, in the village of Midcopse (where you first set eyes upon Keira Metz), there's talk of a child prodigy, and sure enough, you find him playing in the grass on the south side of the village. Challenge Haddy to a game of Gwent, and better him to obtain his unique card. You also receive an Eredin Leader card for completing this quest too (usually from Haddy, or from the Old Sage or Boatwright if you didn't challenge these players in the order shown).

Items: Gwent Card: Vernon Roche (Northern Realms Deck), Gwent Card: Eredin: Bringer of Death (Monster Deck; for completing quest)



Gwent: Big City Players

The Free Cards Of Novigrad

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

GWENT: BIG CITY PLAYERS

VIMME VIVALDI: DON'T BANK ON IT

LOCATIONS: Bank of Vivaldi (Hierarch Square), Passiflora (Gildorf), Bathhouse (Gildorf), Scoia'Tael Trader Camp (Unmarked)
CHARACTERS: Vimme Vivaldi, Marquise Serenity, Sigismund Dijkstra, Scoia'Tael Trader

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Vimme Vivaldi.

BEGINNING THIS QUEST

The bustling free city of Novigrad has a few extremely proficient Gwent players. Feel free to speak to them about other matters, or start this quest by reading the notice pinned to the board in Hierarch Square (in front of the Kingfisher Inn), mentioning that Vimme Vivaldi is a cheat.

It is advisable to challenge Sigismund Dijkstra once you complete Main Quest: Count Reuven's Treasure, and definitely before Secondary Quest: Reason of State. If not, Sigismund is indisposed, leaving you one less player to challenge and you receive his card automatically.

You can also try playing this quest as early as possible (before meeting Dijkstra): The quest initially concludes after you beat Marquise Serenity, but don't despair; once you finally find Dijkstra and complete Count Reuven's Treasure, you can pick up this quest again.

Name of Player	Location	Deck Faction Used	Possibly Indisposed?	Gwent Card to Win
Vimme Vivaldi	Bank of Vivaldi (Hierarch Square)	Scoia'Tael	No	Vesemir
Marquise Serenity	Passiflora (Gildorf)	Nilfgaardian Empire	No	Morvran Voorhis
Sigismund Dijkstra*	Bathhouse (Gildorf)	Northern Realms	Yes	Esterad Thyssen
Scoia'Tael Trader*	Camp outside Novigrad City, northwest of Lucian's Windmill, in the woods	Scoia'Tael	No	Cirilla Fiona Elen Rianno and Francesca Findbair: The Beautiful

If Dijkstra is indisposed, the Scoia'Tael trader is the sole player Beat the last of the four players and finish the quest to claim the Francesca Findabair card*

Vimme Vivaldi (Scoia'Tael Deck)

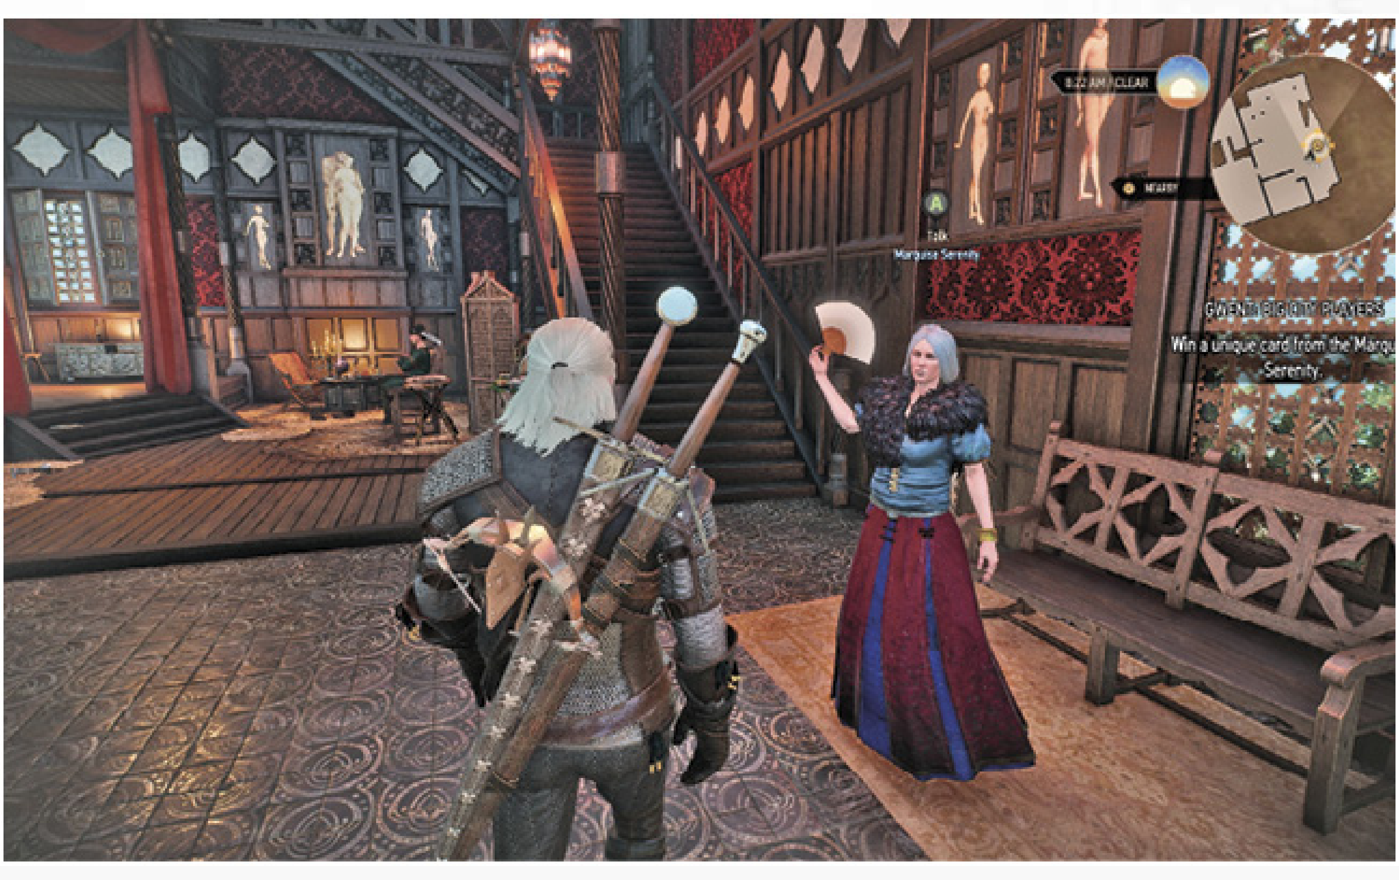
Some libelous claptrap on the Hierarch Square notice board accuses Vimme Vivaldi of being a cheat. While this isn't the case, he is a tough opponent. Head over to his bank (where you can also exchange Orens for Crowns) and beat him in card combat. Only then can you add Vesemir to your deck! Retrieve the card, and then head to challenge the next opponent.

Items: Gwent Card: Vesemir (Neutral Card)

MARQUISE SERENITY: PLAYING AROUND WITH THE MADAM

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Marquise Serenity.



Journey to St. Gregory's Gate by the bridge to Temple Isle, but stay in Gildorf and visit the high-class brothel known as Passiflora. Aside from extra-curricular activities to try, and a number of cards you can purchase from the Marquise herself, Serenity can also be challenged for her unique card. Win, and claim the following:

Items: Gwent Card: Morvran Voorhis (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

SIGISMUND DIJSKTRA: CUTTING HIM OFF AT THE KNEES

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Sigismund Dijkstra.

Sigismund Dijkstra (Northern Realms Deck)

Once Main Quest: Count Reuven's Treasure has been completed, and you're on good terms with Sigismund Dijkstra (but long before the madness of Secondary Quest: Reason of State), journey to the Bathhouse (under the long, elevated cobblestone walkway south of St. Gregory's Gate). Challenge this portly spy to a game, and gather a special Northern Realms card for your troubles. Should Dijsktra be indisposed, this card is awarded by the next player automatically.

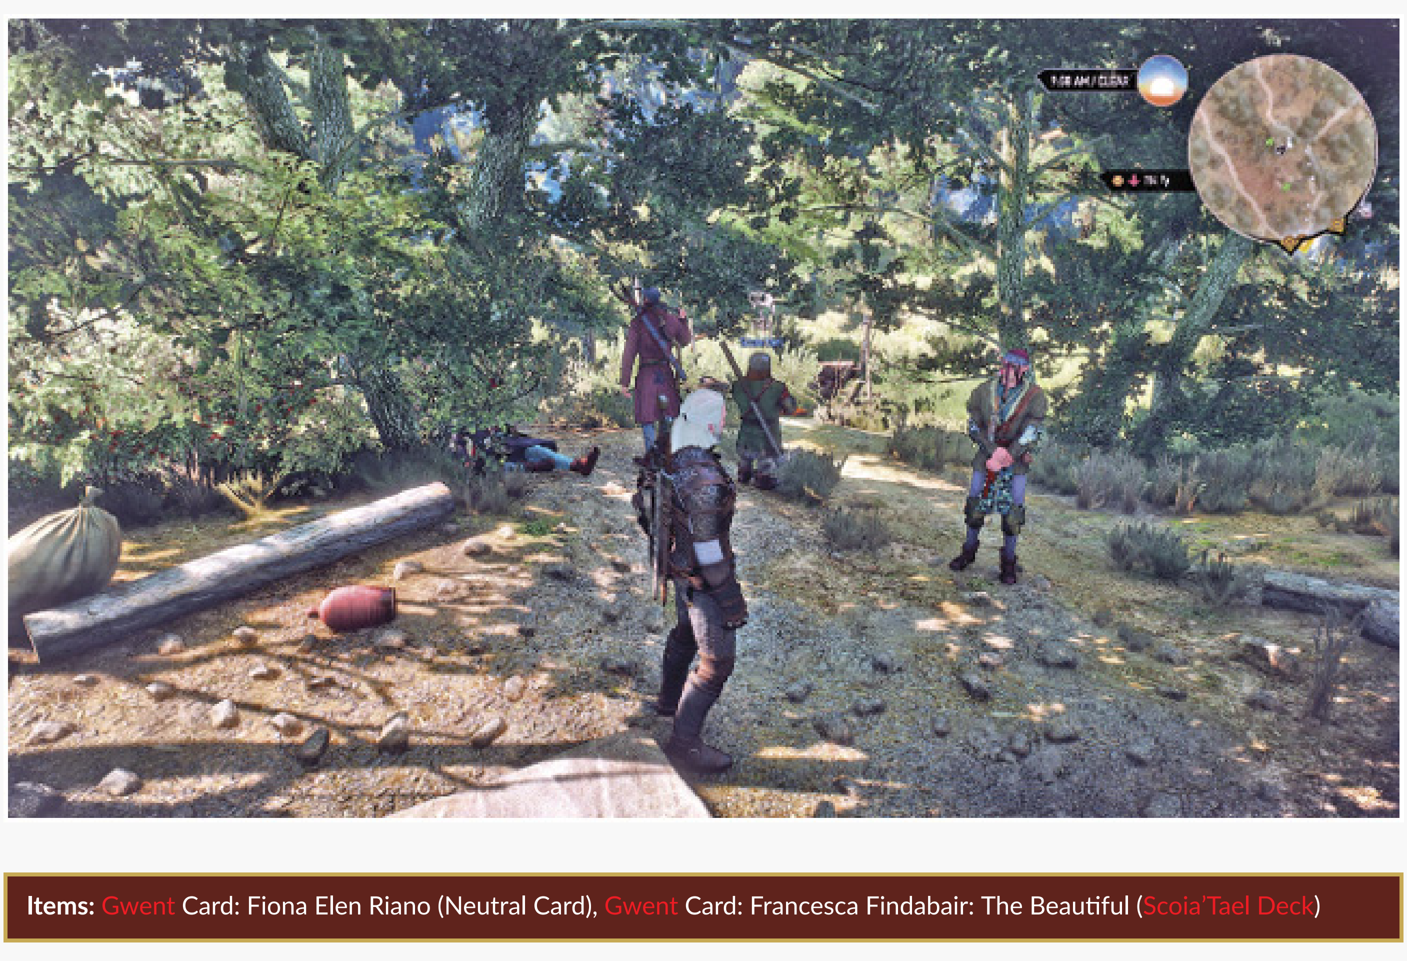
Items: Gwent Card: Esterad Thyssen (Northern Realms Deck)

SCOIA'TAEL TRADER: WILD WOODLAND PLAYER

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from a member of the Scoia'Tael band.

The only Big City player left is actually outside the city, in the woods to the west of Farcorners, on a forested hillock above the woodland trail northwest of Lucian's Windmill. Locate this elf and his band of merry non-humans. If you remember Geralt's past exploits, this elf was saved, and is suitably happy to see you. Buy anything you need, then claim your final cards after a triumphant Gwent bout. You receive the Trader's card (Cirilla), the card for finishing the quest (Francesca Findabair).



Items: Gwent Card: Fiona Elen Riano (Neutral Card), Gwent Card: Francesca Findabair: The Beautiful (Scoia'Tael Deck)

Gwent: Old Pals

Familiar Friends: Unique Cards

DANGER ALERT · SPOILER ALERT

GWENT: OLD PALS

ZOLTAN: DON'T SWEAT THE SHORT STUFF

LOCATIONS: Rosemary and Thyme (Novigrad), Temerian Partisan Camp, Saven Cats Inn, Kaer Morhen, Nowhere Inn
CHARACTERS: Zoltan Chivay, Vernon Roche, Lambert

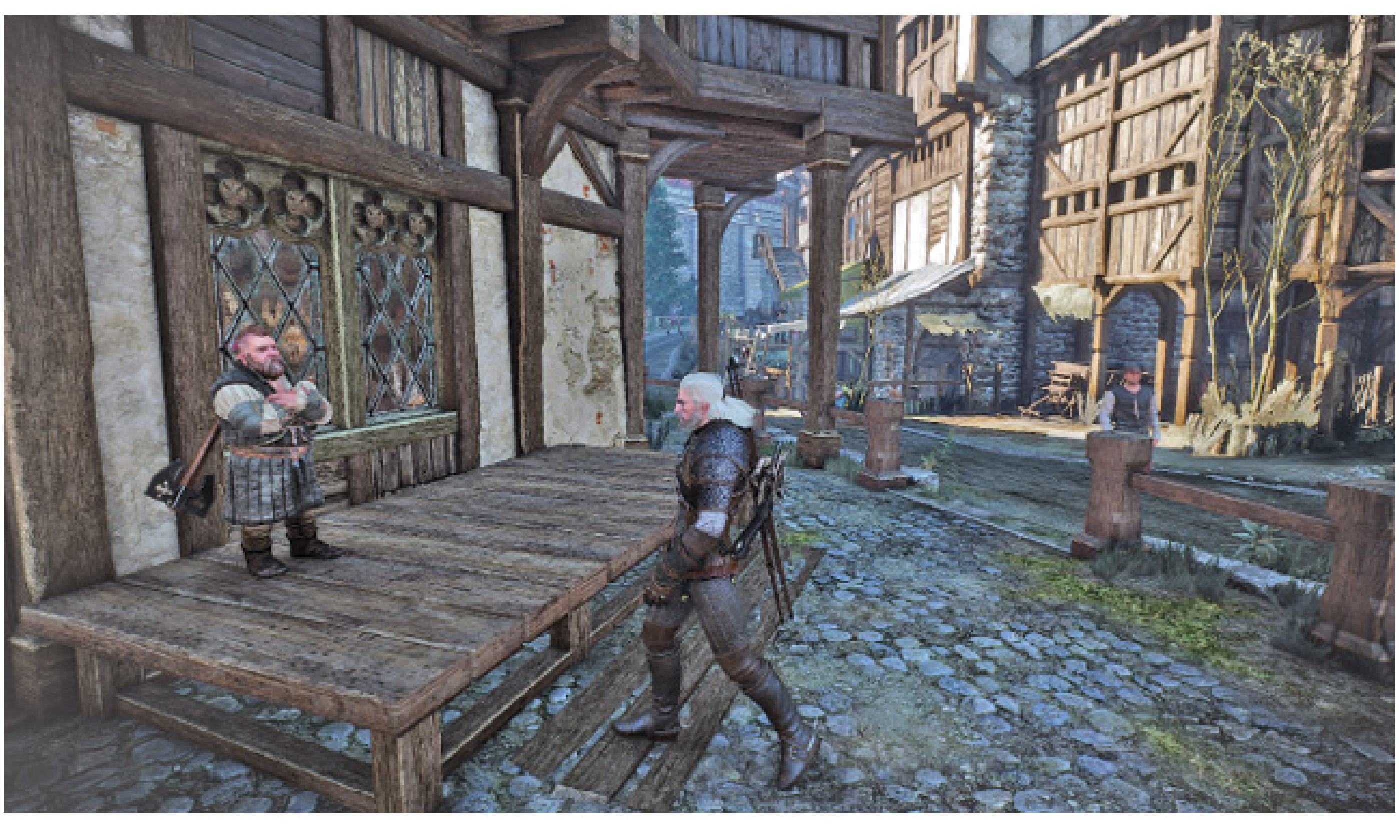
OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Zoltan.

BEGINNING THIS QUEST

Perhaps the most difficult of the Gwent Quests involving specific individual players, finding the player in question is half the battle here! Therefore, it's worth checking at each quest objective (below) for exact times and quests to finish before each is faced.

Name of Player	Location	Deck Faction Used	Possibly Indisposed?	Gwent Card to Win
Zoltan Chivay	Rosemary and Thyme (Novigrad)	Scoia'Tael	No	Eithne
Vernon Roche	Temerian Partisan Camp (Gustfields)	Northern Realms	Yes	Saesenthessis
Lambert	Seven Cats Inn, Kaer Morhen, or Nowhere Inn (Novigrad)	Scoia'Tael	Yes	Triss Merigold



Find Zoltan outside the Rosemary and Thyme, once the brothel is back in the hands of Dandelion, after Main Quest: A Poet Under Pressure is complete (you can play Gwent during this quest while you wait for the ambush). Don't forget to help Zoltan during Secondary Quest: A Dangerous Game, especially as there are three additional cards to gather as rewards during this quest! Or, wait until after you finish Secondary Quest: A Deadly Plot. Locate Zoltan, challenge and crush him, and claim the following:

Items: Gwent Card: Eithne (Scoia'Tael Deck)

VERNO N ROCHE: A PATRIOT… AND A REAL SON-OF-A-BITCH

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Vernon Roche.

Vernon Roche (Northern Realms Deck)

Journey east of Oxenfurt, into Gustfields Territory, and locate the Temerian Partisan Hideout, between quests that involve Vernon Roche, or just after the completion of Secondary Quest: A Deadly Plot. Find Roche around a campfire, and challenge him to a bout of Gwent. If you decided not to intervene when Dijkstra takes over after the Radovid assassination, Roche is killed and no longer accessible, but his card can be found at the resistance camp.

Note that if you discovered Thaler before you defeat Roche, Thaler will join this quest as well rather than having his own as detailed on the following page. Gather the following once you win:

Items: Gwent Card: Saesenthessis (Scoia'Tael Deck)

LAMBERT: AN EFFUSIVE END TO AN ELUSIVE HUNT

OBJECTIVE:

- When you get a chance, win a unique card from Lambert.

Lambert (Scoia'Tael Deck)

Lambert is a slippery customer at the best of times, and his Gwent-playing access is no different! One option is to continue until Main Quest: The Final Trial has concluded, and play him in Kaer Morhen. Another option is to begin Secondary Quest: Following the Thread, and corner Lambert during this quest (usually as you're walking with him to a location). Prior to Main Quest: The Battle of Kaer Morhen, you may also find Lambert at the Nowhere Inn (Novigrad). After this quest, Lambert either departs with Keira Metz, or dies in the battle; find the card in his bedroom in Kaer Morhen's Grand Hall. Or gather it after the Gwent bout. The quest then concludes.

Items: Gwent Card: Triss Merigold (Neutral Card)

Gwent: Playing Thaler

So Elusive, He Has His Own Gwent Quest!

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

GWENT: PLAYING THALER

LOCATIONS: Troll Cave (Unmarked), Nowhere Inn

CHARACTERS: Thaler

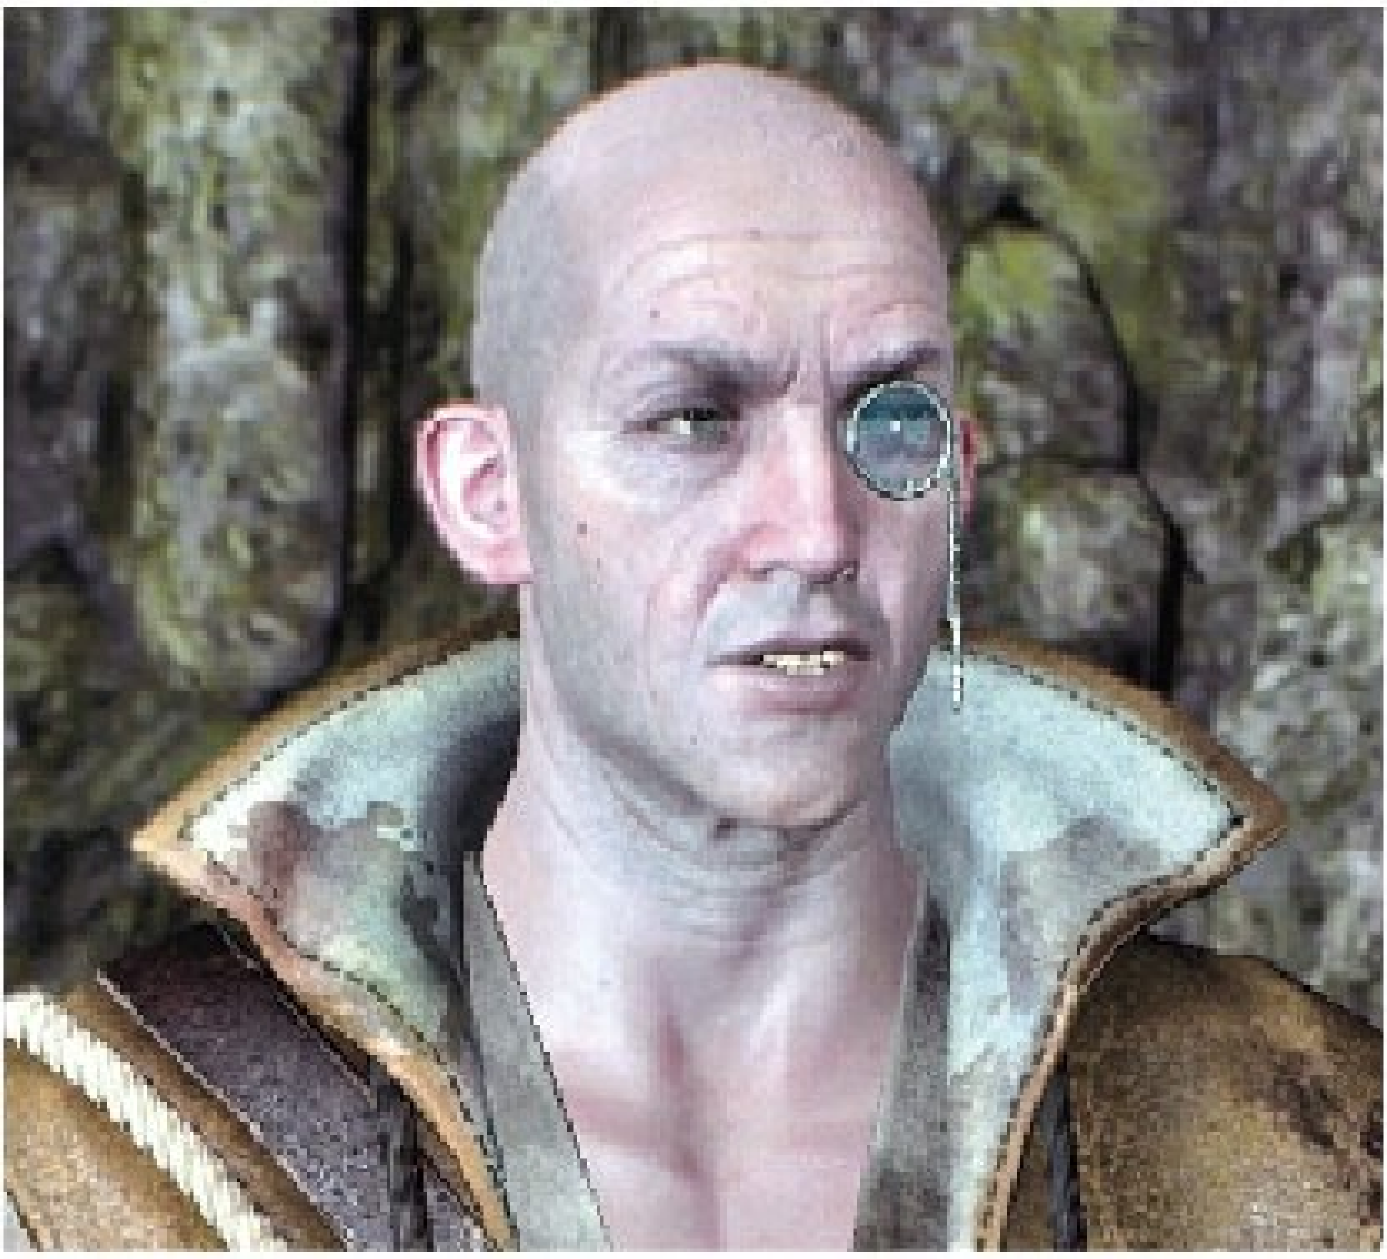
OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Thaler.

BEGINNING THIS QUEST

You must begin Secondary Quest: A Deadly Plot, and complete it for Thaler to become available to play. If you ignore Thaler during this quest, attempt to find him at The Nowhere Inn (Novigrad), or prior to Secondary Quest: Reason of State to avoid disappointment.

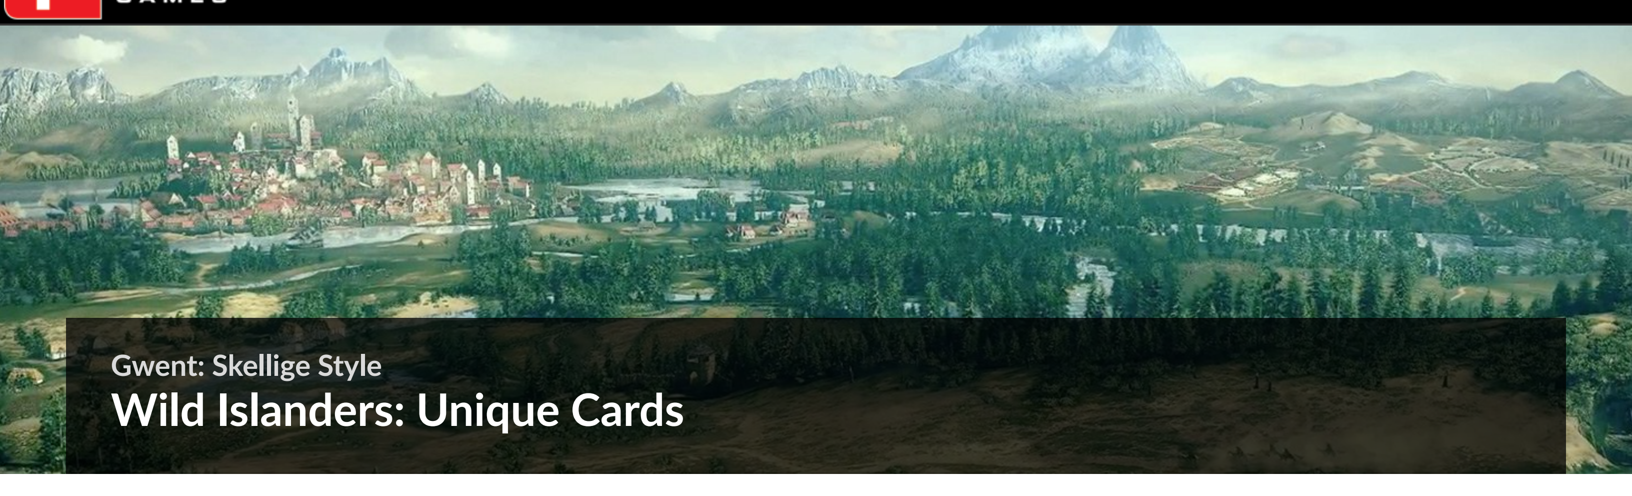
Name of Player	Location	Deck Faction Used	Possibly Indisposed?	Gwent Card to Win
Thaler	Troll Cave, Seven Cats Inn, or Nowhere Inn (Novigrad)	Scoia'Tael	Yes	Geralt of Rivia



Thaler (Scoia'Tael Deck)

Thaler appears later on in your adventure. Whether or not you've challenged the other Gwent players, once you start Secondary Quest: A Deadly Plot, you are tasked with rescuing Thaler himself. Once freed from the Troll Cave (located in the woods northwest of Hanged Man's Tree), but before the quest ends, a new quest called "Gwent: Playing Thaler" commences. Challenge this foul-mouthed spy to a game, and claim your hard-fought prize.

Items: Gwent Card: Geralt of Rivia (Neutral Card)



Gwent: Skellige Style

Wild Islanders: Unique Cards

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

GWENT: SKELLIGE STYLE

LOCATIONS: Kaer Trolde, Kaer Trolde Harbor, Gedyneith, Kaer Muire

CHARACTERS: Emrion, Crach an Craite, Sjusta, Gremist, "Madman" Lugos

BEGINNING THIS QUEST

After the chaos of wrangling Old Pals to play with, this quest is relatively straightforward. Across the wild and windswept island of Ard Skellig, you'll find all five of the Gwent players for this quest. Begin by visiting the Notice Board in Kaer Trolde Harbor; it mentions that the druid Ermion is a keen Gwent player, and happy to give lessons. Head to him, first.

The only possible confusion is that "Madman" Lugos is likely to be indisposed the further along your adventure you are, and three players tend to move around the island of Ard Skellig too, so check your world map and the following information carefully. It's wise to conclude this quest before Main Quest: The Battle of Kaer Morhen.

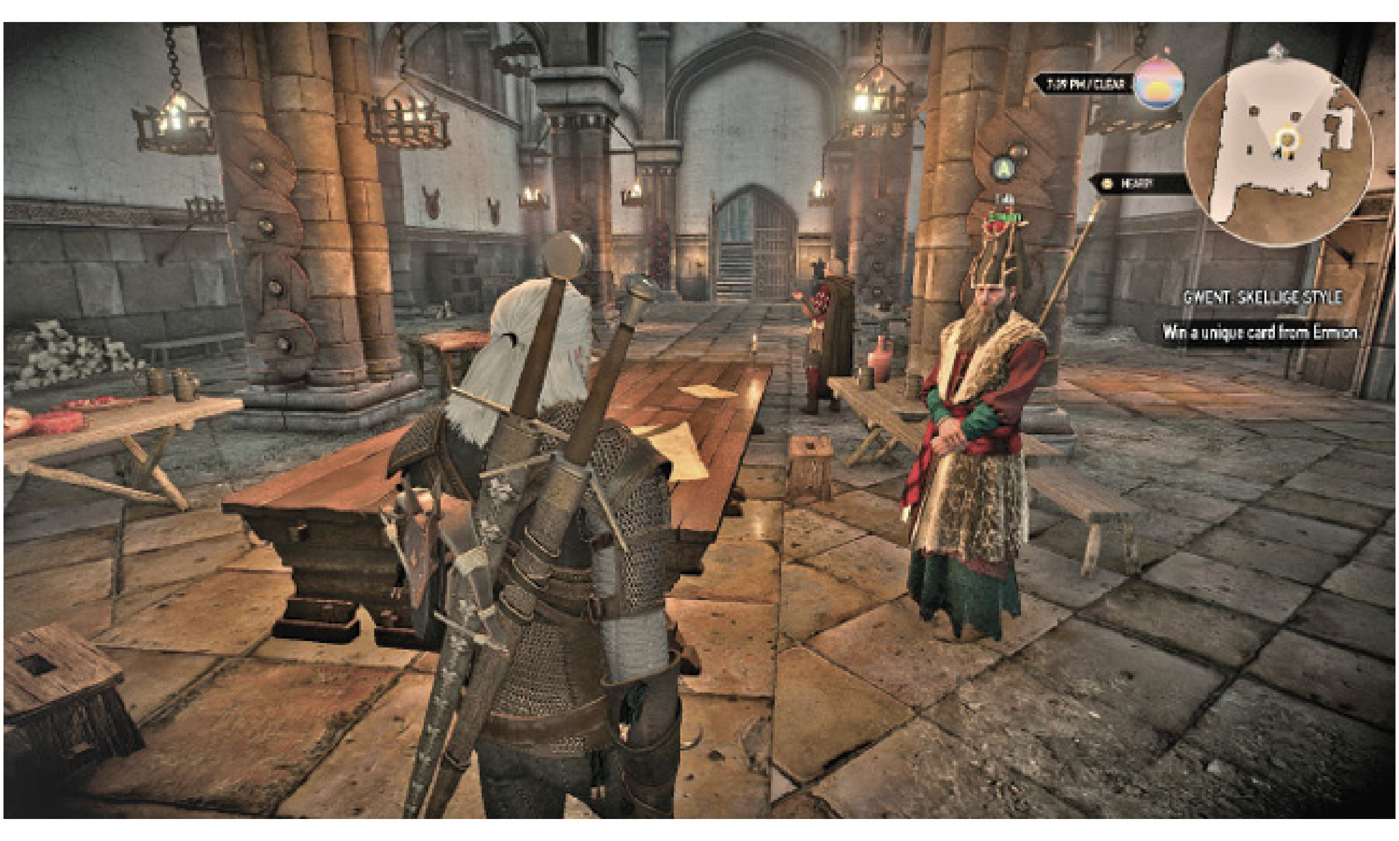
Name of Player	Location	Deck Faction Used	Possibly Indisposed?	Gwent Card to Win
Ermion	Kaer Trolde or Gedyneith	Monster	No	Leshen
Crach an Craite	Kaer Trolde	Monster	Yes	Draug
Sjusta the Tailor	Kaer Trolde Harbor	Northern Realms	No	Yaevinn
Gremist the druid	Gedyneith	Nilfgaardian Empire	No	Mysterious Elf
"Madman" Lugos	Kaer Trolde or Kaer Muire	Monster	Yes	Vampire: Katakan*

Beat the last of the five players and finish the quest to claim the Emhyr var Emreis: The White Flame card*

ERMION: A DUEL WITH A DRUID

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Emrion.



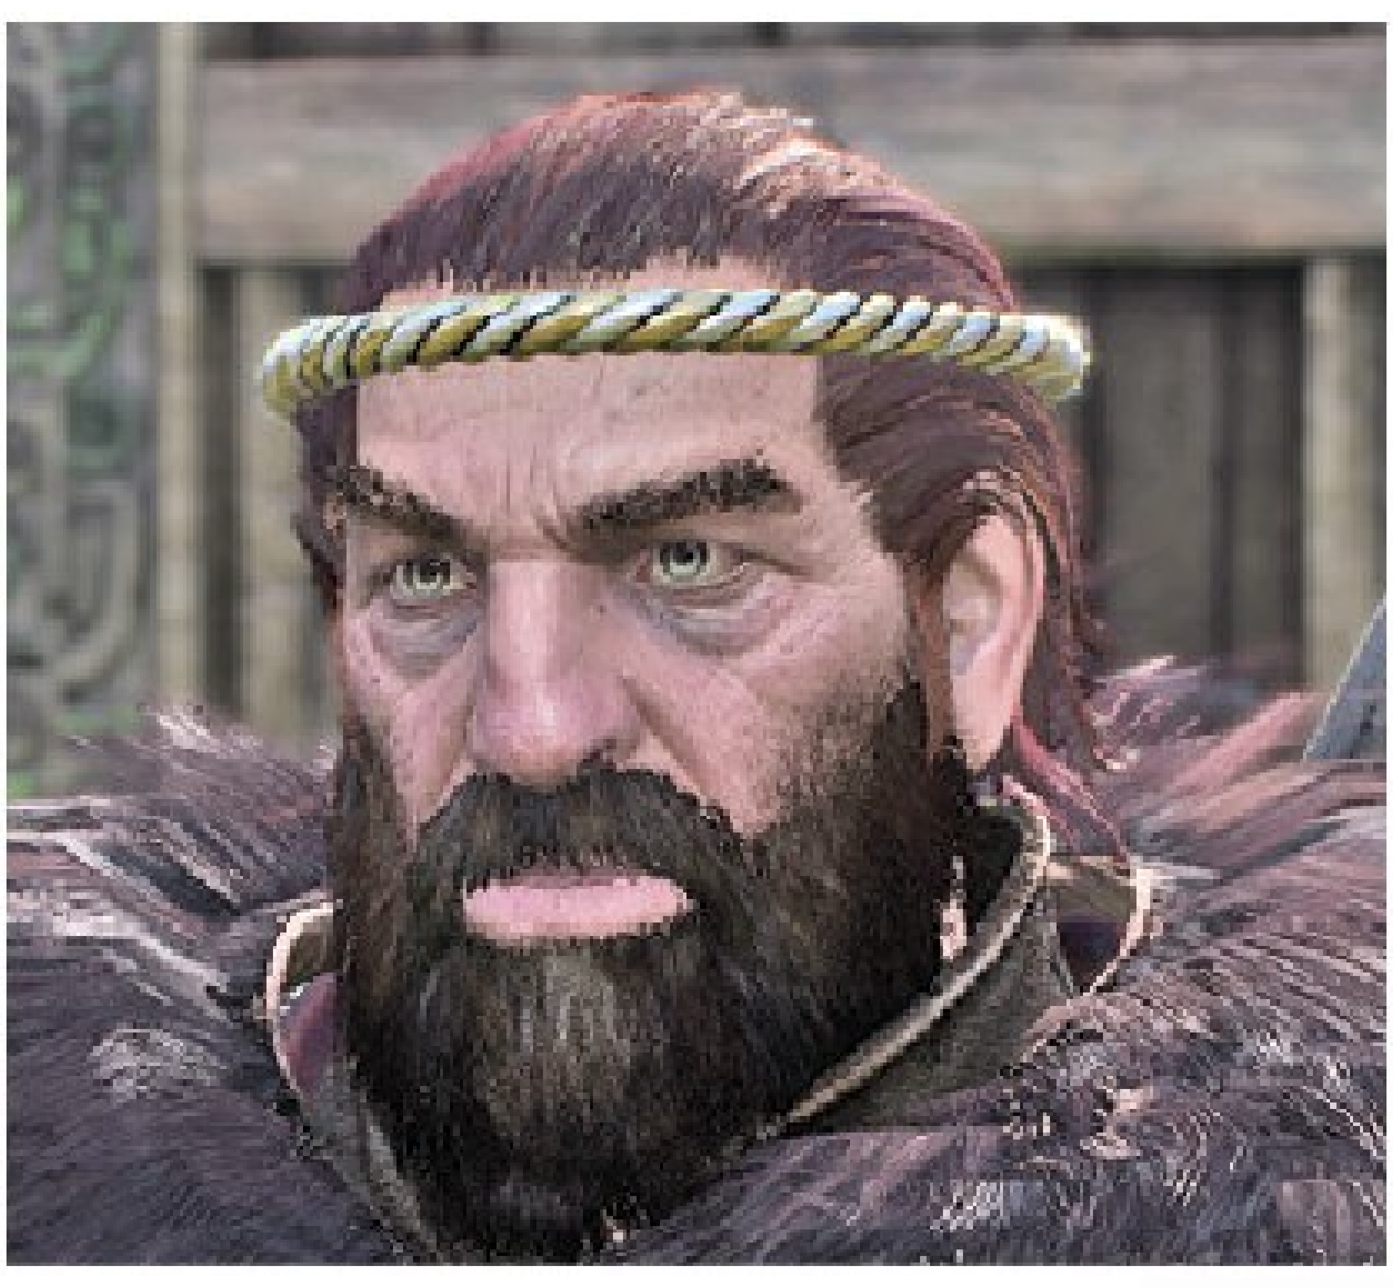
Ermion is your first challenge on the isle of Ard Skellig. He can be found in a variety of locations depending on your questing, but it's usually available inside Kaer Trolde's great banquet hall, or over at Gedyneith. Challenge him to a bout, win, and claim the following card. Afterward, he makes mention of Crach, Sjusta, and Gremist as possible future opponents. If Crach is indisposed, you skip his bout. You are free to challenge Crach, Sjusta, and Gremist in any order you like.

Items: Gwent Card: Leshen (Monster Deck)

CRACH AN CRAITE: TAKING A CRACK AT CRACH

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Crach an Craite.



Crach an Craite can be found in Kaer Trolde keep, or by the harbor if you're intending on utilizing him during the last part of the Main Quest. If you've finished the Main Quest, and he's "indisposed," and you receive his card automatically. Otherwise, pick a (card) fight with your friend, and secure the following card:

Items: Gwent Card: Draug (Monster Deck)

"MADMAN" LUGOS: FINAL CLASH AT CLAN DRUMMOND

OBJECTIVE:

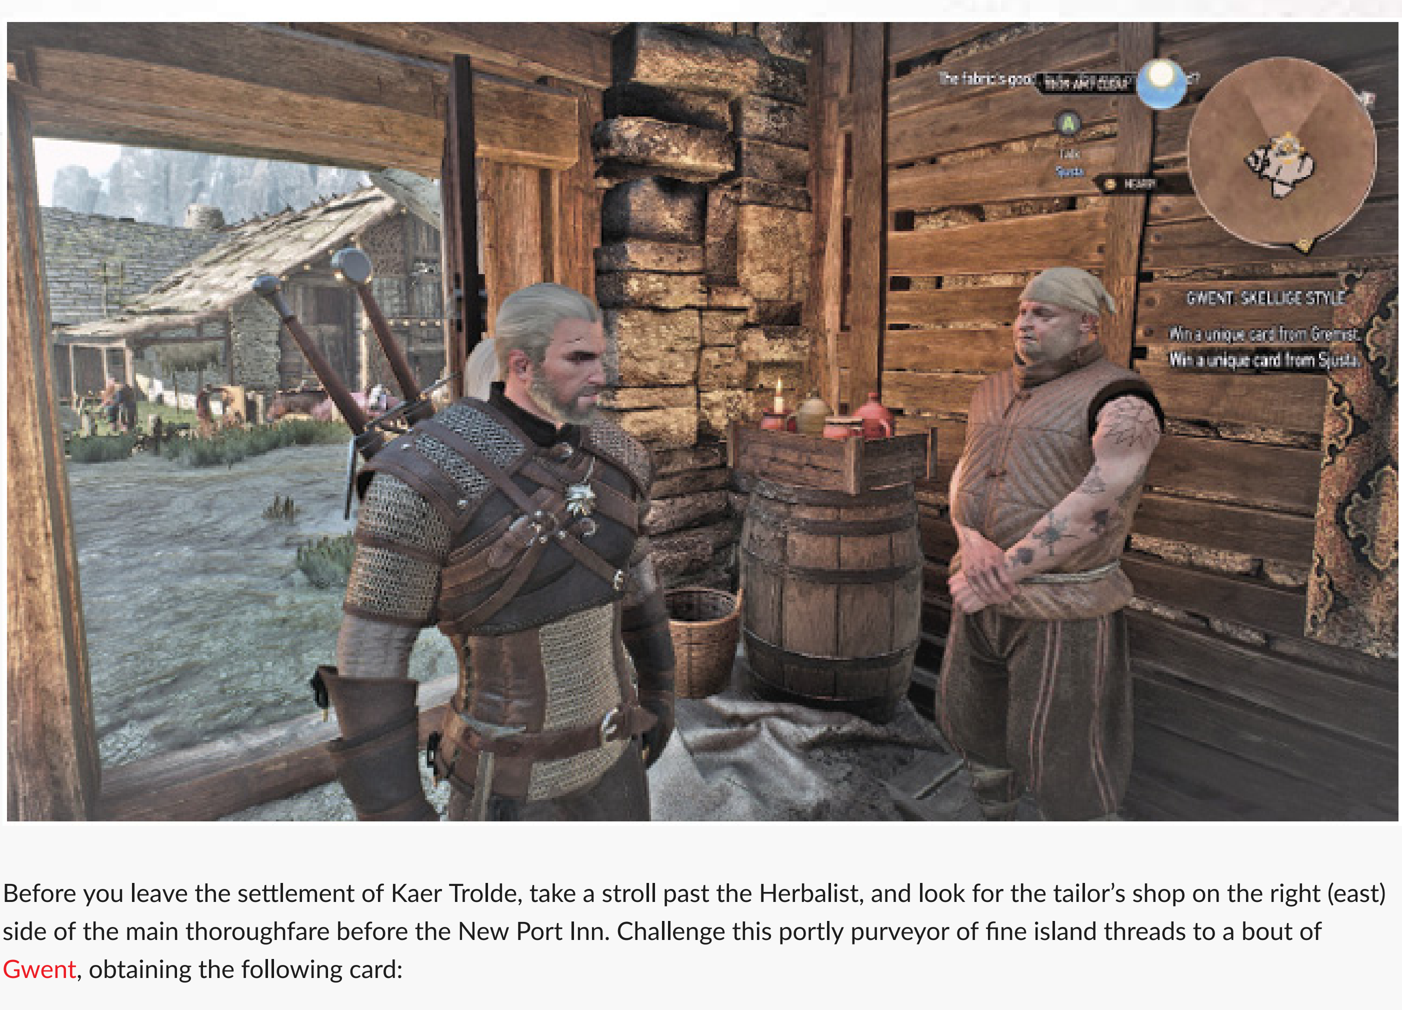
- Win a unique card from Madman Lugos.

Items: Gwent Card: Vampire: Katakan (Monster Deck), Gwent Card: Emhyr var Emreis: The White Flame (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

SJUSTA: TAILORING YOUR GWENT DECK

OBJECTIVE:

- Win a unique card from Sjusta.



The fabric's good
GWENT: SKELLIGE STYLE
Win a unique card from Gremist.
Win a unique card from Sjusta.

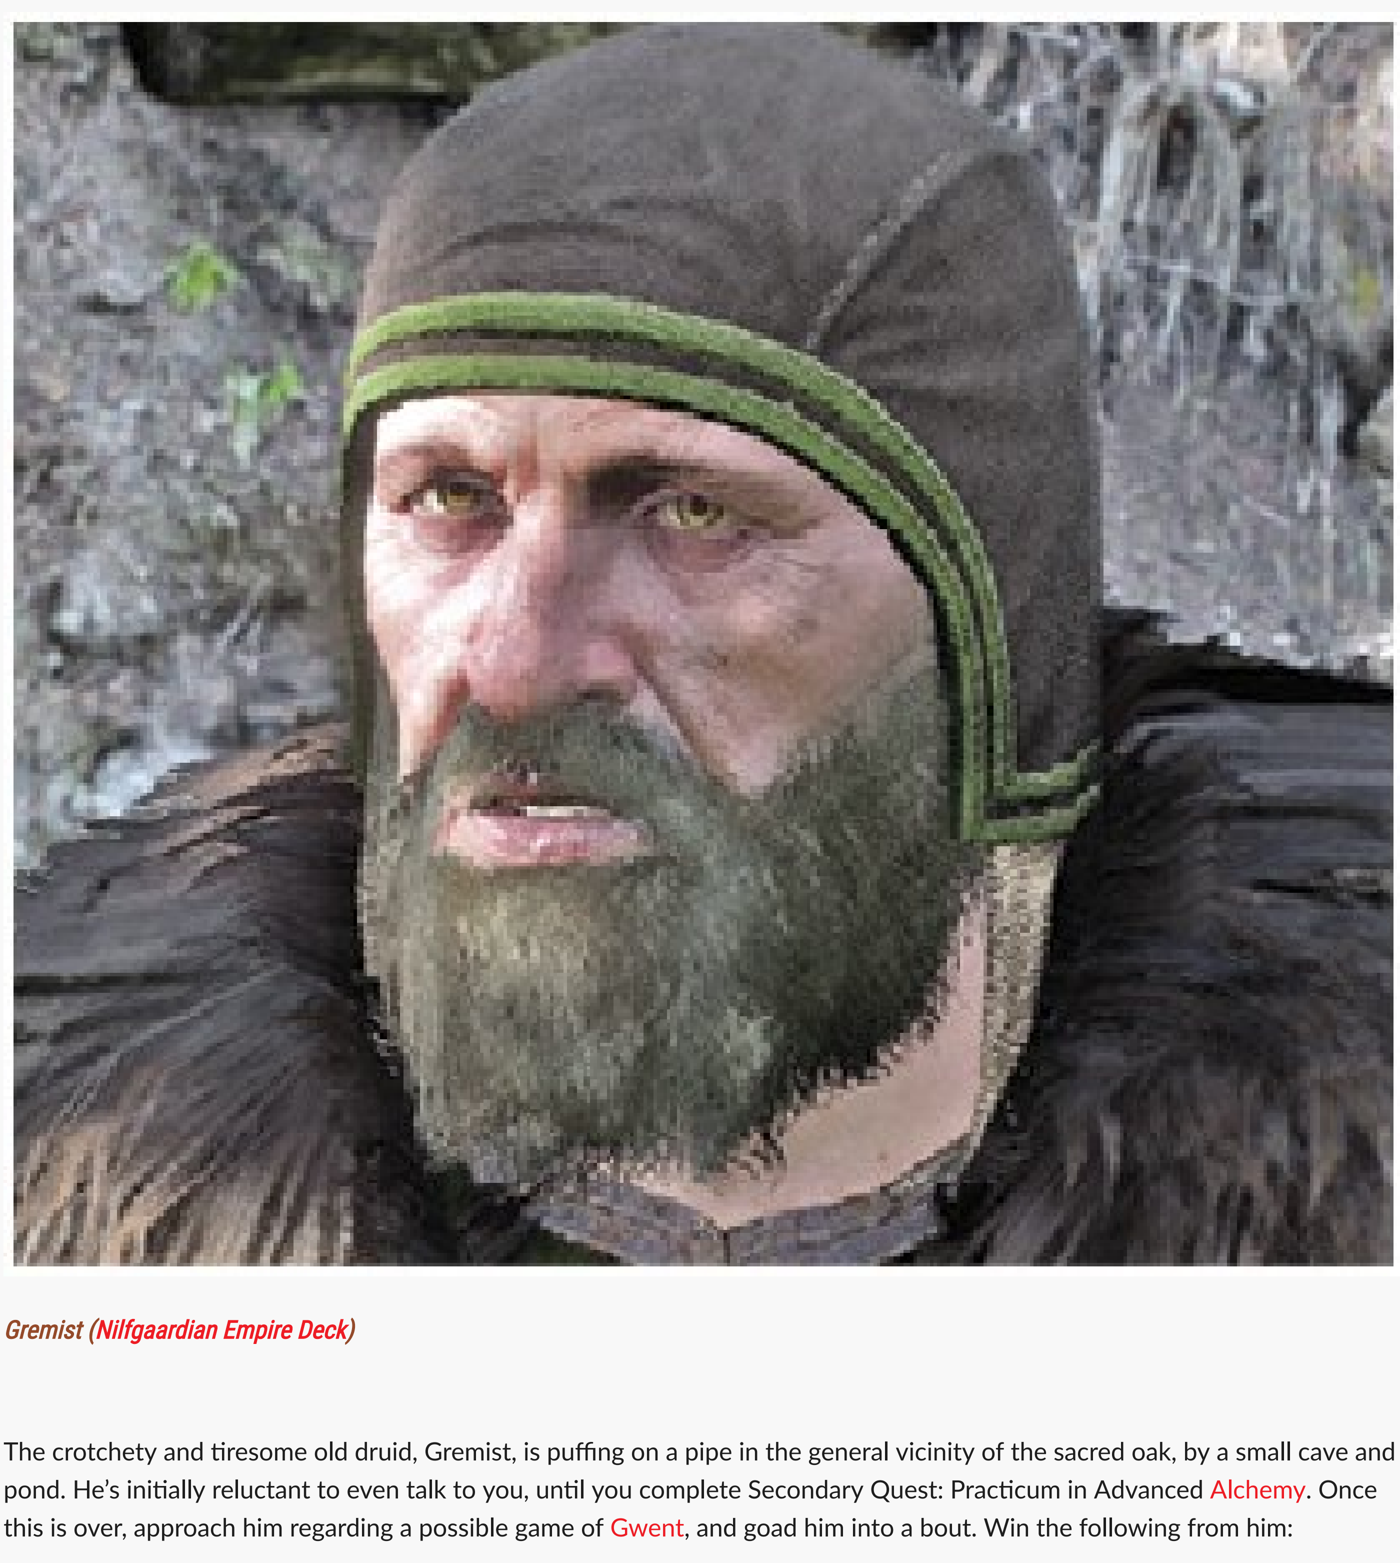
Before you leave the settlement of Kaer Trolde, take a stroll past the Herbalist, and look for the tailor's shop on the right (east) side of the main thoroughfare before the New Port Inn. Challenge this portly purveyor of fine island threads to a bout of Gwent, obtaining the following card:

Items: Gwent Card: Yaevinn (Scoia'Tael Deck)

GREMIST: A GWENT PLAYING TEMPEST FOR THE CROTCHETY ALCHEMIST

OBJECTIVE:

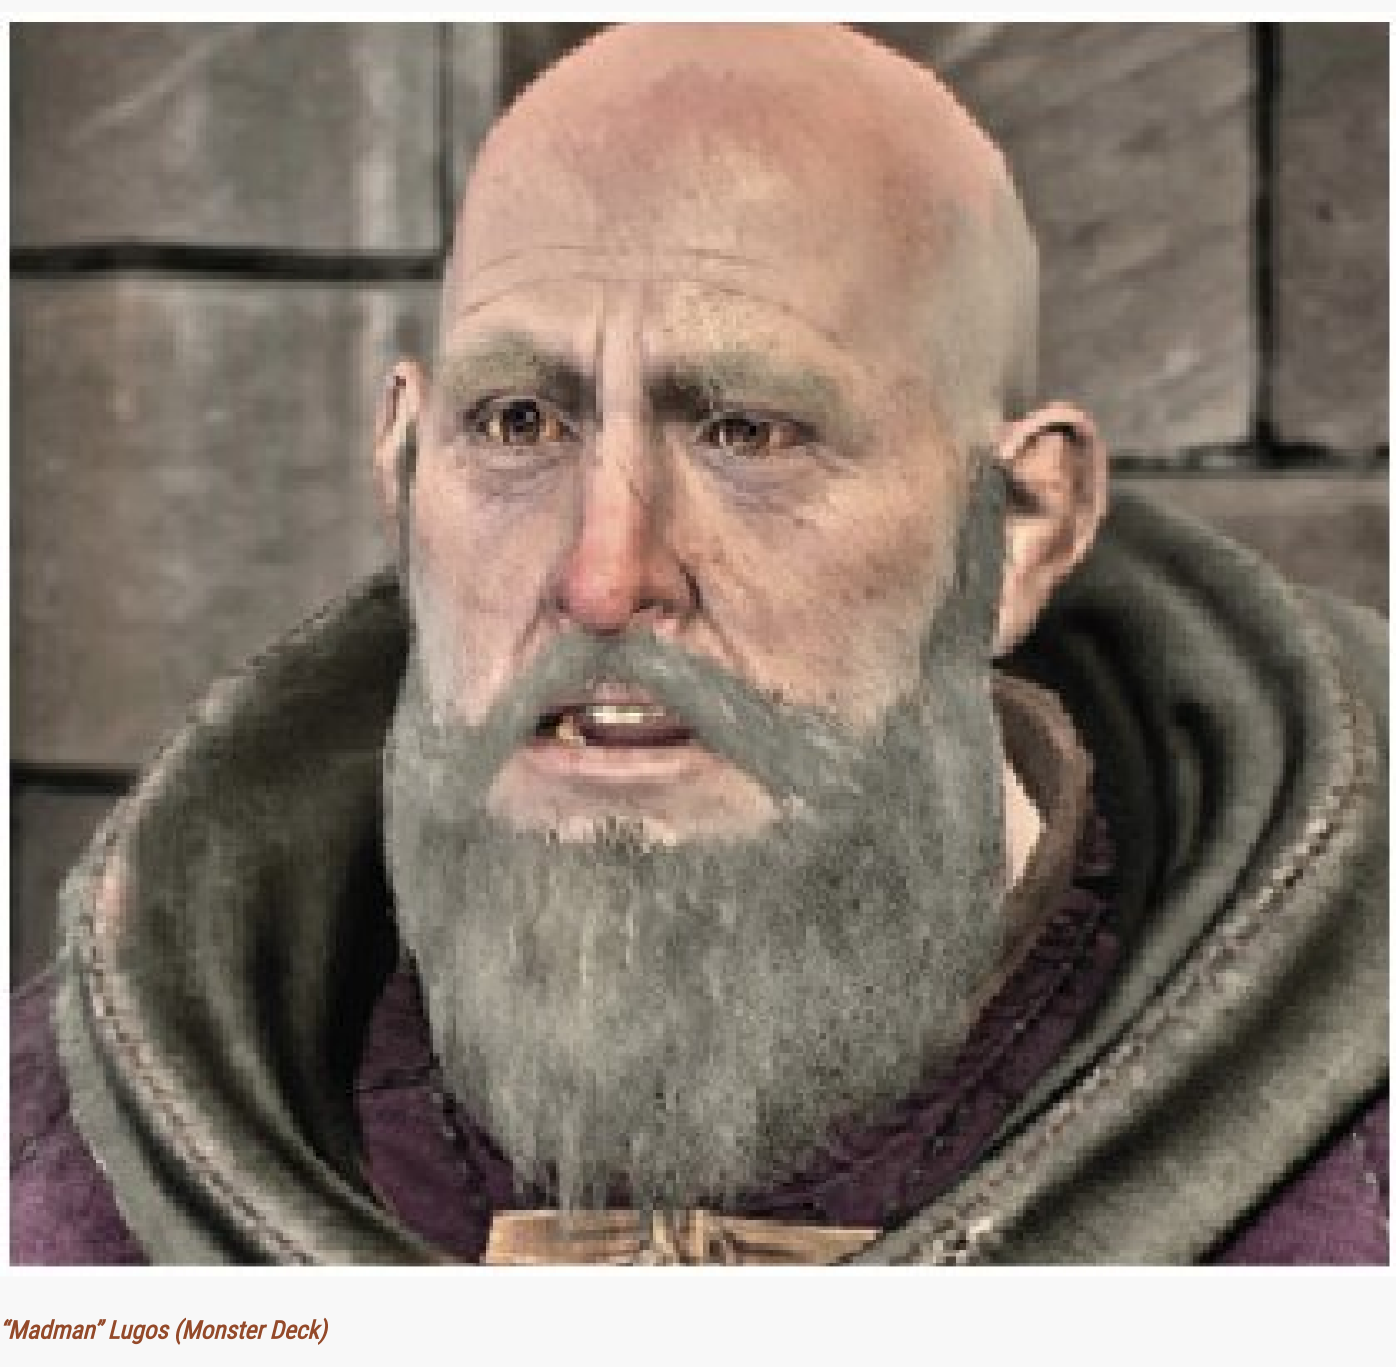
- Win a unique card from Gremist.



Gremist (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

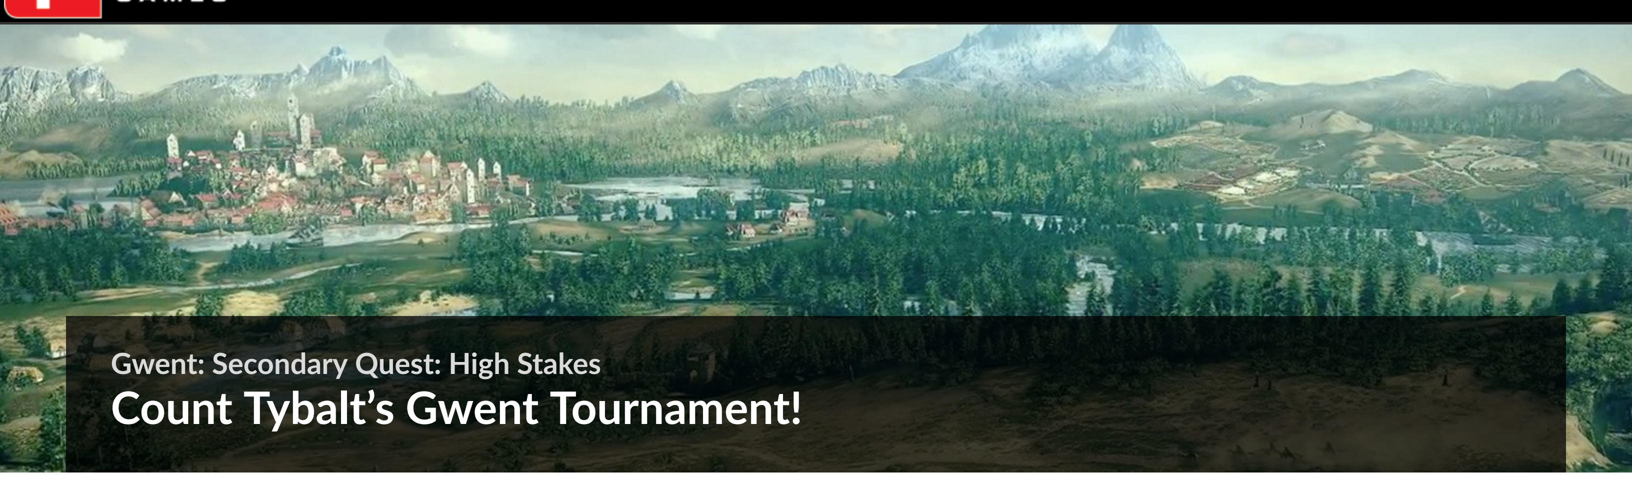
The crotchety and tiresome old druid, Gremist, is puffing on a pipe in the general vicinity of the sacred oak, by a small cave and pond. He's initially reluctant to even talk to you, until you complete Secondary Quest: Practicum in Advanced Alchemy. Once this is over, approach him regarding a possible game of Gwent, and goad him into a bout. Win the following from him:

Items: Gwent Card: Mysterious Elf (Neutral Card)



"Madman" Lugos (Monster Deck)

Your final opponent on the Isle of Ard Skellig is the unpredictable "Madman" Lugos, Jarl of Kaer Muire. He's best approached before he takes a side during Main Quest: The Sunstone. Find him at his keep (Kaer Muire), or arguing with other jarls at Kaer Trolde. Another option is to speak to him at the end of Secondary Quest: The Cave of Dreams, on his throne at Kaer Muire. Secure victory, and you can claim both his card (the Vampire: Katakan), and an Emhyr var Emreis when the quest is complete. Is this chap going by the new name "Indisposed" Lugos? Then search his room for the cards.



Gwent: Secondary Quest: High Stakes

Count Tybalt's Gwent Tournament!

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

GWENT: SECONDARY QUEST: HIGH STAKES

LOCATIONS: St. Gregory's Gate, Passiflora (Unmarked), Northern Dock Warehouse (Unmarked), Kingfisher Inn (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: The Sneezing Scribe, Madame Sasha (Cantarella), Patrick Hazelnut, Bernard Tulle, Finneas, Count Tybalt, Tim Knott, Harald Featherbuns, Bramble Fruntenstroch

ENEMIES: Bernard's Men

Recommended Items: 1,000 Crowns. Above-average Gwent deck.

OBJECTIVES:

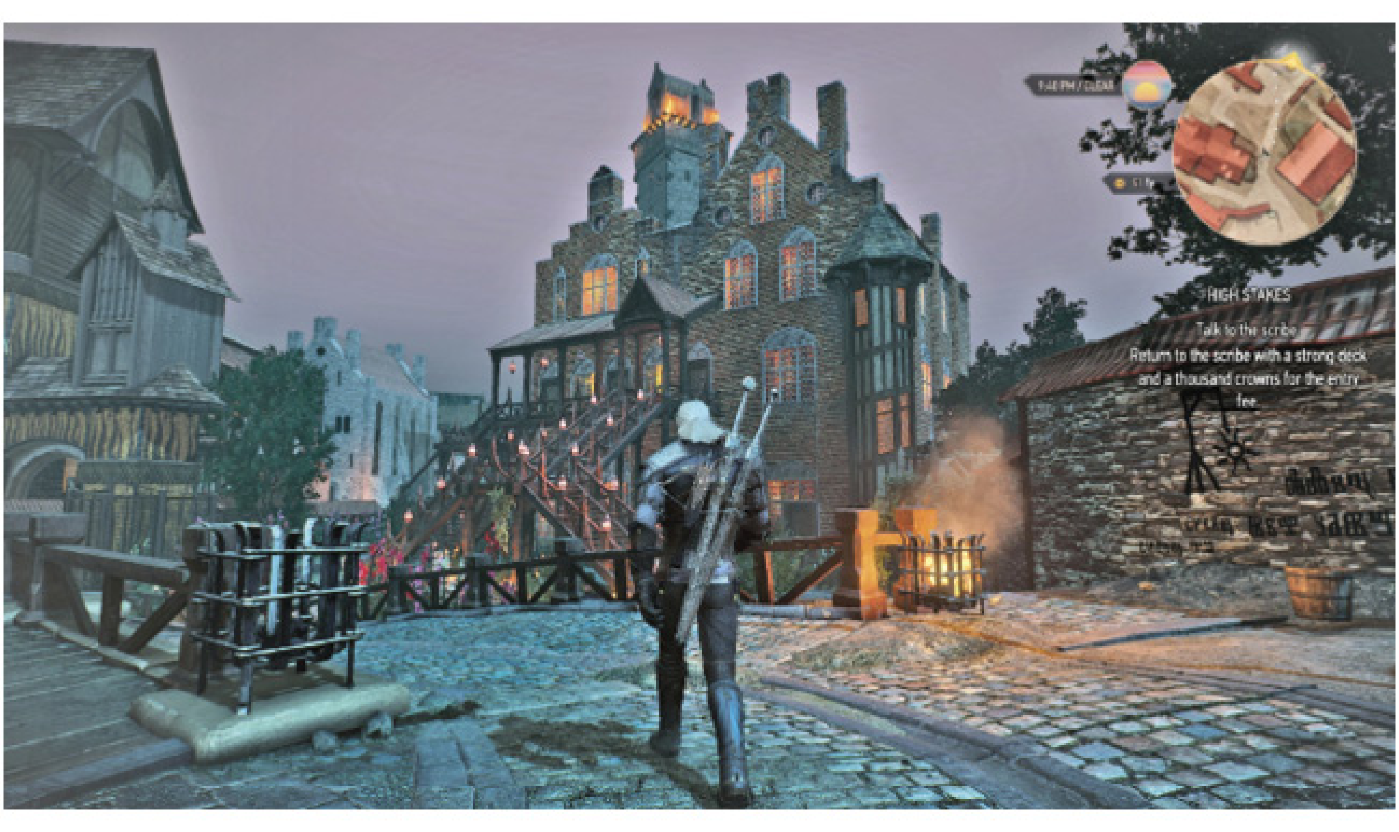
- Find the scribe in the Passiflora and sign up for the high-stakes Gwent tournament.
- Nearest Signpost: St. Gregory's Bridge

The Sneezing Scribe

Find the Notice inviting all to the Passiflora (Novigrad's fanciest of brothels), where Count Tybalt is proudly hosting the fanciest of Gwent tournaments. There are fabulous prizes, and an entrance fee, as well as an above-average deck. Head across the upper square to the tall brick structure (the Passiflora), and push past the thronging crowds to the ground level, where a sneezing Scribe must be talked to. Show him:

- (Gwent Deck) Your above-average Gwent deck. It's not to be sniffed at.
- (1,000 Crowns) Your entry fee. You can't begin until you've paid it.

If everything is in order, the riff-raff are expelled, and you're free to mingle with the Gwent players and their entourages prior to the start.



HIGH STAKES
Talk to the scribe
Return to the scribe with a strong deck and a thousand crowns for the entry fee

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest begins when you locate a note on a Notice Board, such as the one in the upper square, close to St. Gregory's Bridge in Novigrad. You may also enter the Passiflora and locate the Sneezing Scribe without reading the notice beforehand.

GWENT MASTERY: A NECESSITY!

To complete this quest, you must be proficient in the finer and cunning art of Gwent card playing. Please consult the chapter of the guide devoted to Gwent (see page 92).

Need to know where every single Gwent card is located, including those from Hearts of Stone and Blood and Wine? Then consult the "Gwent: A Complete Card Checklist" section in this guide's Appendix, on page 782.

Need to know the ins and outs of the specific Gwent quests? Consult the Gwent Quest section on page 481.

Save your progress between each bout if you can; you need to win every game to secure the four unique cards contained within this quest!

ALL HANDS ON DECK: INCREASING YOUR COLLECTION RATING

OBJECTIVES:

- Strengthen your Gwent card collection by winning powerful cards off other players. Current collection rating: (1 – 5)
- Return to the scribe with a strong deck and a thousand crowns for the entry fee. Talk to the scribe.

What constitutes an "above-average Gwent Deck? Well, the sniveling scribe who dictates whether you're ready for this quest has a special system that counts specific cards (that you've obtained by beating certain Gwent opponents), and he assigns them a "Tournament Value." He keeps this information to himself; it is never shared with you. The only information you receive is the previously-listed Objective, which distills all of the Scribe's calculations into an overall rating from 1 to 5. Simply return to the Scribe with a "current collection rating" of five. Easier said than done!

The Scribe's secret card values can range from 0 to 7 points, depending on the card's abilities and power. The adjacent table lists every Gwent card the Scribe deems worthy of value. The higher, the better! To take part in this tournament, the sum of your Tournament Value points in your deck must be bigger than 70 (which will update your Objective and increase your rating to "5"). It doesn't matter if you have a few power cards, or a load of weaker ones.

OBJECTIVE:

- Collection Rating: The Optimal Path to Success

So what's the fastest way to reach a deck worth 70 "Tournament Value Points" or more? By beating the following opponents in the Gwent Quests listed previously in this chapter, and in the following table! Of course, this isn't the easiest way to reach the total, as these Gwent players are no pushover! So if you're finding them too tough, look for cards listed in the "Powerful Cards to Find" table instead. However, as the tournament players in this quest are among the most proficient, you should take every opportunity to practice first.

Tournament Value Table: Optimal Path

Opponent	Location	Quest	Gwent Card to Win (Tournament Value)

Gwent: Secondary Quest: High Stakes

Meet And Mingle: Prelude To The Tournament

OBJECTIVE:

- Mingle with the other contestants.

IT'S ON THE CARDS: HIGH STAKES PLANS

What about Tim Knott? Or Harald Featherbuns? Or even Bramble Fruntenstroch? These are contestants too, but are faced by your main opponents in the opening rounds, and you don't play them.

Not sure you'll win against this Halfling mushroom-picker? Then it's wise to save your progress before each and every match.

IT'S OFF THE CARDS: A LANGUISHING LOSER

Did you lose any of your matches? Then Sasha comes over, asks about the deal, and you must agree to it. If you do, you can stay until the matches conclude, but can't partake in any more of them. This quest isn't named "High Stakes" for nothing, you know!

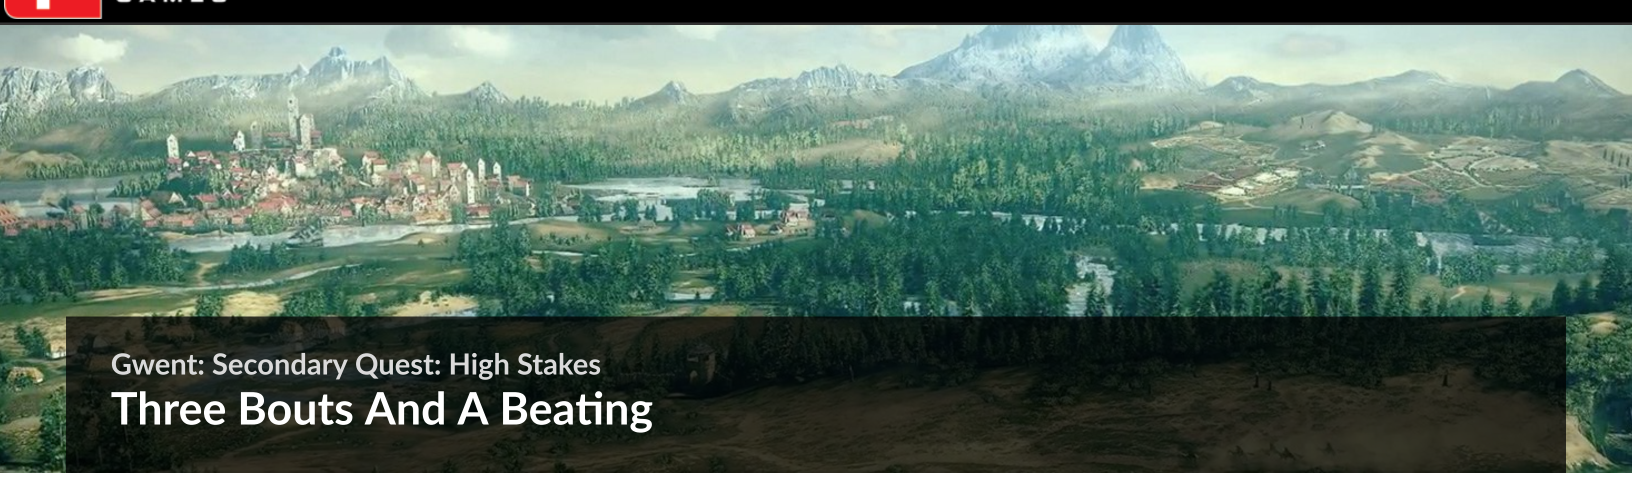
Madame Sasha

Tim Knott

Harald Featherbuns

Bramble Fruntenstroch

You meet one of the contestants; a comely woman named Sasha who talks to you about the rest of the players, and their hangers-on. She tells you of Patrick Hazelnut, who never goes anywhere without his three warrior women (with other talents, too). There's Bernard Tulle, a Halfling farmer. There's Finneas, a half-elf who hates outcasts (rather odd, considering his lineage). And of course, there's Count Tybalt himself, who is reputed to be fabulously wealthy. Mingle in the room, visiting Patrick, Bernard, and Finneas, and discover Sasha's overviews are very accurate. Then the Count appears. After laying down the rules, and randomly assigning your first opponent (Bernard Tulle), the tournament begins!

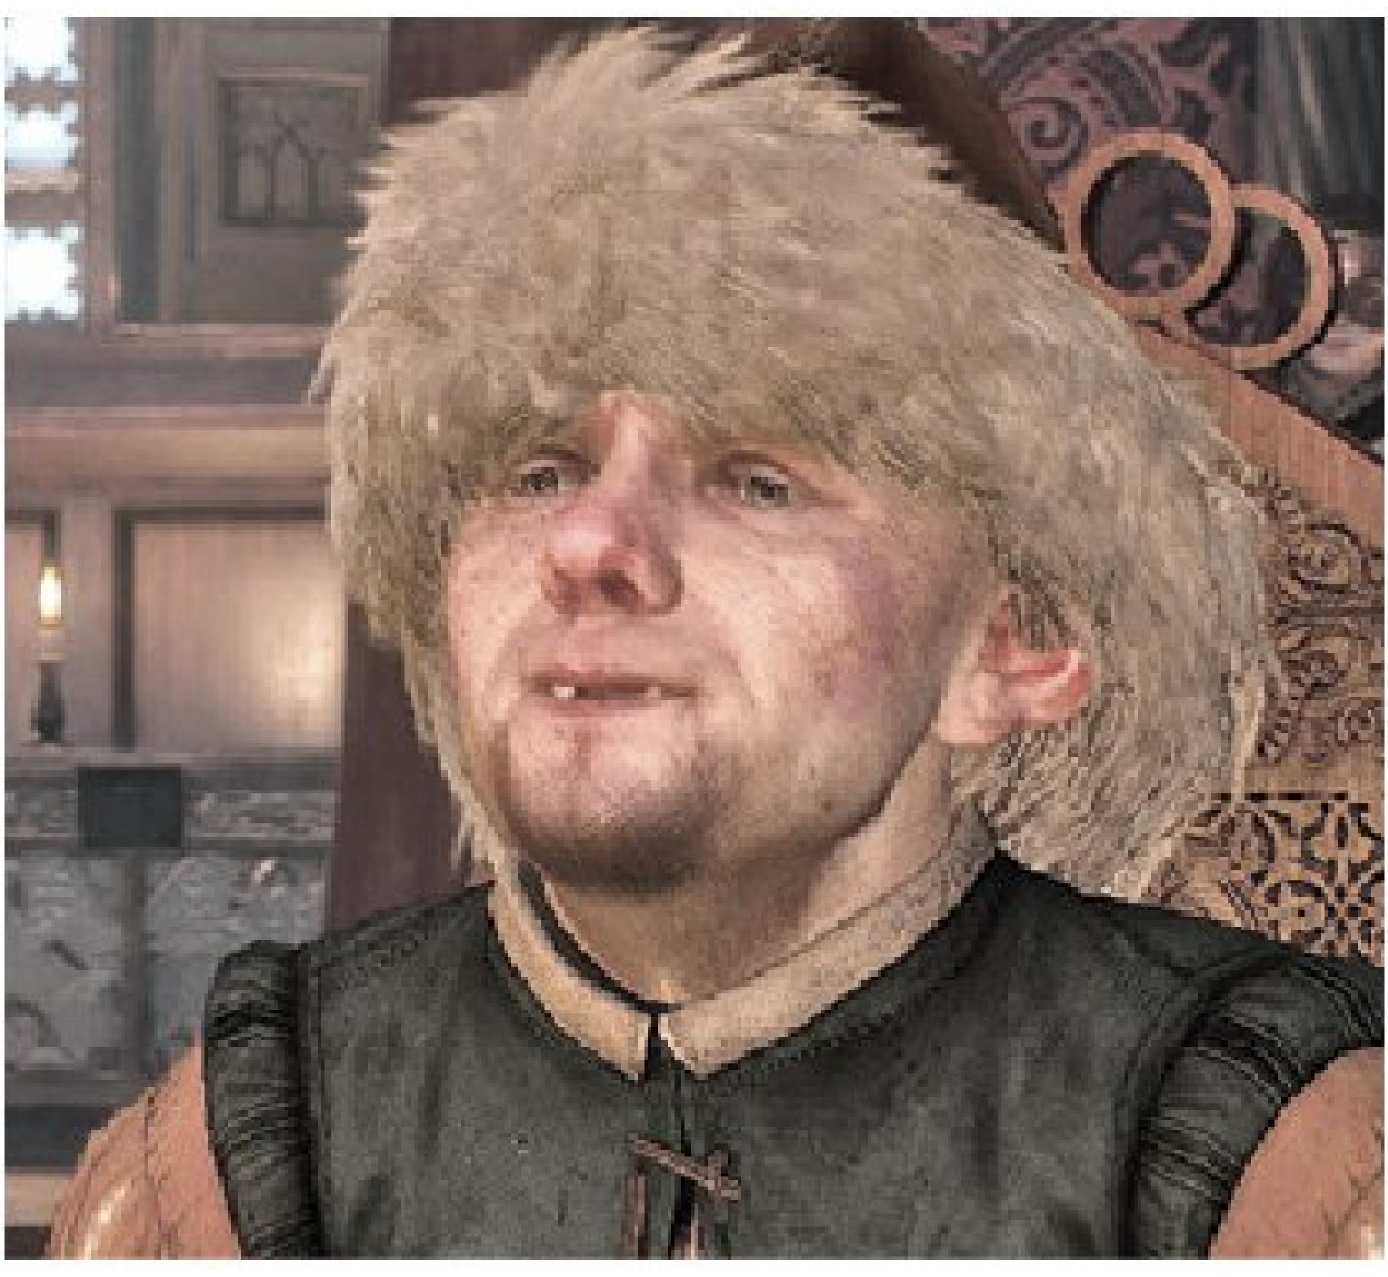


Gwent: Secondary Quest: High Stakes

Three Bouts And A Beating

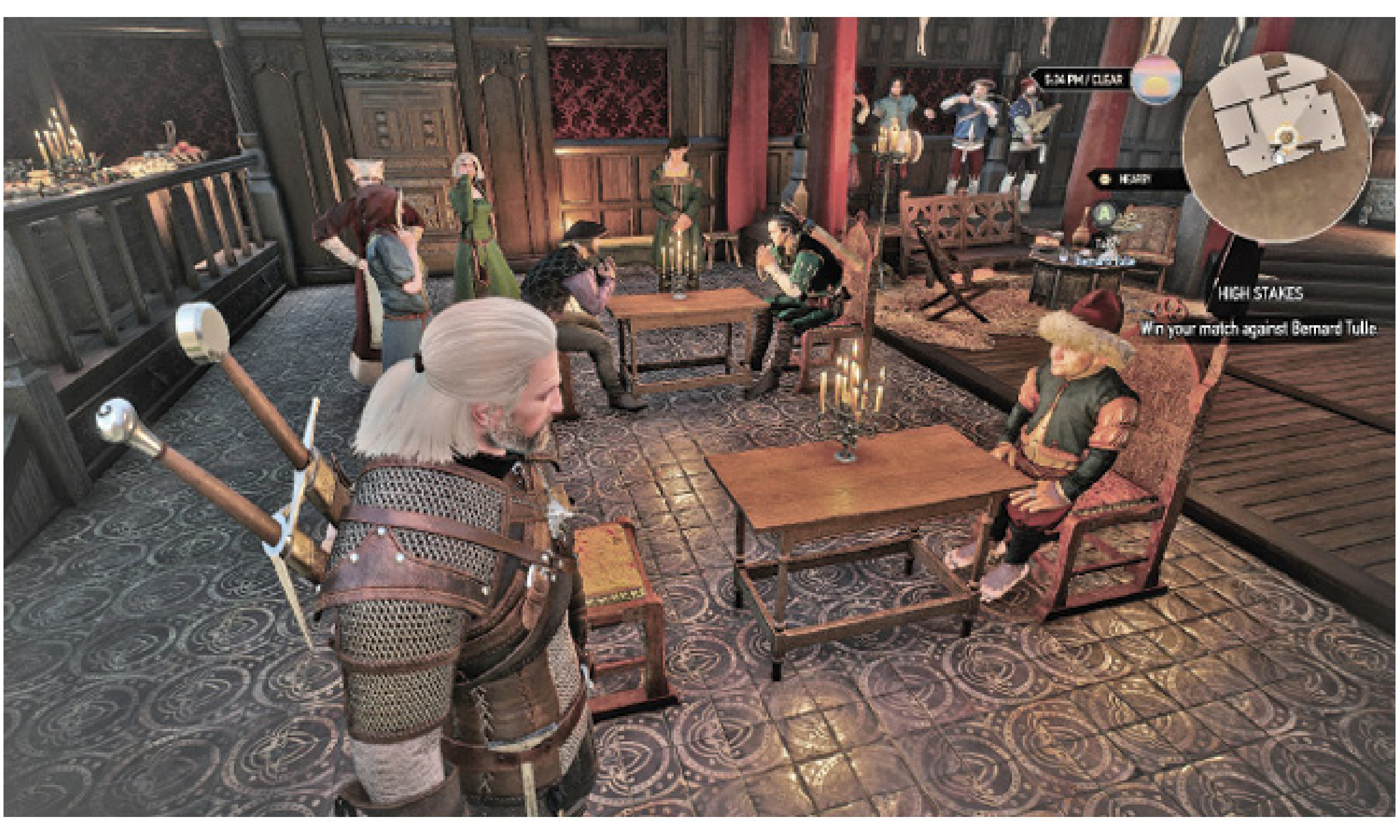
OBJECTIVE:

- Win your match against Bernard Tulle.



Bernard Tulle (Northern Realms Deck)

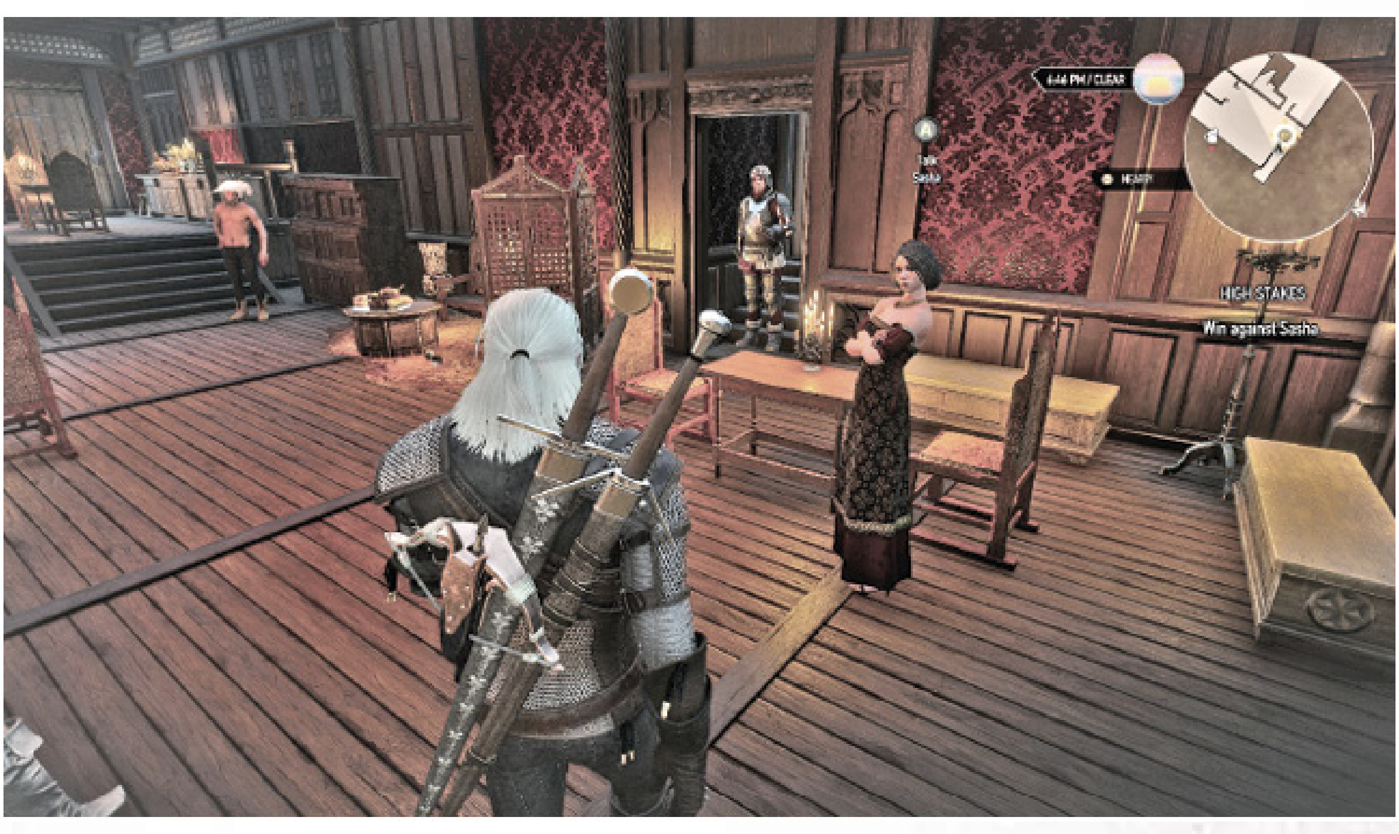
Sit down and play your first match with Bernard Tulle, who is a most gracious loser. Should you win, you receive Bernard's unique card; this is the only opportunity to win it.

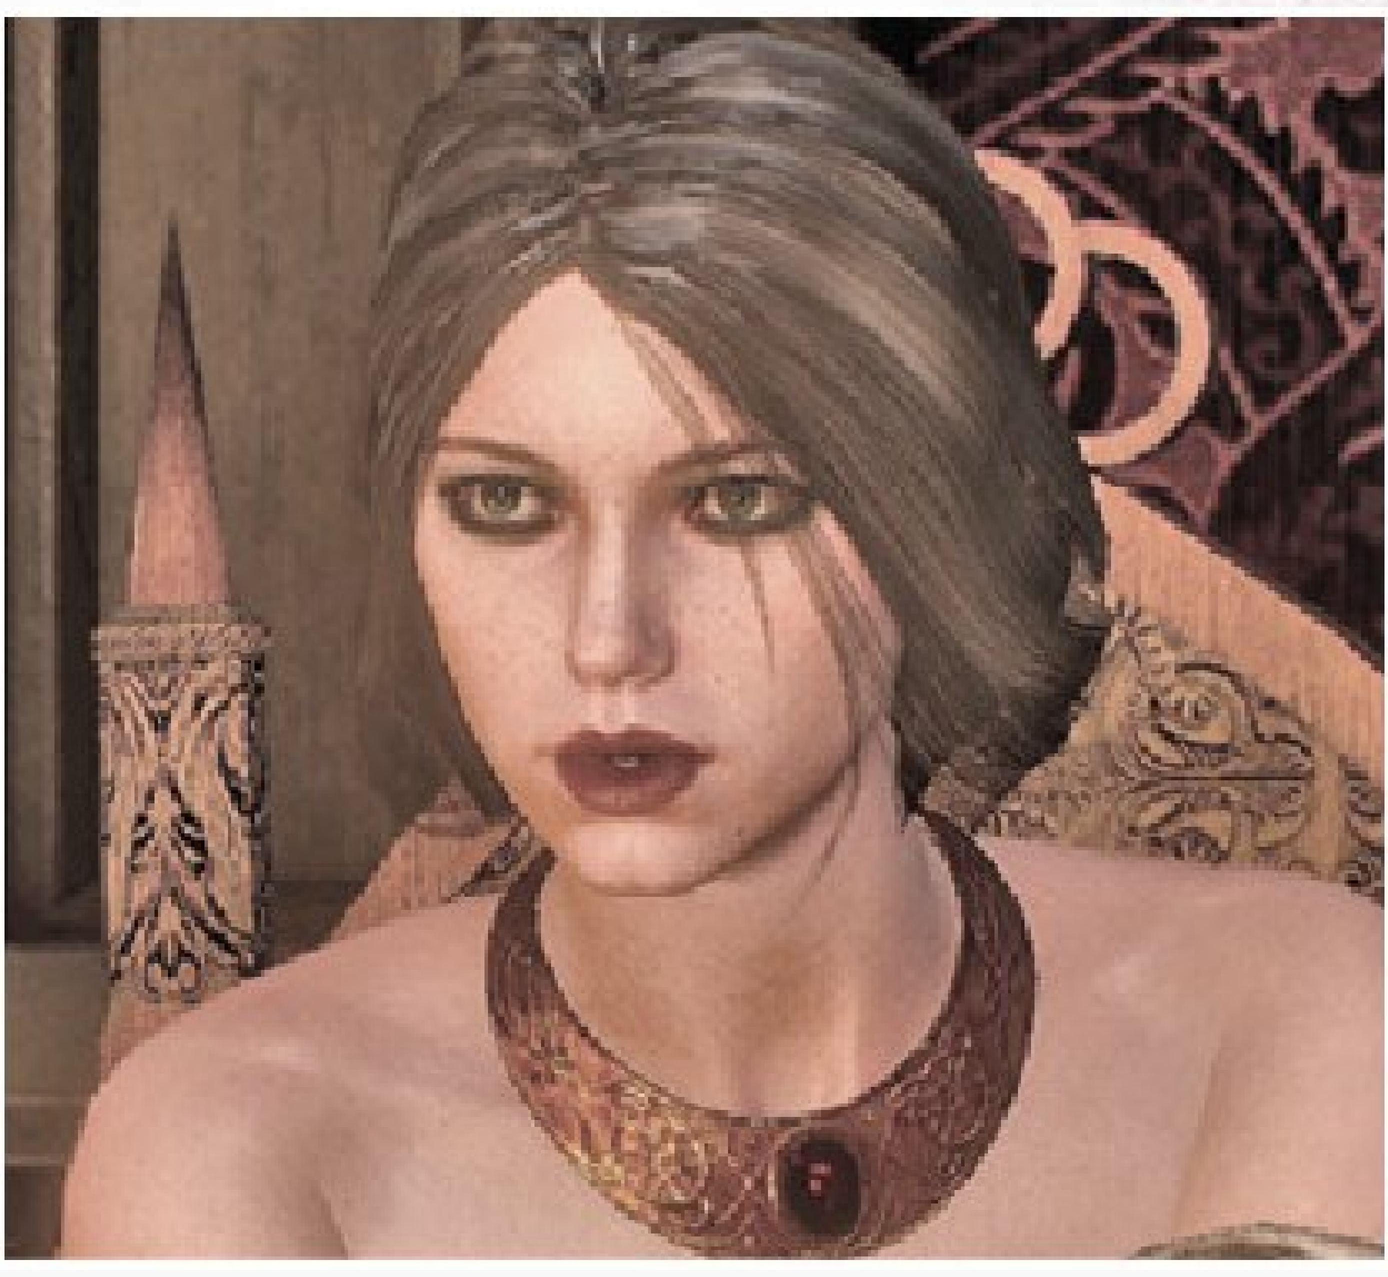


Items: Gwent Card: Foltest: The Steel Forged (Northern Realms Deck)

OBJECTIVE:

- Meet Sasha on the balcony. Return to the common room. Win against Sasha.





Madame Sasha (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

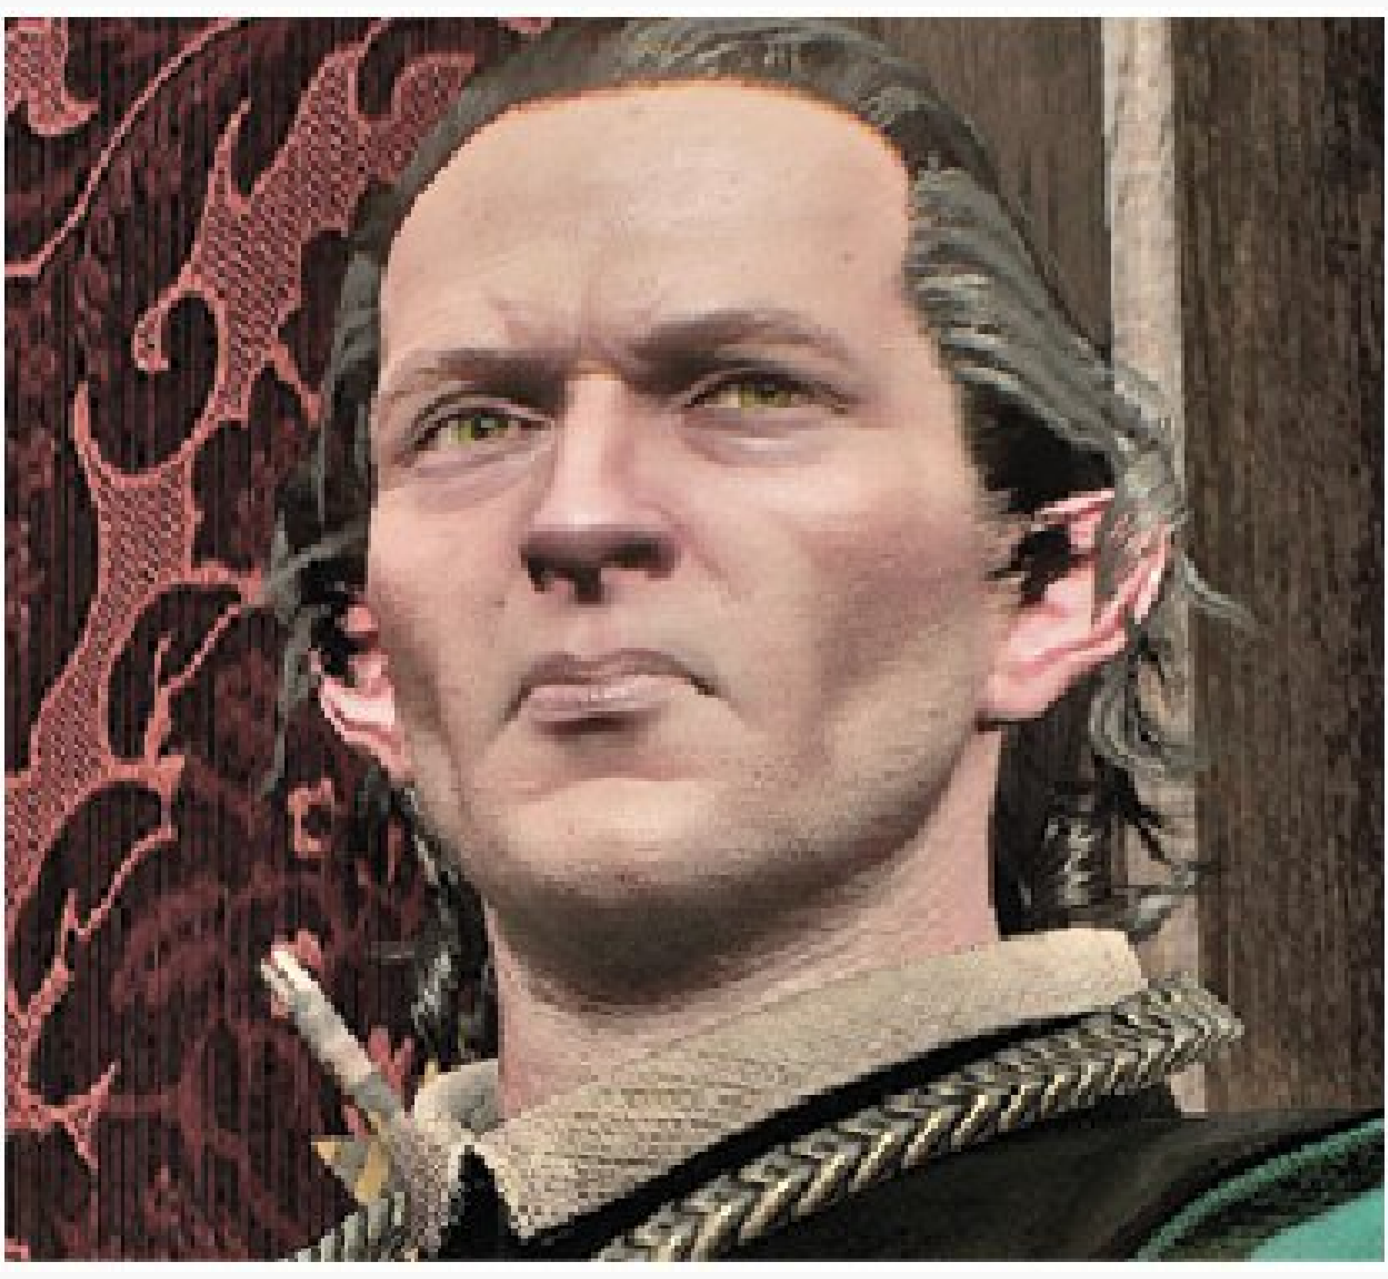
Afterward, Sasha heads over for a talk. She won her round, too. She also asks if you're interested in hearing a proposition from her. Answer in the affirmative. Or don't; the next round starts anyway.

Follow Sasha outside, where she asks whether you'd be interested in helping her steal the count's treasures. You also learn how she knows of you—through the sorceress Fringilla Vigo—as well as a different type of reward if you win the tournament outright. As luck would have it, you are paired with Sasha for your next bout, though she isn't about to give up without a battle of cards. Head upstairs to her table. Win, and receive the following unique card; this is the only opportunity to win it.

Items: Gwent Card: Emhyr var Emreis: The Relentless (Nilfgaardian Empire Deck)

OBJECTIVE:

- Win against Finneas. Defeat Finneas.



Finneas (Scoia'Tael Deck)

Your third bout is against the pompous ass Finneas. There's no time to save your progress; the bout commences immediately! You find his table, sit down, and give him another reason to hate mutants. Win, and receive the following unique card; this is the only opportunity to win it.

Assuming you win, Finneas rants about how he wants to gouge out your devilish eyes. Stand up, and then knock Finneas about the place with your fists until he's unconscious.

Items: Gwent Card: Francesca Findabair: Queen of Dol Blathanna (Scoia'Tael Deck)

Gwent: Secondary Quest: High Stakes

Final Bout: Out For The Count

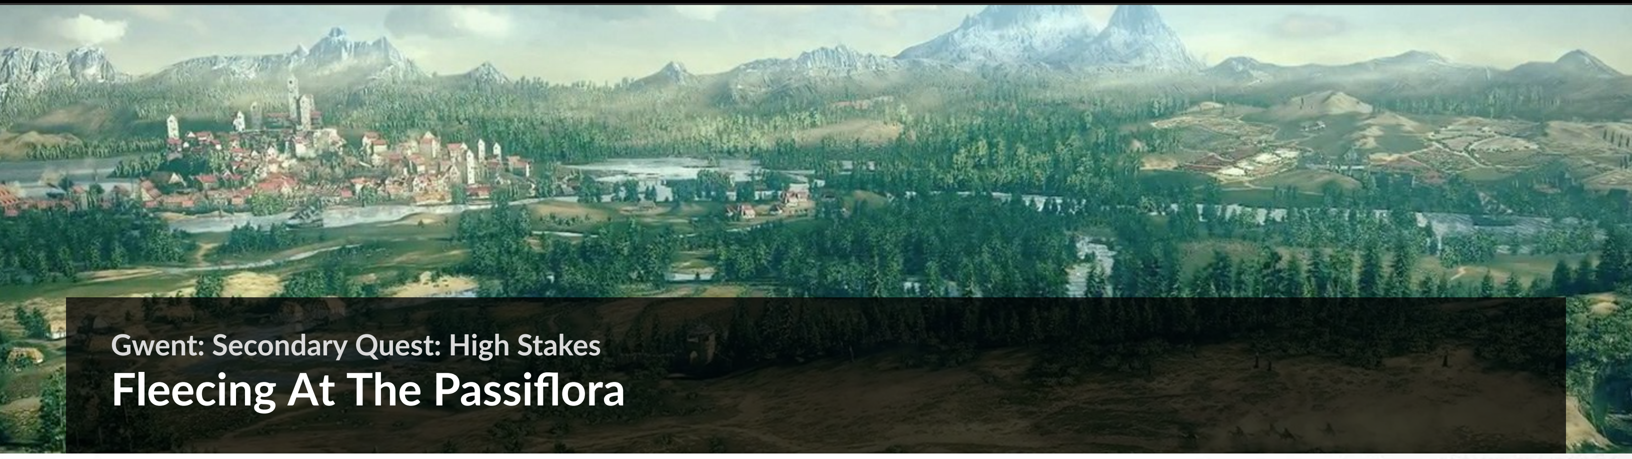
OBJECTIVE:

- Win against Count Tybalt.

Count Tybalt (Monster Deck)

The Count congratulates you on both your victories. Now sit down with him, and win your final bout with the Count! Once you claim the title of Tournament winner, you can take the Count's unique card; this is your only opportunity to win it.

Items: Gwent Card: Eredin: Destroyer of Worlds (Monster Deck)



Gwent: Secondary Quest: High Stakes

Fleecing At The Passiflora

OBJECTIVE:

- Follow the guard to the crime scene. Investigate the crime scene.

Whether you win or lose, to the victor goes the spoils…well, they would if they hadn't just been stolen! Sasha was in the same room as you, so she wasn't responsible.

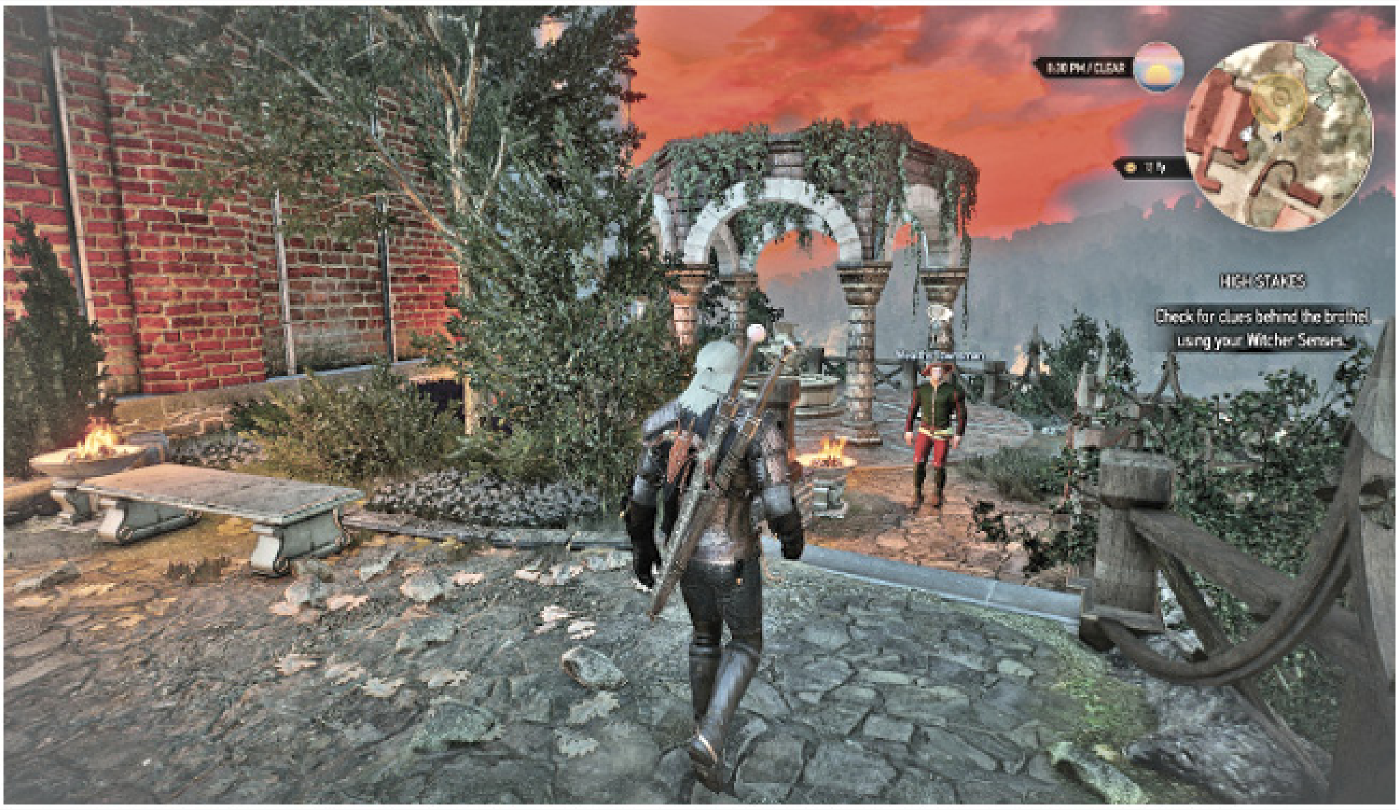
Agree to recover the coin with her. She immediately uses her verbal charms on a guard, which allows you upstairs to where the coin was stolen.

Once the guard departs, use your Witcher senses to uncover the following:

- A corpse showing wounds struck at odd angles.
- Something heavy, dragged onto the terrace.
- Head onto the terrace, turn right, and inspect a crossbow bolt with a line tied to it. The line has been cut; probably used to lower the sack of coin to an accomplice below.

OBJECTIVE:

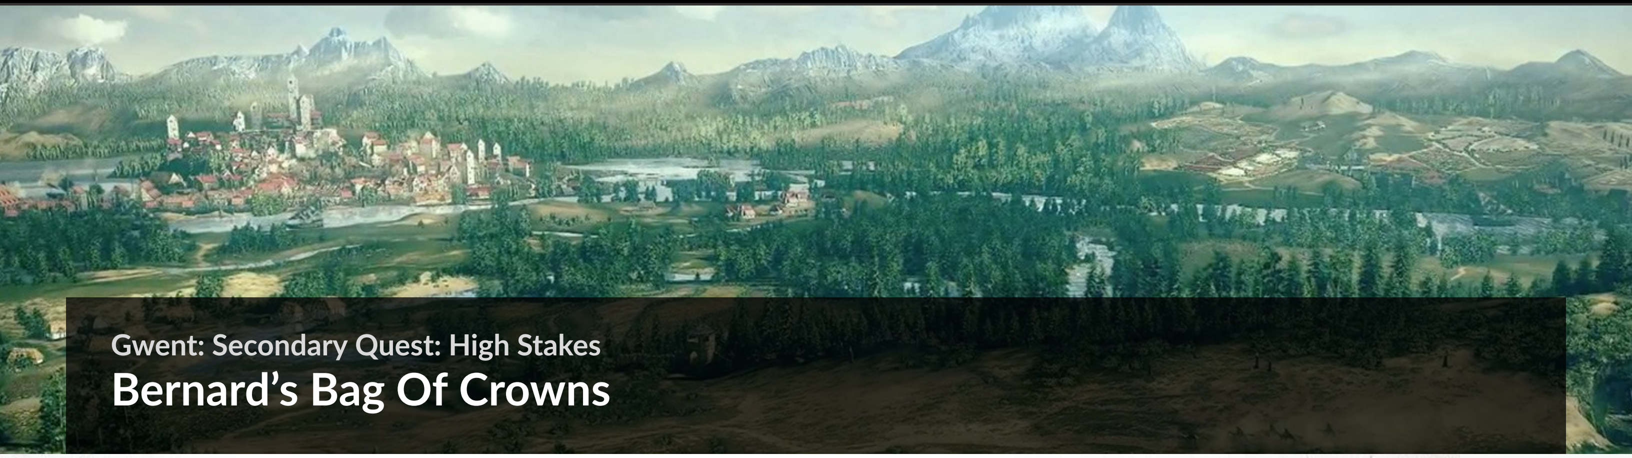
- Check the clues behind the brothel using your Witcher Senses. Use your Witcher Senses to see where the scent leads to.



HIGH STAKES

Check for clues behind the brothel using your Witcher Senses.

Descend through the Passiflora to the cobblestone streets outside, moving to the fountain (northeast of the building) where the other end of the rope may be found. Use your Witcher senses to spot it, and the faint smell of cinnamon. Follow the clouds of scent to a fallen crate on the nearby street. Sasha notices the guild markings belong to a trading company. She tells you where the ship had off-loaded its shipment of spices.



Gwent: Secondary Quest: High Stakes

Bernard’s Bag Of Crowns

OBJECTIVE:

- Meet Sasha at the warehouse. Find a way to get into the warehouse. Climb up into the warehouse. Check what’s going on. Defeat Bernard and his goons.

Head to the northern side of the Docks district, and locate the last warehouse along the wharf. Sasha stands there, telling you there are six fellows of disrepute inside. With the front door locked, head around to the rear of the structure, and look for the loading window about the wooden scaffolding. Clamber up onto it, into the warehouse, and drop down inside. A few moments later, you catch the thieves.

It seems your diminutive Gwent opponent was picking more than just mushrooms in preparation for this heist. After revealing Sasha’s true role in all of this, Bernard sets his goons on you. There’s Bernard and his five men to cut down to a size smaller than a Halfling.

END: IT’S DEFINITELY ON THE CARDS

Sasha wants half the loot. Accept her invitation for dinner at the Kingfisher Inn, and learn her true name, Cantarella (or at least, as close as you’re going to get to know). At dinner, talk soon turns to heading upstairs. You can:

- Agree, and spend some quality time in one of the Kingfisher Inn’s bedrooms, uncovering more about Sasha. Almost all of her, in fact.
- Disagree, and spend the night counting your cards, instead of girding your loins.

The quest then concludes.

Items: Carnal Knowledge: Madame Sasha.

Items: Gwent Card: Foltest: The Steel Forged, Gwent Card: Emyhr var Emreis: The Relentless, Gwent Card: Francesca Findabair: Queen of Dol Blathanna, Gwent Card: Eredin: Destroyer of Worlds

Gwent: Collect 'Em All

This Way Madness Lies...!

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

GWENT: COLLECT 'EM ALL

LOCATIONS: Everywhere!
CHARACTERS: Almost everyone!

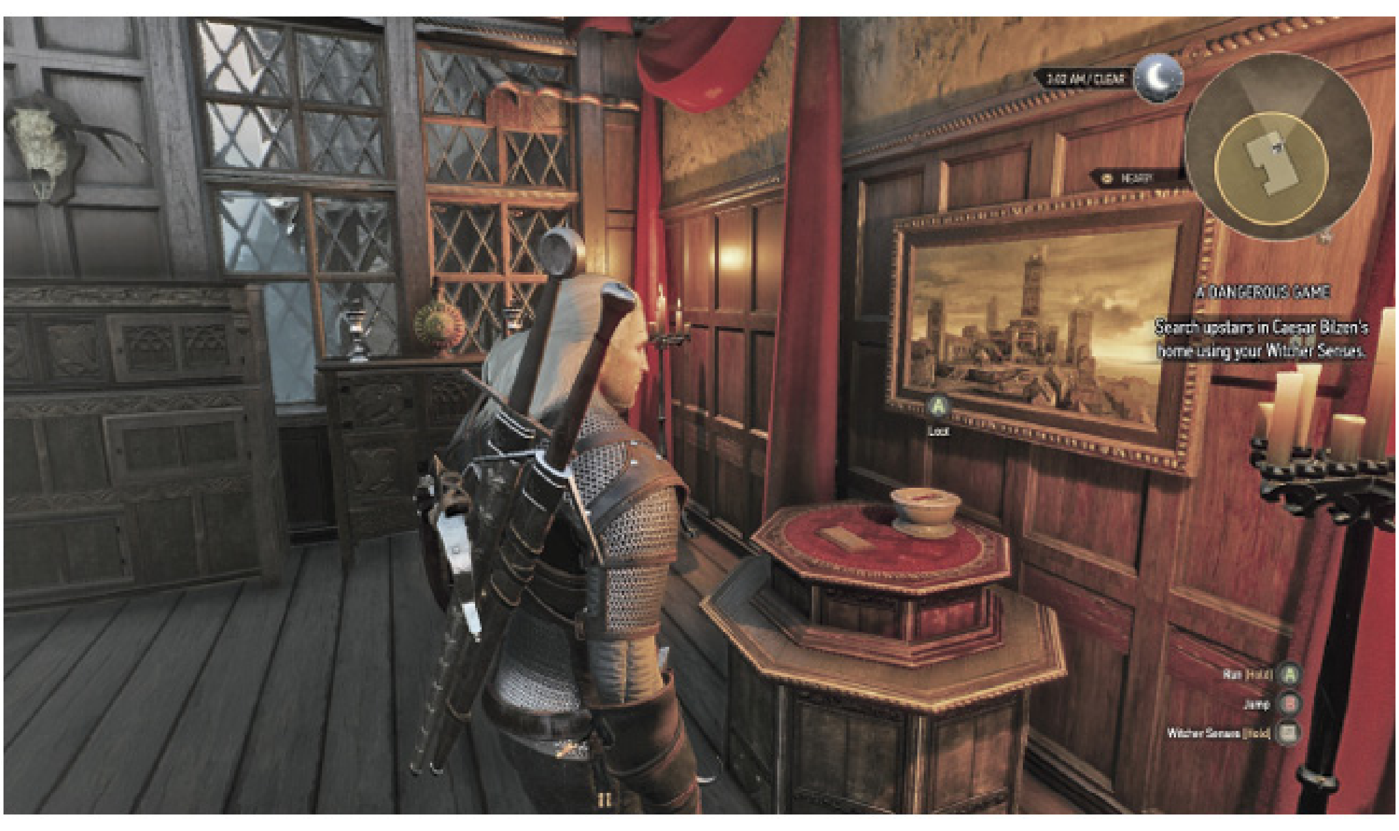
OBJECTIVE:

- Complete your collection of unique cards.

BEGINNING THIS QUEST

This quest begins the first time you obtain any Gwent card to add to your collection. A better question would be; "when does this quest end?" See below.

This just might be the most difficult non-combative quest you'll ever undertake! To complete it, you must collect every single Gwent card with a unique name; a total of 154 cards from the 223 available. The other 69 cards are duplicates.

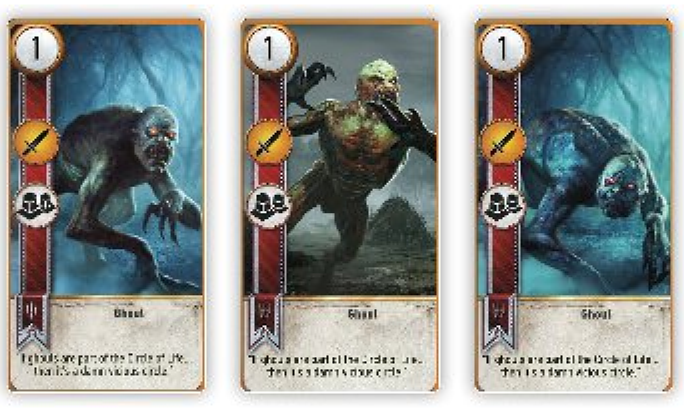


A DANGEROUS GAME
Search upstairs in Caesar Bilzen's home using your Witcher Senses.

A rare example of a card collected in a quest, and picked up by looking for it: Almost all the Gwent cards are collected from sellers and players.

OBJECTIVE:

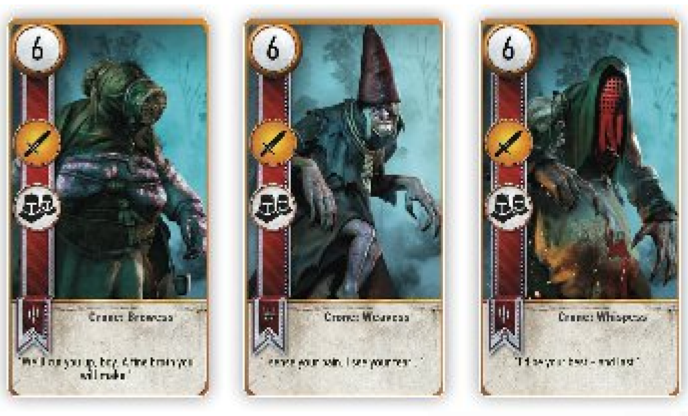
- Example: Ghouls (Not Unique)



For example, there are three "Ghoul" cards you can obtain (above), but you only need one for the quest objective. However, you should gather all three (and any other duplicate cards) if you want a more powerful deck.

OBJECTIVE:

- Example: Crones (Unique)



Some cards, such as the three "Crones" cards, have an identical first name, but a different second name. For example, "Crone: Brewess," "Crone: Weavess," and "Crone: Whispess." In this case, all three Crone cards need to be collected. The Leader cards have this distinction too, so you'll need all of each faction's leader cards, not just one.

IT'S ON THE CARDS: COMPLETING YOUR COLLECTION

The Complete Card Checklist in the Appendices chapter (page 782) has a list of how to obtain every single card, including all duplicates (so you can figure out which duplicate is easiest to get). All cards found during Hearts of Stone as well as Blood and Wine are included, too. Good luck!

GWENT CARD COMPLETION TABLE

The following table reveals the totals for each type of card, as well as how each type is collected in a general sense. For specific locations, consult the Complete Card Checklist (page 782). Remember! Only the unique cards are needed, not any duplicates.

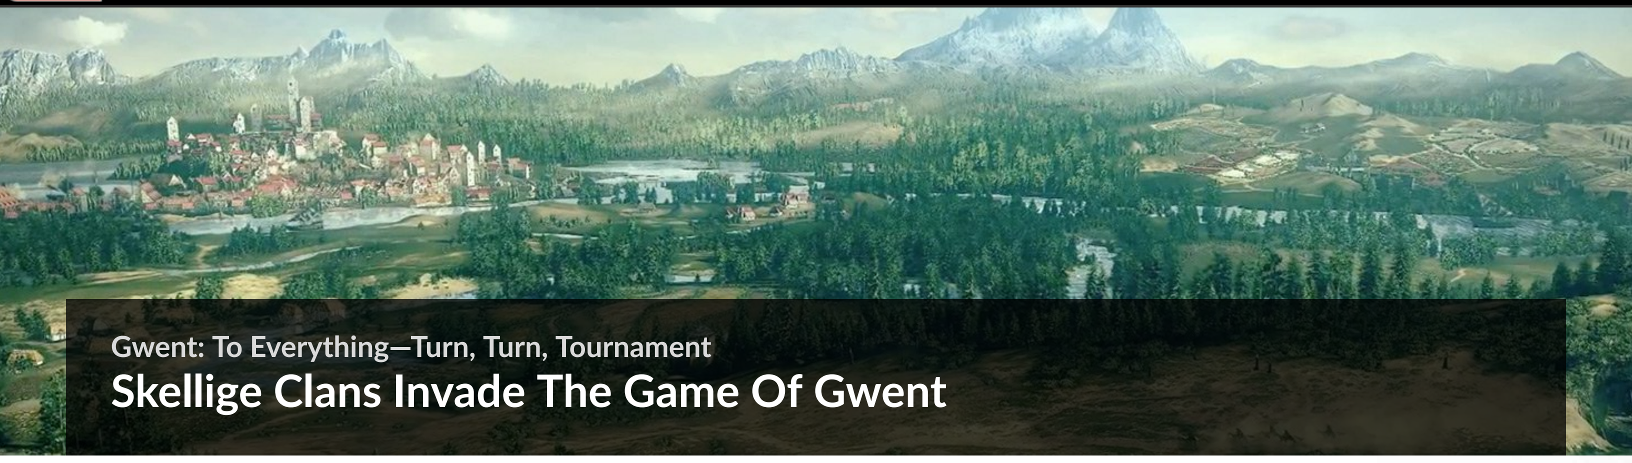
Gwent Quests: The Duchy Of Toussaint

Overview

There are three Gwent-related quests within the Duchy of Toussaint. The two main Gwent quests are covered in detail below. In addition, there is an unmarked Gwent quest ("Using Your Loaf*") which is detailed during the Blood and Wine Main Quest section, on page 351.



Gwent: To Everything—Turn, Turn, Tournament

Skellige Clans Invade The Game Of Gwent

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

BAW GWENT: TO EVERYTHING—TURN, TURN, TOURNAMENT

RELATED QUESTS: Gwent Quest: Never Fear, Skellige's Here!

LOCATIONS: The Pheasantry Inn (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: Count Martin Monnier, Dante d'Brado, Eric van Vrog, Agnetha Skold, Hamal ogn Dangbahli, His Excellency the Ambassador of the Empire of Nilfgaard Master von Hinn, Gromm, Argoin, Yaki Rafiberg, Herald Slama, Gwent Purists

ENEMIES: Argoin, Gromm, Yaki Rafiberg

REQUIRED ITEMS: A Skellige Clans Deck (mid-quest)

OBJECTIVES:

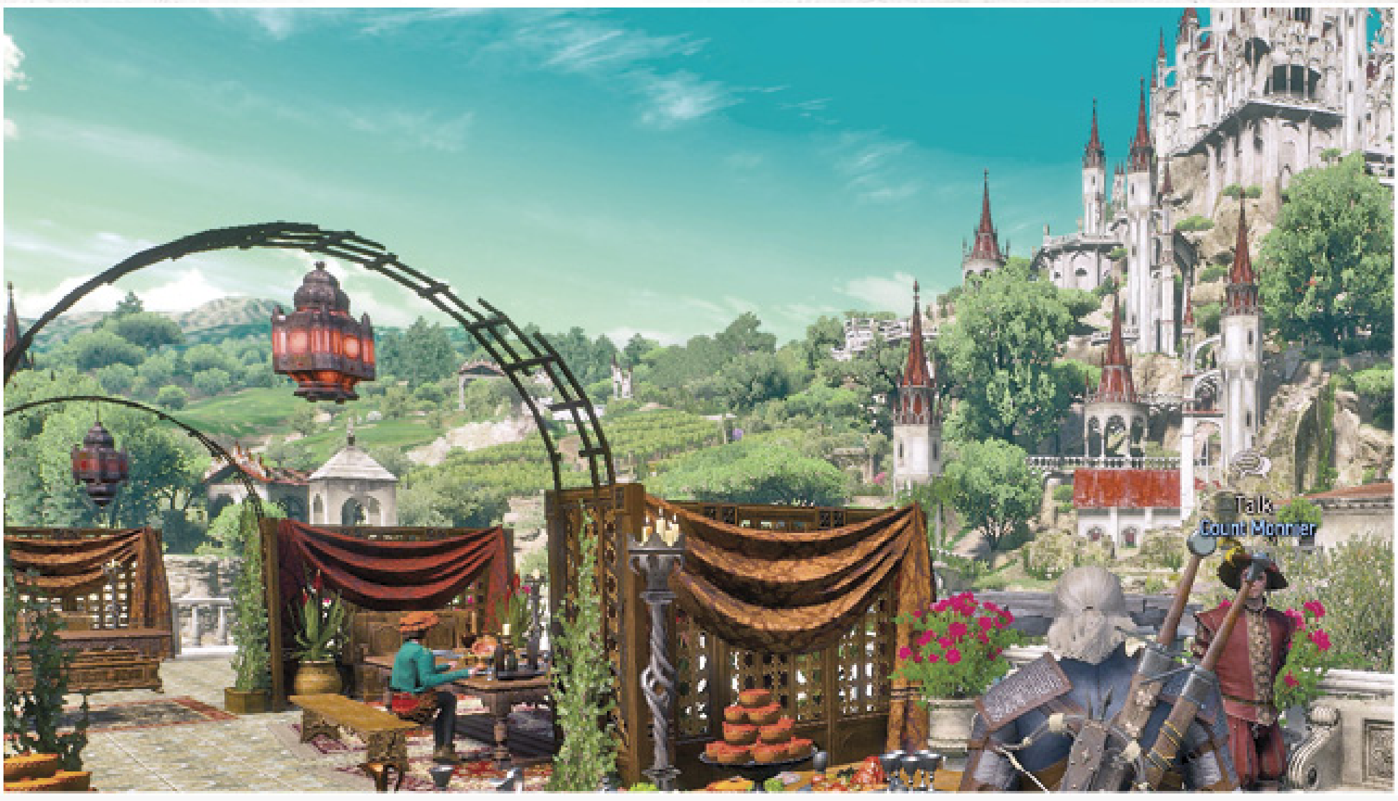
- Meet with the tournament's organizer.
- Win interesting cards from players in Toussaint, equal to a value of 24.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest can begin in one of three ways:

You can read a note pinned to a Notice Board, such as the one at the Gran'place (Beauclair), that reads "The Great Beauclair Gwent Tournament," which beckons interested players to register at the Pheasantry, and mentions a new Gwent faction developed by the organizer, Count Martin Monnier.

Alternatively, it can also be started by reading any of the Gwent Tournament Posters, which are hanging on various spots in the city. Or, you can start the quest by winning a Skellige Card from any of the Gwent playing Merchants in Toussaint.

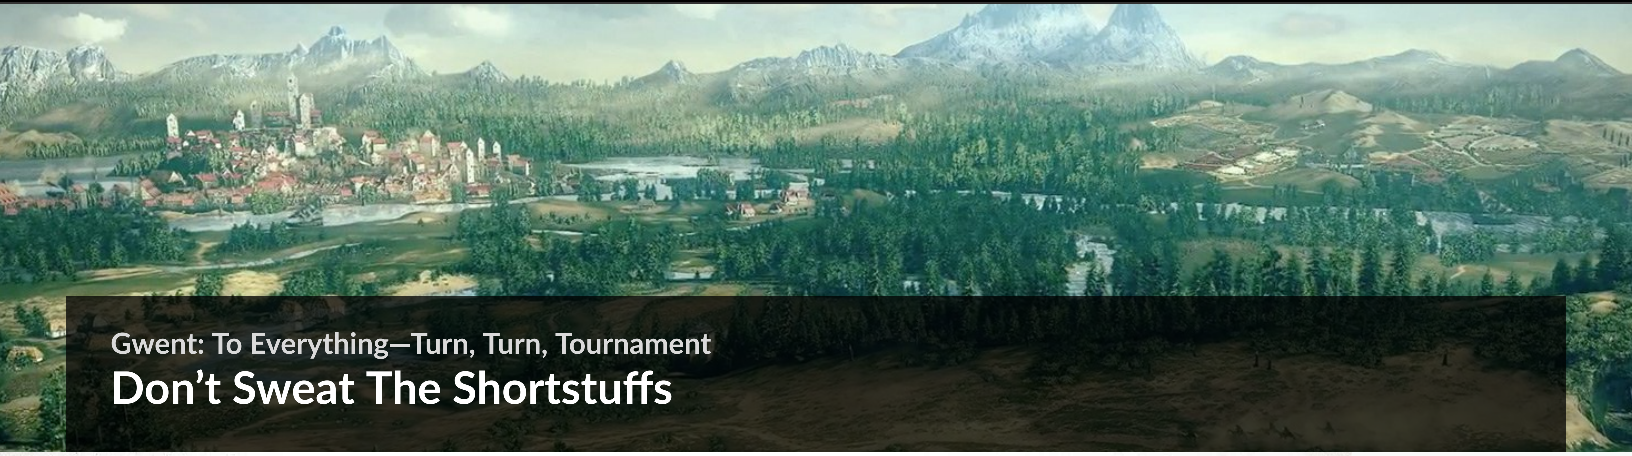


Visit The Pheasantry, head into this drinking establishment, and exit via the doors to the west, flanked by two of Count Monnier's guards. This leads to an exterior roof veranda offering spectacular views of the palace and lake, and steps down to the lakefront thoroughfares (another way to reach the Count). After Monnier is finished speaking to Dante d'Brado (some toff of no importance to you), sit down to chat with the Count. He explains the tournament is to be more than a mere diversion; he wishes to spread word of his dearly-departed brother's brainchild: a new Gwent faction called Skellige (or Skellige Clans).

You should ask him more about the faction, and where he got the idea from, and then agree to take part in the tournament. You are accepted, but on one condition; you must play using the Skellige Clans deck! After you understand each other, Monnier points to a fancy trophy (that would look great on your Corvo Bianco mantle), and hands over a basic Gwent deck. It seems Monnier's brother gave away or lost the best cards!

Items: Skellige Clans Deck (Base)

The new objective, to win interesting cards from players in Toussaint, is your next plan, up to a deck value of 24. Additionally, if you do not have the quest yet, you will get the Gwent Quest: Never Fear, Skellige's Here!, which will ask you to gather all remaining 19 cards from the Skellige Deck (see page 492). Once you have a deck worthy to play in the tournament, your objective updates again.

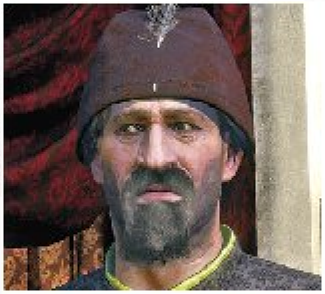


Gwent: To Everything—Turn, Turn, Tournament

Don’t Sweat The Shortstuffs

OBJECTIVE:

- Enter the tournament.

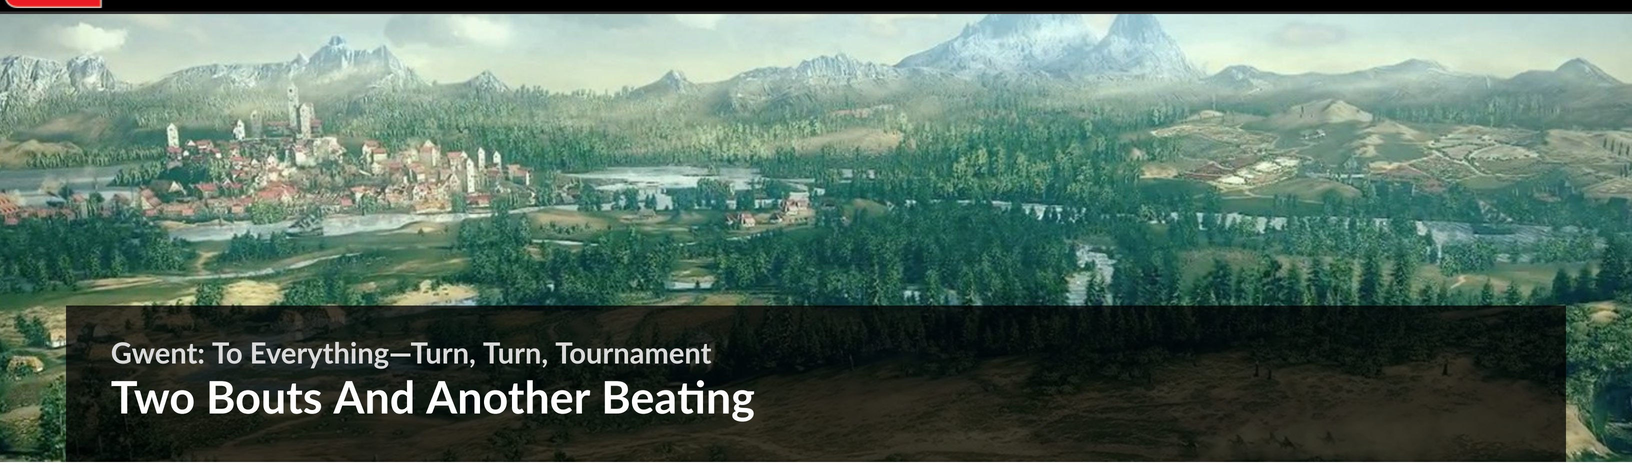


Eric van Vrog (Northern Realms Deck)

Agnetha Skold (Scoia'tael Deck)

Once you have a Skellige Deck King Bran himself would be chuffed to play with, return to The Pheasantry, and weave your way through the commotion at the main door (the only way into the inn). A group of Gwent purists lead by four dwarves are loudly protesting outside. Leave them to their seething rage, and speak to Count Monnier’s Guard. Present your deck and he lets you in.

Inside the inn, Count Monnier asks how you’ve found the Skellige Clans deck; answer as you wish, before he begins the introductions regarding the finest Gwent players from the farthest corners of the globe. These include an Ofieri merchant, a lass from Skellige itself, and a Nilfgaardian Ambassador who’ll be facing the winner in a semi-final. Before you begin, you can optionally ask what factions the others will play, and what the protestors are wanting. Then request that the tournament begins.



Hamal ogn Dangbahli (Monster Deck)

The tournament begins! In round one, Agnetha Skold faces Eric von Vrog, while you pit your wits against Hamal the Ofieri merchant. Hamal has a side wager he'd like you to think about; he's taken with the silver sword you have slung on your back. If you win, he'll give you a steel sword that is equally as precious, but if you lose…he gets your sword! You can:

- Refuse this crazy plan; you don't want to lose that sword! The Gwent bout continues as would a regular match. If you win, you progress to the next round. If you lose, you play no more matches, but this quest still continues (and the trophy won't be yours).
- Agree to this. The Gwent bout continues, and afterward, you must surrender your silver sword if you lose. However, if you win, receive one of the merchant's prized swords, Blave!

Items: Steel Sword: Blave

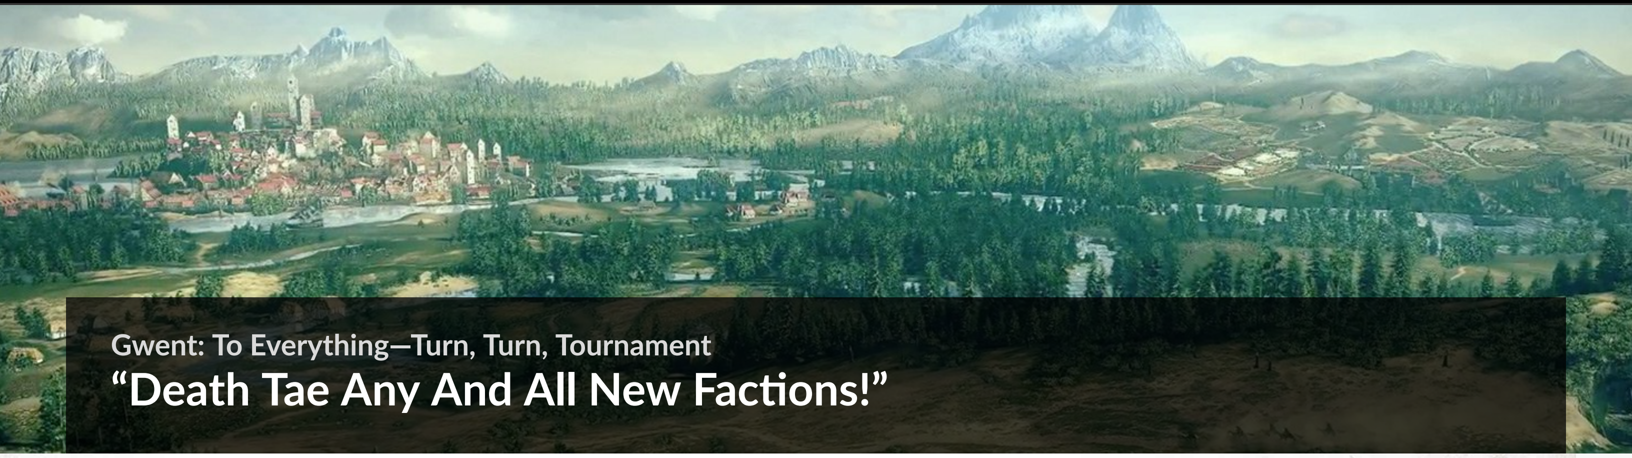
SWORD STORING FOR FUN AND GAMES

Are you concerned about losing a prized silver sword? Then simply swap it with any old silver sword you're carrying (or storing) before you head to The Pheasantry to begin the competition. That way, Hamal doesn't get anything irreplaceable. Or you could reload your game.

His Excellency the Ambassador of the Empire of Nilfgaard, Master von Hinn (Nilfgaard Deck)

With the first bout out of the way, it seems Eric van Vrog and Agnetha Skold haven't had quite the civilized bout that you and Hamal enjoyed. Agnetha accuses Eric of cheating, but doesn't win any diplomatic awards with her tone. Both are ejected from the tournament (and you don't ever play either of them). The tournament continues.

- If you won against Hamal, you face Master von Hinn in the semi-final. Beat him, and you're one step closer to that trophy! Lose, and it remains out of your grasp, but the quest continues.
- If you lost against Hamal, he faces Master von Hinn in the semi-final.

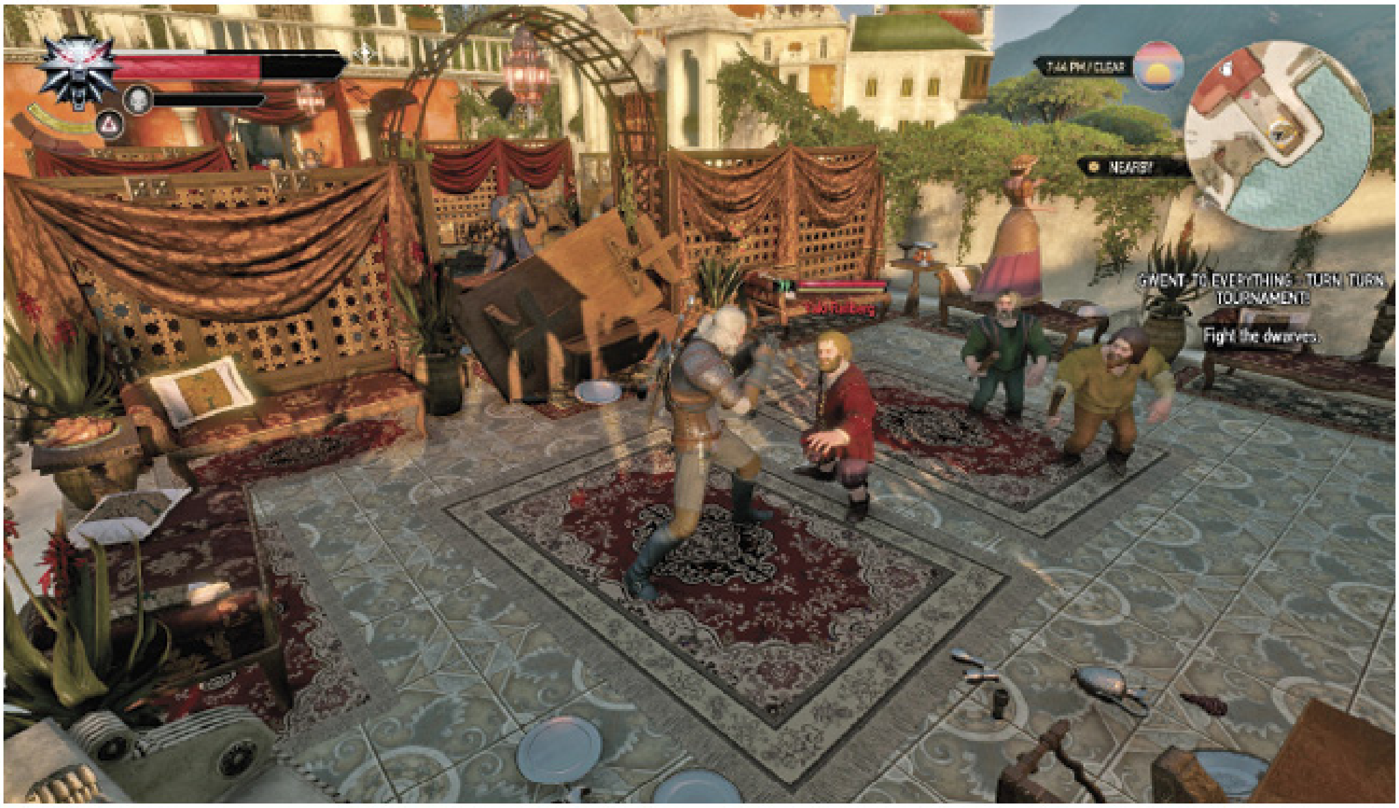


Gwent: To Everything—Turn, Turn, Tournament

“Death Tae Any And All New Factions!”

OBJECTIVE:

- Fight the dwarves.



Once the semi-final match is completed, there’s a slight disruption to the competition, as the Gwent protestors have managed to break through the Count’s guards, and are yelling relatively tame obscenities (for dwarves) from the opposite end of the veranda. You can answer their demands to stop using the Skellige Clans deck in any way you wish. It seems the dwarves think Gwent is an ancient pastime with rules set ages ago; there should be four (and only four) factions. It’s tradition! In fact, the leader of the dwarves feels so strongly about these convictions he’s ready to “break heids” in defense of it. In fact, he’s about to prove it!

A bout of fisticuffs then breaks out, with you up against three dwarves, each with mucky mouths and fast fists. Pummel them and keep moving in this relatively confined area. Whether you beat them into submission or not, the conversation continues, and takes a less violent turn when you mention Zoltan Chivay. They know all about that rascal, and ask how he is. Answer as you wish. When alcohol is introduced into the conversation, the Gwent purists soften their tone a bit, and Yaki Rafiberg declares himself a participant in the tournament; he’ll play the victor, if only to see whether this Skellige faction’s worth—to use his vernacular—a “flamin’ bag o’ shite,” or not.

Gwent: To Everything—Turn, Turn, Tournament

A Gwent Master And A Grand Prize

Yaki Rafiberg (Gwent Purist, Scoia'tael Deck)

Before the party-crashers get their chance to play a round of Gwent, you must face off against Count Monnier (if you beat Master von Hinn in the semi-final). This is a dream come true for him; two finalists using his brother's deck! Win, and the trophy is yours! Lose, and the trophy isn't yours. Either way, the Count is most pleased that this has become a legitimate Gwent faction.

Or as Yaki Rafiberg would describe it; "a bundle of pish!" He saunters in, and sits down at the table to challenge the victor. This doesn't affect your trophy rights, but if you've beaten Monnier in the final, you have a sit down and can school the dwarf at his own game. Win, and the dwarf accepts the Skellige Clans is a great addition to the game. Lose, and it takes Count Monnier to convince him of this. The quest concludes with a toast to the premiere of the new faction. Answer the Count as you wish, claim a small reward, and a large trophy.

If you won against all the opponents (including the dwarf) and you do not have the second leader card for the Skellige Deck yet, Count Monnier will gift it to you. If you won against everybody but already have it, he will double the prize (1000 crowns).

Items: Crowns (500), The Victor's Cup

Gwent: Never Fear, Skellige's Here!

Gathering Of The Card Clan

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

BAW GWENT: NEVER FEAR, SKELLIGE'S HERE!

RELATED QUESTS: Gwent Quest: To Everything – Turn, Turn, Tournament!

OBJECTIVE:

- Collect all the missing cards in the Skellige Deck (19).

This quest automatically starts after you meet Count Monnier on the veranda adjoining The Pheasantry Inn, by the lake in Beauclair, and agree to build a strong Skellige Clans deck. As the Count's brother gave away or lost many of the key cards, you must face local Gwent competitors and win the missing cards to bolster your deck, and gain tournament practice to boot. After agreeing to this, the main Gwent Quest: To Everything – Turn, Turn, Tournament! updates, and this quest begins.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Secondary Gwent Quest: To Everything – Turn, Turn, Tournament. However, you can challenge the 19 Gwent players that offer Skellige cards at any time during your adventures in Toussaint, and each win counts toward the total cards you need and will start the quest, even if you do not have the Gwent tournament quest yet.

SKELLIGE GWENT: INTERESTING CARDS, INTERESTING PEOPLE

There is another objective, "Win interesting cards from players in Toussaint (card value must be at least 24)," that is also now active, as part of Gwent Quest: To Everything – Turn, Turn, Tournament! This simply allows you to track how many cards you need to collect to have a "minimum deck" that is allowed in the Tournament.

However, a "minimum" deck isn't likely to win the tournament, so it is recommended you collect the full complement of 19 additional cards to bolster your deck fully. A full Skellige Clans Deck consists of 43 cards: 24 from the Base Deck that Count Monnier gives you, and 19 you win during this quest.

It isn't necessary to play as the Skellige Clans faction when acquiring the 19 additional cards to add to the 24 cards in your Base Deck, but it is worth practicing to ensure you have a complete knowledge of how all the Skellige Clans cards work (with their specific and group abilities). To this end, you should:

Consult the Gwent Training chapter of this guide, starting on page 92, which details all necessary tactics when using the Skellige Clans Deck.

Visit Corvo Bianco Vineyard (which you own), speak to your Majordomo Barnabas-Basil Foulty, and ask if he'd like a Gwent game. You can choose any deck, at three different strengths, to play against; this can really sharpen your Gwent skills before the tournament!

The 19 cards you must win can be collected in any order; the list below shows the optimal path for the least amount of back-and-forth maneuvering. Also listed is the location of each player, and the "Gwent Deck" they use when playing you.

Remember you can bet to win each bout as you go, meaning this quest can allow you to win a sizeable amount of crowns (up to 100 crowns per match).

Once all 19 cards have been won, this quest concludes.

Despite the name, you don't need to actually visit the Isles of Skellige to accrue and bolster this deck!

The Heroes’ Pursuits: Fyresdal
The Heroes’ Pursuits: Kaer Trolde
The Heroes’ Pursuits: For the Goddess’ Glory!

OVERVIEW: FISTICUFFS AND EQUINE PRACTICE

In addition to saving the Northern Realms from the threat of the Wild Hunt, there are additional activities you can try, and two types of pastime are fistfighting and horse racing. The former allows you to hone your unarmed fighting skills, and should be undertaken after reading up on the Training section dedicated to this activity. The latter enables you to equip Roach with additional saddlebags, saddles, and blinders that help you store more equipment, increase Roach’s stamina, and reduce Roach’s panic level respectively. All are well worth attempting; the horse races should be located as soon as possible. Both are a good way to make a little coin, too.

AVAILABLE QUESTS: FISTS OF FURY

There are a total of 17 Fistfights to attempt (six quests): There are four in Velen, four in Novigrad City, four in Skellige, with a final Champion bout in Skellige once all of the original 12 fistfights are completed. In addition, there are three fistfights in Toussaint (Beauclair City), and a final Champion bout once all three Beauclair fistfights are completed.

AVAILABLE QUESTS: HORSE RACES

There are a total of seven horse racing quests (not including the horse-racing obstacle course you must complete during Blood and Wine Secondary Quest: The Warble of a Smitten Knight on page 443). There are three races in Crow’s Perch (one quest), four races in Velen (one quest), and four races across Skellige (four quests). In addition, there is a Hearts of Stone Race in Gustfields (one quest). They are presented as follows:

Fists Of Fury

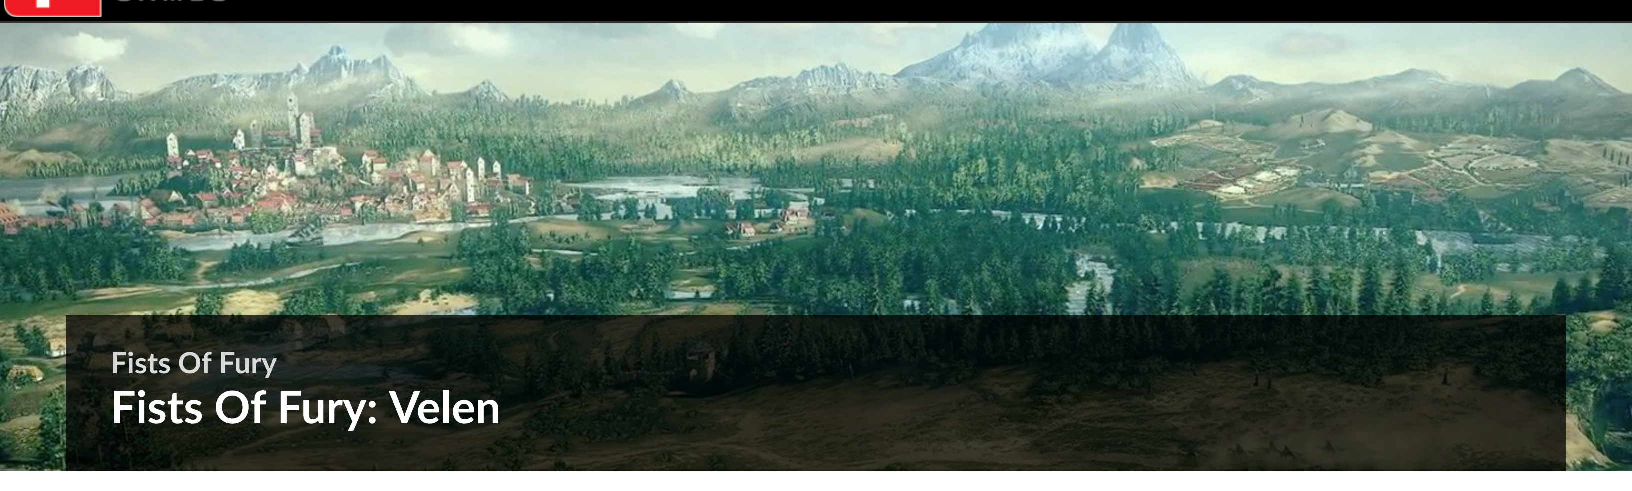
Helpful Tactics

Throughout your travels, you may encounter a throng of excitable townsfolk baying for one of two pummeling pugilists. These are (unsanctioned) fistfights, and there are 13 to attempt (four in Velen, four in Novigrad, and five in Skellige), each with varying degrees of difficulty. All are optional, but you must defeat the first three opponents in each land mass before the fourth can be faced. Should you defeat all 12, a thirteenth and final bout is offered.

In most cases, simply find the bookie (or fightmaster in some parts of Skellige) who oversees the fight, and speak to him. He'll ask how much you want to bet on yourself. Choose an amount, before you're introduced to your rival. Then, better him in a one-on-one fistfight. No weapons are allowed.

BOXING CLEVER

It's incredibly helpful to read up on the tactics to use for fistfights that are detailed in the Training chapter of this guide. Be sure to familiarize yourself with the correct moves and timing, any potions you can take, and other cunning plans, before attempting any of the following bouts of fisticuffs.



Fists Of Fury

Fists Of Fury: Velen

DANGER ALERT
SPOILER ALERT
FISTS OF FURY: VELEN

LOCATIONS: Inn at the Crossroads, Blackbough, Lindenvale, Crow’s Perch

CHARACTERS: Bookies, Blacksmith, Jonas, Stan “Fishgulper”, Sergeant

OBJECTIVES:

- Defeat Smithy.
- Defeat Jonas.
- Defeat Fishgulper.
- Fight the sergeant for theVelen title.

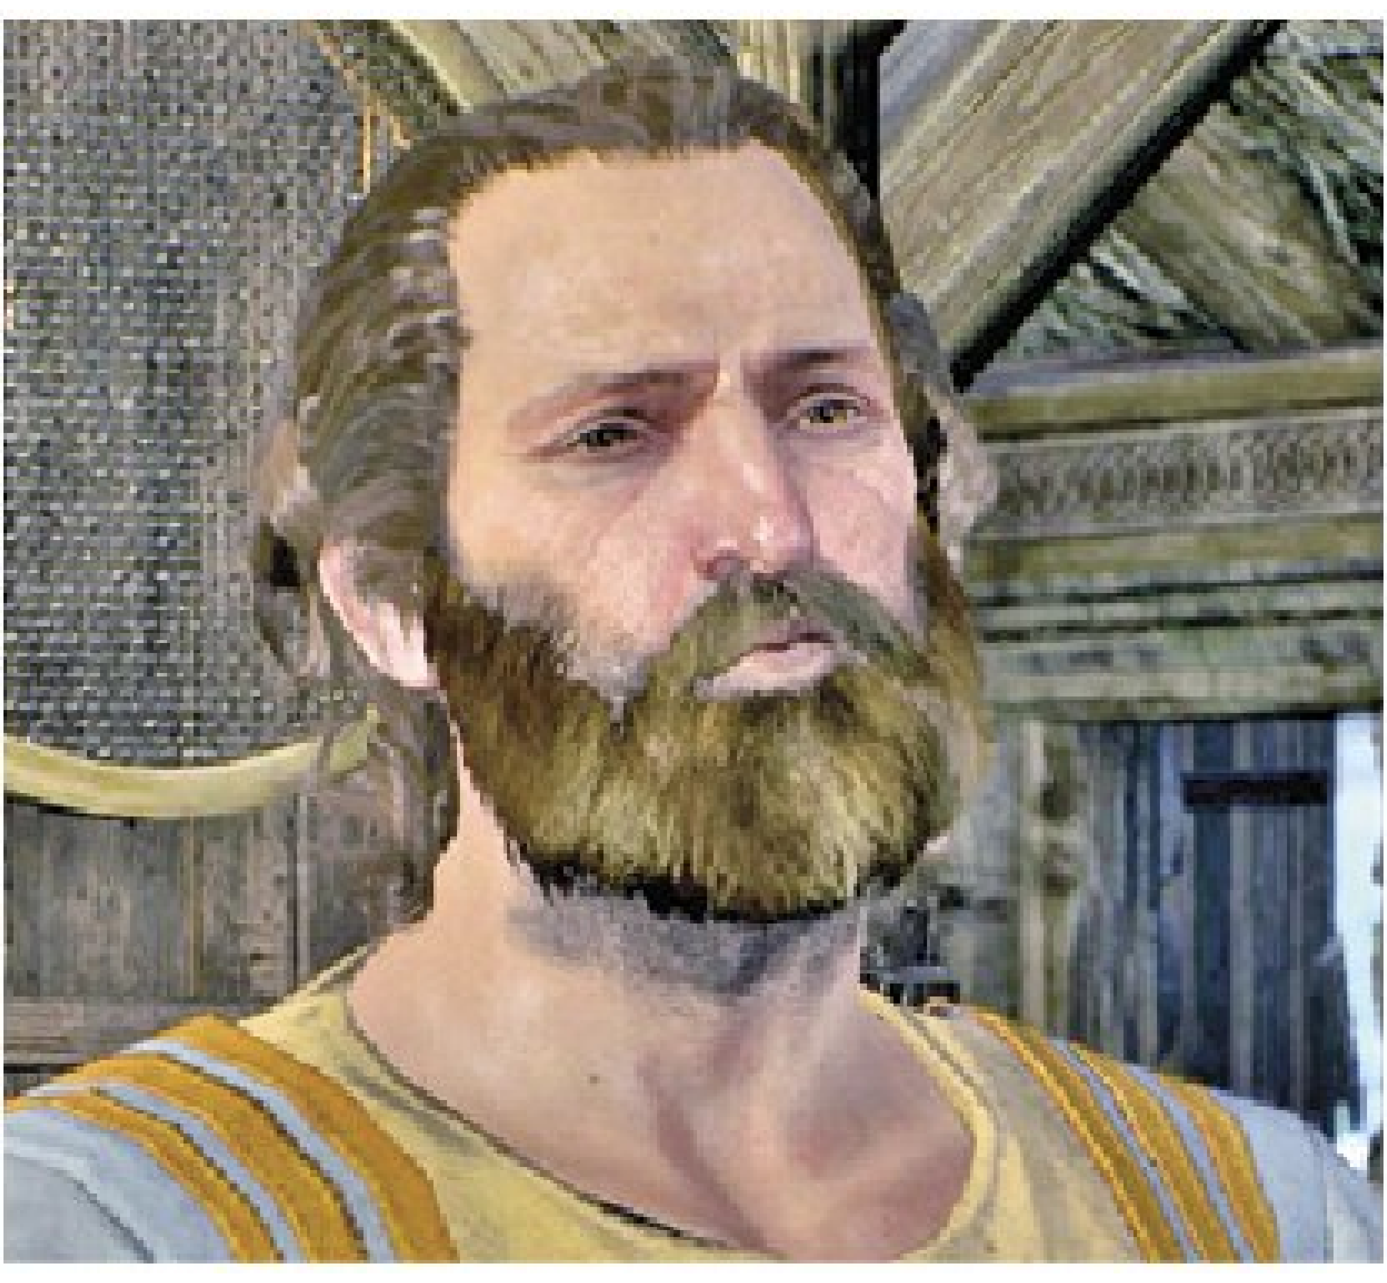
QUESTING DECISIONS

These bouts are accessible during your exploration of Velen (No Man’s Land). This quest usually starts after you visit a Notice Board that mentions a fistfight, or you return to Inn at the Crossroads and stumble upon the fight inside.

FISTFIGHT 1: SMITHY, OF THE INN AT THE CROSSROADS

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Blacksmith

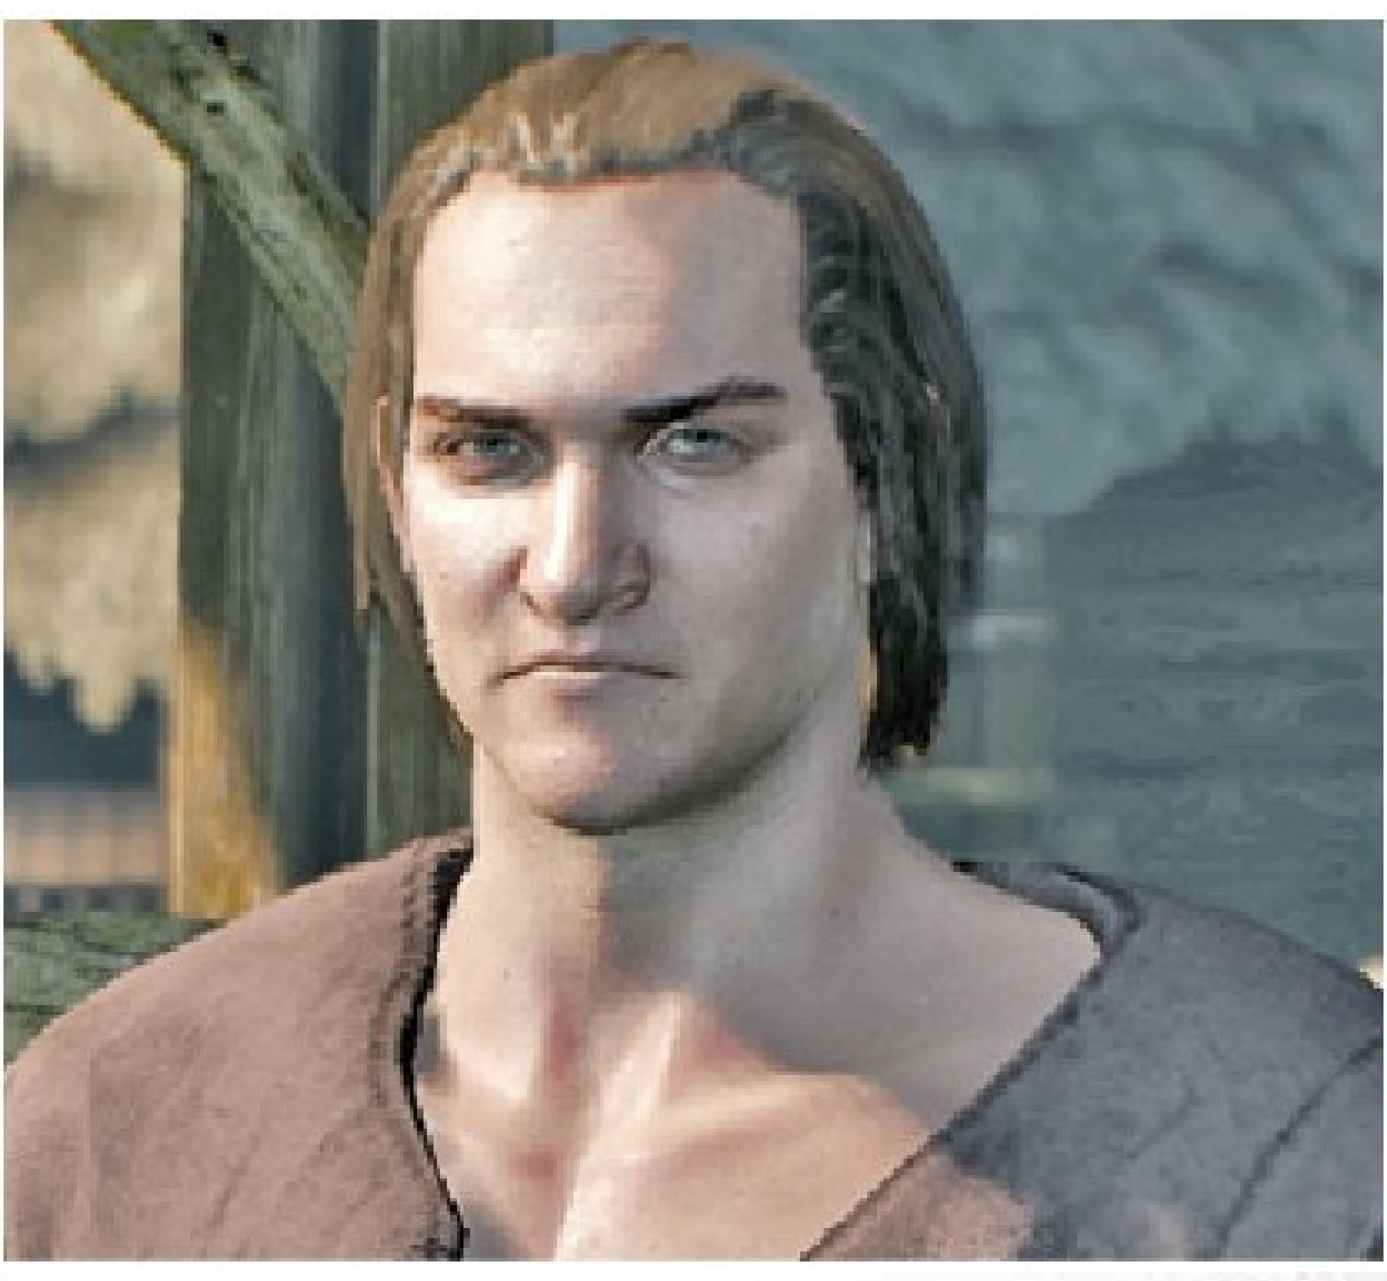
Visit the Inn at the Crossroads for your first bout in Velen. Your battle is with the local smithy. He’s a pushover (though fists are better than shoving). Afterwards, the bookie mentions Jonah from Blackbough, and Fishgulper from Lindenvale—defeat them to claim the title as champion of Velen.

Items: Up to 140 Crowns

FISTFIGHT 2: JONAH OF BLACKBOUGH

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Jonas

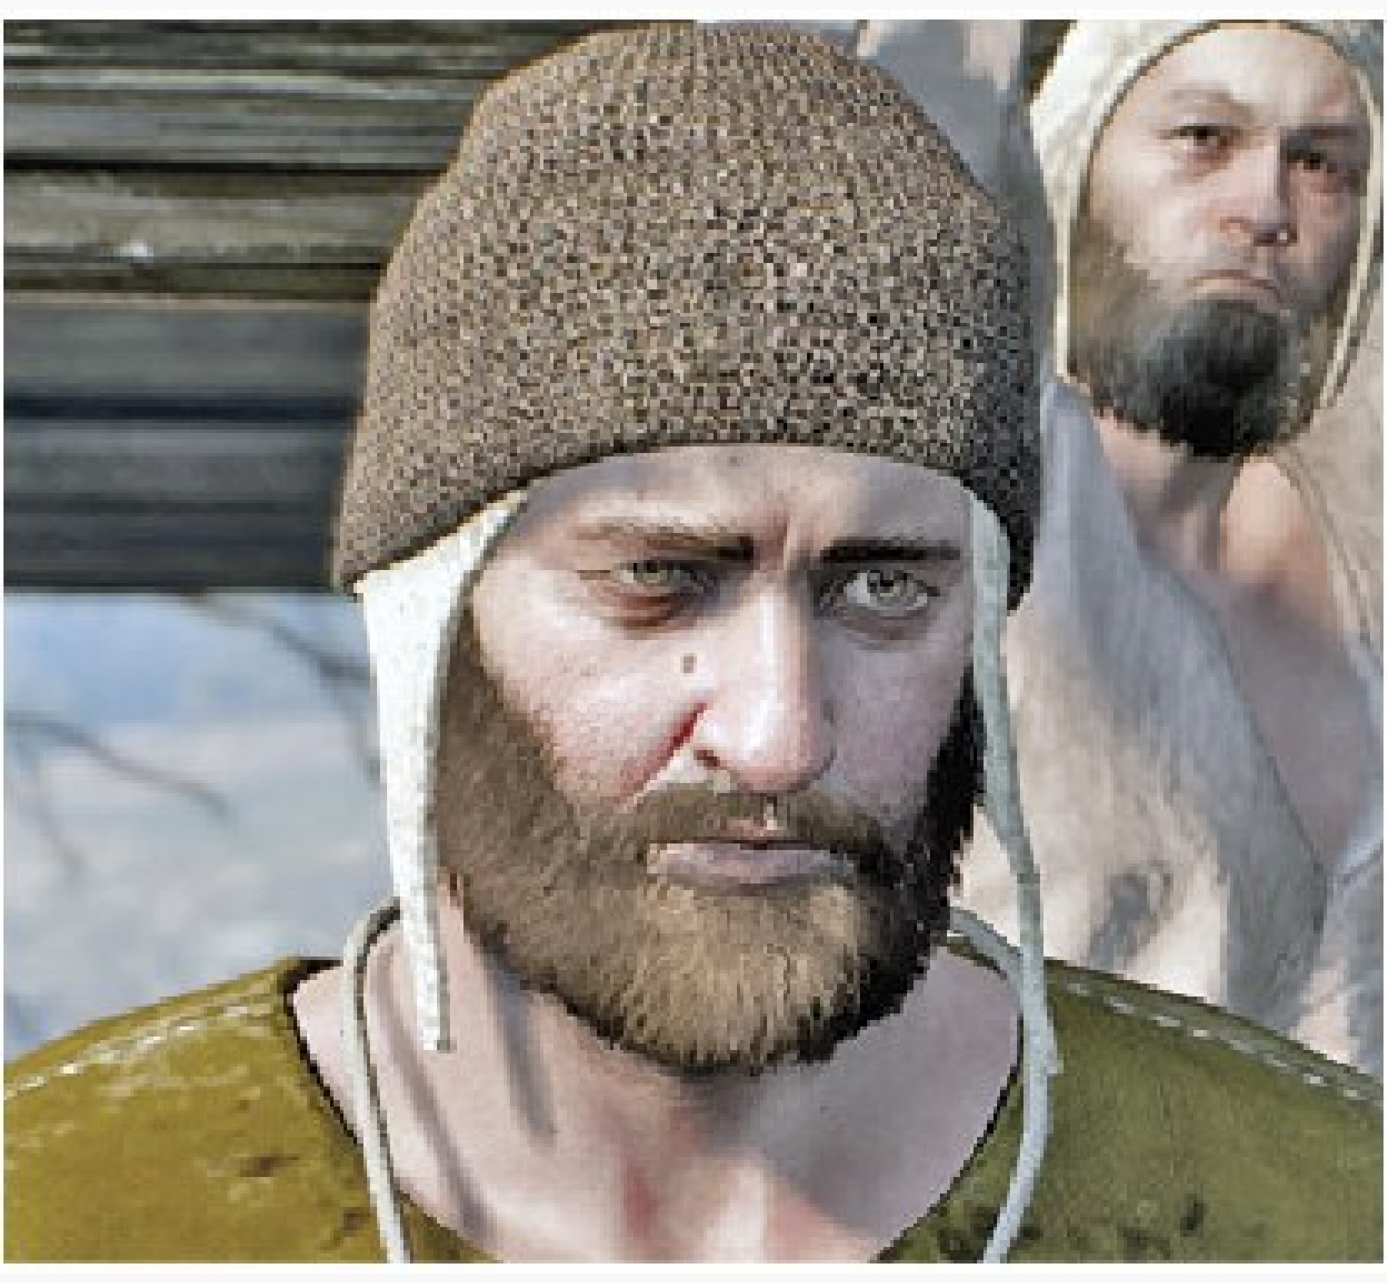
Travel to the ground outside the tavern in Blackbough, and speak to the bookie, who mentions his man Jonas likes to bite. Quiz him about this if you wish, then face off with that fellow who winked at you. After some parrying and pummeling, this gent provides little trouble.

Items: Up to 100 Crowns

FISTFIGHT 3: FISHGULPER OF LINDENVALE

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Stan “Fishgulper”

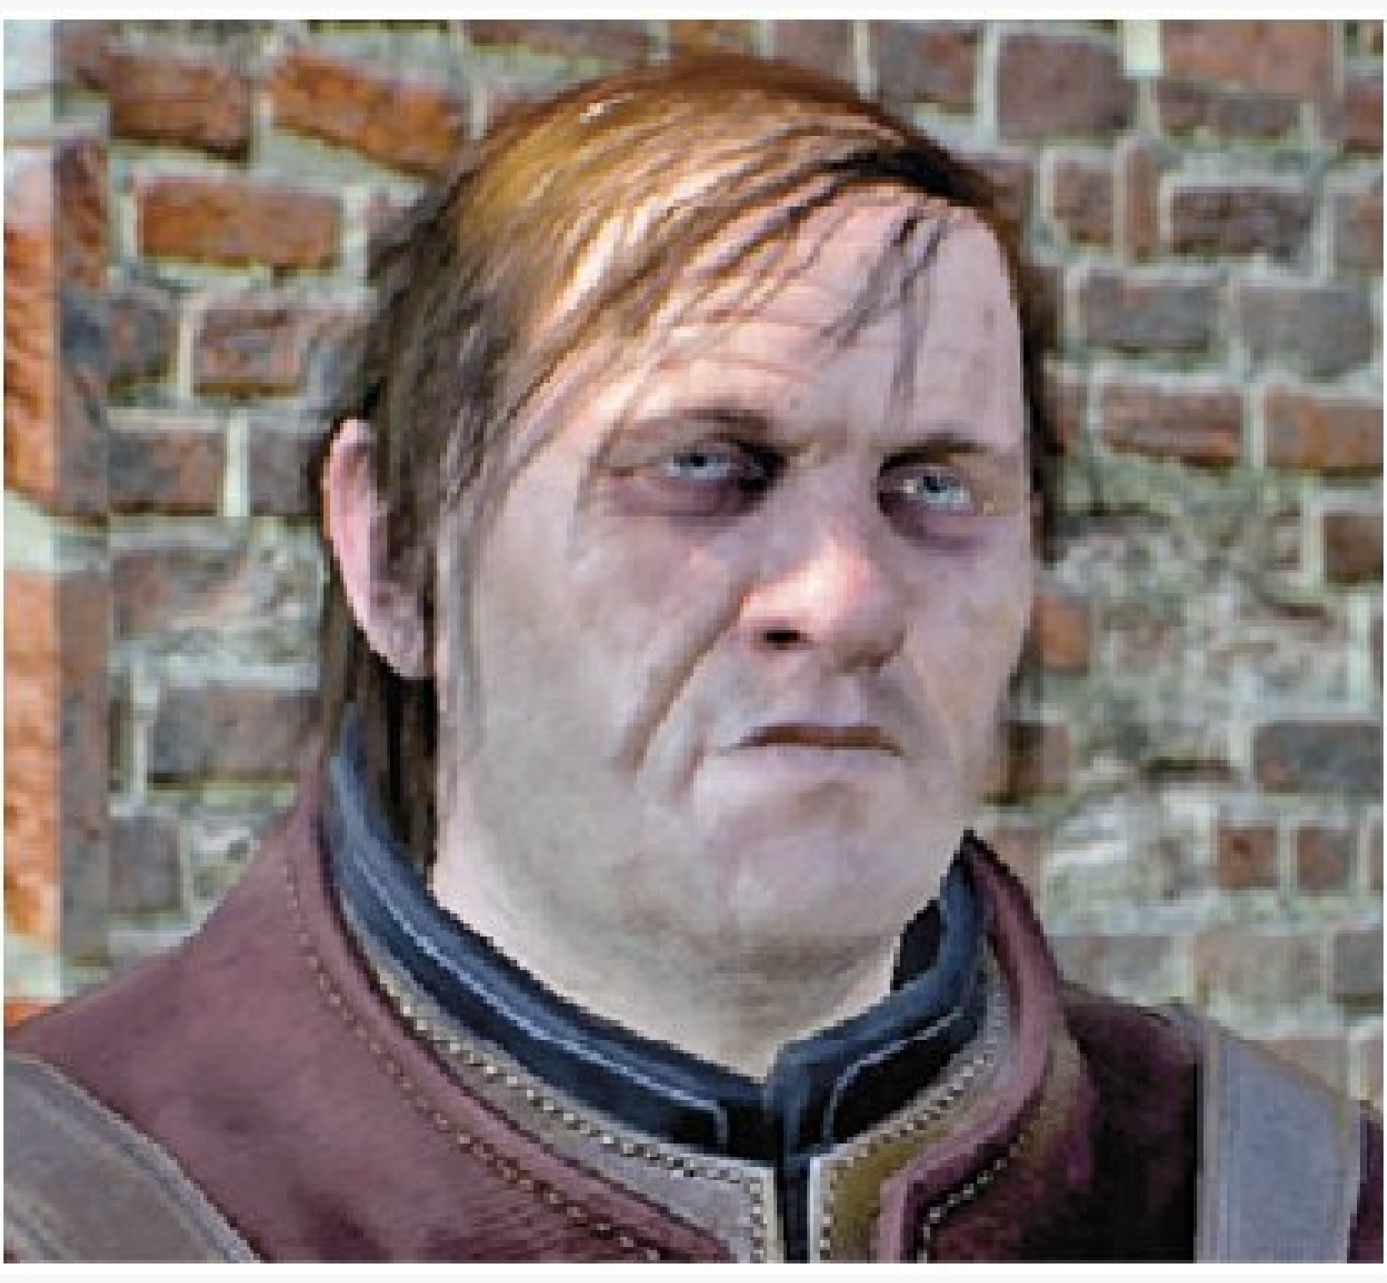
Speak to the bookie along the main thoroughfare of Lindenvale, near the Notice Board, and sign up to fight Fishgulper. Stan speaks earnestly before the fight, urging you to throw the bout so you lose, and he can remain claim a sack of flour as a prize in this downtrodden hole. Agree (you can try again afterwards) or dismiss his plea. Fight and finish him if you wish to progress.

Items: Up to 140 Crowns

FISTFIGHT 4: THE SERGEANT OF CROW’S PERCH

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- Minor Threat. Bet high, but not the maximum if you don’t have the practice.



Sergeant

The current champion of Velen is the sergeant over at Crow’s Perch. Gallop there once the first three adversaries are pummelled. Journey up into the upper courtyard close to the stables, where a small crowd has gathered. The bookie or the bruiser called the sergeant can be chatted to, and the bout started. With some well-timed counters and retaliation, you can reduce this ugly thug to a heap in the grass, and collect your winnings. Congratulations! You are the Champion of Velen!

Items: Up to 160 Crowns

Fists Of Fury

Fists Of Fury: Novigrad

DANGER ALERT
SPOILER ALERT
FISTS OF FURY: NOVIGRAD

LOCATIONS: Golden Sturgeon (Novigrad), Portside Gate, Southern Gate, Glory Gate, Farcorners
CHARACTERS: Bookies, Master Claytop, Georgius "Piledriver" Georg, Patty Gruber, Archibald O'Neill, Captain "Iron" Mortimer, Durden the Tailor

OBJECTIVES:

- Defeat Georgius Georg.
- Defeat Archibald O'Neill.
- Defeat Iron Mortimer.
- Fight the Tailor for the Novigrad title.

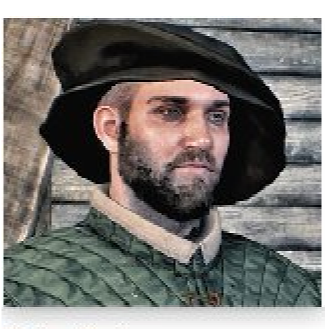
QUESTING DECISIONS

These bouts are accessible during your exploration of Novigrad, and its northern surroundings. You usually gain knowledge about the first three bouts by reading a note pinned to a Notice Board in this city.

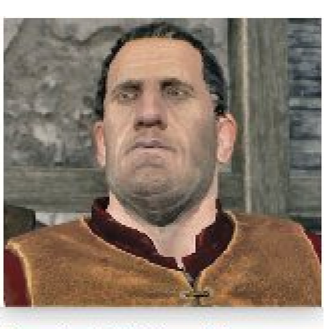
FISTFIGHT 1: GEORGIUS GEORG OF THE GOLDEN STURGEON

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- Take Claytop's Offer.

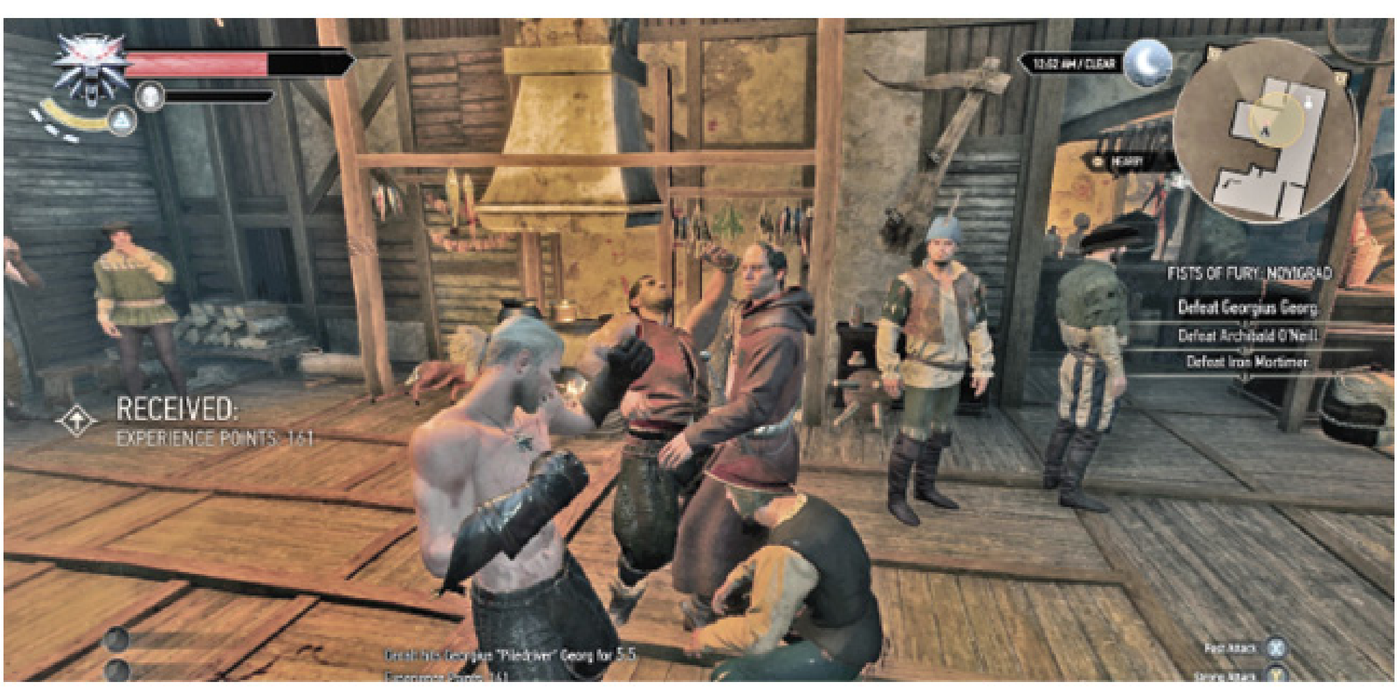


Master Claytop



Georgius "Piledriver" Georg

Just north of the east-west canal, along the dockside of west Novigrad, is the Golden Sturgeon tavern. Inside, a likely lad named Georg is waiting to pulverize you. Master Claytop greets you. Accept the challenge from him, bet on yourself, and after the announcement, Claytop murmurs something about "engaging in an enterprize." Or throwing the fight. You can agree, or refuse (or agree and then win). It's a good idea to go with the subterfuge, since you can simply challenge Georg again and win, afterwards, and bank two purses. Just don't bet on yourself to win the first time!

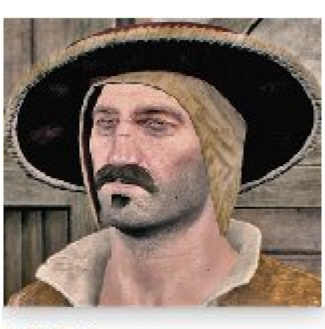


Items: Up to 160 Crowns, double if "cheating"

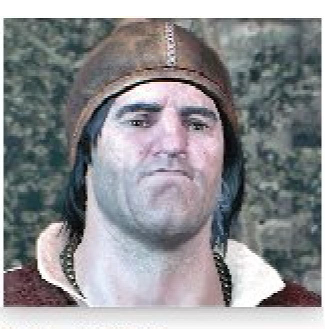
FISTFIGHT 2: ARCHIBALD O'NEILL OF THE PORTSIDE GATE

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Patty Gruber



Archibald O'Neill

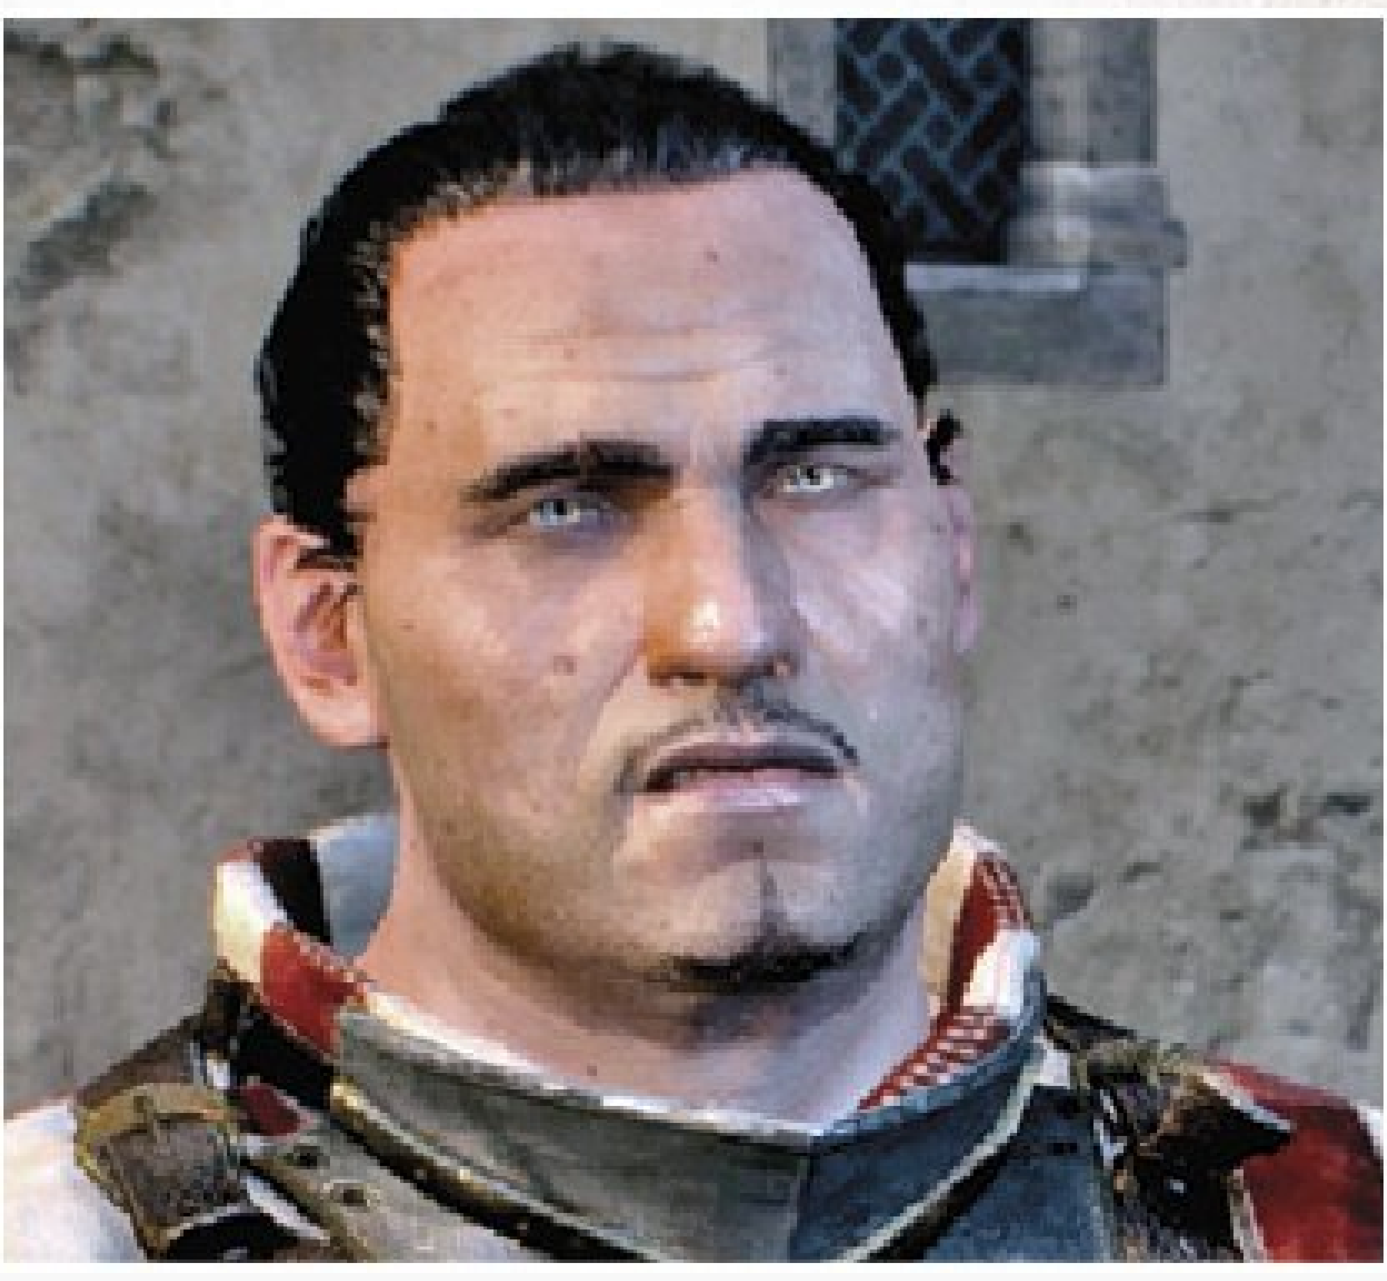
Journey to the filthy alleys and push past the fisstech addicts, just inside the Portside Gate, and locate the dingy fighting corner where Patty Gruber the bookie awaits. Face off against Archibald, who is a little tougher than the previous folks you've faced. Counters and pummelling is the plan, after which you're urged to face the captain of the guard.

Items: Up to 100 Crowns

FISTFIGHT 3: IRON MORTIMER OF THE SOUTHERN GATE

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Captain "Iron" Mortimer

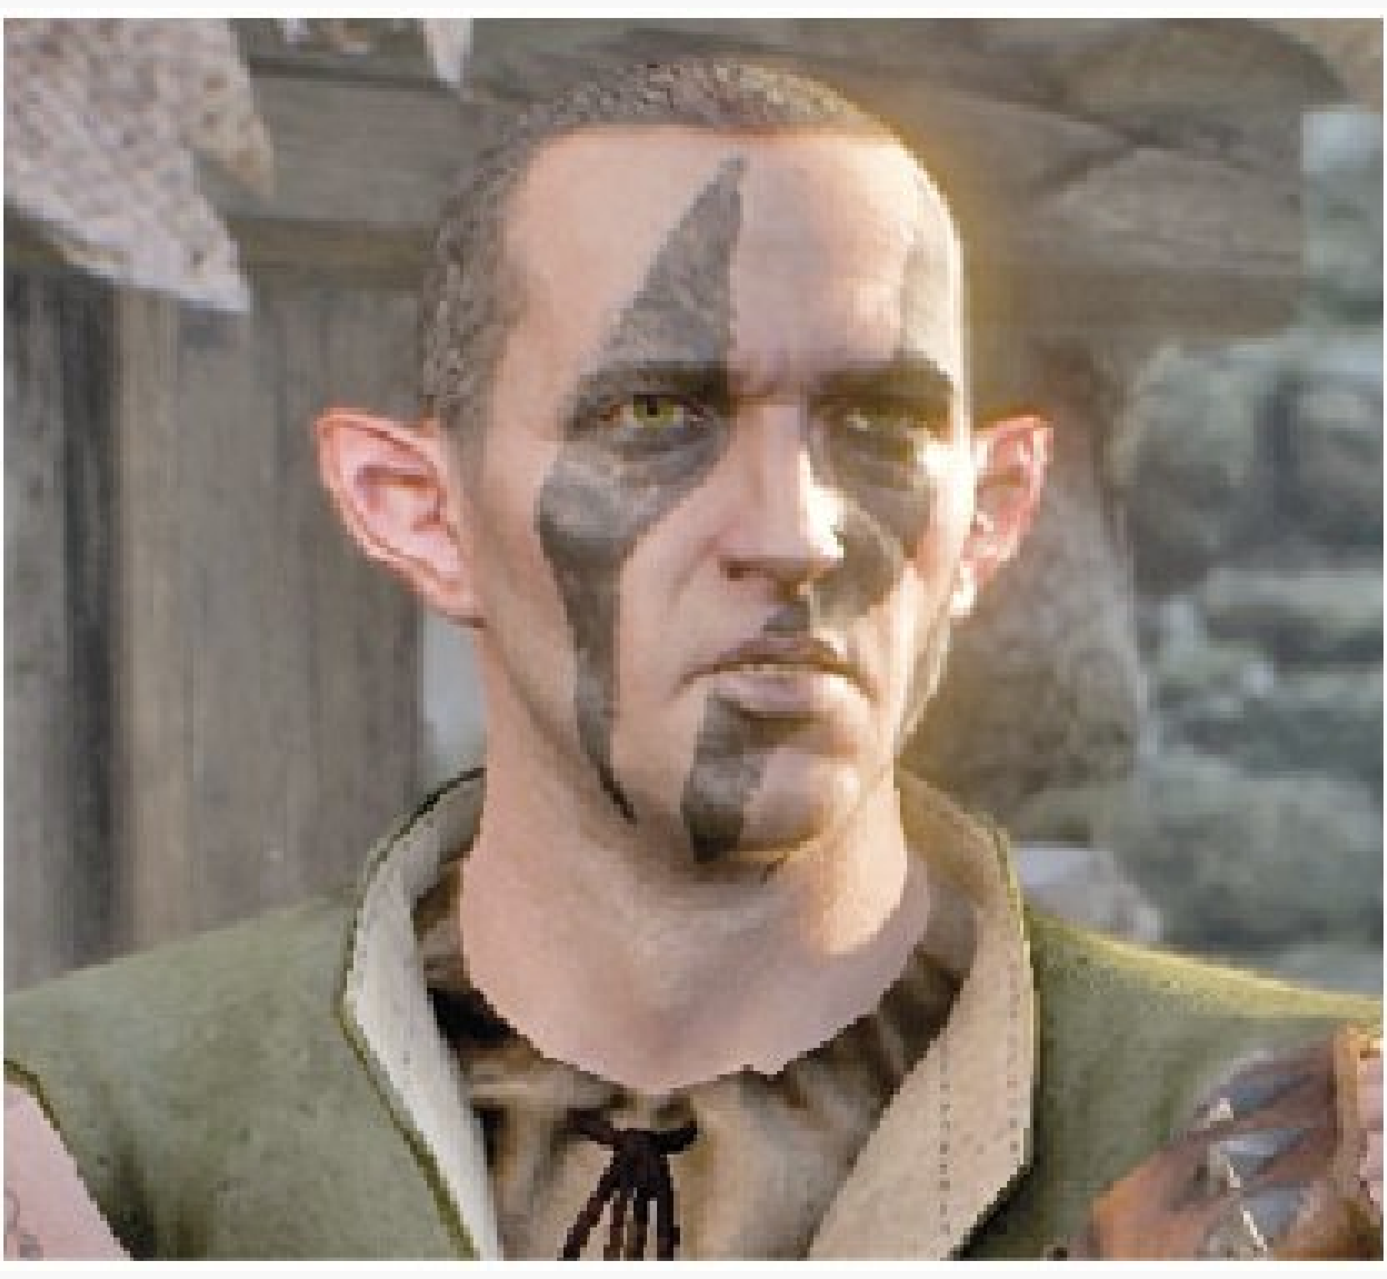
Through the brick arches and among the overgrown alleyways inside the Southern Gate, lies a fighting courtyard of mud. There is a bookie here that is happy to take your money, and put you up against the mighty Mortimer. He's a tough, sinewy chap with a constitution to match his name, so more counters than usual are necessary. Timing and patience are required. Once you land a successful counter, make sure to follow one or two quick jabs with a heavy punch before withdrawing before he can regain his composure. Afterwards, you receive the honor to fight Novigrad's champion.

Items: Up to 190 Crowns

FISTFIGHT 4: DURDEN THE TAILOR OF FARCORNERS

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

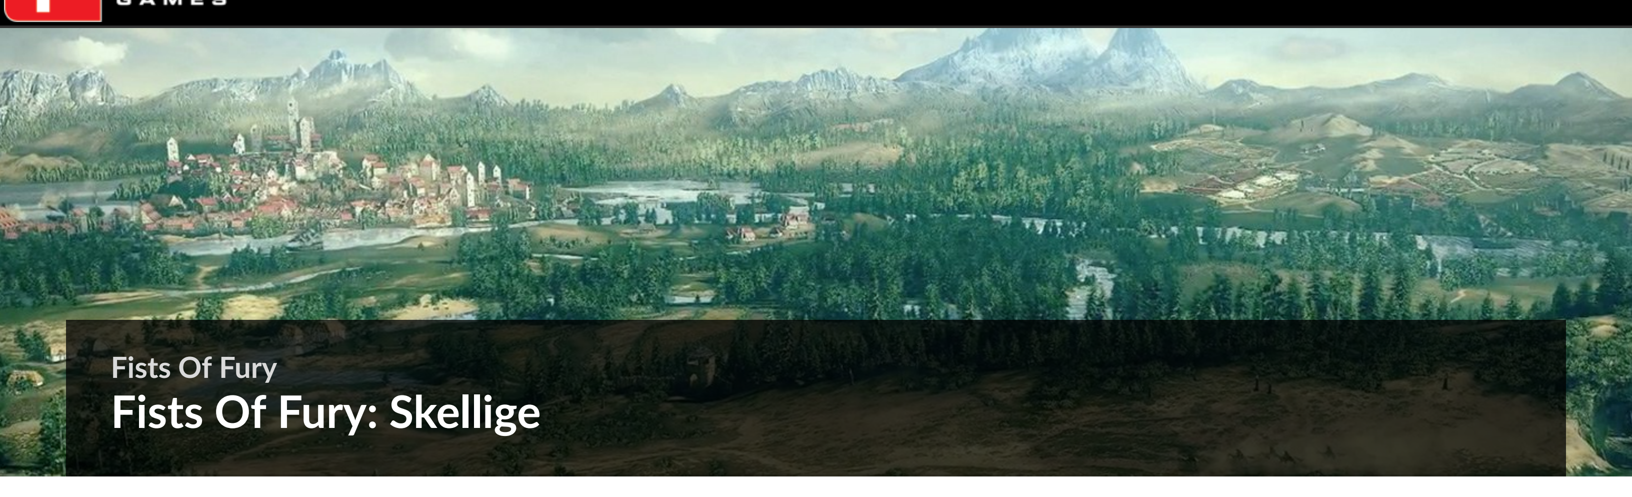
- Medium Threat. Reduce bet if not comfortable with counter attacks yet.



Durden the Tailor

Travel out of Glory Gate, and into the settlement of Farcorners, once sunset begins (or later), in order to find the fighting den in these parts. Durden tries some psychology on you before the fight. React or ignore him as you wish. Then, start the lengthy process of whittling the elf's health down to naught. The elf is fast, so stay on your guard, block and use counters wisely but do not get caught up in too many chain attacks as he will be able to give you the slip. Congratulations! You are the Champion of Novigrad!

Items: Up to 240 Crowns



Fists Of Fury

Fists Of Fury: Skellige

DANGER ALERT
SPOILER ALERT
FISTS OF FURY: SKELLIGE

LOCATIONS: New Port Inn, Kaer Trolde Harbor (Ard Skellig), Ringvold (Faroe), Arinbjorn (Ard Skellig), Urialla Arena (An Skellig)
CHARACTERS: Valgard, Eryka, Einar, Grim, Olaf

OBJECTIVES:

- Defeat Valgard.
- Defeat Einar.
- Defeat Grim.
- Defeat Olaf.
- Talk to the fight organizer.

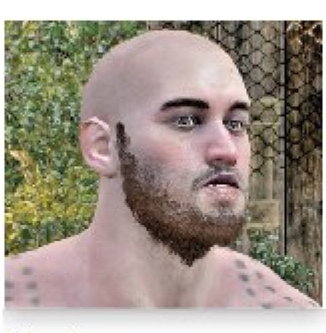
QUESTING DECISIONS

These bouts are accessible during your exploration of the Isles of Skellige. You usually gain knowledge about the first three bouts by reading a note pinned to a Notice Board, or by stumbling into the first fight in Kaer Trolde Harbor.

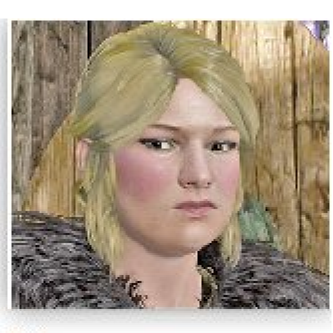
FISTFIGHT 1: VALGARD OF KAER TROLDE

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Valgard



Eryka

Visit the New Port Inn, along the shore north of Kaer Trolde Harbor, below the looming keep. Speak with the fightmaster, and then Valgard. He hopes you might throw the fight in order to make him seem more of a man to his ladyfriend Eryka. You can agree, or refuse. Choose the latter, and Eryka looks disgusted and leaves Valgard after you pummel him to a defeat. Choose the former, and stop fighting so you lose, and Eryka will be impressed by Valgard's victory.

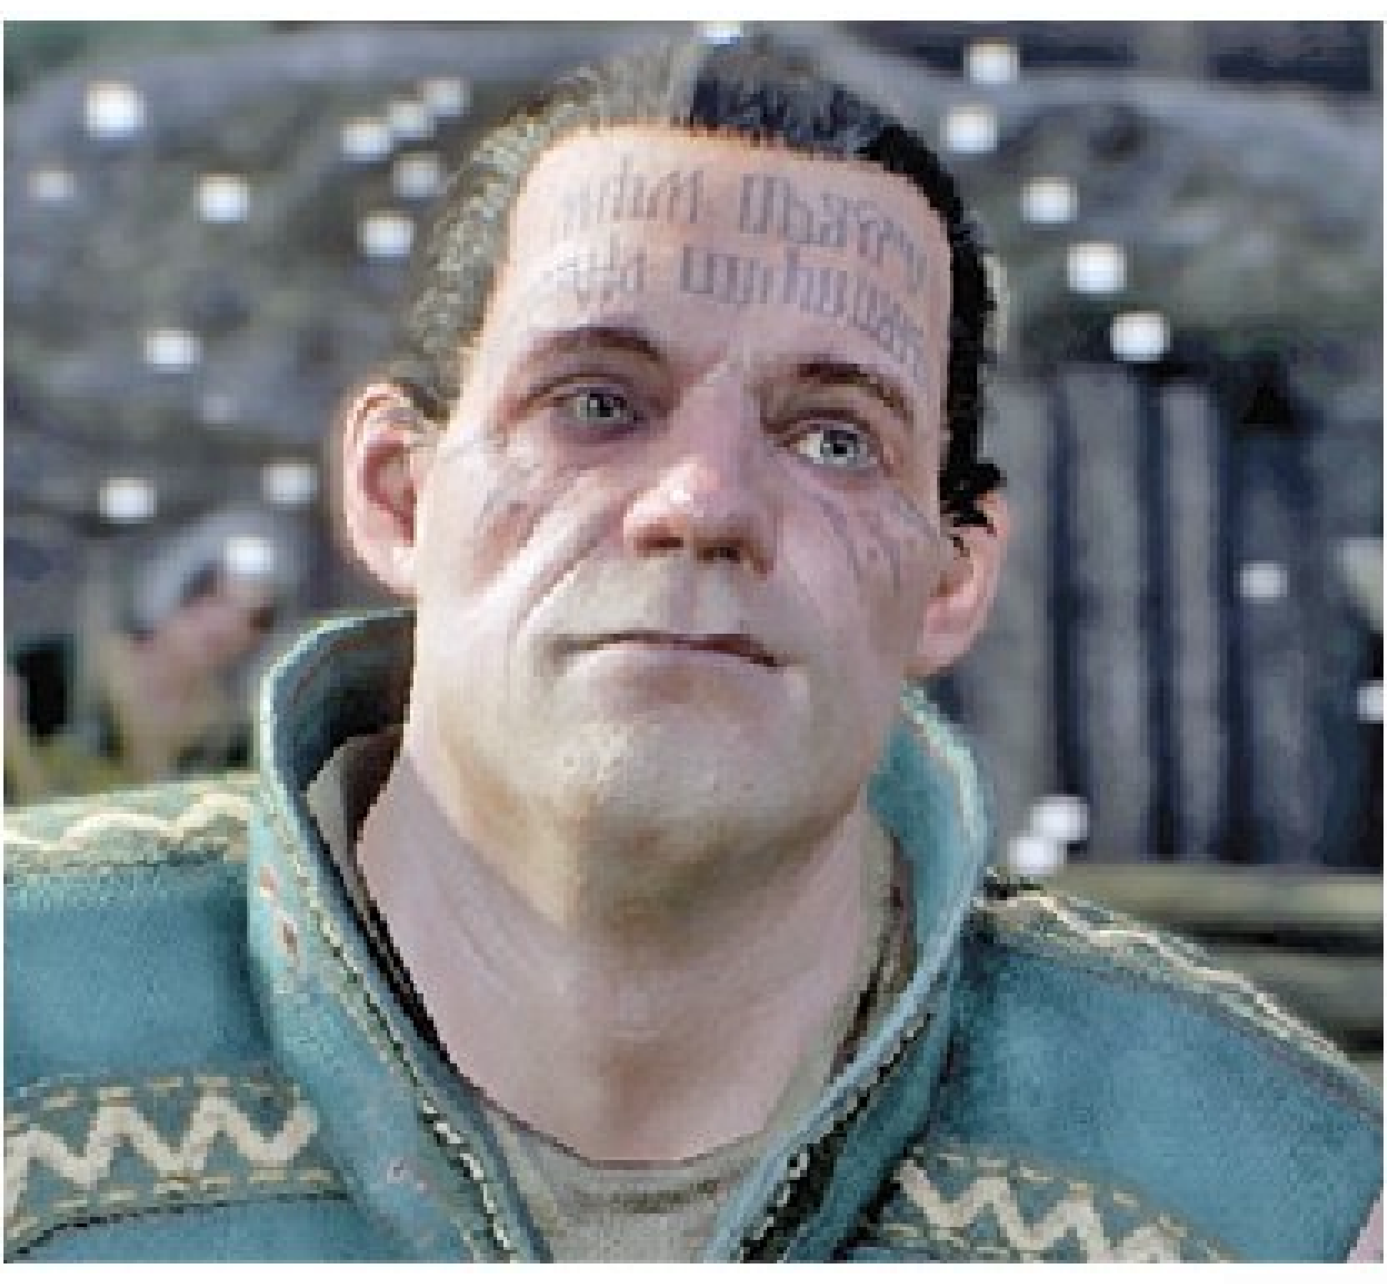
Someone's getting lucky tonight (you can always retry the bout afterwards). He will block a lot and it is very hard to spam him with fast attacks, as he will counter very often. He will stay in guard if assaulted. It is best to counter his attacks and retaliate after a successful one. His heavy attacks deal a lot of damage, so avoid them at all costs. Then the fightmaster reveals two more worthy opponents to best.

Items: Up to 140 Crowns, Gnomish Silver Sword Diagram

FISTFIGHT 2: EINAR OF RINGVOLD

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Einar

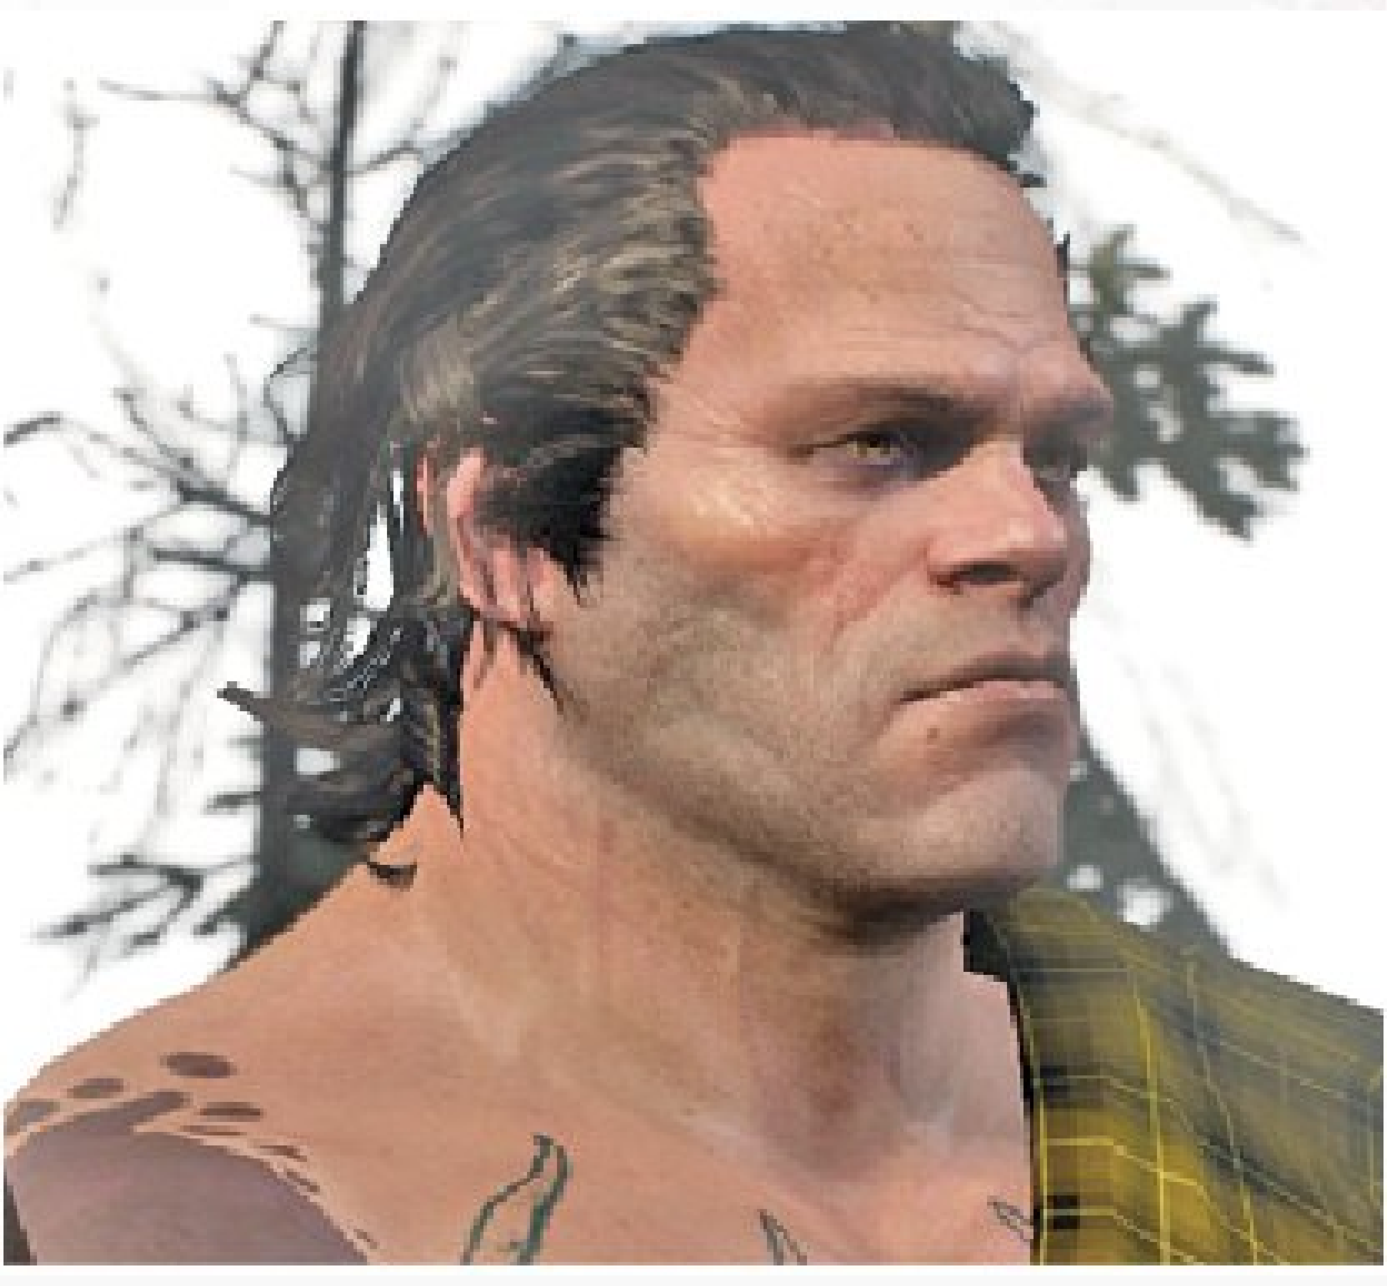
Journey to the isle of Faroe, southeast of Ard Skellig, and visit the hamlet of Ringvold. The swarthy folks here are ready to fight at a moment's notice. Top of the heap is the tattooed nightmare known as Einar. Madman Lugos' bastard, and he takes after his dad. He's quite tough. Einar will attempt to dodge most of the attacks and he is very dangerous and relentless up close. He will combo attacks if the player is in melee range and can deprive Geralt of all Stamina if he decides to block too many attacks. It is best to stay far away from him and try to attack when his guard isn't up. Countering can work well, too but beware if you mistime one Claim your reward afore ye go.

Items: Up to 140 Crowns, Heavy Armor Diagram

FISTFIGHT 3: GRIM OF ARINBJORN

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- GO ALL OUT!



Grim

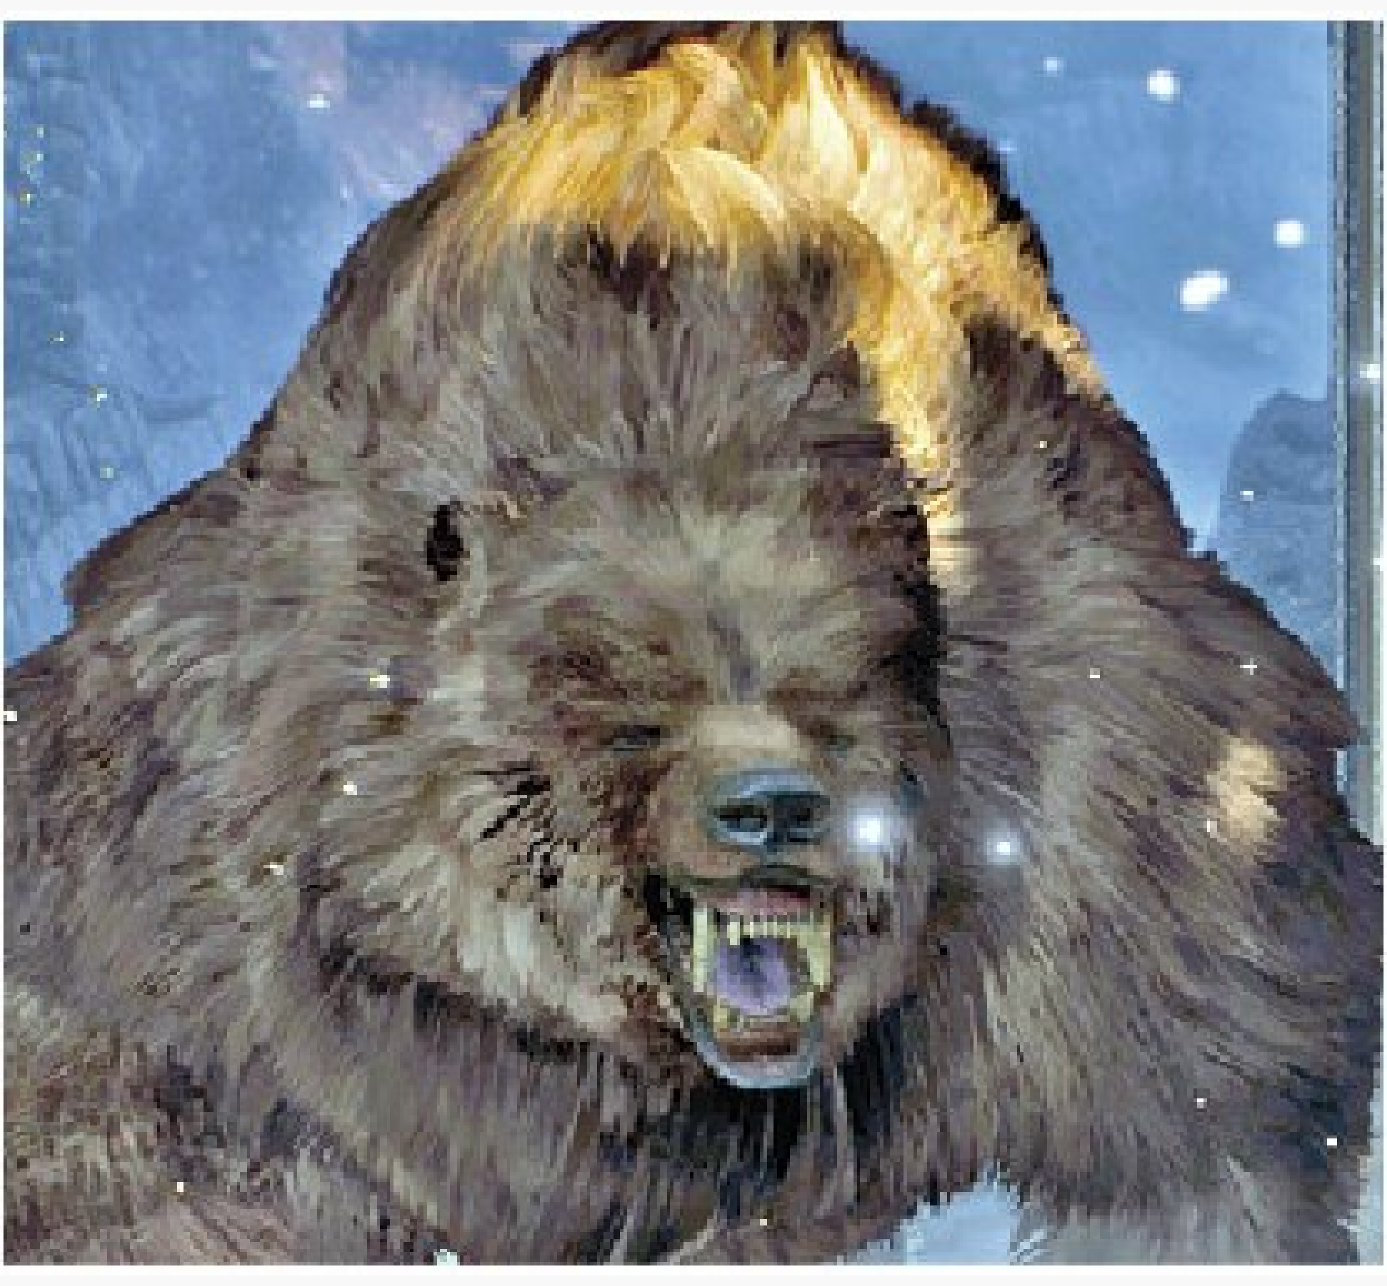
On the windswept, southwest heath, close to Arinbjorn in northwestern Ard Skellig, there are a group of islanders waiting for a challenger like you to better their man-mountain, Grim. This lumberjack is more of a defensive oriented fighter. It is unwise to try and mash him. He will stay in guard when he is being hit. He excels in using heavy attacks after you open up his guard. He will not dodge , only block. He can be aggressive if you get too close. You can exploit the timing in Grim's heavy attacks to get a fast attack in, before the heavy hit lands. Countering opens Grim up to retaliation as well.

Items: Up to 140 Crowns

FISTFIGHT 4: OLAF THE HAIRY OF AN SKELLIG

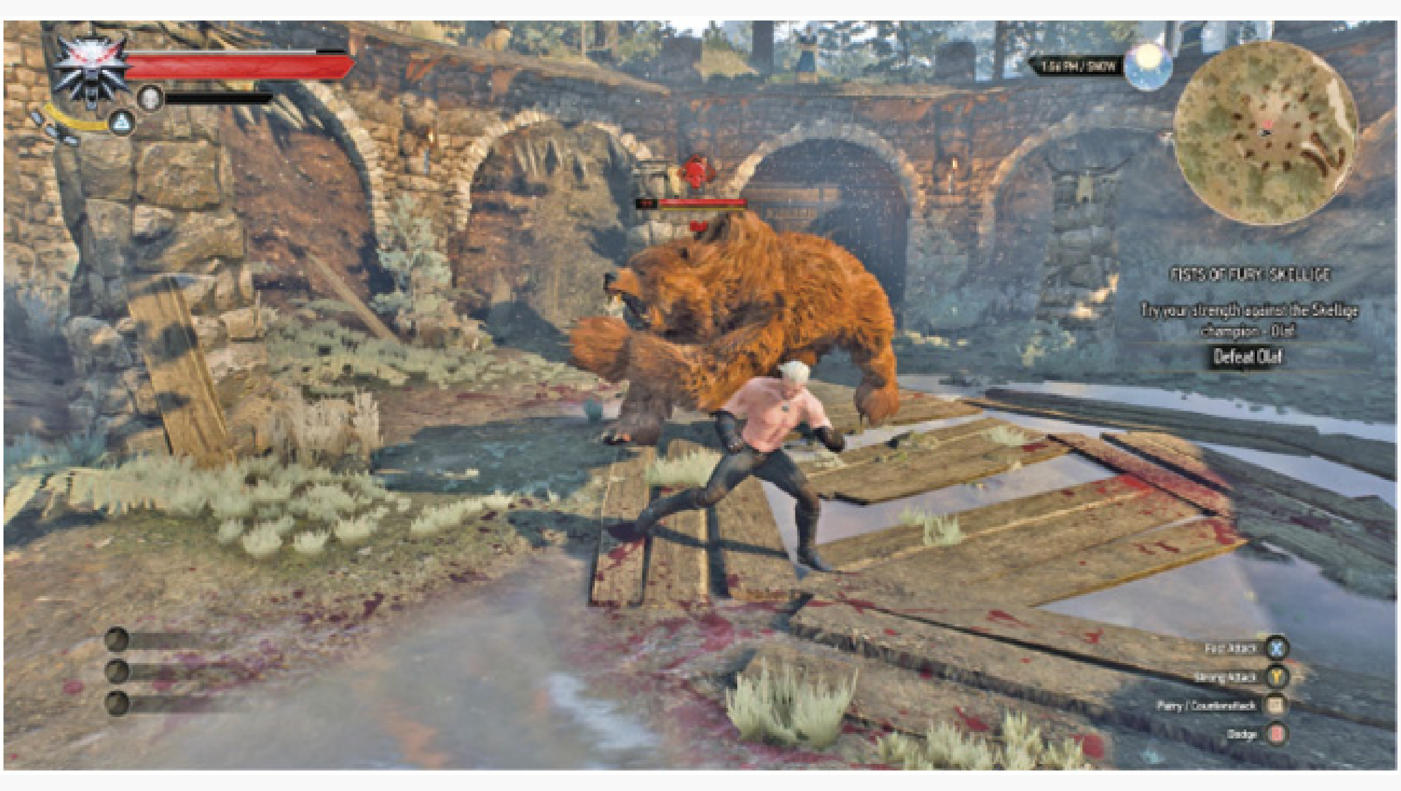
RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- DANGEROUS!!

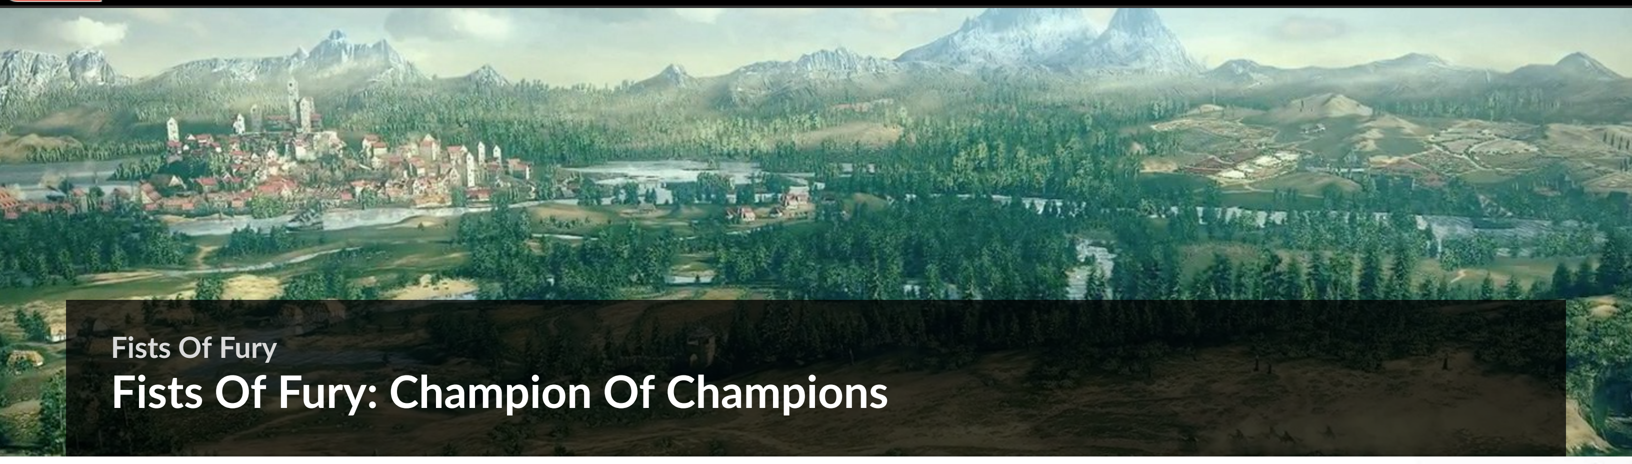


Olaf

For your penultimate bout, sail to the small island of An Skellig. Contiune to the northeast of the main land mass of Ard Skellig. Locate the circular arena to the east of the main settlement of Urialla Harbor, and stay atop the watching perimeter, until you find the bookie. You can listen to the history of the tradition regarding fights here, before descending into the arena via the main doors. Where a giant bear pads out to maul you! Olaf's paws are terribly vicious, so additional dodging is necessary, and quick darts in and out while patiently waiting for an opening is the order here. Attack from the sides or behind, especially when he roars. When Olaf finally falls, speak to the bookie. Congratulations! You are Champion of Skellige!



Items: Up to 180 Crowns, Gwestog



Fists Of Fury

Fists Of Fury: Champion Of Champions

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

FISTS OF FURY: CHAMPION OF CHAMPIONS

LOCATION: Hov (Spikeroog)
CHARACTERS: Errant Troll

OBJECTIVE:

- Kill or be killed.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This final bout is only available once you've completed Fists of Fury: Velen, Novigrad, and Skellige, and you've finished Secondary Quest: Master of the Arena (page 261) and removed the wraith from Spikeroog's legendary arena.

FISTFIGHT: THE ERRANT TROLL OF SPIKEROOG

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- HIGHLY DANGEROUS!

Errant Troll

Your ultimate battle of fists and feet occurs on the small island of Spikeroog. Visit the eastern tip of the isle, to the settlement of Hov, and speak to the bookie standing by the carved totem by the arena entrance. You may be on edge after facing down a bear without sharp weapons, but this time you're in for a much more difficult challenge—chiseling away at a rock troll with only your hands and feet! A crowd assembles, hoping you've spent your Attribute Points properly. Dodge any swiping, double-pounds, and charges, and you should turn this creature to pebbles. Luckily, you find out towards the end that the troll has a soft side and does not kill you should you lose. Should you win, you will be rewarded with the name of the Troll Champion! Now claim your rewards as the Fist of Fury quests conclude.

B&W

RELATED QUESTS: Secondary Quest (Fists of Fury): Raging Wolf
LOCATIONS: Nilfgaardian Embassy (Promenade), The Gran'place (east Beauclair), San Sebastian (Coopers' Gate)
CHARACTERS: Mancomb, Still Waters, Colossus

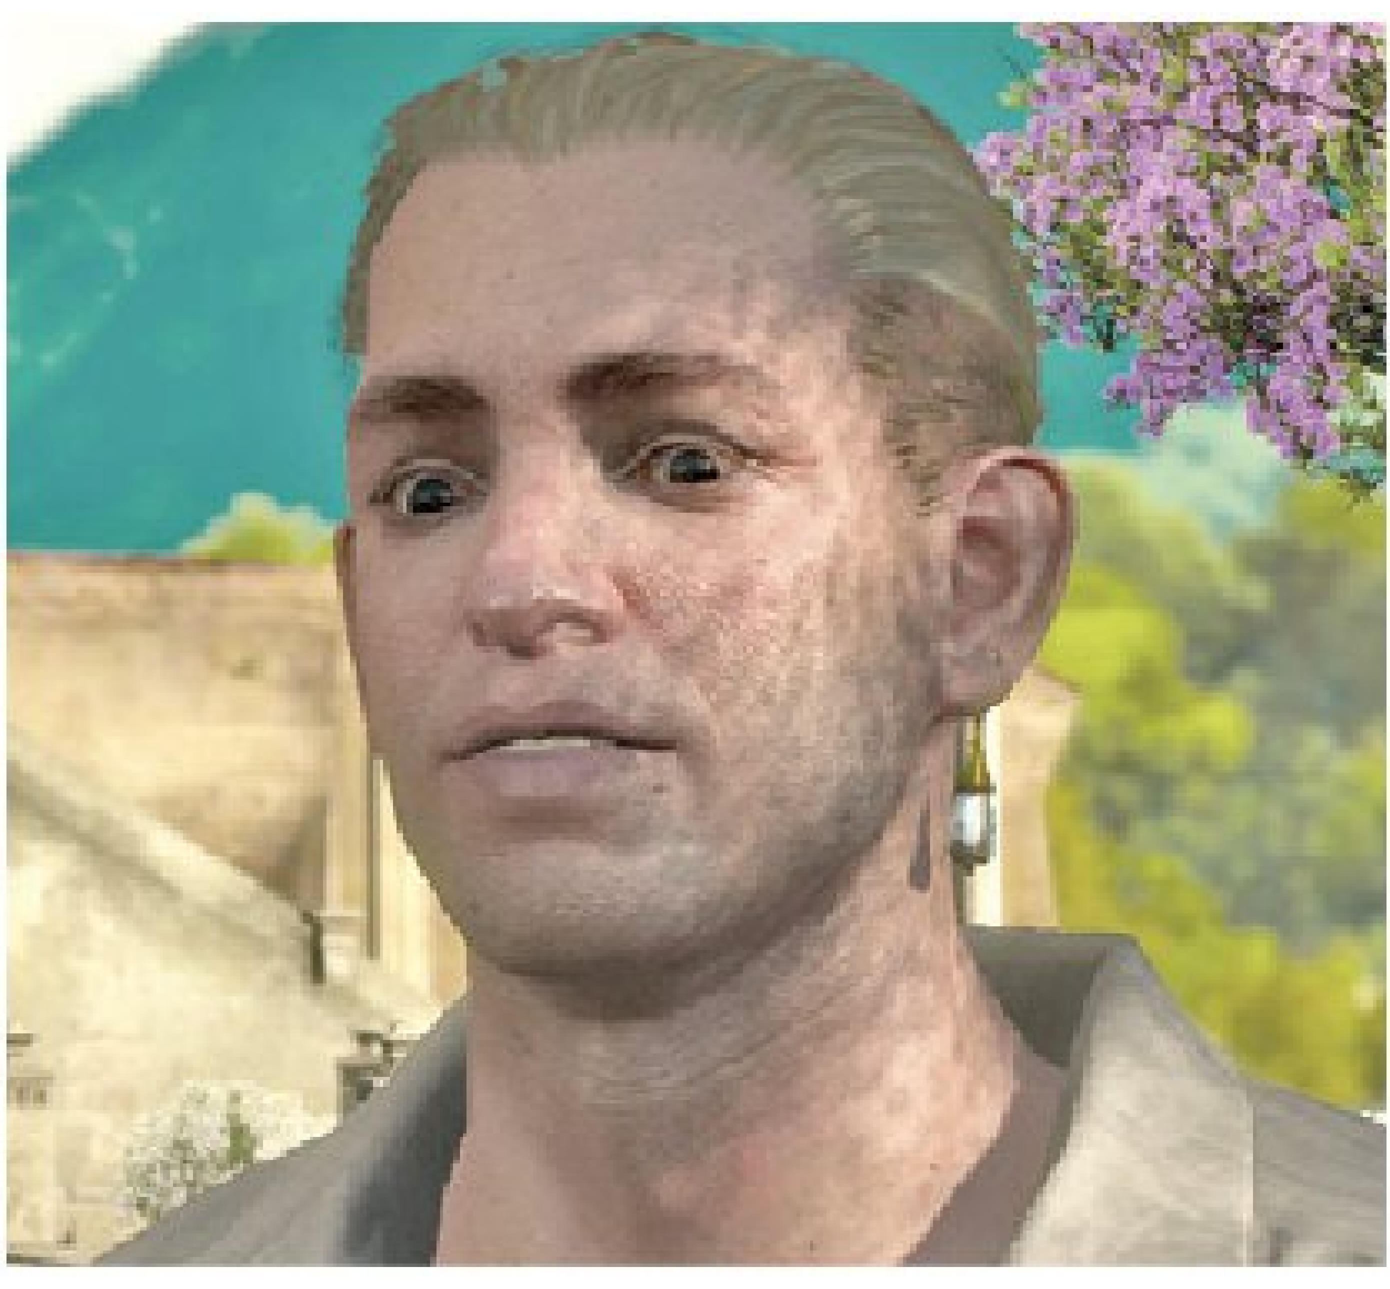
OBJECTIVES:

- Defeat Mancomb in a fistfight.
- Defeat Sill Waters in a fistfight.
- Defeat Colossus in a fistfight.

QUESTING DECISIONS

These bouts are accessible during your exploration of Toussaint, and in particular, Beauclair. This quest usually starts after you visit a Notice Board (such as the one by the Gran'place Signpost) that mentions a fistfight, or you stumble upon one of the three initial fights listed below. The first three fistfights can be undertaken in any order.

FISTFIGHT 1: MANCOMB (NILFGAARDIAN EMBASSY)



Mancomb

Head to the lakeside promenade area just south of the Nilfgaardian Embassy, and look for the square by the lake where the whooping and hollering is coming from. Speak to the bookie, who considers Mancomb's intellect as vicious as his strength. You can ask about the odd name, and engage in some verbal sparring, but keep away from punching Mancomb if you manage to win the duel of wits you can avoid a physical fight with Mancomb altogether, fail and he is ready to duke it out with you. The key to winning through word play here is to choose responses which rhyme.

Remember you can always retry the bout afterward; Mancomb usually comes out swinging with both left and right punches that are easily blocked or countered, and it's usually a good idea to try the latter, before launching a couple of strikes of your own. Countering is the best tactic here. Then the bookie mentions the remaining foes you must beat.

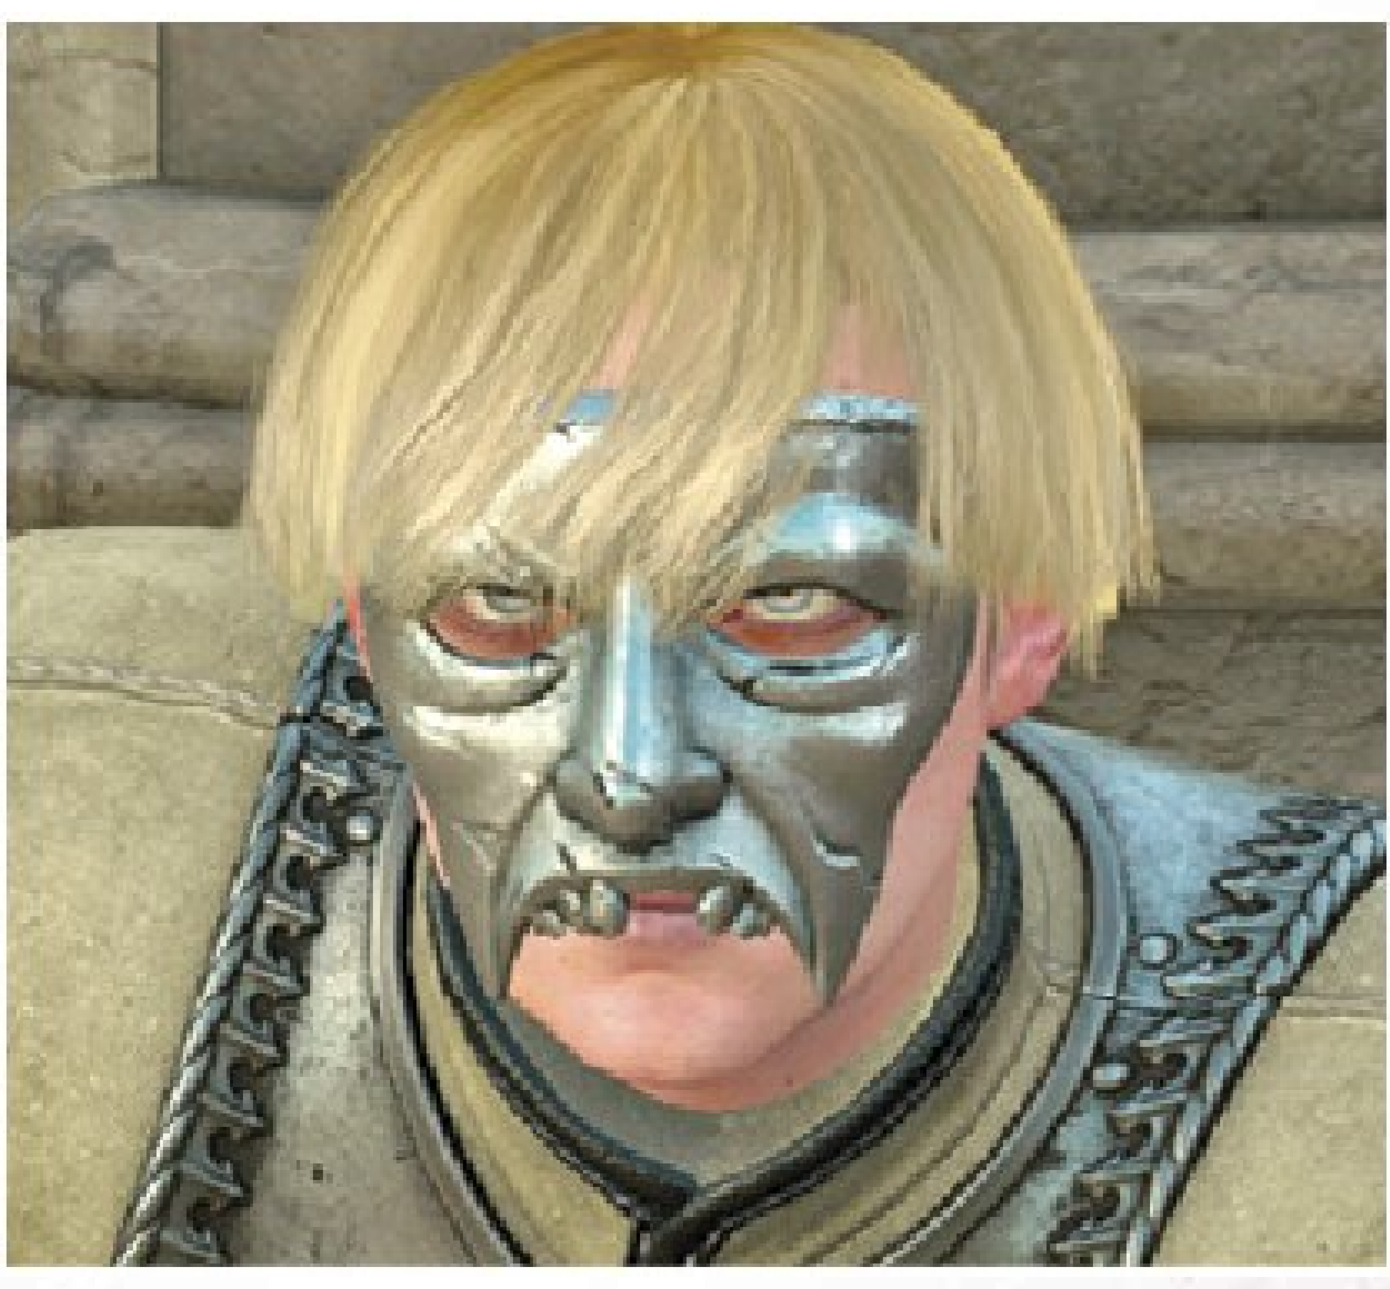
FISTFIGHT 2: STILL WATERS (EAST BEAUCLAIR)

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- * Go all out!



Still Waters

Midway between the Harbor Gate and Metinna Gate, or southeast down the main thoroughfare from The Gran'place, is a courtyard with a grand view, and a crowd of townsfolk egging on Still Waters, a fighter of few words and a mask to hide behind. You can inquire about this strange custom, before agreeing to the bout.

Still Waters enjoys throwing a long right hand punch in your general direction, which is damaging but slow; a Witcher with a fast reaction time can easily block and counter, or sidestep and pummel with some quicker punches. After the fight, Still Waters reveals exactly why the mask was worn. Next stop, Colossus!

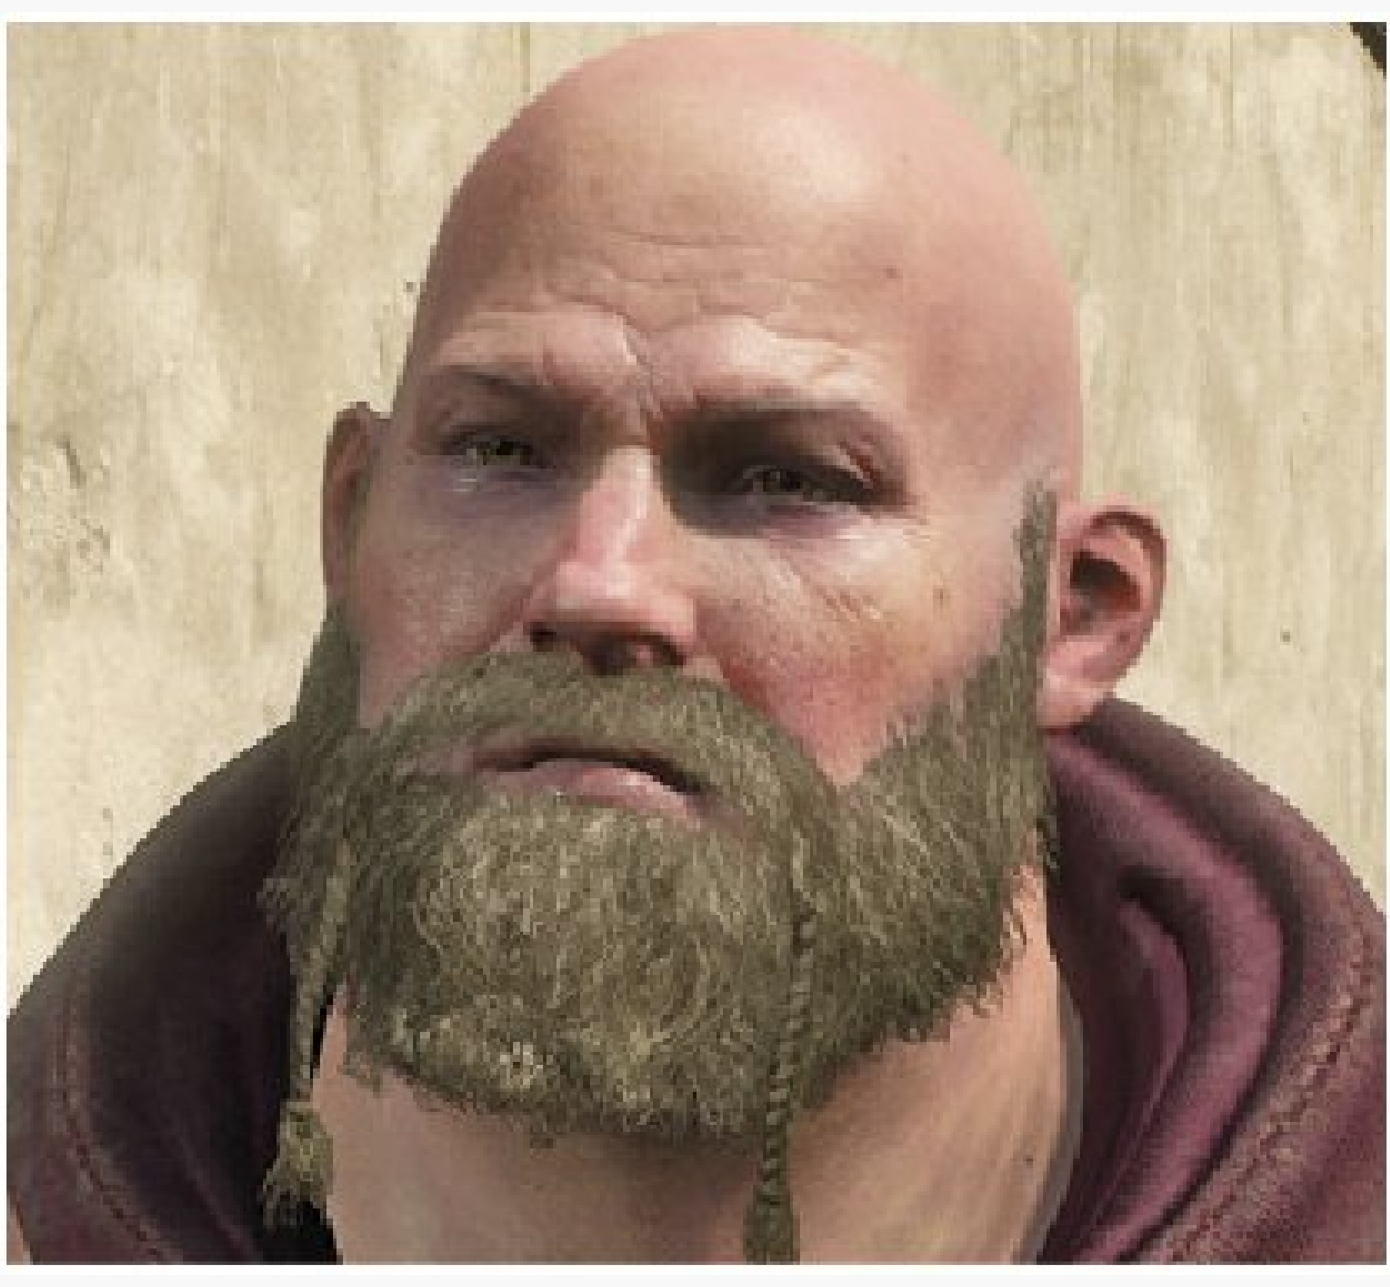
FISTFIGHT 3: COLOSSUS (SAN SEBASTIAN)

OBJECTIVE:

- (Optional) Parry Colossus' blows at the right moment (3).

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- * Take Colossus' offer.



Colossus

Over in San Sebastian in the northern part of Beauclair, just a little northeast of Coopers' Gate, is a bookie with a plan; you're to face Colossus, a large, bare-chested gentleman. Ask how he came by the name if you wish, and after some verbal sparring, Colossus has a side bet for you. If you can parry three of his blows, but not take a swing at him, he'll let you win. You'll win double your wager if you agree!

Take the side offer or don't, and the bout begins. Colossus is apt to throw long left swings which are reasonably easy to parry. Simply time the push back properly and complete this three times to win a relatively easy bout. Don't punch Colossus during this time; only parry, or the side bet (worth double) is nullified.

FISTFIGHT 4: THE MAESTRO (BEAUCLAIR DOCKS)

RECOMMENDED BET AND ODDS:

- * HIGHLY DANGEROUS!

The Maestro

Down on the docks along the eastern edge of Beauclair by the Sansretour River is a popular pummeling place where a Bookie is more than happy to take your funds in return for you challenging the Maestro, Champ, The Undefeated, Drunken Master—folk call him many things. He's a shy man, who remedies this by drinking. A lot.

You'll need to swig down a few drinks before the bout, but this doesn't make you too drunk to fight. Maestro launches a long right overhand punch, which you can dodge, block, or parry, but he's fond of a very fast left jab that can easily outmatch you. Time shorter punches when he's preparing his right handers.

Should you win, you are crowned the Fisticuffs Champion of Beauclair, and receive a trophy to prove it! That's going to look great on a shelf in Corvo Bianco! This quest now concludes.

Items: Up to 300 Crowns, Fisticuffs Champion Trophy.

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

RACES: CROW'S PERCH

QUESTING DECISIONS

Unless otherwise stated, all horse races are accessible at any time during your adventures. However, you need to be at a particular location (and territory) to start them.

OUTFITTING ROACH

Remember the prizes you win allow you to stock more items on Roach (so you aren't overburdened as often), allow him to have more Stamina, and stop him from panicking as quickly. These are excellent prizes to win, on top of the crowns you can accrue!

HORSES FOR COURSES: PREPPING FOR THE WIN

Ready to win at all costs? Also, look ahead so you aren't caught out by an upcoming checkpoint flag and miss it (effectively losing the race). Keep Roach in the center of the road, and watch for dips where he might leap. These hazards can slow you down. Block opponents trying to pass you, or dart inside them at corners. Finally, look at the maps and gallop around the courses away from the racing, so you know every undulation, and aren't paying a princely sum (where appropriate) when you can practice for free!

TO BLACKBOUGH AND BACK

OBJECTIVE:

- Beat the riders (3).

QUESTING DECISIONS

Access this race by visiting a Notice Board in Velen that mentions this race, then head to the starting line.

After picking up the Notice you can find Radko near the starting line. He organizes the races. Talk to him and pick an opponent as well as amount to bet. Then start the race.

Head here at sundown. The rules are simple, and the language is disgraceful. You get to choose from three revolting riders loyal to the Baron (Stutterin' Matko, Iron-Arse Hans, and Black Bogdan), and beat them past the post. Fail, and you can try again afterwards. Wager on yourself, and begin!

Follow the route shown on the associated map. There is only one course. You receive the following rewards after beating each rider in any order:

LOCATIONS: Upper Mill

CHARACTERS: Ofieri Merchant

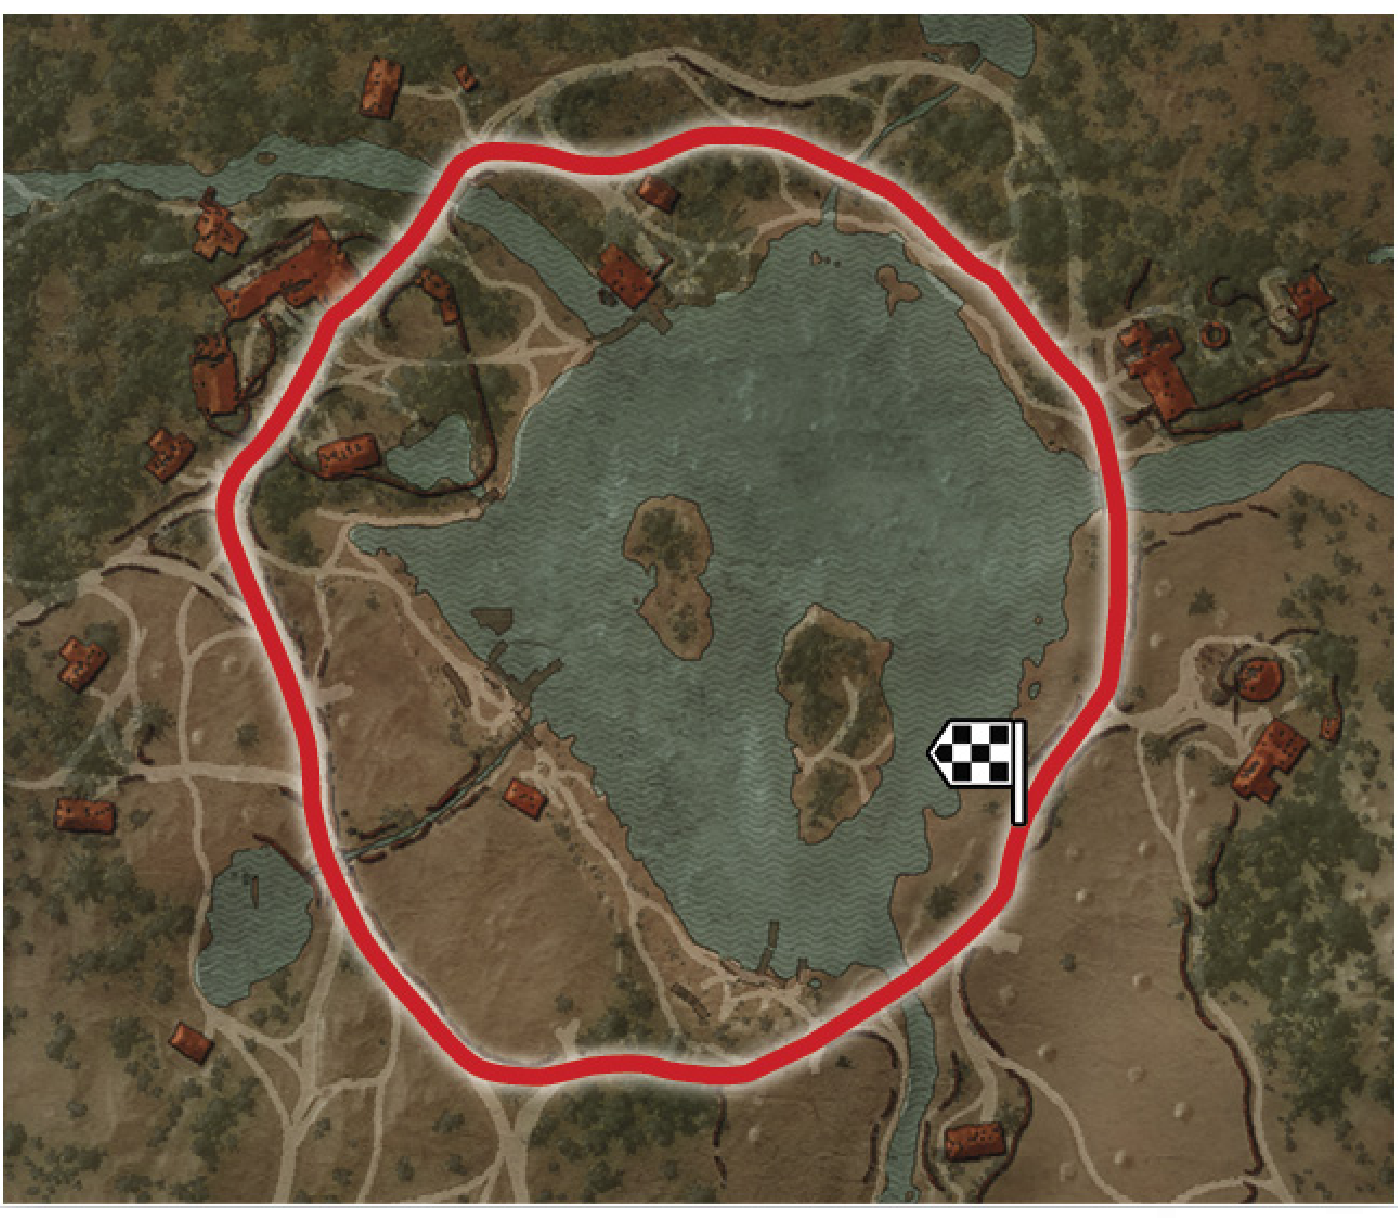
MUCH MAY BE SAID OF A MAN BY HOW HE TREATS HIS HORSE

OBJECTIVE:

- Defeat the Ofieri merchant in a horse race.

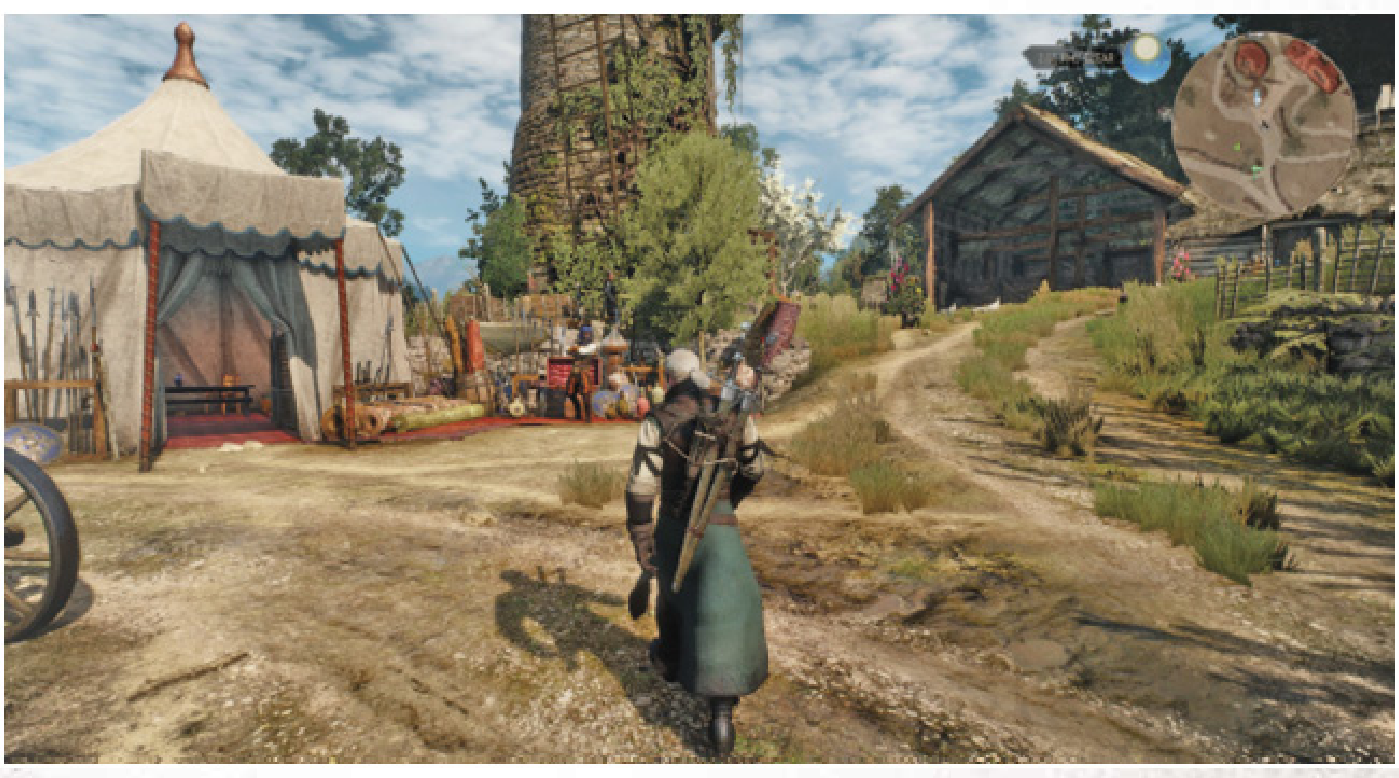
QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is accessible at some point during the Hearts of Stone Main Questing (it could occur at any point). You must visit the Upper Mill area in far northeast Gustfields to find the Merchant. As this race is only performed once, you would be wise to train (galloping around the course using the map from this guide if you wish), and saving your progress in case you are defeated.



Miller's Lake Course

In the very northeastern corner of Gustfields territory, far east of Novigrad City, is the idyllic Brunwich village. Across Miller's Lake is the small hamlet of Upper Mill, where a pair of Ofieri traders have taken up residence. One is a merchant, and the other a Runewright. Engage in conversation with the merchant, who has set up his stall in front of the windmill, by his tent. You can:



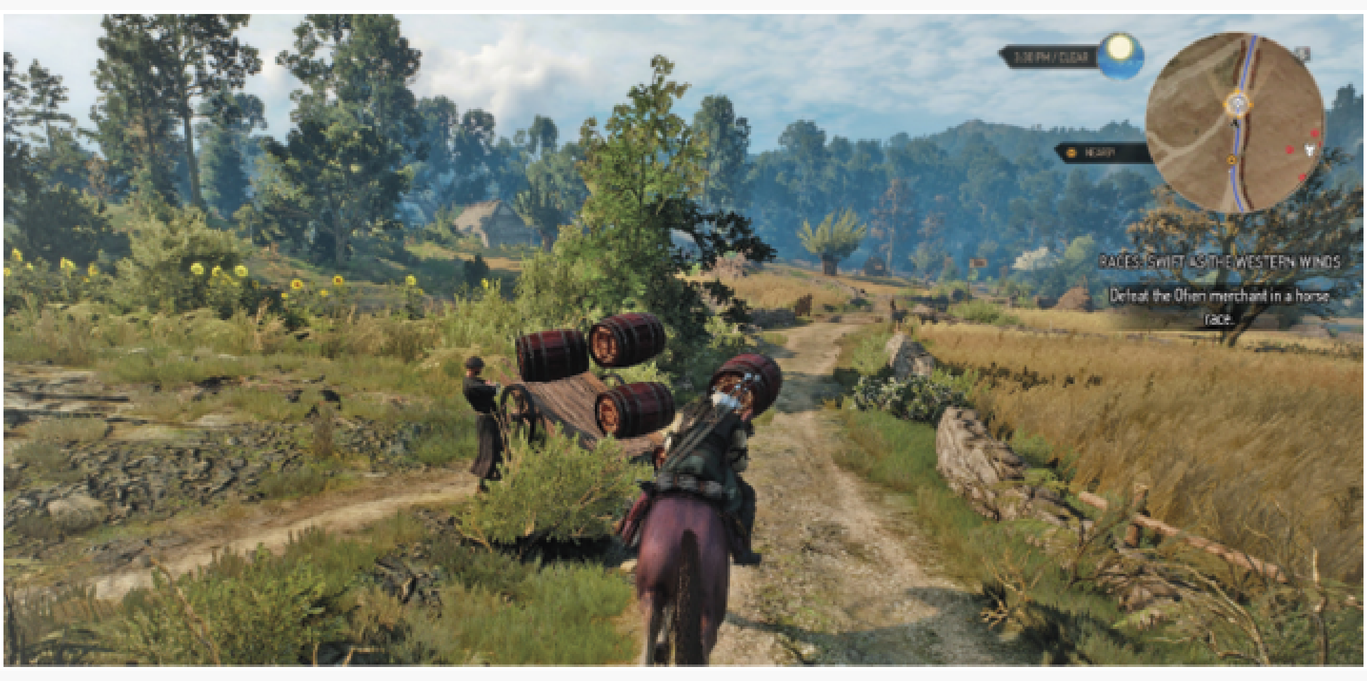
- Ask him about his homeland.
- Tell him you "wouldn't mind a look" at his wares. After inspecting (and optionally trading), the merchant asks if you see worth in his goods. This starts Treasure Hunt: From Ofier's Distant Shores.
- Mention his horse. This prompts you to talk about his trusty steed Babiyetza. Ask if he fancies a race, and he gladly accepts.

Ofieri Merchant

Babiyetza

TAKE YOUR MOUNT TO HER LIMITS!

As the race starts, gallop in a gradual clockwise direction (ensuring you steer to the right at each junction, looking for marker flags to pass between), racing over a small stone bridge and weaving just right of a large oak tree. Just afterwards, a merchant accidentally lets his cart of barrels fall, prompting you to dodge (or jump) them or face a severe slowing down.



RACES: SWIFT AS THE WESTERN WINDS
Defeat the Ofieri merchant in a horse race.

Cross the small wooden bridge, keeping a close eye on your map to ensure you spot the turns to come. Make a sharper right as you trot into Brunwich itself, through the gate where the Dead Man's Party was held, and out the opposite side. Then swerve right and immediately left at the hut with the sunflowers.

After racing through some bushes, watching for a small cluster of goats before a small rickety wooden bridge, the course straightens out a little as the lake continues to be on your right. Dash through the markers, passing the strange chapel on your left. Then it's over one last stone bridge to the finish: the wooden arch just after a boat on your right.

Win the race, and you're awarded with a special stamina-increasing saddle for Roach. Lose, and you receive nothing but unimpressed sideways glances from your steed.

Witcher Contracts

Overview

OVERVIEW: MONSTER HUNTER

While the attempts to find your adopted daughter always take precedence, you are a Witcher with a history of tracking and slaughtering the hardiest monsters throughout the Northern Realms. There is no reason why you can't undertake some additional tracking and slaying missions that benefit the villages of the realm, as well as your coffers.

Witcher Contracts involve either stumbling upon evidence of a monster's activity (its lair, prints, or evidence of bloodshed and combat), or by reading notices requesting your help, and bartering a good price for your services. Or, you can stumble into the contract-giver without finding a notice of their pleas.

Beware that the monsters you hunt during these contracts are tougher versions of the same enemies you may meet during your travels. However, they are susceptible to the same oils, potions, bombs, and Signs as their lesser brethren. Some of these creatures are exceptionally dangerous, so you may consider checking the level you need to be in the Quest Menu to ensure you're up to the task! As always, a comprehensive study of this guide's Bestiary is most helpful when preparing for these quests.

AVAILABLE CONTRACTS

ORIGINAL ADVENTURE (26 CONTRACTS)

There are a total of 26 Witcher Contracts to attempt, including one in White Orchard. There are 11 in Velen, but one of them is only accessible when you're already attempting Secondary Quest: Master Armorers, and is detailed in that previous section. There are eight in Novigrad (the city and surrounding territories). There are six in Skellige.

AVAILABLE CONTRACTS: DLC (3 CONTRACTS)

DLC: There are a total of three additional Witcher Contracts to complete as part of the downloadable content. One takes place in Velen, and leads to a Secondary Quest. The other two are in Ard Skellig.

AVAILABLE CONTRACTS: BLOOD AND WINE (8 CONTRACTS)

Blood and Wine: In addition to the contract that is only available during Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale[el], there are a total of seven additional Witcher Contracts to complete as part of this expansion, though some don't require you to slaughter a frightening version of a particular monster. They all take place within the Duchy of Toussaint.

AVAILABLE VINTNER CONTRACTS: BLOOD AND WINE (5 CONTRACTS)

Blood and Wine: The Duchy of Toussaint has a number of Vintners (Wine merchants) who are having a devil of a time removing particular beasts from their subterranean storage areas. These small-scale Contracts are also available within the Duchy of Toussaint.

Contract: Devil By The Well

A Devil With A Jealous Fury

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: DEVIL BY THE WELL

LOCATIONS: White Orchard, Abandoned Village (Hovel)

CHARACTERS: Odolan. Tomira the Herbalist

ENEMIES: Noonwraith

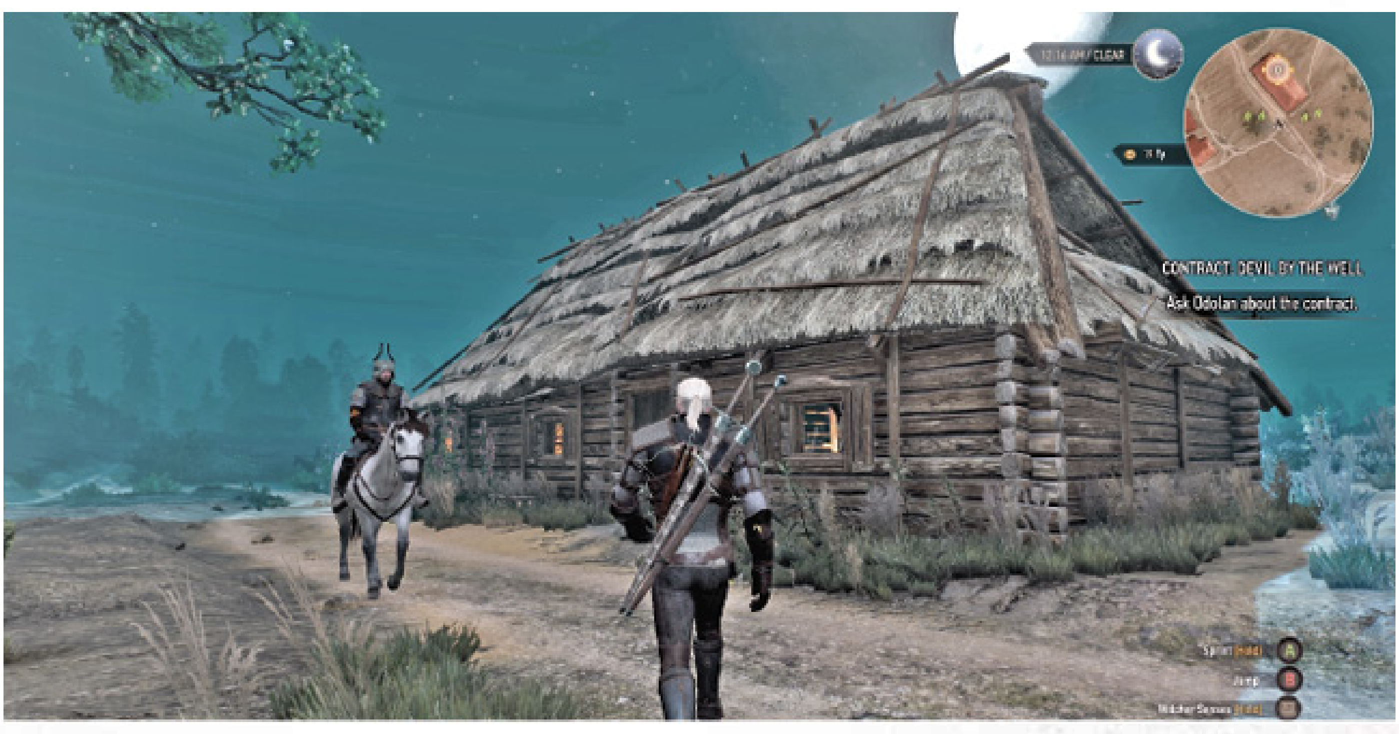
Noonwraith

OBJECTIVES:

- Ask Odolan about the contract.
- Nearest Signpost: Woesong Bridge.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is available during Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries. You can locate the Notice Board in White Orchard to read the contract, talk to Odolan, or stumble upon the noonwraith in Hovel to start the quest.



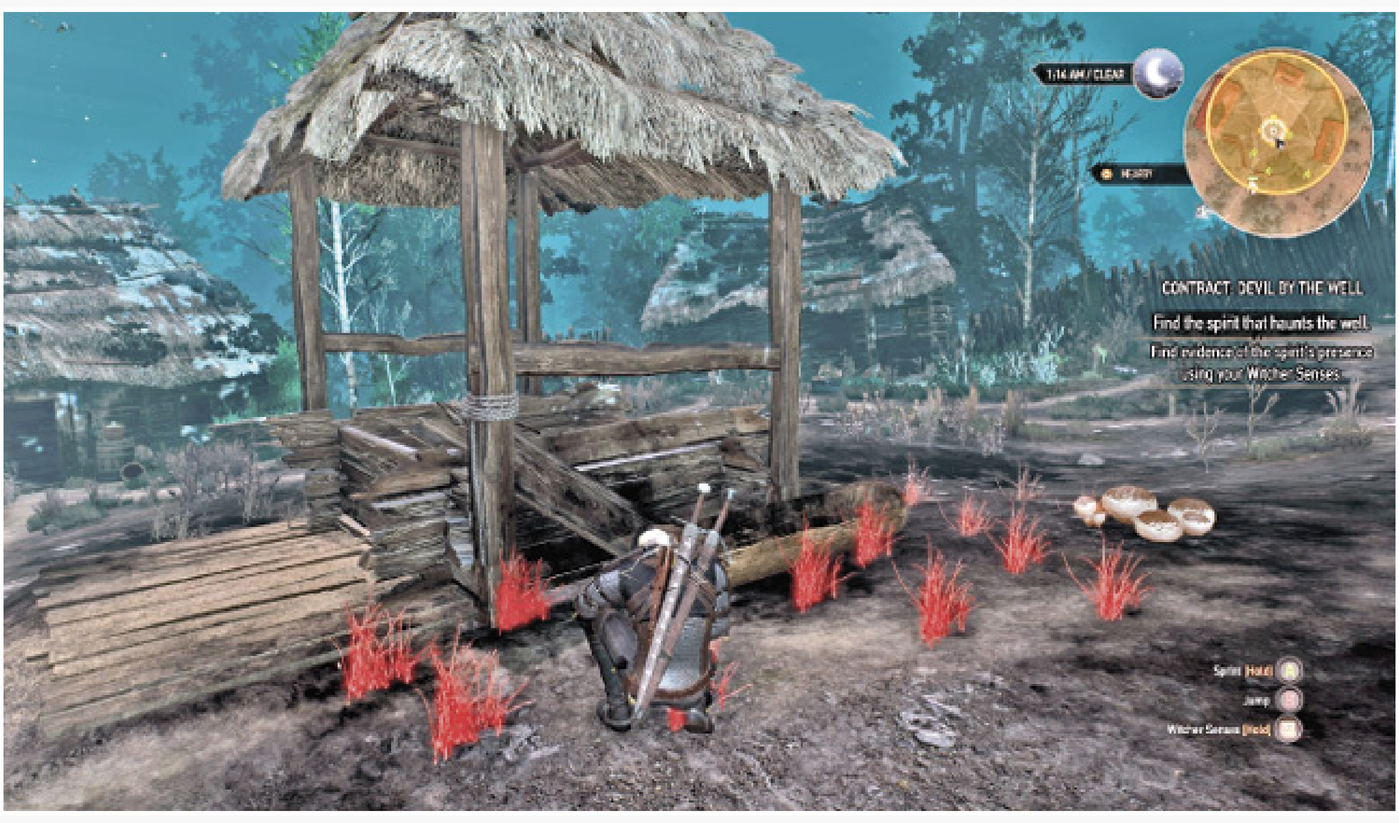
CONTRACT: DEVIL BY THE WELL

Ask Odolan about the contract.

Reading a notice on the board in White Orchard points you in the direction of Odolan, who wishes someone to drive away a monster from a well in the nearby Abandoned Village. Odolan's cottage is on the western outskirts of White Orchard. Head inside, barter a price for your services, and listen to his tale of woe.

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the spirit that haunts the well.
- Find evidence of the spirit's presence using your Witcher Senses.
- Read the entry about noonwraiths in the Bestiary.
- Nearest Signpost: Abandoned Village (Hovel).



CONTRACT: DEVIL BY THE WELL

Find the spirit that haunts the well.

Find evidence of the spirit's presence using your Witcher Senses.

Journey south along the woodland path and through the threshold of the Abandoned Village to the infamous well. After your quest updates, finding out what is haunting the place is achieved in one of two ways:

Using your Witcher Senses to spot the following:

- Scorch marks on the grass around the well.
- A body dried to a crisp close to some bushes.
- Visiting the well between the hours of 12 and 6 (day time) and meeting the noonwraith personally.

Assuming the noonwraith hasn't shown yet, your quest updates, enabling you to read the Bestiary entry (under "Specters") regarding the habits of these foul creatures. This noonwraith is bound to the village for some reason—time to find out why!

OBJECTIVES:

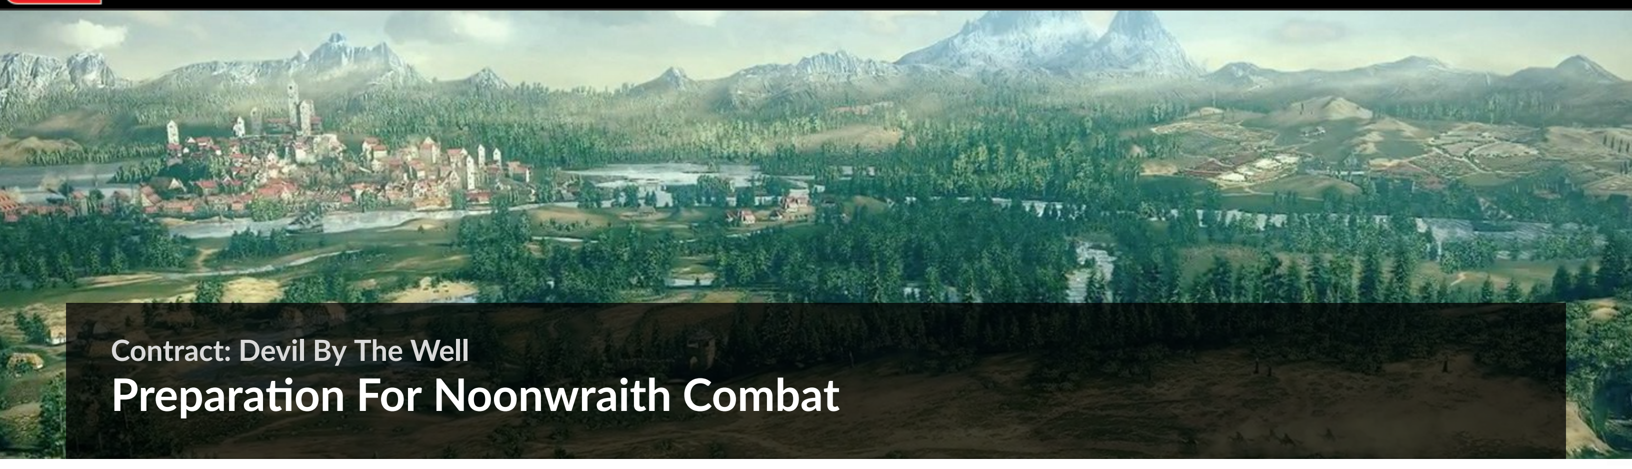
- Find out what binds the noonwraith to the ruined village.
- Follow the drag marks.
- Read the diary from the ruined house.
- Examine the well.

Three smaller objective areas appear on your minimap. The most promising is to the east, leading to the following discoveries once you use your Witcher Senses once more:

- The remains of a man stabbed with a knife.
- A yellowed diary on a bed, which should be read as it references a bracelet—the key to this haunting.
- A set of drag marks. That of a woman who fought for her life to no avail.

Items: Quest Item: Yellowed Diary

Travel back to the well and inspect the traces of blood on the taut well rope. Peering over the edge of the well, you discover the corpse of the woman who wrote the diary. The skeleton is missing an arm. Perhaps the bracelet she loved weighed down the arm so it fell into the water below?



Contract: Devil By The Well

Preparation For Noonwraith Combat

OBJECTIVES:

- Go down the well and look for something that belonged to the dead woman.
- Find a way out of the cave, and leave the cave.

Climb over the side of the well and drop down into the water below. Dive down directly below the surface, and check the bottom until you discover the bracelet you read about in the diary.

Items: Quest Item: Ornate Bracelet

Swim to the surface and head past the small waterfall, clambering onto the muddy bank to the north. After reading the bracelet's inscription ("To Claer— From Volker"), go east, diving into a small underground tunnel that brings you out into a nearby woodland pond. Climb onto the banks, and return to the village once more.

CLUES YOU DON'T NEED TO USE

You don't have to follow these clues if you don't wish to. You can simply drop into the water, retrieve the bracelet, and spot the skeleton hanging in the well using your Witcher Senses, if you wish.

OBJECTIVES:

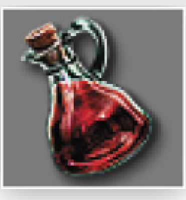
- Prepare to fight the noonwraith and light a fire near the well.
- Light a fire to destroy the noonwraith's bones and bracelet.

THE ILL-EQUIPPED GO TO AN EARLY GRAVE

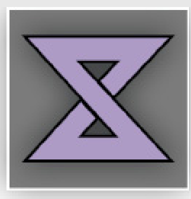
Stop! Though you can face Claer the noonwraith immediately, prior knowledge is helpful: Consult the Besitary if needed. The noonwraith is vulnerable to:

Dimeritium Bomb

Moon Dust Bomb

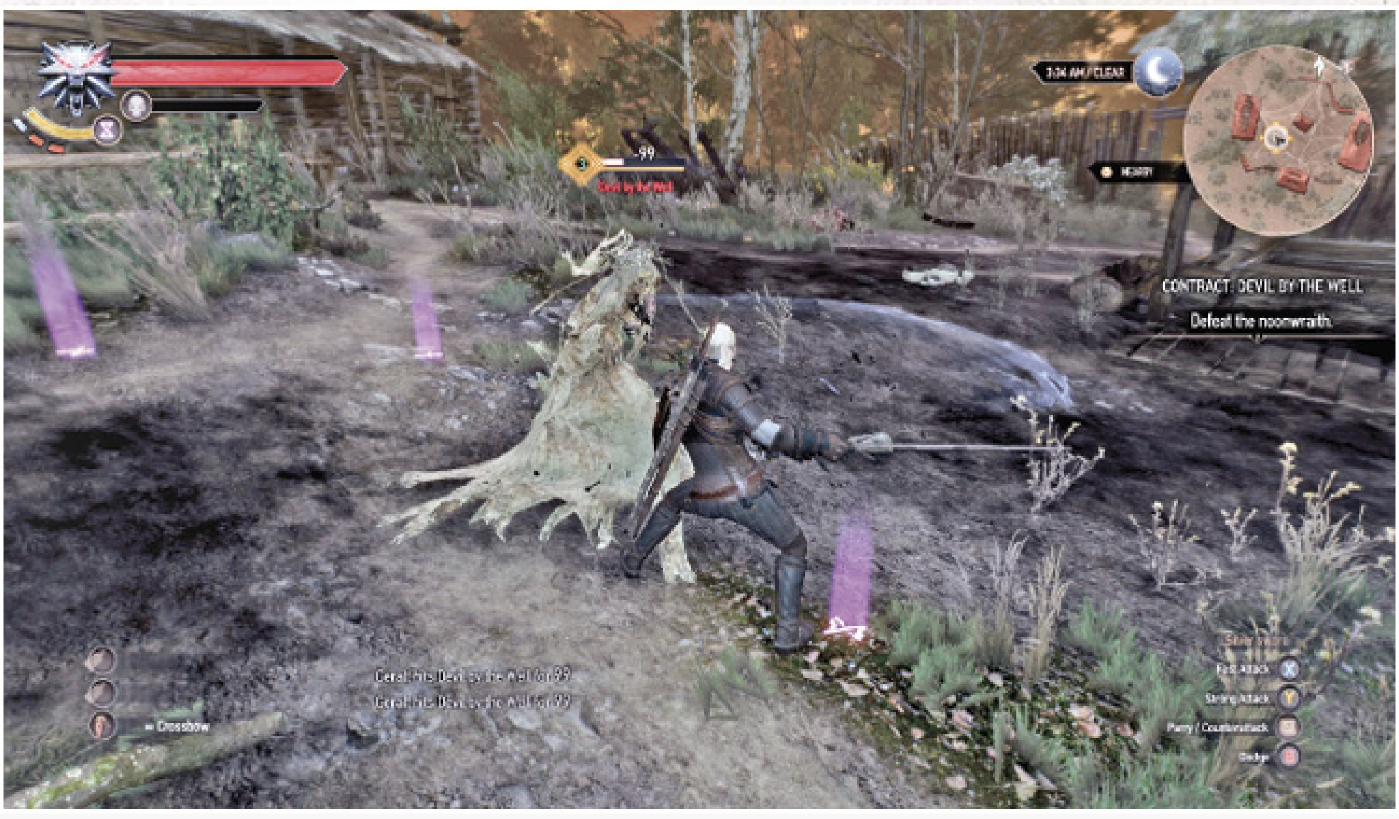


Specter Oil



Yrden

After some proper preparation for this confrontation, return to the well and stand over the skeletal remains of Claer. Access the corpse to automatically burn it and the bracelet, creating an eerie green light and summoning the she-beast in the process. Attack!



END: TO ODOLAN AND TOMIRA

OBJECTIVES:

- Defeat the noonwraith.
- Take a trophy from the noonwraith.
- Return to Odolan for a reward.

Slay the noonwraith, then inspect the corpse and gather the trophy, which you may tie to Roach and ride back to Odolan's cottage to inform him that the curse has been lifted. His reward depends on the bartering you attempted at the start of this quest, which now concludes.

Items: Quest Item: Noonwraith Trophy, Item: Amethyst (if you refuse the coin), or Crowns

NOONWRAITH FIRST, ODOLAN SECOND

If you started this quest by encountering the noonwraith first, you receive an objective to head to White Orchard and read a Notice Board, which directs you to Odolan. Or, simply head to Odolan. You receive a reward, and there's no bartering allowed.

Afterwards, you may wish to visit Tomira the herbalist, at her nearby cottage. She knew Claer personally. Telling her about what happened at the well gives you more insight into who Claer was and what happened (and the following rewards). A tombstone and a wreath appear in Hovel. With the spirit banished, after some time, people start moving in to Hovel.

Items: Crowns, 4x Saltpetre, 8x Berbercane Fruit, 8x Hellebore Petals, 6x Cortinarius

Contract: The Beast Of Honorton

Horror At Honorton

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

DLC

CONTRACT: THE BEAST OF HONORTON

RELATED QUESTS: Secondary Quest: Where the Cat and Wolf Play, Secondary Quest: Take What You Want

LOCATIONS: Crow's Perch, Honorton (Unmarked)

ENEMIES: Alghoulsz

OBJECTIVE:

- Talk to the ealdorman of Honorton about his contract for a Witcher.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is available during your exploration of Velen, once the DLC is installed. Start by checking out the Notice Board within the Baron's upper manor walls, in Crow's Perch, or in Oreton.

While visiting Crow's Perch, head through the village, up through the fort's portcullis gate, and into the entrance to the manor grounds (where the armorers are), and procure a piece of parchment from the Notice Board. It is entitled "Contract: The Beast of Honorton," and mentions a "vile and dangerous spook" causing trouble to the hamlet of Honorton. The ealdorman Sobemir should have further details. The village of Honorton is almost due south of Crow's Perch, nestled in the woods between Claywich (to the west) and the Boatmakers' Hut (to the east).

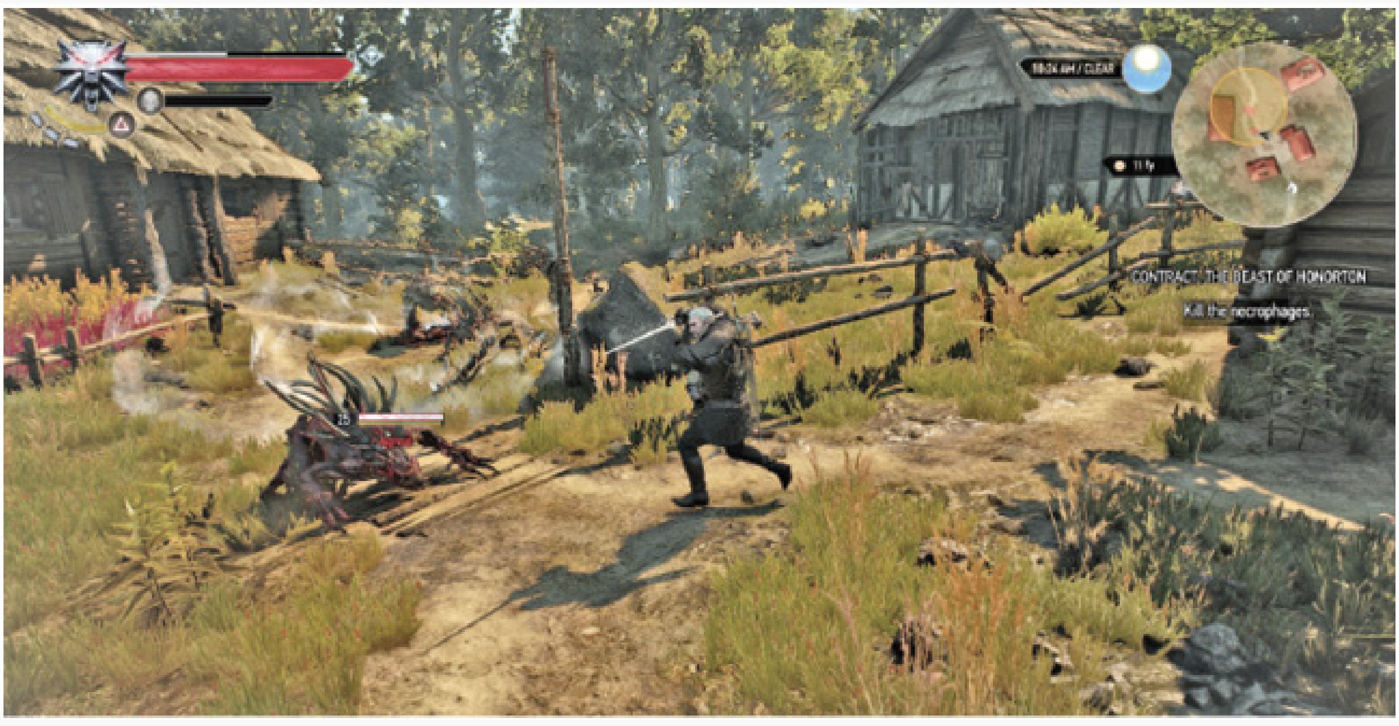
CONTRACT: THE BEAST OF HONORTON
Talk to the ealdorman of Honorton about his contract for a witcher
Hey there
HORSE STAMINA

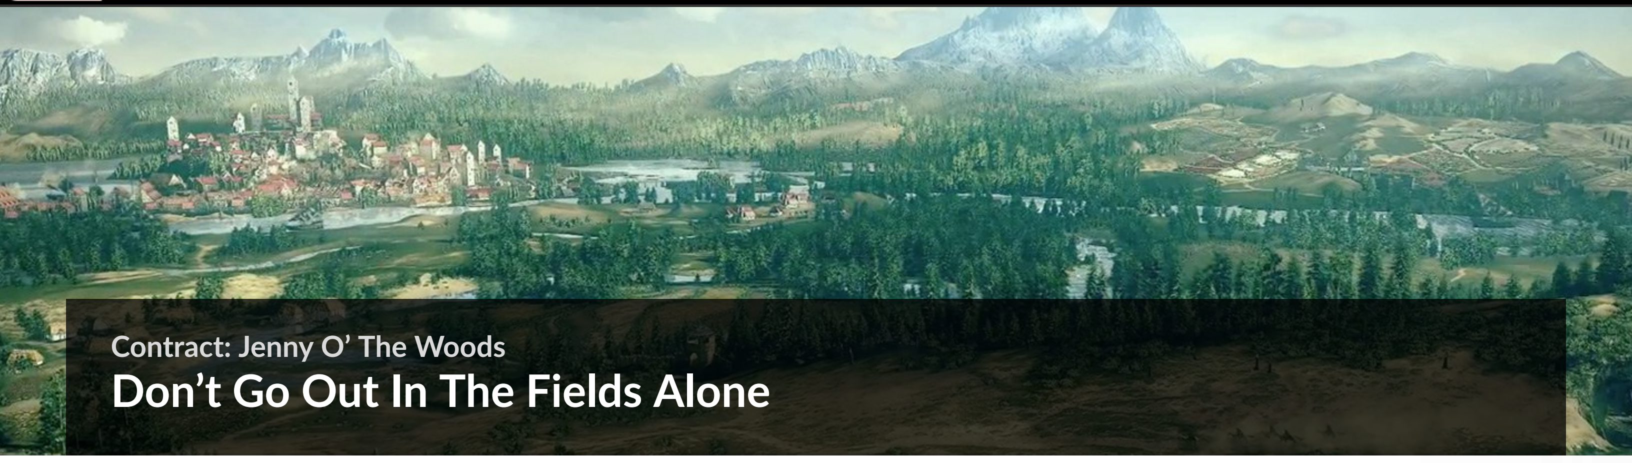
OBJECTIVE:

- Kill the necrophages.



CONTRACT: THE BEAST OF HONORTON
Kill the necrophages.

When you arrive, you notice how quiet the place is; until you step between the huts and must engage three Ghouls or Alghouls in swift combat. Once you slay these necrophages, you assume the ealdorman was one of the villagers slain; though not by the beasts you just slew. This Contract ends, and the quest automatically updates to become Secondary Quest: Where the Cat and Wolf Play...



Contract: Jenny O' The Woods

Don't Go Out In The Fields Alone

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: JENNY O' THE WOODS

LOCATION: Midcopse
CHARACTERS: Bolko, Agneta, Zula
ENEMIES: Deserters, Jenny o' the Woods (Nightwraith)

Jenny o' the Woods

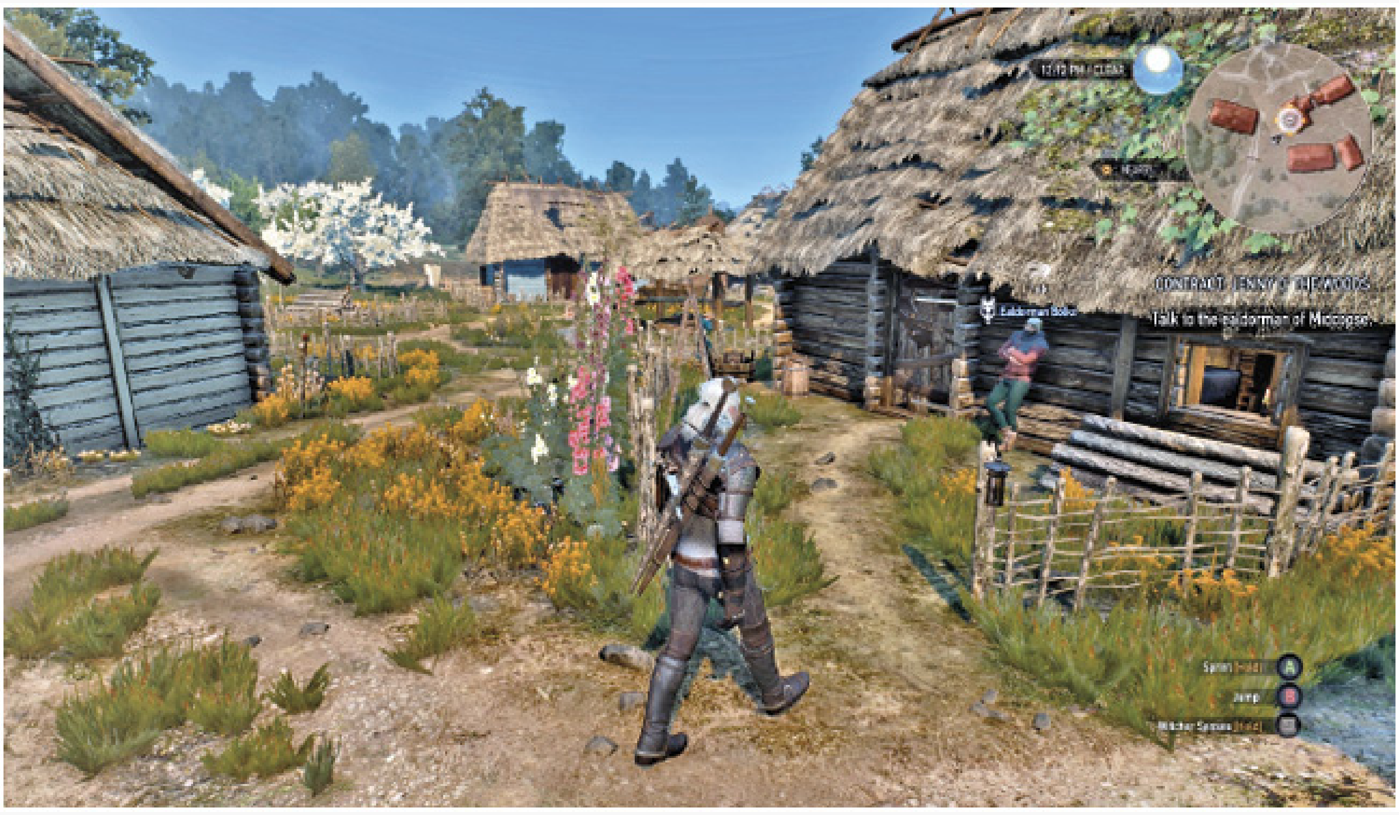
OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the ealdorman of Midcopse.
- Nearest Signpost: Midcopse.

QUESTING DECISIONS

Find the Notice Board in Midcopse to read the contract and begin the quest. Or, chance upon the clues in the fields and progress to Midcopse afterwards. The optimal path is the former.

Bolko, ealdorman of Midcopse, is desperate for someone to see off the devilry that has taken hold of his town's fields that's neither spirit nor phantom. He urges his brethren never to tend the fields alone, or without carrying a scythe or rake. Head into the village of Midcopse, and locate Bolko leaning against his hut. Barter a price for your services if you wish, and ask if anyone has seen this Jenny o' the Woods character. Old Willem did, but he died of a weak heart in the fields, this morning. Perhaps Agneta can provide further information? Agree to tackle this terror.

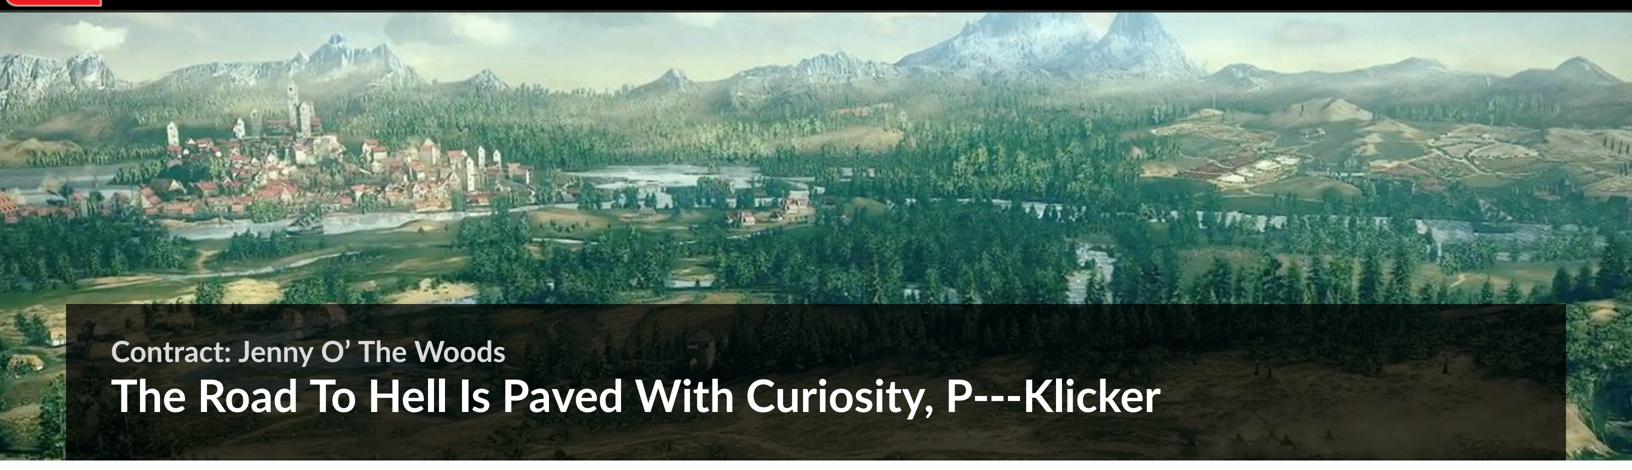


Contract: Jenny o' the Woods
Talk to the ealdorman of Midcopse.
Ealdorman Bolko
Sprint (Hold)
Jump
Witcher Senses (Hold)

OBJECTIVE:

- (Optional) Interrogate the witnesses.

A peasant woman named Agneta is in the long grass at the edge of the village, and claims to have seen Jenny. Although it was dimpsy, she noticed a pale shape looming before her, like mist. As it coalesced, she ran back to the village, but the time (twilight) the wraith appeared is important. Bid Agneta farewell, and depart.



Contract: Jenny O' The Woods

The Road To Hell Is Paved With Curiosity, P---Klicker

OBJECTIVE:

- Search the nearby fields.

Run roughly northwest out of Midcopse, and slow down as you reach the objective area in the pasture land being turned over by villagers. With your Witcher Senses, examine the ground under foot. Locate the following:

- The footprints of a woman running through here barefoot. Follow these in a winding arch to a large splattering of blood.
- Inspect the blood splatter by the copse of trees. The woman couldn't outrun the pursuer, so her throat was slit, and the knife left behind. Take the knife, since the dried blood on it may prove useful.

Items: Quest Item: Assassin's Knife

Head along the grassy path, following it roughly northwest, checking the ground for dragging marks where the body was pulled. This ends at a thicket, check the ground nearby, it is a shallow grave. Inspect the grave closely for a letter sticking out of it. Beware, you may have to slay a deserter roaming the area as you search.

Items: Quest Item: Letter Found in a Grave

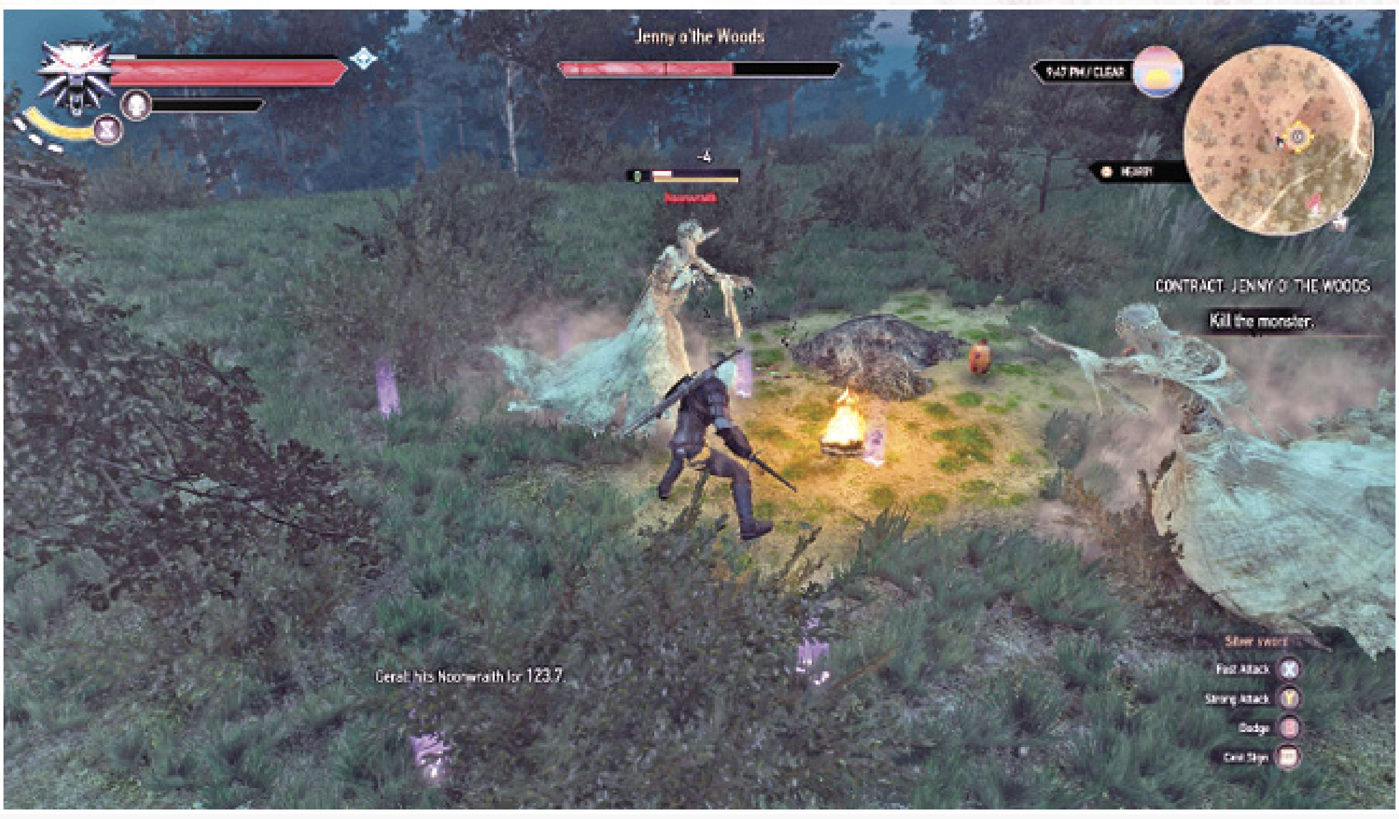
OBJECTIVES:

- Read the dead girl's journal.
- Ask the ealdorman about the lovers.
- Find the lovers' meeting spot.

The note details fear the girl (Zula) had regarding a man named Bokhai, who wouldn't leave her (and her new beau) alone. You deduce a scorned lover killed the woman. Report your findings to the ealdorman back in Midcopse (head southeast). He explains they both disappeared about a week ago. You believe Zula to be the restless spirit, and Bolko tells you to travel to a clearing west of the village, where the young'uns used to frequent.

OBJECTIVES:

- Burn Zula's letter and the dried blood from the knife.
- Kill Jenny o' the Woods.



Equidistant between Micopse, the Refugees' Camp, and the Forest Hut, is the objective area where the clearing is located. Trek northwest first. There is a small campfire and straw bedding close to the woods. Optionally check the woods for a small deserters' camp, and slay any of them that might interrupt your ritual. Then prepare to summon a nightwraith!

Access the campfire if it is after nightfall. If not, meditate until after the sun sets (just before midnight is ideal). Something dark flits behind you, then approaches the light. A dark specter of pain and suffering. Unsheathe your silver sword, and set about defeating Jenny o' the Woods, being aware of all her cloned forms and combative cunning.

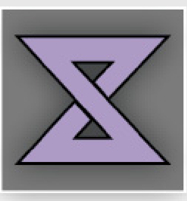
BETTER THAN A GHOST OF A CHANCE

Go to the Bestiary chapter for better battle tactics. The nightwraith has the following vulnerabilities:

Dimeritium Bomb

Moon Dust Bomb

Specter Oil



Yrden

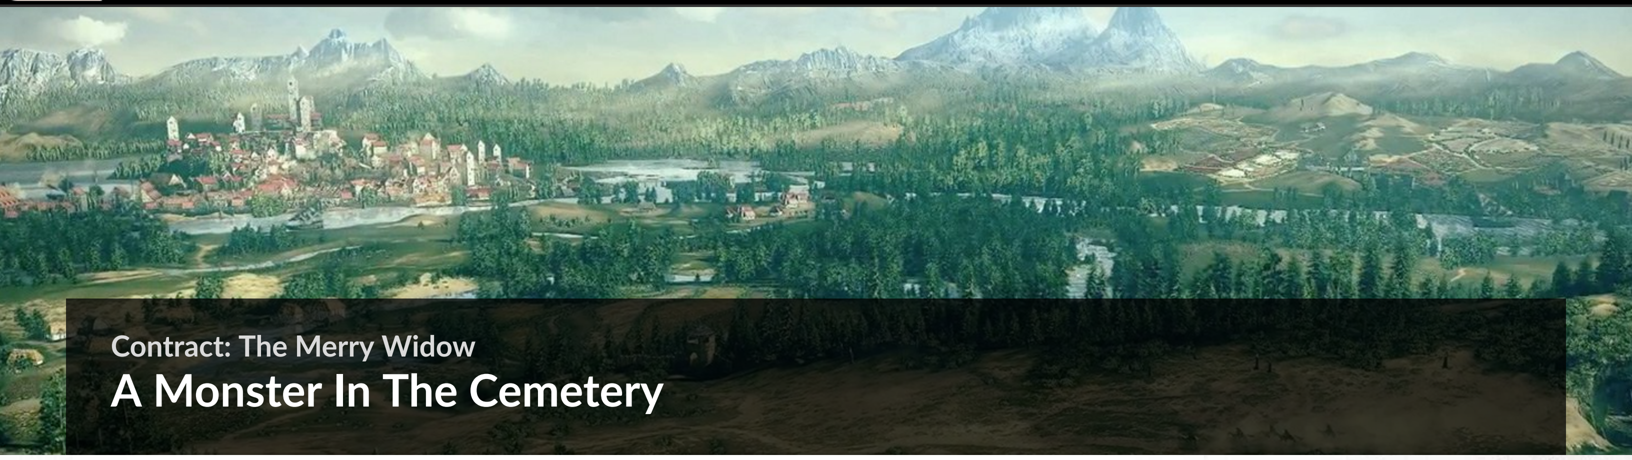
END: AFTER THE WRATH OF THE WRAITH

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the nightwraith.
- Collect your reward.

The pile of ethereal essence has frightened her last villager! Stoop down and inspect the remains of "Jenny" (Zula), gathering an ingredient, as well as the skull and bones of the foe. Then mount Roach with the sack containing this evidence tied to your saddle, and canter back to Bolko. He hands over the agreed payment as your reward, and the quest concludes.

Items: Ingredient: Dark Essence, Quest Item: Nightwraith Trophy, Crowns



Contract: The Merry Widow

A Monster In The Cemetery

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: THE MERRY WIDOW

LOCATION: Lindenvale, Lindenvale Cemetery, Mourntart's Hut

CHARACTERS: Gravedigger

ENEMIES: Wraiths, Rabid Dogs, Ghouls, Mourntart (Grave Hag)

Mourntart

OBJECTIVES:

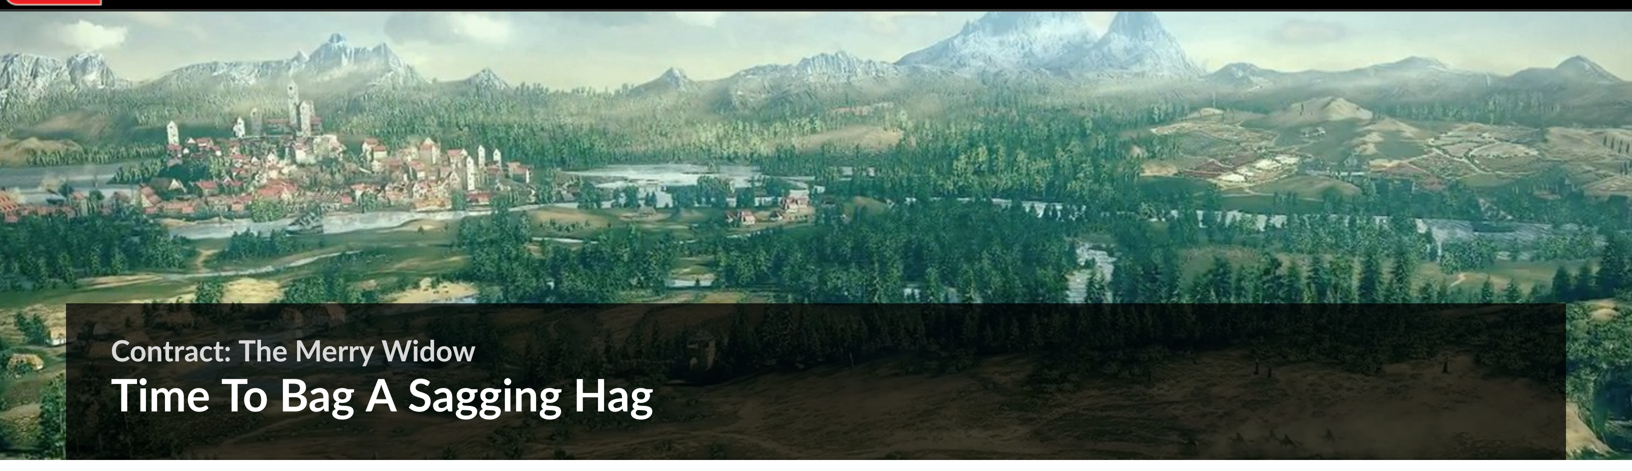
- Talk to the gravedigger.
- Nearest Signpost: Lindenvale.

QUESTING DECISIONS

Find the Notice Board in Lindenvale to read the contract and begin the quest. Or, chance upon the clues in Mourntart's Hut first. The optimal path is the former.

An anonymous post on the Lindenvale Notice Board mentions a "monster in the cemetery" that has taken to digging up graves, preying on those who enter, and has even kidnapped the miller's lad. Set off to reach the gravedigger's cottage on the northeast side of town. He's leaning on a fence near his chiseled gravestones.

Listen to his story of the kidnapped child. Barter a price for your services if you wish, agree to help, and set off for the cemetery.



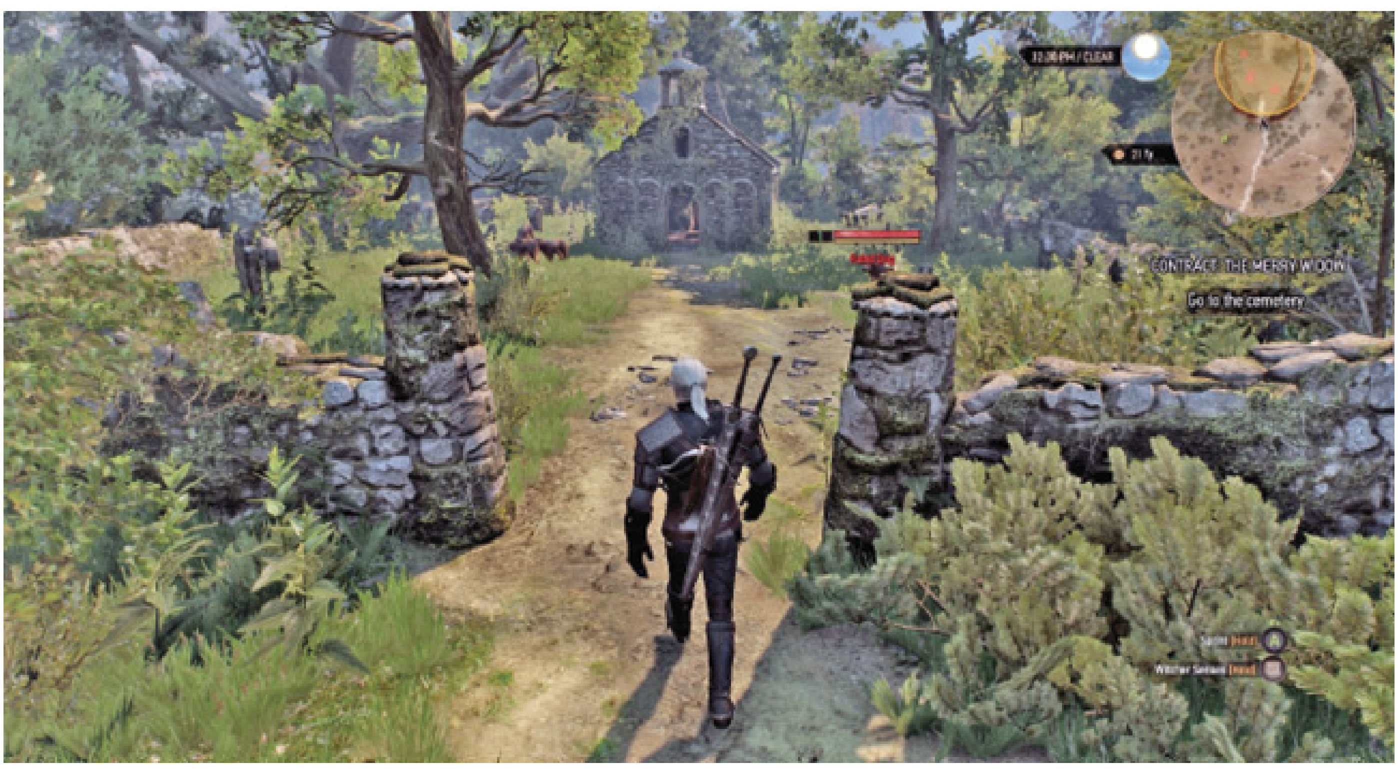
Contract: The Merry Widow

Time To Bag A Sagging Hag

OBJECTIVES:

- Go to the cemetery.
- Defeat all enemies in the cemetery.
- Follow the scent of cadaverine.

Make quick progress north up the path out of town. Then sprint right (south) at the junction in the path toward a small chapel overlooking the village. You may need to tackle a couple of wraiths, and a pack of rabid dogs that have taken up residence here (if you arrive during the night, these are ghouls rather than dogs).



It seems ghouls dug up the graves inside the cemetery threshold, which attracted the dogs. When the encroaching enemy threats are removed, begin a thorough search, using your Witcher senses. Locate the following:

- Examine the graves—dug up without the use of tools. There are three to inspect.
- A freshly-dug grave on the right (west) side of the chapel, near the cemetery wall and among some undergrowth. The overripe cadaverine has a stench that must be followed.

Go down the hill to the rear of the chapel, across a ruined stone bridge, and wind your way along the pathway until you meet a bear. Slay the creature, continuing to follow the scent left (southwards) at the path junction. The smell leads to an old cottage (known as Mourntart's Hut). Enter, and inspect what appears to be a lair of reeds, twigs, matted skin and corpse flesh, discarded bones, and an eating pot. Check the following:

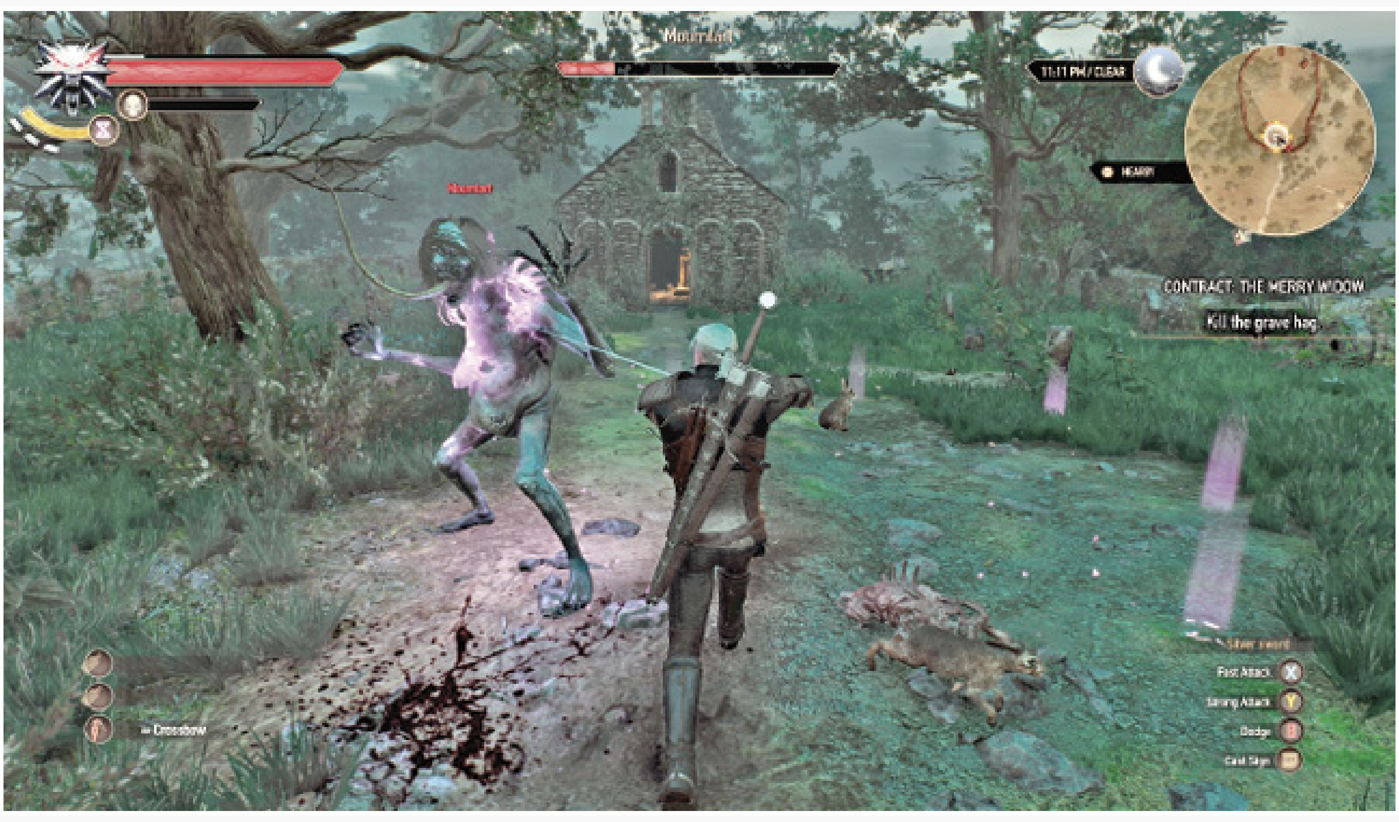
- The eating pot. The creature can use tools and is sapient.
- There is a cooking pot on a small fire, containing a child's femur.
- A small circle of human skulls. This foe is drawing strength from a Place of Power.

OBJECTIVES:

- Take the skulls.
- Put the skulls in the cemetery and wait for the grave hag to come.
- Kill the grave hag.

The skulls are the key to coaxing the creature (which you've determined is a grave hag) back to the cemetery. Gather them up and sprint back to the cemetery chapel. Place them inside the structure, at the altar lit by candles.

A fetid breeze announces the arrival of a grotesque grave hag named Mourntart. Step out, brandishing your silver sword, and make short work of this sagging bag of boils and bones, who has come back for the skulls she stole.



HOLDING YOUR OWN AGAINST THE CRONE

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this unpleasant, matted-haired biddy. The grave hag has the following vulnerabilities:

			Black Blood	Necrophage Oil	Yrden	Quen

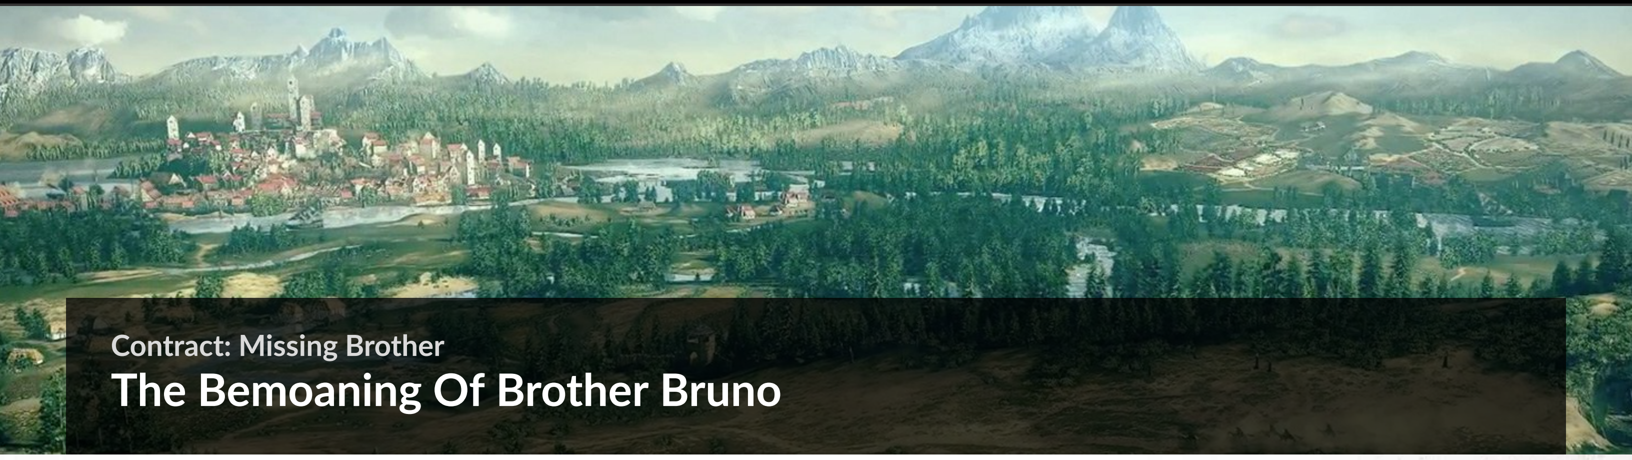
END: AFTER THE HARRYING OF THE HARRIDAN

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy.
- Collect your reward from the gravedigger.

Sift through the offal and gather various parts of the grave hag you slew, for your own alchemy, and as proof of the kill. Tie the sack to Roach, and ride back into Lindenvale, and explain to the gravedigger where the miller's son is (bits of him are boiling in the hag's pot), and claim your reward. The quest then concludes.

Items: Grave Hag's Ear, Grave Hag's Tooth, Grave Hag Trophy, Crowns



Contract: Missing Brother

The Bemoaning Of Brother Bruno

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: MISSING BROTHER

LOCATIONS: Inn at the Crossroads, Old Mine

CHARACTERS: Bruno, Mikel

ENEMIES: Young Arachas, Harrisi (Arachas)

Recommended Item: Axii Delusion Level 3

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to Bruno.
- Nearest Signpost: Inn at the Crossroads.

QUESTING DECISIONS

Find the Notice Board at the Inn at the Crossroads to read the contract and begin the quest. Or, chance upon the clues in the cave and progress to the inn afterwards. The optimal path is the former.

A message of note is available to read that mentions a missing man called Mikel. His brother Bruno, a man with an ear to the Baron himself, seeks any information regarding the whereabouts of his lost sibling. Enter the Inn at the Crossroads, and find Bruno lost in thought in one corner. He jumps at the chance for help finding Mikel. It's been a week since his brother took the women of Bellows into the hills. Bellows was recently ransacked in the war, and Mikel took them into the old mines. Barter for a better rate for your services if you desire, then obtain some knowledge about Mikel (he's wearing some fancy calfskin ankle boots) and be on your way.

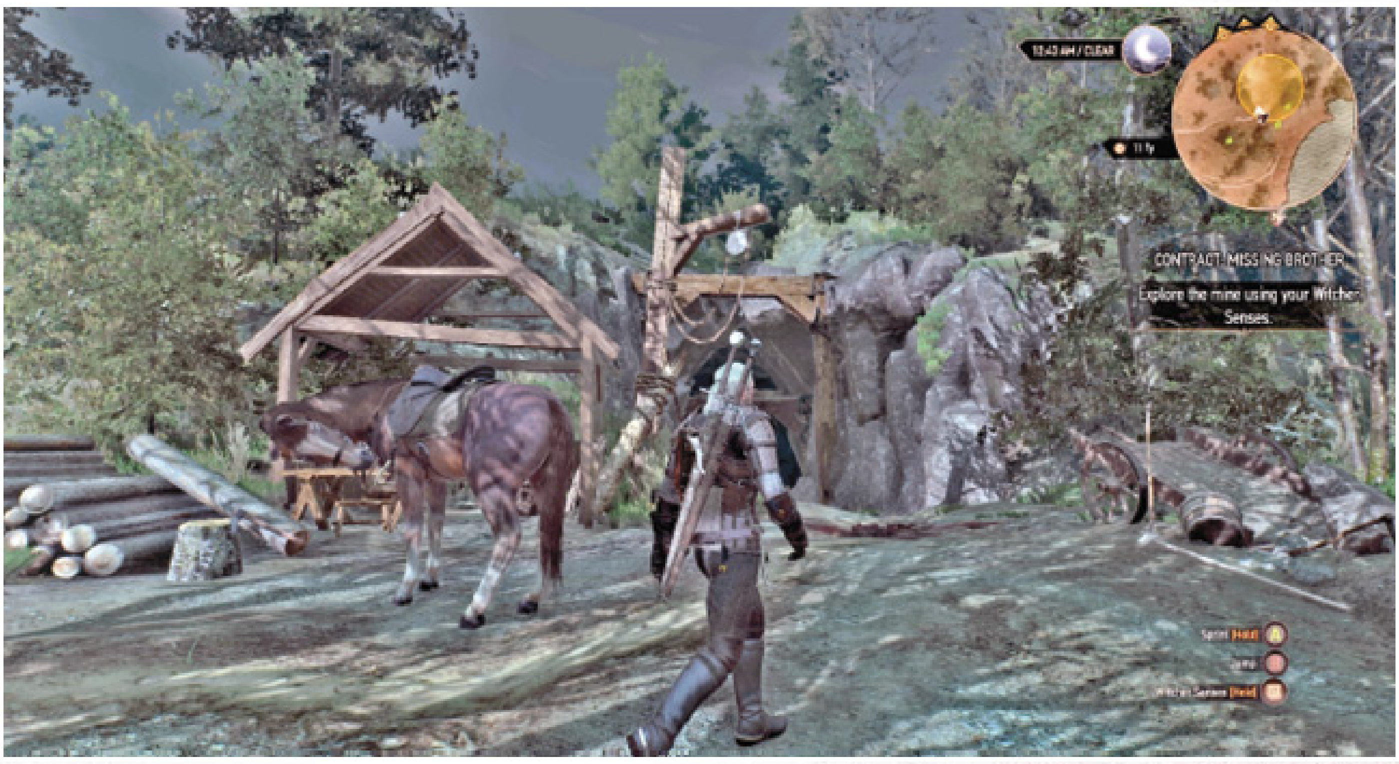
Harrisi

Contract: Missing Brother

Horrors At The Old Mine

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the missing brother in the mine near the Inn at the Crossroads.
- Explore the mine using your Witcher Senses.



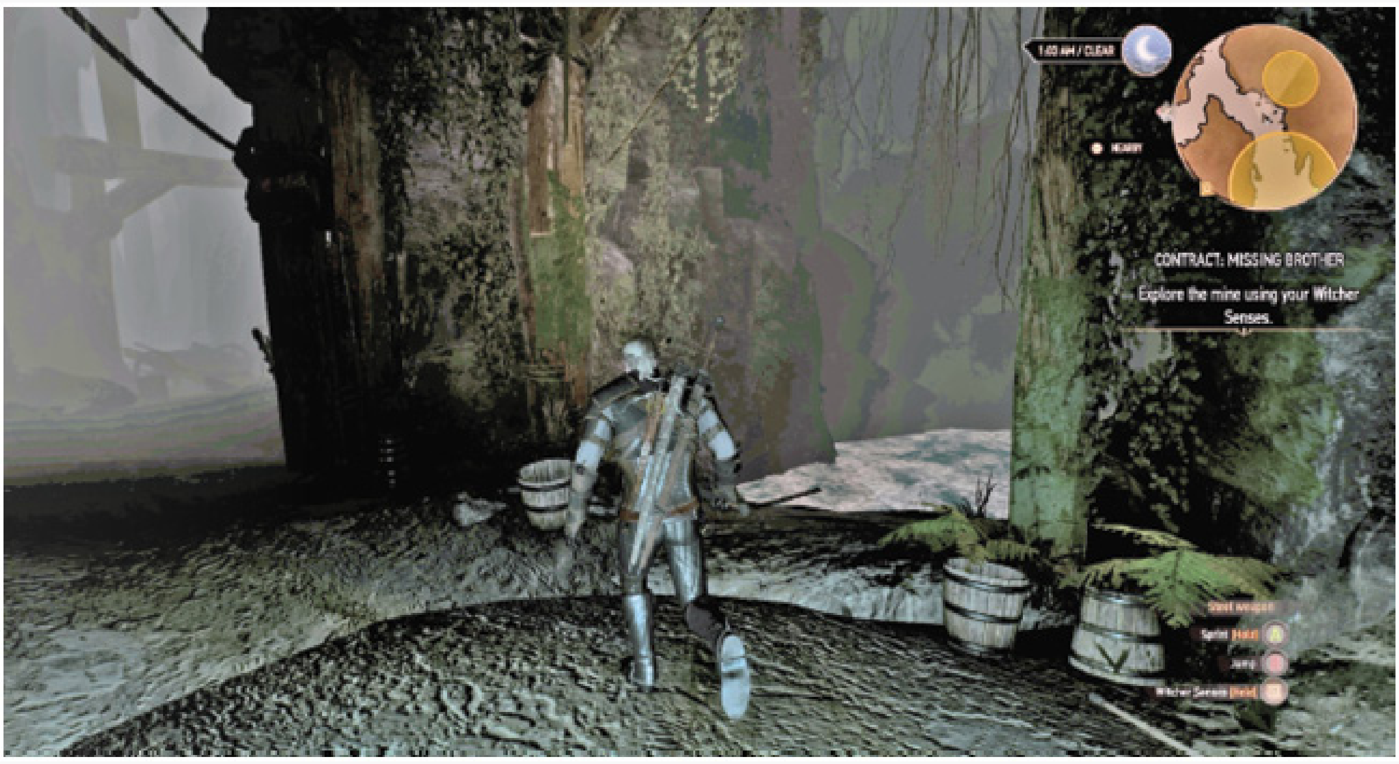
12:43 AM / CLEAR
CONTRACT: MISSING BROTHER
Explore the mine using your Witcher Senses.
Sprint (Hold)
Jump
Witcher Senses (Hold)

Summon your trusty steed and gallop roughly northwards (and a little east), staying to the roads if you don't want some fights with roaming nekkers and other unpleasant monsters. Head down to the edge of the river, and locate an old wagon and small workman's hut at the mine entrance. At this point, use your Witcher Senses to spot the following:

- An extremely splattered array of human remains requiring great strength to pulverize in such a manner.
- Some monster tracks leading into the mine entrance, right of the hut.

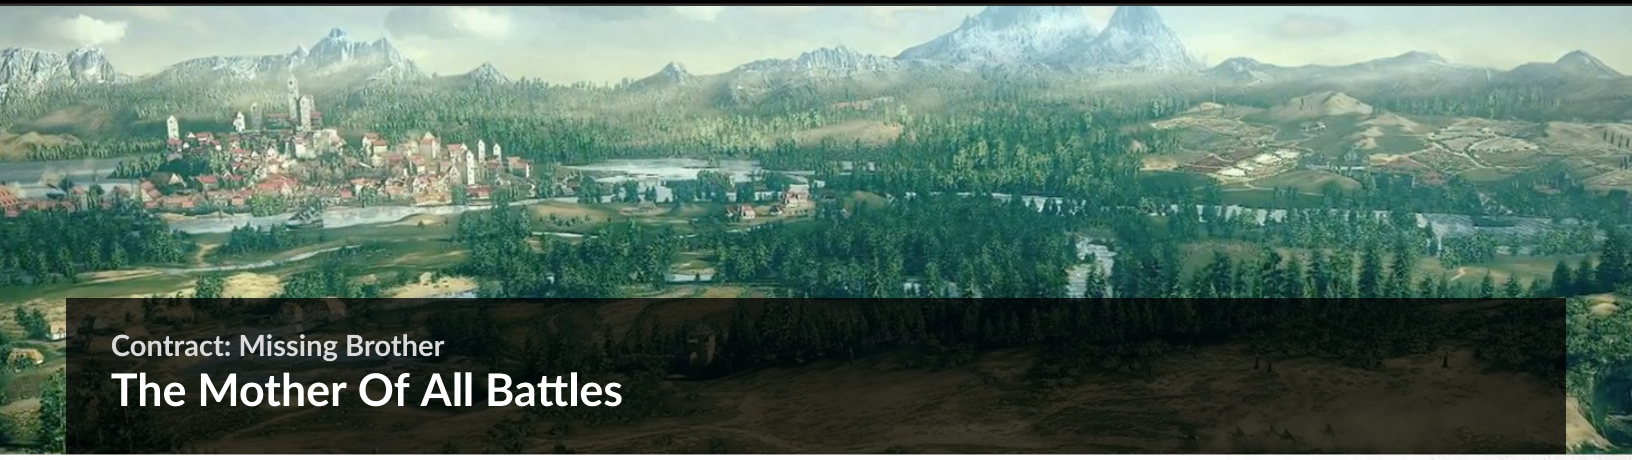
Enter the mine, pausing to light the torch with Igni if you wish, then drop down into the waterlogged lower tunnel. Turn to face east, and wade to the dryer part of the tunnel where the monster tracks are visible again. They wind down a tight tunnel, passing a crate you can loot, to a junction chamber with scattered wood and large splatters of blood everywhere. The blood is fresh, but no bodies can be seen.

Continue onwards down the tunnel in a roughly northeasterly direction, following the tracks until they split into two separate routes. One continuing left along the tunnel, and one to the right, leading into a small pool of water. That water looks interesting…



1:40 AM / CLEAR
CONTRACT: MISSING BROTHER
Explore the mine using your Witcher Senses.
Sprint (Hold)
Jump
Witcher Senses (Hold)

Dive into the water, swimming through an underwater tunnel with some crates to loot along the way. Follow the tracks up to the surface, up into a grotto area. Advance into the middle of the chamber, using your Witcher Senses to spot a mass of blood, flesh, and digestive juices. This must be food for its young. You surmise this is a venomous Arachas!



Contract: Missing Brother

The Mother Of All Battles

OBJECTIVES:

- Use Witcher Signs to destroy all the eggs (12).
- Kill the arachas.

There is a trail of stench from the mass of blood and juices. Don't follow yet. There are four giant egg sacs to examine near some ingredient mushrooms. These eggs are going to hatch soon, so you're wise to destroy them. Use Igni or Aard to set the first four egg sacs alight, or to blow them apart with force.

Turn to face west. The grotto has two exits—to the left and right. Take the former and stride confidently into a fight with a young arachas. Then roast two more eggs clustered together, and another two set apart. That's eight destroyed egg sacs. The last eggs are in a separate cavern, accessed via another underwater tunnel, left of the first chamber. That's all 12 deflated!

Continue northwest and then west along a tunnel to a giant grotto chamber. The scattered remains of local villager women lie everywhere, some draped over the rocks along with some loot to take. Use your Witcher Senses. You automatically view the following: There's a calfskin boot—all that's left of Mikel. Young arachases appear as soon as Harrisi notices you, and the number depends on the eggs you have destroyed (the fewer eggs, the fewer young). Now face the mighty Harrisi!

HARASSED BY THE ARACHAS HARRISI?

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics. The arachas has the following vulnerabilities:

Golden Oriole

Insectoid Oil

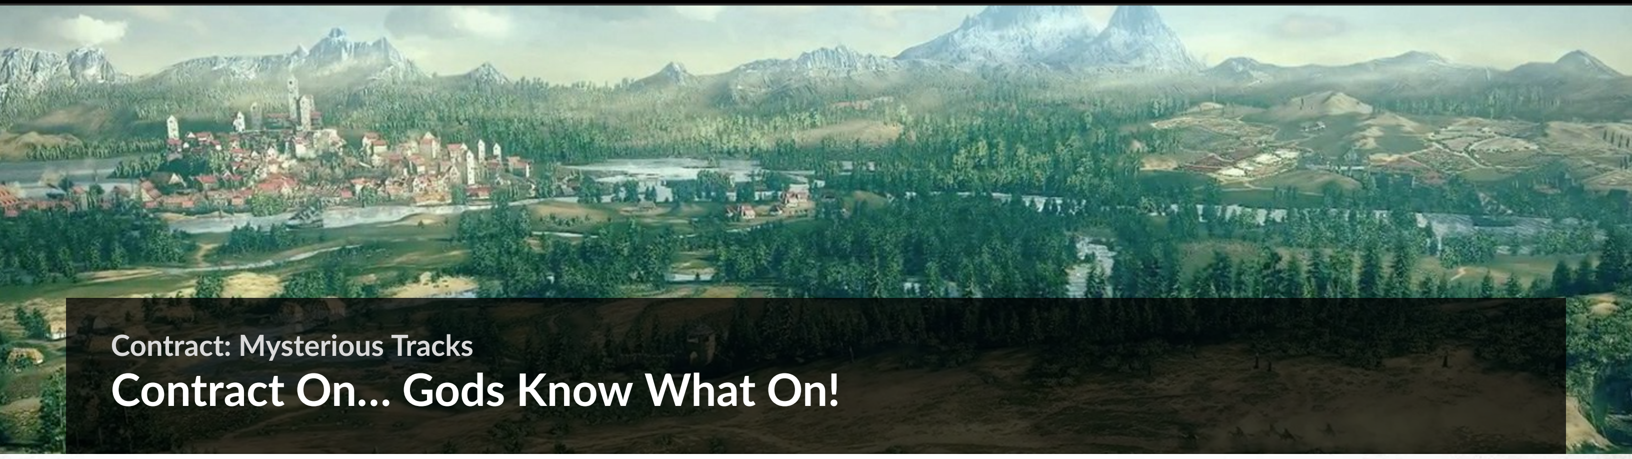
END: AFTER THE ARACHASAE ANNIHILATION

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the arachas' body.
- Collect your reward.

With sagging thorax thoroughly deflated, scrabble around in Harrisi's giant corpse to gather some ingredients and a trophy to attach to Roach. Carefully retrace your steps out of the mine, and head back to the inn at the Crossroads, where Bruno is saddened by the news of his brother. Bruno refuses to pay the full sum, leaving you to Axii him (Delusion Level 3) to claim the full reward, or accept only half of it.

Items: Arachas Venom, Arachas Eyes, Arachas Trophy, Crowns



Contract: Mysterious Tracks

Contract On… Gods Know What On!

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: MYSTERIOUS TRACKS

LOCATIONS: Lindenvale, Fiend's Cave

CHARACTERS: Hunter, Merchant

ENEMIES: Arachas, Howler (Chort)

Howler

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the hunter.
- Nearest Signpost: Lindenvale.

QUESTING DECISIONS

Find the Notice Board in Lindenvale to read the contract and begin the quest. Or, chance upon the clues (the dead wolves and cave) first, and then ask the hunter. The optimal path is the former.

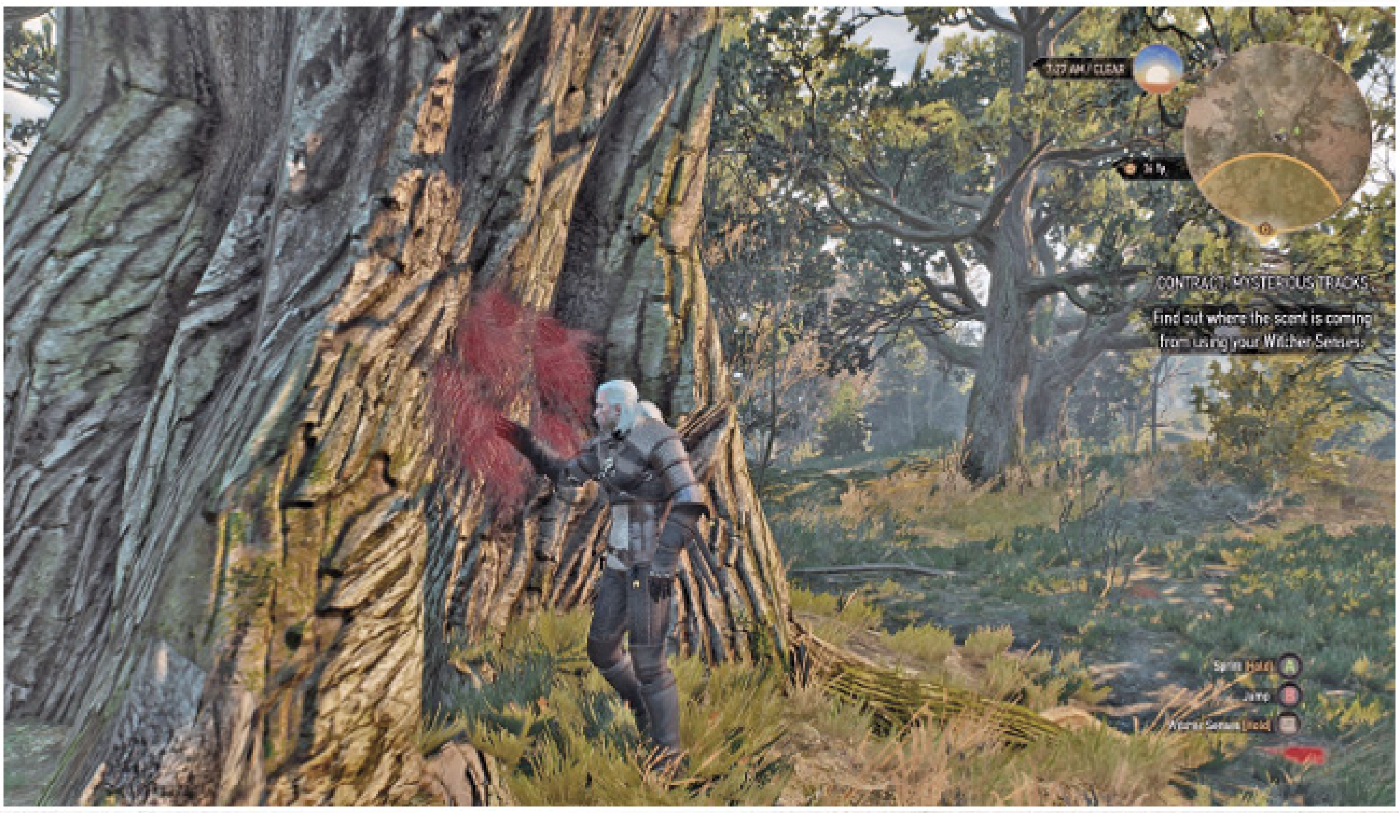
A contract from a huntsman describes a woodland walk where strange tracks were spotted. There's little else to go on, but a quick jog along the main road to a cottage on the southeastern side of Lindenvale, and a chat with the hunter in question, reveals a little more. The beast is "proper huge," slaughtered a dozen wolves, and it howls and bellows something fierce. Adjust your reward by bartering if you wish, agree to the hunt, and set off into the forest.

Contract: Mysterious Tracks

Stinks Like Fiend S--T

OBJECTIVES:

- Search the forest.
- Follow the tracks.
- Find out where the scent is coming from.
- All using your Witcher Senses.



CONTRACT: MYSTERIOUS TRACKS

Find out where the scent is coming from using your Witcher Senses.

Dash off in a southerly direction, passing a tumbledown cottage near a large oak tree (if you're taking the path), then veer off and take down an arachas that might be feeding on the corpses you're about to inspect. Then inspect the following:

- Wolf corpses—the monster wiped out a whole pack of them.
- The tracks are big, really big. Follow them. The tracks lead up a rocky embankment in a roughly southwesterly direction.
- Climb to the top of the embankment, and follow the tracks a few feet to a large oak tree, and examine it. The beast left a lot of fur when it rubbed against the tree, and the scent is still visible to you.
- Follow the scent trail in a roughly southerly direction around a large hilly mound, until the trail heads up and into a cave entrance that's too high to reach from your current position.
- Close to the cave opening is an impressively-sized stool of dried out fiend feces. The animal has been active for a while.

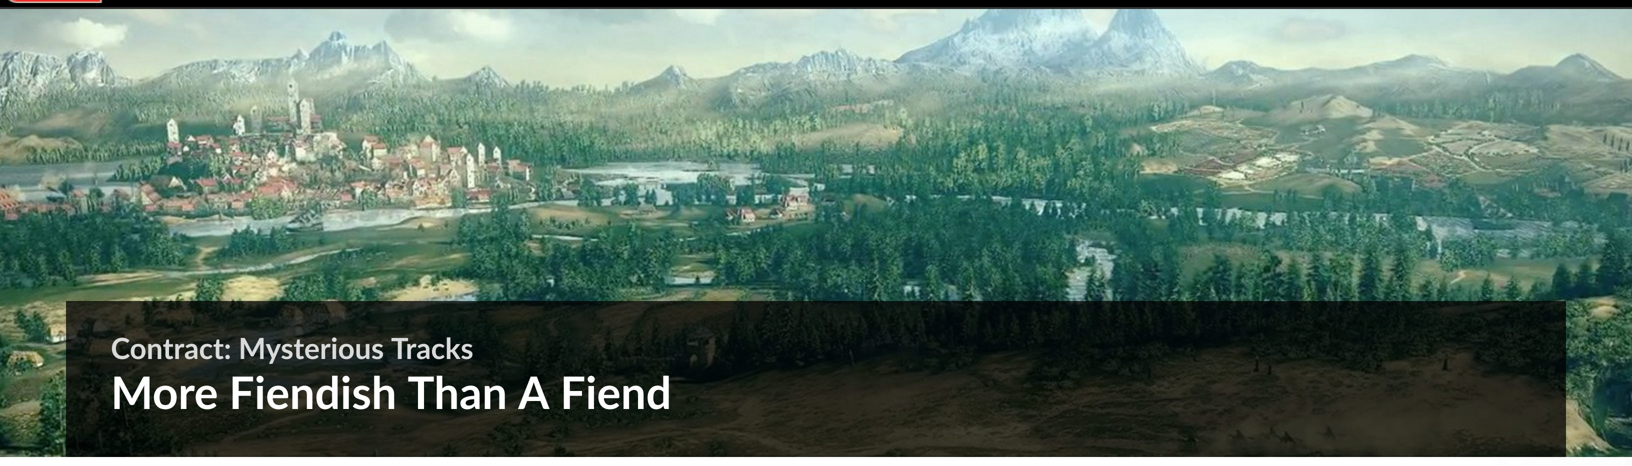
  OBJECTIVES:

    - Find a way into the cave.
    - Explore the cave using your Witcher Senses.

The trail goes cold for a few moments as you need to manually find a secondary cave entrance. Climb to the hilly area directly above the cave opening with the stench, and search around for a hole in the grassy ground, close to a cluster of old oak trees (as shown). Simply drop into the hole.

You appear on a high ledge inside the Fiend's Cave. The high opening opposite is the other entrance you couldn't reach. Drop down onto the cave floor, and inspect the following:

- The corpse of the fiend you thought you were hunting, which died recently. Check the mouth of this creature, which has tufts of differently-colored fur.
- There's a trail with tracks too small for a fiend, though. Blood pools indicate a vicious fight, and paw prints reveal the fight lasted a while. You now guess you're hunting a chort which was competing for territory. But the beast isn't here. It needs to be coaxed to the cave with bait.



Contract: Mysterious Tracks

More Fiendish Than A Fiend

OBJECTIVES:

- Acquire fiend dung to use as bait.
- Prepare some bait based on the Alchemy Formula.
- Pour the bait around the hill (4).
- Wait in the cave for the chort to catch the scent.
- Kill the chort.

You automatically receive the chort llure potion formula. Now combine the following ingredients with your alchemy knowledge to concoct this potion:

Items: Formula: Chore Lure

CHORT LURE

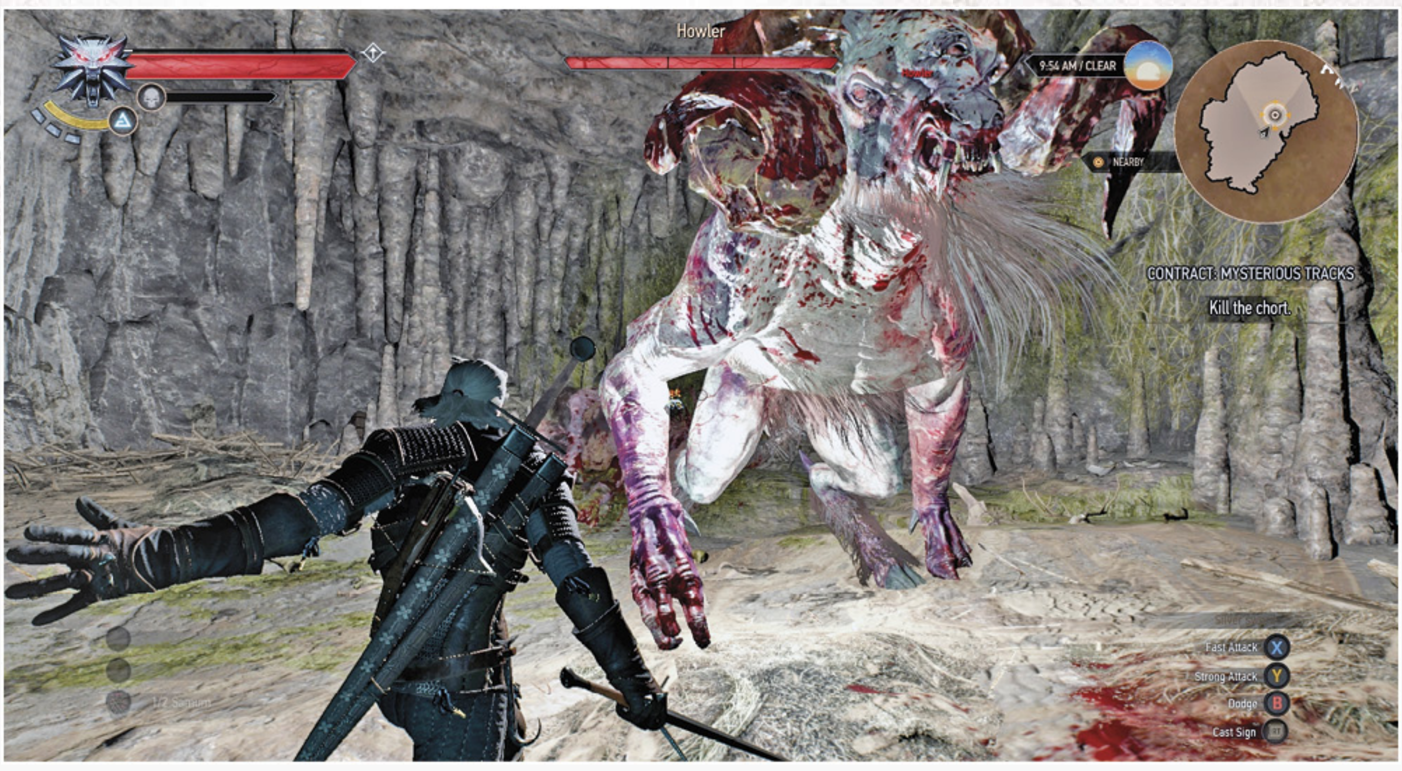
Ingredient	Amount
Fiend Dung	(1)
Crow's Eye	(2)

BREWING YOUR CONCOCTION: THE LOCAL FLAVOR

Do you want to know more about where to find these ingredients, or the formula? Then consult the Alchemy appendix on page 484. Don't be too concerned with trekking far away for these ingredients—all are available to pick in the vicinity. Crow's Eye is a plant, and not the eyes from an actual crow!

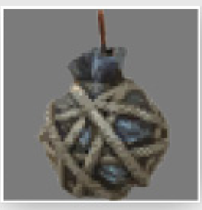
Return to the hill above the Fiend's Cave. Look at your minimap for the four nearby locations (which surround the hill all the way down to the river), and spray some bait around (accessed by placing the potion into your Potions slot). Now return to the Fiend's Cave, dropping in from the top opening, just like before.

An immense and frightening creature with huge bulky forearms and a horned head that could pierce granite leaps down and lunges at you. Prepare to fight Howler, the hardiest of chorts!

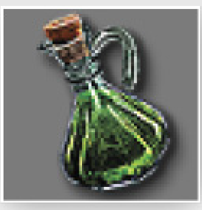


MAKING CHORT KILLS LESS OF A CHORE

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this fiend-killing foe. The chort has the following vulnerabilities:



Devil's Puffball Bomb



Relict Oil

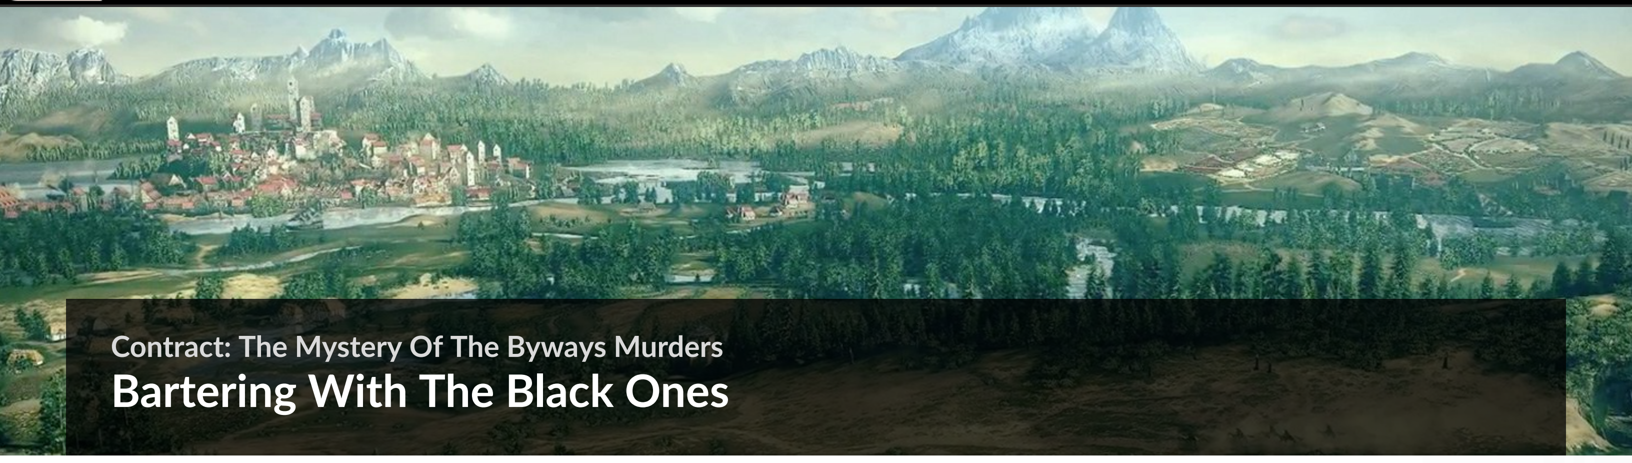
END: AFTER MAKING REMAINS OF HOWLER

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the chort.
- Collect your reward for killing the chort.

Slice sections of chort away from the main corpse to add to your trophy collection, and clamber out of the cave, whistle for Roach, and ride triumphantly back to Lindenvale where the hunter is both worried at the fiend incursions, and happy the monster has been slain. Collect your reward as the quest concludes.

Items: Chort Hide, Chort Trophy, Crowns



Contract: The Mystery Of The Byways Murders

Bartering With The Black Ones

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: THE MYSTERY OF THE BYWAYS MURDERS

LOCATIONS: Oreton, Lake Wyndamer, Byways

CHARACTERS: Commander Milan Noran, Bytomir

ENEMIES: Ghouls, Sarasti (Ekimmara)

SARASTI (EKIMMARA)

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the commander of the Nilfgaardian patrol.
- Nearest Signpost: Oreton.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during your exploration of Velen (No Man's Land). Chance upon the Notice Board in Oreton to read the contract and commence the quest.

Milan Noran, commander of the division stationed in Oreton, has a contract pinned to a Notice Board regarding "Missing Soldiers." It seems a patrol of his has disappeared, possibly falling prey to a monster. Bring the head of the thing responsible results in a reward. Head to the smithy at the end of the road, where a group of Nilfgaardian soldiers are resting up. Speak with Milan, bartering for your services if you wish. He explains the patrol was lost somewhere along the south shore of Lake Wyndamer. He also knows of peasants scratching a living in the village of Byways, who speak of a monster. Contract: The Mystery Of The Byways Murders

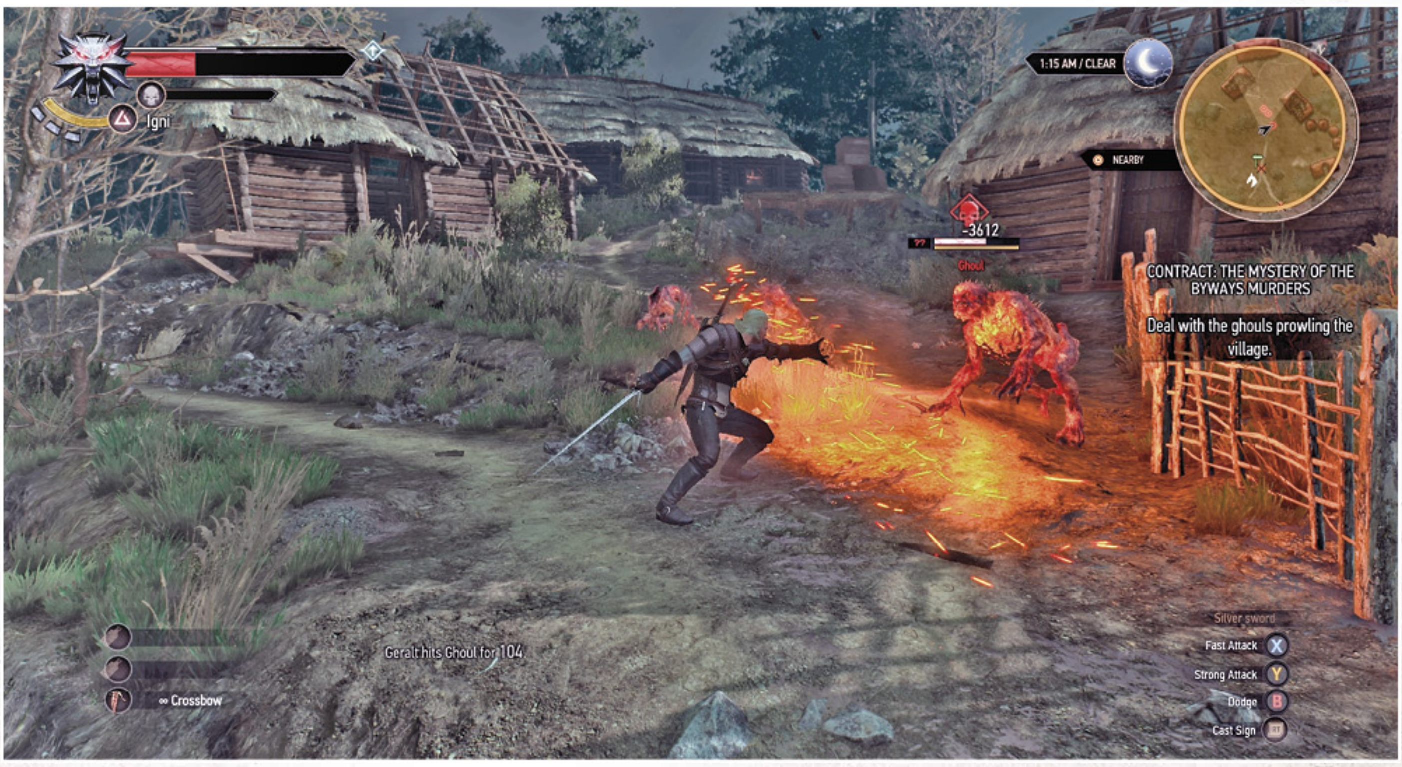
Where There Are Ghouls, There’s Usually Corpses…

OBJECTIVES:

- Find out what happened in Byways.
- Deal with the ghouls prowling the village.
- Find the surviving villagers.



CONTRACT: THE MYSTERY OF THE BYWAYS MURDERS

Deal with the ghouls prowling the village.

Geralt hits Ghoul for 104

The journey to Byways involves a bit of trekking, made easier if you ride Roach westw, and then south around the lake to the western side. Or you may wish to simply swim across the lake (heading southwest). Byways was famous for its brick-making artisans. Now, as you approach, it is infamous for its rotting stench and prowling ghouls. Complete the following:

- Bring your best pointy metal object and thrust it repeatedly into the sagging gray flesh of five ghouls that are stinking up the village.
- Head northwest, towards the new objective area, yelling at the villagers that it is safe to come out. Two nervous men appear, one called Bytomir, telling you the Nilfgaardians plundered the settlement, and the ghouls appeared to run them off. This beggars belief (which you can mention to the peasants).

OBJECTIVES:

- Explore the village.
- Follow the scent of blood.

A more thorough inspection of Byways is called for. Complete the following:

- Use your Witcher Senses on the ground where you fought the ghouls. There are corpses of Nilfgaardian soldiers and their dogs. One shows marks of jaws strong enough to crush armor.
- Another was thrown to the ground with such force, he suffered internal hemorrhaging.
- You then smell the air. Thick with the scent of blood. Follow the stench trail roughly to the structure at the northern edge of Byways. The place is locked.

Bytomir approaches, with more evasive answers. After some light verbal pressuring, he reveals there are elven ruins under the village. Tunnels they scavenge with trinkets to sell. After disturbing a monster, the peasants buried the entrance, but the Nilfgaardians opened it again. You demand the key to the hut, and are given it.

Items: Quest Item: Key to the Byways Tunnels

OBJECTIVES:

- Explore the tunnels under Byways.
- Kill the ekimmara.

CONTRACT: THE MYSTERY OF THE BYWAYS MURDERS
Find and kill the ekimmara.

Lift the planks on the hut's floor to reveal a ladder. Also try to spot a piece of fur in this hut, allowing quicker identification. Descend into a tight mining tunnel. At the first lit torch lies a slumped guard. Use your Witcher Senses. His armor was pierced, and arteries torn open. You realize the monster was an ekimmara, disturbed from hibernation. Venture further into the tunnel, dropping off a ledge, down past a wooden ladder platform.

Enter an ancient elvish arched tunnel. The bloodied remains of the Nilfgaardian patrol are scattered about this chamber, as well as older corpses, strung up on wooden scaffolds. Now comes the fiendish beast itself—a centuries-old elder ekimmara known as Sarasti. Draw your silver sword and better it in combat.

OBJECTIVES:

- Collect an akimmara trophy.
- Talk to Bytomir.
- Report back to the Nilfgaardian patrol commander.

After gathering your saliva and the head of Sarasti, retrace your steps back up to Byways village, and speak with Bytomir. You inform him that you've solved his ancient vampire problem, and force him to pay up for your troubles. Then trek back to Oreton, and tell Milan Noran the same story. More crowns are added to your collection, as the quest concludes.

CHARACTERS: Quartermaster Eggebracht

ENEMIES: Nekkers, Bandits, Bear, Wyvern, Alghoul, Ghouls

Wyvern

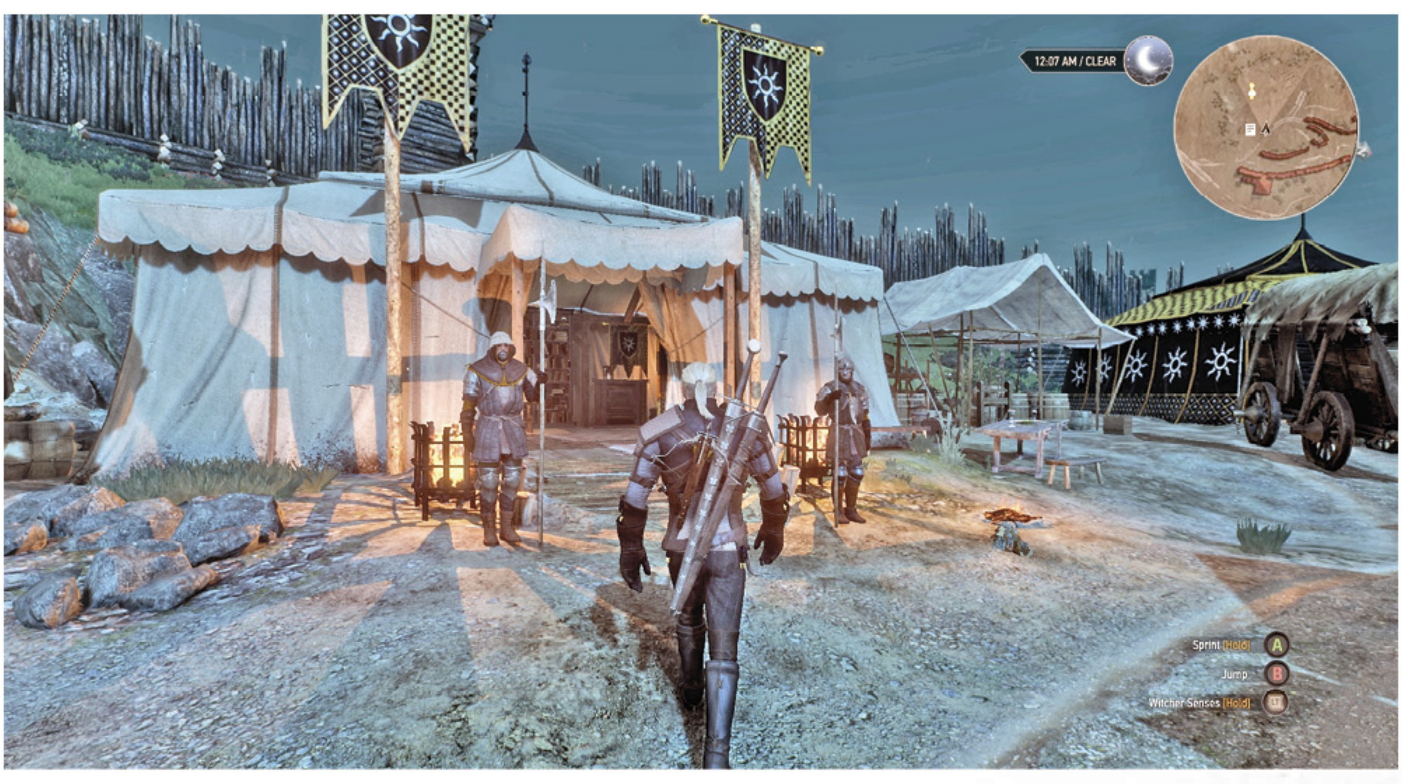
OBJECTIVE:

- Go to the abandoned camp.

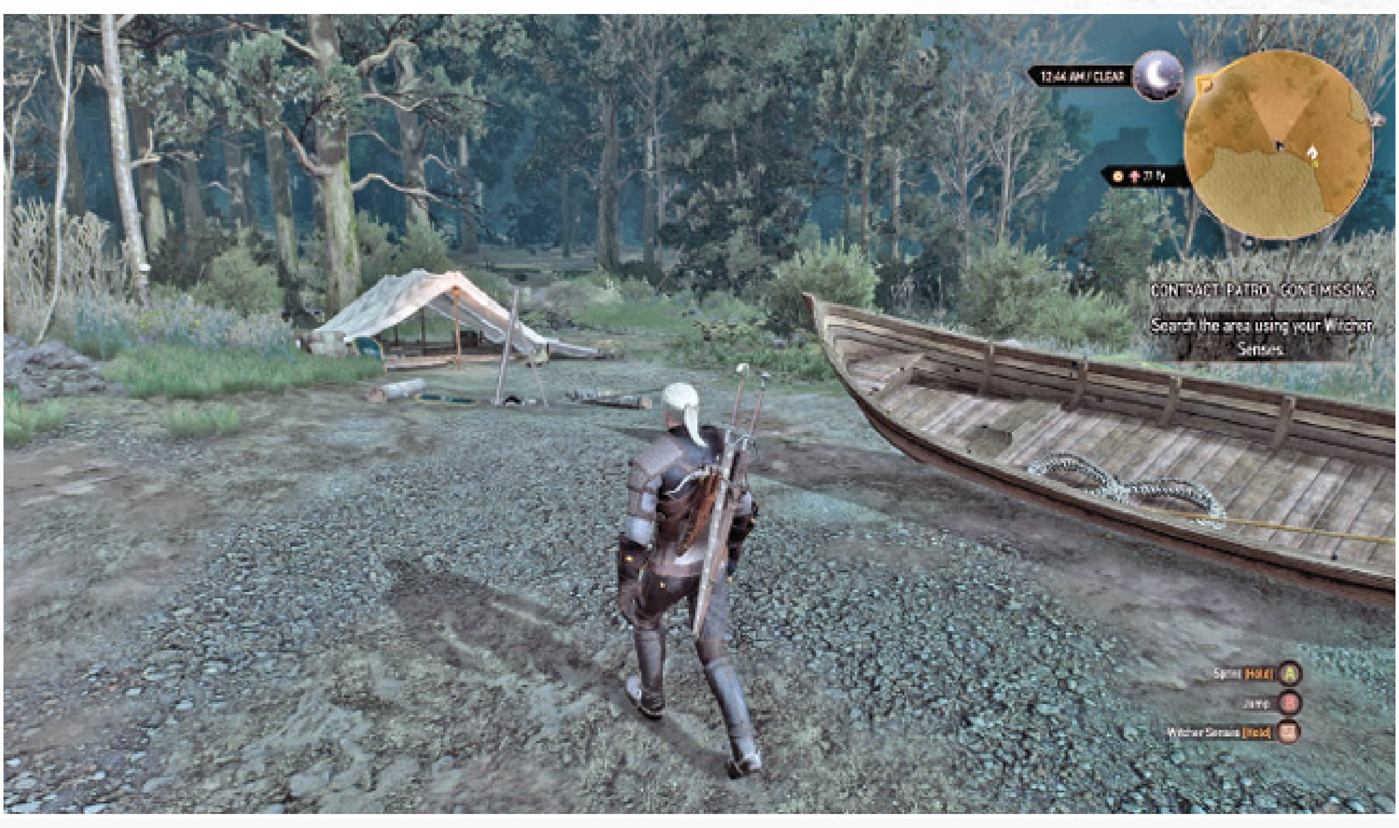
QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during your exploration of Velen (No Man's Land) and Novigrad. Visit the Nilfgaardian Central Army Camp in the very southeast of the World Map. Then inspect the Notice Board adjacent to the quartermaster's tent.

There's an interesting missive pinned to the Notice Board close to the quartermaster's tent in these parts. It mentions the loss of a patrol, and a reward for finding them. Enter the tent adorned with the sun motif of the Emhyr, and speak to quartermaster Eggebracht. You can shoot the breeze with him, but continue this quest by asking him for work. He requests you find the abandoned camp, across the lake, to the northwest of here.



The going underfoot soon turns soggy. Watch for nekkers as you start to wade into a swamp, before crossing the lake to the woodland area northwest of these parts.



OBJECTIVE:

- Search the area using your Witcher Senses.

The Abandoned Nilfgaardian Camp is on the northwest part of the lake, and offers a wealth of clues to a Witcher with a twitching set of senses:

- A campfire showing the soldiers left here in a hurry.

There are footprints leading up into the woods—some booted and others barefoot. Follow them into the woods. Were they leading a group of barefoot peasants, or did the peasants do the leading?

Keep following the prints until a smell overtakes your senses. Follow the stench clouds, spotting draconid musk on the ground. There are three or four of these piles to inspect, which take you in an elongated loop through the trees. Prepare for intermittent fighting with nekkers and bandits along the way. Though you only need to find the scent clue to the poisoned corpse, all the clues are presented here.

Return and continue to follow the sets of footprints, up toward a confrontation with a bear. The nearby remains of a corpse seems to have been poisoned. Now continue along the path to the southeast, following the prints up and into a hillside devoid of trees.

OBJECTIVES:

- Kill the Wyvern.
- Take a trophy.

A frightening screech, and a flapping airborne menace swoops in to slaughter you with its talons. Retaliate by knocking the foe down to the ground, and finishing this winged menace as adeptly as you can. Once killed, inspect the corpse and slice the head off, gathering its hide and other items, but don't leave without your trophy.

TACKLING THIS TERRIBLE LIZARD

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this screeching, scaly beast. The wyvern (unnamed) has the following vulnerabilities:

Golden Oriole

Grapeshot Bomb

Draconid Oil

Aard

END: SNIFFING AROUND NILFGAARDIAN BUSINESS

OBJECTIVE:

- Return to the Nilfgaardian camp.

At this point, you may retrace your steps and inform the quartermaster of your findings. However, it is well worth continuing up the path you were on when you faced the wyvern, tracking another poisoned soldier (this one was gnawed on), and more footprints that lead down into a ravine, and a ghoul's nest within a cavern tunnel. The remains of a villager lie at the end. Report this to the quartermaster, and he's annoyed that you're poking your nose into Nilfgaardian business. Either way, your reward is received (though you can refuse it if you don't like crowns).

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: PHANTOM OF THE TRADE ROUTE

LOCATIONS: Benkelham, Royal Wyvern's Cave and Eyrie

CHARACTERS: Refugee

ENEMIES: Nekkers, Wyverns, Royal Wyvern

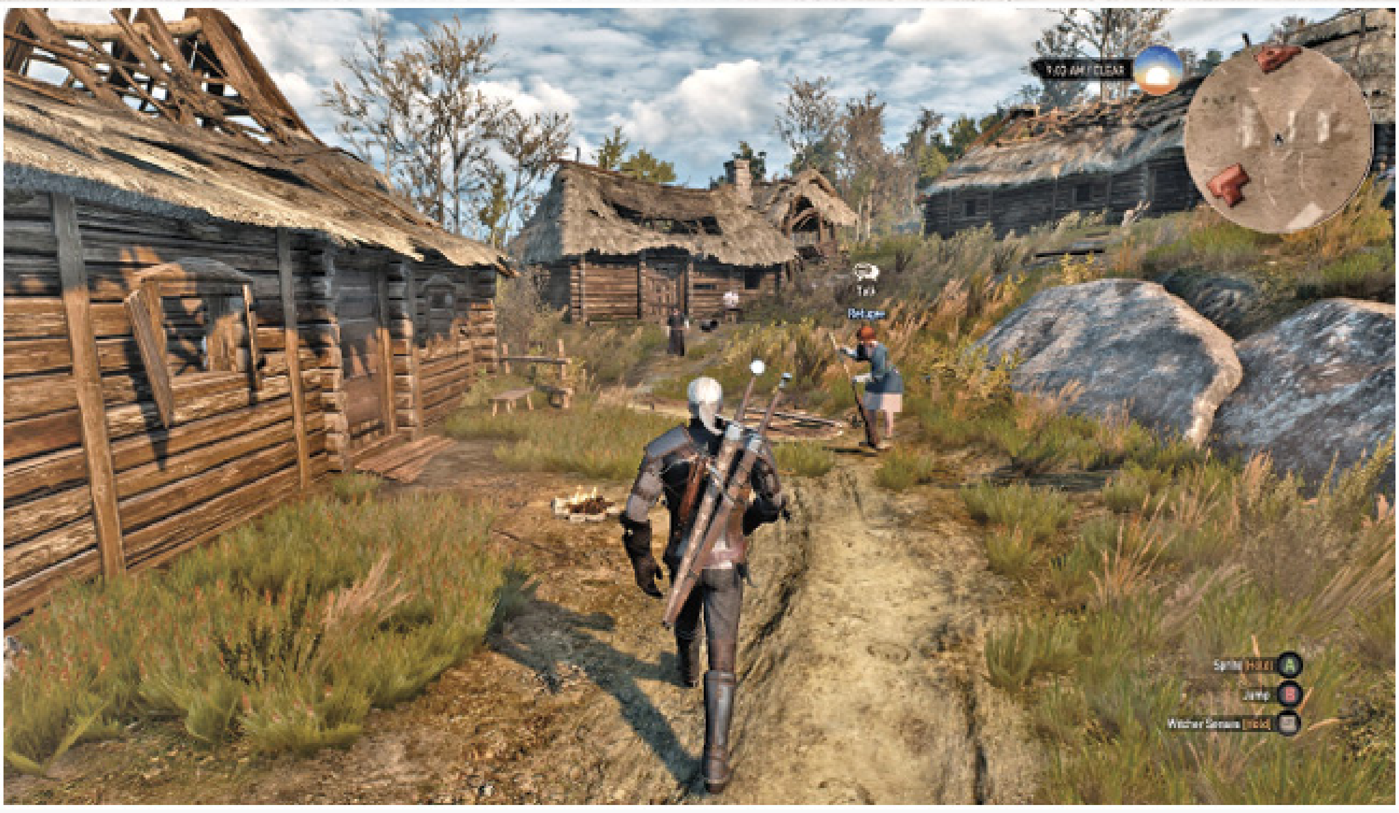
Royal Wyvern

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the missing caravan.
- Exmaine the cart.
- Nearest Signpost: Benkelham.

QUESTING DECISIONS

You should visit the dilapidated village of Benkelham, and find the refugee that requests your help. Or, you can find the abandoned wagon, meet the refugees in the cave, or destroy the wyvern nests first. The optimal path is the first one.

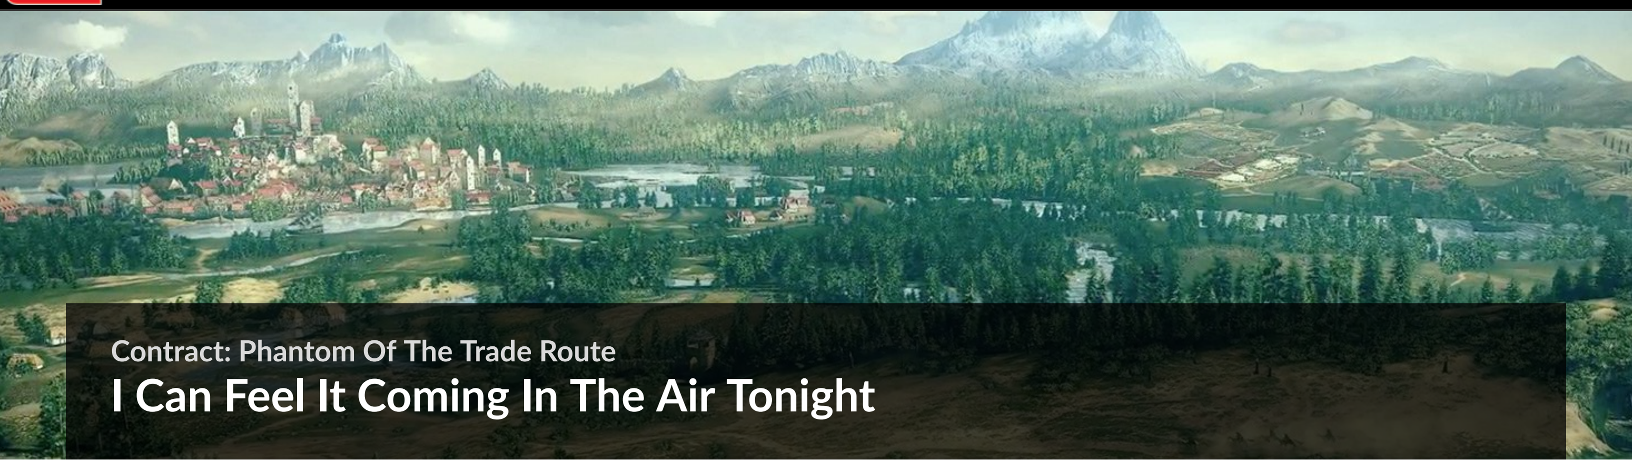


Benkelham is a collection of sagging huts and a giant windmill, on a hillside along the eastern side of Velen, and speak to a refugee sitting by a ruined cottage. He hopes you can find out more about a missing merchant caravan. They hired some of the villagers to guide them to a bridge, and the boys haven't returned. Barter a price for your services if you wish, then remember the name Thomil—the man's brother who lead the men.

Take the main road north from Benkelham, following its winding path downhill until you discover an upturned cart. Use your Witcher Senses as you take in the scene of this crime. Locate the following:

- Evidence that somebody was bound, but quickly freed using a dull blade.
- Somebody left footprints from a barrel of spilled wine.
- There are claw marks on a nearby rock.
- Someone was running quickly, panicked, and their footprints end suddenly.

You summize that a flying entity swooped down and grabbed the victim, leading you to believe the monster is a wyvern or forktail. The smell of Kaedweni wine lingers for hours, and a trail of this stench leads you uphill, heading roughly northeast.



Contract: Phantom Of The Trade Route

I Can Feel It Coming In The Air Tonight

OBJECTIVES:

- Follow the scent.
- Explore the cave.

Wander uphill with the wine smell clouding your nostrils and vision. The trail leads you to a rough path and a cave entrance.

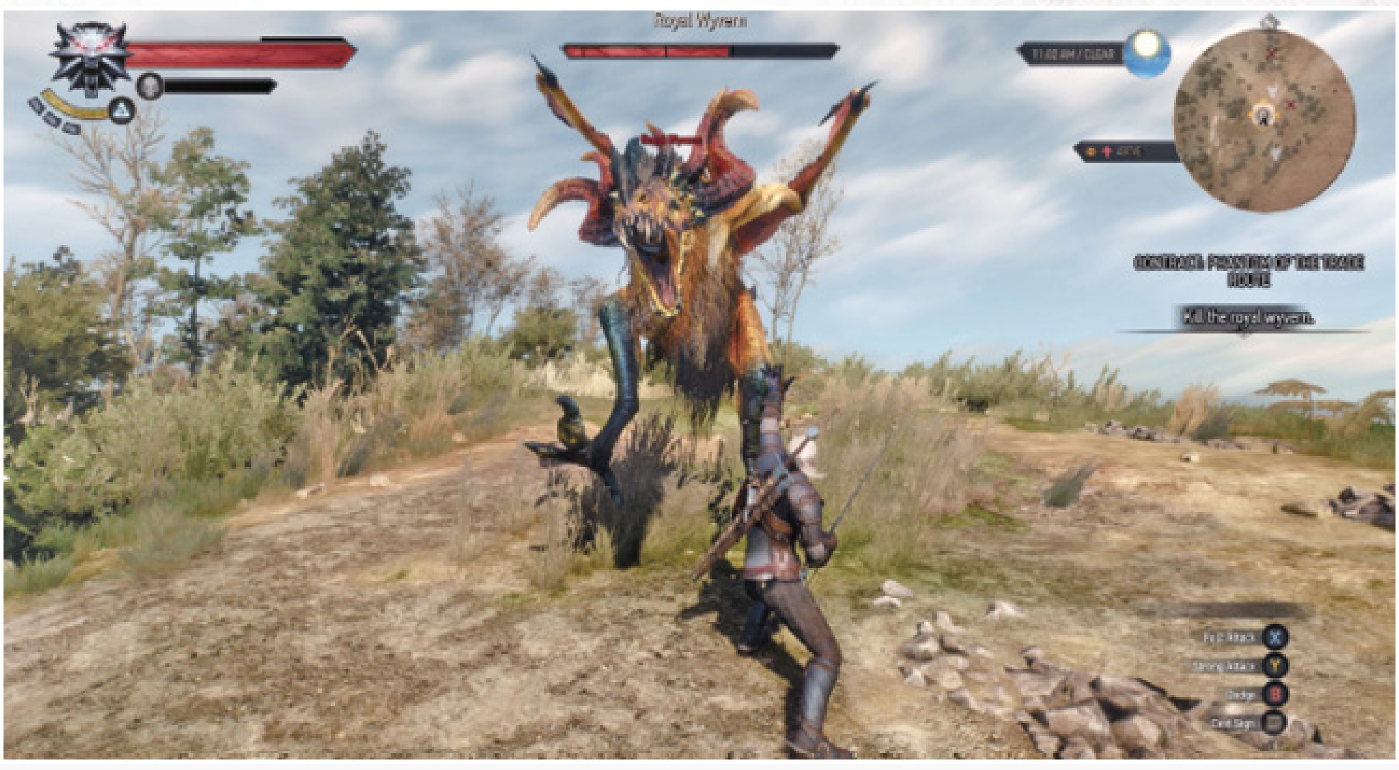
CONTRACT: PHANTOM OF THE TRADE ROUTE
Explore the cave using your Witcher Senses.

There's a corpse of one of the caravan refugees at the cave's entrance. Go inside, and you meet two luckless refugees hiding out in the cavern. You can ask about Thomil, who sadly didn't make it, and find out more about the monster you hunt. It is a royal wyvern. Lucky you.

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the wyvern's nest.
- Destroy the wyvern's nest (2).
- Kill the royal wyvern.

Continue deeper and higher into the cave, climbing up the natural rock steps to the south, and climbing higher until you see light from an exit. Step into the light, and run into two young wyverns. This is the royal wyvern's eyrie. Face both of them in combat, slaying them with quick competency. But these juveniles weren't responsible for ransacking the cart and dropping the scattered corpses you find on this cliffside perch…



UP FOR A HIKE?

Another option is to go up the hill to the left or right of the cave entrance, and reach the eyrie without climbing up through the cave.

Approach each of the two nests of spittle, wood, and bone, and destroy it with a swift kicking. After dismantling both of them, a suitably angered royal wyvern swoops in for the kill. Bring it down to the ground with crossbow or magic attacks, and finish it before it devours you.

HERE BE DRAGONS! NO? FORKTAILS? NO…

Halt! Before ascending to the eyrie to rid the lands of three wyverns, you should take time to fully prepare for such an undertaking. Remember to consult the Bestiary for tackling wyverns, both royal and otherwise. The royal wyvern has the following vulnerabilities:

Golden Oriole

Grapeshot Bomb

Draconid Oil

Aard

END: THE ROYAL TREATMENT

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the royal wyvern.
- Collect your reward.

The two refugees appear, a little gobsmacked at your accomplishments. After vowing to tell tales of this day, they leave you to whistle for Roach, and carry the royal wyvern's head swinging by Roach's saddle. Head down the hill to Benkelham, and speak with the refugee. After settling up, the quest concludes.

Shrieker (Cockatrice)

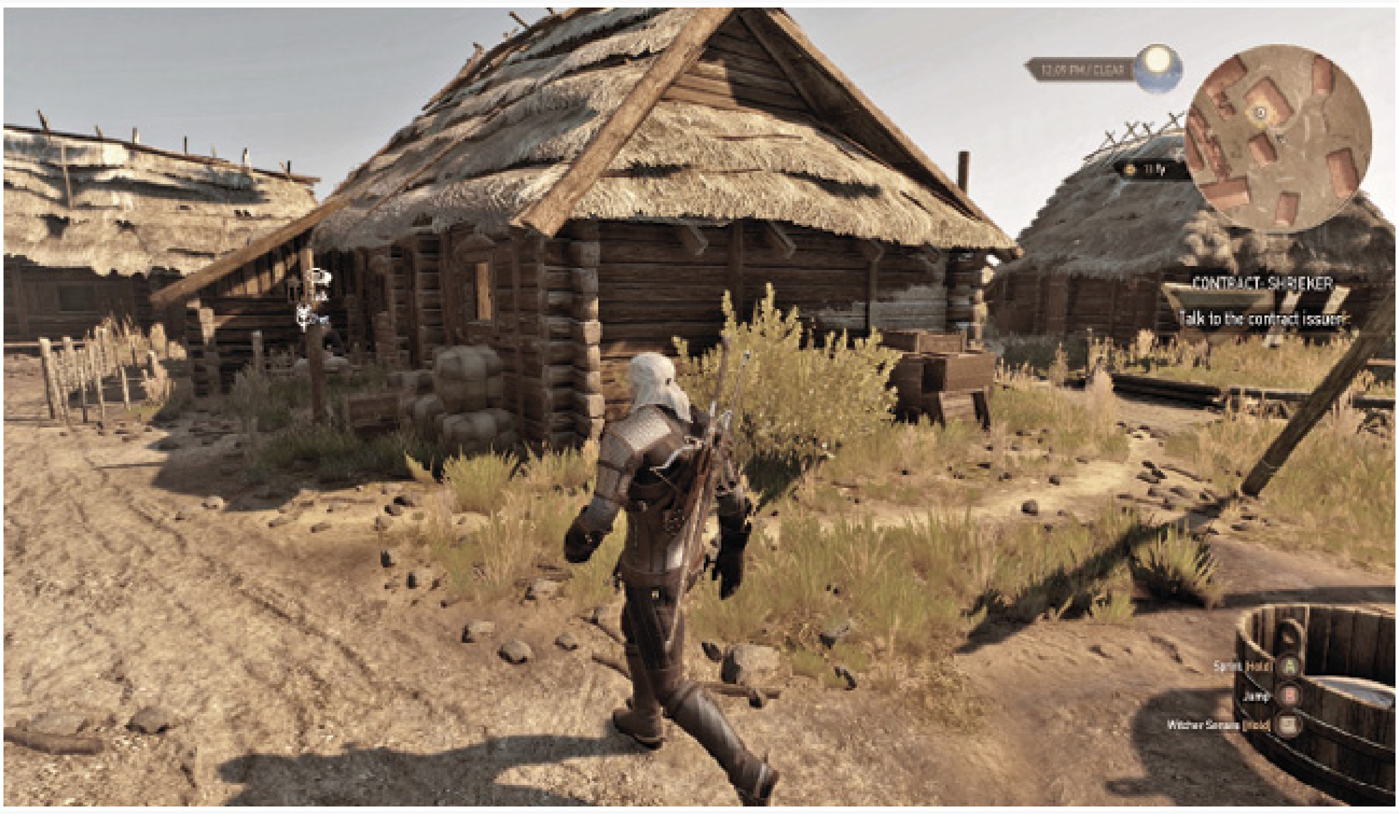
OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the contract issuer.
- Nearest Signpost: Crow’s Perch.

QUESTING DECISIONS

Find the Notice Board in Crow’s Perch to read the contract and begin the quest. Or, chance upon nest of this creature first. The optimal path is the former.

Chet from Crow’s Perch is having a terrible time with a shrieker (a monster that has woven its nest nearby) and has taken to killing those that venture too close. Head to the lower village within the walls of Crow’s Perch, and find Chet by his cottage. Barter a price for your services if you wish, listen to the hapless attempts the local (and now deceased) huntsman named Borzoy made to kill the creature. Now agree to slay it.



OBJECTIVE:

- (Optional) Talk to the witnesses to the shrieker’s attack.

Symko, son of Borzoy, is the witness to the shrieker’s attack, and he’s gazing at grass on the eastern side of the cottage. He is resistant to your talking, but continue to ask him questions and he describes the shrieker as a huge rooster with a lizard’s tail, and how his dog Ruffler ran away too. Calm the kid down with soft words or soothing Axii magic, and depart.

Contract: Shrieker

Ruffling A Few Feathers

OBJECTIVES:

- Investigate the site of the shrieker's attack using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the blood tracks using your Witcher Senses.

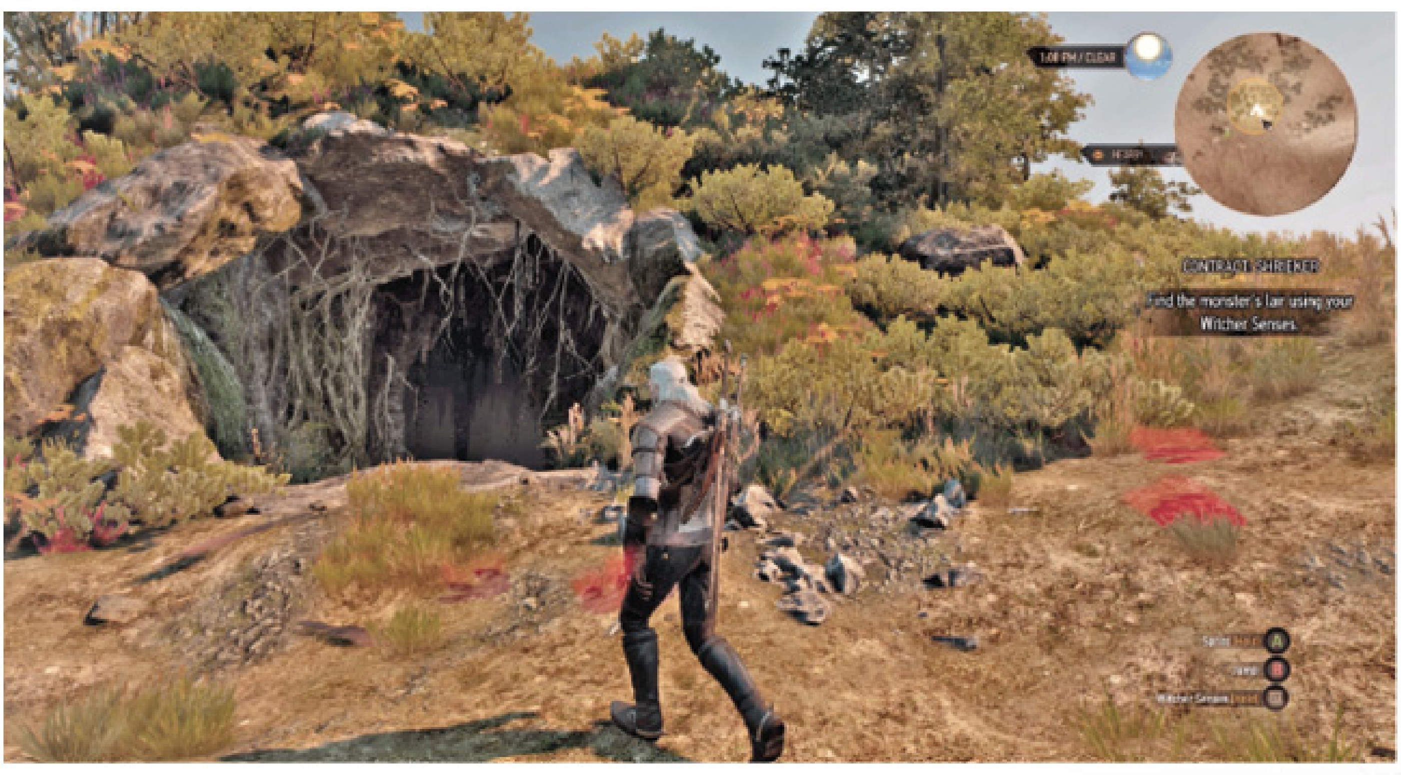
Head south out of Crow's Perch, traveling roughly eastwards to the objective area where the beast was fought, close to the marshy moat and south of the Burned Ruins signpost. Locate the following:

- The remains of Symko's dog Ruffler can be seen and inspected using your Witcher Senses—It didn't give up without a fight.
- There are staggered tracks leading away from the dog corpse.
- Locate the monster blood close to the water's edge, and track it in a roughly northwesterly direction.

The beast landed at a cave entrance close to the northeastern part of Crow's Perch moat, and just west (and underneath) the Burned Ruins. Close inspection of the tracks reveals the beast is a cockatrice.

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the shrieker's lair.
- Drive the shrieker out of its lair with a Samum, Grapeshot, or Dancing Star bomb.

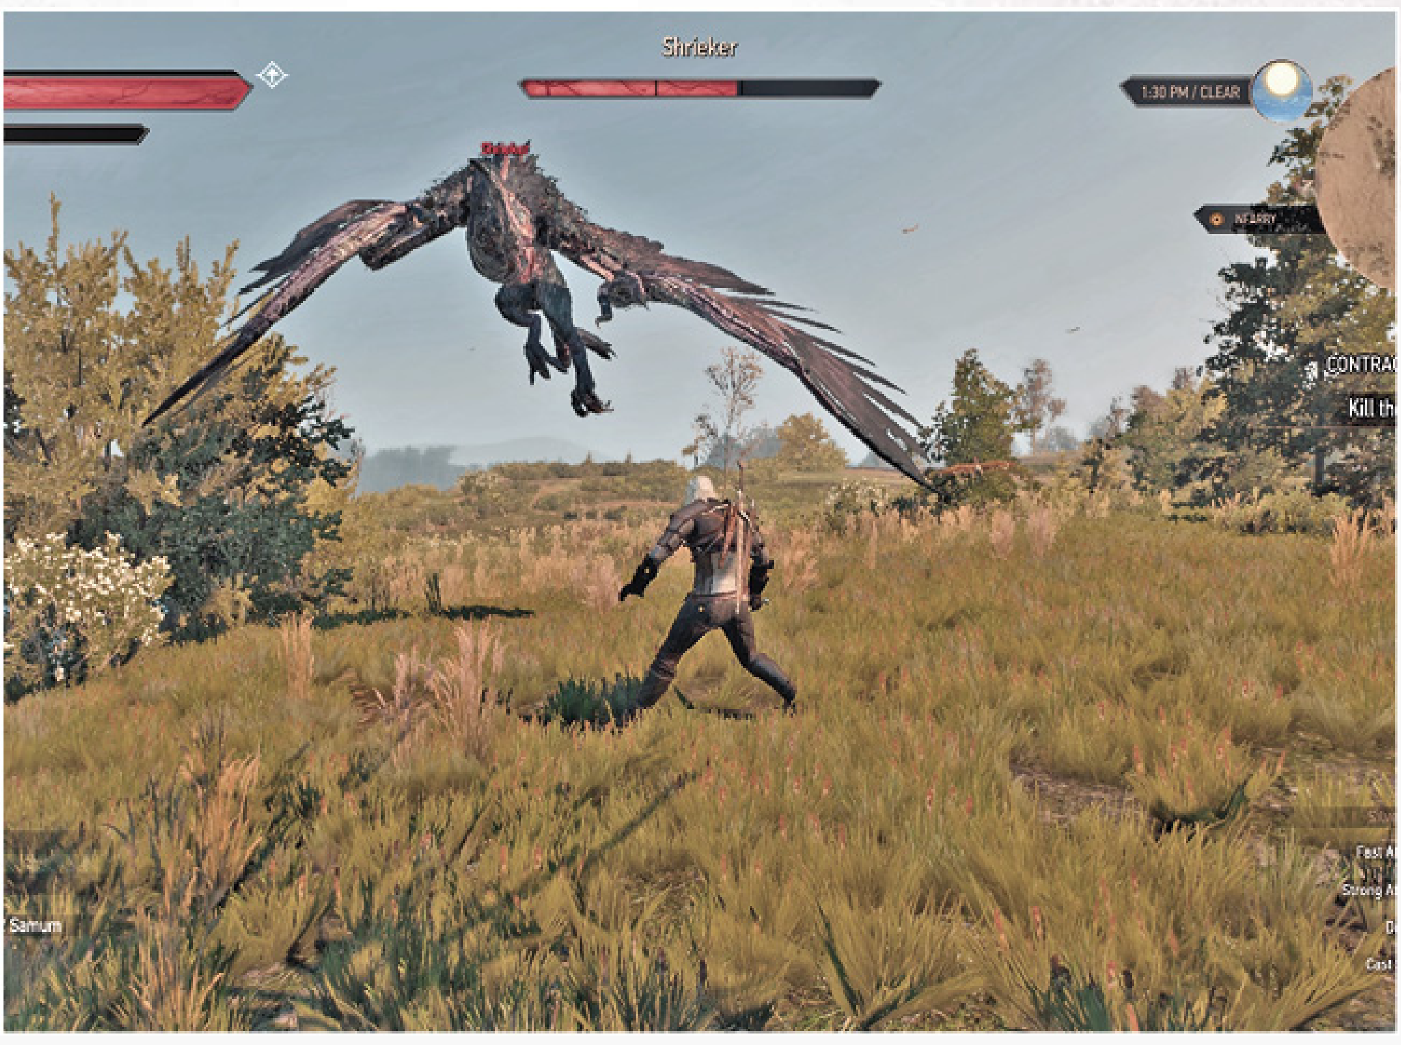


Explore the cave entrance, which opens up into a large cavern. Use your Witcher Senses in here to uncover droppings staining a high ledge, where the beast must be nursing its wounds. It won't budge until you produce a Samum, Grapeshot, or Dancing Star bomb, and lob it onto the ledge. After the explosion, the shrieker disappears! It has fled through an upper exit.

OBJECTIVES:

- Chase down the shrieker.
- Kill the shrieker.

Leave the cave the way you came, summoning Roach and visually track it across the countryside as it flaps away. At a gallop's pace, you should easily catch this wounded and angry animal. Drop it from the skies, and set about slicing it into more manageable pieces.



DON'T BE THE ONE DOING THE SHRIEKING

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this overgrown chicken. The cockatrice has the following vulnerabilities:

- Collect your reward from the contract issuer.

That overgrown chicken has eaten its last villager! Stoop down and inspect the corpse, gathering some meat and ingredients, as well as the head of the beast. Then mount Roach with the head tied to your saddle, and return to Chet. He hands you the pennies he gathered as your reward. You can:

- Tell him to keep the coin—for Symko.
- Or gladly accept the coin.

Afterwards, you can speak to Szymko and tell him his father's death was avenged, if you wish. Either way, the quest concludes.

A lone villager harvesting peat within the marshlands west of The Orphans of Crookback Bog (village) beckons you to help.

On the northwestern edge of Crookback Bog, due west of the Orphans' Village but closer to the water's edge, is a Peat Post. This is a small hideaway where a villager named Leslav stores peat he cuts from the bog. Speak with him. He tells you a monster prowls the bog, and those that enter the mist are never seen again! Set off in a roughly southerly direction and cross the bog. As you reach the nearest objective area, you can almost taste a metallic odor in the air. Continue towards a Peat Lodge, where Leslav's fellow villagers came a cropper. Inspect the structure using your Witcher Senses, and uncover the following:

- A slumped corpse with his weapon still sheathed. This indicates a concealed monster.
- An almost completely decomposed corpse by the small stone ruins nearby.

OBJECTIVES:

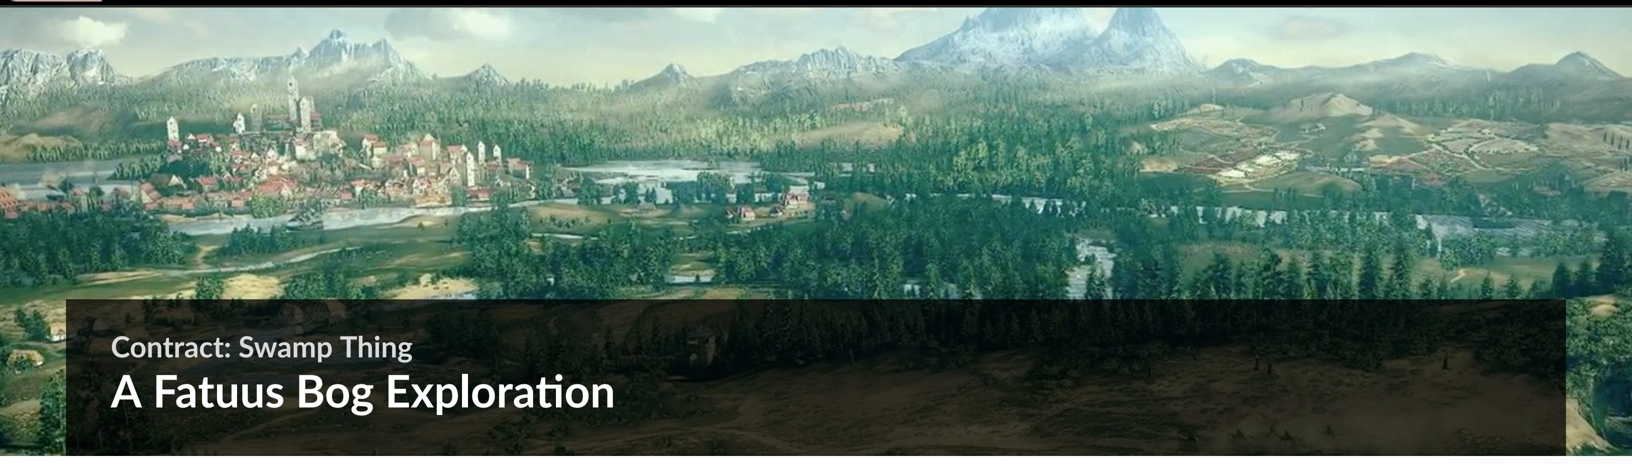
- Find out what's killing people in the fog (continues).
- Use the Eye of Nehaleni to see through the illusion.

There's little else but wrapped parcels of peat soil here, so venture out across the bog in a roughly easterly direction. Close in on the second objective area, and bring the pain to a couple of nekkers. Then use two methods of seeing reality a little differently; your Witcher Senses and the Eye of Nehaleni you obtained from Keira Metz during Main Quest: Hunting a Witch.

- Use your Witcher Senses to discover a few dead folks with a variety of different claw marks on it. Oddly, there's are no tracks around the corpses.

- Use the Eye of Nehaleni to remove a wall of magic.

- Use your Witcher Senses to uncover tracks that were masked with magic. You guess you're dealing with an old foglet, hiding behind an illusion.



Contract: Swamp Thing

A Fatuus Bog Exploration

OBJECTIVES:

- Navigate the illusions to find the foglet.
- Kill the foglet.

LOST IN THE BOG

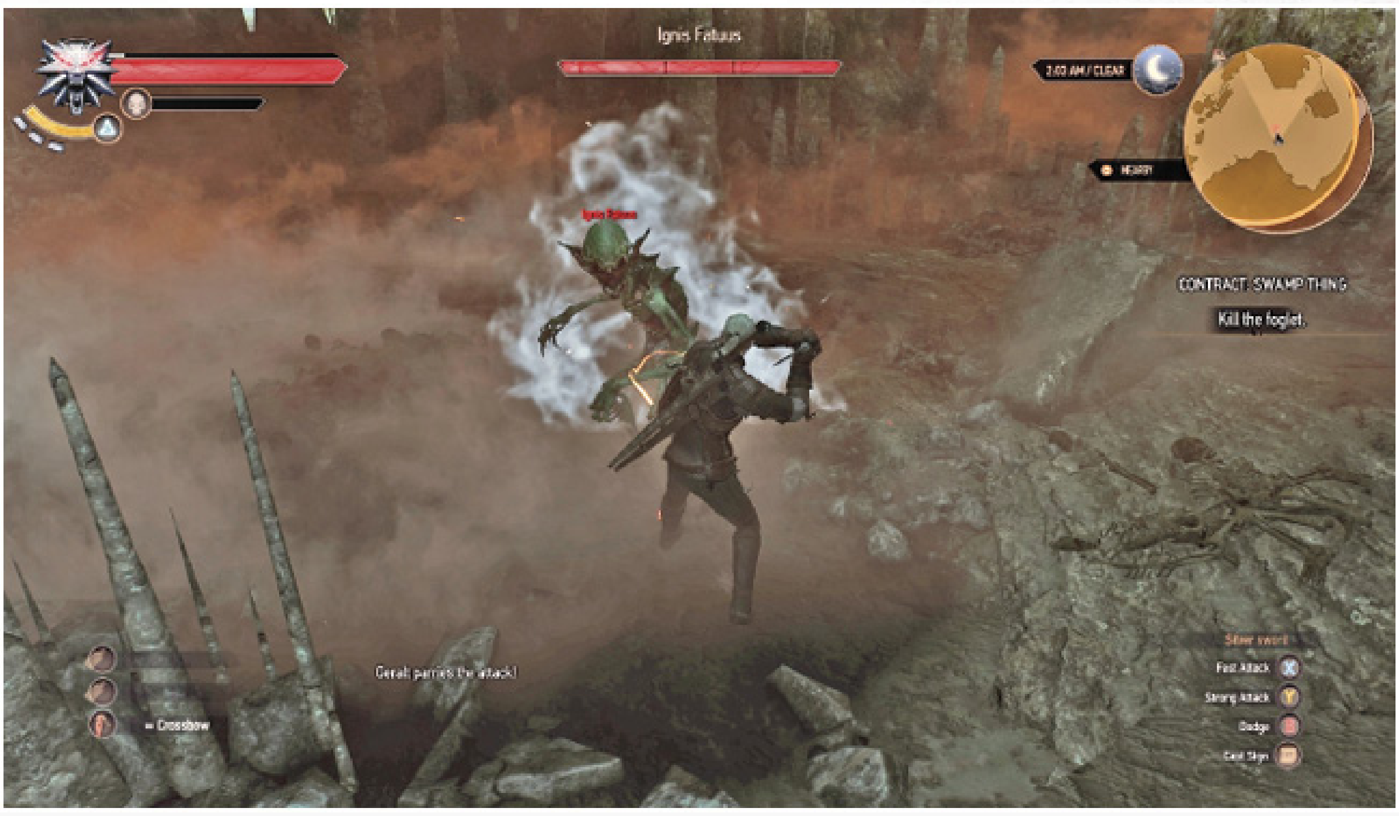
It's easy to get lost in this misty bog, and there are numerous foglets, drowners, and nekkers (not to mention deserters and bandits) in the general vicinity. Don't venture farther from the immediate area than you need to, and if you get lost, return to the Peat Lodge and retrace your steps.

Follow the intermittent tracks through the swamp, in a winding pattern throughout the bog, heading in a vaguely southerly direction. There are at least two foglet to face, back at the Peat Lodge. While you're there, look for the badly decomposed corpse. There is a faint smell coming from it. This is worth your while following, in a roughly southerly direction.

Journey to a small fetid pond with a foglet to slay. Of greater interest is a cave blocked by a massive boulder. But this isn't really a boulder. Use the Eye of Nehaleni to dismiss this illusion and reveal a foglet's cave.

Enter the cave and, if you keep right, you face a trio of foglets as you wind your way down the main tunnel area. If you climb up the other side, you end up back into the bog. Almost immediately, you are set upon by drowned dead. Expect to slay up to six of them, before moving across a shallow pond (close to the cave exit) and dealing with three foglets.

Enter the cave and, if you keep left, you stride into the domain of the old foglet responsible for the illusions—Ignius Fatuus! Teach him that your silver sword is no illusion!



AVOIDING FOGLET FANGS

This foglet offers a considerable challenge, so consult the Bestiary to gain insight into this creature. The foglet has the following vulnerabilities:

END: ALL CLEAR

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the foglet's body.
- Collect the reward for the foglet.

Cut the head apart from the crumpled foglet corpse, and bring it back to Leslav at his Peat Post, and claim your reward. Remember, if you bartered a better price, you may have to return and gather your crowns in smaller payments. Once your initial monies are handed over, the quest concludes.

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the commander of the guardpost by the bridge to Novigrad.
- Nearest Signpost: Border Post.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during your adventuring through Novigrad and the northern parts of Velen. It begins when you uncover a contract notice on a Notice Board; like the one just southeast of the fortified bridge to the Border Post on Halver Isle.

Locate a formal notice on a board that reads "Contract: Woodland Beast." It is from the Redanian Captain Felix Grubb. Head towards the refugee camp near the fallen fields of Velen, southeast of the Border Post, and search out the captain of the guard.

Speak with him, and he tells of a monster terrorizing the already downtrodden peasants of Velen, as well as a Redanian transport caravan. Bring him the head of this beast, and you'll receive both gold and a pass to allow you access across the Pontar river, and into Novigrad. Agree to this deal.

OBJECTIVES:

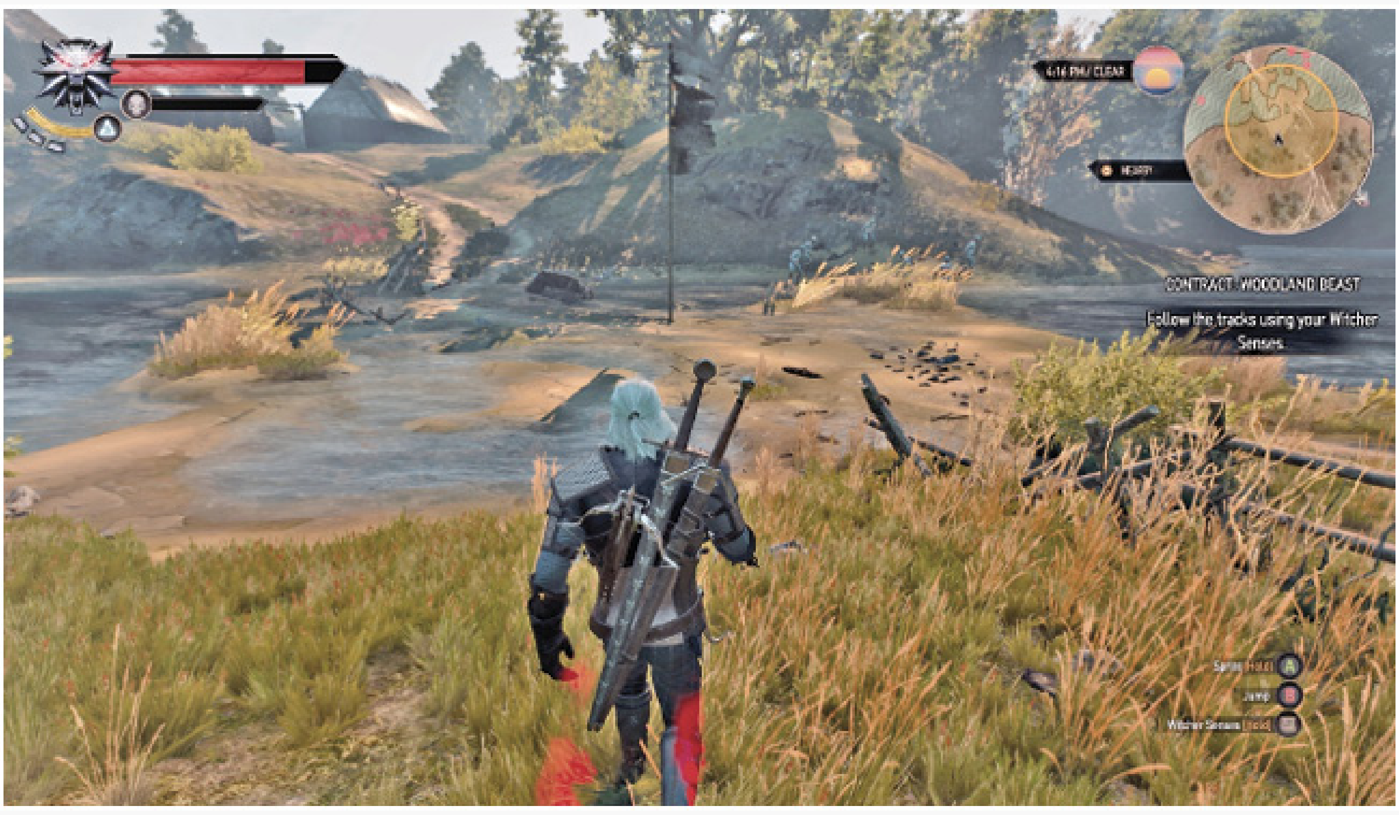
- Examine the site where the transport was attacked using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the tracks using your Witcher Senses.

The location of the transport attack is southwest of the captain, close to the ford across to the Inn at the Crossroads. Gallop to the site, and cut down two alghouls feasting on the remnants. Then inspect the vicinity and uncover the following:

- Claw marks on a slumped corpse, but also evidence of an arrow piercing the dead.
- Bodies clawed and gnawed. But all these wounds are post-mortem.
- An empty chest. Certainly not stolen by the necrophages you slew.
- Tracks, humanoid in stature, leading away to the southeast.

Follow the tracks across the road, and into the thick grassy area before the ford. Expect four drowners to annoy you along the way.

The tracks lead down to the ford, and disappear. Simply stare at the opposite side of the ford (look southeast) and you'll see the tracks appear from the soggy sand. Climb up the grassy hillock, studying the tracks until you're stopped. A Scoia'tael archer has you in his sights! This quest can now conclude in one of two different ways:



Contract: Woodland Beast

End #1: Death To The Scoia'tael Devils!

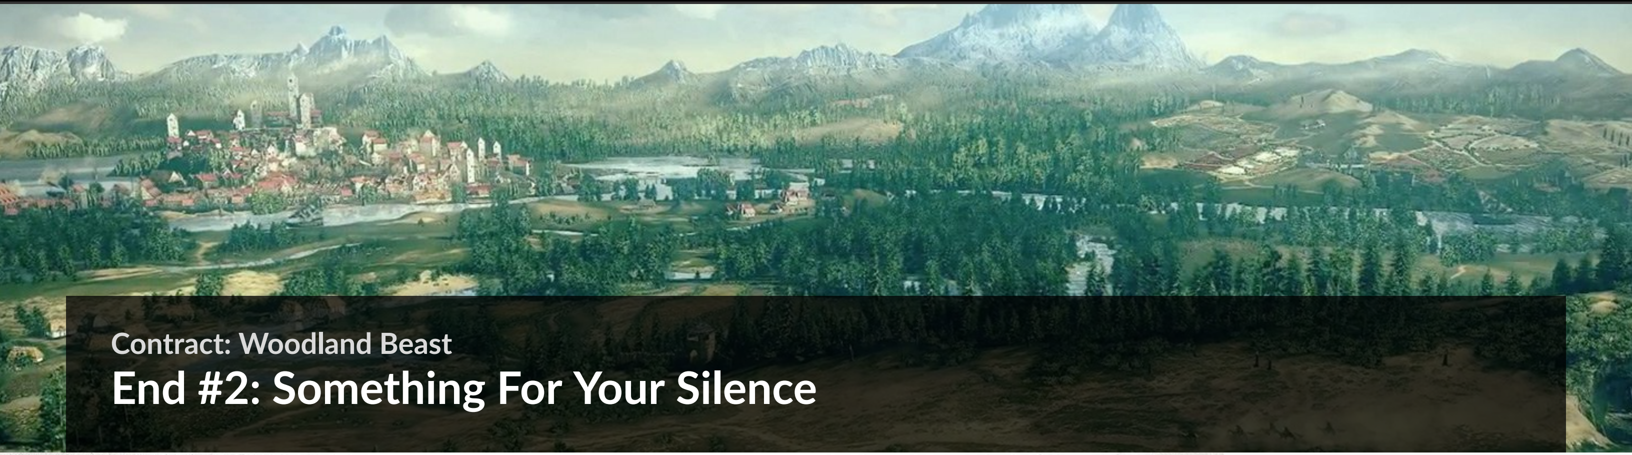
OBJECTIVES:

- Kill the Scoia'tael.
- Return to the guardpost captain for your reward.

Speak to the archer. If you answer "you've killed enough humans already," or you aren't prepared to put down your weapons after asking to see the archer's commander, the situation turns violent.

You have five Scoia'tael to cleave on this hillock (treat them as humans in terms of combat). Afterwards, return to the captain for your reward, as this quest concludes.

Items: Crowns, Transit Pass



Contract: Woodland Beast

End #2: Something For Your Silence

OBJECTIVE:

- Return to the guardpost captain for your reward.

Speak to the archer. Answer that you wish to speak to his commander. You are lead to a hidden elf camp where Vernossiel speaks curtly to you. She insists they will stop attacking the Redanian transports, but you must leave and forget what you've seen. Answer that they are common bandits, and you must fight them (End #1, but without your weapons). A better plan is to agree "do as you will." You're given a couple of elvish items for your help. Afterwards, return to the captain for your reward, which is almost a kick in the arse (you receive nothing), as this quest concludes.

Contract: Woodland Beast

End #3: Doublecross!

There's one more, devious way to end this quest; tell the elf leader you can keep their secret, then break the promise and inform the guard captain, and claim both rewards! However, expect an ambush later, as the Scoia'tael try to slay you on the outskirts of Novigrad.

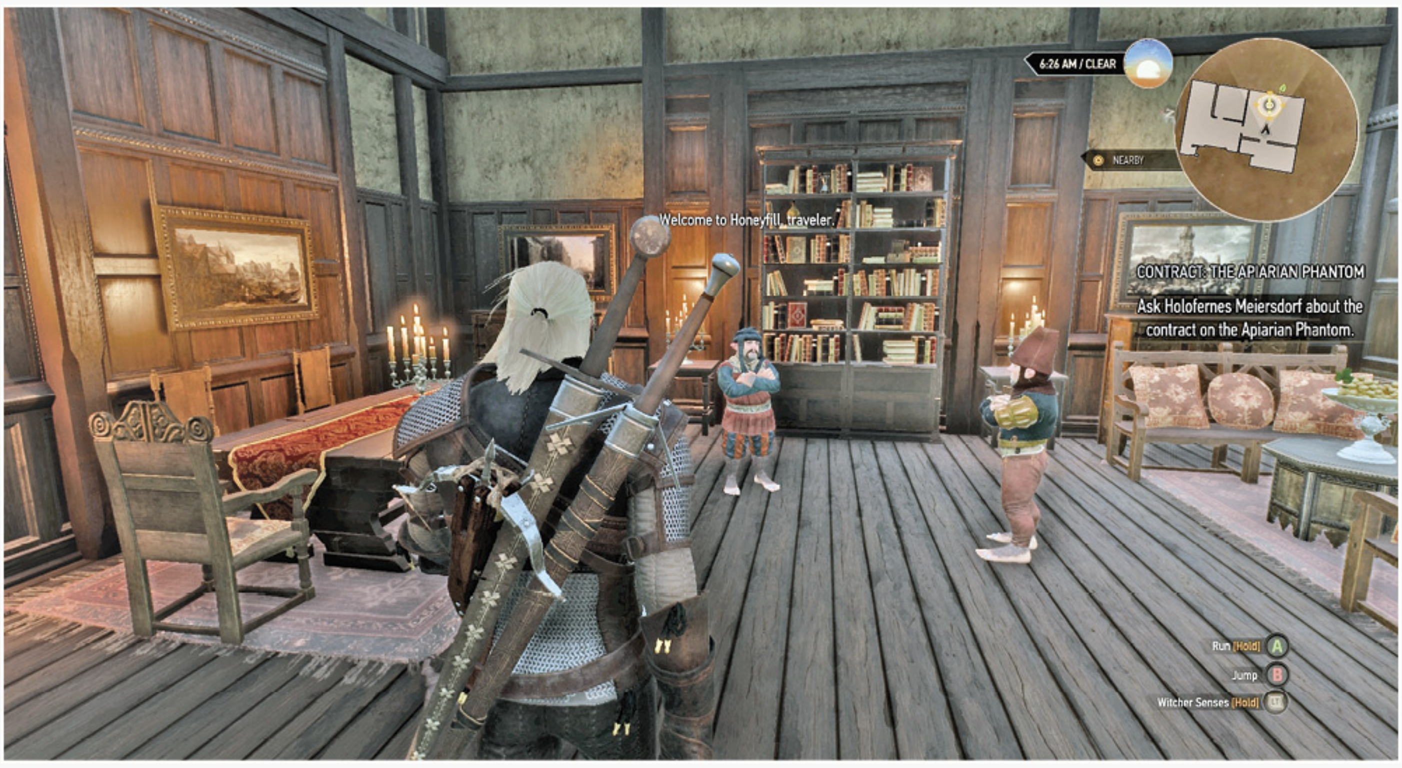
This quest commences when you read a message on a Notice Board in the settlement of Beanston. You can stumble upon the frozen hive first, but a key is needed to continue.



Welcome to Honeyfill, traveler.

CONTRACT: THE APIARIAN PHANTOM
Ask Holofernes Meiersdorf about the contract on the Apiarian Phantom.

Misfortune has befallen the Honeyfill apiary. A phantom has descended upon the settlement, destroying the hives and wreaking havoc. If you're reading this in Beanston, travel southwest across the sunflower fields and cow pastures, and through the stone entrance arch into the idyllic Honeyfill Meadworks.

Hop off your horse and enter the beautiful main structure, a wattle and daub mansion of fine craftsmanship, and find Master Meiersdorf with his halfling brethren in the grand hall. The diminutive master introduces you to his sons (Bernie, Franklin, and Hugo) and says he's been expecting someone like you to help him with the phantom. He describes not the entity, but the death of a farmhand that looked like frostbite. After bartering your mercenary price up if you wish, you're told to follow Holofernes.

- Dried and blackened blood several days old.
- A hive covered in frost. The cold must have killed the bees.
- A set of footprints. Follow them roughly westwards towards a nearby lake. The prints disappear into this large puddle.
- Work your way to the left, along the bank of the small lake, readying yourself for up to six drowners to slay as they rise from the ooze.
- Use your Witcher Senses along the southeast corner of the lake shore to uncover the footprints again.
- Follow these claw-shaped footprint tracks roughly eastward, toward the entrance of a basement too tight to enter. It is underneath the half-finished brick structure fallen into ruin.

Run around to the eastern side of the house, and there are steps down to a large wooden double door. It is locked. Holofernes appears behind you now, telling you this was a home meant for Bernie, but his grandfather ran out of coin before it was finished.

Race up the steps, whistling for Roach, and gallop after this icy hound—chasing it down on horseback and whacking it with your silver sword before dismounting and fighting it to the death while on foot.

Set off in a southeasterly direction, running into the woods, and possibly disturbing a bear. When you reach the objective area, use your Witcher Senses. Discover the following:

- Human remains, with claw and bite marks covering them. Armor ripped to shreds. No sign of a second corpse.
- No wait, there's a severed arm on a rocky outcrop nearby. A flying monster didn't quite gather everything when it snatched Hans' men.
- Head east along the rocky outcrop, finding splashes of blood. This has attracted wolves, so prepare to slay a couple of them.
- Follow the trail of blood uphill slightly, through the woods. Expect at least six more wolves and an alpha male on the prowl around here.

The trail ends at a few crows, that have picked the ground clean of evidence.

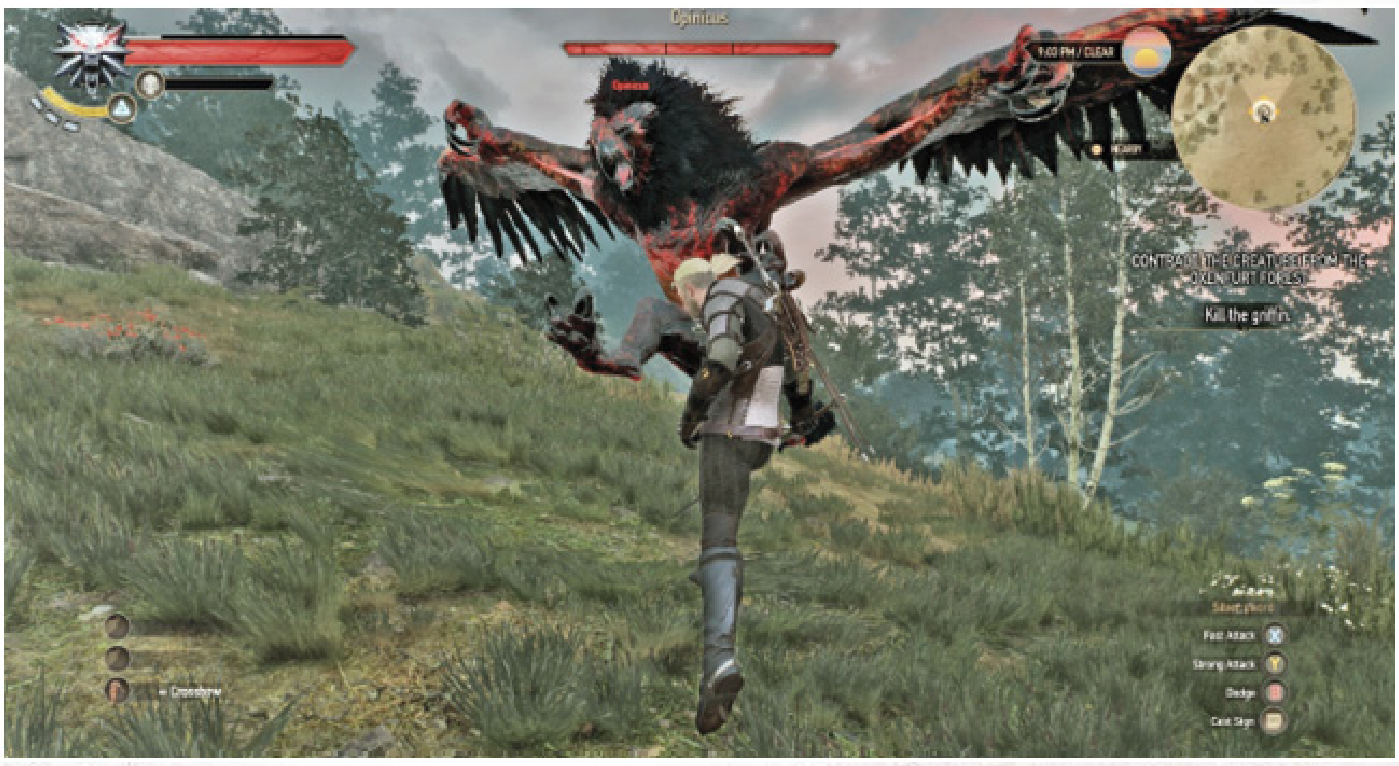
- Kill the griffin.

Listen to the cawing of the ravens (using your Witcher Senses if need be). Head east and a little south, uphill while scanning the skies. A murder of ravens are circling the rocky outcrop.

Climb up and onto the eyrie, with the remains of a nest and some leftover body parts and a mercenary contract (which you can optionally read, though this proves Hans' men were slain). Of more interest are some thin rachides (sparse after feathers). They prove you're hunting an archgriffin! Or, if you're approaching at night, the archgriffin is on its nest, and combat begins immediately!

Items: Quest Item: Mercenary Contract



Back away from the nest, and meditate on the grassy foothills slightly south of the nest (head north, and you run into a bandit camp). Wait until after darkness descends; a piercing shriek and fierce wind of flapping wings announces the arrival of your quarry, a huge feathery fiend named Opinicus.

GETTING GRIEF FROM A GRIFFIN?

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this fiercest of all griffins. The archgriffin has the following vulnerabilities:

Grapeshot Bomb

END: OPINING AFTER OPINICUS

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the griffin.
- Collect your reward from Hans.

Step over to the corpse of Opinicus, and slice off some ingredients and a trophy to tie to Roach's saddle. Then trot back to the Mercenary Camp, and explain your hunting prowess to a suitably impressed Hans. After your reward, the quest concludes.

A SUBSTANTIAL REWARD

Come to the nest during the day, before the griffin battle, and you can locate a letter. Read it to learn Hans was offered a substantial reward. Mention this to Hans at the end of this quest, and expect more coins.

OBJECTIVES:

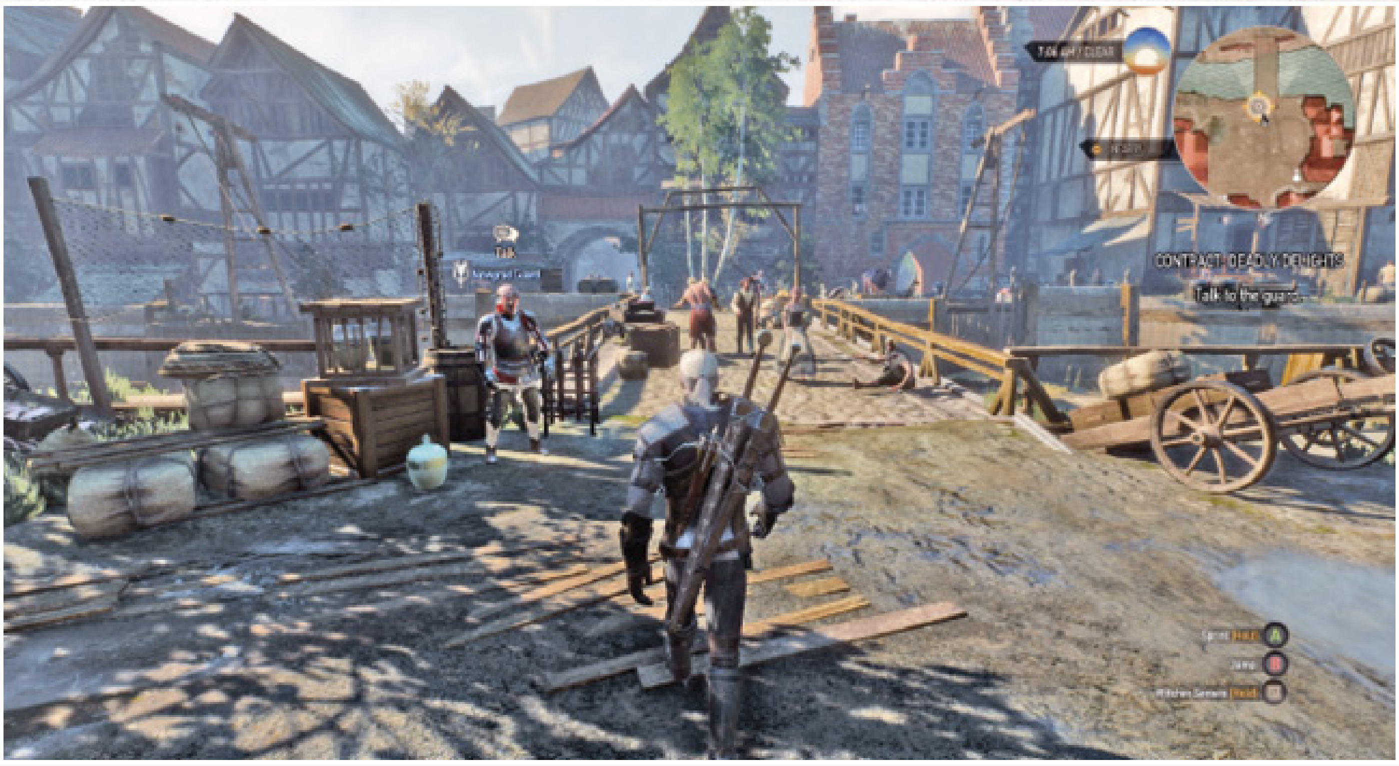
- Nearest Signpost: Hierarch Square.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest begins when you read a notice pinned to the board in Hierarch Square (Novigrad), near the Kingfisher Inn.



A temple guard named Sergeant Gilbert Witschke has a notice to read, despite it being for the "fellow followers of the flame." It concerns several officers of the guard, who have been ravaged to death. For some reason, Gilbert thinks the party responsible may be female, and anyone abetting this person is subject to torture. A short dash east and south through the fish market to the canal bridge brings you to Gilbert. Barter for a better payday, then agree to speak to the medic who tended to the corpses.

OBJECTIVE:

- Get information from the medic.

The medic is tending to matters on the dockside, almost due west of your location. Find and speak with him about the dead guards. Choose all your questions to obtain further information; that the bodies had only scratches "from their adventures with whores," that they had dried out, and were dumped in an area infamous for brothels.

Move southwards around the docks, over the canal, and make a left turn through the brick tunnel. A small market area is where you should begin a search using your Witcher Senses. Locate the following:

- A child's footprints. There is a lot of foot traffic here, so some of it is irrelevant to the investigation.
- Hoofprints. But not from a horse, as there are only two feet. There are guard footprints here, too.

Follow the hoofprints roughly northwards, winding through the alley around Crippled Kate's brothel, into an extremely tight side alley with a crate that must be destroyed (using Aard). The trail ends at the wooden steps up into the brothel.

Across from the steps in a narrow dead-end alcove is an empty perfume vial, not shabby enough for this lowly part of town. There's a scent trail from the perfume to follow, but once you speak to the brothel owner. Enter Crippled Kates (the door at the end of the hoof trail), speaking to the madame. You can buy, spend time with a whore, play Gwent, but you're here to ask about the murdered guards. The madame plays evasive, forcing your hand. You can:

- Tell her all clues lead here. She isn't interested in taking lip from you, and tells you to leave.
- (Axii Delusion Level 3) Ask her for the truth, or threaten to return with the temple guard. She gives you hints to the next area of your investigation.

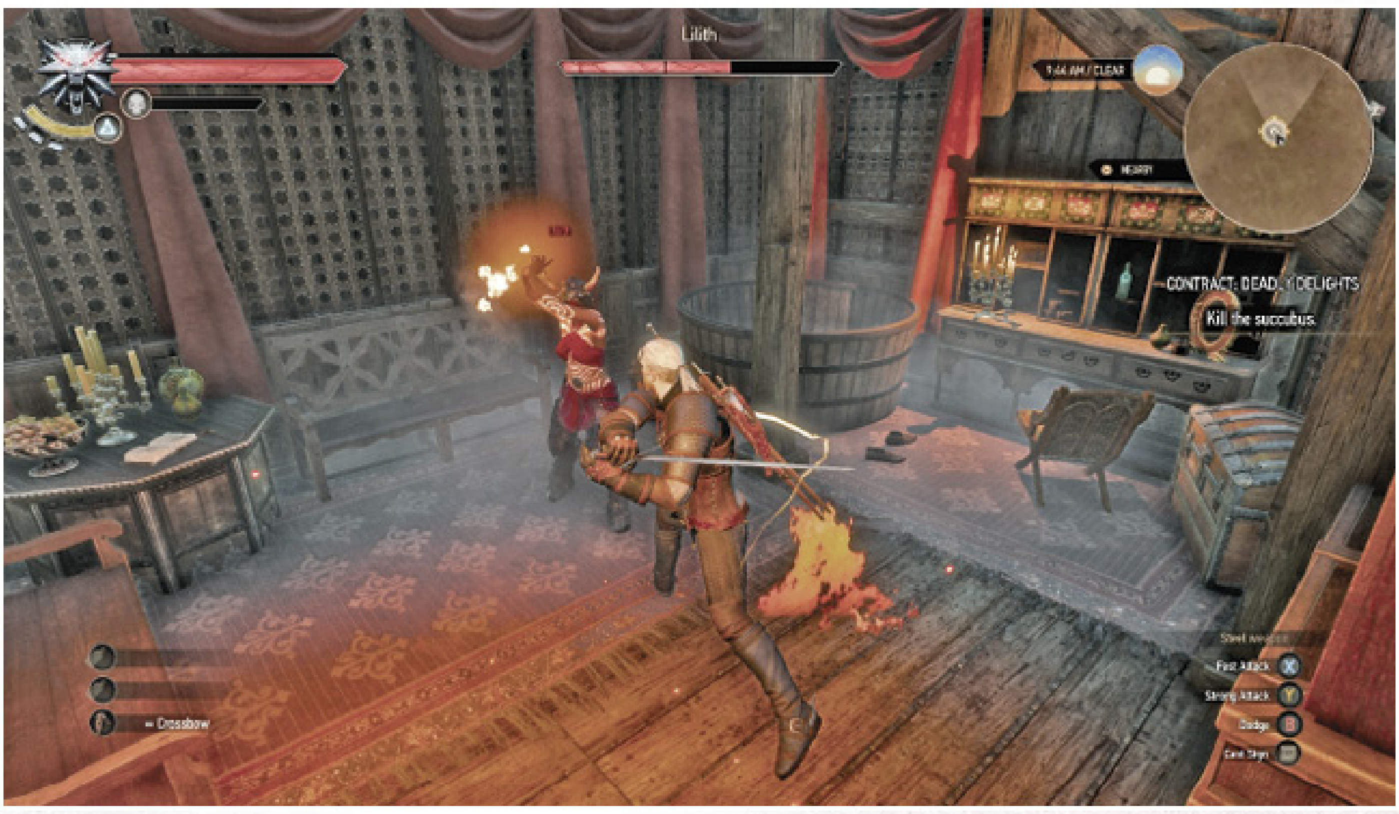
Being Fair To Salma Lilith: Confronting A Succubus

OBJECTIVES:

- Follow the scent of perfume.
- Talk to the man who is acting strangely.
- Find your way into the house.
- Confront the succubus.

Step out of Crippled Kate's, and head south following the trail of perfume visible to your Witcher Senses. Follow the scent along the winding streets until you discover a well-to-do townsman in a state of distress, leaning against a building. He indicates he's been inside the house, but appears to have been charmed… by a succubus!



This devilish creature is hiding out inside the wattle and daub structure, and getting in can be a challenge. Enter via the door on the eastern side (ground level), just to the south of where the befuddled man is. Climb the stairs to a small landing, pass a resting townsman, and climb the interior ladder to the roof eaves. Exit via the open doorway to a rickety wooden platform attached to the adjacent building. At the end is an exterior wooden ladder to clamber up. It leads into an attic space. Drop through the hole in the floor to reach a move lavish bedchamber, with velvet curtains and trays of grapes. This must be the boudoir of the succubus you seek.

Head down the stairs, and gain an audience with Salma Lilith. Beware of her disarming ways as you speak to her. You can:

- Insist on killing her. This begins combat with the succubus in a very confined space.
- Agree that she must leave the city. She's understanding but angry, but plays along and hands over a trophy to you, as well as an impressive sword for your collection. Then you part ways.

DON'T BE LURED BY SALMA LILITH!

If you decide to fight, consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this mistress of seduction. The succubus has the following vulnerabilities:

END: NOT MUCH FUSS FOR A SUCCUBUS

OBJECTIVE:

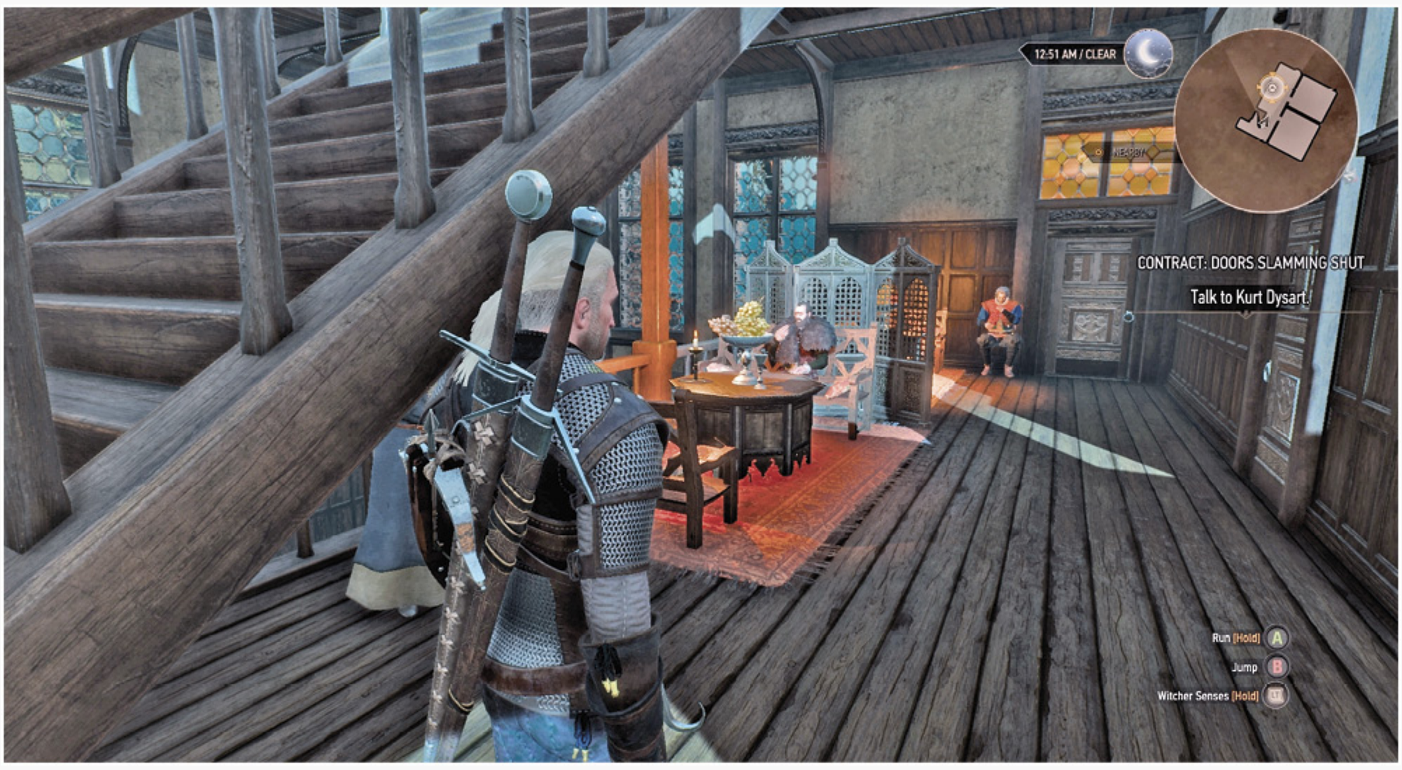
QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest commences when you read a message on Hiearch Square Notice Board in Novigrad, outside the Kingfisher Inn.



A notice entitled “Haunted House” requires a Witcher of unsullied reputation to investigate a residence on the outskirts of the city, recently acquired by Count Kurt Dysart, who is temporarily residing at the Kingfisher Inn. It is believed the place is haunted. Find out more from Kurt himself by entering the Kingfisher Inn (off the Town Square) and heading up the stairs in the southeast corner (but not the second flight of stairs). Head around the stairs to the mezzanine balcony, where Kurt is situated. Kurt wants to know the school you belong to. Answer how you wish—he isn’t getting a better offer of help. He tells of an estate east of Novigrad, with a keen seller who offloaded the property. He says the place shakes all night, and even the floors are said to move. Barter for a better reward, before agreeing to find the place, and obtaining a key to gain entry.

Things That Go Bump In The Cellar

OBJECTIVES:

- Travel to the haunted mansion.
- Investigate the haunted mansion.
- Investigate the basement.

Leave the city of Novigrad, and gallop on horseback almost due eastward, into the fertile farmland looking for the Moldavie Residence, close to an orchard and small lake. The wind is whipping up a bit as you reach this tumbledown mansion. Unlock the door using Kurt's key, and step into the trembling premises. The whole building is shaking, but a specter would have attacked you already. Time for a spot of Witcher sensing.

Locate the following:

- On the floor is rotten food and a goblet on the table—evidence of an inhabitant leaving in a hurry.
- Over in the northeast corner of the next room, atop the stairs down to the cellar, is a pile of scattered salt—a pointless superstition to drive away ghosts. Feel free to ransack the chest here for a book.
- Descend the stairs, and uncover a small crack in the old brick and plaster wall. Use Aard to make that crack into a sitcher-sized hole.
- Enter the hole, and head into strange ruins underneath the house, which haven't been visited for a while.
- Cross the bridge planks to inspect a wooden table with a large magic root on it. A second table opposite holds an open journal. A quick read of the book via your Quest menu after picking it up reveals elemental magic has been practiced here.

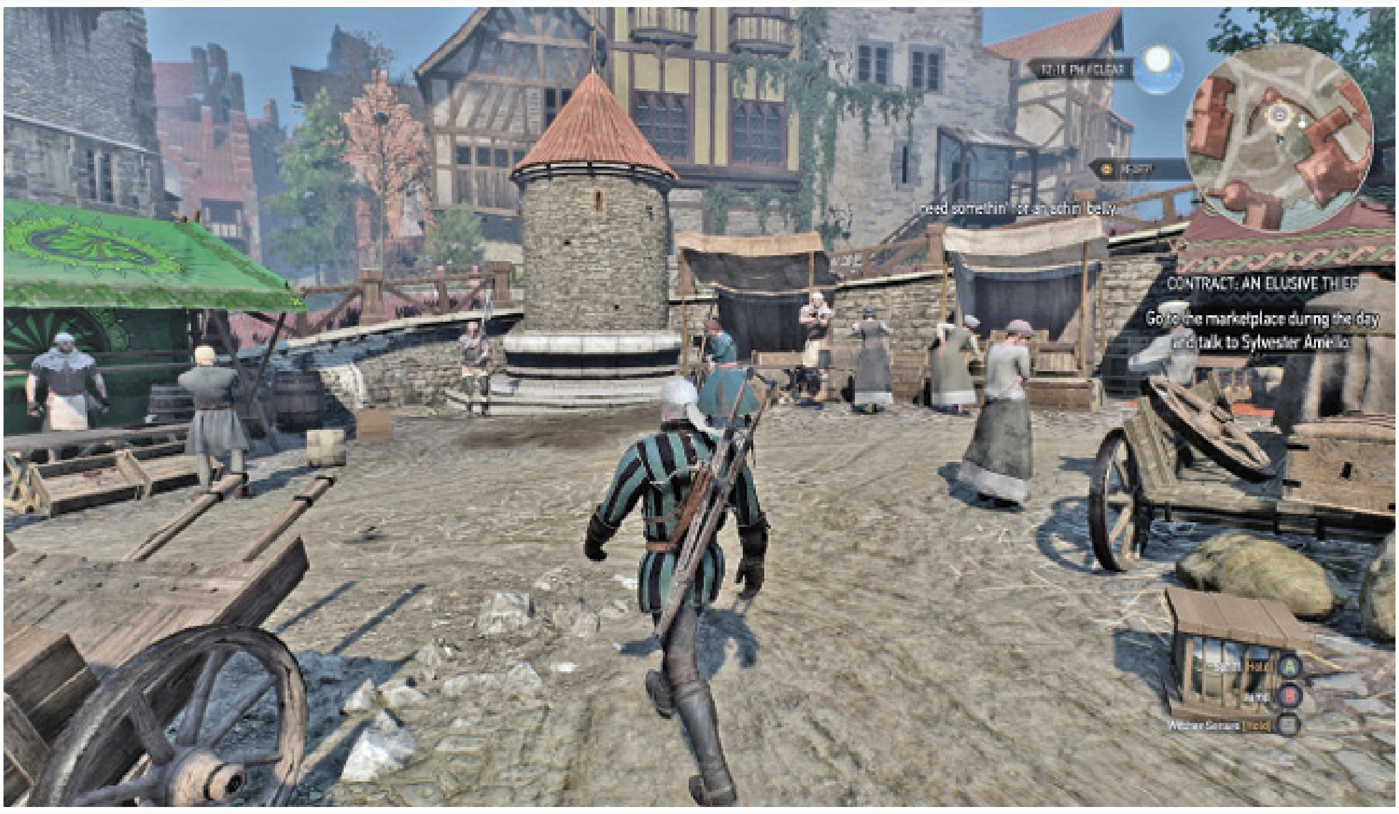
This quest starts when you read a message on a Notice Board on the north side of Hierarch Square in Novigrad.



12:16 PM | CLEAR
CONTRACT: AN ELUSIVE THIEF
Go to the marketplace during the day and talk to Sylvester Amello

There's a particularly bold imp that's taken to thieveing near the city gates, according to a missive marked "Contract: Imp." It hasn't harmed any humans, but is causing a great deal of damage, so Sylvester Amello has decreed a hefty (and tax-free) reward be given to anyone capturing the nuisance. Be sure it is between dawn and dusk during daylight hours, and head to the small circular market just inside the Tretogor Gate.

Speak to Slyvester, asking what it looked like (a mean, fat cat) and what it stole (bread, fish, and apples). Barter for a better reward if you like, then begin an inspection of the market.

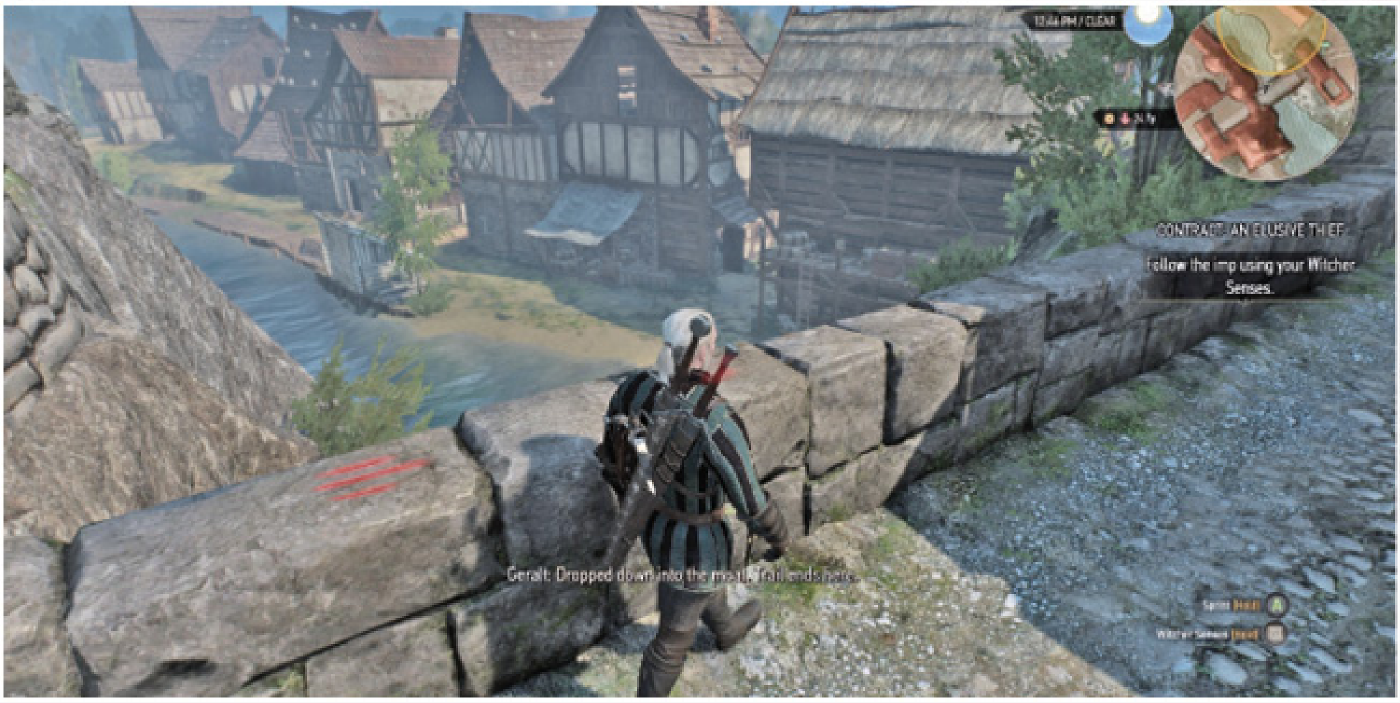
Contract: An Elusive Thief

Impish Acrobatics

OBJECTIVES:

- Follow the imp.
- Search the house.
- Read the letter.

A sweep of the market is called for, using your Witcher Senses. Locate the following:



CONTRACT: AN ELUSIVE THIEF

Follow the imp using your Witcher Senses.

Geralt: Dropped down into the moat. Trail ends here.

- By the circular sentry turret are large paw marks. Follow the trail up past the horse drinking fountain, and up, southward towards the gate.
- By a standing guard, stoop to find some loot the imp dropped.
- Look up and around the large stone wall, and view scampering prints across the ivy and towards the portcullis.
- Look across to the opposite side of the arch, and the top of the stone bridge—the marks disappear as the creature dropped down into the moat.
- Climb over the bridge wall and (carefully) slide down the rocky embankment to the edge of the moat below. The trail picks up near here.
- The paw marks change to footprints. How odd. Follow them to an open door and enter the house at moat level.

Inside the structure is a note to read. Use your Witcher Senses if you can't easily see it. Access your Quest Items menu and read the letter. It provides some incriminating evidence from "Louis" admonishing "Janne" about taking the form of a giant black cat for her pilfering activities. Ah, you're dealing with a doppler.

Items: Quest Item: Short Letter

Contract: An Elusive Thief

The Doppler Effect

OBJECTIVES:

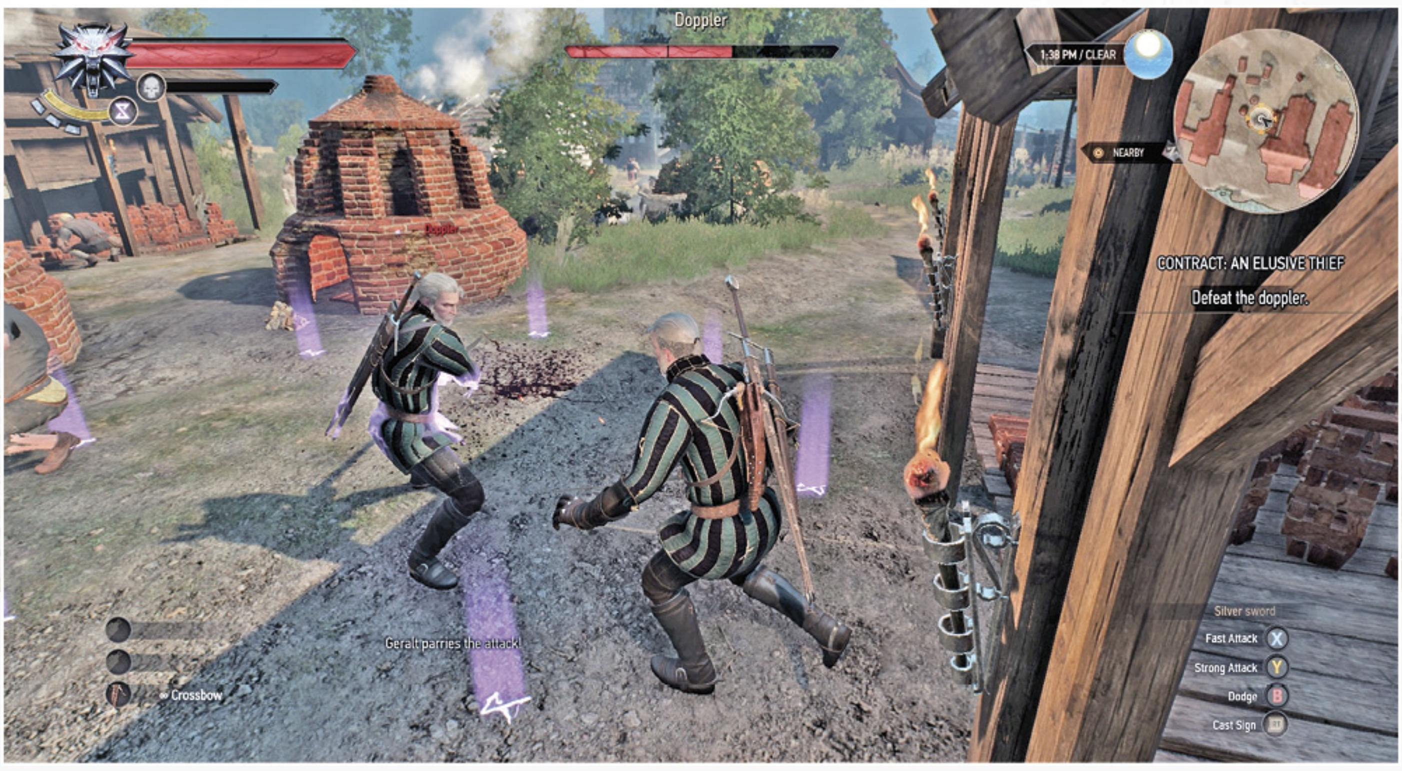
- Find a way to track the doppler.
- Follow the scent of perfume.
- Confront the doppler. Chase down the doppler.
- Defeat the doppler.

Make a thorough inspection of the doppler's house, using your Witcher Senses. At the top of the first flight of steps is a chest with some scattered clothing next to it.

- This is a woman's blouse, a man's shirt, and child's shoes, but only one bed. The scent of lavender now.

Follow this scent down the stairs, out of the building, and roughly eastward until you reach a group of townsfolk conversing close to the dyeing pools. A Redanian guard catches your eye. Speak to him. You wonder (aloud) why the guard is on such friendly terms with an elf. The elf attempts to cover the conversation by reacting with shock at the "racism" the guard is uttering, and then quickly departs. Now the guard tries to continue the act, which continues until you call it out for being a doppler. A moment later, it changes to the form of a peasant, and flees.

Check your minimap as you give chase to the fleeing shapechanger. Head left (northwest), following the doppler back towards and then along the moat, before it turns right, heading under a large wooden bridge span. This is the earliest opportunity to grab it. Instead of surrendering, the doppler transforms into a familiar face—yours!



You may be worried about battling yourself, since the doppler uses both the Signs and the sword prowess that you have mastered. So press the attack quickly, and it shouldn't take long before you cut into him with enough vigor to stop the fight.

DOUBLE TROUBLE

Hang on! Though this cheeky specimen is trying every shapechanging trick under the sun, he isn't that difficult to overcome (he suffers the same weaknesses as humans in combat). But there are more tricks up his sleeves. Consult the Bestiary for further information on imps and dopplers.

END: ON GOOD FORM

OBJECTIVE:

- Return to the marketplace during the day to talk to Sylvester Amello.

The doppler surrenders, and you may elect to banish the doppler in one of two ways:

- Either finish it off, taking the trophy afterwards.
- Or order it to leave Novigrad for good. It agrees, and hands a token of its gratitude (some crowns and a diagram).

After the doppler promises to leave, retrace your steps back to the marketplace, and inform Sylvester that this was a special type of imp. One that won't be diminishing the fish and apple supply any time soon. If you let the doppler go, Sylvestor only offers you half the reward. No trophy. No full payment. After the reward, the quest concludes.

- Nearest Signpost: Cunny of the Goose.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest starts when you uncover a message on the Notice Board at the Cunny of the Goose Inn, or you start destroying leshen totems in the woods. The optimal path is the former, and shown below.

Just south of Novigrad is an infamous inn with a delightful name. Approach the Notice Board outside, and read the message entitled "Devil in the Woods." It appears Brean Hotsch has tracked the local woods, and found them home to a cruel evil of some kind. Strapping dwarven loggers were hired to harvest the lumber there, but only one returned, babbling about a monster. Enter the lakeside inn, and find the Brean the halfling propping up the bar. Barter with him for a better price if you wish, then agree to find the witness to the woodland horror.

OBJECTIVE:

- Talk to witnesses.

Scour the inn for a pipe-smoking dwarf in a corner. Be warned, you may have to listen to some bards as you cross the premises. The lumberjack seems half-cut, but valiantly explains how his mates lost their lives in a vicious attack.

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the woodcutter's hut where Hotsch is staying.
- Follow the wagon tracks to where the monster attacked.
- Investigate the site of the monster's attacks.

Travel mostly west, and a little north, towards the forested region of this part of Velen, and trek into the woods to reach a small cluster of structures. The easiest route is along the river bank with Novigrad's walls on the north side, to the right of you. Dismount, and begin to inspect the yard. Locate the following, using your Witcher Senses:

- Deep ruts where loggers' wagons stopped.
- Follow the wagon tracks roughly westwards from the buildings along a winding wood trail close to the water, then into the woods where intermittent nekker attacks may occur. Fend at least three off.

Eventually, you reach an abandoned wagon. There was a fight here between two dwarves and something... big. Use your Witcher Senses to uncover further evidence:

- Opposite the wagon is evidence of a wounded dwarf trying to flee, while bleeding heavily. There is a rock close by with claw marks—the monster must have been enraged and strong.
- Follow the blood trail to a dead dwarf with deep wounds on his back, who bled to death.
- Follow the footprints to a nearby campfire, where a second dead dwarf lies, strangled by roots from the earth.

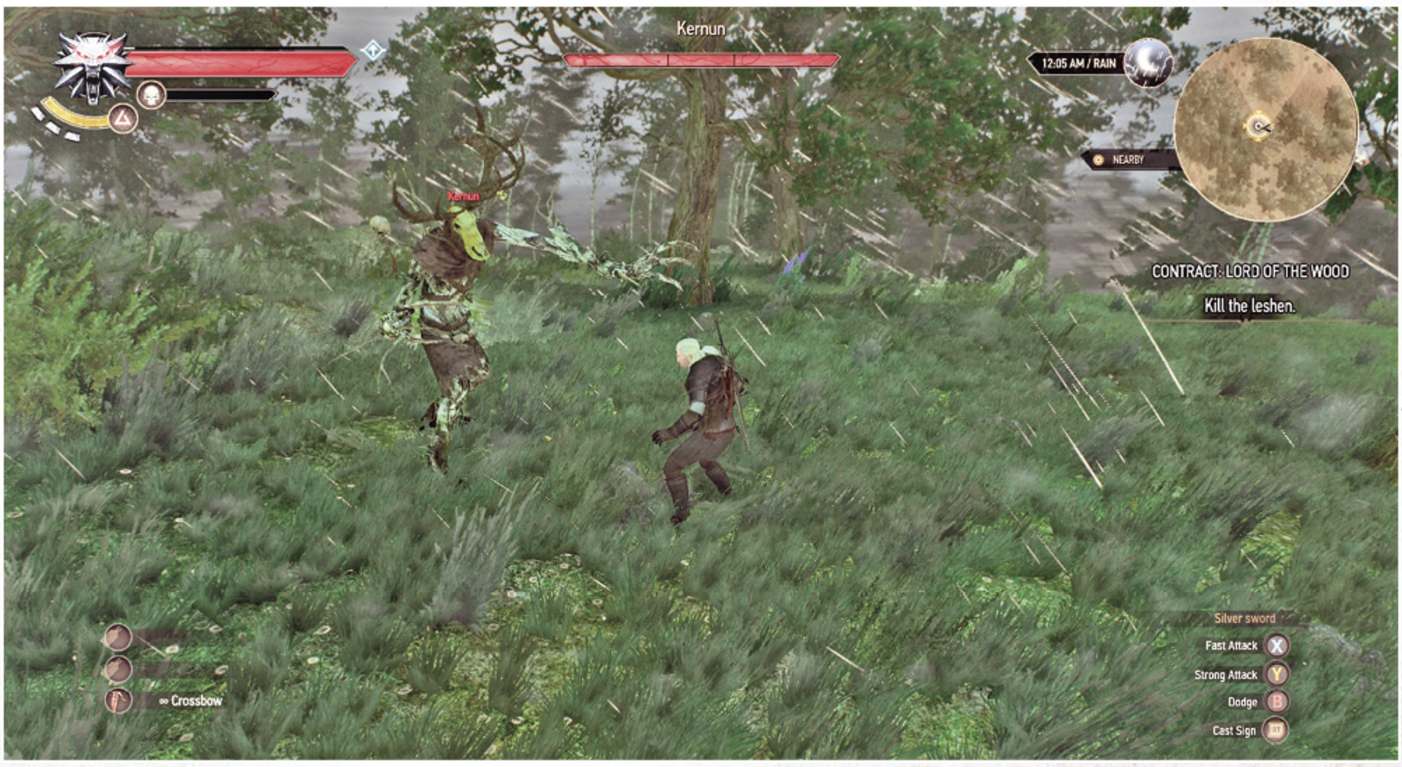
After all these discoveries, you realize this is the work of a leshen. You must find its totem, and destroy it to lure it out.

Contract: Lord Of The Wood

Tracking And Waiting

OBJECTIVES:

- Destroy the leshen's totem to lure it out.
- Lure the leshen out by destroying its totem.



Inspect your World Map, and four possible totem locations appear. All are easily found, but only one is necessary to reach. Some are false leads, such as a murder of crows that aren't the leshen's. Expect wolves to face as your search continues. You're looking for a skull-topped bone weaving at the base of an old oak tree. Conjure a blast of wind using Aard, and the totem clatters to the soft earth. Striding from the dark shadows of the forest is a ten-foot tall, skull-faced giant. Prepare to battle Kernun, Lord of the Wood!

DON'T FACE A LASHING FROM A LESHEN!

Prior to dismantling Kernun's totem, it is vital you understand how leshens attack, and their devastating command of nature. Consult the Bestiary, the leshen has the following vulnerabilities:

END: AFTER KERNUN'S COLLAPSE

OBJECTIVES:

- Collect your reward from Brean Hotsch.

You felled this mighty woodland spirit, and can gather ingredients from its corpse, as well as its skull as a trophy, which looks rather stylish tied to Roach's saddle. Gallop back to The Cunny of the Goose, inform Brean of a job well done, and receive a reward to match. The quest then concludes.

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the Redanian officer.
- Nearest Signpost: Oxenfurt Port.

QUESTING DECISIONS

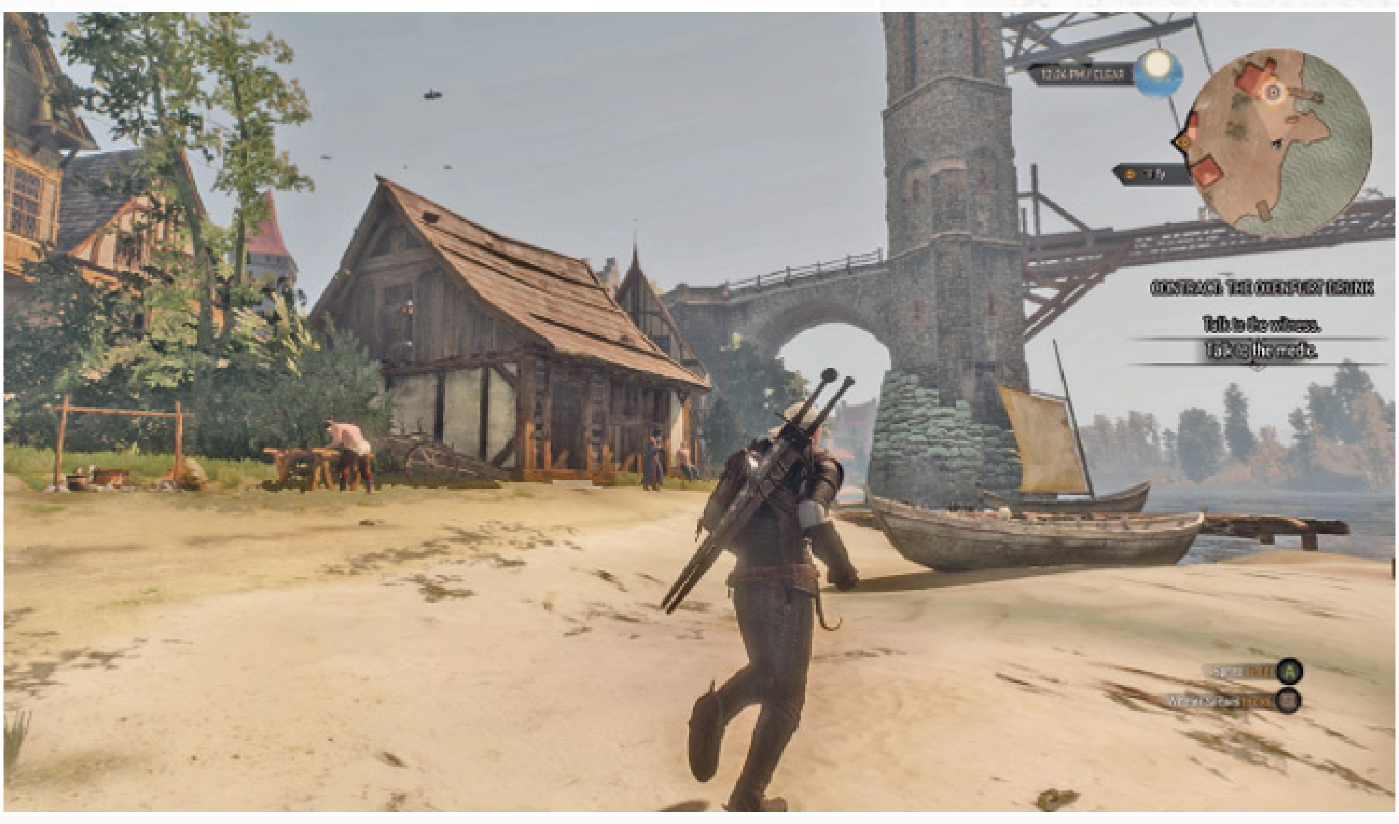
This quest begins in the town of Oxenfurt, when you read the Notice Board close to Oxenfurt Port, or nearby.

Unpin the notice that reads "Monster in Oxenfurt," and read some fancy prose from the Commander of the Oxenfurt City Regiment, who requests (nay, commands) you to devote yourself to tracking and slaying a monster within these city walls. Little else is revealed, so head to the dockside and approach Nikolas Friedman, a Redanian officer. He reveals that a beast has been targeting lone victims, attacking them, and abandoned their corpses in the gutters about town. Barter for a better price if you wish, then request to see the sawbones who autopsied the victims. There's also a survivor. A woman staying at the tavern.

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the medic.
- Look over the victims' bodies.

Further south from the Redanian officer, along the sandy dockside is a small hut-like morgue where the medic is working. Speak with him, and he tells you he hasn't completed the autopsies, since the victims were simply drunks and beggars. Bring out your forceful voice, and he hands over the morgue key, and tells you to take a look yourself.



Items: Quest Item: Oxenfurt Morgue Key

Inside are two corpses. Use your Witcher Senses when examining:

- There are fang marks on a neck, evidence of dragging over cobblestones.
- There are vampire bites and the strong stench of alcohol.

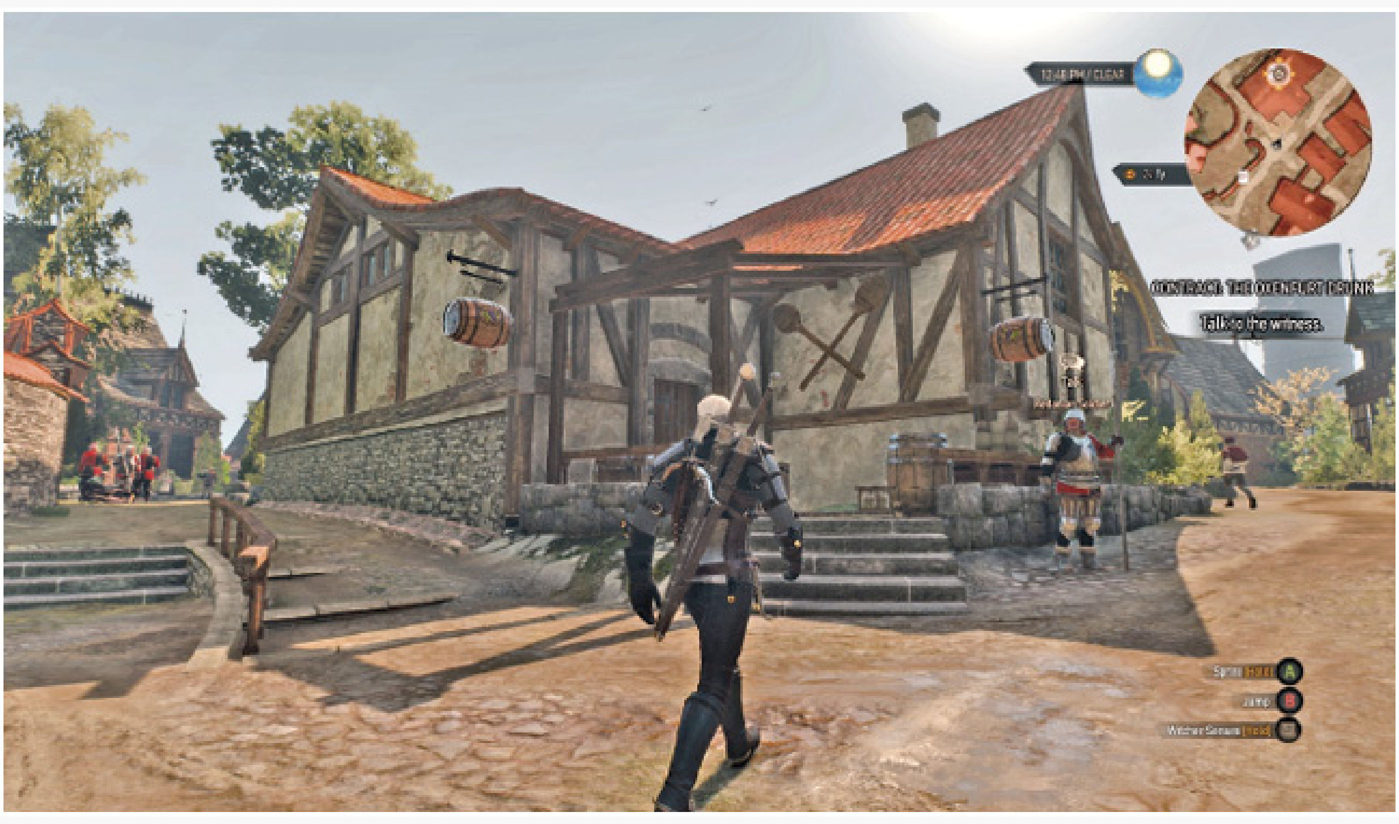
Now you have more evidence, it is worth heading to the scene of the crime itself.

OBJECTIVES:

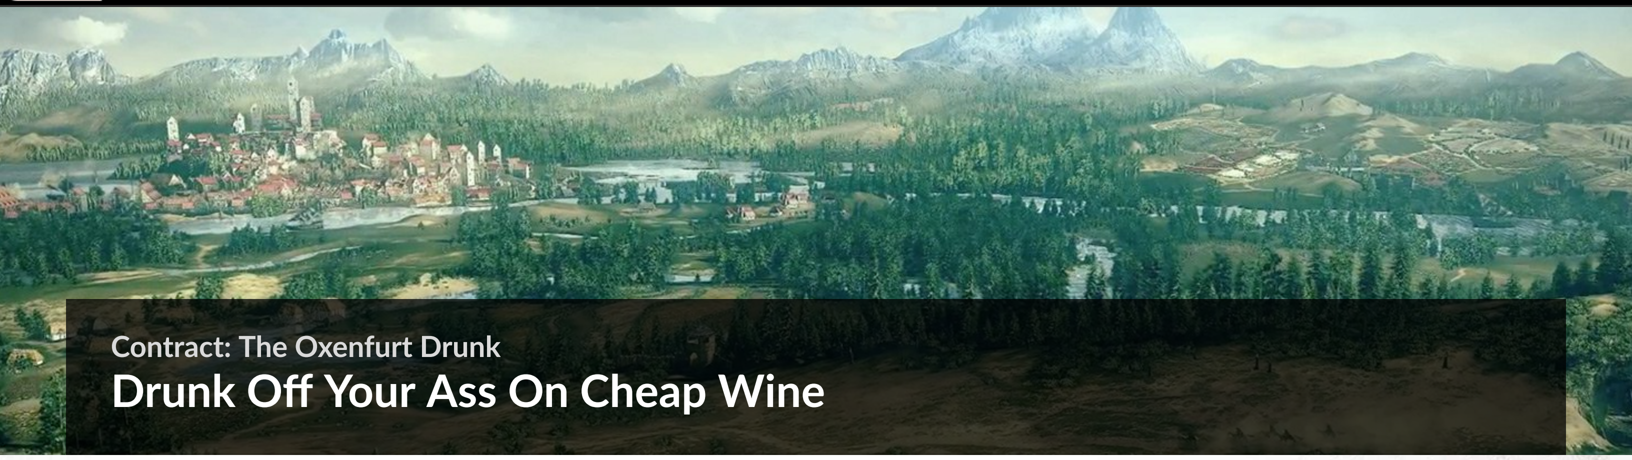
- Talk to the witnesses.
- Examine the site where the crime took place.

Head into the center of town, to the square where The Alchemy Tavern is located. Use this entrance, as the rear door is locked. Once inside, locate the weeping woman by the bar. Though she might have been a victim of the beast, her requests for drinks and coin make her a suspect witness. You can:

- (30 Crowns) Give her some coin for a drink.
- (Axii Delusion Level 3) Tell her she's fine without alcohol.



Or, you can leave and return with some funds (or the necessary Axii Level). Either option results in some of the least helpful evidence you've uncovered in your investigations. Something called her name, grabbed the hem of her skirt, and she pulled away. However, you do learn the site where the crime took place.



Contract: The Oxenfurt Drunk

Drunk Off Your Ass On Cheap Wine

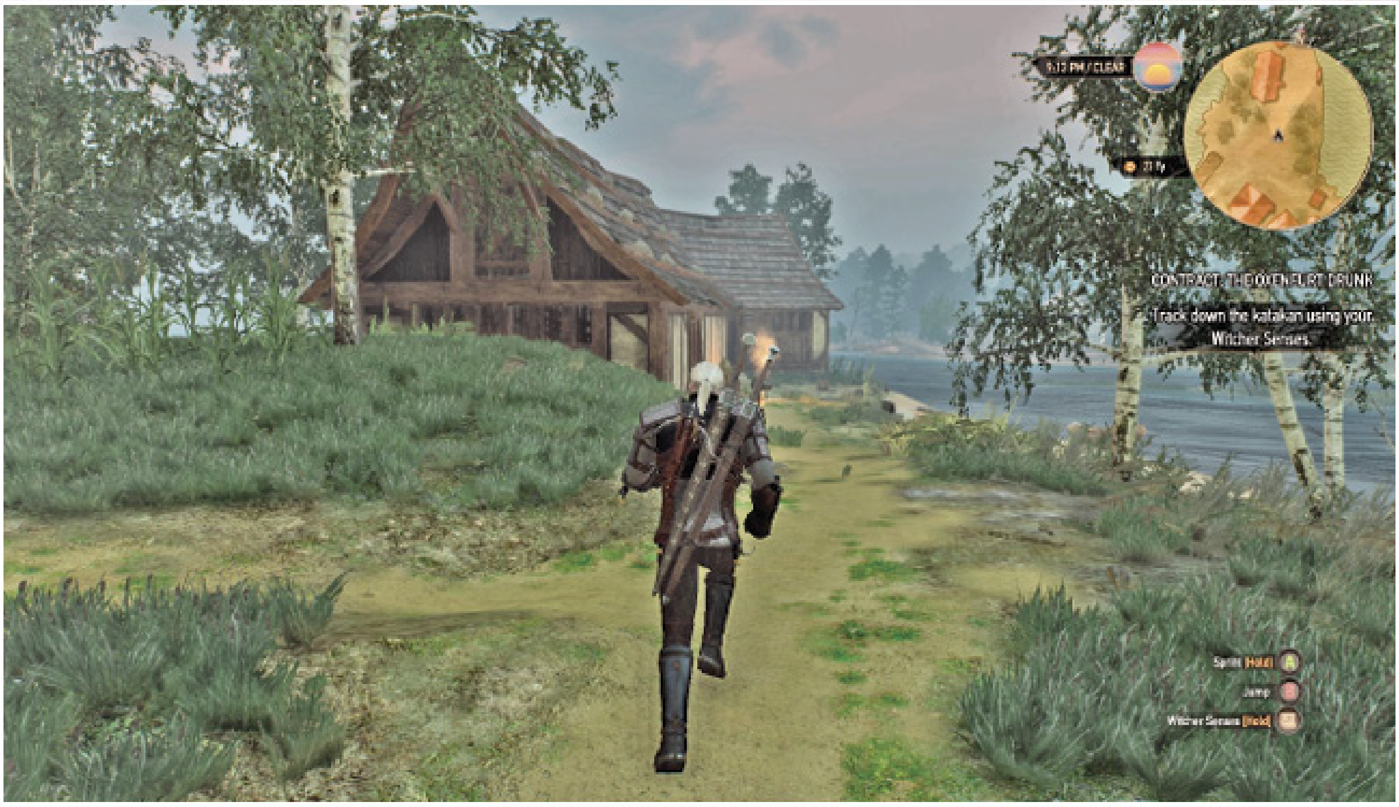
OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the innkeep and get drunk in order to bait the katakan.
- Walk around near the tavern in order to provoke the katakan.
- Kill the katakan.

Just outside the tavern is a thoroughfare where a few drunks are staggering or sitting about. Near to the stone archway is a worn bracelet, which is easy to spot with your Witcher Senses. A fondness for jewelry and the wounds on the corpses suggests a katakan. Head back inside the tavern, searching for the innkeep behind the bar near the female victim.

- (50 Crowns) Order a drink, and continue to gurgle down cheap wine.

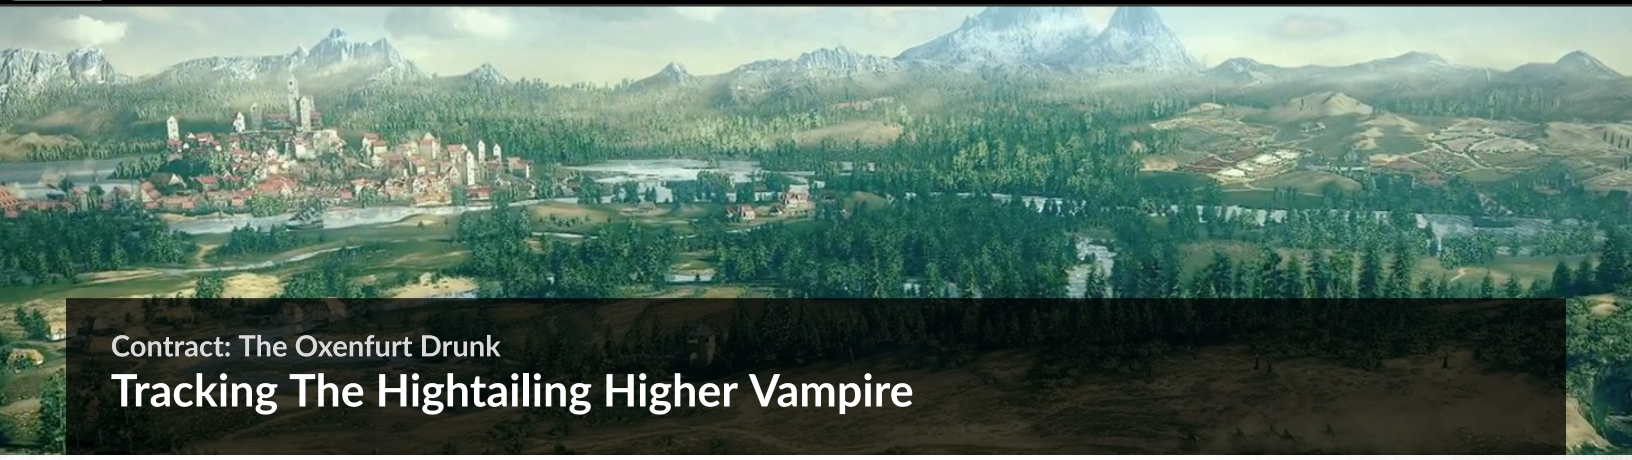
After darkness falls, stagger out of the tavern singing an unmentionable drinking song, and wander about the objective area. The katakan doesn't hear you. Move to the second objective area, and sing the second part of the song. Still nothing.



CONTRACT: THE OXENFURT DRUNK

Track down the katakan using your Witcher Senses.

Move your staggering towards the third objective area—into an alley between well-appointed houses further up the street. A rasping low voice announces that it seeks to drink your blood. You've summoned Gael, a ruthless vampiric menace. Slay him!



Contract: The Oxenfurt Drunk

Tracking The Hightailing Higher Vampire

OBJECTIVES:

- Use your Witcher Senses to track down the katakan.
- Get inside the katakan's hideout.
- Kill the katakan.

Gaining an audience with Gael is tricky—it charges and pushes you to the ground before fleeing. Follow the path to the objective area, across the town square heading northwards to a river hut. You can "see" the movements Gael is making. This allows you to reach the structure. Climb the ladder by the alleyway to gain access to the balcony and drop down into the building where final combat commences.

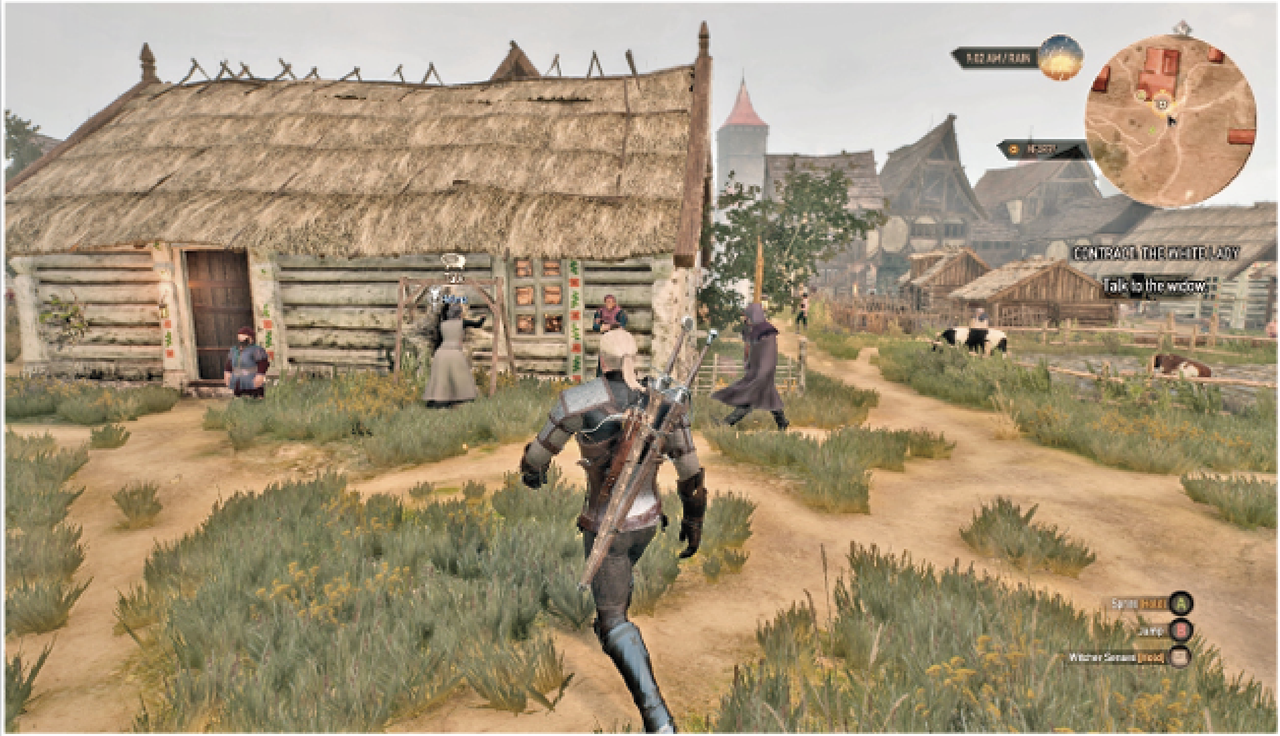
QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest commences after reading a notice on the board in the cluster of buildings between the Portside and Glory Gates, just south of Novigrad's walls. Or, you can find bodies and clues at Castle Drahim and start there. The optimal path is the former.

Take pity on the poor peasants of Farcorners, as the fields nearby are haunted by a wraith appearing as a forlorn maid. It is keeping the villagers from harvesting their crops, so the villagers have gathered together enough gold to pay someone to rid them of this evil. Helma is at the tanning rack outside her cottage on the south side of the settlement.



She tells you of Micko—a band of drunkards who attempted to "plough" the White Lady. Their corpses still litter the fields. Ask where the White Lady has been seen (close to a tower), then barter for a better reward if you wish.

Luzi, Suffer No More

OBJECTIVES:

- Look for the bodies of the White Lady's victims.
- Investigate the place where the White Lady attacked.
- Follow the tracks.

Summon Roach and canter off past the hay stacks and over the rolling hills towards a stone tower roughly south of the settlement. Once through the orchard, enter the objective area and dismount as you reach a small campfire littered with the bodies of Micko and his men. Use your Witcher Senses and uncover the following:

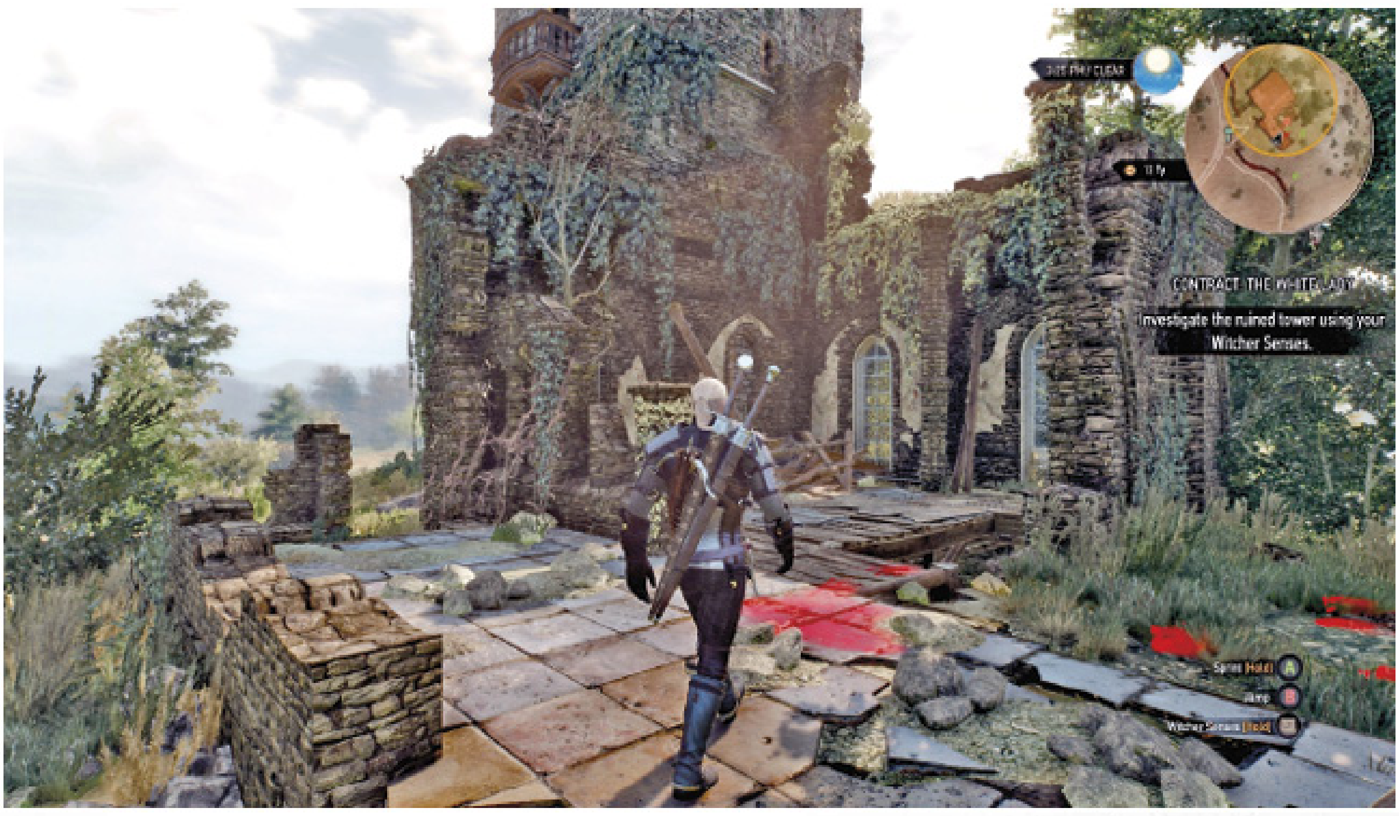
- A corpse that was given quite a scare before he died.
- A cluster of beer bottles—some hard-headed men died here.
- One of the bodies is dried to a crisp, with burn marks.
- Another is pallid, but without blood loss. This isn't a vampire.
- You expected to see another body, but there are uneven footprints. Someone fleeing blindly.
- A few steps away is a pile of hay with old dried blood staining it. But there is singeing that is fresh, and vibrates your medallion.

Contract: The White Lady

Dance Of The White Lady

OBJECTIVES:

- Investigate the ruined tower.
- Talk to the widow about the noonwraith.



Continue to track the footprints as they wind around to the northeast, up the hill towards the looming ruins of Drahim Castle. The footprints end on the battlements, and a large pool of blood, which leads down into the castle cellar. Head down the rickety wooden stairs, discover the last body, and check it over:

- It was dragged here by ghouls, but it wasn't their kill. The skin is unnaturally pale. This must be a noonwraith!

This foe is cunning, and must be summoned by finding something that belonged to her. Return to Helma back at the settlement, and inform her of this fact. She knows the phantom by name (Luzi) whose parents swore her to an elderly smith from the city. Heartbroken, she ran into the fields and slashed her wrists with a silver dagger. She hands it over.

Items: Quest Item: Silver Dagger

OBJECTIVE:

- Throw the silver dagger into the fire to lure the noonwraith out.

Return to the campfire where Micko's men lie rotting and approach the flames. After dropping the dagger into the fire, you wait for a frightening, rotting visage to appear—a mournful but vengeful specter. Time to dance!

END: AFTER LAYING LUZI TO REST

OBJECTIVES:

- Collect your reward from Helma.

After Luzi the White Lady finishes her final wail, inspect the tattered remains and gather evidence of your kill. Tie it to Roach, ride back to Helma, and receive your just reward, as the quest concludes.

The Dragon of Fyresdal (Forktail)

Gadzooks! It seems a fearsome dragon has infested the lands about Fyresdal, and the notice reads like a fanciful tale. A winged serpent, massive in scale, with a fabled treasure to be claimed by the hero to vanquishes it. Vagn the village elder has further information. - Use your Witcher Senses to follow the monster’s tracks to the site of the attack.
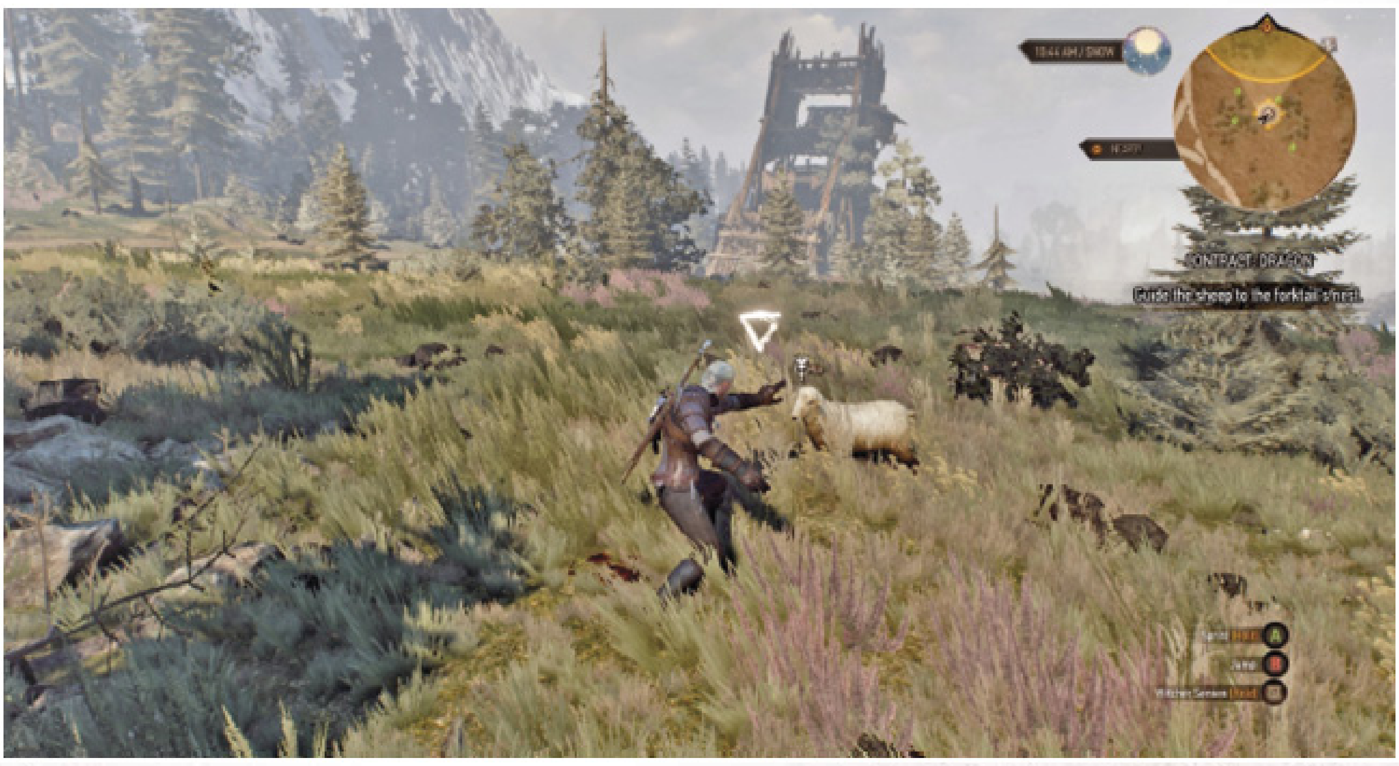
- Follow the monster’s tracks using your Witcher Senses.

Travel north out of the village, heading towards a junction in the road. Just past is the corpse of a cow. Use your Witcher Senses to see that this dragon wasn’t very strong if it just tore the cow up and left it here. On a nearby rock is cow’s blood. Follow the trail of it across the field, heading roughly toward the river, and inspect the corpse of a dog, which was dropped from high up. You peer up at an overgrown siege tower, now the nest of a forktail. Time to rustle up some bait.

OBJECTIVE:

- Talk to the village elder in Fyresdal about bait.



Back at Vagn’s longhouse, speak to him about finding an unseasoned sheep. He has one, but it’s a bit mangy. And it’s difficult to herd. You appear back at the road junction with Mia, a sheep with the listening instincts and controllability of a one-wheeled wagon. Try the following:

- Use Axii to guide the sheep.
- Approaching it from the left if you want to herd it to the right, and vice versa.
- Back up when you reach the siege tower, after leading the sheep to the vicinity of the dead dog.

The forktail then swoops in once you’re at least 20 yards away, so back up to begin combat with this flying beast. Then prepare to clip the wings of this powerful forktail, and slay this pretend dragon!

DON’T LET THIS FIGHT DRAG-ON!

Consult the Bestiary to thoroughly prepare for this large forktail confronation. The flying beast has the following vulnerabilities:

Golden Oriole

Grapeshot Bomb

Draconid Oil

Aard

END: LYIN’ TO VAGN

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the forktail.
- Return to the village elder in Fyresdal for your reward.

Cut the head off this forktail, and return to Vagr. Feel free to lie to him when he asks about the fearsome nature of the creature. If he believes you slew a dragon, you receive your full reward. If not, he cuts the reward appropriately. Then the quest concludes.

Items: Forktail Mutagen, Forktail Trophy, Crowns

Contract: Here Comes The Groom

Searching For A Thoroughbred Skirt-Chaser

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: HERE COMES THE GROOM

LOCATIONS: Svorlag (Spikeroog), Cave of Melusine

CHARACTERS: Kevan, Britt, Nils

ENEMIES: Sirens, Drowners, Melusine (Ekhidna or Siren)

OBJECTIVES:

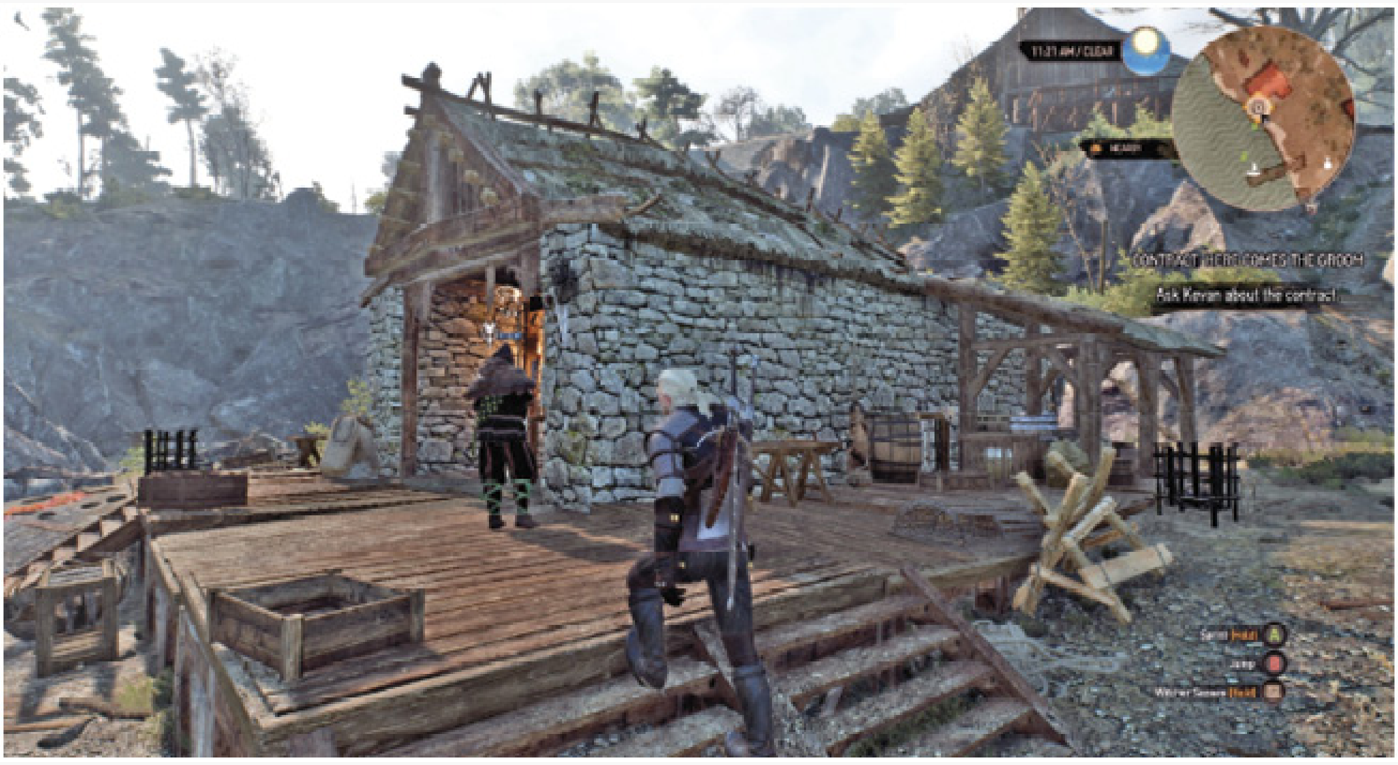
- Ask Kevan about the contract.
- Nearest Signpost: Svorlag.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible during your exploration of the Isles of Skellige. When exploring the small isle of Spikeroog, visit the Notice Board in the port village of Svorlag to start this quest, or stumble upon the ekhidna cave (and Nils). The optimal path is the former, detailed in this section.

Melusine (Ekhidna or Siren)

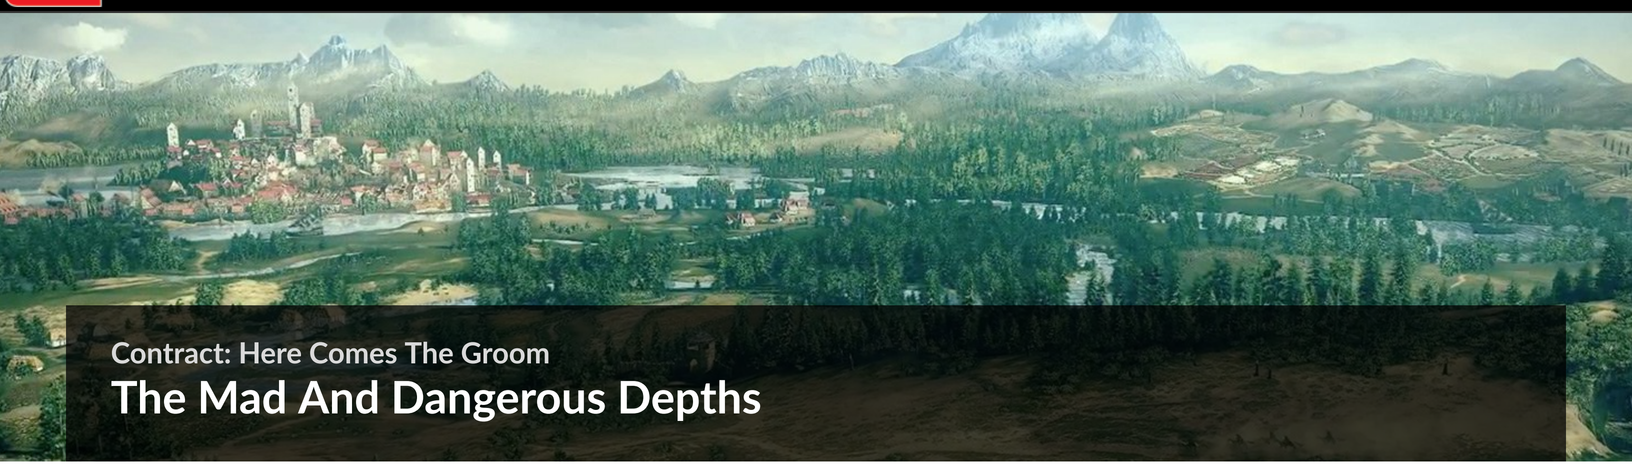
A pinned note entitled "Nils' Disappearance" requests information on a groomsman named Nils, who has vanished from the village. His bethrothed (Britt) is out of her mind with worry, and Britt's brother has requested help. Find Kevan by the ocean shore fishing hut. He tells you his sister saw a beast carry Nils off. Others reckon he's done a runner, since Britt isn't easy to be around, and Nils had a wandering eye. Barter to increase the reward if you wish, then agree to speak with Britt.



OBJECTIVE:

- Talk to Britt.

Dash north along the shoreline, climbing the grassy hill overlooking Svorlag, and you soon spot the forlorn Britt standing atop the cliff. She's a weepy sort, but does mention a "shadow of great wings" taking her beloved into a nearby cave.

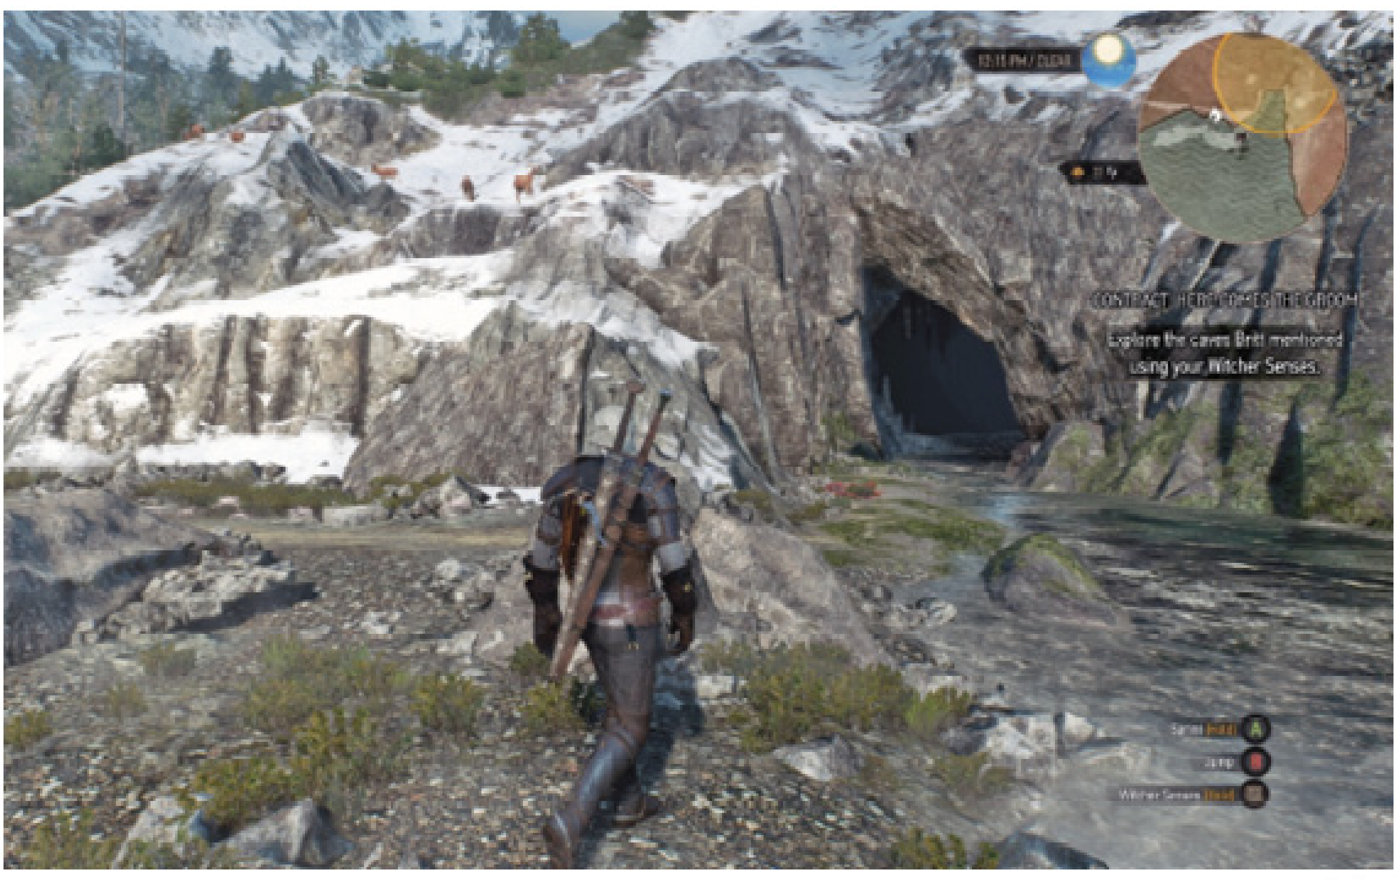


Contract: Here Comes The Groom

The Mad And Dangerous Depths

OBJECTIVES:

- Explore the caves Britt mentioned.
- Find Melusine in the caves.



CONTRACT: HERE COMES THE GROOM
Explore the caves Britt mentioned using your Witcher Senses.

Journey south via the wilderness pathway that winds past the Old Watchtower, and down to the southern shore. Or journey by boat. You're looking for a cave opening guarded by a gaggle of sirens. Slay at least three before entering the cave system.

The place stinks of carrion, so prepare for combat with six drowners as you progress down the initial tunnel. This widens into a waterlogged chamber, where a towering primitive altar to the deity Melusine catches your eye (especially if you use Witcher Senses). Turn and head down the southeast tunnel.

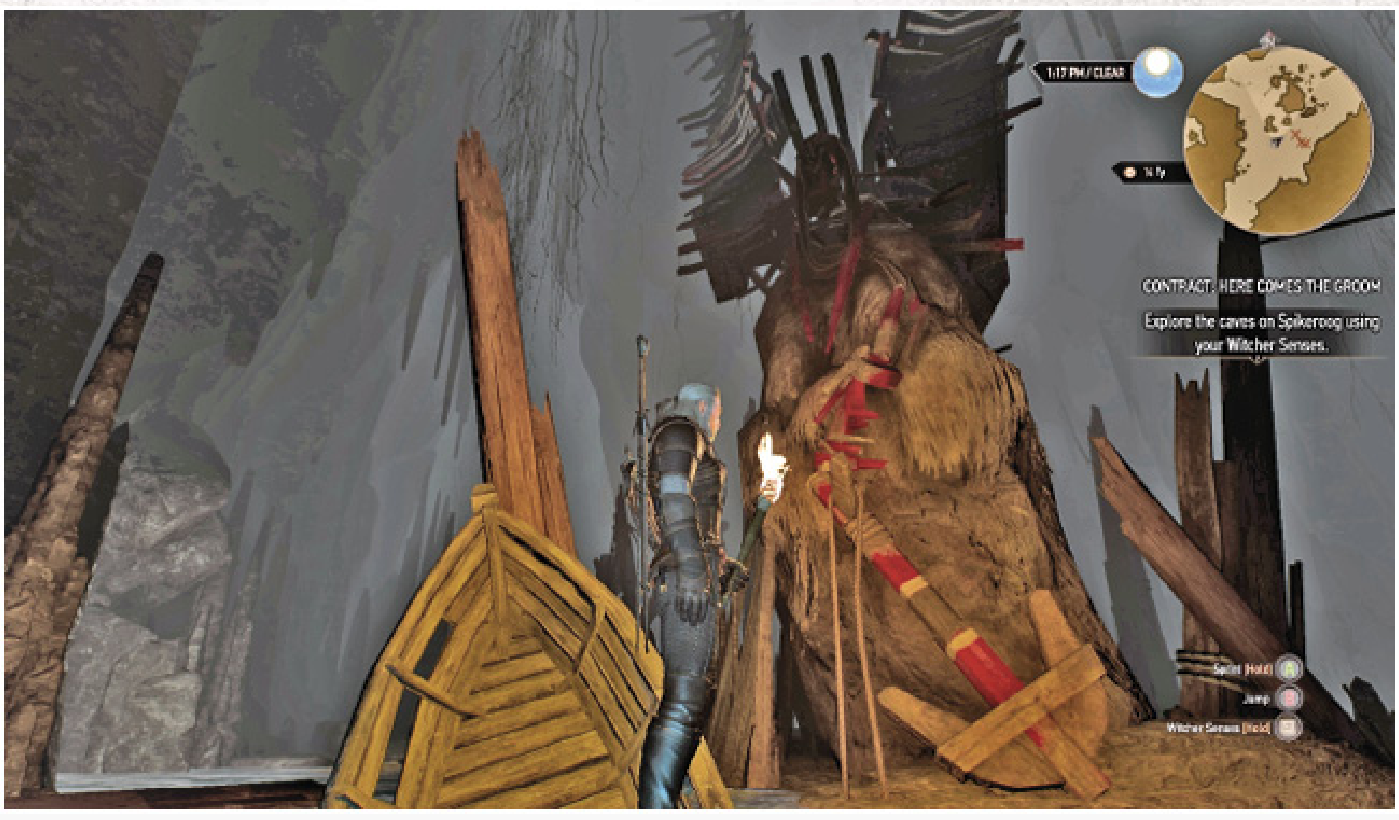
Locate the following:

- Odd scales on the altar.
- Siren tracks from a particularly large specimen.
- Scales showing an odd coloration for a siren.

Follow the tunnel, pausing only to climb the right-side ledges and leap to find a treasure chest if you wish. Back in the tunnel, turn the corner to face a great fissure. It seems the old cult of Melusine that used to congregate here prayed to an ancient ekhidna.

The trail in the giant fissure cavern picks up again, as you pass some floating barrels ripe for an Igni explosion. Detonate them if you wish, as three more drowners appear to thwart you. Follow the tracks to ledges on the south side of the chamber, leading to exterior cliffs. Crouch down and examine the corpse of a man lying face down. It is Nils. He's been dropped from a great height.

Something screeches overhead. Britt wasn't lying. Face the mighty Melusine in combat!



CONTRACT: HERE COMES THE GROOM
Explore the caves on Spikeroog using your Witcher Senses.

HAVE YOUR FORESEEN COMBAT WITH MELUSINE?

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this flying banshee. The ekhidna has the following vulnerabilities:

Grapeshot Bomb

Hybrid Oil

Igni

Aard

END: AFTER CLIPPING THE WINGS OF MELUSINE

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from Melusine.
- Collect your reward from Kevan.
- Tell Britt what happened to her betrothed.

After slicing sections of Melusine to satisfy Kevan's curiosity, journey back to him and explain what happened to Nils. He hopes you might tell Britt, which you can accept or refuse. Choose the former, and she is on the clifftop. Tell her, and she vows to be true to him for the rest of her days. She also hands over a reward for believing her (which you can accept or refuse). The quest then concludes.

Contract: Missing Miners

Serious Trouble For The Silver Ore Scavengers

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

DLC CONTRACT: MISSING MINERS

Converging Quests: Main Quest--Destination Skellige

LOCATIONS: Blandare (Ard Skellig), Miners' Camp, Wham-a-Wham's Cave

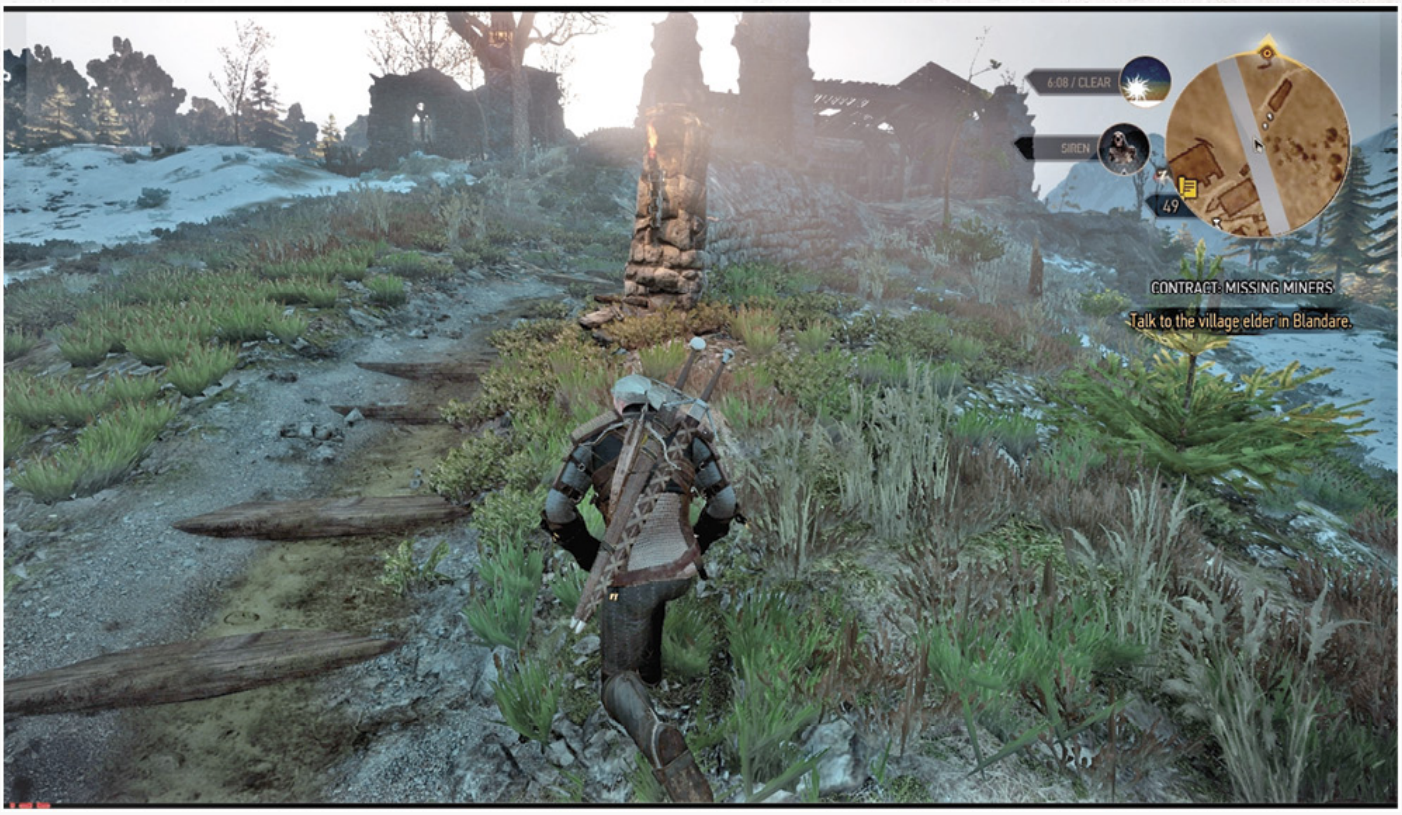
CHARACTERS: Gjarr, Wham-a-Wham (Rock Troll)

ENEMIES: White Wolves, Cyclops

Bestiary Reference: [[LINK]]

OBJECTIVES:

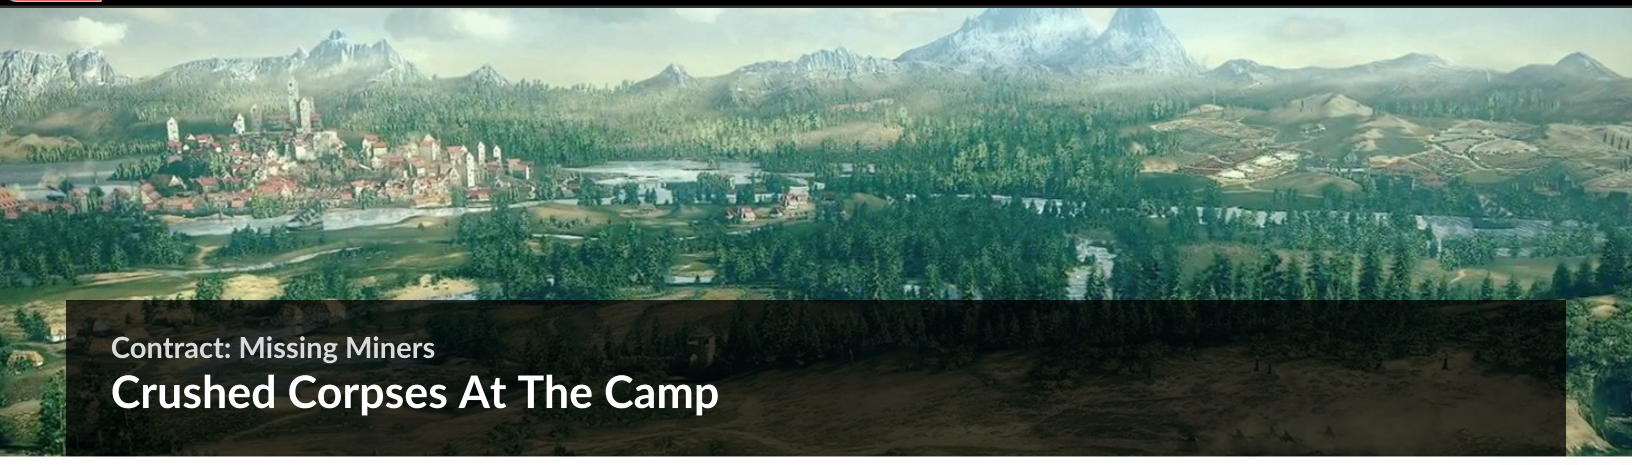
- Talk to the village elder in Blandare.
- Nearset Marker: Blandare (Ard Skellig)



QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during your exploration of the Isles of Skellige. Begin by checking out the notice board in the village of Blandare, on Ard Skellig, or by stumbling across the Miners' Camp.

Pinned to the Blandare notice board is a plea from the village elder. He reiterates a warning about some ore miners who went missing in the mountains, and a request for someone to determine what became of them. Locate the village elder, on the eastern side of Blandare at the top of the hill. Get a recap of his story and barter a price for your services if you wish, before agreeing to help and setting off for the Miners' Camp.



Contract: Missing Miners

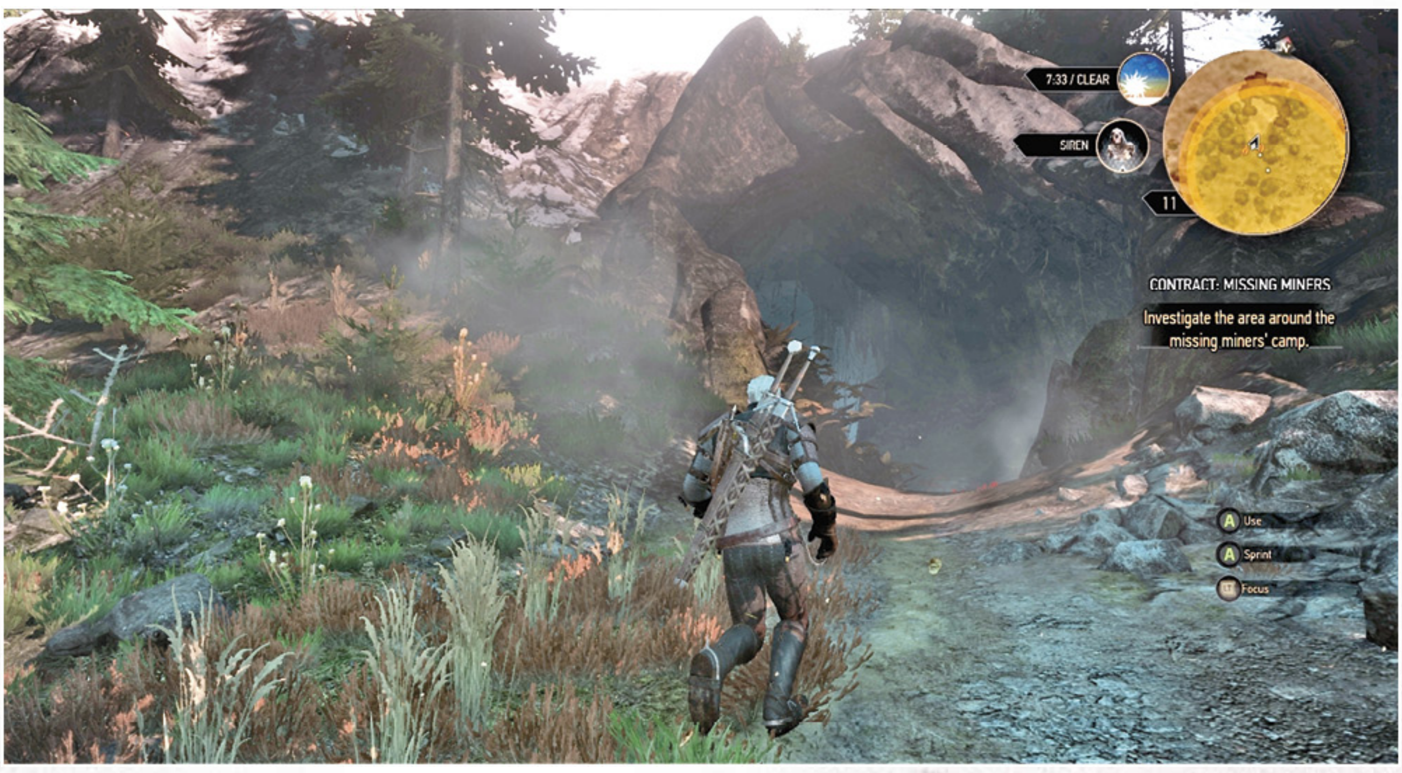
Crushed Corpses At The Camp

OBJECTIVE:

- Travel to the missing miners' camp and fully explore the surrounding area.

Ride across the low foothills of central Ard Skellig, heading roughly northwards (and a little west), using the main road and minor pathways to navigate to the Miners' Camp entrance. A pair of tents pitched on the side of the thoroughfare. Dismount and use your Witcher Senses to locate the following:

- A set of human footprints leading away from the campfire--they lead off along a narrow path into the woods to the northwest.
- Further along the path lies a corpse. Repel a pack of five white wolves, and sometimes the clodding might of a cyclops, before inspecting the corpse. Its rib cage has been smashed in by a blunt instrument.
- Nearby are crawl marks--someone shuffled through here with a broken leg.
- Continue along the path roughly westwards. Something large felled the sheared tree stumps near the pond.



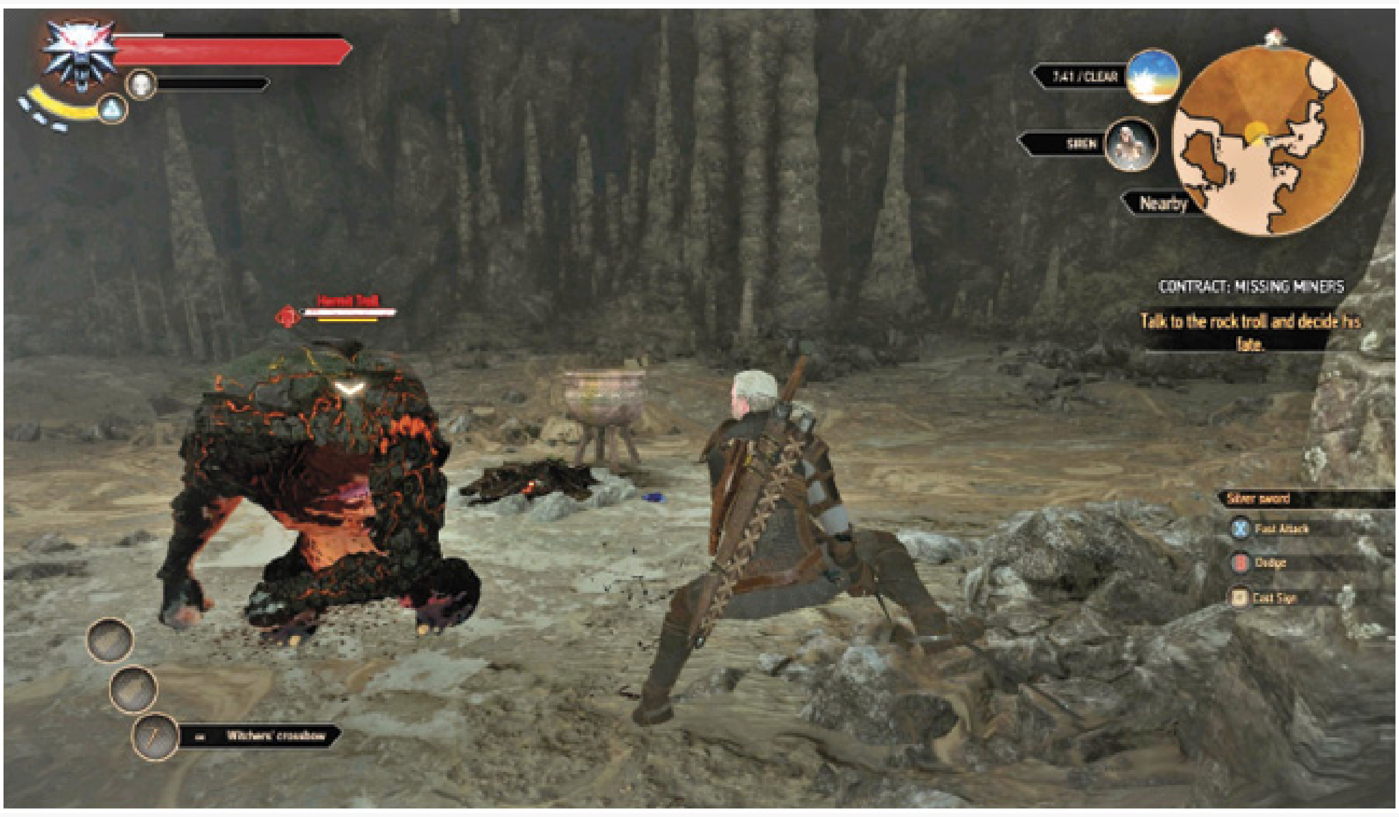
CONTRACT: MISSING MINERS

Investigate the area around the missing miners' camp.

Search the immediate area for a cave mouth with crushed human bones at its threshold. This is the work of a rock troll.

OBJECTIVE:

- Talk to the rock troll and decide his fate.



CONTRACT: MISSING MINERS

Talk to the rock troll and decide his fate.

Enter the cave, choosing the right fork in the tunnel to reach the troll's lair. A solitary hermit troll is sitting and gazing at its rudimentary cooking pot. It announces its name--Wham-a-Wham--and attacks. Defend rather than attack and the troll calms down slightly, allowing a conversation (if you can call it that). It appears the miners encroached on the troll's territory, were asked to leave, refused, and were crushed by Wham-a-Wham. You can:

- Explain, in rudimentary speak, that if this happens again, you'll kill the troll. You leave Wham-a-Wham in his cave without engaging in combat, but with a small reward (Crowns and silver ore).
- Threaten, in no uncertain terms, that the troll won't get away with this, and set about defeating this lumbering simpleton.

HOW TO SWISH-A-SWASH-A-SWUNK THAT WHAM-A-WHAM

Halt! The hardened skin and boulder-sized fists of Wham-a-Wham may cause difficulties in the combat department. So prepare for this fight fully and read up on rock troll combat in the Bestiary on page 744.

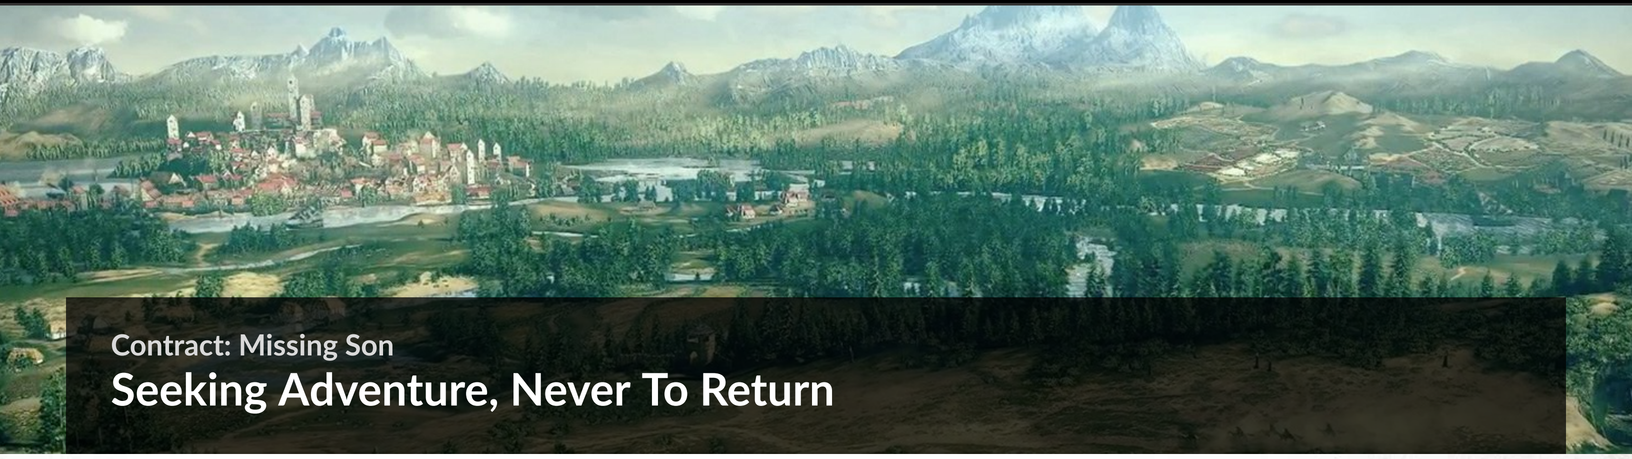
Contract: Missing Miners

End: What Kind O’ Monster Slayer Are Ye?

OBJECTIVE:

- Tell the village elder in Blandare what happened to the missing miners.OR
- Take a trophy.

After leaving Wham-a-Wham alone, or slaying the rock troll and gathering its head for a trophy, return to Blandare and inform Gjarr of your actions. Your reward (and Gjarr’s favorable perception of you) depends on what you decide to do. Let the troll live and receive a dressing down and fewer crowns. Kill the troll for a higher reward. (Alternately, you can also play dirty, leave the troll alone, get his reward, then attack him, and still get full reward from Gjarr.) Either way, the quest then concludes.



Contract: Missing Son

Seeking Adventure, Never To Return

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: MISSING SON

LOCATIONS: Rannvaig (Ard Skellig), Castle Ruins

CHARACTERS: Odhen, Olve

ENEMIES: Morvudd (Fiend)

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to Odhen of Rannvaig.
- Nearest Signpost: Rannvaig (Arg Skellig).

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible after you locate the Notice Board in the port village of Rannvaig (western Ard Skellig) and read the message from Odhen there. You can also find Olve's notice (a young adventurer) too, or simply stumble into Morvudd the Fiend on your travels. The optimal path is the former.

Morvudd (Fiend)

Odhen of Rannvaig hasn't seen his son Olve since he went off seeking adventure. He offers both payment and prayers to Freya if you'll help find out what happened to his boy. Travel to the shoreline longhouse and find Odhen moping outside. He explains the lad left with some no-good rogues from Faroe and they went exploring the ruins of the fortress east of here. Olve is wearing a yellow tunic, so you can't miss him.

Contract: Missing Son

Off-Guard, Then En Garde!

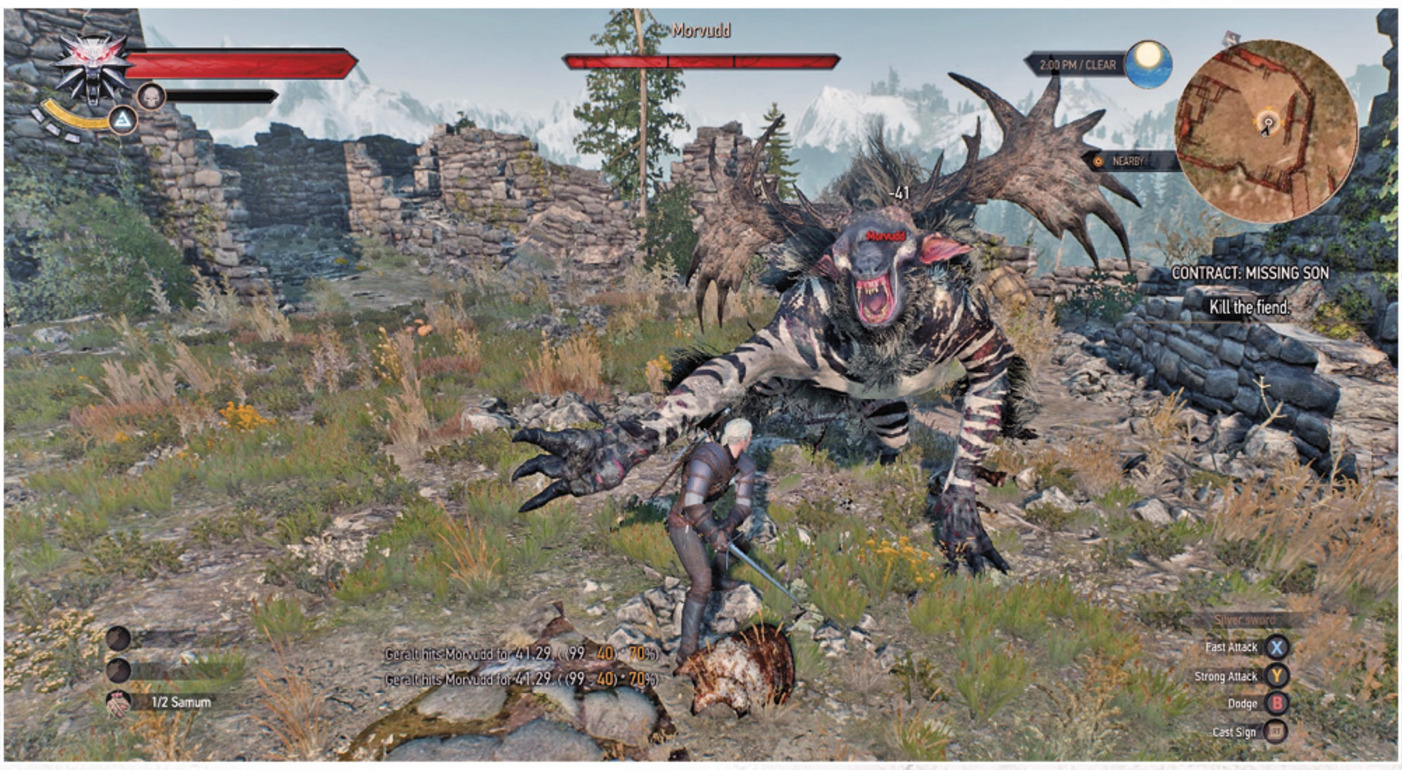
OBJECTIVES:

- Examine the castle ruins using your Witcher Senses.
- Kill the fiend.

Summon Roach, gallop uphill in a roughly southeasterly direction. Continue up the path through the wooded hillside, onto the heath, and across to the derelict castle.

Dismount and enter the overgrown courtyard surrounded by the ruined walls. Around one second later, you realize this is the easiest contract investigation you've ever done.

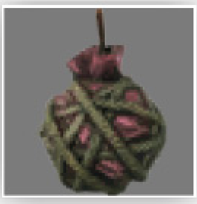
You stumble into the lair of a huge fiend. This is highly dangerous specimen named Morvudd, with unique markings and a frighteful temperament: Let battle commence!



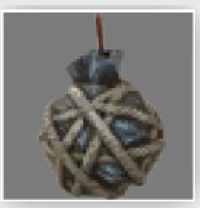
```
Geralt hits Morvudd for 41.29. ((99 - 40) * 70%)
Geralt hits Morvudd for 41.29. ((99 - 40) * 70%)
```

DON'T BE FIEND FOOD!

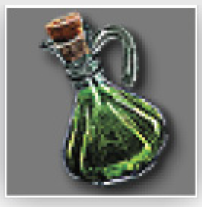
More haste and less speed! Before entering the castle threshold, it is most advisable to read up on the best ways to slay fiends, courtesy of the Bestiary chapter of this fair tome. The fiend has the following vulnerabilities:



Samum Bomb



Devil's Puffball Bomb



Relict Oil

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the fiend's lair using your Witcher Senses.
- Kill the fiend.

When the fiend is badly wounded, it spits and blinds you temporarily. When you can see again, it has vanished. On the castle grounds is a corpse—only the entrails were eaten. Find the huge hoof prints to gather that the fiend moved southward. Follow the tracks across the stone bridge and the river to the east. Search the ruined settlement where the beast's nest is—it rears up and attacks again. This time you need to finish it off! Afterwards, you can check the corpse with the yellow tunic the fiend was storing for later. Alas, it is Olve.

END: AFTER MORVUDD'S MASSACRE

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the fiend.
- Collect your reward.

Once the mighty Morvudd topples to the ground, cut the fiend up into two sets of ingredients and a trophy head to proudly display on Roach's saddle. Now ride back to Odhen, with mixed news regarding his son (dead), and the fiend you slew (also dead), gather your reward, and conclude this quest.

Solving A Drowner Problem With A Silver Sword

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CONTRACT: MUIRE D'YAEBLEN

Recommended Item: Formula: Drowner Pheromones

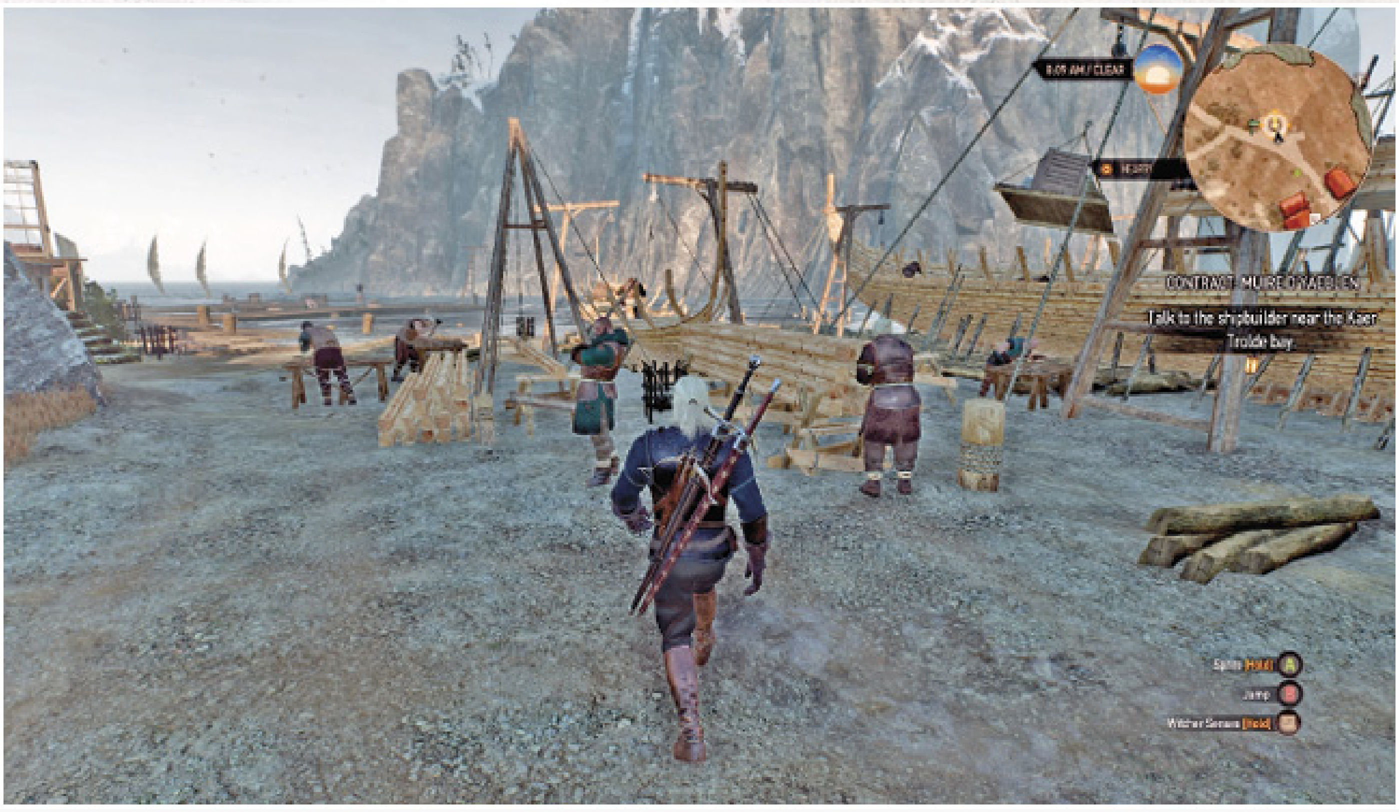
Abaya (Water Hag)

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the shipbuilder near the Kaer Trolde bay.
- Nearest Signpost: Kaer Trolde Harbor.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is available at the Notice Board close to the wharf of Kaer Trolde Harbor in Ard Skellig. Read the notice to commence this quest.



CONTRACT: MUIRE D'YAEBLEN
Talk to the shipbuilder near the Kaer Trolde bay

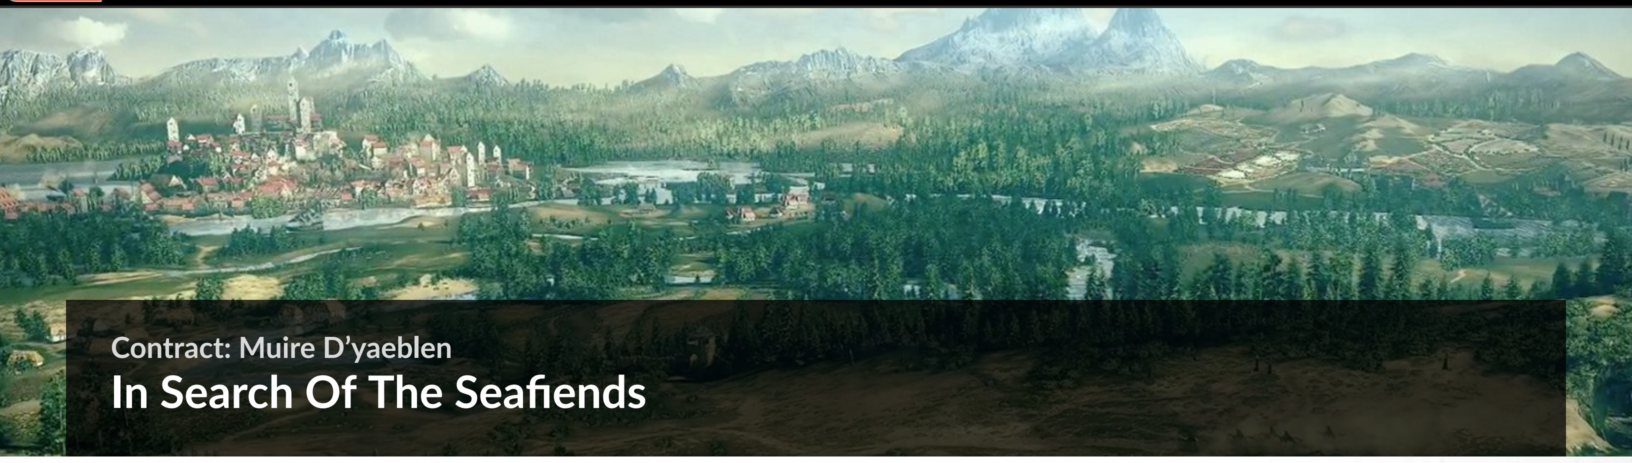
Bjorg the master boatbuilder has a task for you. According to a notice, the muire d'yaeblen (or "drowners") in Kaer Trolde bay are multiplying and have grown so fierce, they are encroaching on travellers leaving the harbor. Speak to Bjorn by the boatyard, and he explains the drowners are meaner than those on the Continent. Rurik (Bjorn's apprentice) and Tove (widow of a man killed by drowners) have seen the ferociousness first-hand. Barter a price for your services if you wish, then begin to search or witnesses.

OBJECTIVE:

- (Optional) Talk to witnesses of the drowners' attack.

Close to Bjorg is Rurik the boatwright's apprentice. He tells you of the time him and his cousin were gathering crab traps off the Kjerag Cliffs, and the dreaded muire d'yaeblen flipped over his boat and drowned his companion.

Along the dockside is Tove, a Skellige woman tending to a tanning rack. After her son was lost, her husband donned his coat and went looking for the boy along the cliffs. He never came home, and was found with deep claw marks all over his corpse.



Contract: Muire D'yaeblen

In Search Of The Seafiends

OBJECTIVE:

- Investigate the place where the drowners were seen using your Witcher Senses.

There are two coastal locations that appear on your World Map, both part of the Kjerag Cliffs that protrude on Ard Skellig's western side. Study them carefully and rush to the nearer one.

The nearer one is due west of Kaer Trolde, and easily accessible if you travel the path uphill. You may also wish to make the journey by boat. When you reach a small rocky harbor, there is a huge swarm of drowned dad to contend with (or flee from). Afterwards, the stench of the drowners is palpable, and can be followed to the second location.

The second location is southward, farther down the coast. Even though you can reach the location by land, it is easier to take a boat or swim there. When you arrive, there is little but the pounding of waves on the rocks. The stench cloud hits the water, forcing you to dive down in a roughly easterly direction. Swim into a subterranean cave entrance, and follow a trail of footprints using your Witcher Senses. Surface shortly afterward in a long and tight tunnel.

OBJECTIVE:

- Investigate the drowners' lair using your Witcher Senses.

The delightful odor of slime and rotting flesh fills your nostrils. Head deeper into the tunnel, and inspect a junction chamber with a left or right tunnel to head down. Locate the following:

- Right tunnel: Just inside the entrance is a pelvis, scratched up with long, wide claw marks.
- Right tunnel: Some bloated and scattered bodies litter the rest of the tunnel. This tunnel leads back outside, so return to the other tunnel area.
- Left tunnel: A cavern with six drowned dead to sever in a whirl of bloody blades. Watch the poison cloud when you're fighting. Use Igni or bombs to light it and severely damage the drowners shrouded in it.
- Left tunnel: A side tunnel slope to the east has an animal carcass and scattered bodies.

Enter the chamber of broken boats. Corpses litter the area, but some are untouched. They appear to be saved for later, which is odd for a drowner. One of the dead has bruises on his neck and a crushed larynx. It seems you aren't dealing with a drower here as much as a water hag.

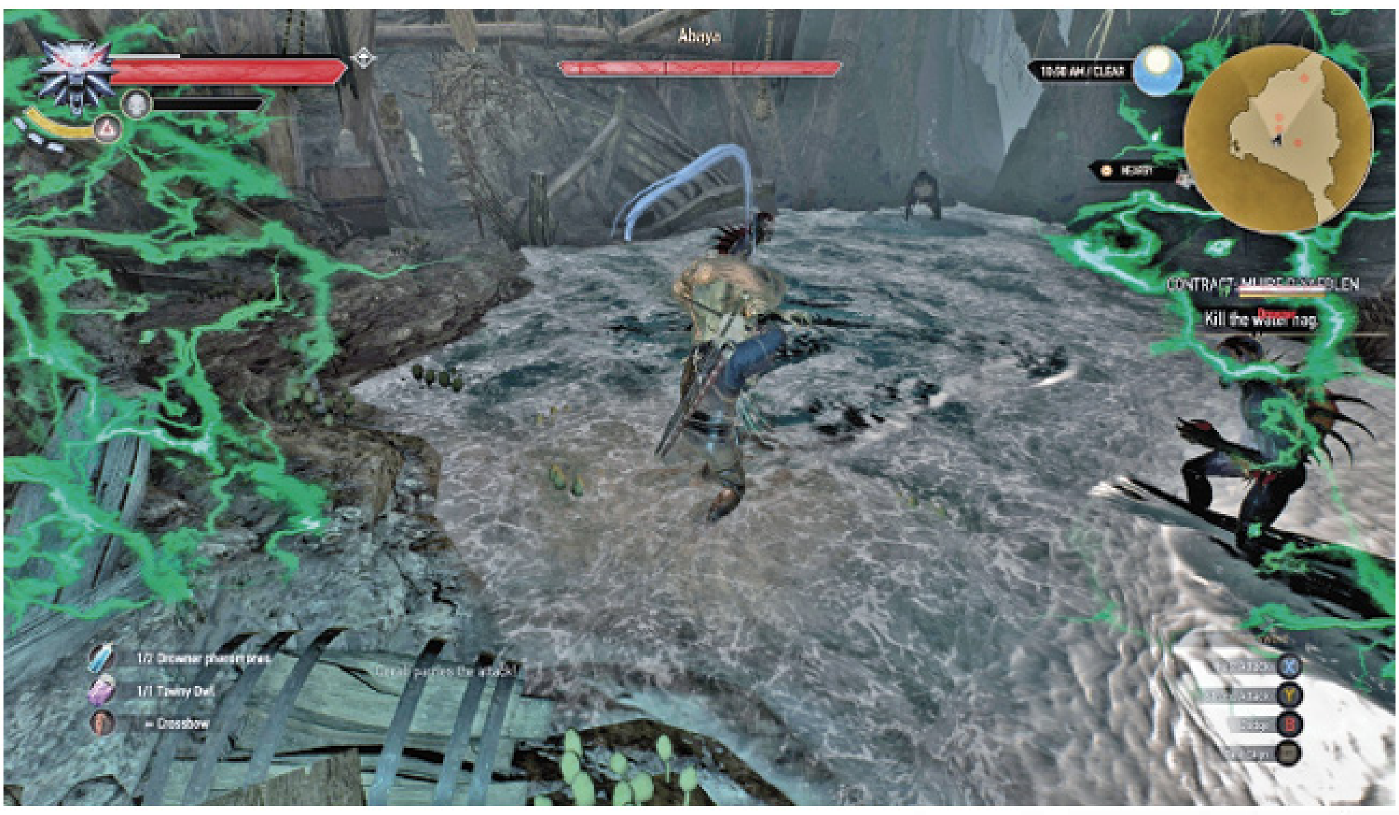
Contract: Muire D'yaeblen

Perfume For The Lady

OBJECTIVE:

- Prepare a potion using drowner pheromones and use it to hide your scent.

The hideous hag in these parts won't reveal herself if you don't camouflage your scent, so prepare a potion accordingly. You automatically obtain the formulae for drowner pheromones. Combine the following ingredients with your alchemy knowledge to concoct this potion:



Ingredient	Amount
Puffball	(1)
Dwarven Spirit	(1)
Drowner Brain	(1)
Sewant Mushrooms	(1)

OBJECTIVE:

- Hide in the water hag's lair and wait for the monster to return.

GAWTHERING INGREDIENTS

Do you want to know more about where to find these ingredients, or the formula? The puffball and sewant mushrooms grow in this cave. The drowner brain is obviously pulled from the drowners you've slain. Buy some dwarven spirit from Kaer Morhen (The New Port Inn, for example). You can also find these items in this cave, in case you're unprepared.

Items: Magic Item: Drowner Pheromones

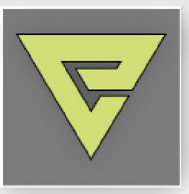
Afterward, select the completed potion from the Alchemy menu, and place it in the Potions slot on your person. Head back into the chamber of broken boats, and the flabby fiend soon appears. Prepare for combat with Abaya the water hag and up to six drowned dead!

THERE'S MORE THAN MUIRE D'YAEBLEN DOWN HERE!

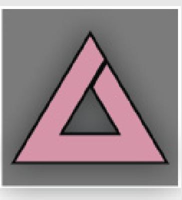
Aside from the alchemy potion you need to face Abaya the watery bint, consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics. The water hag has the following vulnerabilities:

Northern Wind Bomb

Necrophage Oil



Quen



Igni

END: NO MUIRE PROBLEMS

OBJECTIVE:

- Take a trophy from the water hag.
- Collect your reward from the shipbuilder.

When the grotesque mess of matted hair and lumpy body parts falls into the fetid water, brandish a knife and cut her head off as a trophy. Then head to the tunnel fork, bear left (east) and exit back into the ocean. Swim to the shore or your boat, return to Kaer Trolde Harbor, and obtain your reward from Bjorg as the quest concludes.

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk about the contract with Jorund from Arinbjorn.
- Nearest Signpost: Arinbjorn.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This quest is accessible after you find the Notice Board by the longhouse in northwest Arinbjorn (Ard Skellig).

CONTRACT: THE PHANTOM OF ELDBERG
Talk about the contract with Jorund from Arinbjorn.

Apparently, if a note marked "The Phantom of Eldberg" is to be believed, a dreaded wraith has sprung up on the isle of Eldberg, covering the rugged island in a thick blanket of fog and snuffing the light from the lighthouse. Jorund of Arinbjorn will pay from his own gold if this spirit is driven off. Enter the longhouse next to the Notice Board, and you're stopped by two inhospitable fellows (Kori and Kraki) who don't like foreigners. Before the situation boils over, an older man steps in shoos them away. This is Jorund, son of Sigvald.

Over mead and ale, barter a price for your services if you wish, then agree to investigate the isle.

OBJECTIVE:

- Investigate the isle of Eldberg and find Mikkjal's lighthouse.

It is a rough trek north toward the three small masses of rock that make up Eldberg Isle. They are connected by ruined bridges, and the going is slow if you venture from the road. Navigate past flapping ekhidra foes and the rotting wreckage of longships run aground. Look for the remains of a bridge to climb up, then onto the remains of a road. Run northward, jumping any gaps to you need to. Navigate onto the second island, facing down any drowned dead and dagr you wish, before reaching the most northern isle of all. Or, you can sail here, which is a little easier.

This isn't your average mist. Slow down a little, relying more on your minimap as you follow the winding path past a bilge hag attack and up onto the heath. Amid the fog are faint green lights hanging from the ethereal rags of wraiths. Face two of them, before you reach a lonely longhouse. The residence of Mikkjal the keeper. Begin a search using your Witcher Senses. Locate the following:

- A corpse by the drystone wall that almost managed to find cover.
- The front door of the longhouse. Knock on it, and you enter, discovering that Mikkjal is still alive.

Mikkjal explains that the wraiths and fog appeared from nowhere. One of the wraiths knew him by name and seemed to control the mists. Obtain the key from Mikkjal. Optionally search the lighthouse to find a letter proving Mikkjal was responsible for extinguishing the lighthouse, and caused the ships to wreck.

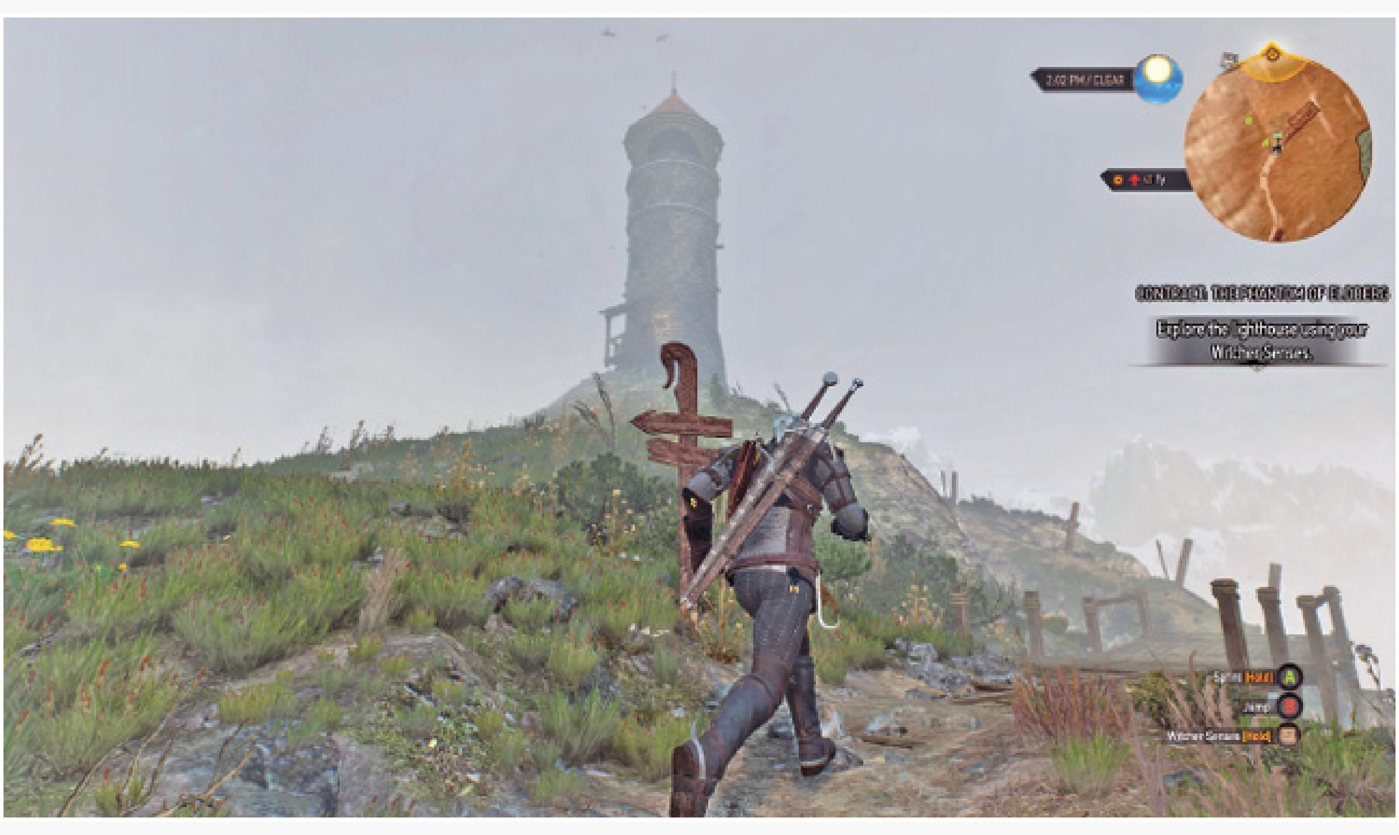
Items: Quest Item: Lighthouse Key

OBJECTIVES:

- Find out how to lift the curse.
- Talk to Mikkjal about the penitent.

Venture back out into the mist and follow the precarious path north. Slow down to tackle two wraiths, since running from them may cause you to be overwhelmed by the four harpies along the path. Slay these feathered foes, and two more wraiths before the mist clears and you reach the base of the lighthouse. Locate the following using your Witcher Senses:

- A set of glyphs daubed onto the lighthouse tower. They are symbols of bonding.



2:02 PM / CLEAR
CONTRACT: THE PHANTOM OF ELDBERG
Explore the lighthouse using your Witcher Senses.

It is a curse that keeps the specters here. The spirit in question hasn't appeared to you, and you couldn't kill it in the mists anyway. So head back down to the lone longhouse and tell Mikkjal that Penitent haunts this island. The only way to limit its power is to illuminate the lighthouse. But Mikkjal is no warrior, he must be guarded while he sets the fire.

OBJECTIVES:

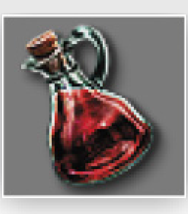
- Defend Mikkjal from the penitent until he lights the lighthouse brazier.
- Kill the Penitent.

You arrive at the base of the lighthouse, and leave Mikkjal to run to the tower while you waylay the penitent leering out of the mists. A named wraith (Penitent) begins its assault on you. You can do little but block these attacks. During the fight it disappears, summoning some minion wraiths (once before the lighthouse is lit, then once afterwards). However, a few moments later Mikkjal's oil does the trick, the lighthouse is ablaze, and the mist lifts. Penitent becomes vulnerable to your weapons. Slay this specter!

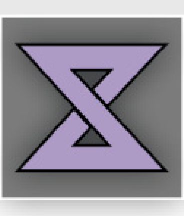
HOW TO DISPEL CURSED SPECTERS

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against this foul specter. Once you're able to actually harm it, the Penitent wraith has the following vulnerabilities:

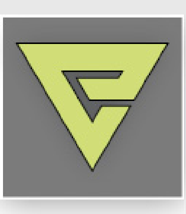
Moon Dust Bomb



Specter Oil



Yrden



Quen

END: STRANGER IN A STRANGE LAND

OBJECTIVE:

- Take a trophy from the penitent.
- Collect your reward from Jorund.

Penitent is dismissed. After speaking to Mikkjal (ordering him to leave the island if you knew he was at fault), head south back to the mainland, and seek out Jorund in Arinbjorn.

You inform him of your triumph and are given a just reward. However, as you leave, you are met by one of the scallywags that annoyed you in this longhouse just before your first meeting with Jorund. This ends in a fight, and Secondary Quest: Stranger in a Strange Land (see page 419) begins automatically.

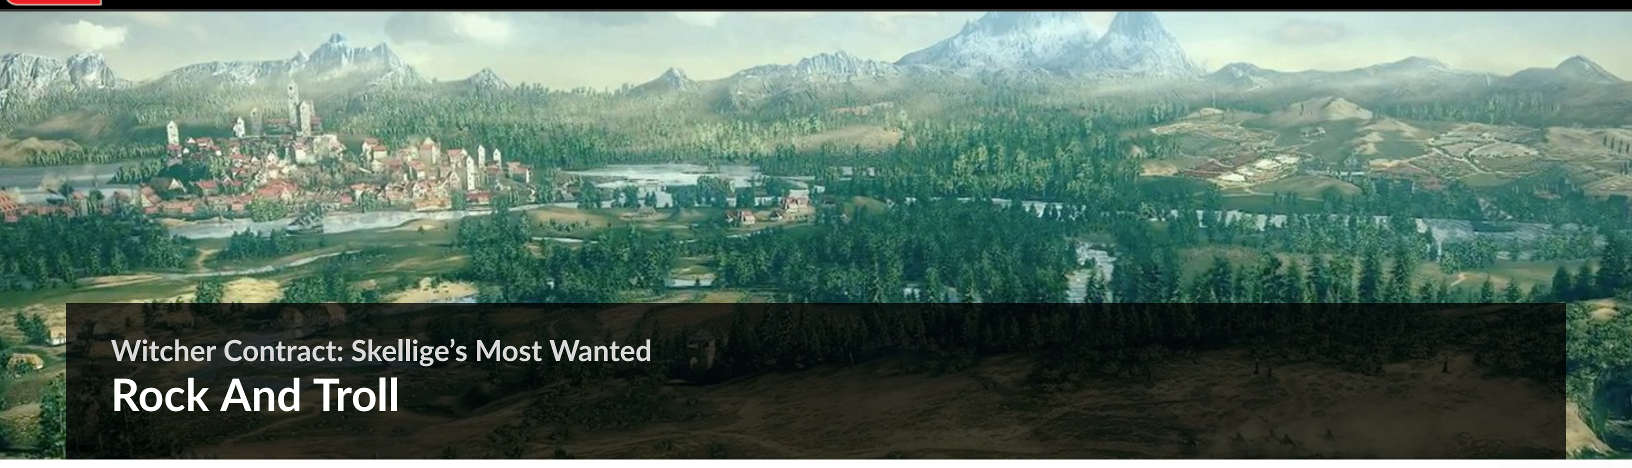
QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is available during your exploration of the Isles of Skellige, once the DLC is installed. Begin by checking out the Notice Board in the village of Fyresdal, in southern Ard Skellig.

There’s some required reading at the Notice Board in Fyresdal, a note with a fancy seal pinned to the board is entitled “Witcher Needed!” The note is brief, and the writer of the note is busy gabbing to the townsfolk about a beast that attacked him and his comrade. Strangely, he refuses help from the town’s guards. You can optionally ask why he doesn’t want the help of the locals, who he is, and then what this is all about. Oddly, his story about being a trader from Faroe seems to be a little frayed around the edges. He mispronounces clan names and monsters (Nekkuks?), but he’s happy to pay 280 crowns (more if you barter). Agree, and head out towards the site of the attack.



Witcher Contract: Skellige's Most Wanted

Rock And Troll

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the site of the monsters' attack.
- Search the attack site using your Witcher Senses.

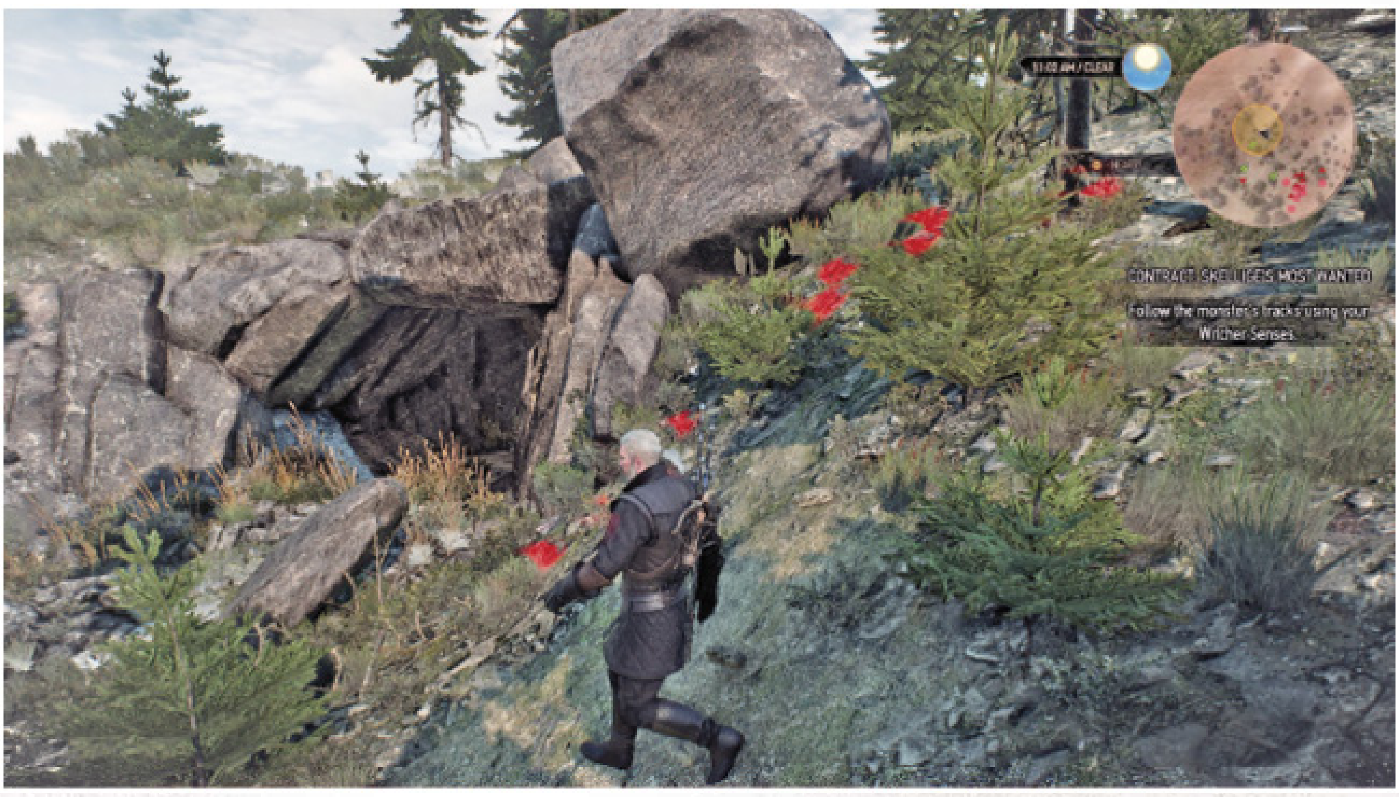
It doesn't take long to reach the strewn remains of a wagon, horse, and a merchant along the main thoroughfare north of Fyresdal. Use your Witcher Senses to ascertain what happened here:

- The old horse has gashes in its flanks, but lockjaw too.
- The fellow merchant from Faroe appears to have died from old age, not the claws of a Nekker.

Once you've studied both bodies, movement at the top of the rocky hill above you catches your eye. You narrowly escape being crushed by an enormous boulder that barely misses you! That was no accident!

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the place where the boulder started.
- Follow the monster's tracks using your Witcher Senses.



11:08 AM / CLEAR
CONTRACT: SKELLIGE'S MOST WANTED
Follow the monster's tracks using your Witcher Senses.

Use your Witcher Senses to check the rocky slope as you climb the snowy ground; there's a fresh furrow where the boulder rolled, and once at the top, the location where the boulder started its descent. You also notice tracks leading away from the edge of the hill.

These are clear Nekker tracks. Follow them roughly southeast towards the copse of pine trees, and down to a cave entrance. Once you enter the cave, a second boulder is cunningly dropped in behind you, trapping you inside!

CONTRACT: SKELLIGE'S MOST WANTED
Go to the conspirators' meeting spot at night.

The only way is onward, into the cave which opens up into an uneven chamber where scuttling Endriaga must be vanquished. Endriaga Workers, and even a bloated Arachas are lurking here, waiting to devour you. Don't give them the satisfaction. After the battle, find the continuation of the tunnel heading up and eastward.

Continue to follow the tracks, using your Witcher Senses to uncover something strange:

- A Nekker's foot hollowed out like a boot!
- Nearby is a human foot; like that of a child's.

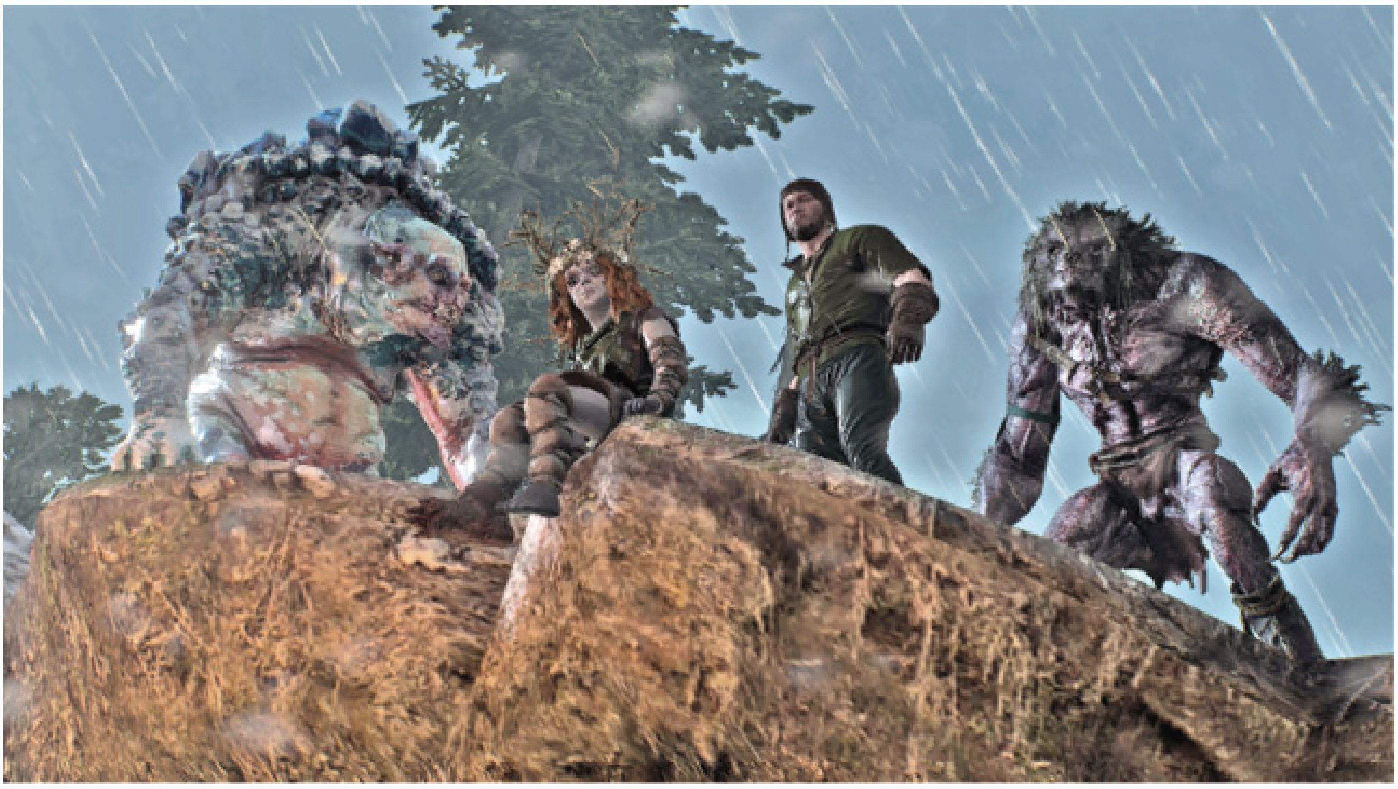
The tunnel ends at the remains of an old fortress staircase. Clamber into the ruins and head upward. The trail ends at the remains of an old jail. Strange then, that the walls are daubed in child-like scrawlings, clumsy wall art charting the demise of a Witcher that looks a lot like you! Further investigation shows the disgusting remains of a Nekker on a table, torn apart by something huge. Clearly, a group of entities wants you dead. But who are these conspirators? Exit the door to the east, leading outside.

Witcher Contract: Skellige's Most Wanted

A Merciful Release

OBJECTIVE:

- Go to the conspirators' meeting spot at night.



The group of oddballs currently trying to have you killed are likely to meet under cover of darkness, at a small Skellige barrow northeast of your current position. Engage a band of Nekkers as you make your way up the slope, across the snow to the location itself. Then sit and Meditate, or wait a while until night falls. The four protagonists appear on the cliff above you.

You recognize Uggo, whose shape-shifting reveals him to be a Doppler. With him is a rock-throwing troll referring to himself as Poldy. Sitting on the cliff is a mischievous Godling, next to Uggo. After an initial conversation (answer as you wish) a hairy Werewolf appears, with a snarl and a vicious temperament to match. He mentions one like you slaying his betrothed Addalia. At this point, you can interject with the following:

- "I've helped monsters on many occasions." This leads to End #1.
- The other two answers (threatening them or wishing to go your separate ways) leads to End #2.

Witcher Contract: Skellige's Most Wanted

End #1: Geralt Of Rivia: Monster Mediator Of Kaer Morhen

OBJECTIVE:

- Defeat the werewolf.

If you're attempting a more diplomatic end to this confrontation, you can reveal your past interactions with monsters, and prove you've been compassionate. Depending on which Contracts and other quests you have completed, you can present the following evidence to the Werewolf about your tendencies to spare the lives of non-humans:

- Salma Lilith: During Contract: Deadly Delights, if you let Salma Lilith go free (even though you knew she killed some guardsmen), you can mention this.
- Wham-a-Wham: If you completed Contract: Missing Miners and spared the troll that killed the miners, you can add this to your deeds.
- Trolls living near Kaer Morhen: During Main Quest: The Final Trial, if you stopped Lambert from harming the trolls, add this to the list.
- The Doppler in Novigrad: If you attempted Contract: An Elusive Thief, and forwent the bounty in return for letting the Doppler go, mention this.
- A deal with Fugas: During Secondary Quest: A Greedy God, if you let the sylvan live, your list of monster-saving grows ever-larger.
- Helping a Godling: During Main Quest: Novigrad Dreaming, if you helped Sarah stay in her Novigrad home, you make mention of this (as well as helping Johnny, which you had to do).

In order to win the majority of these four foes over, you must have saved at least two of the monsters listed previously. You can also change your mind mid-way through this explanation, and change to End #2. Assuming you keep your cool, only the werewolf climbs down from his perch. Slay him.

Afterward, the Godling rewards you for keeping your word, even after the "lost cause" in their troupe attacked you. Take the following as this quest concludes. There is no other reward (as "Uggo" was the Doppler).

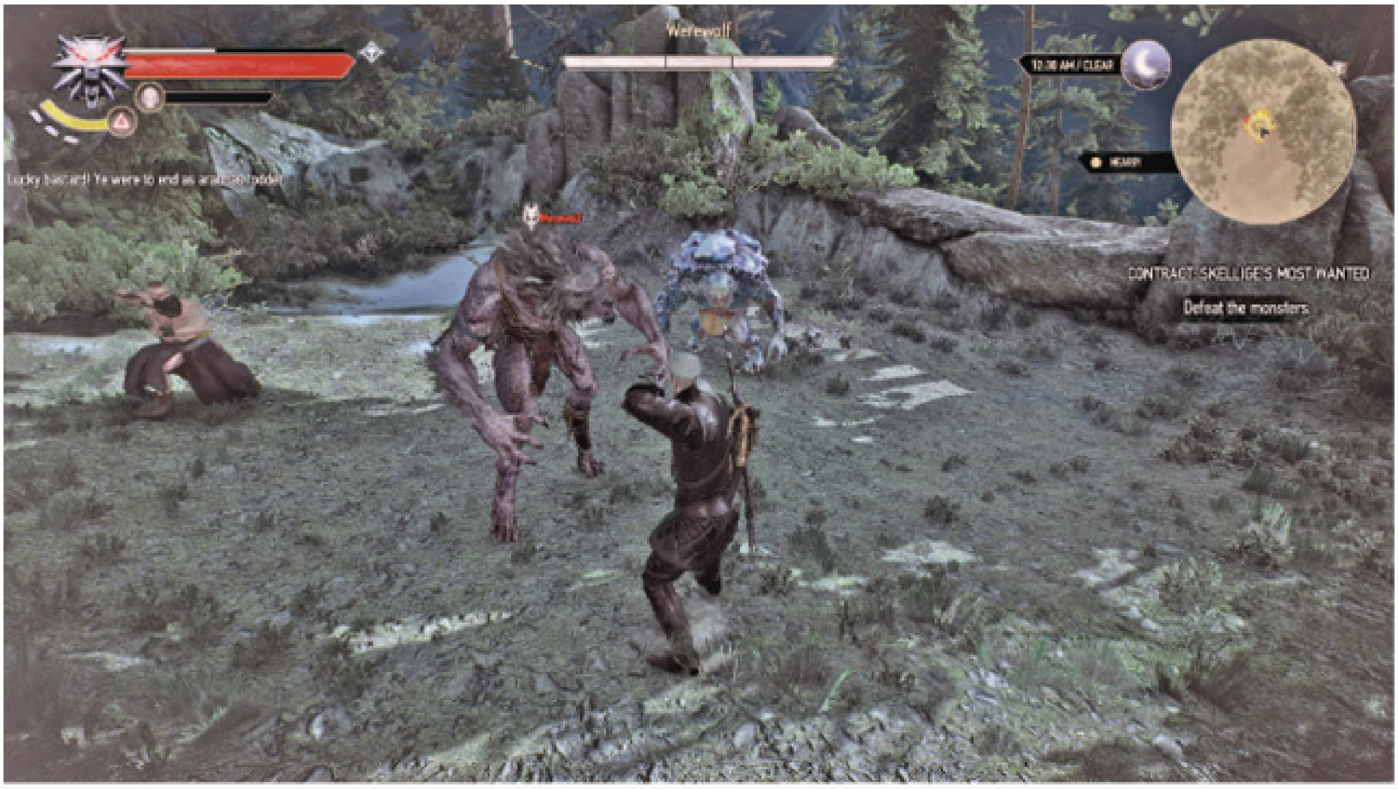
Items: Nekker Hide Boots

Witcher Contract: Skellige's Most Wanted

End #2: Geralt Of Rivia: Butcher Of Blaviken

OBJECTIVE:

- Defeat the monsters.



The second option, to threaten the group or mention you'll have to defend yourself, is met with a mixture of fear (the Godling flees), apprehension (the Doppler seems concerned the three of them might only just defeat you), and derision (the werewolf is proved correct). Aside from the battle being much trickier, you receive fewer XP, and no prize other than loot from the corpses. Once the Ice Troll, Doppler (who you should treat like a bandit), and Werewolf are killed, the quest concludes. There is no other reward (as "Uggo" was the Doppler you skewered).

GETTING OUT OF A HAIRY SITUATION

A moment of your time! Whether you're contemplating a duel with a werewolf, or a more problematic massacre of three foes in this grassy arena, be sure to read this guide's bestiary for further information on defeating Dopplers (page 746), Ice Trolls (page 744), and Werewolves (page 722).

LOCATIONS: Larvik (Hindarsfjall), Hagumban's Nekker Nest

ENEMIES: Nekkers, Hagumban (Nekker Warrior)

OBJECTIVES:

- Talk to the village elder in Larvik.

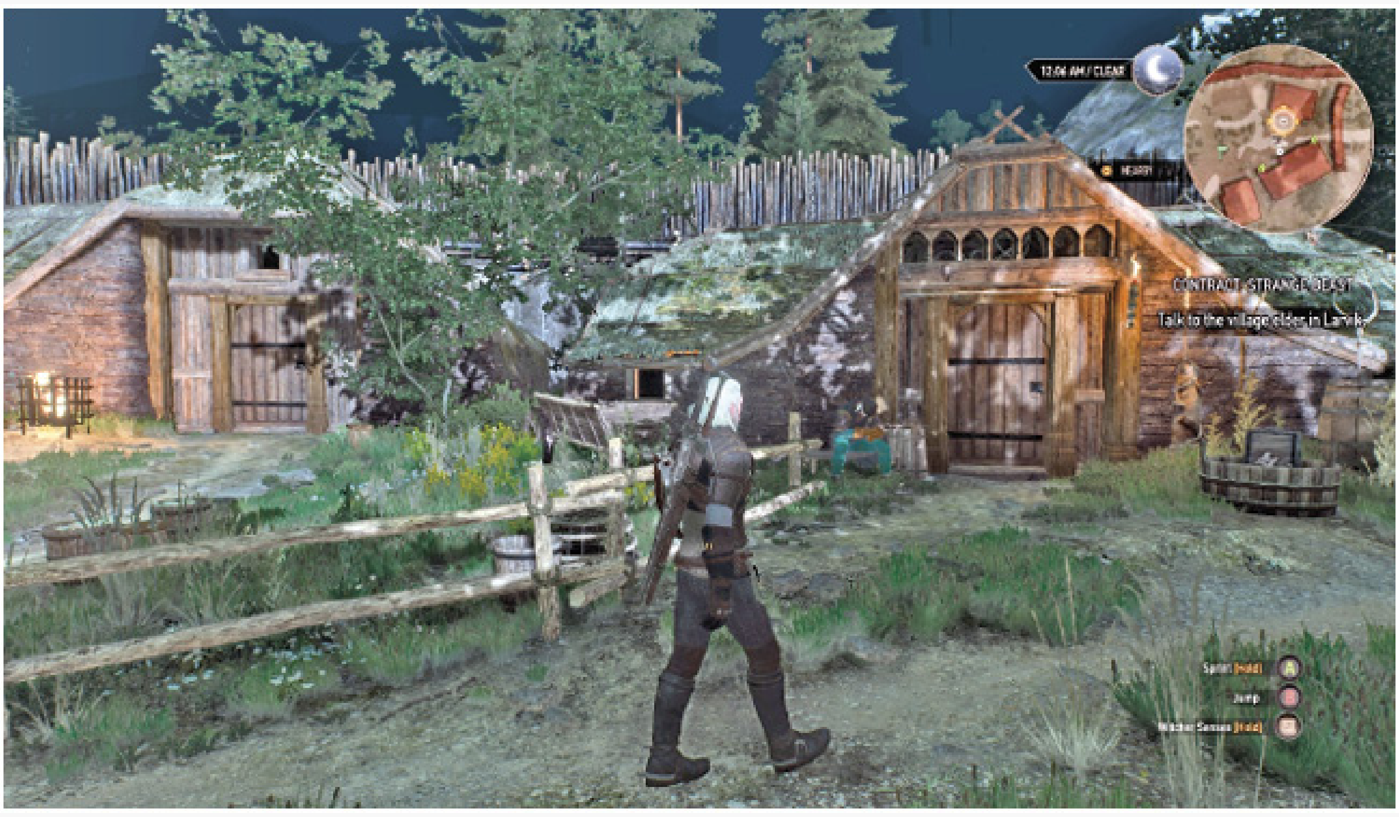
- Nearest Signpost: Larvik (Hindarsfjall).

QUESTING DECISIONS

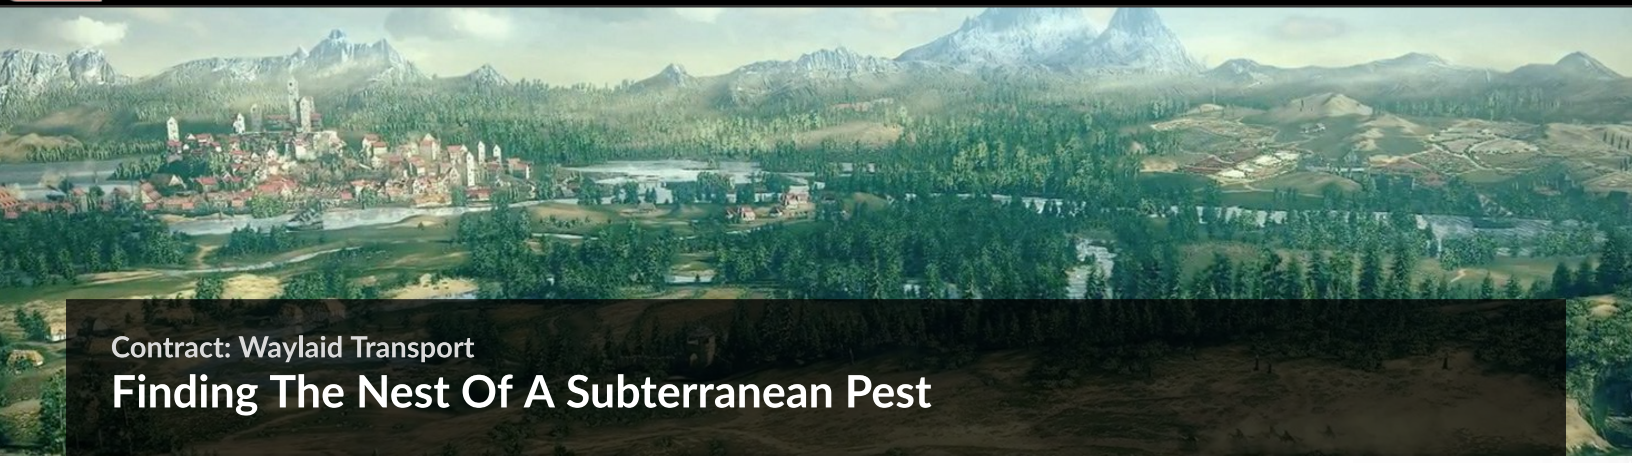
This quest is accessible during your exploration of the Isles of Skellige. Journey to the isle of Hindarsfjall, and find the Notice Board in the port village of Larvik. Or investigate the cave first. The optimal path is the former, and shown below.

Hagumban (Nekker Warrior)

A notice marked "Monster on the High Road" piques your interest on the Larvik Notice Board. It calls for a hero. Someone to stand up to the ghastly creature that has been attacking folk on the main road to Larvik. Thorleif, son of Bear Haugs, has set aside a reward for such a fellow. He's found sitting outside his longhouse on the southwestern side of the village. Pry for further information about the creature, and he mentions that Sverre mustered a crew, but only four came back. Barter a price for your services if you wish, before agreeing to the task, and asking for the location of the four survivors.



Travel to the northern part of the village, to a longhouse close to a tree where Sverre is standing with a fellow warrior. They are discussing the enemies who ambushed them—a tactic they weren't sure such base creatures were capable of. Ask Sverre about the attack. You receive a description of the foes, and where the attack took place.



Contract: Waylaid Transport

Finding The Nest Of A Subterranean Pest

OBJECTIVES:

- Find the ambush site.
- Use your Witcher Senses to investigate the ambush site.
- Follow the tracks.

Set off on foot or by horse, travelling northwest along the main road from Larvik to Lofoten. It isn't long before you reach the remains of a cart on a grassy ditch, near the hillside barrows. Utilize your Witcher Senses, and explore the immediate area.

Locate the following:

- The remains of a corpse near the wagon. The victim torn to pieces.
- Across the road are pieces of a victim. The beast must have dragged the shredded body into the woods.
- Adjacent are nekker tracks—looks like a big one. A rare occurrence for this creature.

Follow the tracks roughly northeast. It is only a few steps up a hill to reach a cave mouth—the likely spot for the nekkers' nest.

OBJECTIVES:

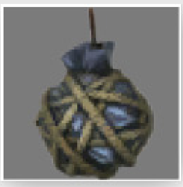
- Explore the cave.
- Kill the nekkers in the nest to provoke their pack leader.
- Kill the pack leader.

Drop down into the cave. The tunnel is filled with poison, so you are wise to watch your air supply while holding your breath before you explore. Slay the single nekker at the small pillar room before continuing eastwards down the tunnel. Dispatch two more nekkers at a second pillar room. This toxin seems to protect their nest, but disperses as you reach a ledge overlooking the main nest itself.

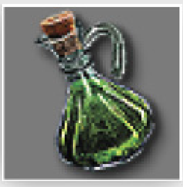
Drop down into the nest and slowly edge forward until four nekkers appear. Immediately slice them up, which angers the pack leader enough for him to make an appearance. This evolved, sentient nekker warrior named Hagumban is no push-over. Prepare for combat, and beware of up to three additional waves of nekkers appearing, summoned by their leader, as combat continues.

ANNIHILATING A NEKKER NEST

Consult the Bestiary for better battle tactics against these waves of homunculi. The nekker warrior has the following vulnerabilities:



Northern Wind Bomb



Oaroid Oil

END: BACK TO LARVIK WITH HAGUMBAN'S HEAD

OBJECTIVES:

- Take a trophy from the nekker warrior.
- Collect your reward.

With Hagumban dead, search his still-twitching corpse for a couple of ingredients, and gather his head to tastefully display on your horse. Proudly ride back into Larvik, and speak with Thorleif about your victory. He's duly impressed, rewards you with crowns, and the quest concludes.

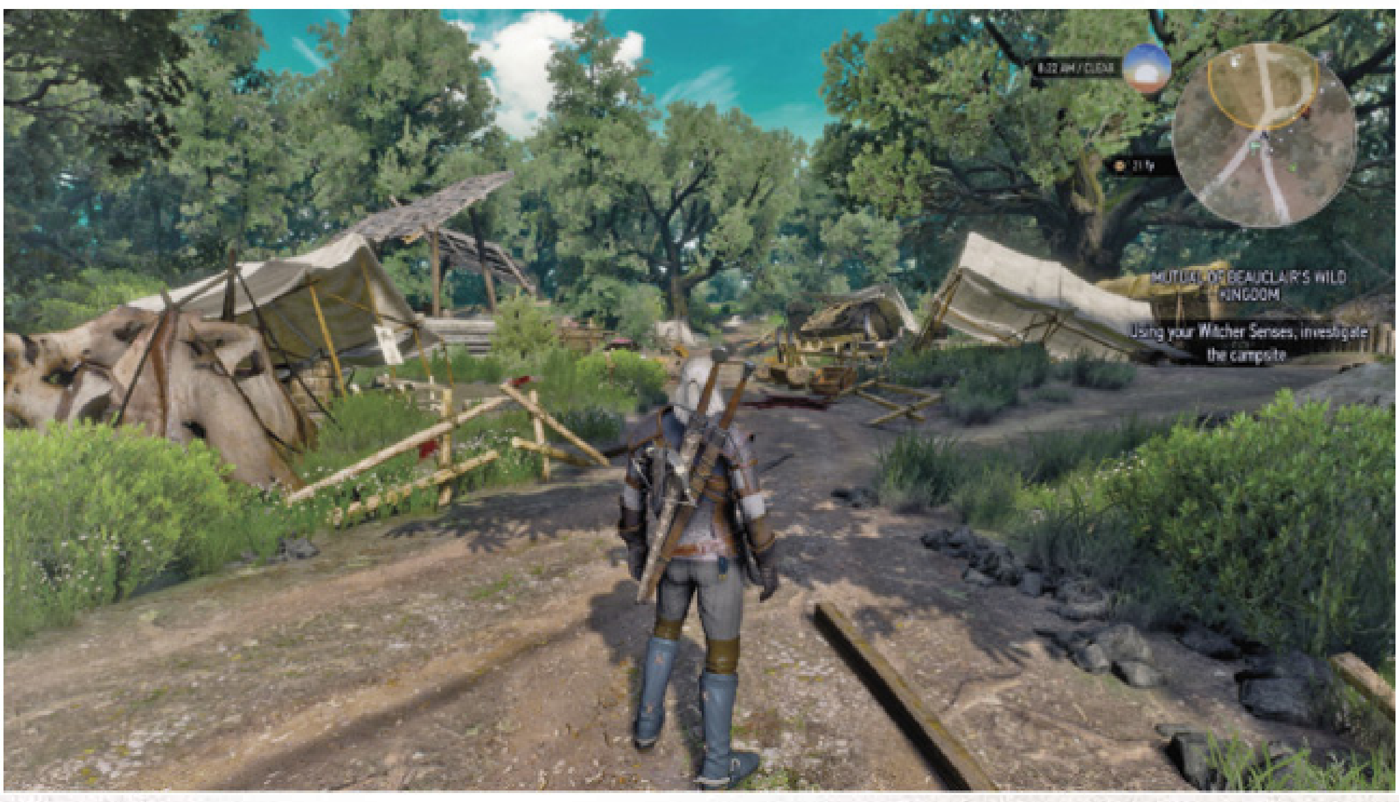
QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest begins once you read the notice marked "Contract for a Witcher/Witchers: Caravan Escort," which can be found on all Notice Boards in Beauclair.

The Beauclair Coopers' Guild is looking for an escort to help a merchant convoy navigate an area threatened by a beast known as the "Great White Terror". Gallop northward, toward the Trading Post deep in the Vedette Valley. When you arrive, it appears by the ruined tents and wanton carnage, that you're just a little too late to help the guild members, whose remains can be seen scattered about the forest clearing.



MUTUAL OF BEAUCLAIR'S WILD KINGDOM
Using your Witcher Senses, investigate the campsite

OBJECTIVE:

- Using your Witcher Senses, investigate the campsite.

Finding out exactly what happened here requires a thorough inspection of the area using your Witcher Senses. Areas of importance include:

- Fresh blood; this attack was recent.
- Signs of a fight with paw prints just in one spot, an attack from the air?
- A poster note regarding the "danger zone" of the White Terror, which you're apparently trespassing into.
- A merchant bled to death after being struck by a big beast, with claw marks and a throat ripped open.

You surmise this was an attack from a Draconid, but not a variety you've encountered before. After your surmation, you're interrupted by a man of fancy ways and means, who has implicit knowledge of this attack; this is Count Borhis di Salvaress; the man responsible for posting the signs of the "White Terror" around Toussaint, and a true (bordering on insane) animal lover. He has put his mind to saving the "last surviving basilisk" (mainly, it seems, because the beast is a subspecies of his dynastic symbol). You can ask him about paying off the families of the victims, whether he's sticking to his story, and who exactly he is. When you ask where the beast is, he refuses to help, as you'll just kill it!

OBJECTIVES:

- Find out more about the second victim.
- Use your Witcher Senses to follow the basilisk.

The investigation continues. Using your Witcher Senses, look for further evidence, such as:

- Basilisk scales on the ground. The beast is sensitive to fire; a fact the Count readily confirms.
- Strange burn marks on a log; it looks like the beast spits highly toxic venom.
- Busted barrels indicate tannin was inside (used to treat leather).

Now you have two scents (the venom and the tannin) to sniff out, you can follow a meandering trail, with the Count accompanying you to see no harm comes to his "pet." While he follows you, he will mention a suspicion he has. According to him, the merchants scent their goods on purpose, to use the beast for the destruction of their goods in order to ask for later compensation. Head farther into the woods until you reach a patch of long grass. Examine it, as the odor has dispersed, the Basilisk must be high in the sky. Follow the trail of blood marks roughly westward until you pick up the trail again, and finally discover the crumpled remains of the second victim. The poor fellow seems to have been dropped here, but why? Search the corpse for a note, which you can optionally read. Reading the note gives you a hint that the Count's suspicion may be true.

OBJECTIVE:

- Use your Witcher Senses to follow the sounds.

Continue west, following the scent until you hear sounds, not of the basilisk, but voices. Head out into the undulating expanse of grass and loose scree known as Venin Rocks, and discover a small group of heavily-tattooed chaps scouting the area. You recognize them as Reavers from your past adventures long ago in Crinfrid. When they ask who you are, answer as you wish; either way you're recognized from your time with Boholt, Kennet, and Desbrut. And Newboy, too. You're welcomed warmly, as your prowess with a blade is well-known, and splitting up the duties for the forthcoming basilisk slaughter looks to be a sound plan.

Naturally, at this point, Count Borhis shows up, demanding that you refrain from slaying the last living specimen of a near extinct species. To get all of you to listen, he offers to pay everyone to leave his basilisk alone. An important decision is now made:

- The Beast needs to die: Path 1 now begins.

- The Basilisk is not to be killed: Path 2 now begins.

Iocaste

Do you want them to run at the beast with their weapons, or stand back and use crossbows while you do the hacking?

- Request crossbows, and the forthcoming air battle becomes slightly easier as the beast is quickly downed, allowing you to concentrate mainly on close combat.
- Request "taking it on together," and the forthcoming ground battle becomes slightly easier once you drop the beast from the sky, allowing you to concentrate on striking the beast from the air before backing up the Reavers.

HOW TO IMMOLATE IOCASTE

Stop! Is the airborne terror proving too much trouble for you and your Reaver friends? Then prepare for this fight fully, and read up on Silver Basilisk combat in the Bestiary on page 723.

Once the battle is over, you leave the Count to weep over his pet, and divide the spoils, while taking some crowns from the Reavers for doing your part. Don't forget to loot the basilisk corpse for items and a trophy, as this quest concludes.

Items: Crowns (400), Silver Basilisk Trophy

BASKING IN VICTORY

The Silver Basilisk Trophy can be sold, or placed on Roach. It gives you a 1% chance to dismember, and 1% bonus experience from monsters, humans, and nonhumans, bonus gold, and chance to find additional herbs.

A few days after you killed Iocaste, the Count will show up at her nest during the day, where he put up a gravestone for the dead beast. The destroyed merchant's camp will be rebuilt, and you will have access to an armorer there.

Path #2: Out For The Count

You decide to forgo combat against such a rare species of draconid, much to the surprise of the Reavers. They aren't too concerned, as they receive payment anyway, and leave. The Count is a man of his word, and offers you funds for keeping locaste alive. Optionally request further crowns if you wish. The quest concludes with the Count worrying where his beloved creature has fled to.

As you asked the Count to take better security measures, three guard posts will be built around the area, with some soldiers that warn passing folk about the issue. The Count himself can be found near the nest on a small hill, where he observes locaste, flying over her territory.

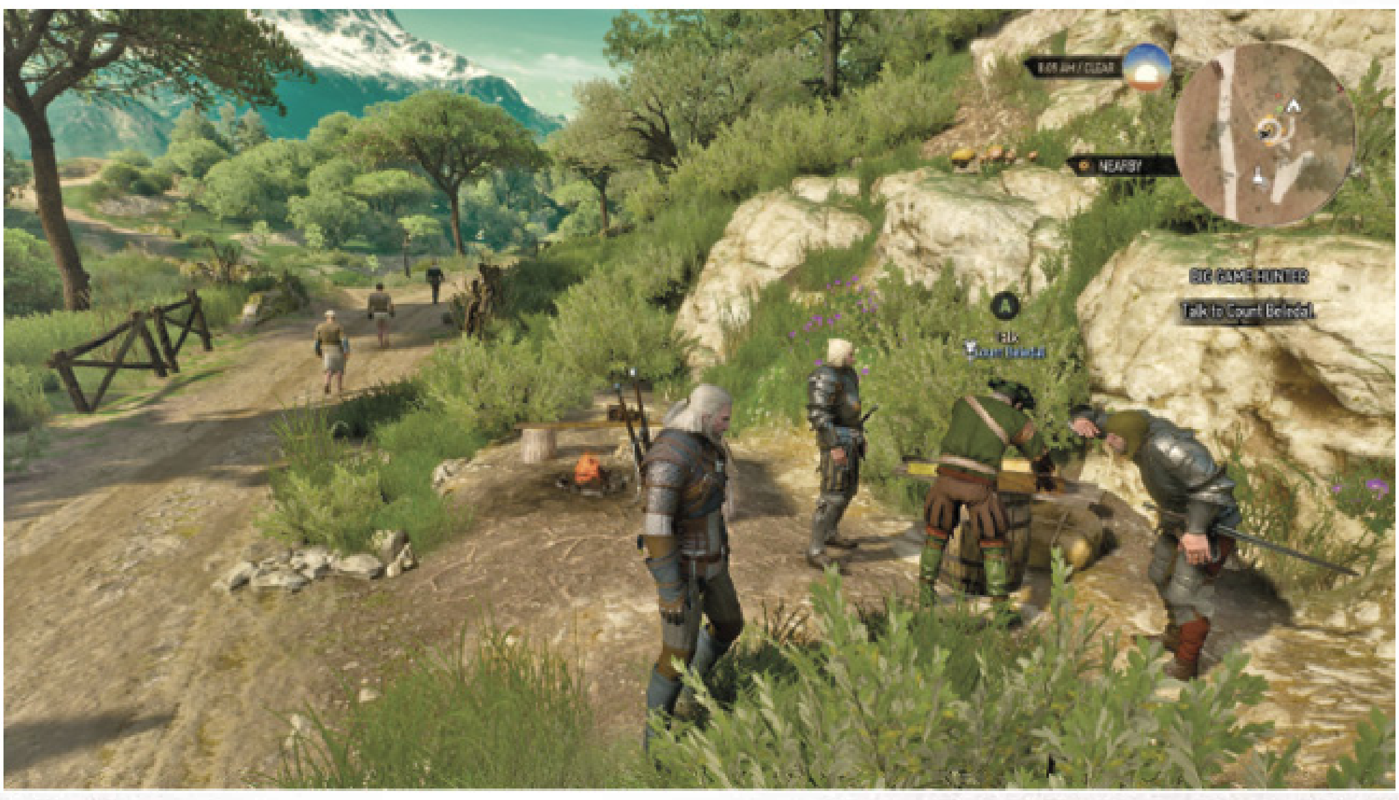
QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest begins once you read the notice marked "Wanted: The White Wolf", which can be found on every Notice Board in Beauclair. You can also stumble upon this quest while adventuring along the road by the entrance to Chuchote Cave.



On the edge of the Sanseretour Valley and the Gorgon Foothills is the main thoroughfare running south of Castel Ravello Vineyard. As you approach a small cave mouth on a hillock along the north side of the road, you'll find Count Beledal and his two bodyguards poring over a map. When you speak to him, the Count greets you warmly; he's a big fan of your work, and has a "rather extraordinary proposition" for you. He wants you to act as an exploration guide on a mission to "preserve" the wildlife in these parts. Optionally ask the Count to tell you more about himself, before requesting what exactly the job entails. The bodyguards make mention of his daughter Clarissa, though the Count seems reticent to talk about her, except that she looks forward to receiving a souvenir when the Count returns home.

You and the Count are to admire the local flora and fauna, while Beledal "preserves" it using a strange device called a parestisomach. Think of it as a movable, wearable megascope that captures moments and transforms them into illusions, which the Count then paints. You can agree to the job to continue this quest, or optionally bargain for a better rate beforehand.

After you agree, you're given a local hunter's map pinpointing some habitats the Count is interested in.

DOWN FOR THE COUNT

The Count is paying for protection as well as a tour guide. Wandering into the habitats of panthers and giant centipedes can be attempted in either order. Remember the Count's overriding request: no bloodshed. You aren't killing these beasts; just observing them! Your behavior during the safari and your treatment of the Count's request will be reflected in the outcome of the quest.

Petting The Big Cats

OBJECTIVES:

- Escort Count Beledal.
- Escort Count Beledal near the panthers' lair.
- Use your Witcher Senses to find the panthers.

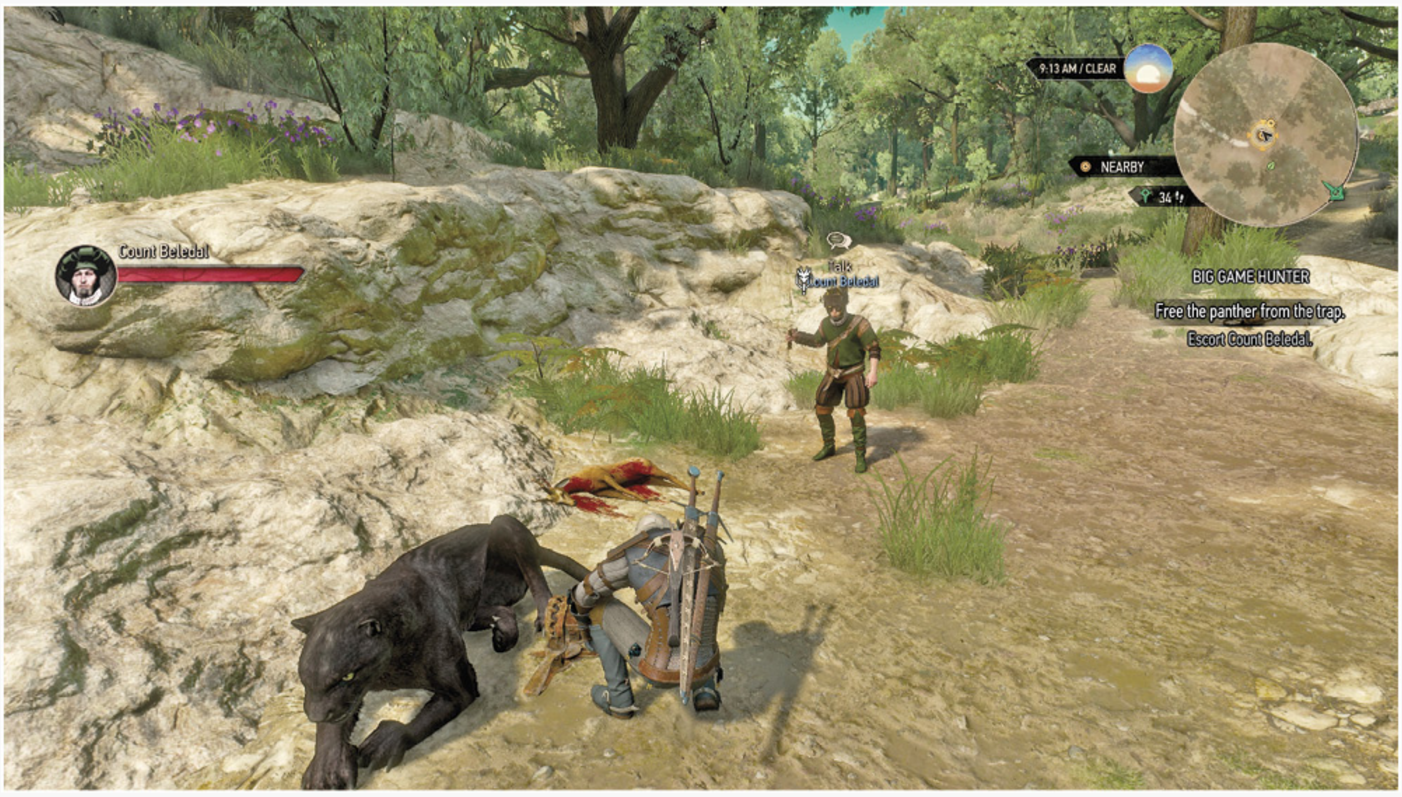
Begin your tour by heading west along the main road to Astre Castle Ruins, but veer off to the left (southwest), and follow the shallow valley stream until you reach the panthers' investigative area. With your Witcher Senses, listen for sound pulses coming from the lightly wooded glade ahead of you, and slowly move forward until you're faced with some grunting and panting; a bear is roaming these woods (this is the first circular investigation area). The Count isn't eager to face one, so move on. You can:

- At distance, before the Bear sees you, retreat in the opposite direction, so you aren't seen. This is the Count's preference.
- Or, you can kill the bear, either by ignoring the Count's pleas, or by getting too close and having the bear charge you. Either incurs the Count's wrath. Don't do this when the actual beasts the Count wants to see are encountered! Should you run into him by accident, you can still run away and disengage from combat.

Head roughly south, watching for red sound pulses, until you encounter a small herd of deer. Though the Count is pleasantly surprised, he's here for the big cats, so turn and creep roughly westward, toward a large oak tree, and around to some low exposed rocks along a faint hunter's trail. There are two panthers here, a mother and cub. But what's this?! The mother seems incapacitated in a poacher's trap!

OBJECTIVES:

- (Optional) Calm the panther.
- Free the panther from the trap.



Use your Witcher Senses to uncover more poacher traps dotted around the vicinity of the trapped animal. To avoid the creature turning violent, use Axii to calm it, then open the trap to free it while the Count uses his parestisomach. Unfortunately, the flash from the device upsets the animals, meaning you need to retreat back to a trail and leave the animals be. The Count has his memory though! Should you free the Panther without calming him first, it will attack you. However, you can still save it, by using Axii during the combat. The Panthers will retreat, and the Count will be pleased with your work.

Making The Earth Move For Count Beledal

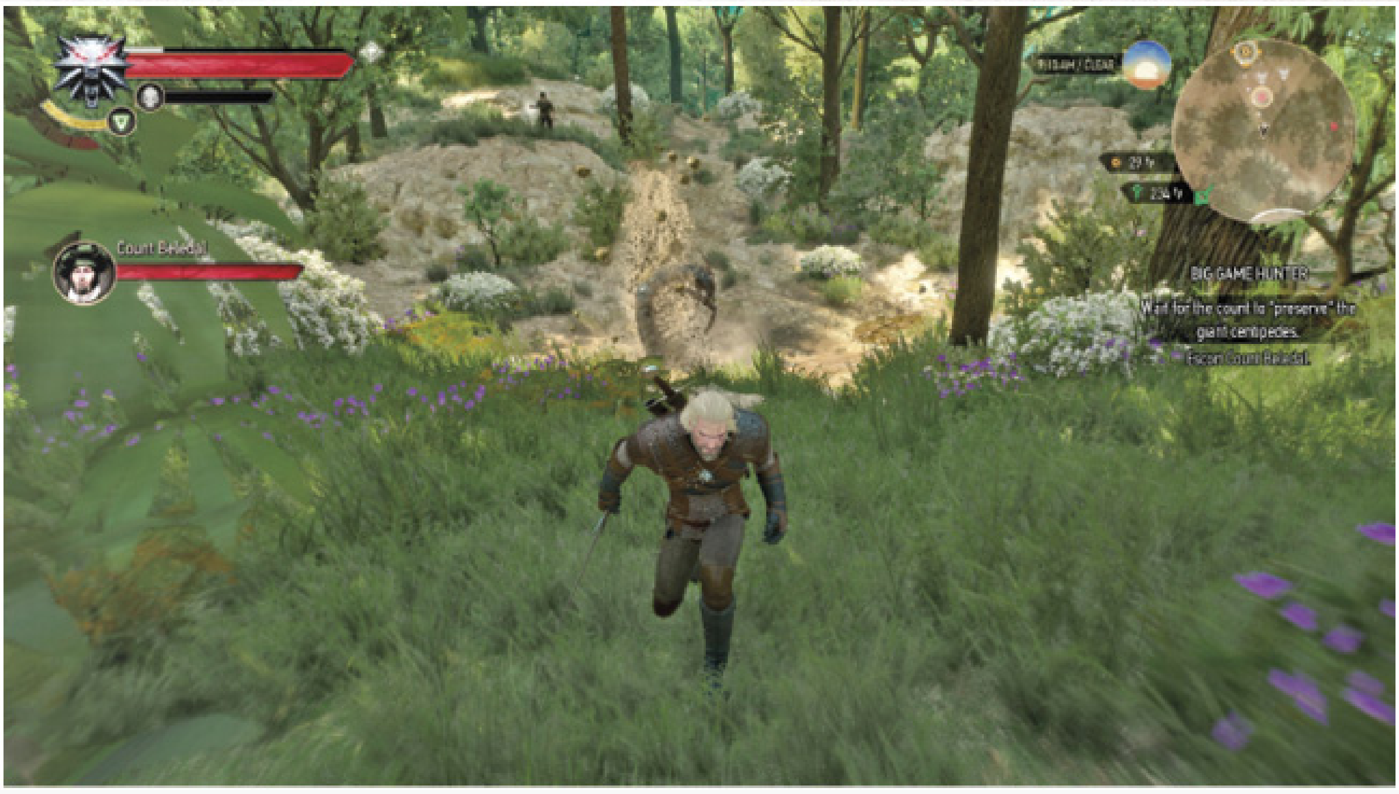
OBJECTIVES:

- Escort Count Beledal.
- Escort Count Beledal to the giant centipedes' lair.
- Follow the sound.
- Find a place with a good view of the lair.
- Wait for the Count.

Heading roughly west on a hunter's trail, you and the Count strike up a conversation, and while entertaining, you shush him when you pick up a sound from the ground. This can occur at either of the four smaller investigation areas on your mini-map, which show up as soon as you are close enough to the formerly shown areas. Follow the sound pulse using your Witcher Senses, which leads to a couple of Monster Nests to the northwest. The sound is loud and clear here, but the Count is worried that his vantage point isn't good. Oblige him with some topographical advice. Of the three possible spots to examine, only the high rocks (pictured) to the southwest of the trail are suitable.

OBJECTIVES:

- Destroy the nest to flush the giant centipedes out.
- Wait for the count to "preserve" the giant centipedes.



Wait for the count to "preserve" the giant centipedes.

Escort Count Beledal.

With the Count safely above you, venture down to either of the nests, and drop a bomb down one of them, before backing away. You aren't here to fight the beasts, so backtrack to the hilly area on either side of the trail, and wait for the Count to finish "preserving" the large, revolting worms that writhe out of the ground for a few moments before tunneling back down into the earth (providing you don't coax them into battle). Alternatively, you can also throw a bomb from afar onto the nests to destroy them, without having to go down into the pit at all.

NOT DOWN FOR THE COUNT

If you're not interested in the Count's requests, you can drop a bomb down the monster nest before he is situated at the correct vantage point. Even worse, you can start slicing at the Giant Centipedes that appear, or any animal you've been asked to find. But the trick to the best payday is catering to the Count's not-unreasonable requests.

Contract: Big Game Hunter

The Preening Peacocks

OBJECTIVES:

- Escort Count Beledal.
- Lead the count to the place where peacocks live.
- Use your Witcher Senses to find the peacocks' tracks.
- Follow the peacocks' trail.

As an end to this experience, the Count is hopeful to see some mating peacocks, though displays of male feathers in courtship dances for this bird finished a while back. The Count is still counting on you, as this memory is for his daughter. Oblige, and head roughly southwest through the woods, to one of three possible investigation areas. Each has a peacock feather to find using your Witcher Senses, though you only need to pick up one of them.

Items: Odorus peacock feather

The feather is coated in suet, and the scent trail allows you to meander through the woods and track the flock. The sounds of peacocks grows increasingly loud, as the trail ends at a dry stream bed. Around ten birds can be heard close by.

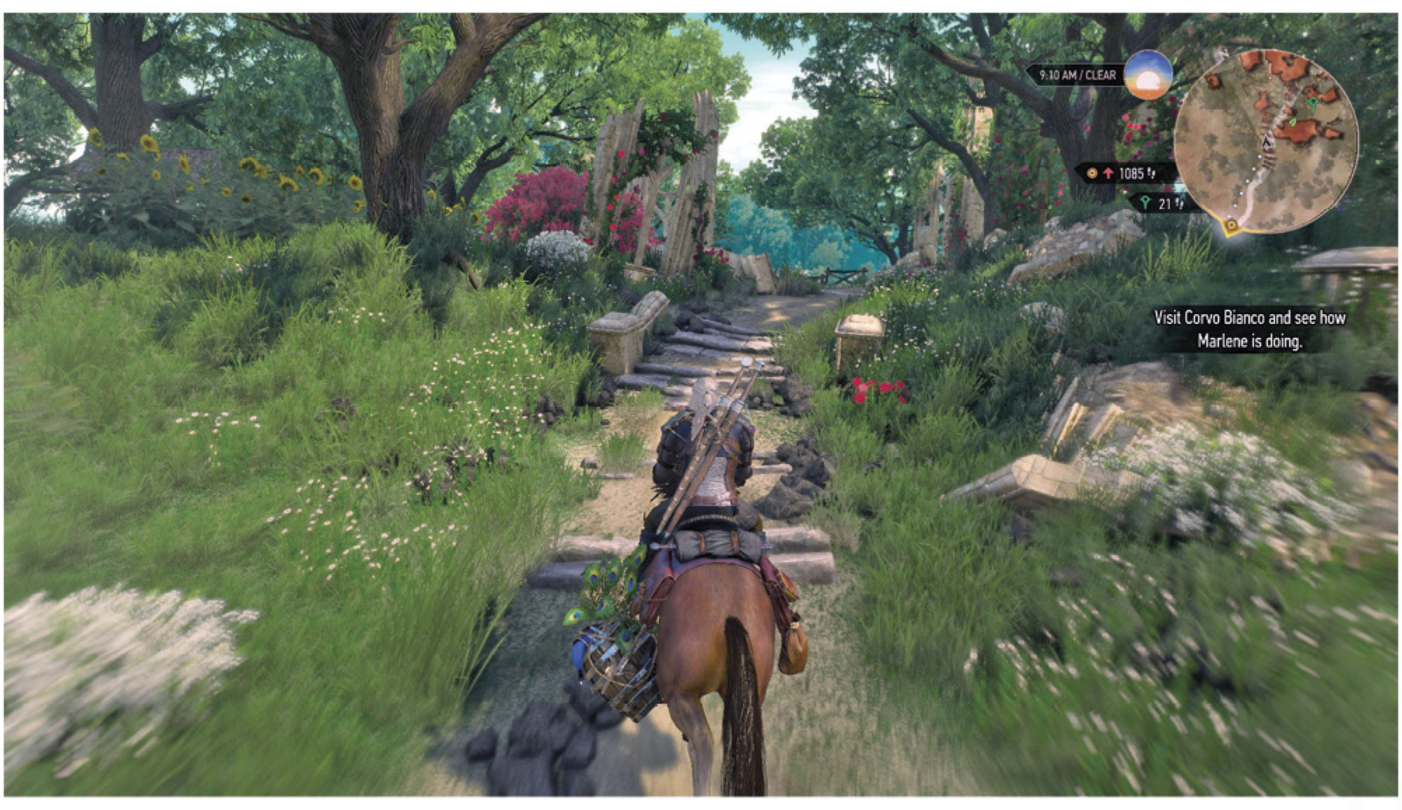
While he fetches his coin purse, you can answer them how you wish; but if you catch them talking about a "new life" you can ask about it, and the bodyguards reveal a twist of cruel fate that befell the count's daughter, even though Beledal never mentioned it. You receive a reward based on the number of creatures you didn't slay (aside from that final giant centipede). CHARACTERS: Pinestri, Roach, Marcello Clerici
ENEMIES: Umbra (Nightmare form), Apparitions

OBJECTIVES:

- Use your Witcher Senses to investigate the area and find out what's tormenting the hermit.
- Talk to the hermit.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest begins once you investigate the unmarked location Pinastri's Hermitage the area east of the Dun Tynne Crossroads.

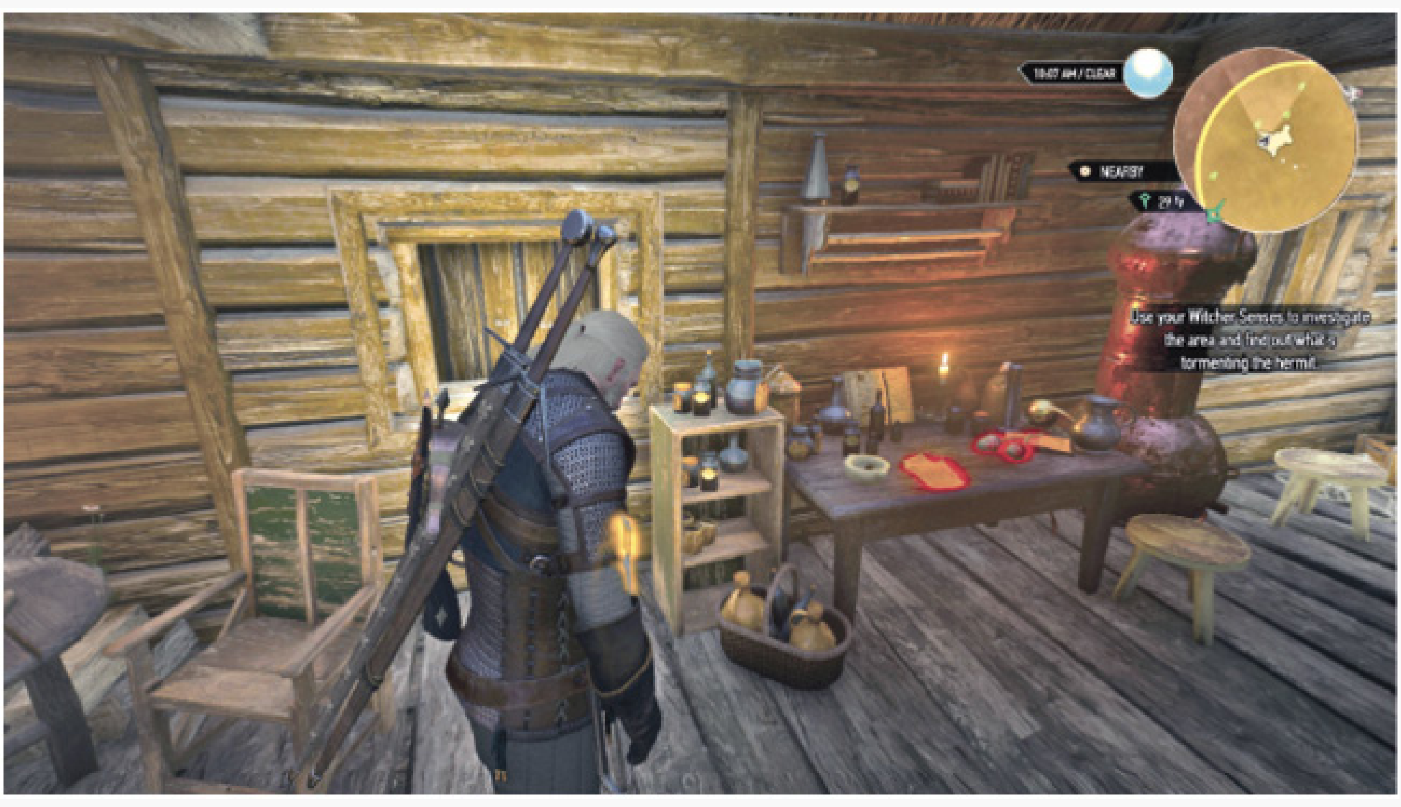


Visit Corvo Bianco and see how Marlene is doing.

Gallop to the old stone steps and threshold of a wooded glade by the river, just east and a little north of Dun Tynne Crossroads, and enter Pinastri's Hermitage. Pinastri herself is kneeling near her cow, and seems to be in distress, shouting at an unseen spirit to stop tormenting her. She no longer trusts her senses, and asks if you're a man. Answer as you wish. She tells you a demon, or wraith, haunts her and gives her no rest.

Umbra (Nightmare form)

It torments her from the trees, but can only be seen once she drinks a brew. Optionally ask her what the demon looks like (an enormous evil horse), and more importantly, what the brew is made from (graytop, a variety of toadstool thought extinct). Graytop produces some powerful side effects, revealing the hidden and immaterial, but the torment persists even without the hallucinogenic properties of the fungus. Agree to help rid Pinanstri of her demon, bumping up the payment if you wish (note that she pays in potatoes).



Use your Witcher Senses to investigate the area and find out what's tormenting the hermit.

Begin a thorough inspection of the hermit's abode, where you find the following clues using your Witcher Senses:

- Dead moths at the foot of the door: attracted to some ghosts, which could mean the hermit's ravings have an element of truth to them.
- Parchment on a table, "The Flagellant's Manifesto": the hermit is also a member of this self-harming cult, the Eighth Day Flagellants. Read the document if you wish.
- Graytop fungus on the table: a strong hallucinogen, and thought extinct.
- Drops of blood on the bed pillow, and a trail to the window: The window itself is closed tight, so head around outside to the foot of the window.
- A trail of blood starts at the pillow, and can be followed across the ground to a rose-covered arch.

Step under the arch, until you surmise that something is drinking the hermit's blood at night.

Items: The Flagellant's Manifesto

Return to Pinastri, optionally ask her about her life as a flagellant, then inform her that some kind of wraith is tormenting her. The problem is, you can't exterminate the specter if you can't see it. It's agreed that she brews a concoction using graytop. Mention the side effects if you want, before agreeing to this dicey plan. You can prepare before you drink it, if you wish.

You take a swig, and come to a few hours later with the exceptionally potent smell of clover wafting through your nostrils, and a strange blue haze enveloping your vision. Oh, and Roach is speaking to you.

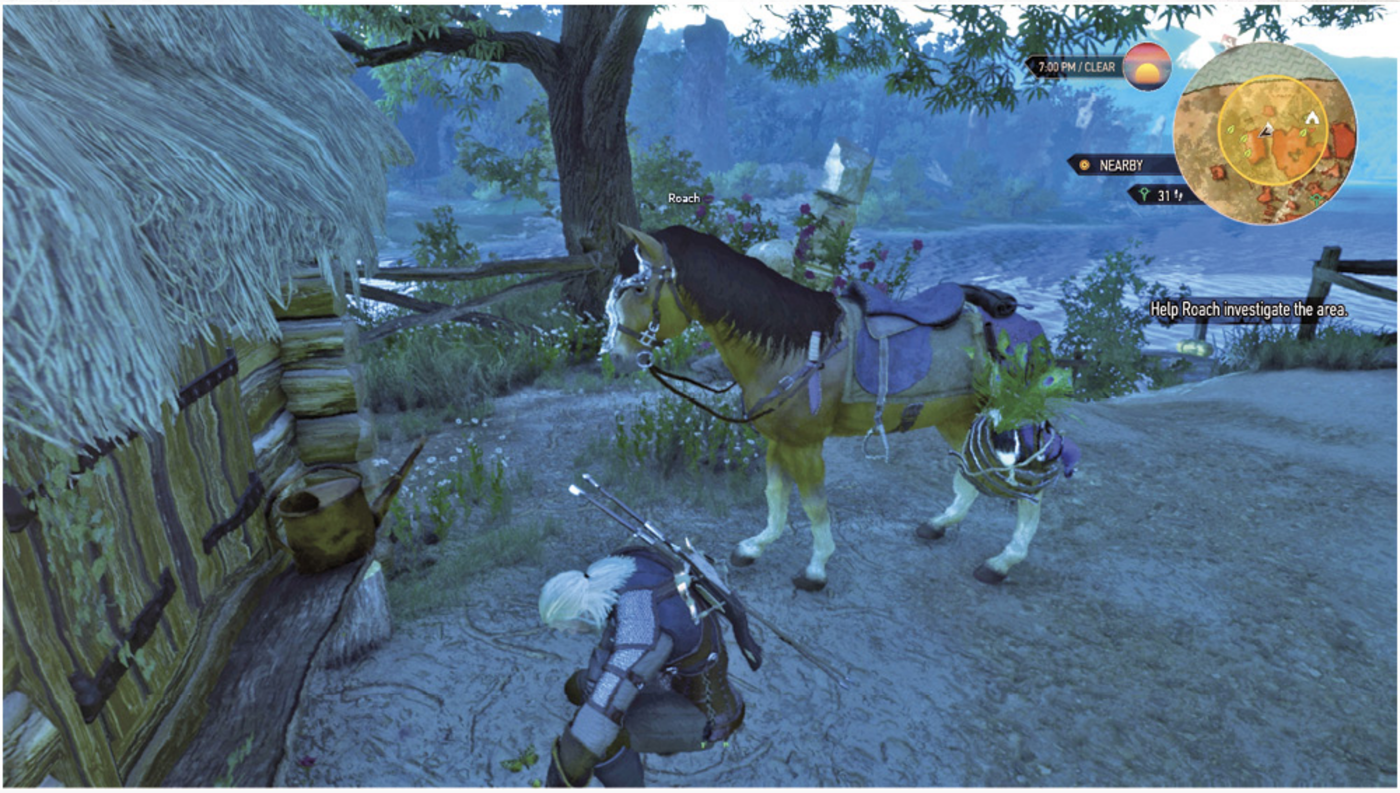
Roach Will Give You The Answer That You'll Endorse

OBJECTIVE:

- Help Roach investigate the area.

Your wise-cracking steed is speaking your language; it seems the graytop's potency is assured. Optionally ask Roach why she sounds so manly, before mentioning the effects of this brew. Now you've a chance to chat to your horse, you can optionally ask why she always shows up when you whistle; pondering the fact Roach can cross vast oceans when you call, but still get hung up on the tiniest fence. What's that about? Back to the matter at hand (or in this case, at hoof): Clues must be found, and Roach has it handled.



Roach lets you know she's spotted some astral hoofprints that even you can't see.

- Inspect the dead moths by the cottage, and Roach mentions a smell—death.

You both agree to meet for a summing up. Answer as you wish; Roach has this all figured out, if you'll just listen. The "demon" is definitely an umbra, an immaterial wraith, and one that's assumed the form of a horse. You ask how Roach can be so sure, and she offers some damning evidence; the umbra is standing over there, watching you both!

Chase the spirit to find out where it comes from.

Leap on Roach, and give chase through the arch, and into Blessure Forest, then the Umbra bolts out into the open fields and hills. Keep up the chase as the Umbra gallops up hill (giving Roach a chance to tell a “hilarious” joke), before you both race down the Dun Tynne Hillside, and makes a turn turn through a stone arch, and into Mont Crane Cemetery, where it melts into thin air.

This One'll Talk 'Til Her Voice Is Hoarse

OBJECTIVE:

- Examine the gravestone.

Take a moment to replenish yourself (as there's a choice that can end in combat to make shortly), before stepping up to the gravestone (which Roach is already keen on checking out), optionally taking some Florens and a sword, and then reading the inscription. The grave is of a knight around the same age as Pinastri. It appears his spirit's became the horse-shaped umbra. Of course, Roach already knows this; she's not a donkey.

A stream of thin ectoplasm forms the shape of the knight himself, who quickly explains the hermit has denied his peace in the afterlife, and needs Pinastri to forgive him. You can ask Marcello's spirit why he appears as a horse, and the link to him and the hermit, before asking why the hermit's forgiveness is needed. He tells a tale of a tournament, to where she saw him flog his stallion named Blaze to death. He pleads you to absolve him in Blaze's name. At this point, you can:

- Tell him he's "not the one you should ask for forgiveness," pointing out that Roach should decide. He pleads to your horse. At this point, you can ask Roach to "forgive him" (which leads to Ending #1), or that this one "doesn't deserve mercy" (which leads to Ending #2).

- Tell him "you don't deserve mercy," and begin Ending #2.

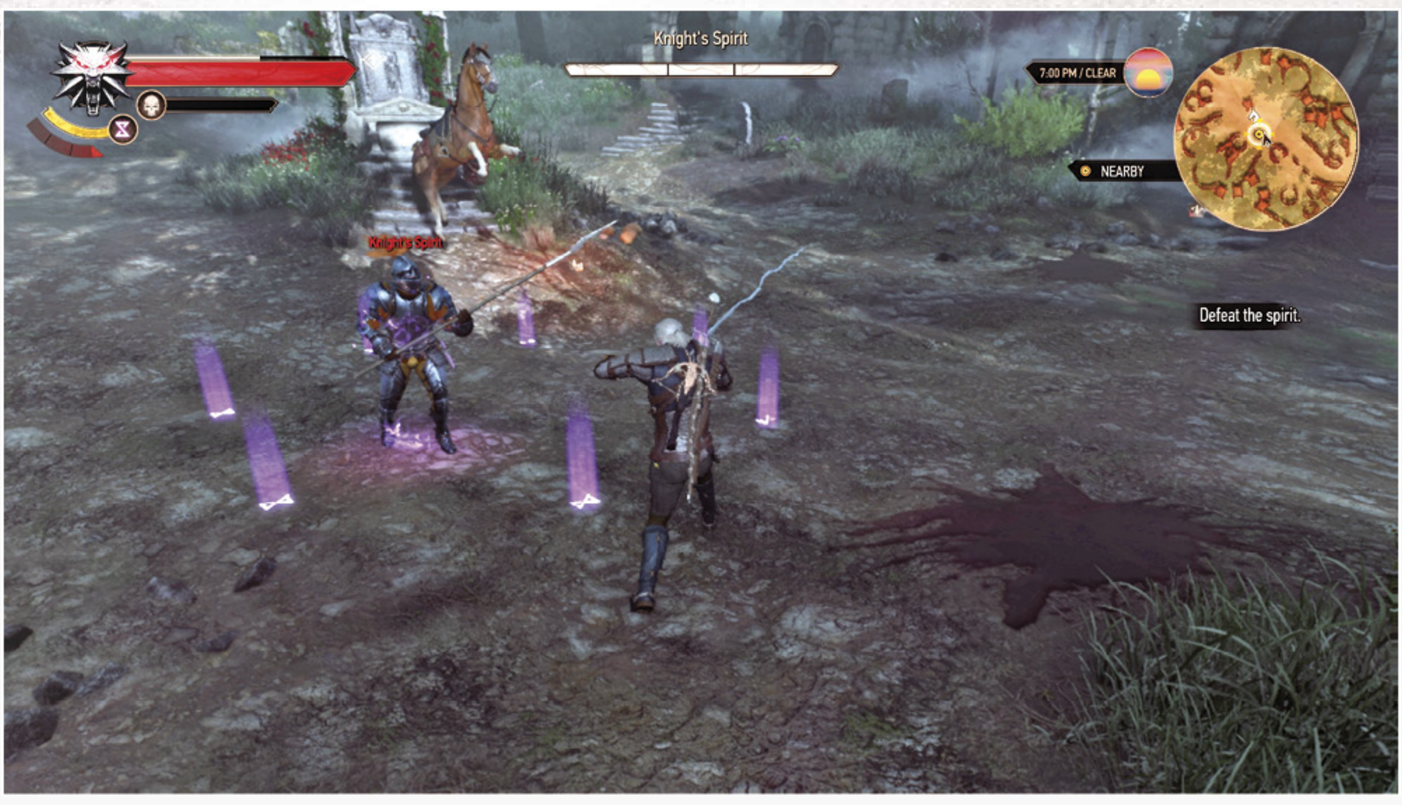
ENDING #1: MERCY FOR MARCELLO

Roach tells the knight he did a rotten thing, but horses aren't vengeful and don't hold grudges. The knight feels lightness, and fades from view.

ENDING #2: RETRIBUTION FOR BLAZE

OBJECTIVE:

- Defeat the spirit.



You or Roach tell the knight you're not about to forgive him for flogging his horse to win a silly tournament. You must now face the Knight's Spirit in combat.

GAINING ADVANTAGE AGAINST APPARITIONS

Whoa, there! The Umbra's minions you must fight take the form of panthers, and exhibit the same clawing and leaping attacks detailed on page 719 of the Bestiary. However, they are specters and therefore Specter Oil is worth coating your blade with. The same goes for the Knight's Spirit; use Specter Oil but treat the bout as a one-on-one with a human-sized foe (albeit one with an extremely long spear to dodge around before attacking).

LOCATIONS: Ardaiso Quarry, Abandoned Still (unmarked), Fort Ussar Ruins

CHARACTERS: Foreman Pafnuzio

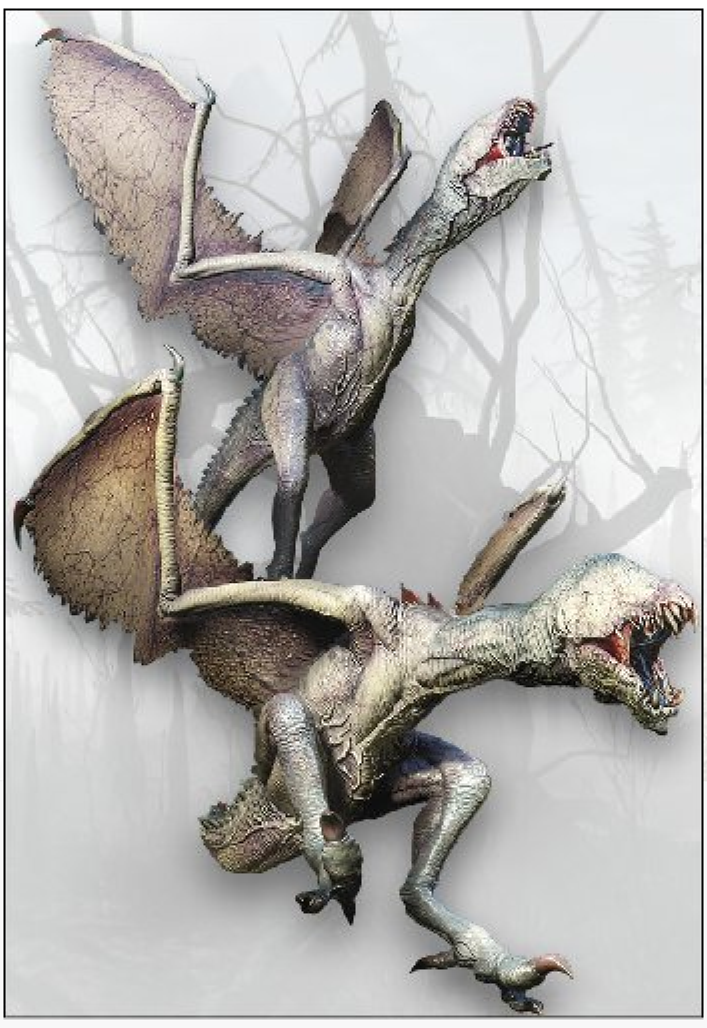
ENEMIES: Ghouls, Rotfiends, Slyzards

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the quarry foreman.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest begins once you read the notice marked “Contract: Mysterious Plummeting Cattle.” One such Notice can be found at the Ardaiso Quarry’s Notice Board. You can also stumble upon this quest while adventuring in the quarry and finding the quarry foreman, or stumbling across the carcass of the cow itself.



Slyzard and Slyzard Matriarch

Assuming you wish to learn the initial story of how a cow fell on a quarry worker in the sprawling Ardaiso Quarry over in The Champs Desoles Territory, head east, and use the platforms embedded into the rock side. Look in a carved-out alcove halfway down the quarry on the western side, where Foreman Pafnuzio is pleading with his workers to continue quarrying, but they’re talking about their dead workmate Emil, crushed to death by a falling cow. Is this a plague like the locusts and frogs that fell on Zerrikania?

Of course it isn’t; the Foreman isn’t a superstitious sort, and simply needs his men to continue chiseling. You’re beckoned over to his lean-to on the lower part of the massive quarry. After explaining his predicament, you can ask the Foreman exactly what he’s doing here, before questioning whether anyone witnessed the accident. Pafnuzio mentions something about a loud “ear-botching boom,” and damage to a crane. Agree to look into the matter, optionally bargaining with the Foreman for more crowns.

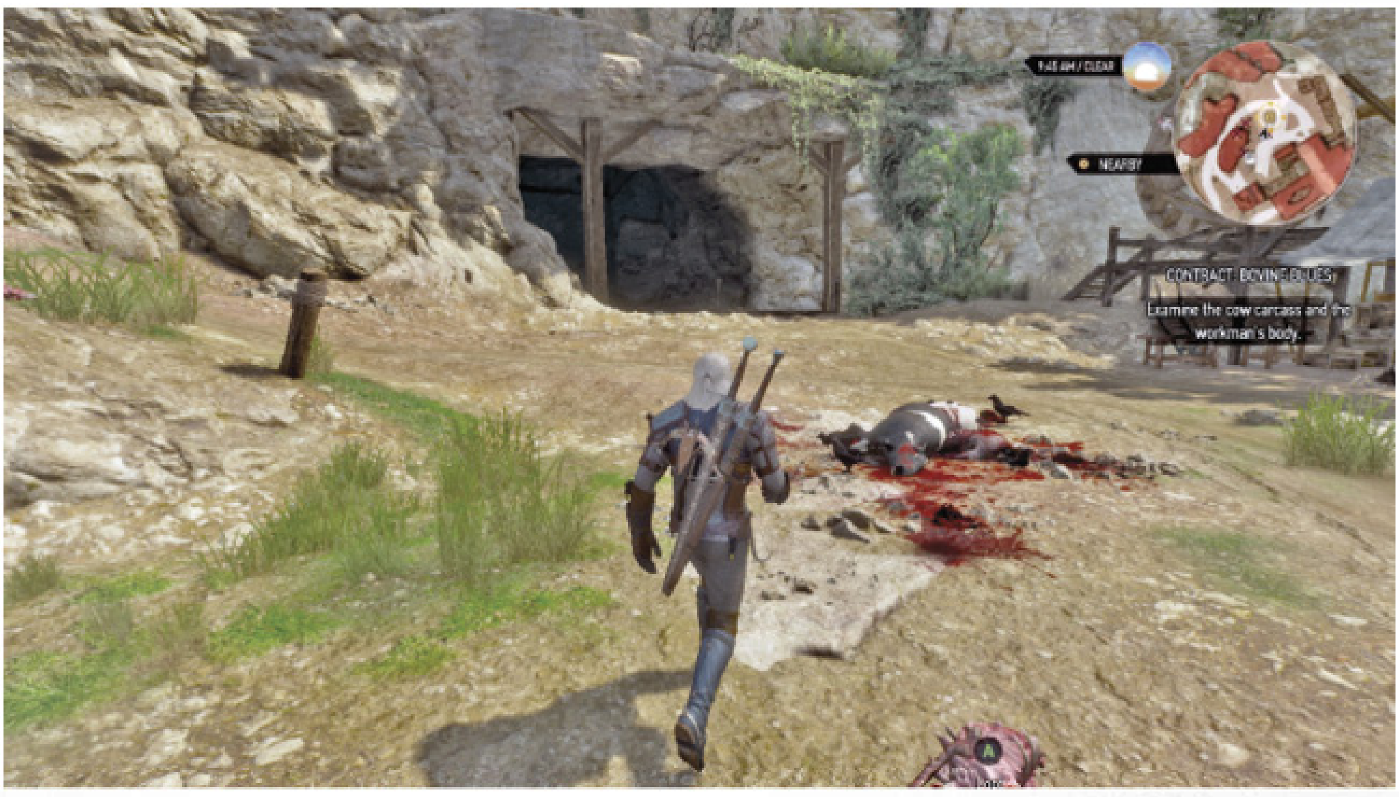
Emil And The Cow Carnage

OBJECTIVE:

- Examine the cow carcass and the workman's body.



CONTRACT: BOVINE BLUES
Examine the cow carcass and the workman's body.

Head to where the remains of the cow have crushed poor Emil, and fight off around four Ghouls that are sniffing around the corpses. Shoo any carrion feeding, and begin a thorough inspection, examining the following:

- (Wounds on the worker's body) Crushed by something heavy with a cracked skull. Yep, Emil is dead alright. Necrophages were chewing on him after his death.
- (Blunt trauma wounds on the cow) Tissue is crushed in places, indicating the cow fell from a great height.
- (Bite wounds on the cow) The guts are sliced open, but the lack of blood indicates it happened post mortem. There are small tooth marks.
- (Punctures and slashes on the cow) Deep claw wounds and the talon spread indicates a draconid, like a wyvern.
- (Cause of accident) When all other inspections are complete, you surmise the cow fell when a draconid dropped it; a youngster trying to get the cow back to its nest, perhaps. Bad luck, Emil!

OBJECTIVE:

- Use your Witcher Senses to investigate how the crane was damaged.

Now for the crane. Turn and face the large crane attached to the side of the quarry bank, and climb up onto the top perimeter edge of the quarry all the way to the grass and rocks above the crane itself. Then examine a strange and bloody dent in the crane support; the draconid must have dropped the cow because it was too heavy, lost its balance, and hit the crane while trying to steady itself. It must have been wounded. Good; it should be simple to track down.

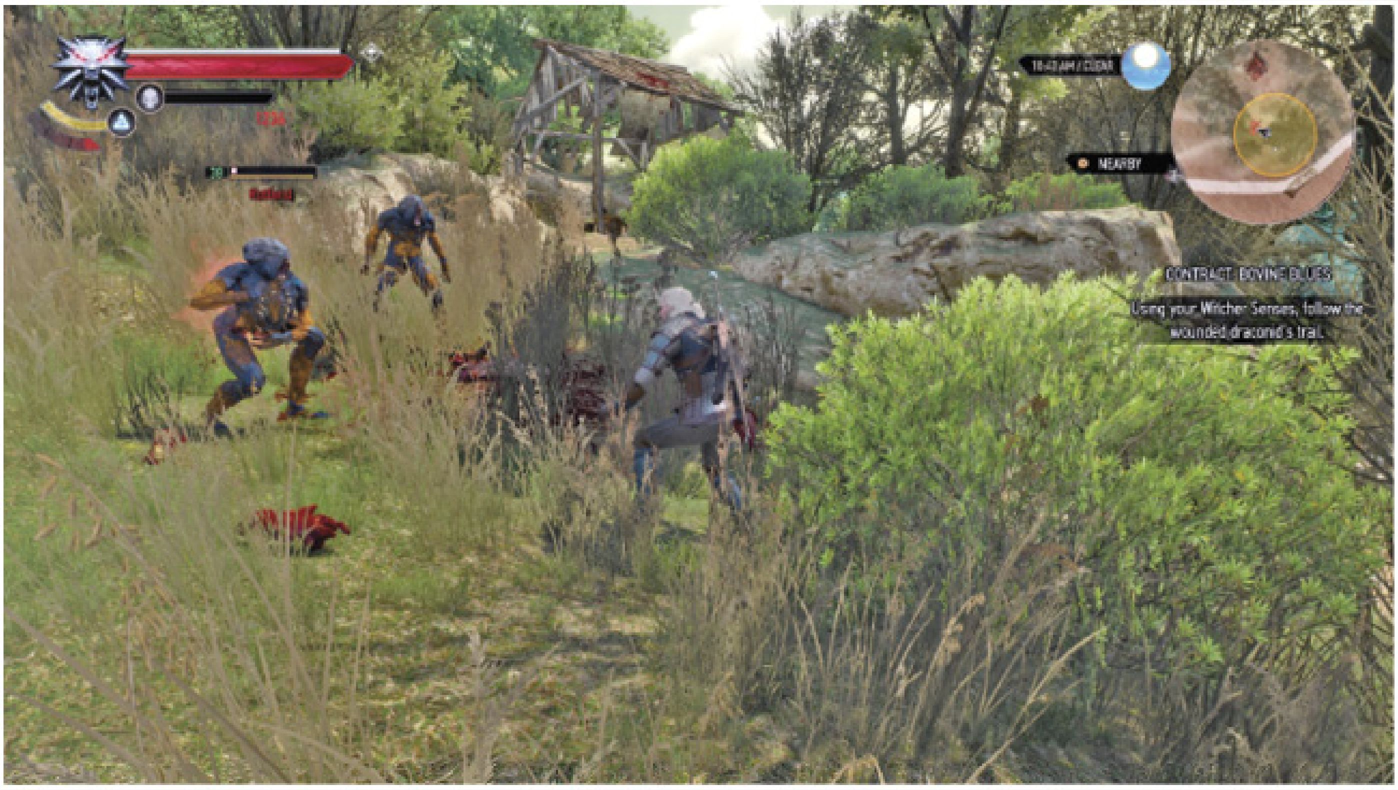
Trail Ends Here. Nest's Up There.

OBJECTIVES:

- Using your Witcher Senses, follow the wounded draconid's trail.
- Use your Witcher Senses to look for clues by the abandoned still.



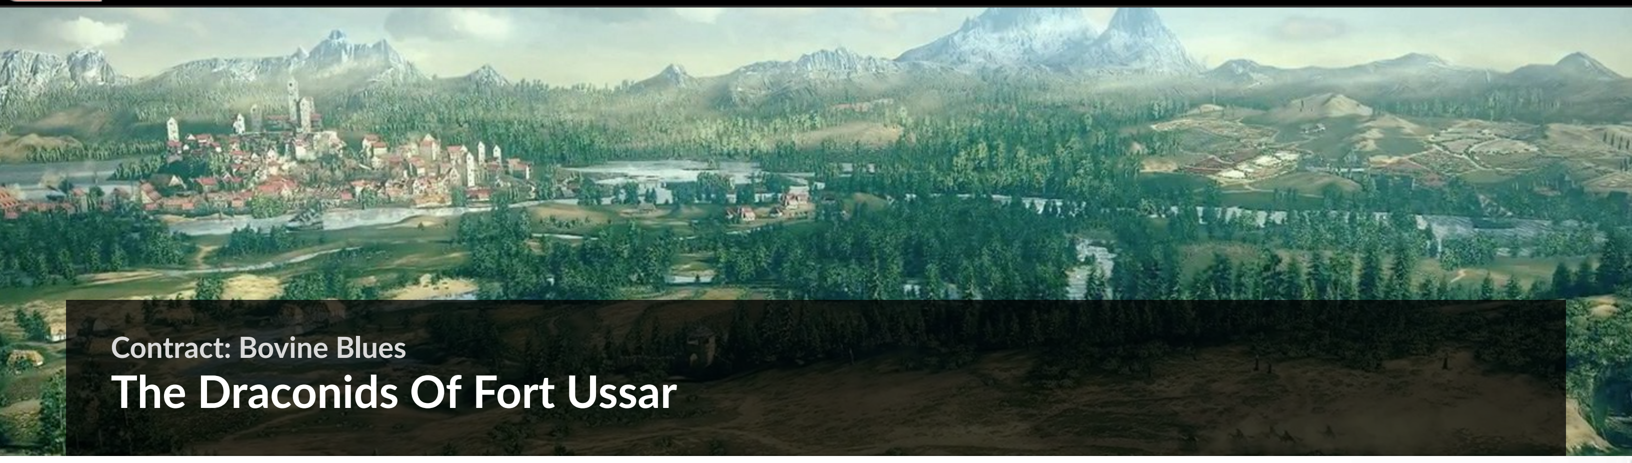
NEARBY
CONTRACT: BOVINE BLUES
Using your Witcher Senses, follow the wounded draconid's trail.

Turn around and head roughly east, away from the quarry; a few feet away is some barely perceptible draconid blood. Continue around the stone embankment, following more blotches, southeast down the hill of long grass and thickets. The beast started bleeding heavily as you reach a path and small stream. Across and up a hillock is an abandoned still, now home to a trio of Rotfiends. Once all three have burst open, clamber on the rocks, and inspect the distillery. The draconid attacked it recently. There's a large area of damage on the ground that glows red; the beast landed on the roof, made a mess, and moved on.

OBJECTIVE:

- Use your Witcher Senses to follow the draconid's trail.

Head roughly southeast and east, following the paw prints of a beast too tired to fly. Head down the hill, following the crawl marks to a small area of soggy ground and marsh, and examine the area. You kneel down and see a second draconid landed here, waited for the first to heal, and they flew off together. Turn to look northeast; the smaller draconid was still bleeding and there are blood marks along a trail leading uphill.

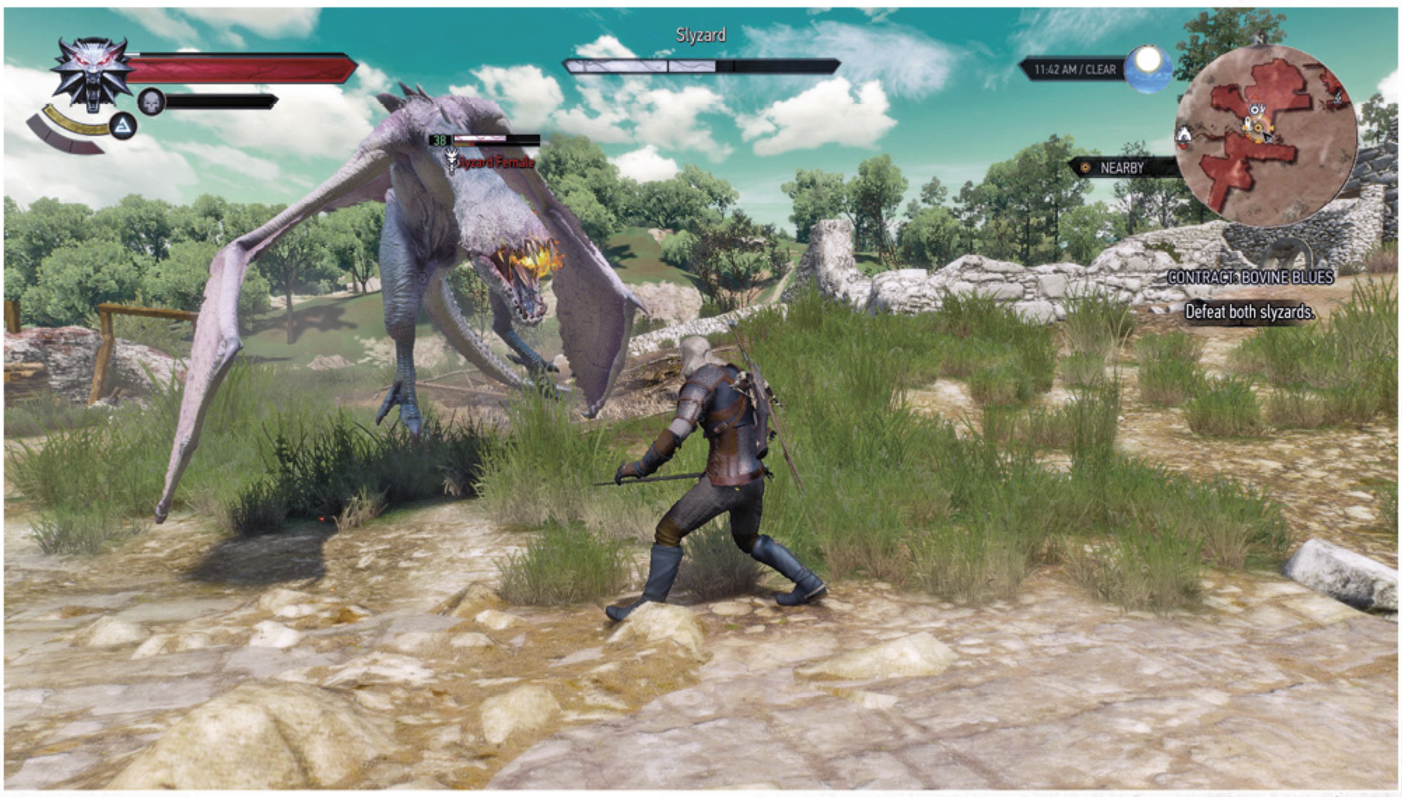


Contract: Bovine Blues

The Draconids Of Fort Ussar

OBJECTIVES:

- Climb to the top of the hill to reach the Slyzards.
- Defeat both Slyzards.



CONTRACT: BOVINE BLUES
Defeat both slyzards.

You see something large and flapping for a moment, atop the hill. A Slyzard! Move along the trail, winding your way up to the nest at the top of the hill, on the flat plateau by the ruins of Fort Ussar. You encounter not one, but two Slyzards. Use your best wyvern-battling tactics, tailored to thwart these similar threats.

SLICING AND DICING SLYZARDS

Steady yourself, Witcher! Though these draconids may look familiar, they are no wyverns! They breathe fire, and with two to slay, you may be puzzled at how to approach them in battle. So prepare for this fight fully, and read up on Slyzard combat in the Bestiary on page 724.

SLYZARD VULNERABILITIES

Grapeshot Bomb

OBJECTIVES:

- (Optional) Destroy the nest and the Slyzard eggs.
- Collect a trophy from the mother Slyzard.
- Collect a reward for solving the cow mystery.

Once both Slyzards are dead, feel free to use Igni on the nest and pulverize the eggs, as well as hacking off large pieces of the mother Slyzard to display as a trophy. Return to Ardaiso Quarry, seek out the foreman, and tell him you cleared everything up. You're given your reward, and accompany the foreman back to his workers to let them know they can return to work. Yet the workers are still not satisfied! They want to know what became of the builders who are putting the giant statue together. They were due back here three days ago! The foreman beckons you away, and explains he too is worried; his men transporting the various pieces of a gigantic statue to Lebioda have indeed gone missing. He urges you to come see him later, where details shall be divulged. For now, this quest concludes. Secondary Quest: Big Feet to Fill is now accessible.

RELATED QUESTS: Master Master Master Master!

LOCATIONS: Flovive, Tufo Vineyard (Unmarked), Marcescent Forest (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: Monsieur de Bourbeau, Madame de Bourbeau, Jean-Luc

ENEMIES: Kikimore Workers, Kikimore Warrior, Giant Centipedes, Monster of Tufo (Shaelmaar)

REQUIRED ITEMS: Sewant Mushrooms

OBJECTIVE:

- Go to the Tufo Vineyard and talk to the poster of the notice.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterward. The quest begins once you read the notice marked "The Monster of Tufo." One such Notice can be found at the Notice Board in Flovive (Sansretuour Marsh). You can also stumble upon this quest while adventuring along the road by the Tufo winery estate.

The Tufo Monster

A short distance north of the village of Flovive in Sansretour Marsh territory is the Tufo Vineyard, famed for its superb melon blanc. Visit the winery estate house, and speak to the owner, the haughty Monsieur de Bourbeau. Immediately his pomposity is obvious; feel free to call him out on his method of speaking to you, or endure it. Either way, he has a task for you. Something is infesting his vineyard, and the only signs are noises; scratching and shrieks. There are no corpses either; his workers are disappearing without a trace. Agree to help, bolster your fee if you wish, then ask about the noises (they come from the cellar) and the missing men (Bourbeau doesn't remember such trivial matters as the name of his help, though his wife would know, when she returns back from visiting her mother). As your only lead is the cellar, and the noises are heard after dark, that's your next plan.

Items: Key to the Tufo cellar

OBJECTIVES:

- Go to the cellars after dark.
- Investigate the cellars using your Witcher Senses.

CONTRACT: THE TUFO MONSTER

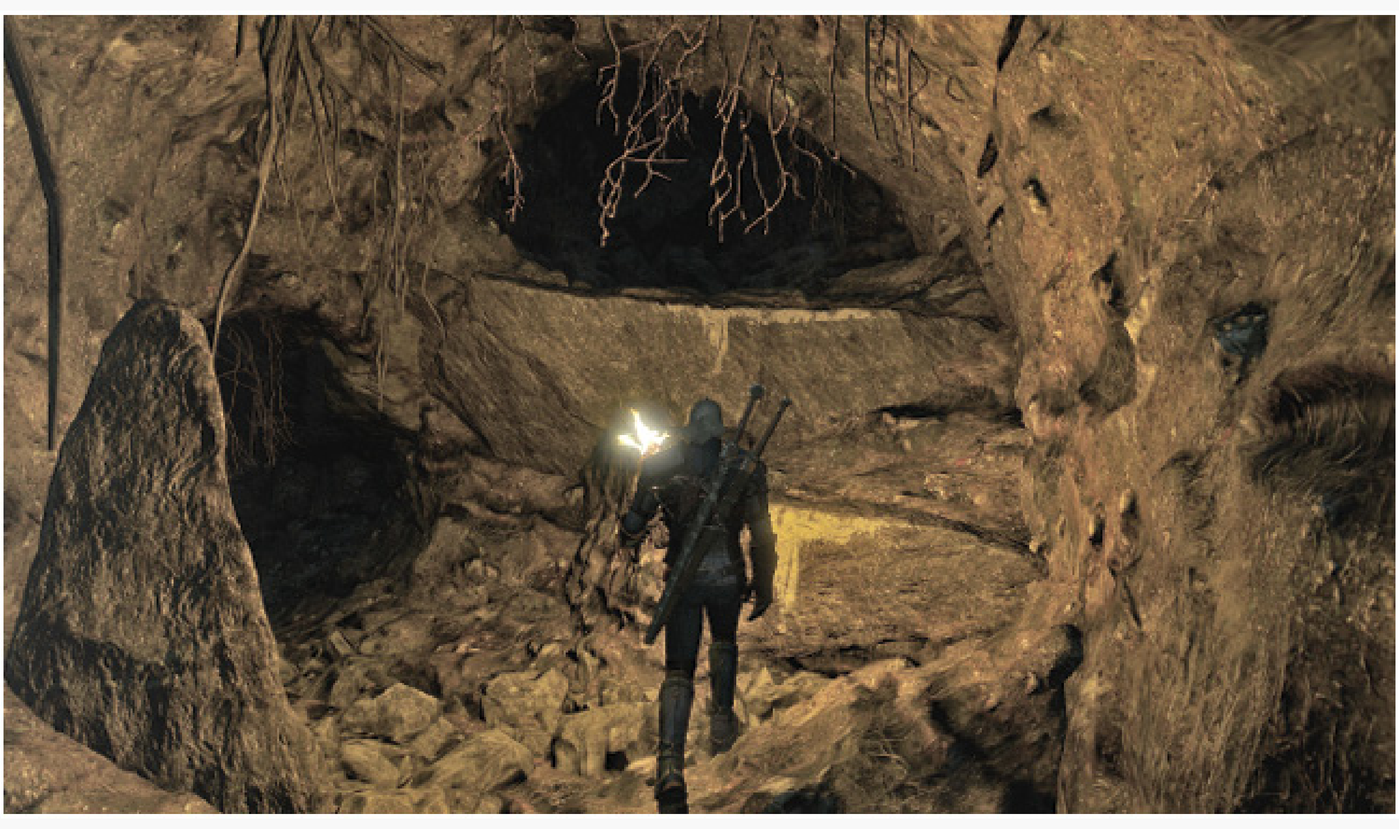
A
Examine

The locked cellars are by the road, on the west side of the manor house compound. Enter before dark, and the cellar is quiet. Meditate until after dark, or return after the sun has set, and you can begin to look around.

- There's evidence of rats. Not known to kidnap farmhands.
- Some shattered dishes, probably shaken off a shelf.
- A pulse of sound, and a rumble under the foundations of the cellar!

OBJECTIVE:

- Figure out what's causing the noises coming from the cellars.



Head to the southeastern corner of the cellars to a highly suspect area of rock wall, and break through it with a breezy hammering, courtesy of Aard. This leads to some kind of labyrinthine burrow. Follow it as it curves around to the left. When you reach a shaft of light from above, stop. There are two paths to investigate: the tunnel continuation, and a lower tunnel passage to your right (drop off the ledge).

- Investigate the continuation of the tunnel first. It curves around and leads to a cavern where a trio of Kikimore Workers must be fought. Other than these creatures, the area is devoid of evidence, and is a dead-end. Head back up to the shaft of light.
- Drop down at the shaft of light to a lower tunnel. To the northwest is a dead-end and a Kikimore to slay so you aren't savaged from behind. Then turn and follow the lower tunnel down and around to the left. Deliver death to two more Kikimore Workers before you spot a rock ledge on your right with some light lichen staining (as shown in the previous picture). Climb up there in a moment. For now, continue down the tight tunnel, dropping two further Kikimore workers, and looting some treasure from some bundles at the dead end.

Climb the rock ledges, and use Aard to blow open a pile of rocks blocking you from a cavern ledge. Whatever was making the seismic disturbances is quickly leaving this cavern, and you are too late to intercept it.

OBJECTIVES:

- Search the underground tunnels.
- Destroy all the eggs in the nest.

The cavern widens out, but you are waylaid by four Kikimore Workers and a larger Warrior. Slaughter them all, before making some quick examinations using your Witcher Senses:

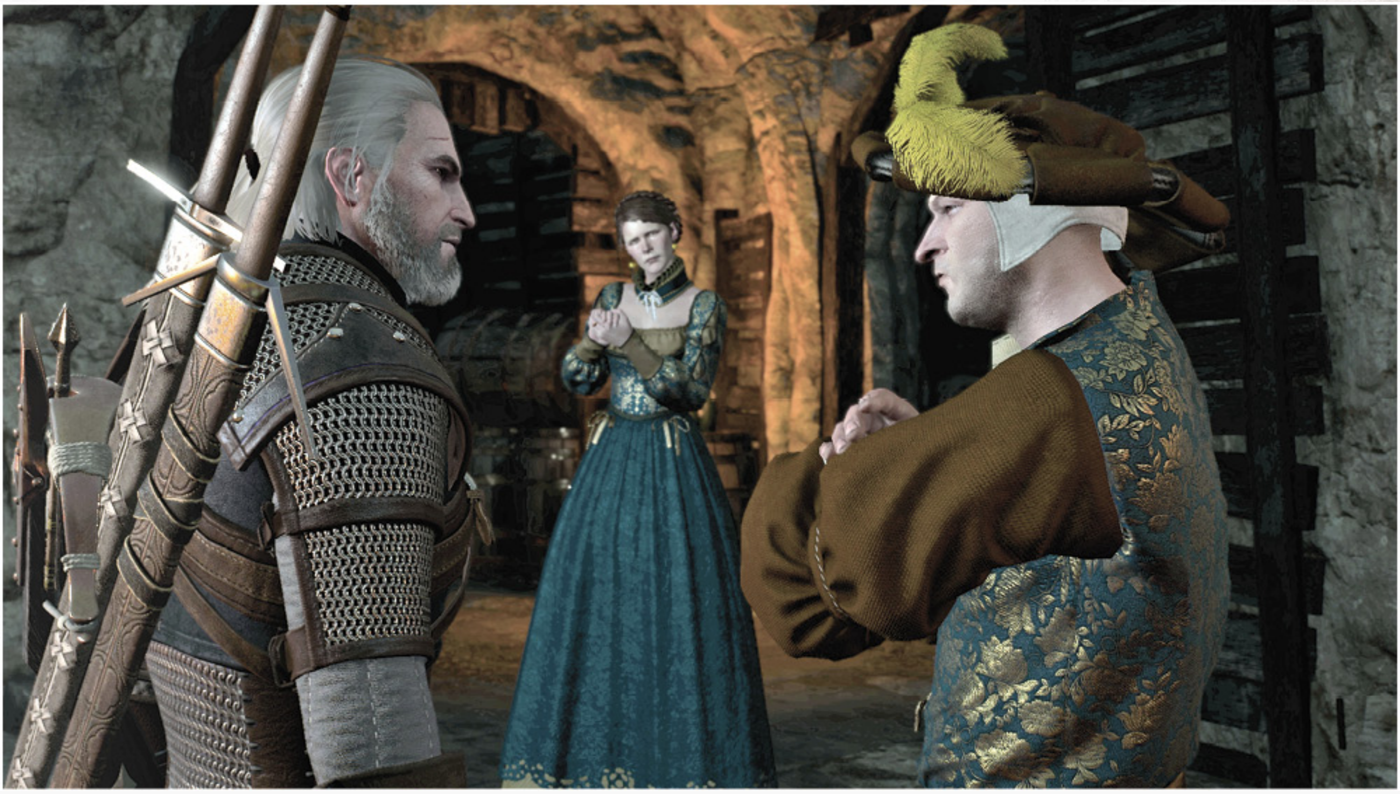
- The cavern walls show tunneling of something much bigger than a Kikimore; something with heavy, wide claws.
- A clutch of Kikimore eggs; something has been feeding on them.
- A ledge and tunnel to the northeast, leading to a nest of Kikimore eggs. Use Igni or Aard, and destroy every single last one of them. There are additional eggs to destroy in the northeast corner of the previous cavern where you fought the Warrior.
- Use your Witcher Senses and examine a large crack in the floor of the nest tunnel; it seems the monster you're after lives underground, digs tunnels, feeds on Kikimores, and is very big.

Contract: The Tufo Monster

Pomposity And Perfidy

OBJECTIVE:

- Return to the surface and talk to the owner.



Retrace your steps all the way back to the Tufo cellars, where Monsieur Bourbeau and his wife are waiting to give you a dressing down. He's surprised to learn of the network of burrowing tunnels below his estate, and almost thanks you for burning all the Kikimore eggs, instead letting his money do the talking.

Items: Crowns (100)

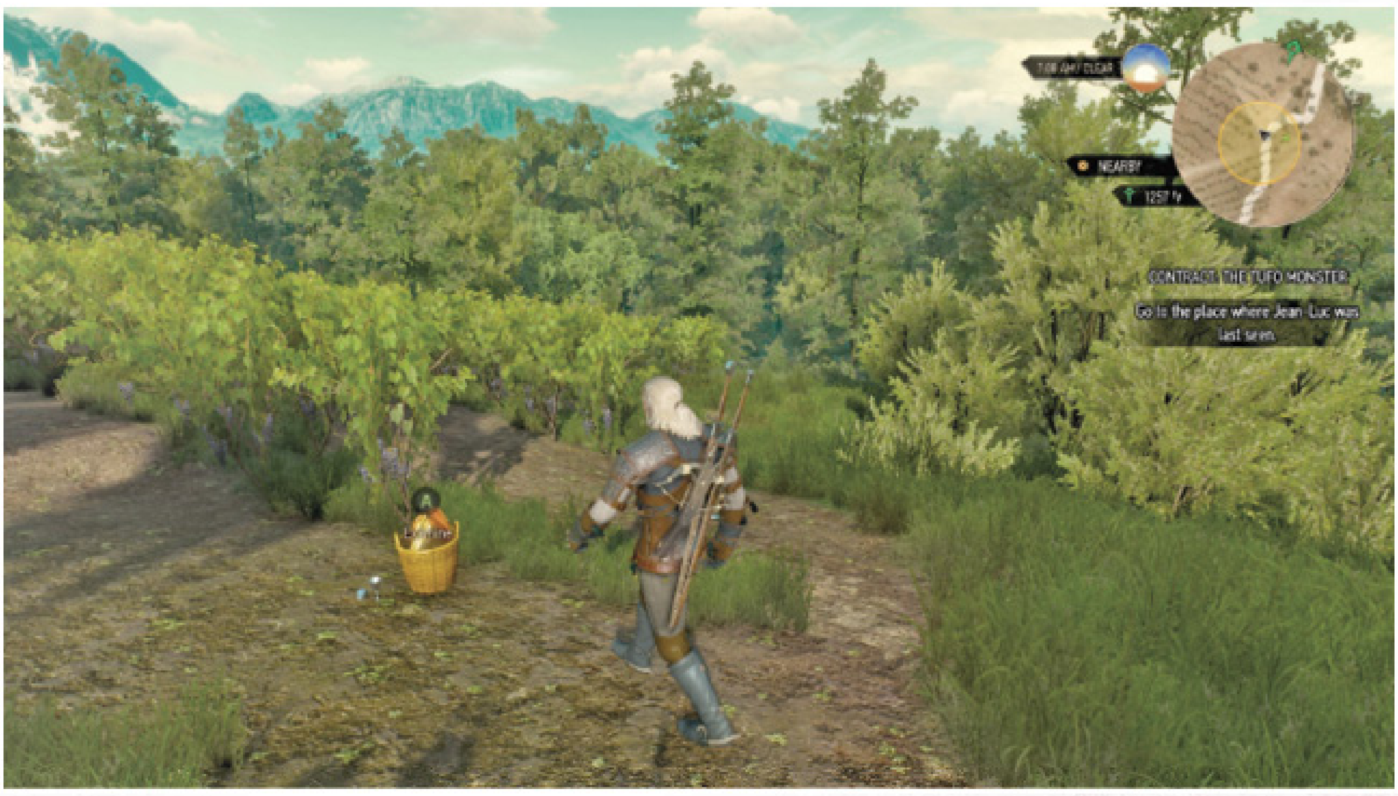
You turn your attention to Madame Bourbeau, who has knowledge of the missing farmhand; more knowledge than Monsieur Bourbeau would be comfortable knowing, in fact. She tells you she and Jean-Luc went to examine some seedlings, odd noises were heard, Jean-Luc investigated, and never returned. Ask where he was seen last, and if he had any distinguishing marks (Madame Bourbeau seems to have intimate knowledge of his build and hair), and the description gives you something to go on.

Contract: The Tufo Monster

Jean-Luc Out Of Luck

OBJECTIVE:

- Go to the place where Jean-Luc was last seen.



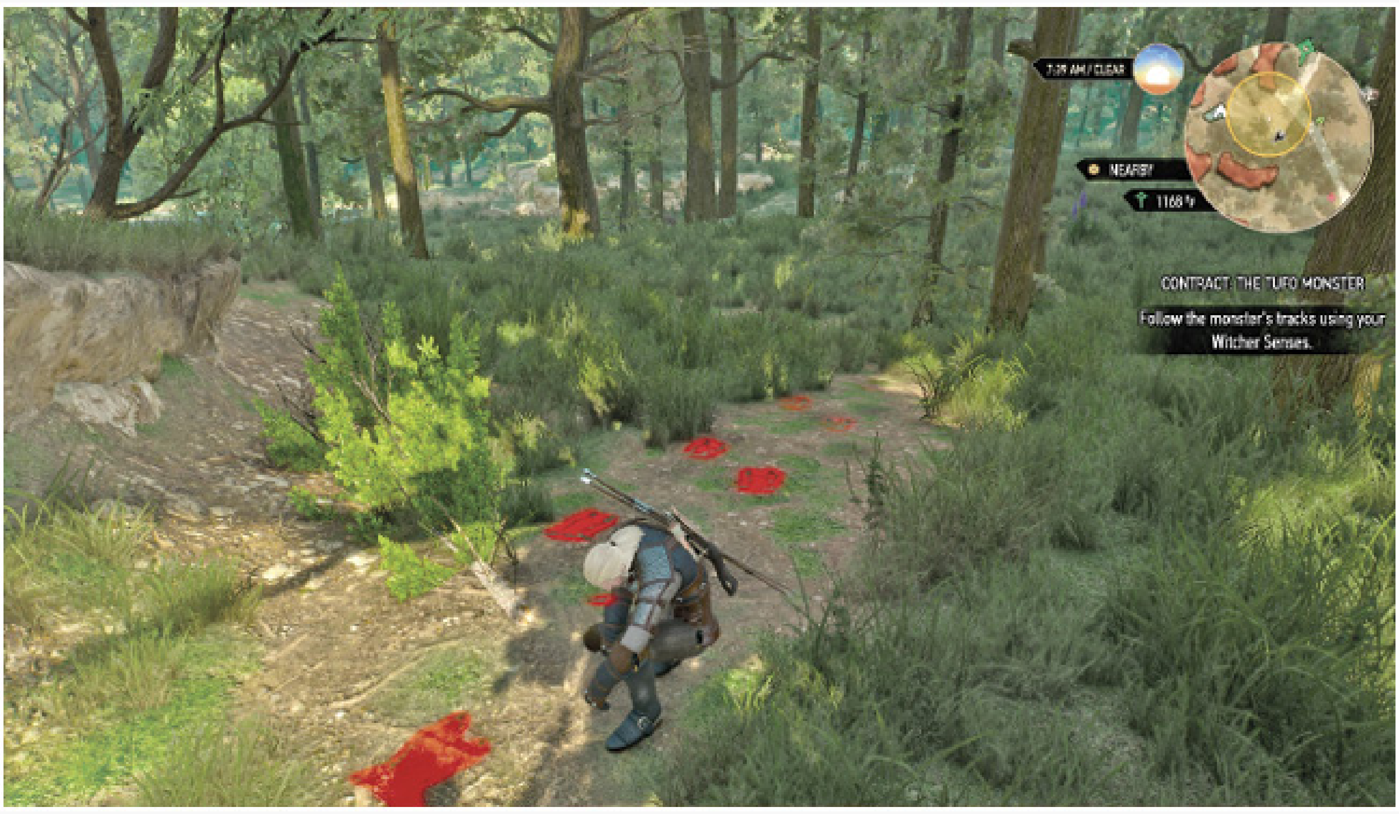
Go to the place where Jean-Luc was last seen.

A little farther north and west, within the estate's vineyards, is a basket of stale bread. A quick check using your Witcher Senses reveals a flattened area near to the basket where a blanket was laid out. A bottle of good vintage wine is discarded; it seems Jean-Luc was doing more than examining seedlings. A little farther down the hill are two sets of footprints.

OBJECTIVES:

- Follow Jean-Luc's tracks using your Witcher Senses.
- Follow the monster's tracks using your Witcher Senses.

Start a roughly northwest run down the hill. The first set of prints quickly turns to the path on your right. Ignore those, and head farther northwest, examining the man's prints and following them into the woods.



Follow the monster's tracks using your Witcher Senses.

At the edge of woods, near a tree stump, is evidence of human blood. By a second tree stump is a piece of horned carapace, and the start of some monster tracks.

A nearby rock has some straight claw marks perfect for digging. Further into the woods are felled trees as if something rolled over them. You have a feeling you're dealing with a Shaelmaar. Follow and examine the large deep tracks, passing one cave entrance, to a second cave mouth close to Filament Stream.

There are more claw marks as you drop down into the cave. Turn right and head roughly south as the cavern widens, and you encounter two Giant Centipedes, lured here for some reason. Slice them apart before continuing, then head farther into the cave. Use your Witcher Senses to "see" the Shaelmaar's movements as you wind through a small network of tunnel passages. Find the Giant Centipede tunnel that ends with a small cavern with a skeleton, and pick up some truly astonishing Grandmaster Ursine diagrams (pick them up to start Scavenger Hunt: Master Master Master Master!, see page 604 for the full details). Look south from this dead-end out of a hole in the wall; there's something in the larger cavern below you.

Items: Diagram: Grandmaster Ursine Trousers, Diagram: Grandmaster Ursine Steel sword, Diagram: Grandmaster Ursine Boots, Junod of Belhaven's journal

OBJECTIVES:

- Collect some blood from the body in the cave.
- Brew Shaelmaar bait.
- Spread the bait in tunnels near the surface.

Wind your way, dodging the dead-end tunnels, until you reach the grand cavern itself, a cathedral of rock and the Shaelmaar's lair where it drags its victims. In fact, some of them are still pretty fresh.

Now to lure the Shaelmaar here to fight it, a plan involving the brewing of a special potion. Head along the southeast side of the cave until you find a nest-like alcove with a scattering of dead bodies. One of them is Jean-Luc; he has crushed ribs, cracked skull, and exhibits classic Shaelmaar wounds. Fortunately, his blood is fresh enough to concoct bait from. You can also find a silver pendant near Jean-Luc's body, which seems to hold a lock of Madame Bourbeau's hair.

Later, you can optionally hand this pendant to Madame Bourbeau or Monsieur de Bourbeau. Give the pendant to Madame, and she is grateful you kept her secret and she rewards you, though you later see her mourning her lost lover. Give the pendant to Monsieur and you reveal his wife's secret. He still rewards you, but is less than thrilled.

Access your Alchemy Menu Panel, and open the "Quests" tab. You automatically have the formula for Shaelmaar Bait, and now you've siphoned off some of Jean-Luc's blood, all you need are sewant mushrooms, which are growing throughout this cave complex. Gather three lots of this fungi, and mix up the bait.

Items: Formula: Shaelmaar Bait, Fresh Human Blood, Sewant Mushrooms

SHAELMAAR BAIT

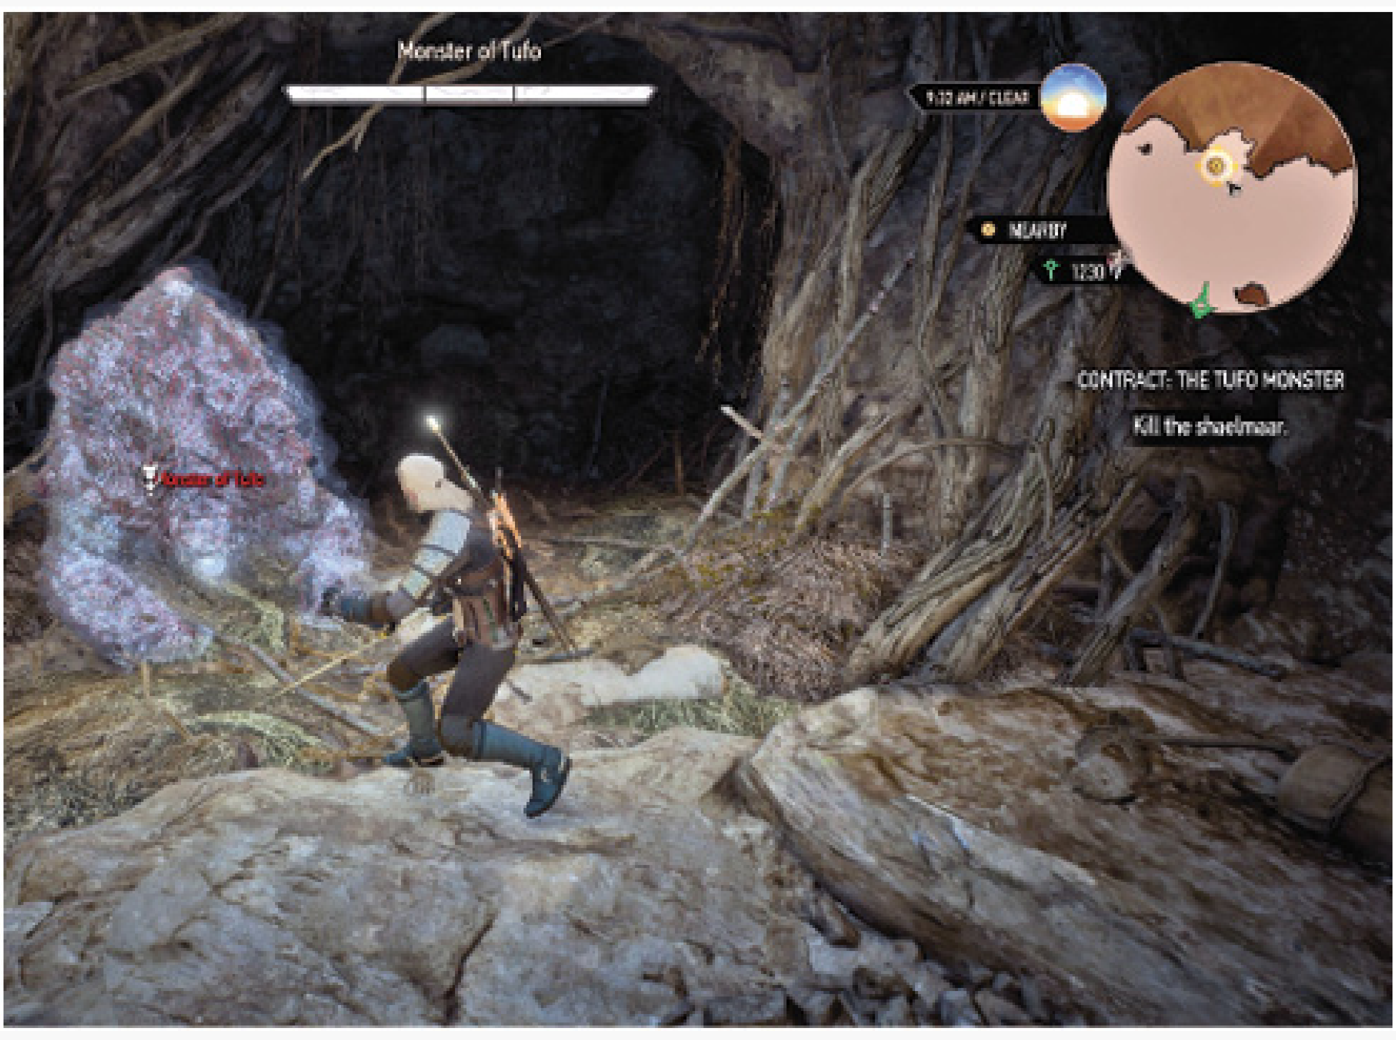
Now spend a few moments preparing for the fight, and spilling drops of the bait at the indicated spots on your mini-map, at the five locations around the lair.

OBJECTIVE:

- Kill the shaelmaar.

You hear an earth-shaking noise as one of the largest and most aggressive Shaelmaars you've ever set your cat eyes on rumbles into the cavern, and must be destroyed. Don't get stuck in any of the cavern alcoves, and use ledges to climb up on to gain a brief respite during battle. But also remember the Shaelmaar uses echo location to find you; staying silent is sometimes the best way out of a sticky situation.



READY TO RUMBLE?

Attention, Witcher! This sizable foe is an incredibly difficult adversary if you're just bumbling your way through this contract. Learn the very best methods to slay this fearsome foe by reading up on Shaelmaars in the Bestiary on page 748.

OBJECTIVES:

- Collect a trophy from the Shaelmaar.
- Return to your contract giver for your reward.

Return to the Tufo Vineyard, and locate Monsieur Bourbeau (he's usually in the cellar, overseeing the sealing of the tunnels). Though you apparently made a poor first impression, you ultimately proved your worth, once you explained what you killed. Claim the reward, listen as Bourbeau reveals he cares not a jot about Jean-Luc, give him the verbal finger, and conclude this quest.

If you have the silver pendant, you can choose to give it to either of the interested parties. Give it to Monsieur Bourbeau who realizes his wife was having an affair. He pays you a small amount of gold and kicks his wife out. Give it to Madame Bourbeau and she mourns Jean-Luc's passing and gives you a reward.

LOCATIONS: Nilfgaardian Embassy, Grottore's Grotto (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: Lady Jaquette, Francois de Goff

ENEMIES: Grottore (Spriggan), Archespore

OBJECTIVE:

- Find Francois.

QUESTING DECISIONS

This Quest is accessible during Blood and Wine Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint, or at any time afterwards. The quest begins once you stumble across Jacquette on the stone balcony overlooking the docks and lake.

Grottore (Spriggan)

Lady Jaquette, a well-to-do lass is extremely excited to meet your acquaintance when you find her watching the boats from the stone balcony just west of the Nilfgaardian Embassy in Beauclair. It seems when Master Dandelion tarried here, not a day passed without him baying a ballad that mentioned your name. Enough gushing; the lady has a problem concerning her betrothed, Francois le Goff, who has vowed to return with the head of a horrid beast they call Grottore. She is troubled that her love hasn't returned after a fortnight. Optionally ask more about the Grottore, before agreeing to (and upping your fee for) this job.

The beast lurks in a cave at the foot of the Gorgon Hills. Set off into the hilly terrain and soft roadways of this Territory, to the northwest of Beauclair Palace. At this point, Francois becomes relatively easy to find. You can:

- Head to the cave entrance indicated on your mini-map, and the knight saunters up behind you, warning you of the beast lurking there. This usually happens if you take the long road south from Chuchote Cave.
- Head to the bluff above the cave entrance, where you find Francois' camp and the knight himself having a quiet doze (pictured). After waking him up, you chat. This usually happens if you take the path down from behind the Palace.

Francois seems reticent to fight the fabled Grottore, but he gave his word. Answer him as you wish, before he sets off, down the hill, and into the cave entrance.

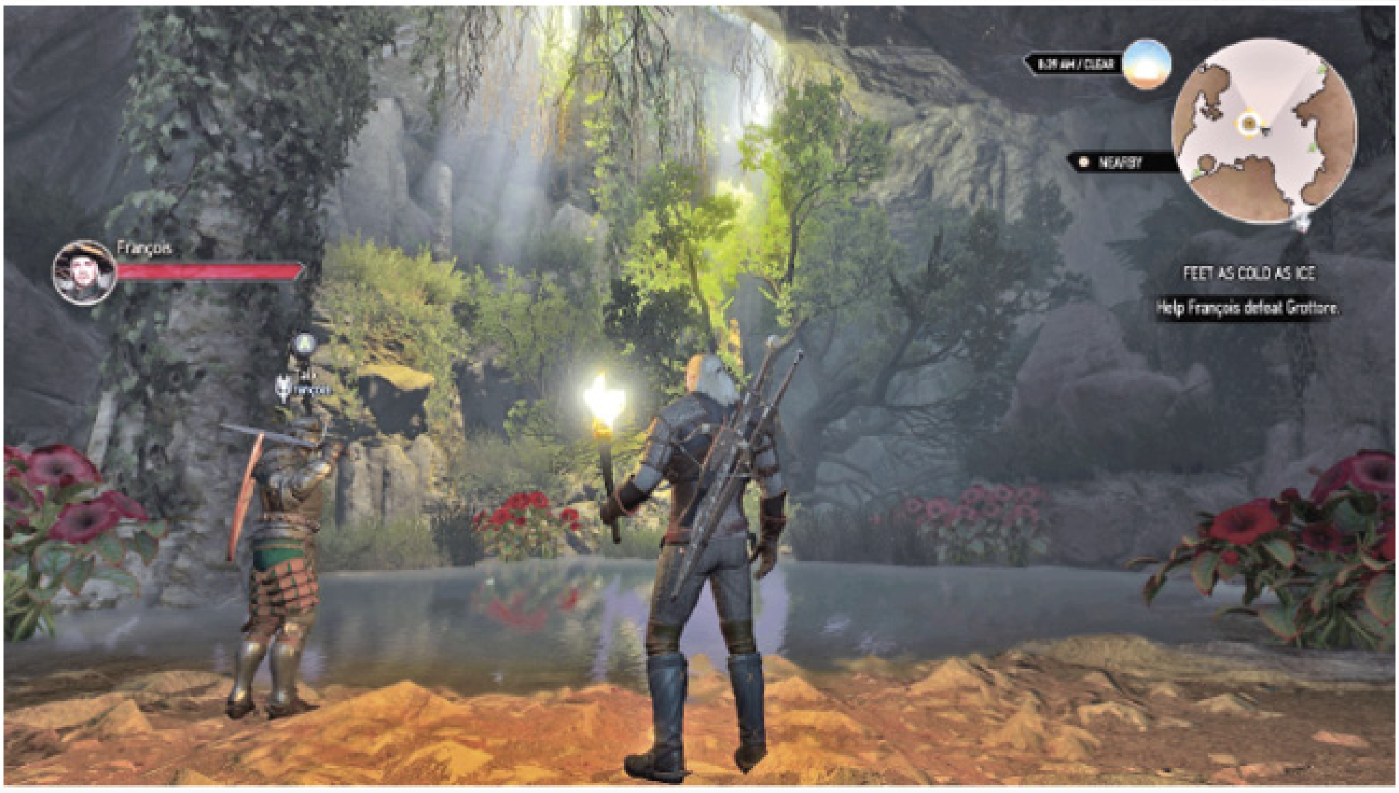
Into The Grotto Of Grottore The Grotesque

OBJECTIVES:

- Help Francois defeat Grottore.
- Find Grottore using your Witcher Senses.
- Read the Bestiary entry about Grottore.
- Lure out Grottore by setting fire to the plants using the Igni Sign.



Enter Gottore's Grotto, two tunnels that link to a huge shallow water grotto with amazing dappled light from above. The beast isn't here, prompting Francois to wonder if they should simply leave. But you're here to help! Begin by conducting a thorough sweep of the grotto using your Witcher Senses:

- There are five huge blooms of flowers, impressive enough for one to think they were in a winter garden.
- A massive tangle of tree roots and branches, impervious to both Signs and swords. A more cunning method of luring Grottore is needed than stabbing his tree barricade.
- There's a cradle filled with children's shoes; a grotesque collection when you figure out what happened to those that wore them.
- To the left of the cradle, in the long grass, are bones—the small skull of an infant. Close to the rock wall are some sundries and tools taken from the victims.

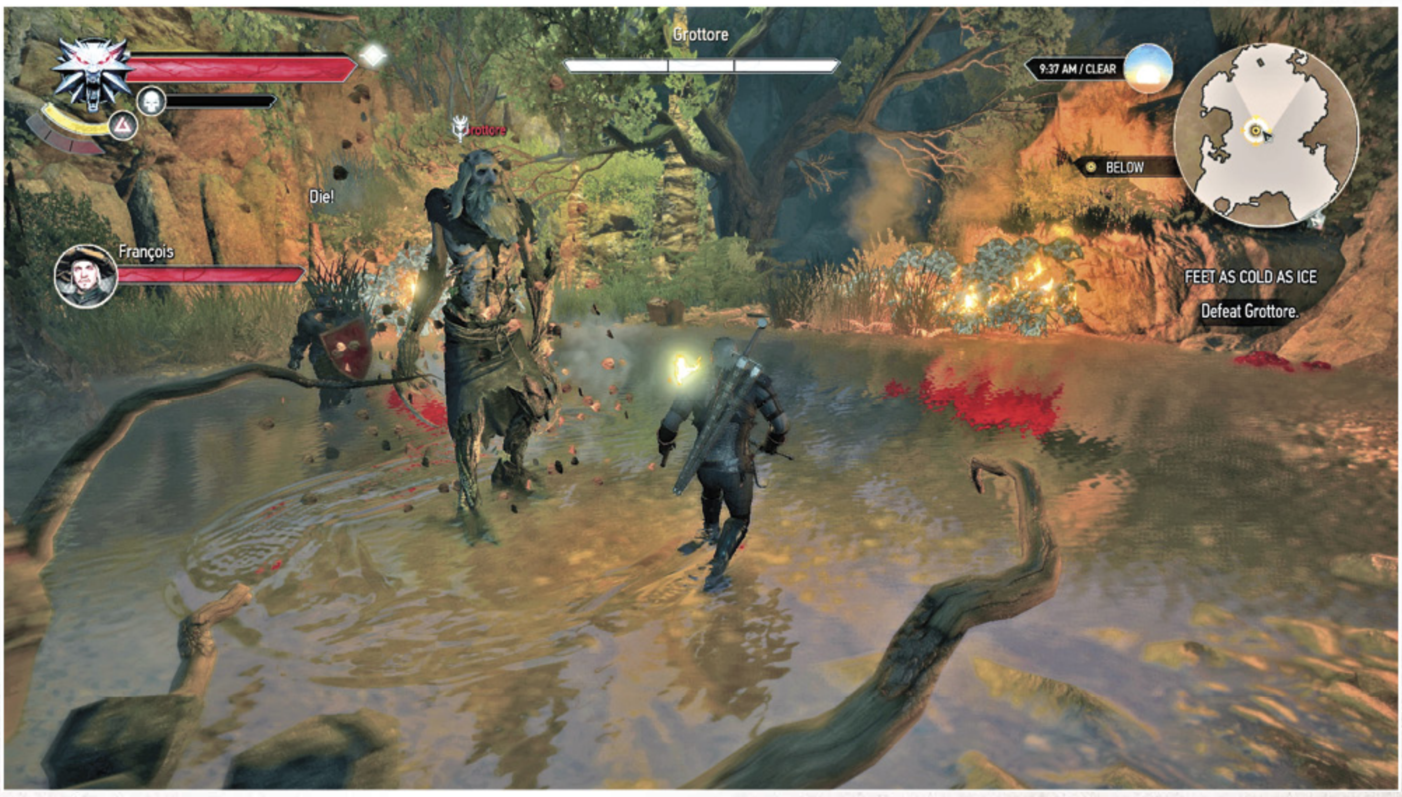
Grottore is a Spriggan, a powerful Relict that is somewhere in this grotto, probably feeding. Time to read the Bestiary entry about this beast; access the Bestiary Panel menu and check the "Relicts" section. Apparently, Grottore isn't a big fan of anyone scorching his prize flowers, so start drenching them in Igni fire. It only takes three burning sets of flowers, and Grottore comes lumbering out of his hollow.

Contract: Feet Cold As Ice

Hot Spriggan. Cold Feet.

OBJECTIVES:

- Defeat Grottore.
- Return to Francois' beloved.



Out comes Grottore, the most powerful Spriggan in all of Toussaint! He has root tendrils that can choke and stab, summoned Archespores to throw their spittle at you and distract you, and a short teleportation to ensure you're never able to cut him down quickly. Furthermore, it's imperative that Francois survives this fight, or his betrothed won't be marrying anyone! When you've successfully bombed and incinerated Grottore, combat concludes.

SCORCHING SPRIGGANS FOR FUN AND PROFIT

Hold there, Witcher! This Relict may look dry enough to go up as kindling, but there are other methods of defeating this baby-munching horror. Prepare for this fight by reading up on Spriggan combat in the Bestiary, on page 749.

GROTTORE'S VULNERABILITIES

Dimeritium Bomb

Igni

After the fight, assuming Francois is alive, he thanks you for aiding him, which prompts you to ask why he didn't seek out a less fearsome beast to slay. It seems the knight isn't that keen on marriage, despite a courtship lasting over two years! The conversation turns to a slight, as you answer as you wish, and Francois remains firm that he must still find other beasts to slay, if only to delay his nuptials further. If you encourage the knight to return to Jaquette and marry her, he will. If you don't, then the knight leaves and Jaquette breaks off the engagement. Either way, return to her and she pays your fee. If the knight falls to misfortune, return to Jaquette anyway and let her know the bad news.

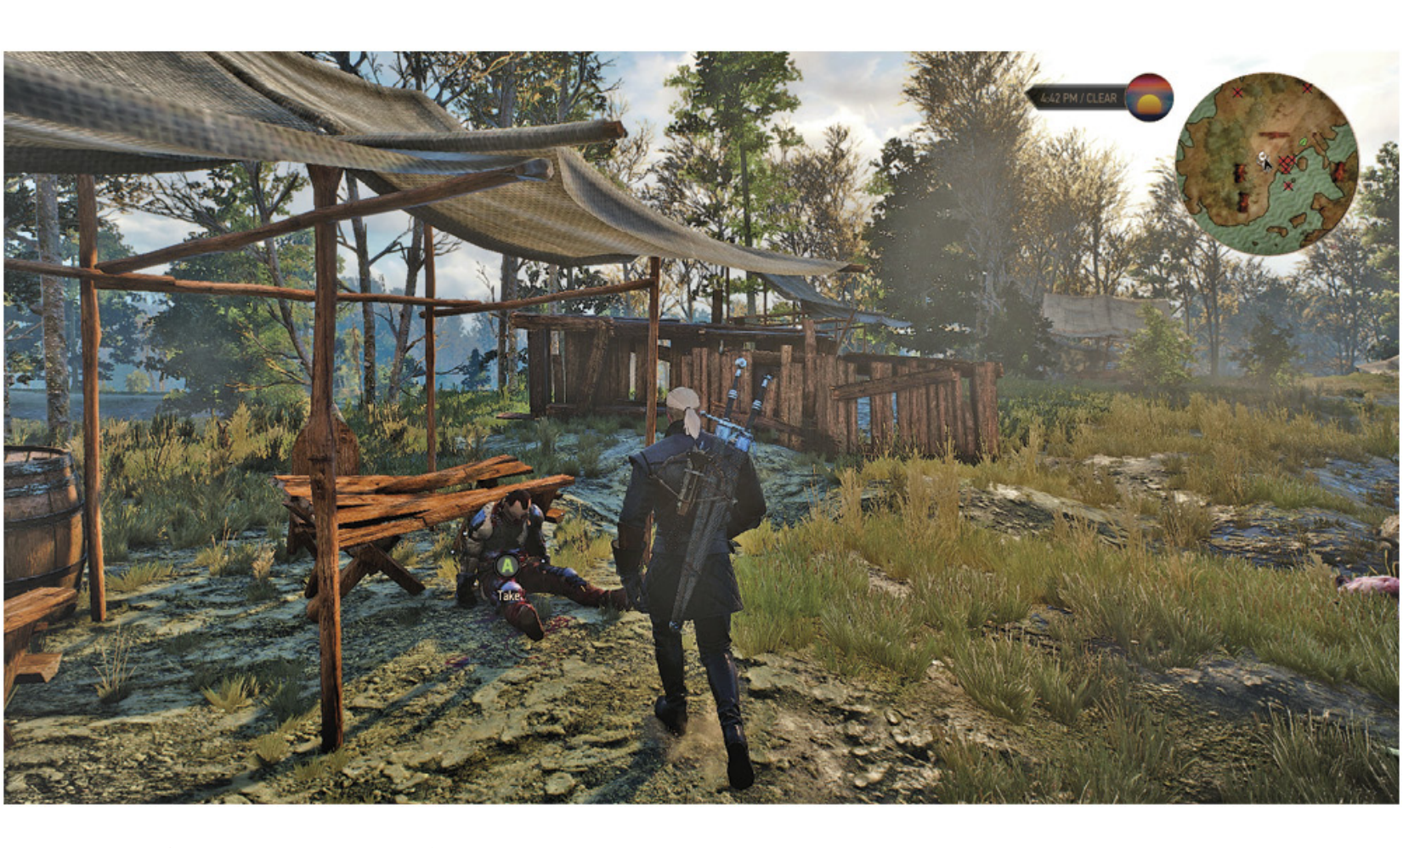
Treasure Hunts

Overview

When adventuring across the Northern Realm, you should consider taking time to uncover a variety of lost or well-hidden troves of treasure. These are sub-divided into two types (all within the "Treasure Hunts" section of your Quest menu): "Treasure Hunts" (involving hidden treasure (and occasionally maps) and "Scavenger Hunts" (involving the search for Witcher gear diagrams of great importance). There are also other treasure chests to ransack; not related to either of the "tracked" quest types.

TREASURE HUNTS

In addition to chests or valuables just found strewn or hidden about you, there are 57 Treasure Hunts. These quick tasks start with you finding a clue, indicating the presence of treasure at a predetermined spot. This clue is almost always a note (or occasionally a map) on or near a deceased person, or a chest. There is usually a "glittering" indication that there's something worth checking at the location, so loot it!



In this example (Treasure Hunt: Blood Gold), you find a bloodstained key and letter on this dead deserter.

When you find the note (or map), always check your Quest Items menu and read the parchment; it almost always updates your objectives (and map), and holds a clue to where the treasure may be found, or to the next part of your hunt. Now follow the advice in the guide, searching a (usually nearby) area for the chest that the key opens, or the note mentioned. Sometimes the chest is underwater, or hidden from prying hands. After the treasure is claimed, the hunt is complete!

The reward for finding a Treasure Hunt chest is one or more of the following:

Items: Random diagram(s), armor, gems, valuables, materials, alchemic ingredientas, and/or coins

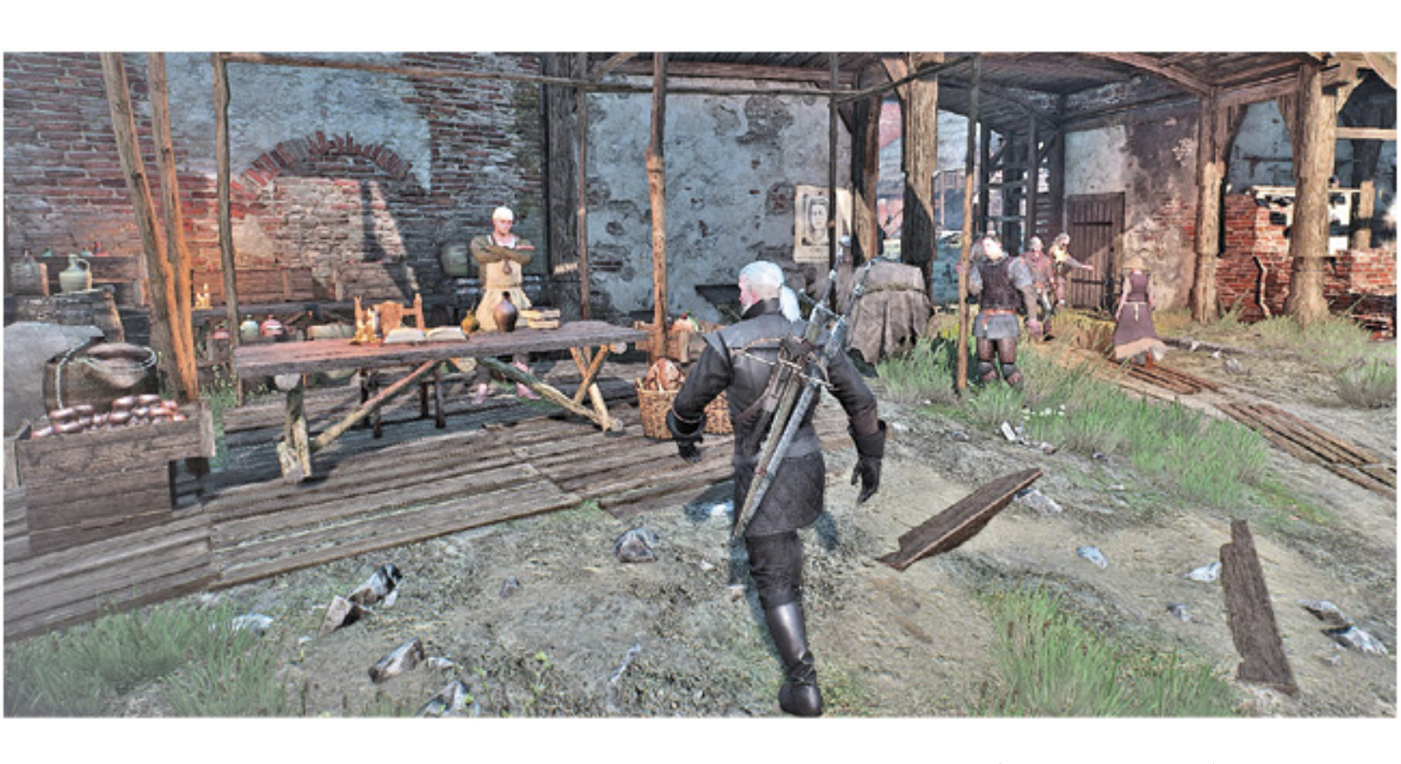
SCAVENGER HUNTS

Scavenger Hunts are much more involved quests for treasure of a specific nature. In each Scavenger Hunt, you must locate a number of diagrams of long-lost Witcher Gear—armor and weapons that are among the best items that you can craft. It is wise to undertake these quests as soon as possible, unless locations have particularly powerful beasts guarding them.

Searching for Witcher gear diagrams can begin in one of two ways:

1. You can explore the Northern Realms, and stumble across the location of a basic diagram for a piece of Witcher Gear, contained in a treasure chest.

2. You can explore the Northern Realms, and visit a merchant, trader, armorer or blacksmith, and purchase a set of maps or notes from them, which give clues to the whereabouts of particular diagrams. The precise vendors to visit are listed at the start of each Scavenger Hunt. Once you purchase and examine the notes or maps, they reveal the location of some of the upgraded gear diagrams from a particular Witcher School, while also starting the quest to find the basic gear too. Specific maps detail between three and six enhanced diagrams, so multiple maps or notes are needed to find everything.



In this example, a visit to the Quartermaster's store at Crow's Perch in Velen allows you to purchase (for around 65 crowns) the third of Adalbert Kermith's maps. This unlocks the first part of the Cat Gear Scavenger Hunt (prompting you to find Basic gear), as well as hinting at the locations for upgraded gear (in this case, all of the Superior Cat Gear). Remember you need to find all of the maps, and complete the Scavenger Hunts in the proper order.

The actual Scavenger Hunt starts with the retrieval of the Basic diagrams for all parts of a particular Witcher School's gear. Once you have all the basic diagrams, you can start accumulating better versions of the basic gear, which are only mentioned in notes or maps you must purchase from vendors. You need to collect these diagrams in a particular order: Basic, Enhanced, Superior, and finally Mastercrafted.

Are you looking for the Scavenger Hunt chests in the Atlas? Then look for these icons, which show the chest location that concludes the objective for each specific diagram (or groups of diagrams).

THE OTHER WILD HUNT: SCAVENGER HUNT TIPS

Scavenger hunts are "freeform". This means that you don't have to complete the search for Basic gear in any particular order. The order you find the Basic gear is completely up to you, and the methods shown in this guide are optional (though they are optimal).

You can also listen to the conversations of peasants or townsfolk across the land; they sometimes give hints at locations to search (though your guide makes this plan unnecessary).

You must find the upgraded diagrams: Enhanced, Superior, and Mastercrafted.

You need multiple maps or notes (purchased from multiple vendors) to uncover the whereabouts of all these upgraded diagrams.

However, within the clues given by each map, specific diagrams can be found in any order. This means it's usually easiest to visit each vendor, buy all their maps or notes pertaining to Scavenger Hunts, read them all, and start all the Scavenger Hunts at once.

There are diagrams for Viper (Serpentine), Griffin, Cat (Feline), Bear (Ursine), and Wolven gear. Of these, the Scavenger Hunt for Viper gear (consisting of only two swords) does not have upgraded gear. However, there is Viper armor (and gauntlets, boots, and trousers), as well as Venomous Steel and Silver swords that can be gathered in an unmarked quest, as part of the Hearts of Stone Main Quest. Consult that Scavenger Hunt for the specifics.

The Blood and Wine expansion introduces six additional Scavenger Hunts. The first is a simple introduction to the Grand Master armorer Lazare Lafargue of Beauclair. There are five Scavenger Hunts for Grandmaster diagrams from the Griffin, Cat (Feline), Wolf, and Bear (Ursine) Schools, as well as the fabled Manticore School. Collect these diagrams (with the exception of the Manticore School parchments) after you've had Mastercrafted armor for each school made, as these are needed to upgrade each piece of Witcher Gear to Grand Master quality!

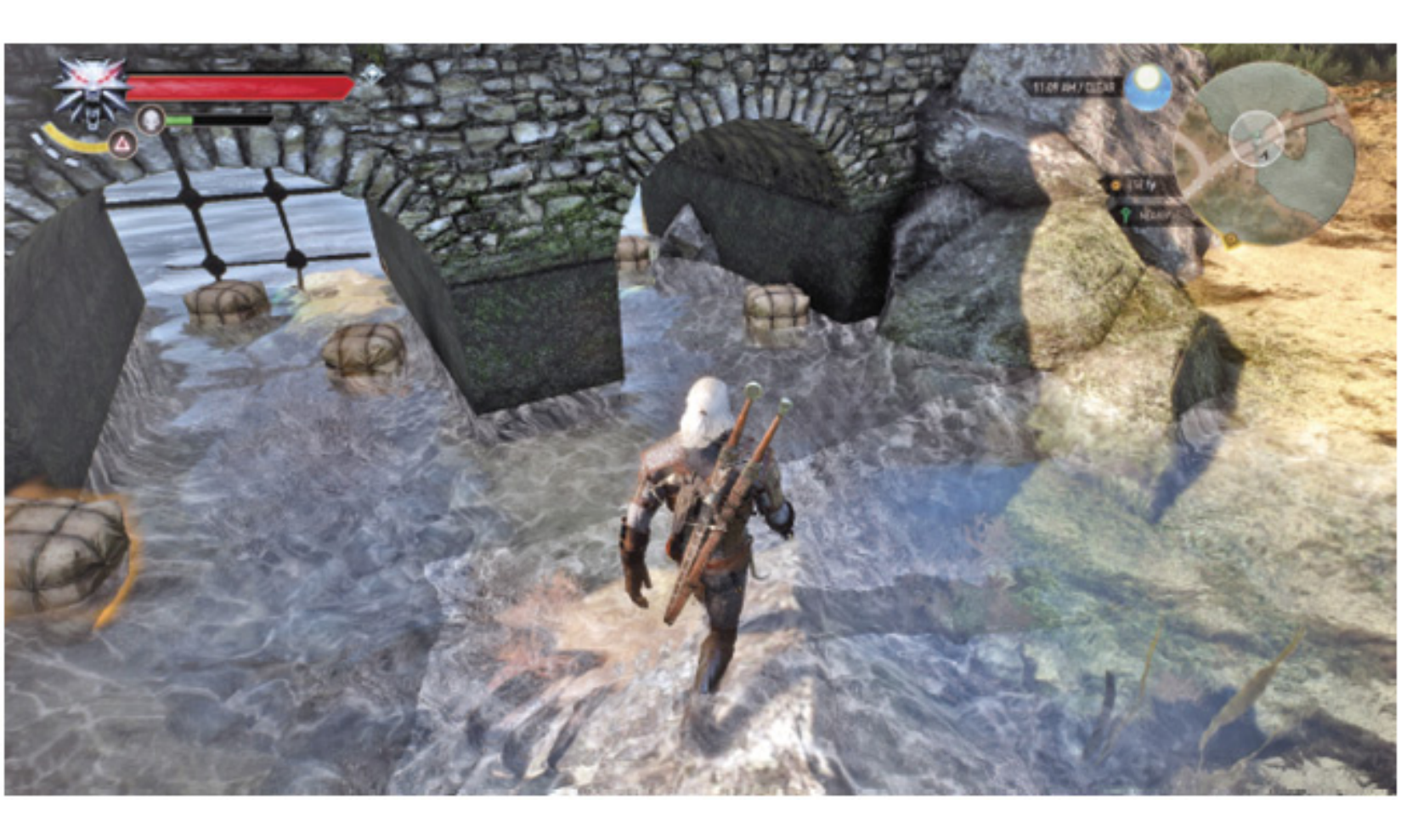
OTHER TREASURE TYPES: HIDDEN TREASURE

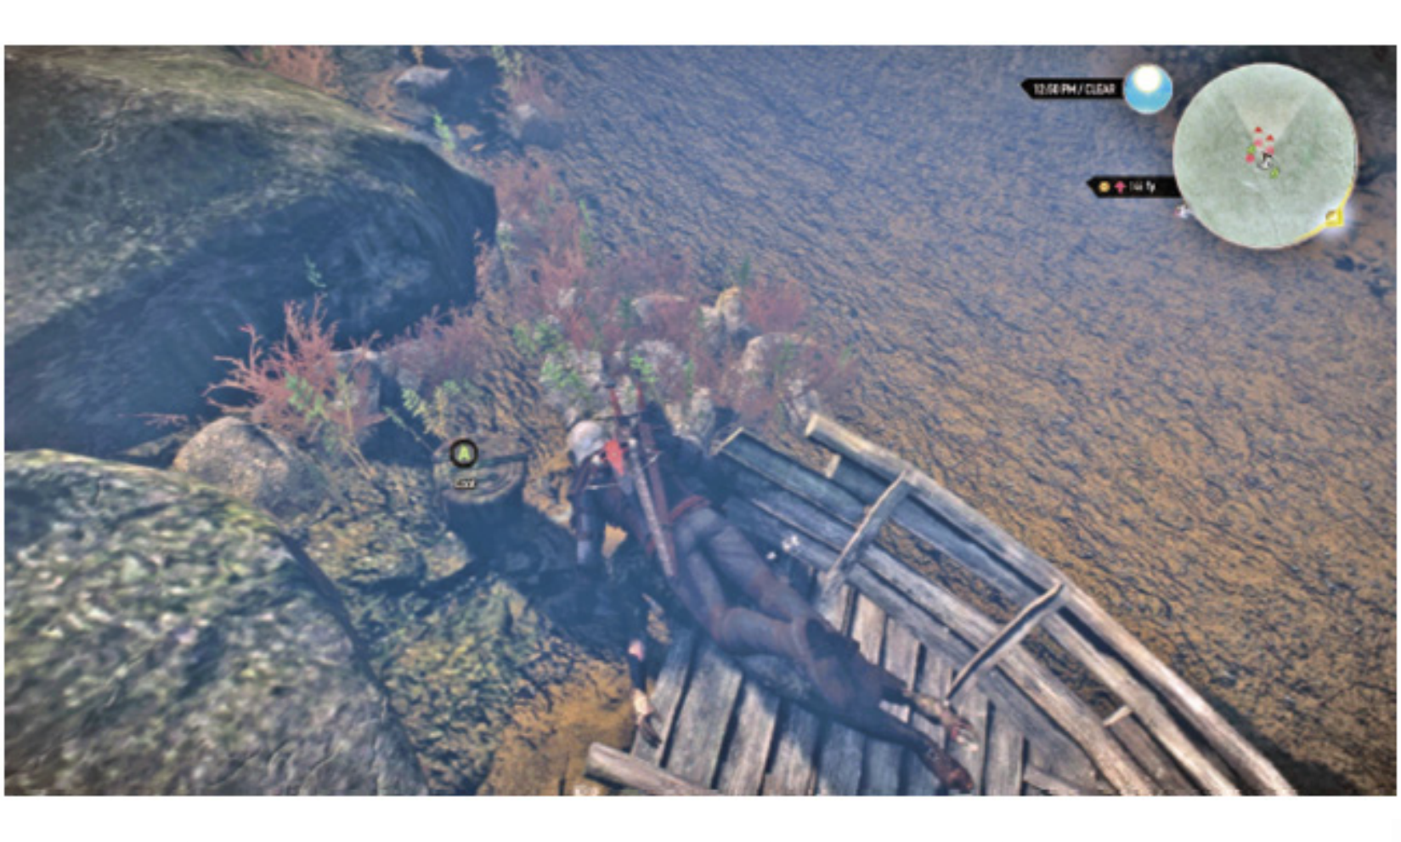
There are plenty of other chests hidden in cellars or atop towers throughout the Northern Realms, and these are known as "Hidden Treasure". These are chests containing one or more of the following: Coins, gems, diagrams, manuscripts, pages, notes, weapons, armor, equipment, or other items deemed worth your time finding. There is a vast number of these, and you are fortunate that the guide's Atlas flags the location of each one. Aside from the following examples, you should check the Atlas maps for all other chests of note.

HIDDEN TREASURE: SMUGGLER'S CACHE



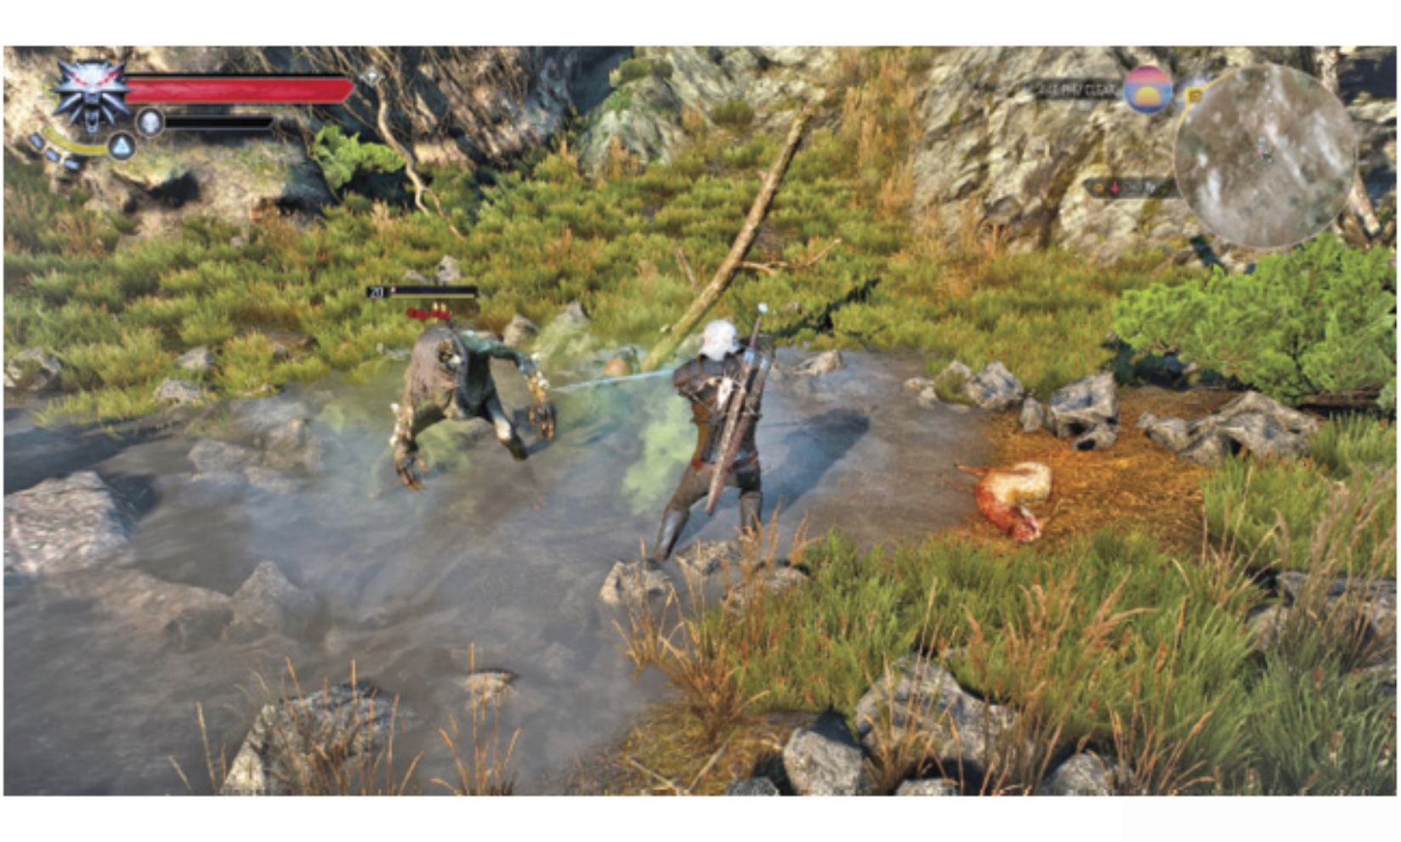
Search for a small item or items, sometimes valuable, hidden inside a chests or bundle, such as these hidden under a bridge.

HIDDEN TREASURE: SPOILS OF WAR



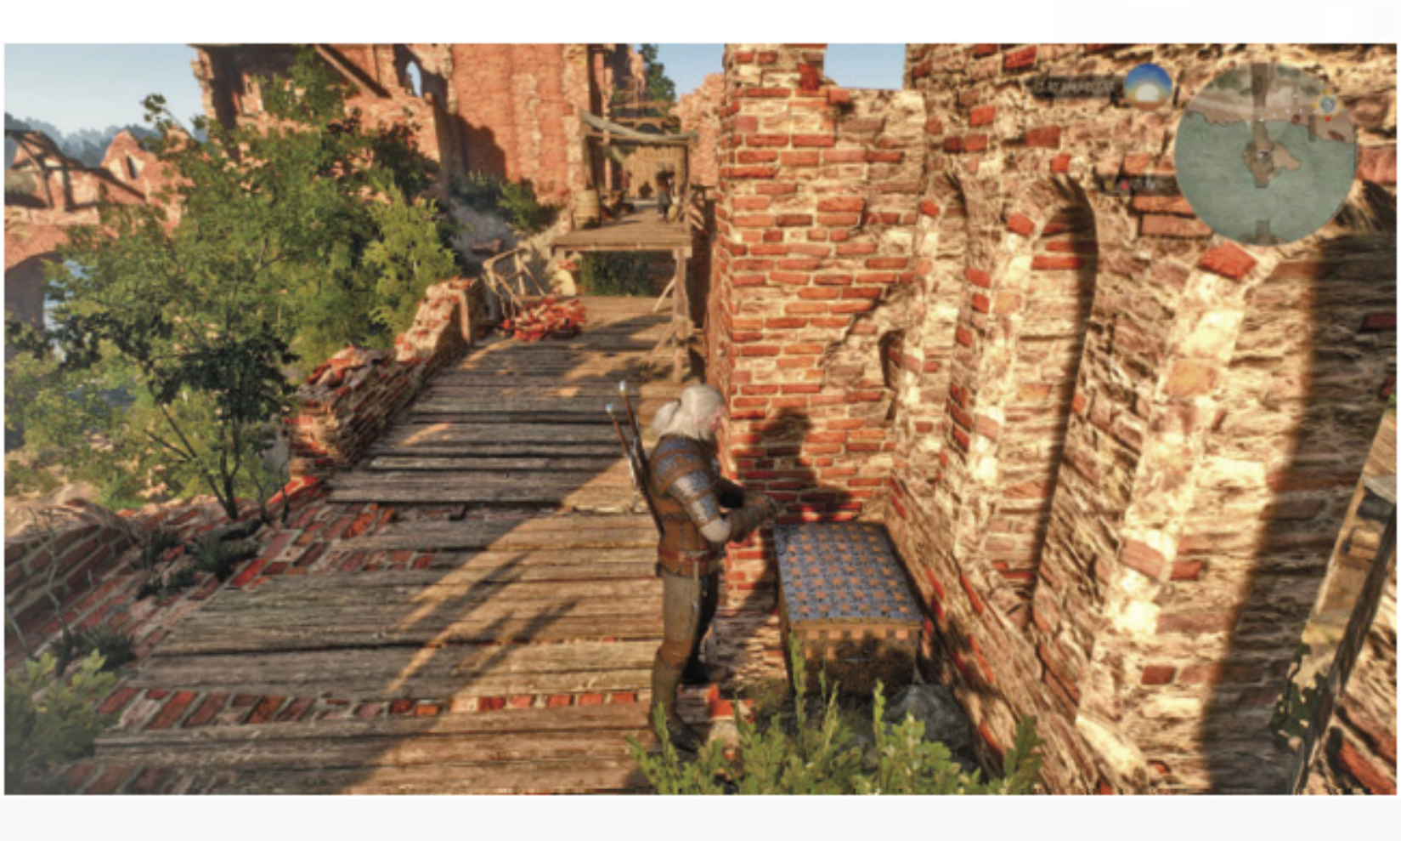
Usually at a site of a battle, now possibly pockmarked with the bodies of the fallen; explore the area for valuables, such as this chest in a sunken rowboat, with its other section floating on the river.

HIDDEN TREASURE: GUARDED TREASURE



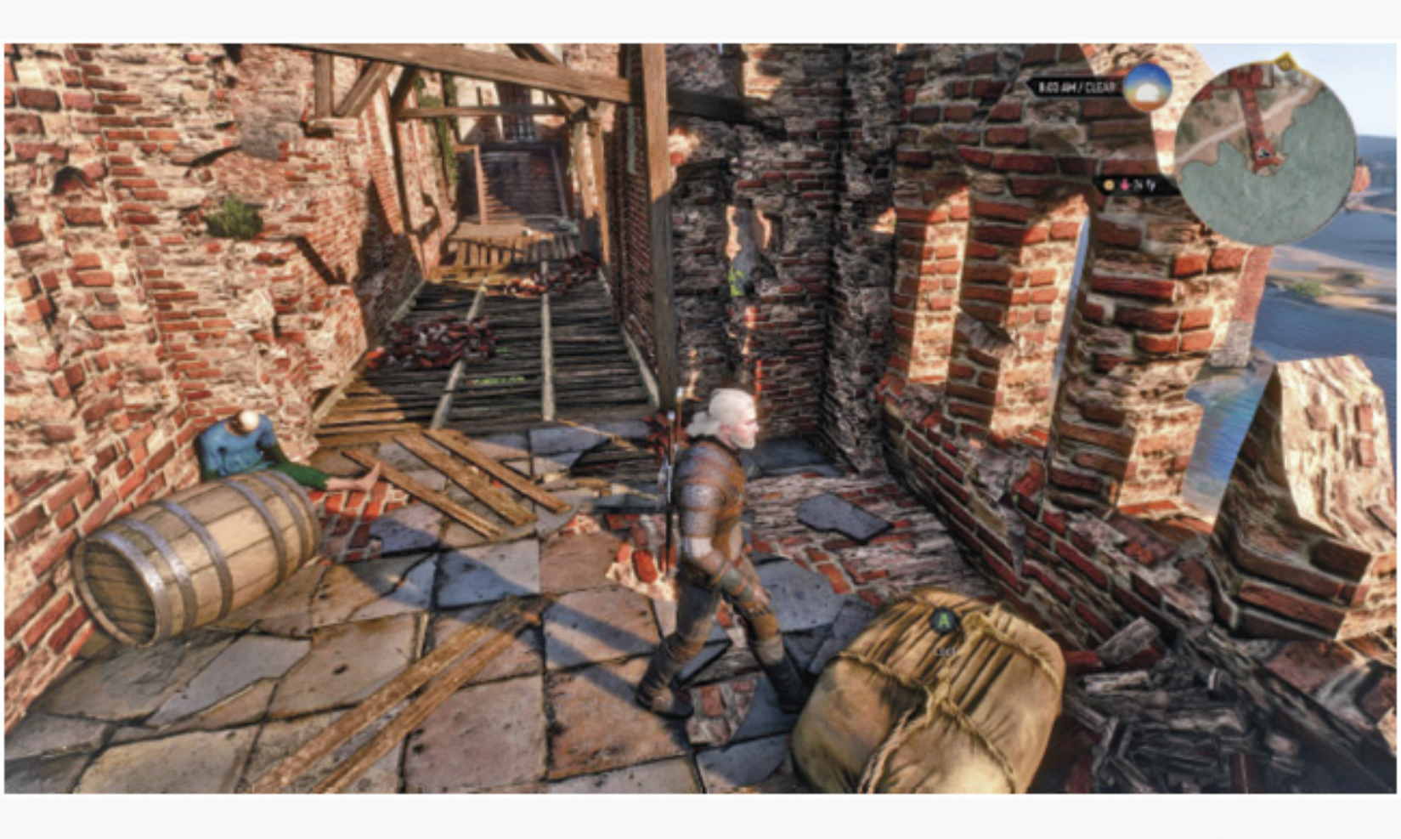
Expect treasure guarded by an enemy or monsters in the vicinity. The type of enemy is listed in the Atlas, such as this Bilge Hag's lair in southern Velen.

HIDDEN TREASURE: GOOD CHESTS



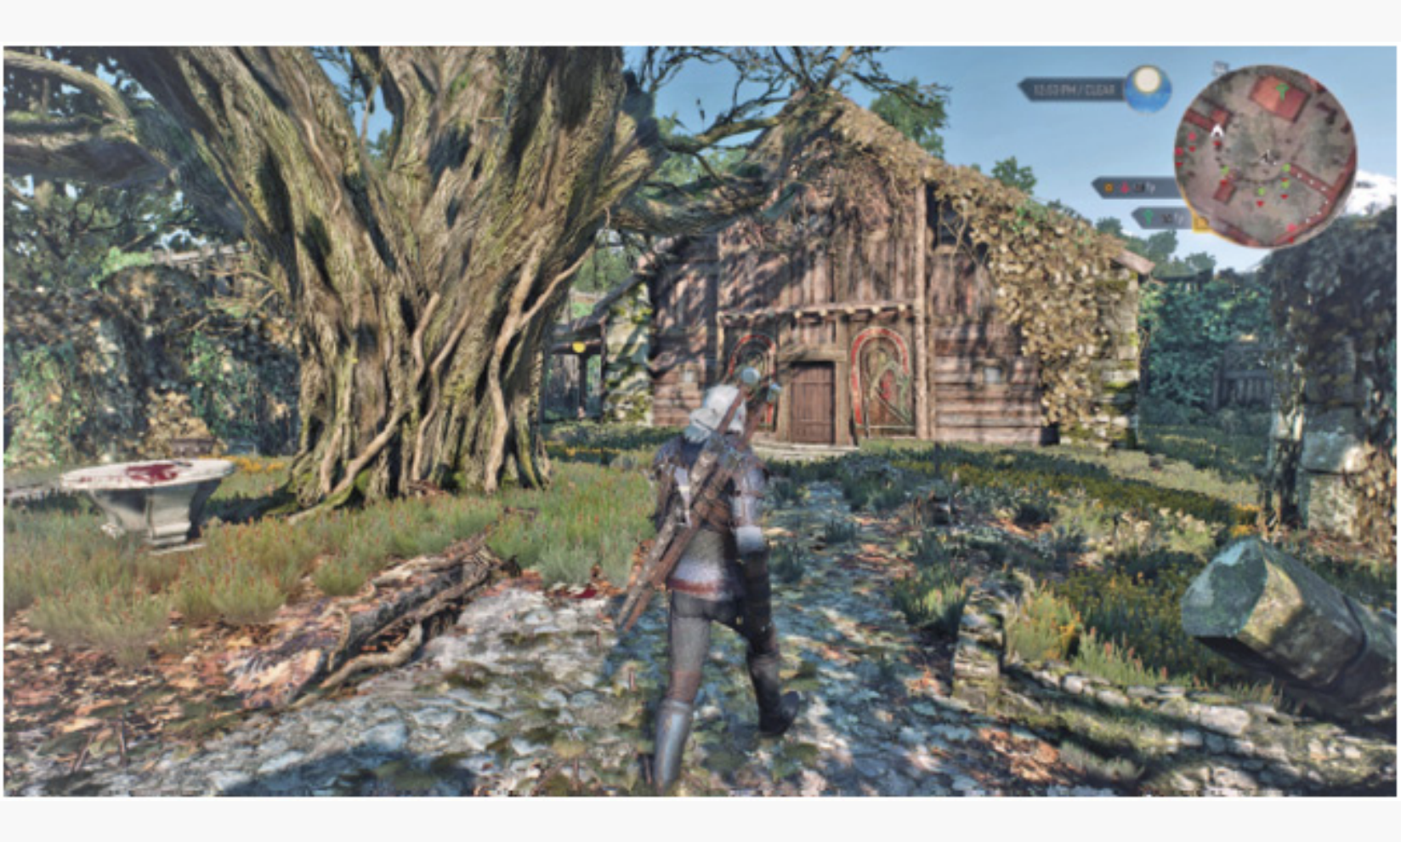
Find reasonably valuable and random items in this type of chest, such as this one hidden on the broken bridge north of the Nilfgaardian garrison in White Orchard. These chests don't appear on your World Map; only in this guide's Atlas.

HIDDEN TREASURE: BETTER CHESTS



Find more valuable, and better quality random items in this type of chest, such as this one hidden behind a weakened wall (Aard was used to break through) in the Nilfgaardian garrison in White Orchard. These chests don't appear on your World Map; only in this guide's Atlas.

HIDDEN TREASURE: RELIC CHESTS



Find extremely valuable relics (armor or weapons) found in this chest (or sometimes on the corpse of an individual). Such valuables are not always guaranteed, and are usually random, such as this one found inside a locked room in the main longhouse in Freya's Garden, on the isle of Hindersfjall.

PINPOINTING YOUR LOOT

Need help pinpointing all these chests? Then compare the location of a chest you're interested in on the Atlas map. Then bring up your World Map, and "Place Custom Marker" on the location where this guide says a chest is located. That way it appears on your compass, making it very easy to find!

DESERTER GOLD

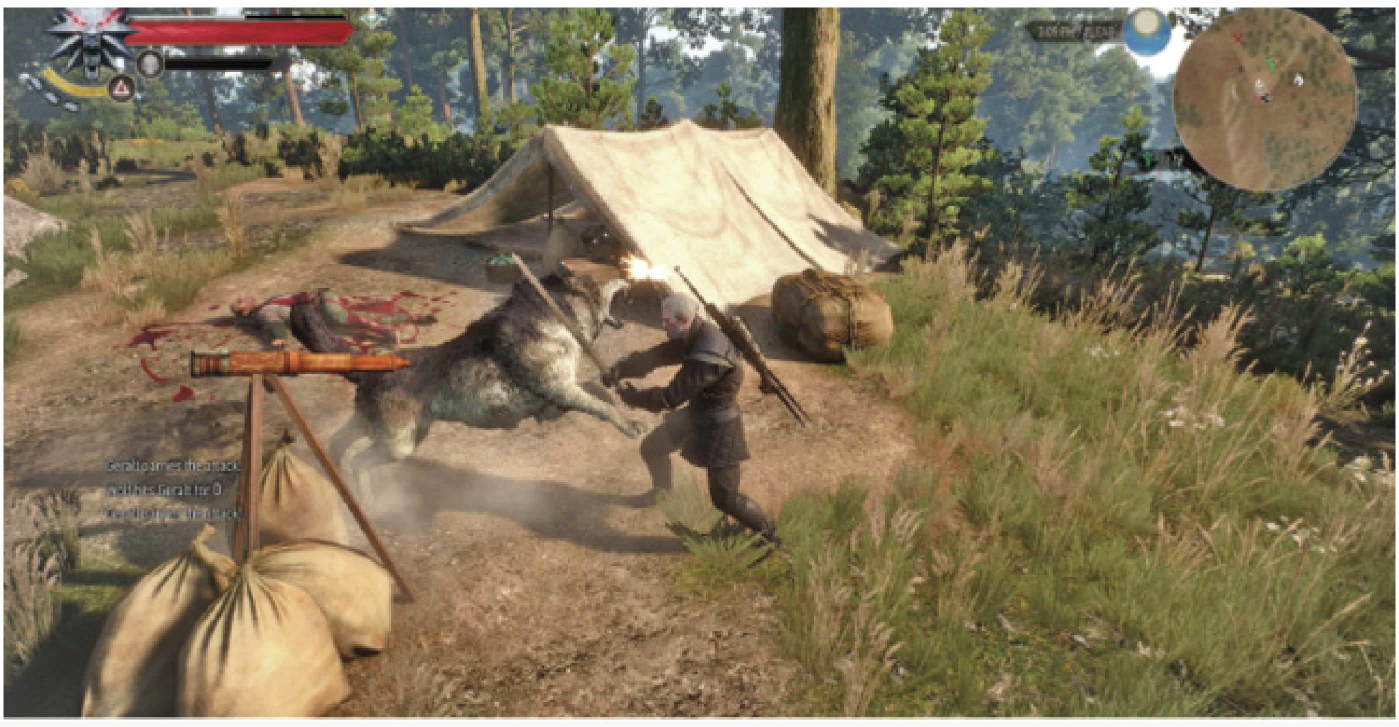
RELATED QUESTS: Treasure Hunt: Temerian Valuables
LOCATIONS: Mill, Lookout Camp (Unmarked)
ENEMIES: Wolves, Deserters

TROOP AND TREASURE MOVEMENTS REVEALED

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.

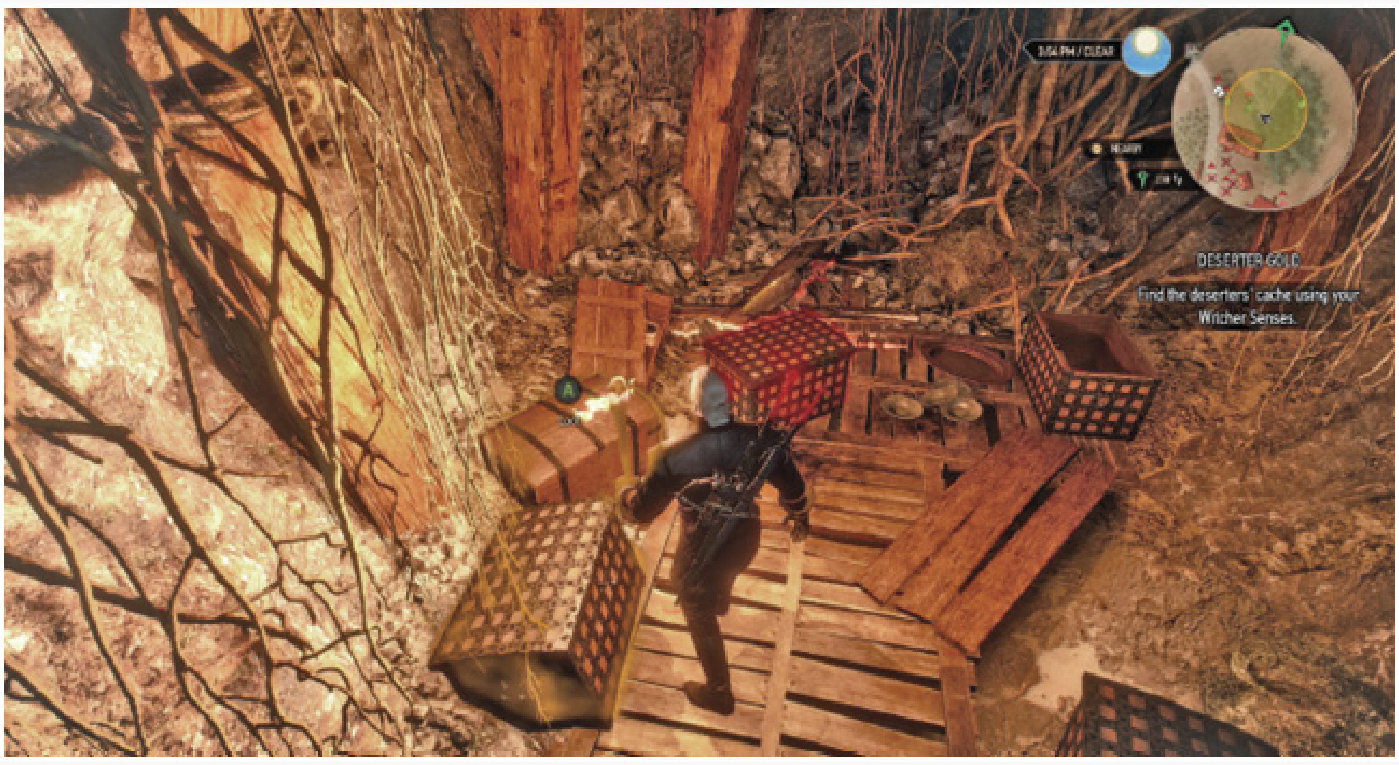
From the Mill Signpost, gallop in a roughly northeast direction, across the undulating hillside, to a small lookout camp atop a hill. Expect a pack of around four wolves to prowl the camp. A spy has recently been mauled, and his corpse is lying close to a tent and telescope. Feel free to inspect him, before prying some notes from the small box at the tent entrance.



Items: Spy's Notes

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the deserters' cache using your Witcher Senses.



The notes make mention of a hidden cache. Ride southwest, back down to the Mill, and be ready to engage around six Deserters between the windmill and the dilapidated cottage.

After combat, head into the cottage, optionally use Aard to remove some floorboard clutter, drop into an earthen cellar, and smash open the rickety door with Aard. There's a large number of chests in here, though only one is locked (and only opened during Treasure Hunt: Temerian Valuables). The brown chest to the left of the locked one holds the valuables you need to complete this hunt.

LOCATIONS: Mill, Deserters' Outpost (Unmarked), Deserters' Camp (Unmarked)

ENEMIES: Wolves, Deserters

JUST DESSERTS FOR THE DIRTY DESERTERS

OBJECTIVE:

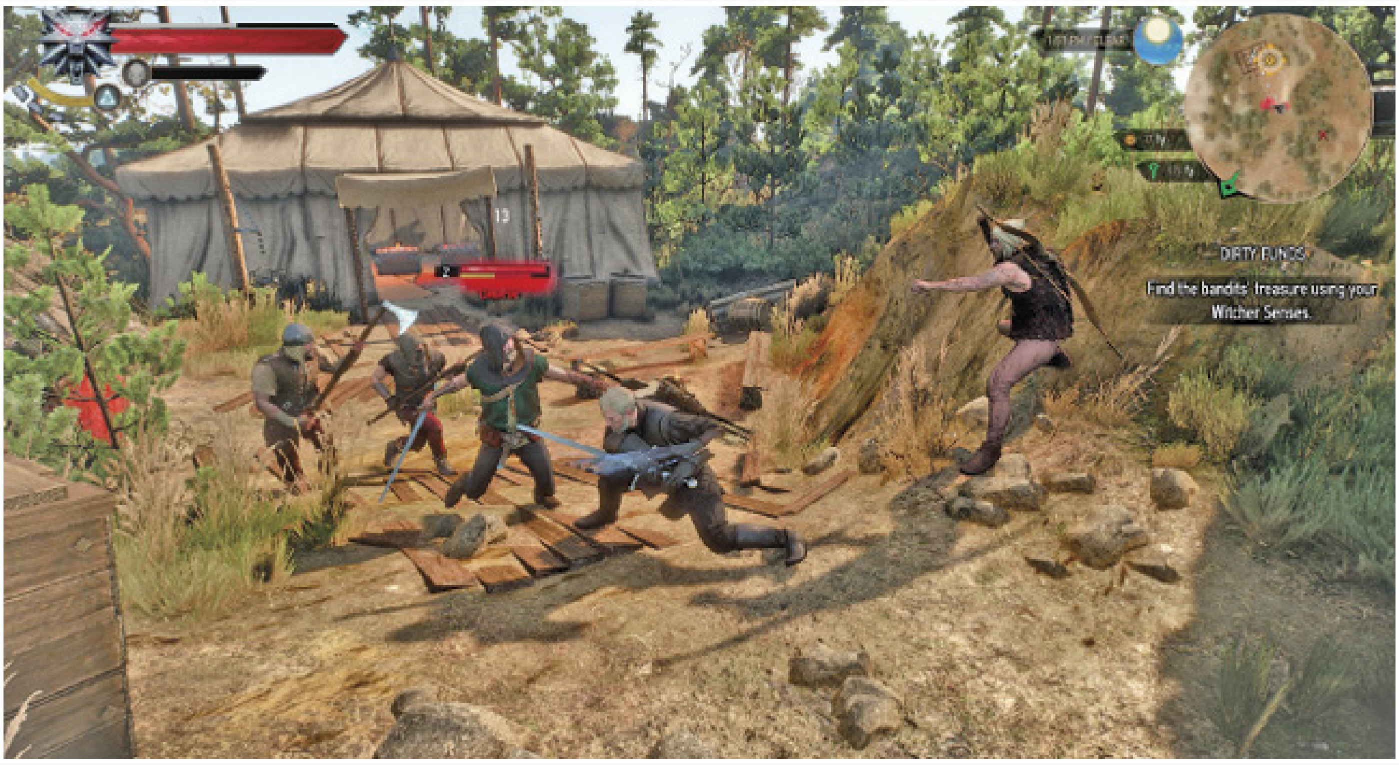
- Read the letter you found.

Around midway between the Mill (to the west) and Cackler Bridge (to the east) is a wooded dell where a group of deserters has made a small outpost home. That is, until recently as only wolves prowl this rudimentary camp, filled with stolen shields and equipment. After dealing with any threats, open the chest on the edge of the main tent (use your Witcher Senses to find it). Aside from random loot, a set of scrawled notes makes interesting reading.

Items: Scrawled Notes

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the bandit's treasure using your Witcher Senses.



The handwritten scrawl makes mention of treasure hoarded nearby. Head eastward, and slightly north, uphill to an area just north of Cackler Bridge. As you might expect, the six or so Deserters are well-armed; a couple have shields, and there are two archers to deal with.

After the Deserters have been stopped, it's time to try a bit of looting yourself. Enter the main tent atop the hill, and ransack it. Aside from the two main bed chests, the smaller chest in the corner (far right in the picture) holds the random loot you crave.

RELATED QUESTS: Treasure Hunt: Deserter Gold

LOCATIONS: Mill, Mill Bridge (Unmarked)

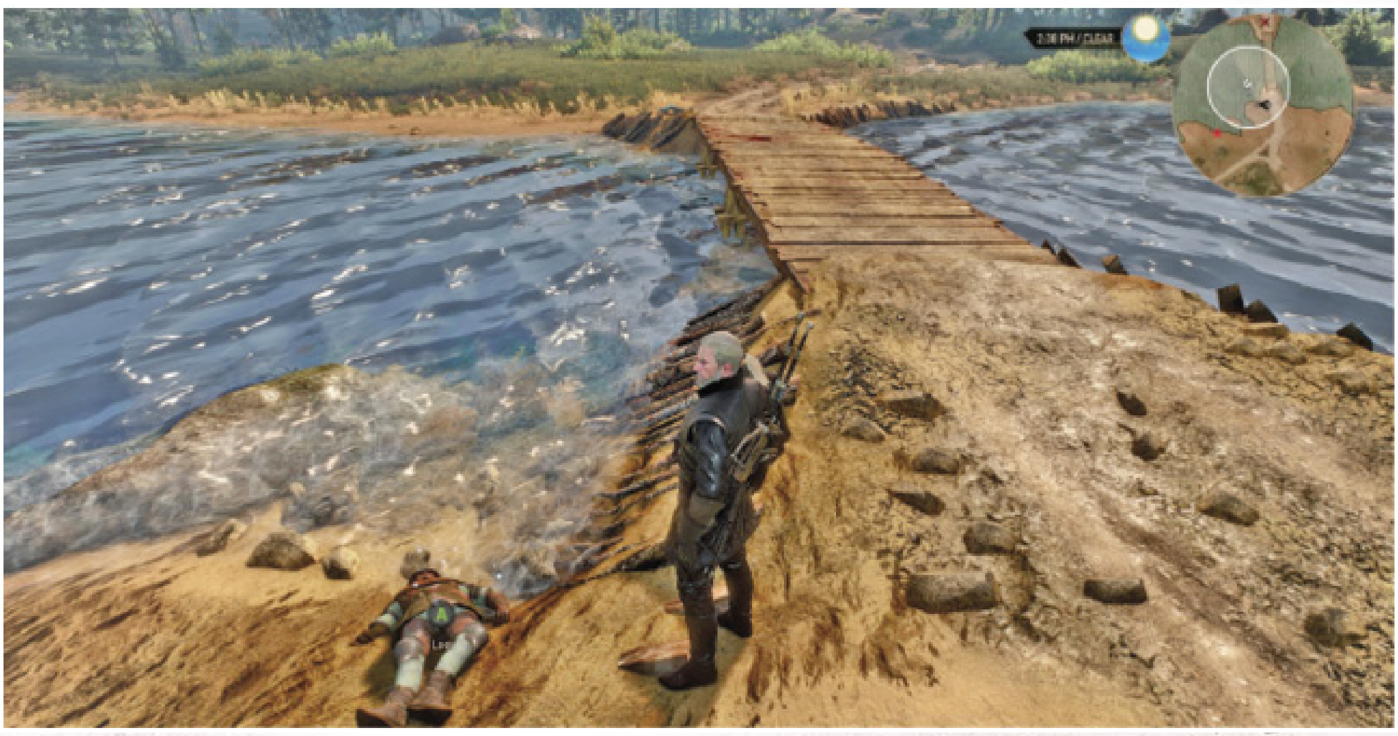
ENEMIES: Drowners, Deserters

WAGON LOST, TREASURE FOUND

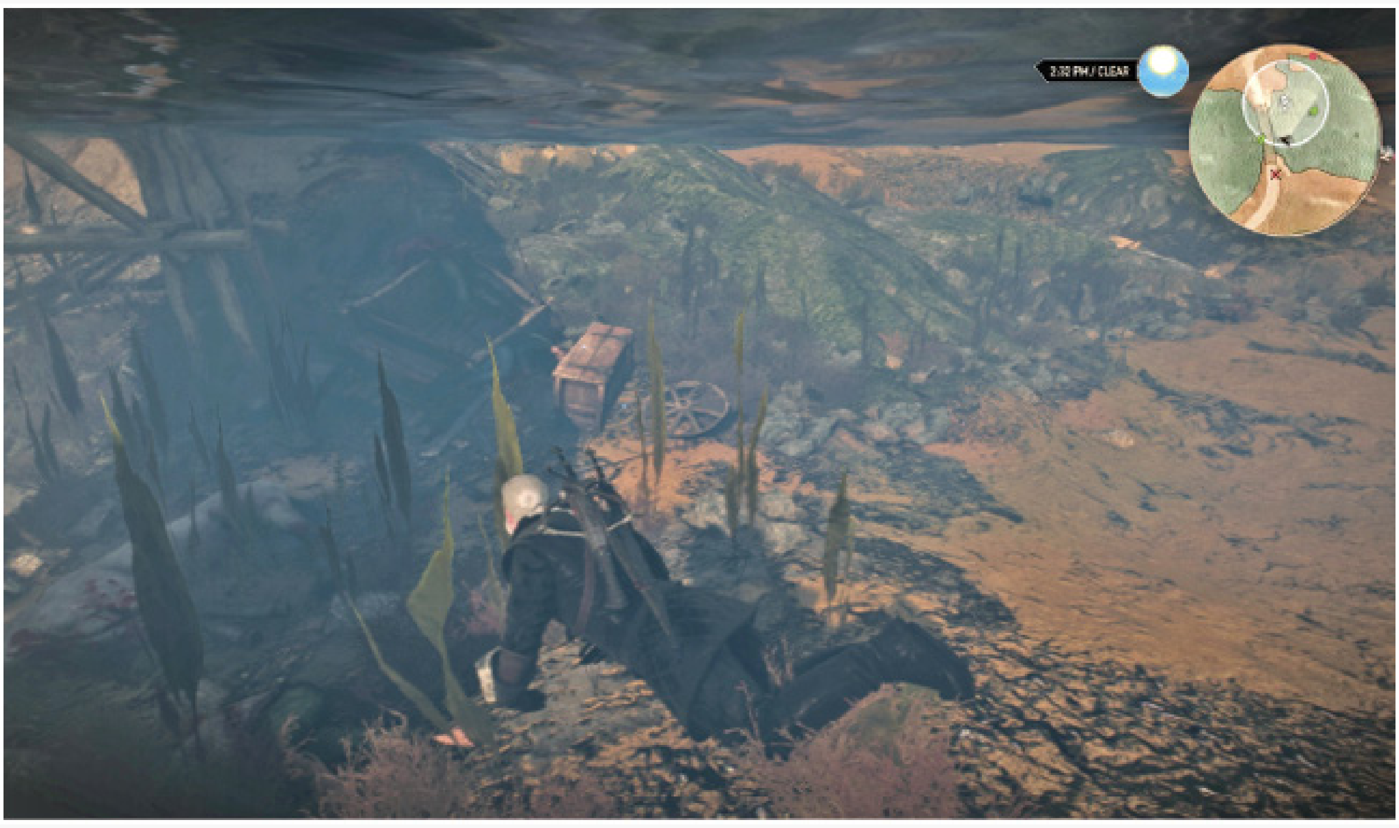
OBJECTIVE:

- Read the document you found.

Begin this hunt from the Mill signpost, riding west toward the rickety low wooden bridge over the river. Expect at least two Drowners to leap at you as you cross to the opposite side. Cross the bridge to the western side, and look for the corpse of a man holding an ornate key. Take it.



Items: Temerian lily key



The key opens a chest in the water below the bridge, where the wagon the man was driving came a cropper. Aside from coin and some Temerian loot, there are some military orders to read.

Items: Blood-soaked military orders

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the lost Temerian treasure using your Witcher Senses.

The orders indicate some lost Temerian treasure is nearby. Ride east, back to the Mill, and be ready to engage around six Deserters between the windmill and the dilapidated cottage. After combat, head into the cottage, optionally use Aard to remove some floorboard clutter, drop into an earthern cellar, and smash open the rickety door with Aard. There's a large number of chests in here, though one is related to Treasure Hunt: Deserter Gold. The only locked chest holds the valuables you're after, mainly Temerian items you can sell for profit and a scribbled note to read if you wish.

GRAYROCKS: AN UNFORTUNATE TURN OF EVENTS

LOCATIONS: Devil's Pit, Fireburst Harbor (Unmarked)

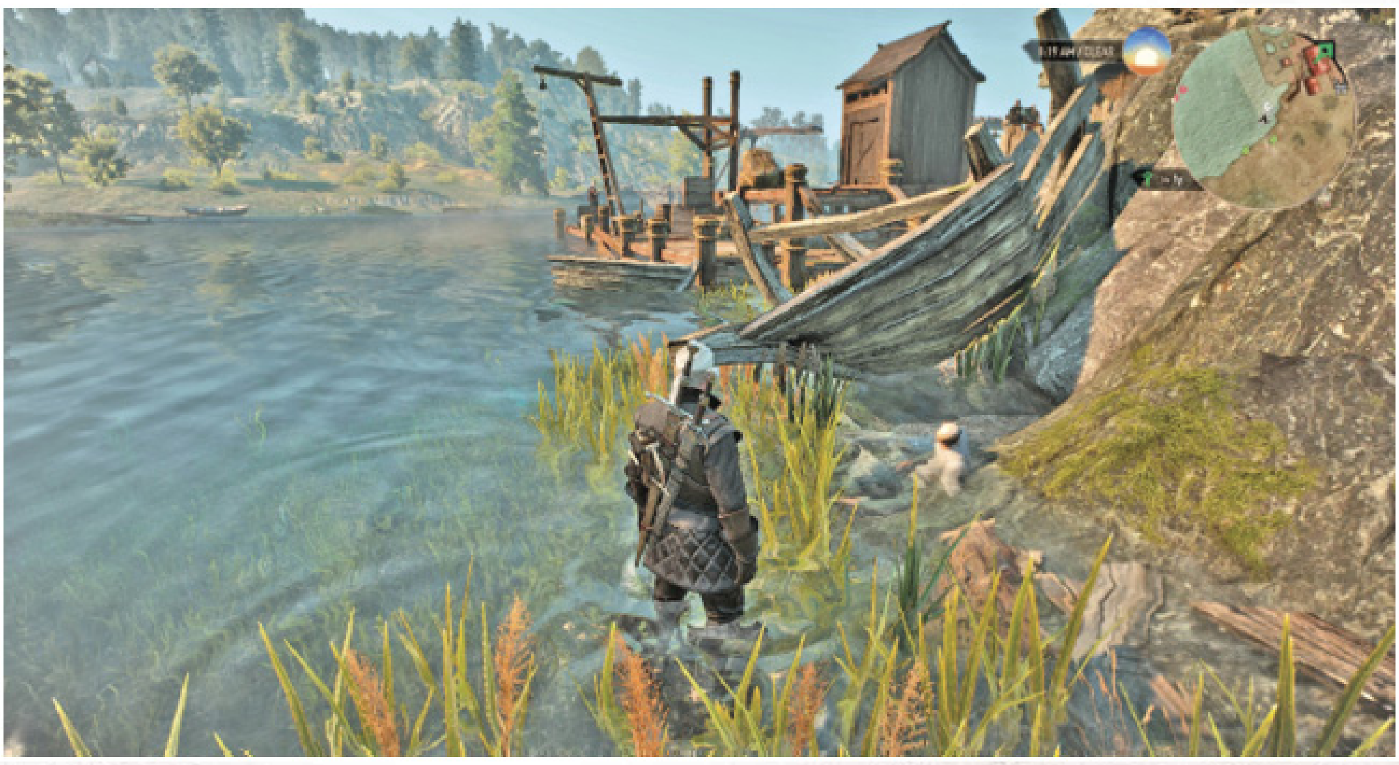
WHO PAYS THE FERRYMAN?

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.



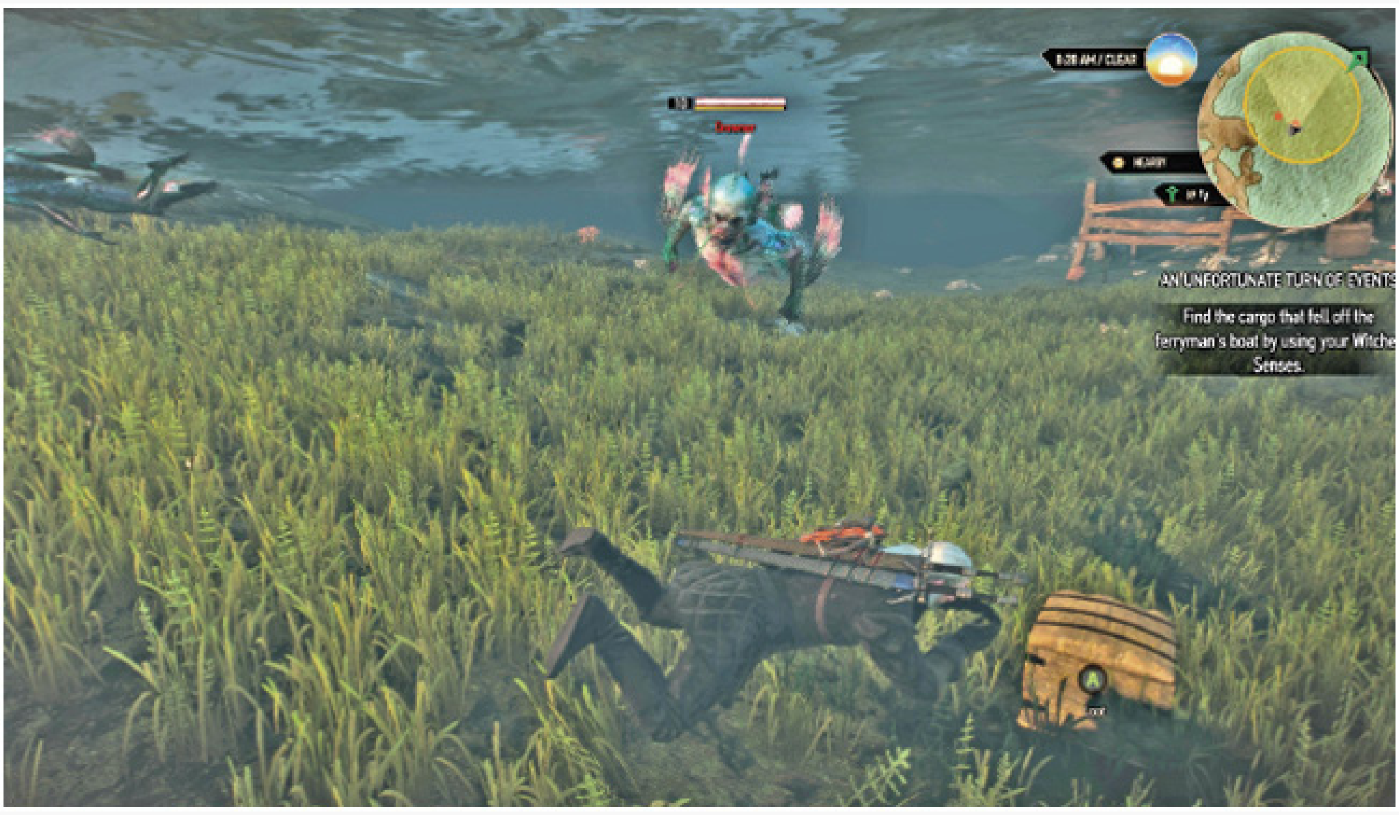
On the southern edge of Grayrocks territory, midway between Devil's Pit (to the north) and Lurtch (across the river to the south), is the unmarked Fireburst Harbor. When you arrive at Fireburst Harbor (the out-building and small docks on the north side of the river), it's a good idea to liberate the area from around five frothing Drowners.

Once the Nilfgaardians and peasantry are back, follow the rickety pier platform east along the river bank to a waterlogged corpse. Pry the following missive from the man's flaccid fingers:

Items: Unsent letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the cargo that fell off the ferryman's boat by using your Witcher Senses.



AN UNFORTUNATE TURN OF EVENTS

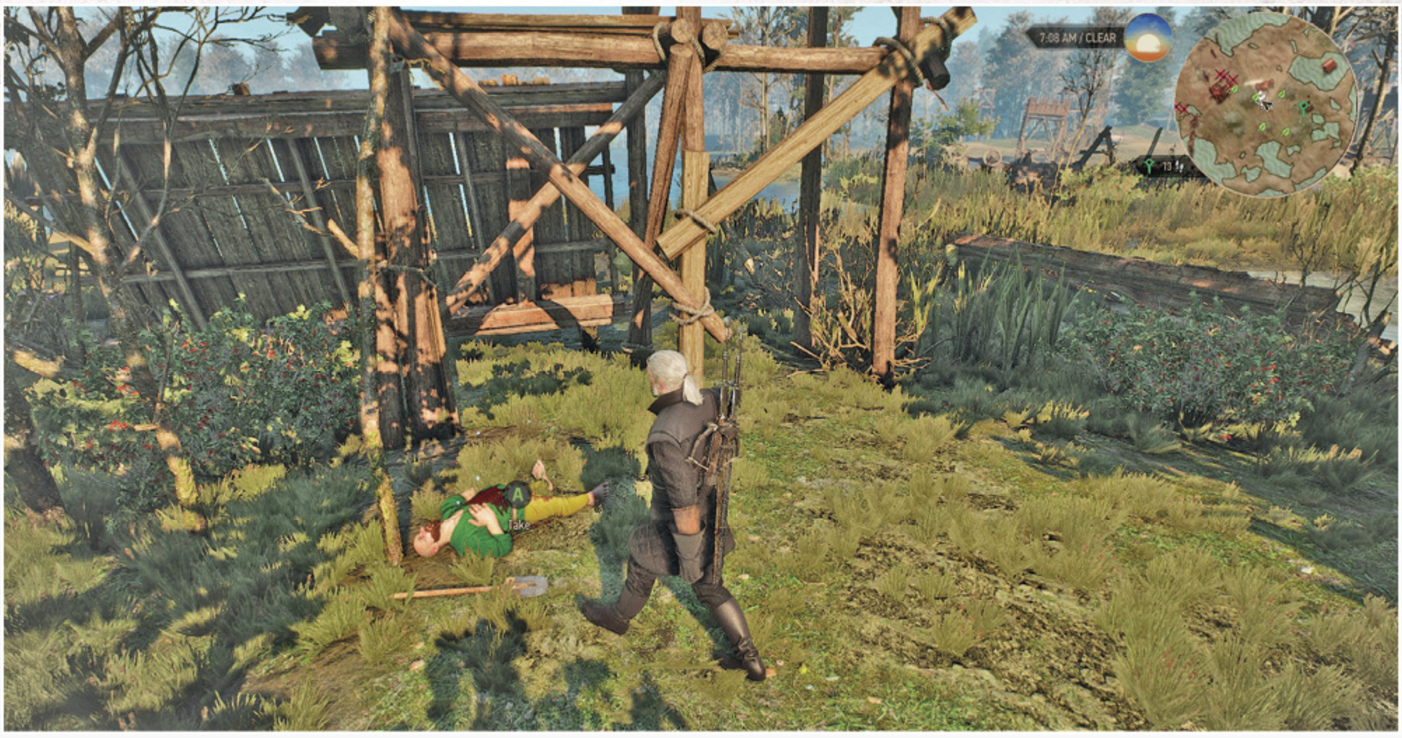
ATROCITIES ON NEKKER ISLE

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.

South and a little east of Ursten, and west of Border Post is a marshy river crossing that has seen hideous casualties in the recent conflict. Pick your way past the wooden wreckage, and don't rest until a pack of around eight Nekkers have joined the massive pile of corpses in the central part of the island.

Close to the swarm of Nekkers, near the disgusting corpse pile, are the remains of a dwarf under a wooden scaffold. Search him for a key and a note.



Items: Treasure key, Letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the looters' valuables using your Witcher Senses.

The dwarf was bleeding heavily before he died, so use your Witcher Senses to follow the patches of blood around the bushes toward the large corpse pile and fallen wooden defenses. Tucked between the pile and partly concealed under the cluster of planks is a small chest to loot.

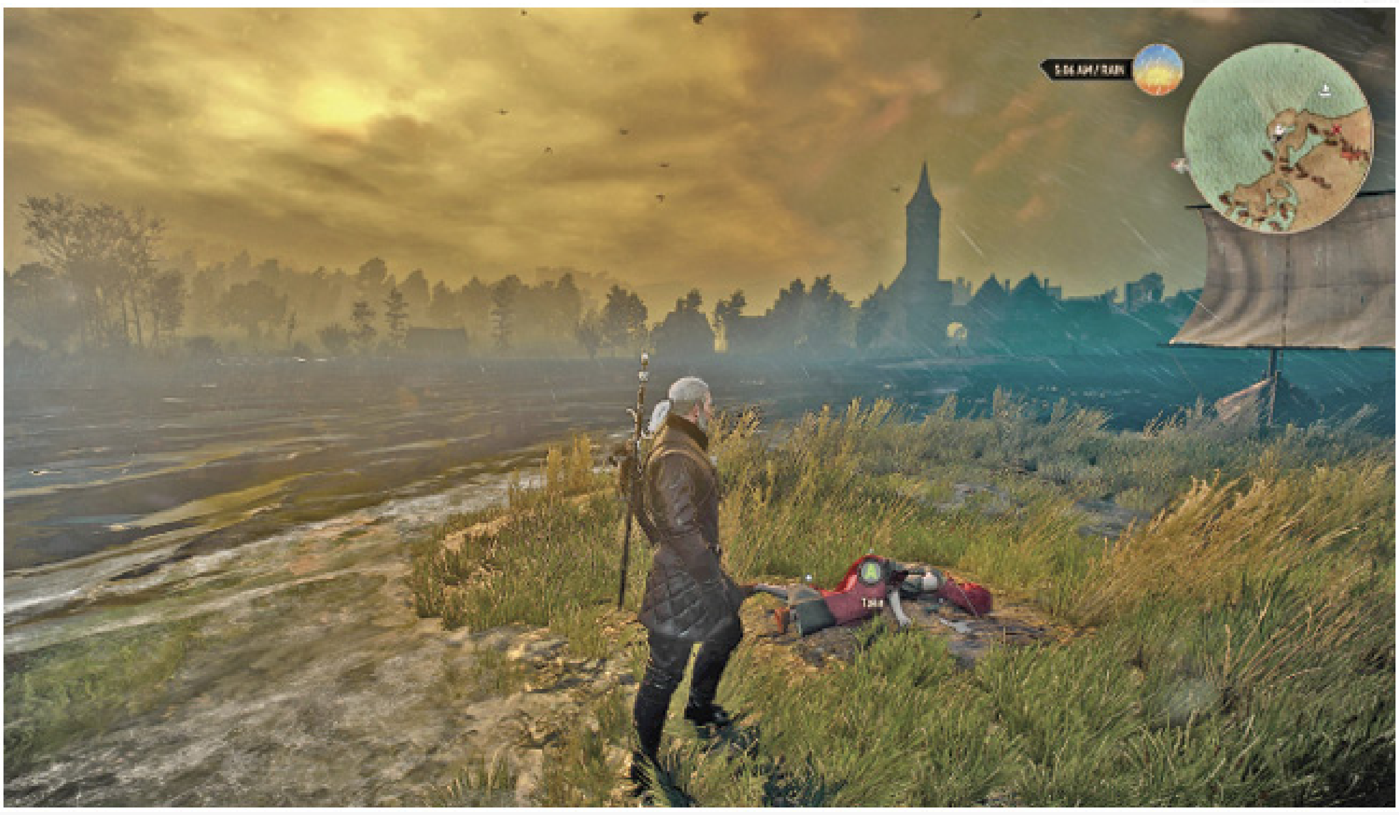
A DERANGED MARRIAGE

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.

Almost directly north of White Eagle Fort, and due west of Gustfields Farm (in the territory of the same name), across the river northwest of Oxenfurt, is a series of low-lying swamps (where the skeletal remains of war defenses are slowly sinking into the river). The place is known unofficially as Basilisk island, for reasons that become abundantly clear when you venture toward the treasure location. Prepare to defeat one of these frightening, flying monstrosities! Need help? Consult the Bestiary on page 72.



After the fight, scour the shoreline in this area for the remains of a woman, who is carrying the following items of interest. The letter is to her father, regarding a marriage the old man wasn't particularly keen on. Not that it matters any more...

Items: Slightly bent key, Unsent letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the treasure chest using your Witcher Senses.

Make the best of the situation by finding the treasure the woman was ferrying away from her father; it is located in the chest on the shore, close to the rowboat, only a few feet away. Use your Witcher Senses if it isn't immediately visible.

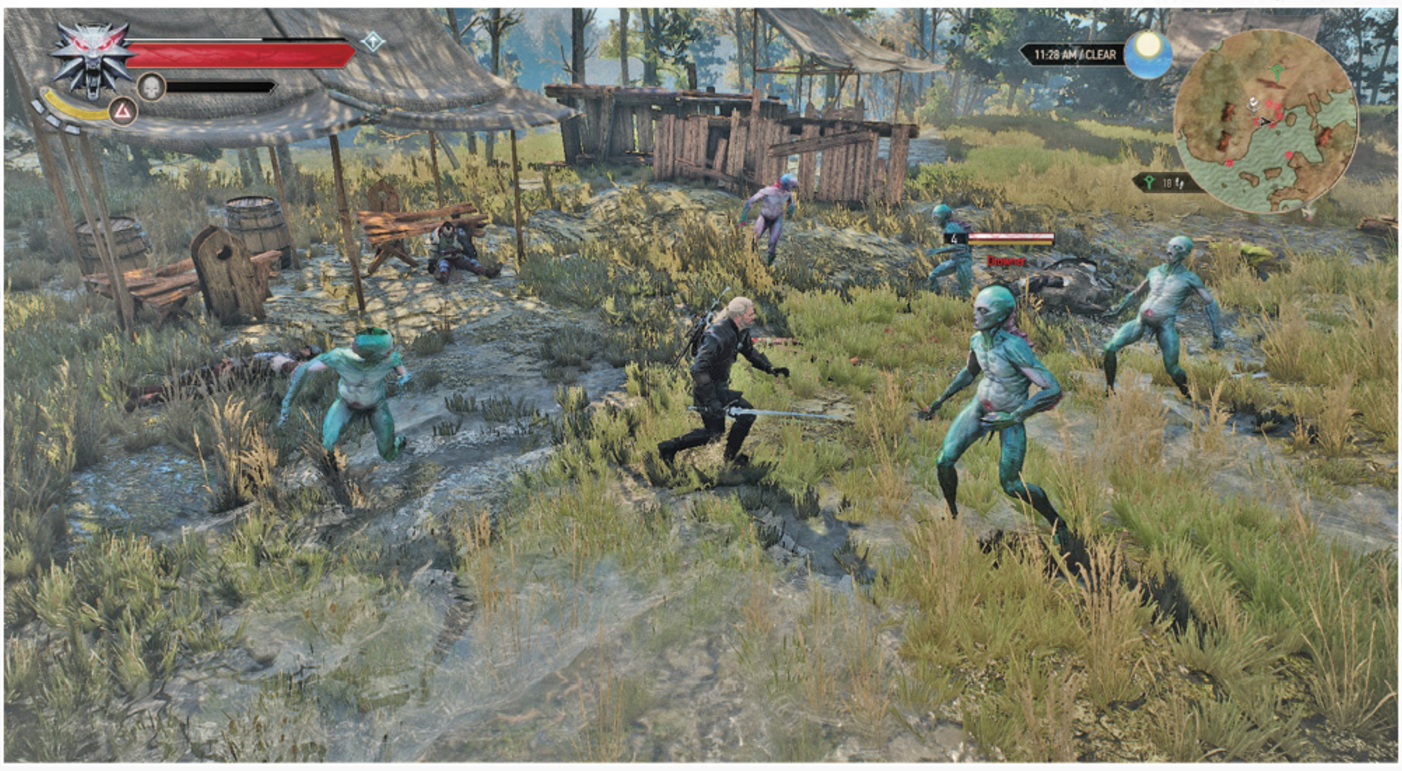
Northwest of White Eagle Fort, in the expanse of marsh land to the east of Hindhold, are the remains of an old prospectors' camp. Expect at least eight foes as you close in on the shabby and moldly tents and rotting wood huts. A cluster of six usually attack as you close in on the remains of a dead deserter.

The deserter has an interesting letter on his person, revealing his last moments on the run. Gather all his belongings, including the key.



Items: Bloodstained key, Bloodstained letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Follow the blood trail using your Witcher Senses to find the hidden treasure.

With your Witcher Senses, follow the patches of blood across the swamp to the sagging wooden defenses, and a couple of barrels shoved against some planks. Use Aard to destroy the barrels, revealing a long chest to ransack.

Items: Letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find valuables near the destroyed wagon using your Witcher Senses.

Though the letter is joyous (the family was traveling to stay with friends to escape this war), their fate was not. Their horse has been slain and partly eaten, and a few steps away is a sorrowful sight, the man's wife and child lie dead in the grass. The woman has a key on her to take.

Items: Nilfgaardian's notes

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the lost chest using your Witcher Senses.

The notes paint a picture of a frustrated enlisted soldier's service in the Nilfgaardian army. It also references a chest of treasure, which is in the swampy area to the east. Bring your best Drowner-culling equipment with you

There are around half a dozen Drowners to deal with on a small jetty in the marshy reeds by the river side. Once they've been culled, find the long wooden chest close to the moored rowboat.

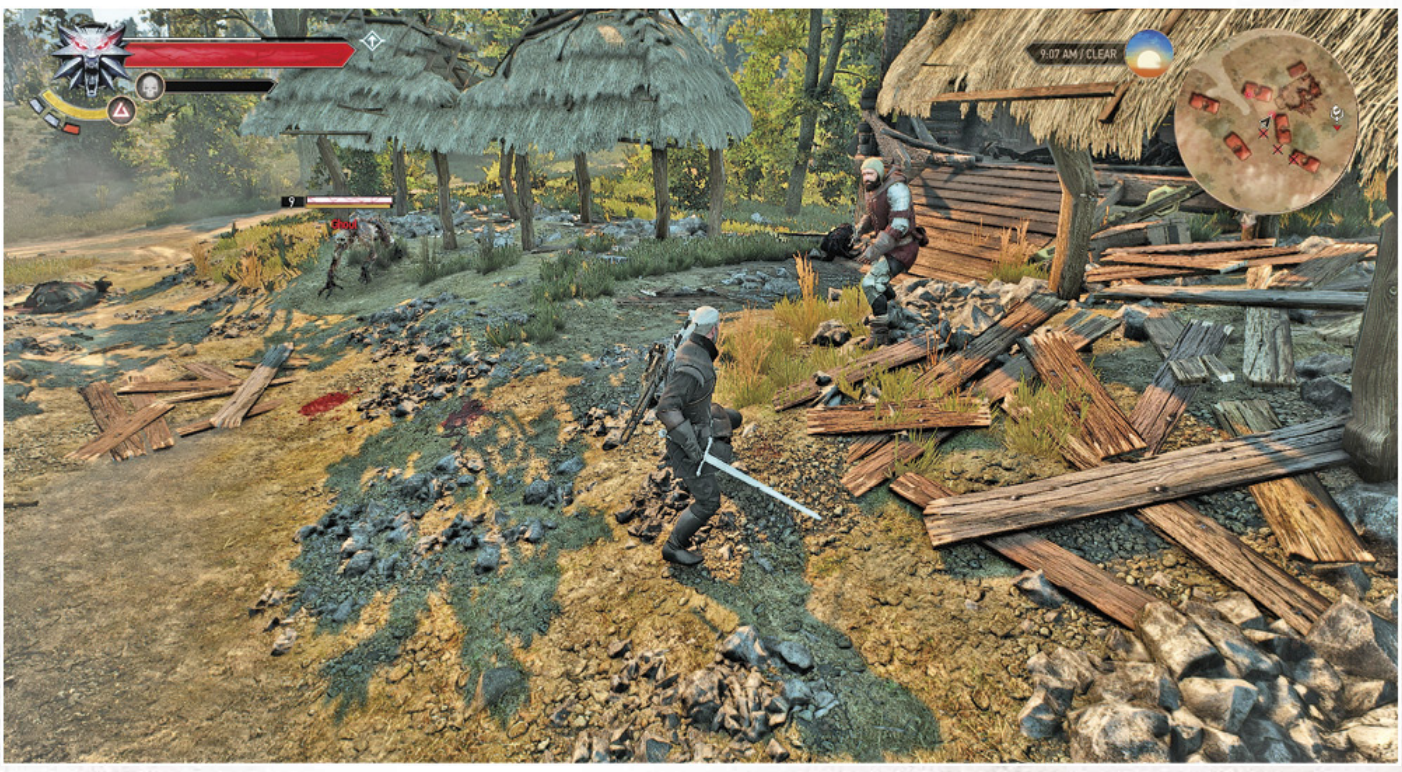
DEAD MAN'S HARVEST

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the notes you found.



If you view a map of The Descent territory of Velen, and start a reconnoiter in the northern part of the area (just south of the river), look in the low hills to the east of Lurtch, west of Toderas, and southwest of Marauders' Bridge for an unmarked settlement called Mowhurst. When you arrive, expect both ghoul and bandit activity to quell.

Once you've defeated around four to six ghouls and any bandits, make a thorough inspection of this razed hamlet. The only intact area (save for a minor chest you can open) is this cellar door. Break it open with Aard, descend into the tiny root cellar, and loot the following from the corpse on the wooden cot inside.

Items: Key to treasure chest, Crumpled notes

OBJECTIVE:

- Search the dead man's hiding place using your Witcher Senses.

The notes tell a grim story of war. But they also mention some hidden loot a fellow villager hid in a haystack—just like the couple perched on the embankment overlooking the road to the north. Find the treasure chest partly-hidden inside.

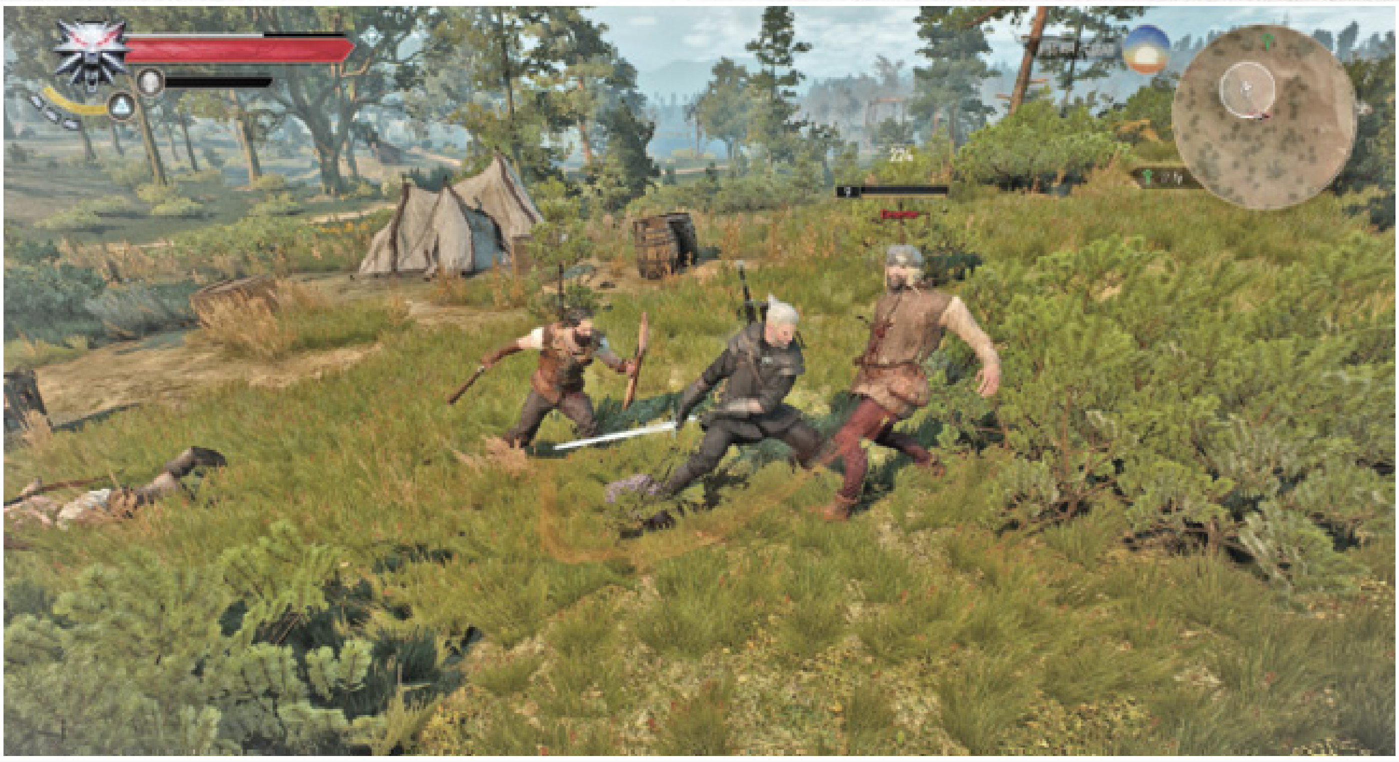
Practice your sword-wielding on them. Once all three are defeated, search their corpses as one is holding a letter.



Items: Letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the hidden goods mentioned in the letter using your Witcher Senses.

The letter indicates the presence of treasure nearby. Cross the road heading south to a low hill and small rocky copse of trees.

The chest in question is nestled between the trees and large boulders, and isn't particularly well-hidden. But it is well-stocked with choice items to craft or trade.

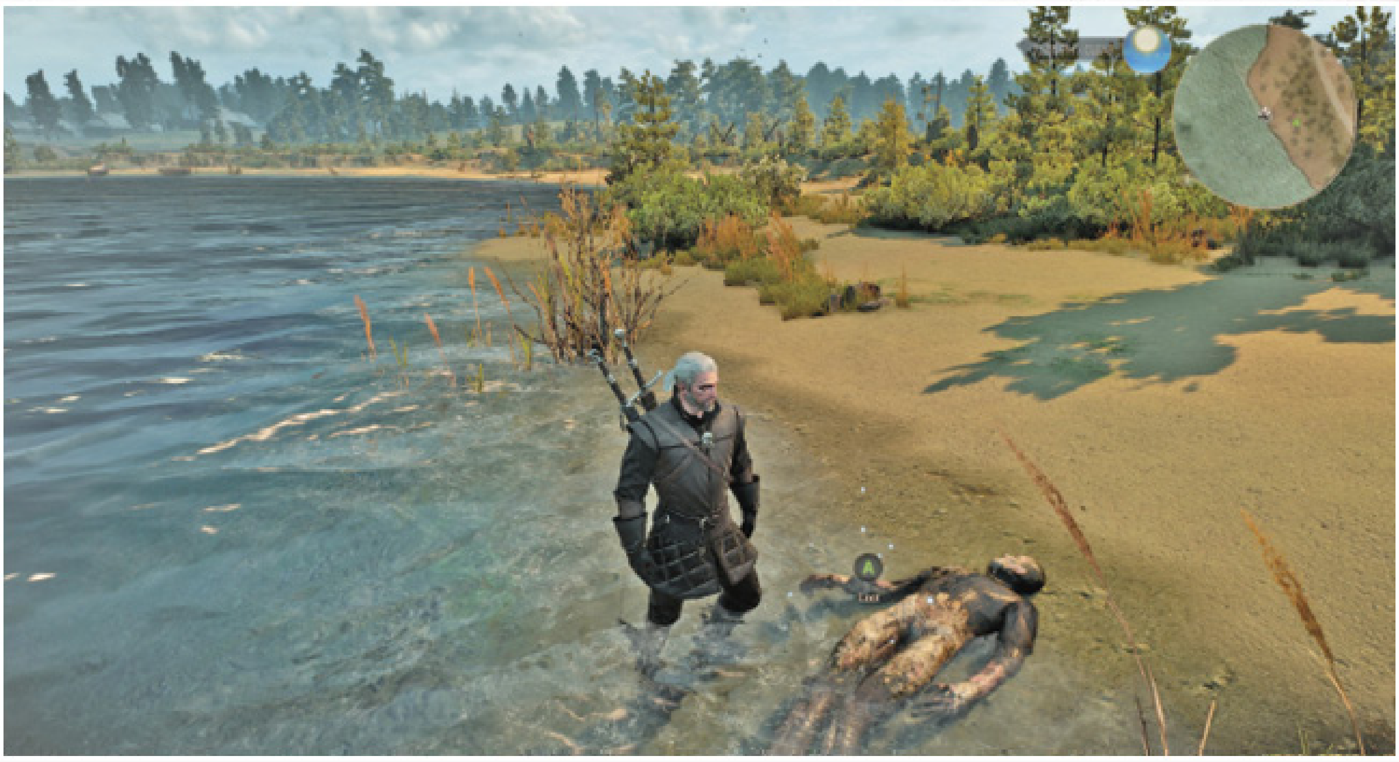
- Read the letter you found.



Away from the commotion at Hangman's Alley, on the western coast of Spitfire Bluff, is the sandy shoreline of a gulf where smugglers continue to ferry goods under cover of darkness. However, as the bloated corpse on the beach attests to, not every smuggler is successful. Pry a letter from the man's rotting corpse.

Items: Water-damaged letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the sunken treasure using your Witcher Senses.

Dive into the waters swimming northward into the gulf. Arm yourself with a crossbow as there are a couple of Drowners you may need to tussle with underwater.

When you've reached the area of interest, use your Witcher Senses and then dive down to find the sunken remains of the smuggler's boat. Close to a large carved seashell is a long wooden chest containing the treasure you're here for.

LOCATIONS: Hangman's Alley, Smugglers' Gulf (Unmarked)
ENEMIES: Drowners

SCAVENGING AMONGST THE SHIPWRECKS

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.

Further away from the commotion at Hangman's Alley, on the western coast of Spitfire Bluff, is the shoreline of smugglers' gulf. Ride westward along the road from Hangman's Alley, passing an old beach cottage, until you reach an area of sand banks and a scattering of boats that have run aground, and are slowly rotting away. Repel any nearby Drowners before inspecting the corpses of smugglers near a rowboat. One has a note to read.

Complete the scavenging mission the note mentions for yourself, and swim out to the west, moving to the submerged end of the boat nearest the shore (as shown).

Drowners are a constant threat here, so equip your crossbow for any underwater encounters. The chest in question has fallen out of the ship and is sitting in the long weeds on the river bed, close to the edge of the vessel.

PIRATE CARNAGE ON THE COAST

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.

Along the western peninsula of Spitfire Bluff, at the Coast of Wrecks signpost, a large band of pirates have usurped a small boat-making area. Expect at least a dozen of them (but no more than 18). Make quick, violent work of them before locating the campfire on the sands, which has a note written by one of these thugs. Read it to discover the location of a prized wreck the pirates were going to ransack. Don’t forget to return here after a few days; the boat-makers return along with a Merchant stocked with items.

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the sunken treasure using your Witcher Senses.

It’s a quick swim to the northwest, around the rotting ship carcasses, and past a small island with guarded treasure, to the site of where Queen Zuleyka’s ship sank. Locate the floating crate and corpse, and dive down from this point.

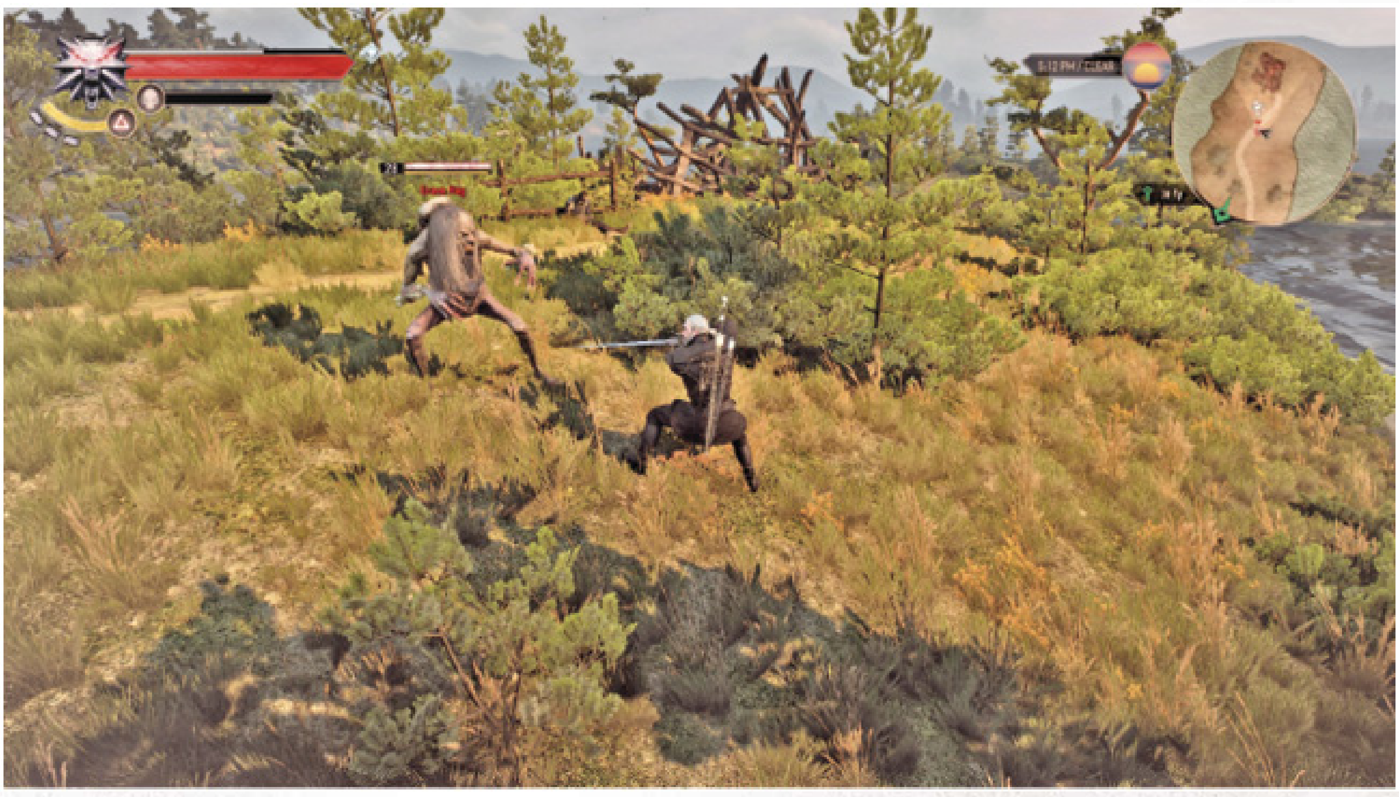
LOCATIONS: Condyle, Burned Cottage (Unmarked)

ENEMIES: Cannibals, Grave Hag

SOUTH OF CONDYLE'S CANNIBALS

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.



Close to the border with The Mire, on the southwest peninsula of Spitfire Bluff, is the village of Condyle, now home to a number of degenerate Cannibals. Visit or skirt the area, before taking the coastal peninsula trail with the water to your right (west). Follow the low-lying spit of land southwards, and prepare to face the sagging, sharp-clawed form of a Grave Hag.

Once the Hag has been cut down, look for the corpse propped up against a section of fence, close to a burned-out hut. Procure the following from the corpse, and read the plea for rescue.

Items: Key to burned down house, Crumpled letter

OBJECTIVE:

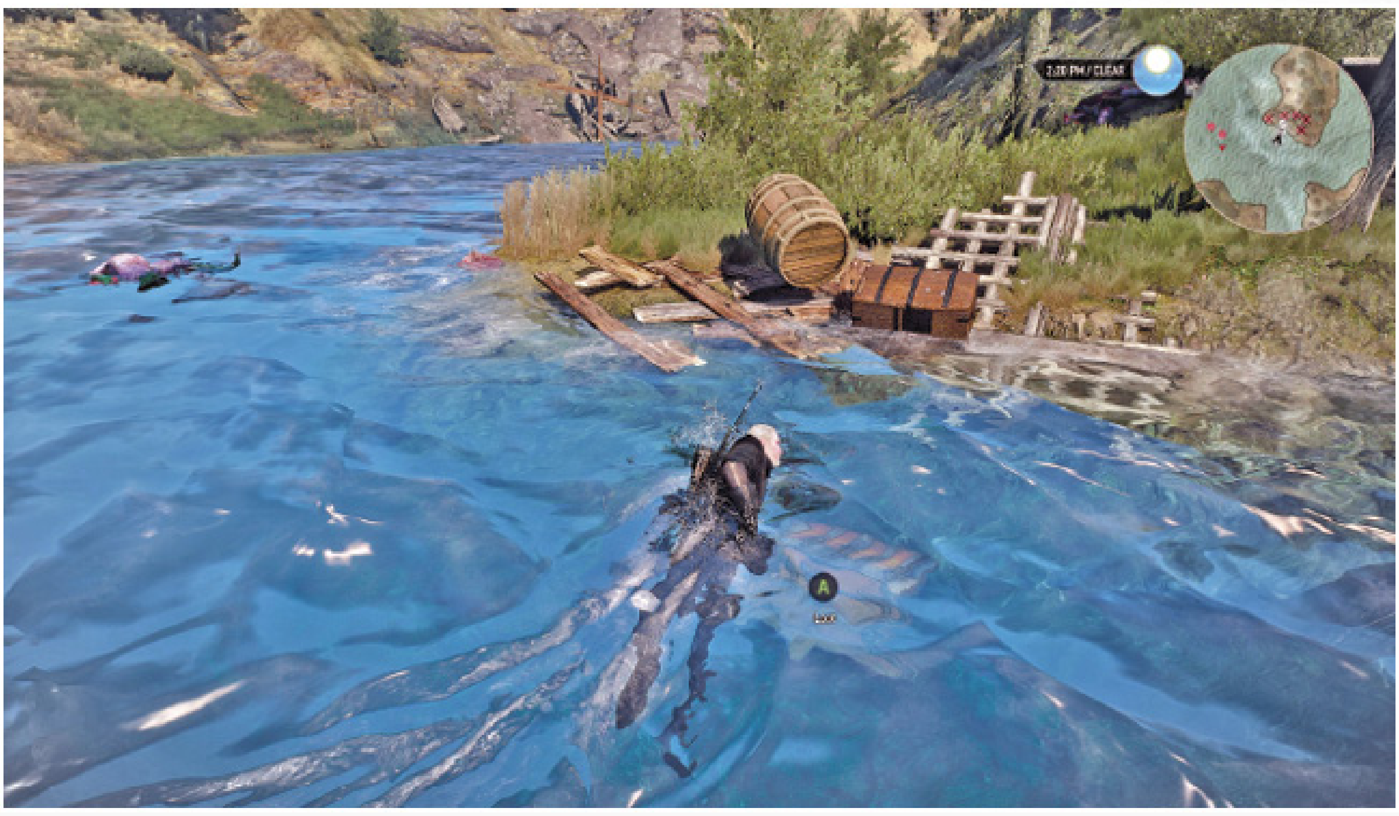
This quest rewards you with copious treasure, so make sure you can carry it all! From the Widows Grotto, head south along the beach, to a cluster of three small islands near the shipwrecks. It seems much of the loot has washed up in this area. Swim to the north of the three islands, open the chest on the edge of the shore, gather the loot and read the letter inside. It mentions four more locations where chests can be ransacked. The first is directly below the first chest, underwater (shown in the picture).



Items: Letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the cargo using your Witcher Senses (4).

The second chest is underwater, in a small submerged alcove on the floor of the shore. Gather it before you're overrun by Drowners, and keep that crossbow handy for underwater takedowns.

Watch for further foes and optionally climb the southwestern island; as you can see the two remaining chests on –the southeastern island (as shown in the picture). One is by an explosive barrel. The other is halfway up the grassy bank near a wrecked rowboat.

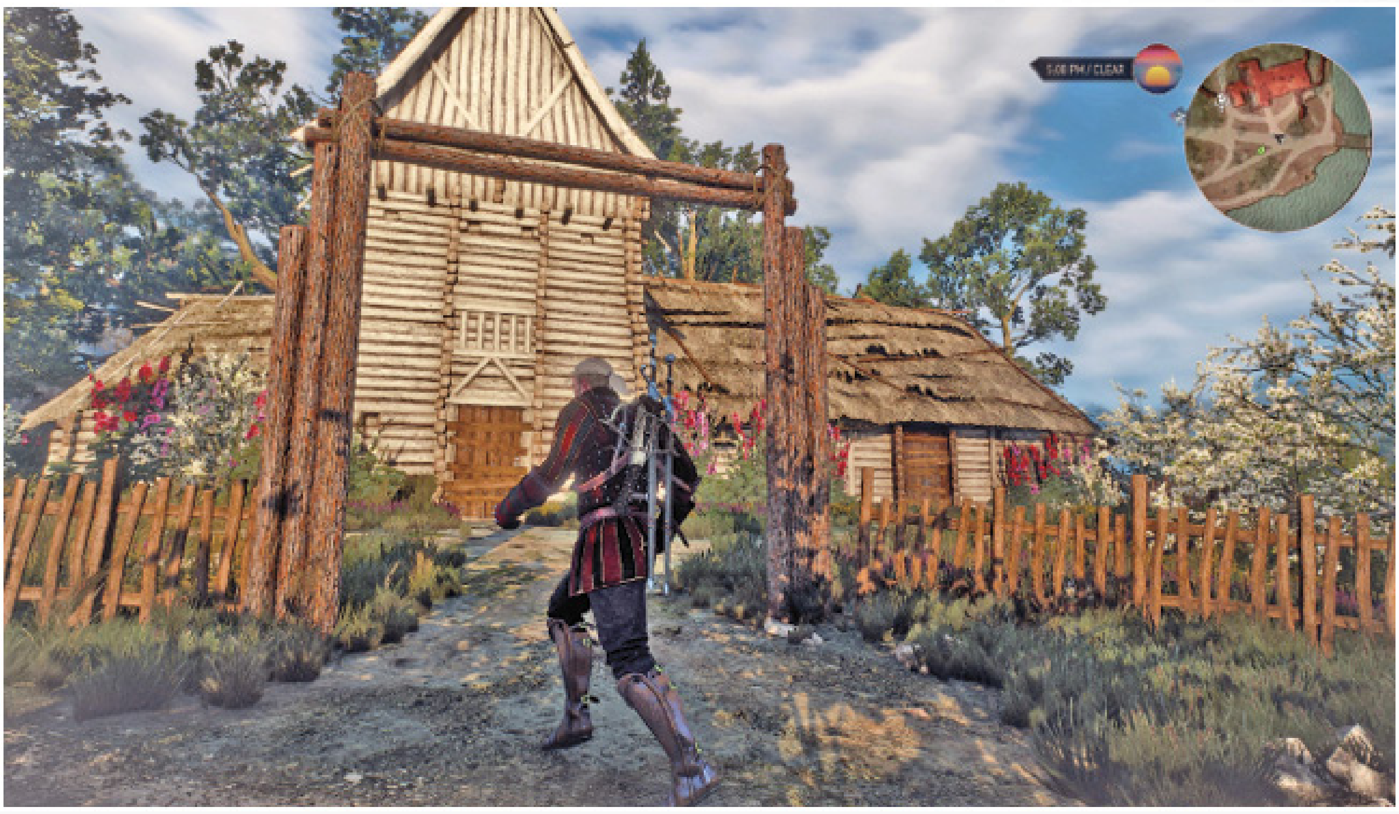
DECREE FROM OXENFURT CURIA

OBJECTIVE:

- Read Father Glaedfried's diary.



Between the water and wind mills, within the threshold of the village of Brunwich in the northeastern corner of Gustfields, is a white-washed wooden chapel, with a sternly-worded note pinned near its door. The Church of the Eternal Fire has deemed this holy site "befouled." You find the remains of the priest, Father Glaedfried, on the left (north) side of the chapel. Gather the following from his corpse.

Items: Pastorial diary of Father Glaedfried, Crypt Key

A quick skim through the diary, which is covered in blood and heavily damaged, reveals Father Glaedfried to be a member of the Eternal Fire, visiting the "heathens" of this village, who were afraid to enter this chapel. Not so Father Glaedfried, who wrote about entering the chapel alone, armed only with the light of the Eternal Fire. It looks like that torch got snuffed out.

THE CURSED MOTHER OF BRUNWICH

OBJECTIVE:

- Search the crypt's underground passages.

Beneath the giant oak, behind the chapel, is a ceremonial circle. Three wraiths appear as you close in on the crypt entrance. They must be dispatched in the usual manner. Afterwards, a cursory glance at the graves left of the crypt entrance indicates blood sacrifice. Use the crypt key to open the door.

Descend into the large crypt chamber and advance to the central circle. Father Glaedfried's diary proves to be correct. A lurking fear is terrorizing this place, a village elder's wife now taking the form of a Nightwraith. Consult this guide's bestiary (placing Yrden and coating your sword with specter oil, using Moon Dust bombs to stop the wraith's disappearing, and switch to ranged crossbow strikes if she splits into three forms). Then make a thorough search of the coffins, sacks, and wall tombs; two of the sacks contain actual pieces of New Moon armor, making this exploration well worthwhile! Finally, inspect the corpse containing a variety of items, as well as a note explaining exactly what transpired here.

CHARACTERS: Countess Mignole, Count Romilly
ENEMIES: Wolves (and Warg), Ancient Leshen
REQUIRED ITEMS: 350+ Crowns

A MYSTERIOUS BRASS FIGURE

OBJECTIVE:

- Read Count Romilly's will.

QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is only available if you purchase Count Romilly's Figurine at the Borsodi auction during Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame (Part 1). If this auction (and the plan to purchase the figurine) has passed you by, this quest isn't accessible. Curses!

During Main Quest: Open Sesame, continue to complete objectives associated with this quest until the auction begins. First up is a brass figurine from the collection of the infamous Count Romilly. The rumored treasure inside can only be discovered by destroying the item itself. You can:

- Refrain from bidding (failing this quest).
- If you want it, you'll need to bid 300 crowns for it (despite the item being worth only 150 crowns).

Items: Count Romilly's Figurine

With the figurine now in your possession, once you're thrown out of the auction house, or any time you're not engaged in objectives you cannot stall, take a trip to any armorsmith or blacksmith (such as the one in Oxenfurt), ask them to show you their wares (or to craft something). Go to the "Crafting" menu instead of the "Shop," choose "Dismantle," pick Count Romilly's Figurine from the items you own that can be dismantled, and remove the following key parts (while paying the vendor a nominal fee for dismantling). The figurine is destroyed (it cannot be sold for 150 crowns), but you do receive the following:

Items: Count Romilly's will, Ornate key

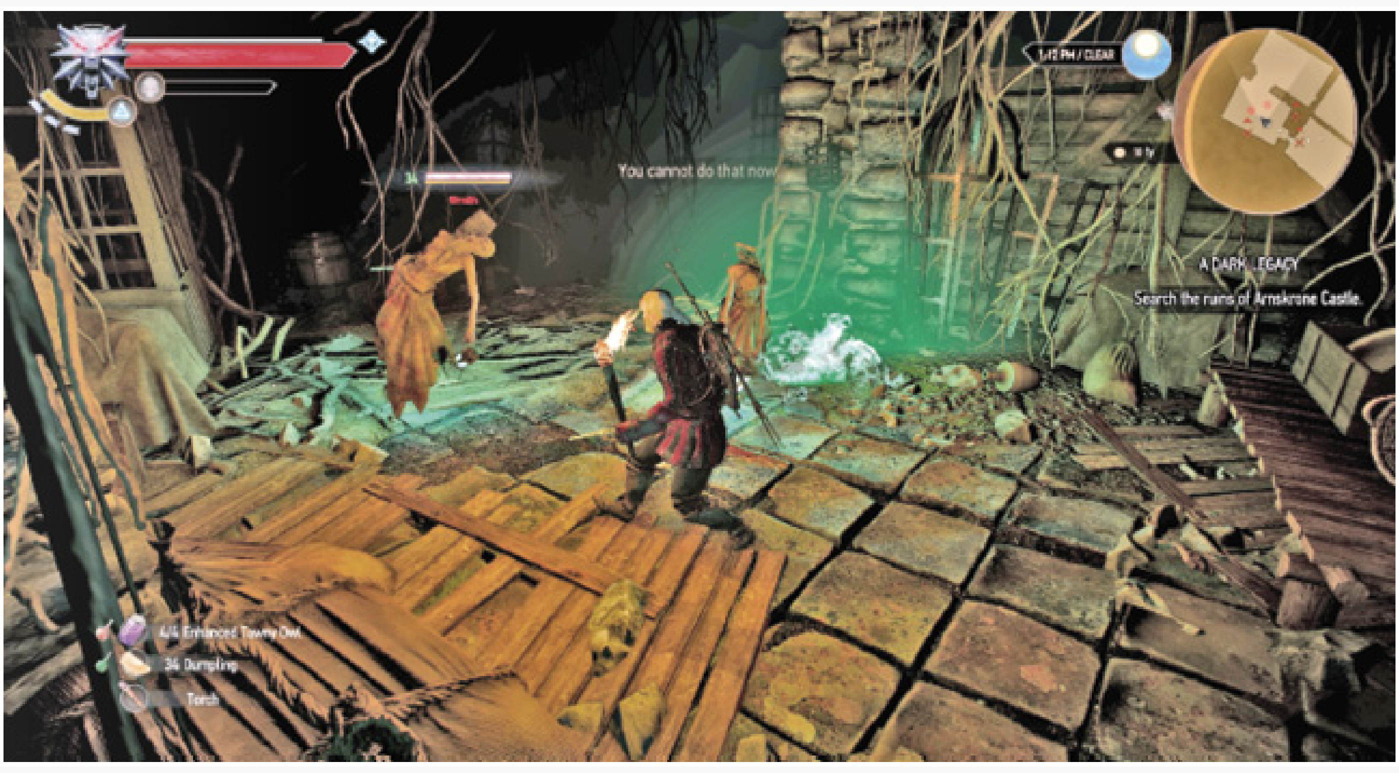
WHERE THERE'S A WILL, THERE'S A WAY

OBJECTIVE:

- Search the ruins of Arnskrone Castle.

With the figurine's contents revealed, read the will, and it reveals a chest to be opened in the ancestral home of Count Romilly, Arnskrone Castle. It is located on the very eastern edges of Gustfields Territory, southeast of Erde and northeast of Heddel, and is a place no sane peasant would ever tread. To reach the castle, you must enter the ancient forest known as Deadwight Woods. As the gloom envelopes you (even during the brightest of days), you find the rudimentary trails converge on the ruins of an old fortress; Arnskrone Castle. In the marshy clearing below the castle, prepare to encounter a small pack of wolves in the company of an Ancient Leshen. Remove the wolf threat first, and then set fire to the Leshen with Igni, while reading up on tactical advice from this guide's bestiary if you need it.

After the Leshen is toppled, optionally use your Witcher Senses to spot a slumped corpse at the foot of the pathway up to the castle grounds (just left of the Arnskrone Castle Ruins signpost); this begins Treasure Hunt: The Secret Life of Count Romilly. Now ascend to face another small pack of wolves (usually lead by a Warg) in the castle's stone courtyard; they appear if you check the corpse by the signpost.



Then access the opening in the ruined circular tower, and descend beneath the woods. Ahead (east) is a locked door opened using the key you can find on the corpse by the signpost, leading to a note and treasure obtained during Treasure Hunt: The Secret Life of Count Romilly. Instead, check the door to your left (north) in this soggy interior (this door appears red if you're using your Witcher Senses). Three Wraiths appear as you enter the room. Defeat these guardians and pick up an old ransom letter as you make your way around the corner to a small set of open cells and a chest. The chest is packed with treasure, usually including some excellent crafting ingredients, a diagram, and a decoction. The quest now completes (but be sure to finish a complete scavenge of this entire castle, as detailed in the related Treasure Hunt).

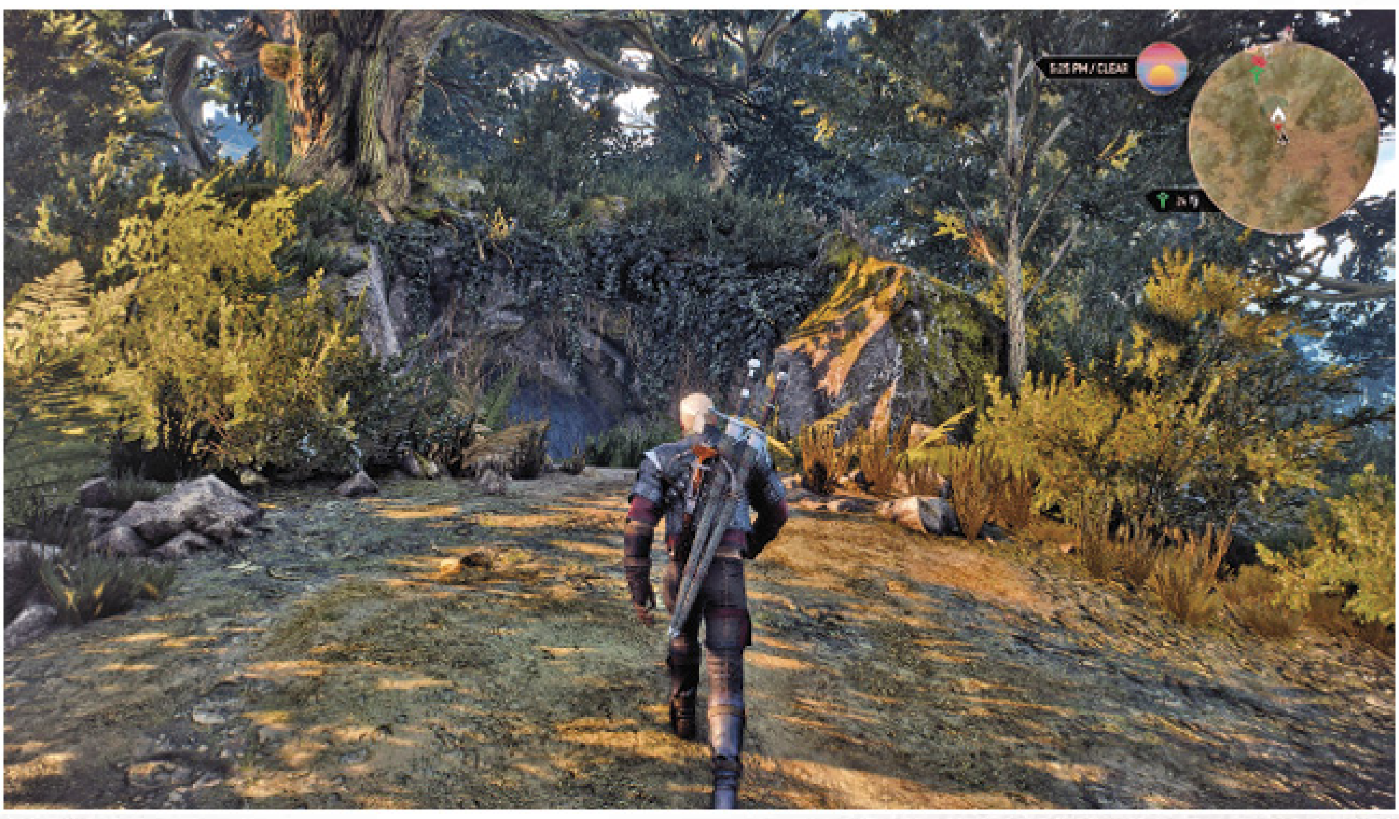
QUEST COMMENCEMENT

This quest is ideally started during the Secondary Quest: Enchanting: Quality Has Its Price, during the objective where you have to locate deposits of jade. However, you can complete it independently.



In the hills due north of Yantra is a wooded hill with a cave hidden beneath the green canopy. The cave is known locally as Bloodrot Pit, and is easy to find if you're searching for jade during the previously-mentioned enchanting quest. Enter the cave mouth, and begin to battle around ten Arachomorphs.

These giant spiders can be dispatched using tactics found in this guide's Bestiary (page 733). Their lunging, attacks can cover large distances, but are very susceptible to Yrden (which freezes them in place); follow this up with burning or freezing attacks (Axii, Aard, or Igni are all good choices, followed up additionally with sword strikes). If you're caught in a web, attempt to parry. Use bombs that freeze or burn. Copious dodging and rolling are also advisable.

Once combat concludes, remain just inside the cave mouth, and locate the curled-up corpse; gather the following items from the body, and read the letter. It's a missive from a friend commanding the dead man for surviving the horrors of Drakenborg.

Items: Yellowed letter, Bent key

You may wish to replenish your potions and meditate for a while before venturing into the back of the cave; this secondary chamber has a huge Arachnomorph that must be fought. Try stunning it with Axii or Igni, and follow up with sword slashes until it yields. Dodge its jumping attacks and spittle. Once it has stopped scuttling, investigate the back (eastern) part of the back cave, until you find a shovel and half-buried chest. Gather the following coinage:

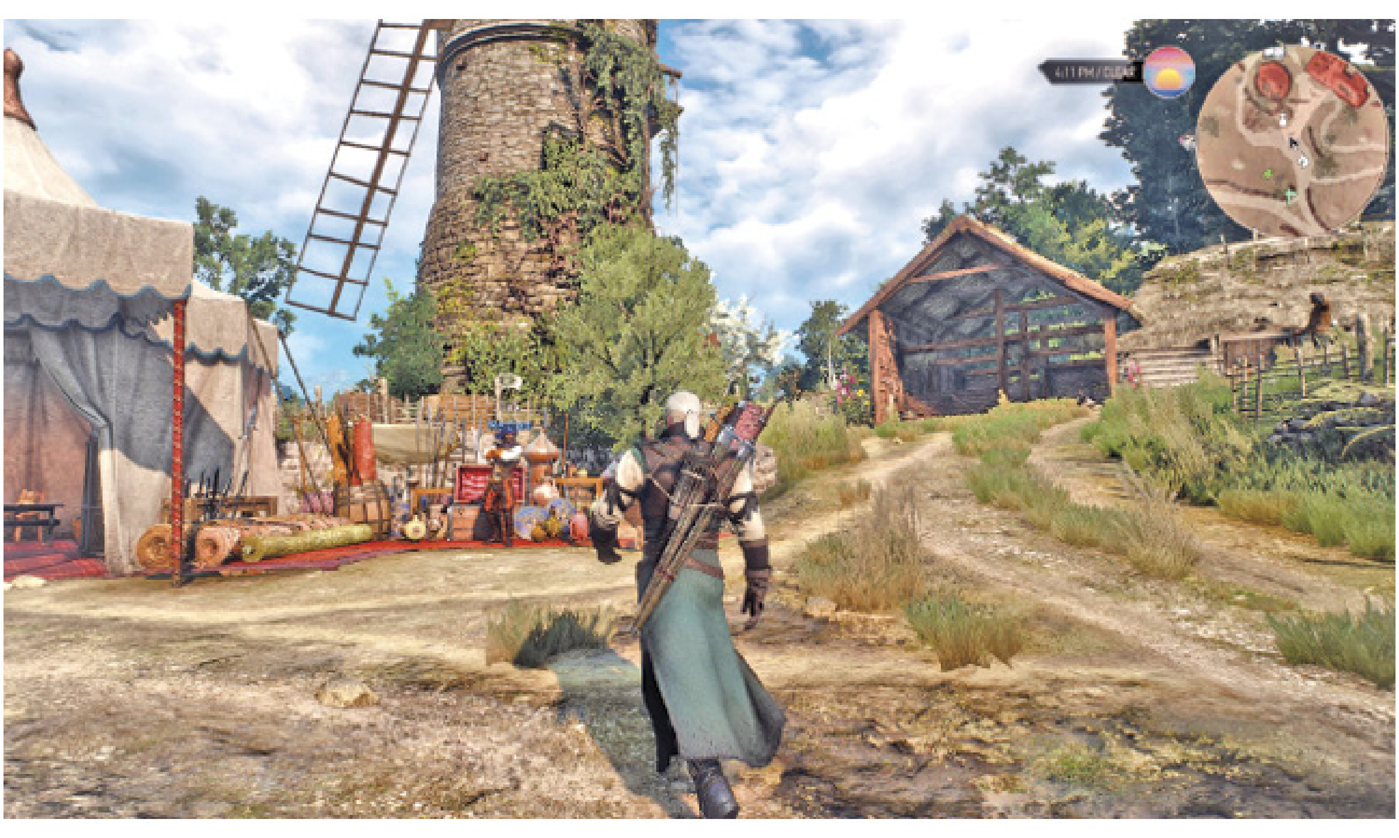
LOCATIONS: Upper Mill, Erde, Heddel, Zuetzer Castle
CHARACTERS: Ofieri Merchant
ENEMIES: Fallen Knights

IN RISK THERE IS HONOR

OBJECTIVE:

- Look for the place where the Ofieri merchant was attacked.



In the very northeastern corner of Gustfields territory, far east of Novigrad City, is idyllic Brunwich village. Across Miller's Lake is the small hamlet of Upper Mill, where a pair of Ofieri traders have taken up residence. One is a merchant, and the other a Runewright. Engage in conversation with the merchant, who has set up his stall in front of the windmill, by his tent. You can:

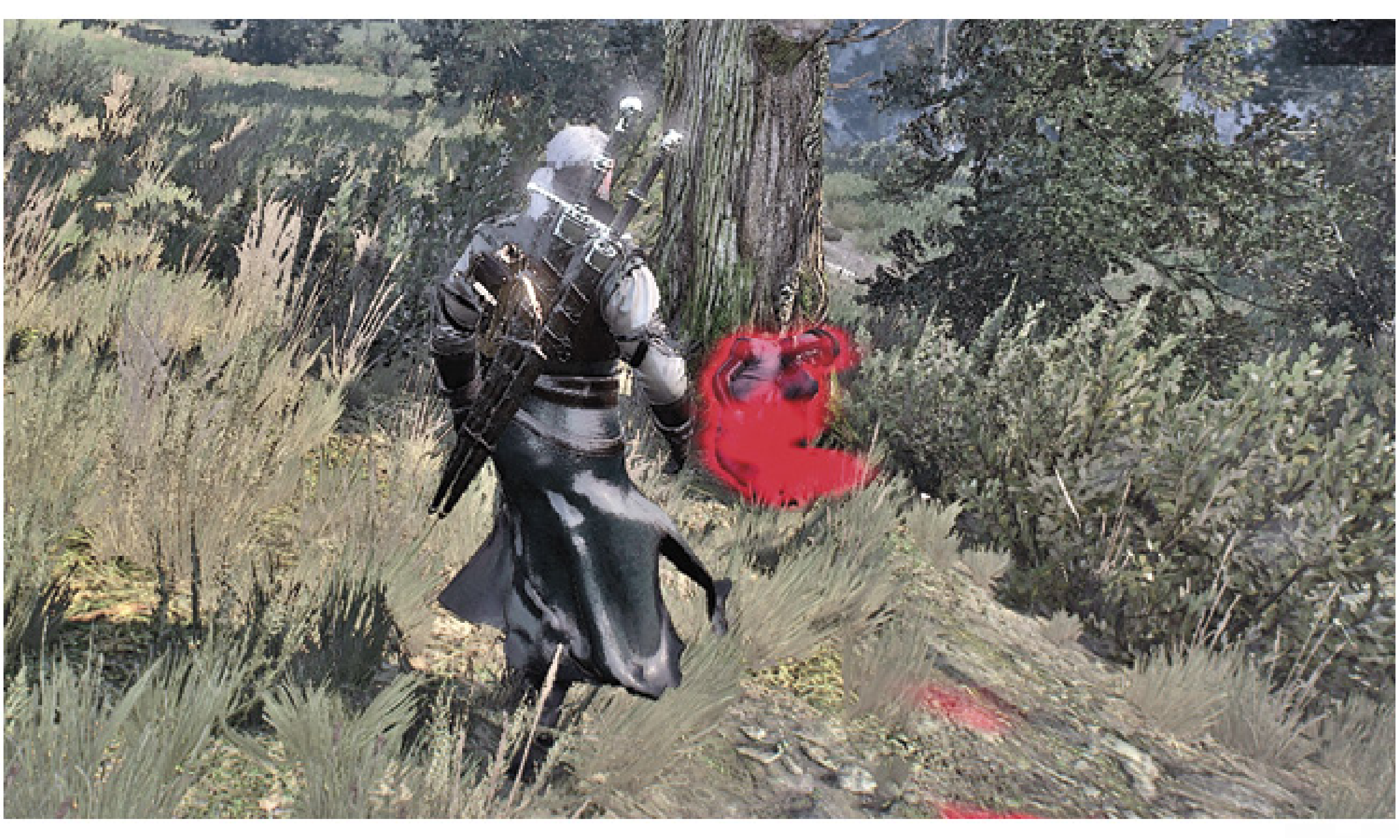
- Ask him about his homeland.
- Mention his horse. This prompts you to challenge the merchant to a horse race (Secondary Quest: Races: Swift as the Western Winds; see page 503).
- Tell him you "wouldn't mind a look" at his wares. After inspecting (and optionally trading), the merchant asks if you see worth in his goods.

After answering in the affirmative, the merchant tells you that local ruffians attacked him during his travels to reach Upper Mill. In the ensuing fracas, he lost a small collection of diagrams. Offer to recover the diagrams for the merchant to begin this quest.

OBJECTIVES:

- Use your Witcher Senses to search the site of the attack.
- Use your Witcher Senses to follow the bandits' trail.

The merchant mentioned a "crossroads" where the thievery took place. Head directly south of Upper Mill, passing the strange little wooded hamlet of Erde, to crossroads midway between Erde and the village of Heddel. At the logging mill, take the road heading roughly southwest, towards a ruined fort in the distance. An Ofieri caravan and dead horse lie at the side of the road. Use your Witcher Senses to uncover the following:



- Signs of a bloody fight.

The multiple prints weave roughly northwest across the road from the wagon, then roughly northward until the trail goes cold. Search the immediate area with your Witcher Senses and uncover:

- An area of ground showing someone bleeding heavily.

Follow the dripping blood trail through the scrub in a roughly northwesterly direction, until you discover the remains of an Ofieri propped up against a tree.

Check the area around the tree to pick up the bandits' trail again, following it in a semi-circle to a patch of dirt on the ground. After a quick removal of the dirt, you uncover a trapdoor leading to a bandit hideout.

OBJECTIVES:

- Search the bandits' hideout.
- Read the letter you found.

Open the trapdoor, use the ladder and climb down into the small tunnel, the remains of a small mining operation and now the lair of the Bandits. Fallen Knights come charging at you when you investigate further in. Deliver a series of killing blows to this scum; there are four foes, including a shielded, two-handed, and crossbow-wielding enemy.

The following three bandit camps must now be raided (in any order you like). They are referenced here in the optimal order.

SECOND BANDIT CAMP: THE RENEGADES IN THE WOODS

Just north and a little west of your current position (west of Erde), and just off the wooded path is a small camp of around six Fallen Knights, who may be preoccupied by a small Nekker, Bear, or other wild animal incursion. Either way, anything that isn't Roach needs to be put to death. Then search the chest (glowing red if you use Witcher Senses) just right of the metal brewing equipment, and left of the tent. There's a crumpled letter (to optionally read), some supplies, and the following items of interest:

Items: Boots Diagram – untranslated, Order of the Flaming Rose (armor or gauntlets), Crumpled letter

THIRD BANDIT CAMP: THE MOTLEY CREW AT THE COTTAGE

Meditate and refill any potions before locating the next camp. Along the very northern edge of Gustfields territory, northeast of the Isolated Hut, and northwest of the Garin Estate, is a remote farmhouse with six Fallen Knights to defeat. Once the coast is clear, enter the house and search for the chest left of the bed for some florens, Flaming Rose armor, and another diagram you need.

Over in eastern Gustfields territory, on the high ground northeast of Est Taylar, is the crumbling fortification known as the Vikk Watchtower, most recently a laboratory. It isn't big enough to have a signpost, but it is home to a large flock of Harpies. Remember to use Aard or Igni to blast them out of the air and finish them on the ground with sword plunges (or consult the Bestiary). Also beware of a possible Forktail incursion. The entrance to the tower has a note on the doorway wall requesting harpy eggs. Just inside the ruined archway entrance lies the corpse of Vogel himself. Among his belongings, loot the following:

Items: Nicolas Vogel's laboratory notebook, Chest key

Read the fragment of his notes; Vogel seems to be an eccentric breeder of Harpies in the hopes of adding an "airborne" division to the Redanian army. It seems his "children" may have turned on him. His notes mention a "rainy day stash" atop the tower. Interesting…

At the southern end of the river, on the eastern side of Gustfields is the small village of Heddel. It is usually overrun by Arachnomorphs. Optionally liberate the area to access the Signpost for Fast-Travel purposes. Then explore the hilly ground to the north; a tiny hamlet known to locals as Stacheier. The top of the hill is anchored by an old oak tree, and the Abandoned Site here is overrun by Ghouls. Remove these threats. This liberates Stacheier as well (though this location isn't big enough to have its own signpost).

Close to a ballista overlooking the river at the top of the hill, across from the oak tree, are the slumped remains of one Knut Kreutzman. THE SWORD, FAMINE AND PERFIDY

Find the sunken ship using your Witcher Senses.

Make a thorough inspection of the cellar for any additional loot (there's usually a chest with florens here) before leaving the cottage, and plotting a boat trip (or swim) to the southwest, to a small jutting island northwest of Novigrad City. Swim out to the area of interest, watching for further Drowners (a crossbow sees them off if you're fighting them underwater). Dive down and remove the random contents of a small chest from a sunken rowboat.

GUSTFIELDS: TINKER, HUNTER, SOLDIER, SPY

LOCATIONS: Whispering Grange, Mohrin Village
CHARACTERS: Beanpole, Agent Shinetop
ENEMIES: Fallen Knights

IT'S ABOUT WHICH MASTER YOU'VE BEEN SERVING, GERALT

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the report.

East of Novigrad, and beyond the vineyards of Whispering Grange, you see a wooden watchtower poking above the trees atop the higher ground to the north. The hamlet of Mohrin Village (a settlement too small for its own signpost) has been set ablaze by about half a dozen Fallen Knights. Treat them like common (but armored) bandits. Once the area is liberated and the roof fires are out, climb the wooden watchtower, and search the platform for the corpse of a spy.

Gather the key and letter; it's from a field agent codenamed "Beanpole" who was tracking these renegade knights and working with an "Agent Shinetop." It seems those knights found him, though his report does make mention of a stash of treasure to purloin.

ARD SKELLIG: INHERITANCE

LOCATIONS: Boxholm

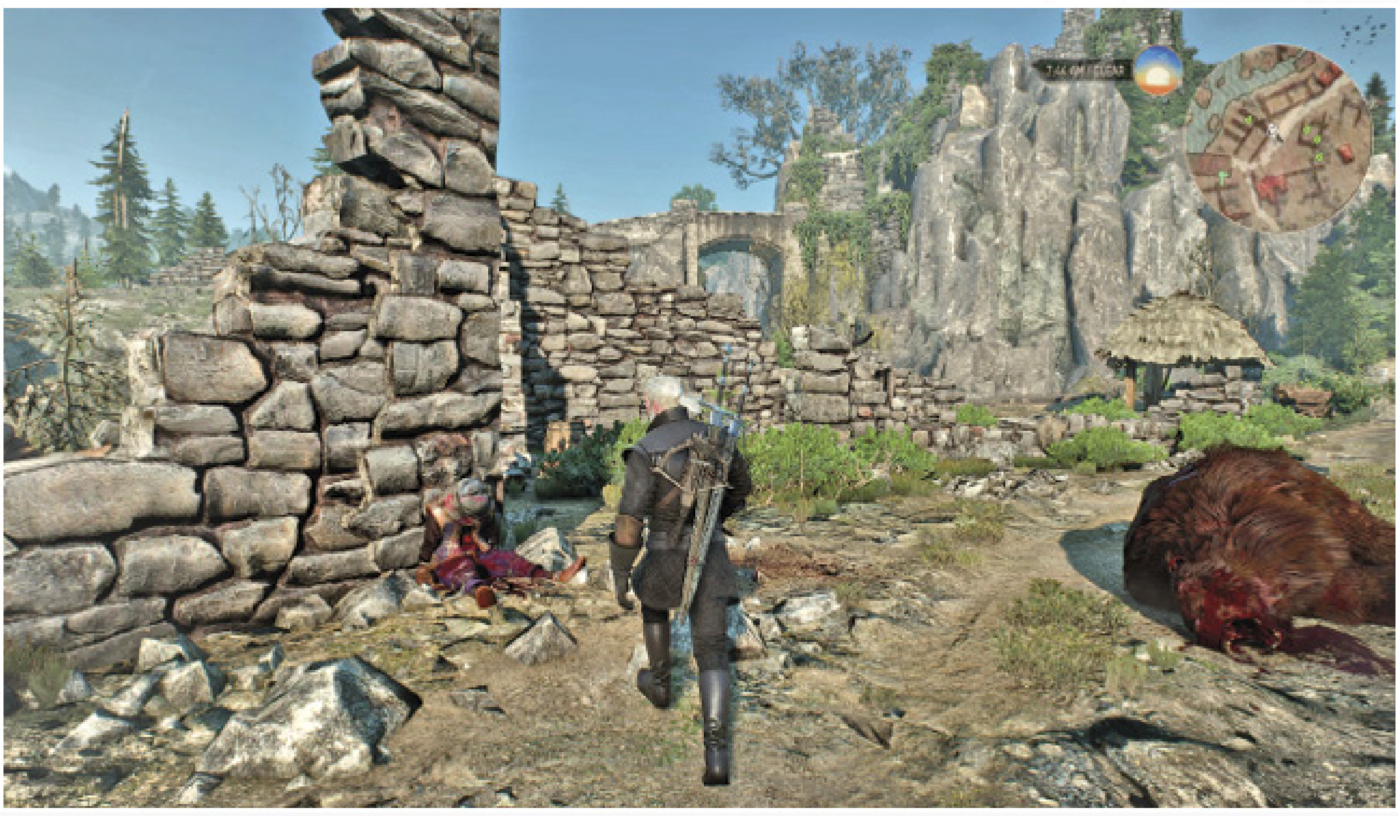
ENEMIES: Morvudd (Fiend)

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.

In the north and central part of the main island of Ard Skellig is the abandoned settlement of Boxholm; its inhabitants are terrorized by a marauding Fiend known as Morvudd (Contract: Missing Son). This general area between Boxholm and Fayrlund has two other treasure-hunting spots. See the Atlas chapter for specifics.

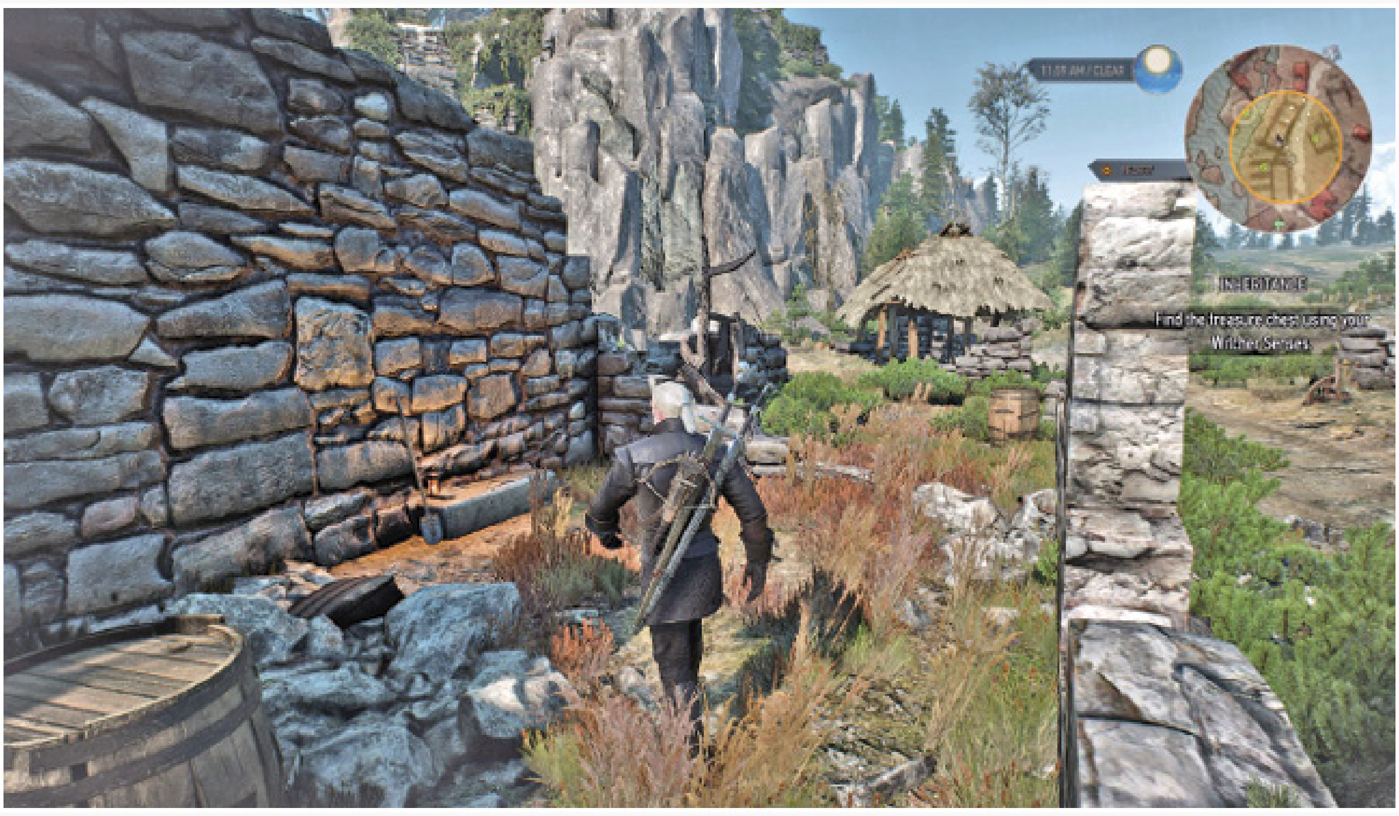


You can easily avoid the Fiend if you steer clear of the ruined fort. Walk roughly north a few paces from the Signpost at Boxholm, and discover a Skellige warrior propped up against the remains of a stone structure, across from a dead bear. Gather the following from his body:

Items: Silver-plated key, Old, yellowed letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the treasure chest using your Witcher Senses.



INHERITANCE

The note is from an older man to his infant son describing some family hardships. The age of the letter indicates the son was grown up, and about to claim to some family goods "beneath Old Ule's house." Although the fellow dug up the chest, he never pocketed the items inside. The treasure is literally within spitting distance from the corpse, in the next ruined hut, near the barrel.

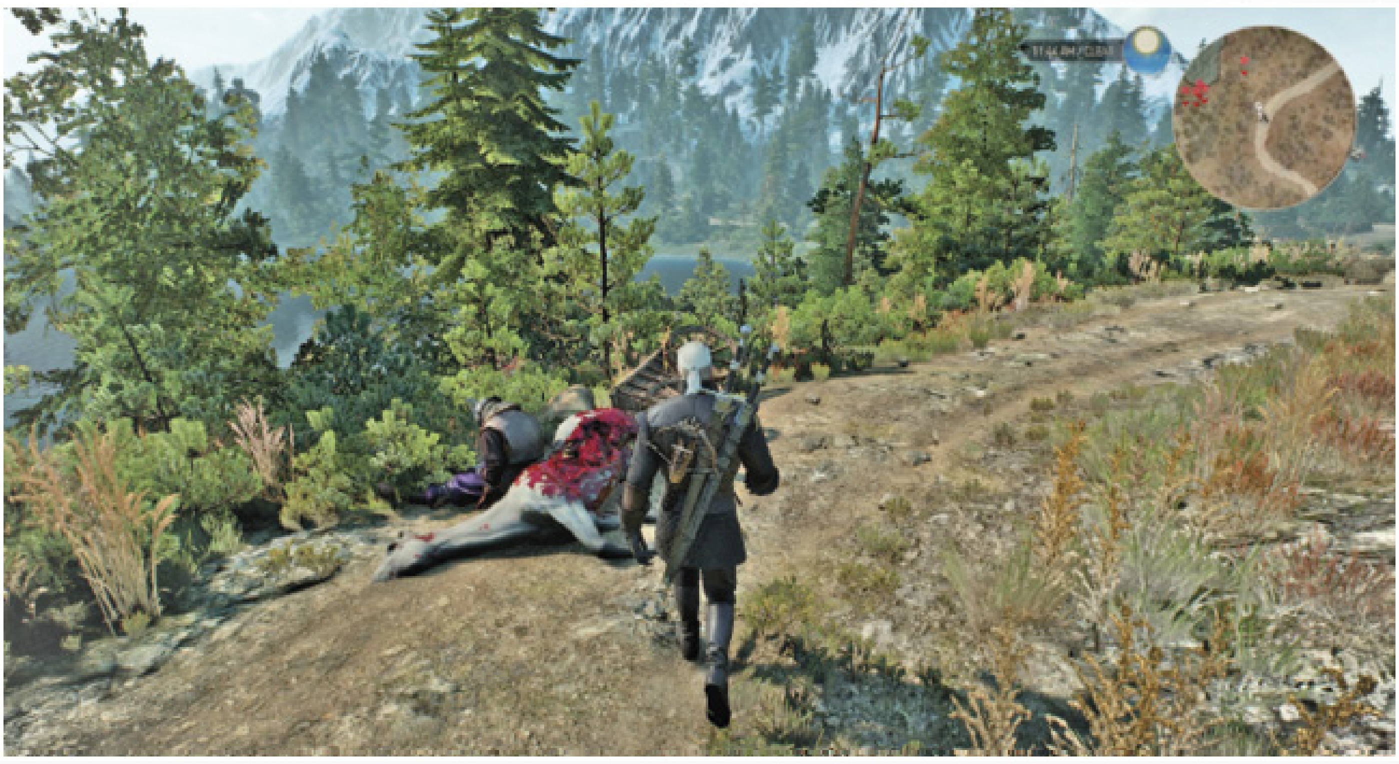
OBJECTIVE:

- Read the crumpled note.

The road south of Blandare is a treacherous one; explore this rough thoroughfare that skirts the north shore of the lake here. You uncover something of interest at a bend in the road, just south of the jarl's property, down the hill to the road side: a half-eaten horse and a dead merchant. Search him.



Items: Itinerant merchant's notes, Small chest key

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the treasure chest using your Witcher Senses.

Despite sacrificing a lamb to Freya, the merchant didn't reach his destination. But current indications are that there's something of value in the nearby lake. Descend to the north shore, where you're set upon by at least six Drowners.

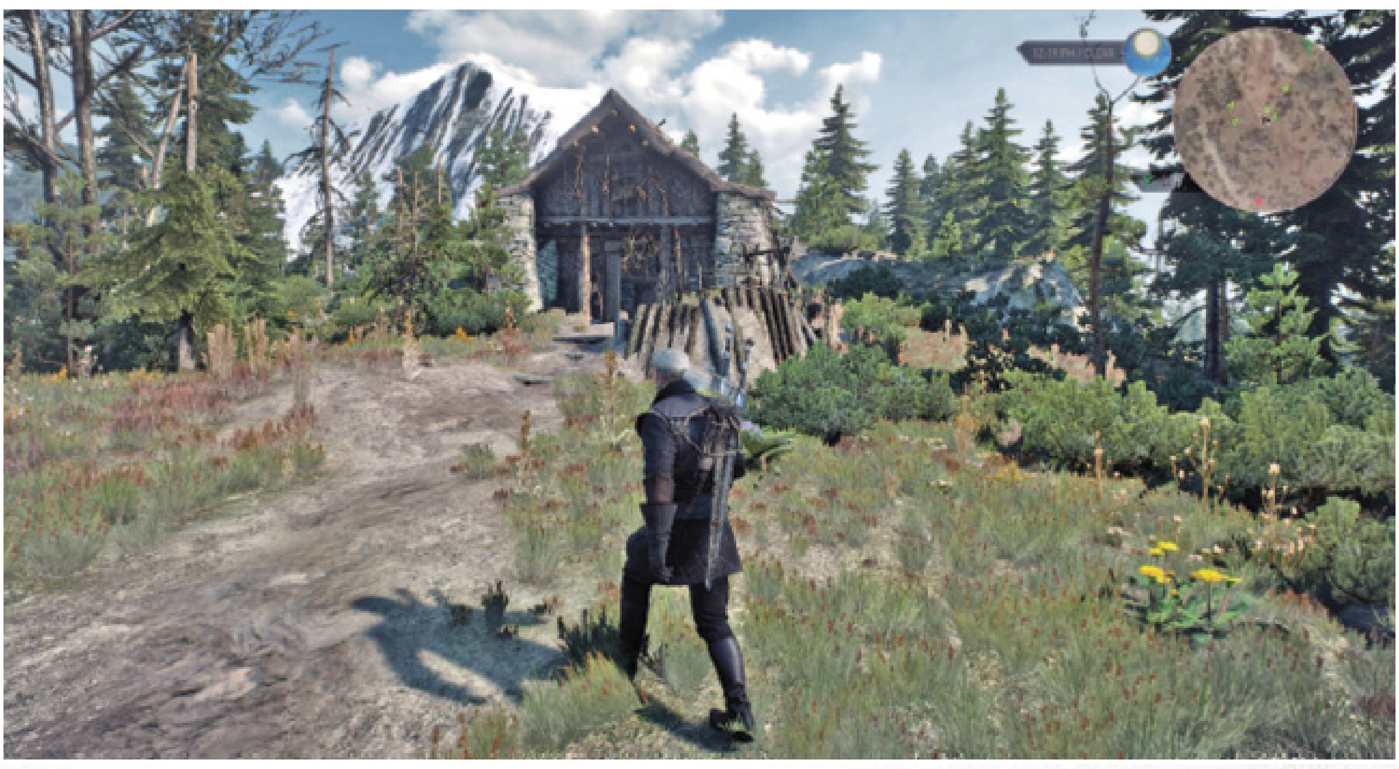
LOCATIONS: Blandare, Ruined Farmhouse (Unmarked), Fayrlund
ENEMIES: Wraith, Wolves

FORSEEN AT THE RAVINE

OBJECTIVE:

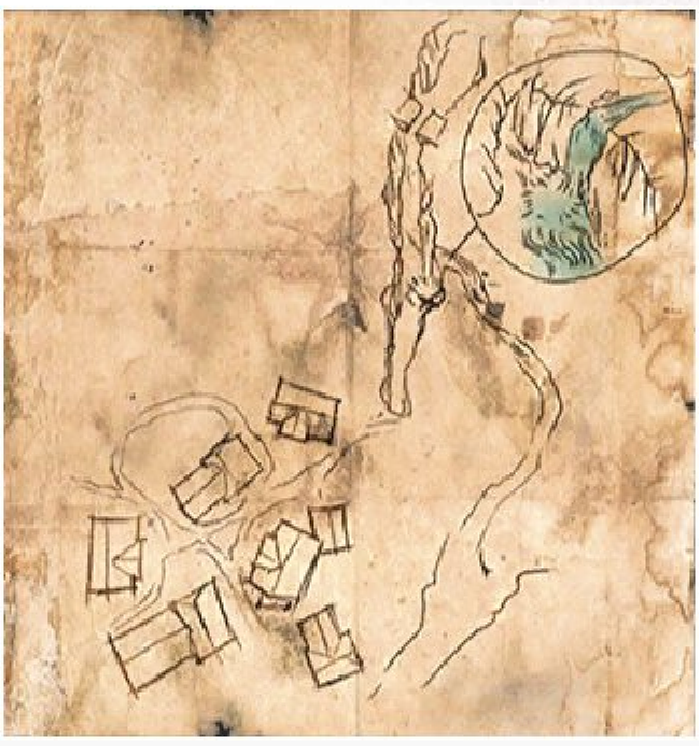
- Unfold the map.

While wandering the settlements of Blandare in the middle of Ard Skellig, travel southeast to the eastern side of the lake, and discover the dilapidated remains of a ruined farmhouse. Venture inside, and optionally use your Witcher Senses to discover an old skeleton, an equally ancient key, and map. Watch for a possible wraith if you check these bones.



Items: Old key, Mysterious map

Unfold the map in your inventory menu, and discover a rough sketch of a settlement, with a circled waterfall nearby—and treasure!



OBJECTIVE:

- Follow the map to find the treasure

The chest itself is at the base of a waterfall, in the fast-moving stream close (and just to the southeast) of the nearby settlement of Fayrlund. It is a short jog to the west. Head there, watching for wolves, rapid streams, a small bridge, and the stream ravine you can drop into.

Note the wolf symbol on the rocks by the waterfall (visible if you use your Witcher Senses). Unlock the chest with the old key, and purloin the fabulous prizes.

ARD SKELLIG: FAMILY FORTUNE

LOCATIONS: Ruined Inn, Shipwreck (Unmarked)

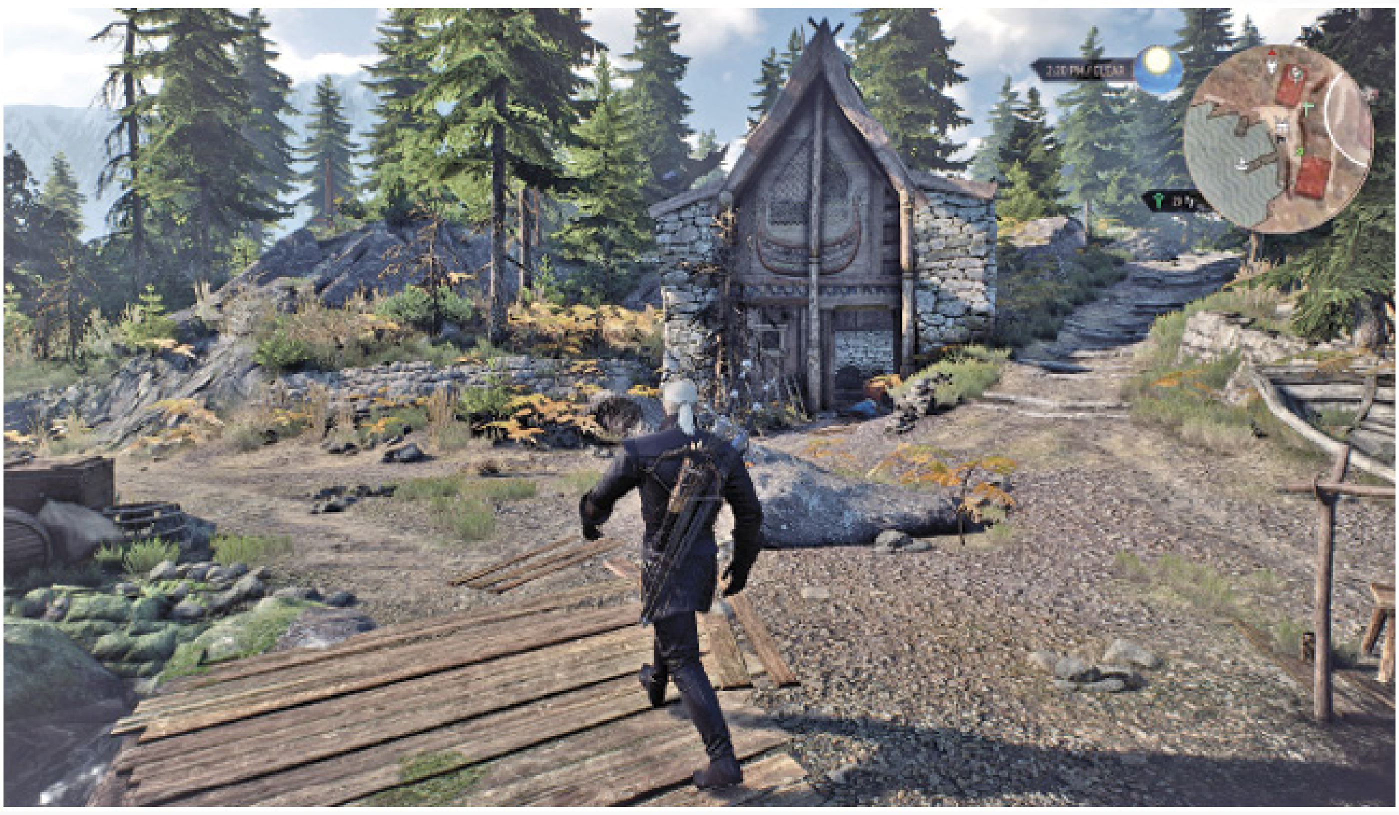
ENEMIES: Sirens

MARINE SALVAGE OFF THE SOUTHERN COAST

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the well-worn letter.

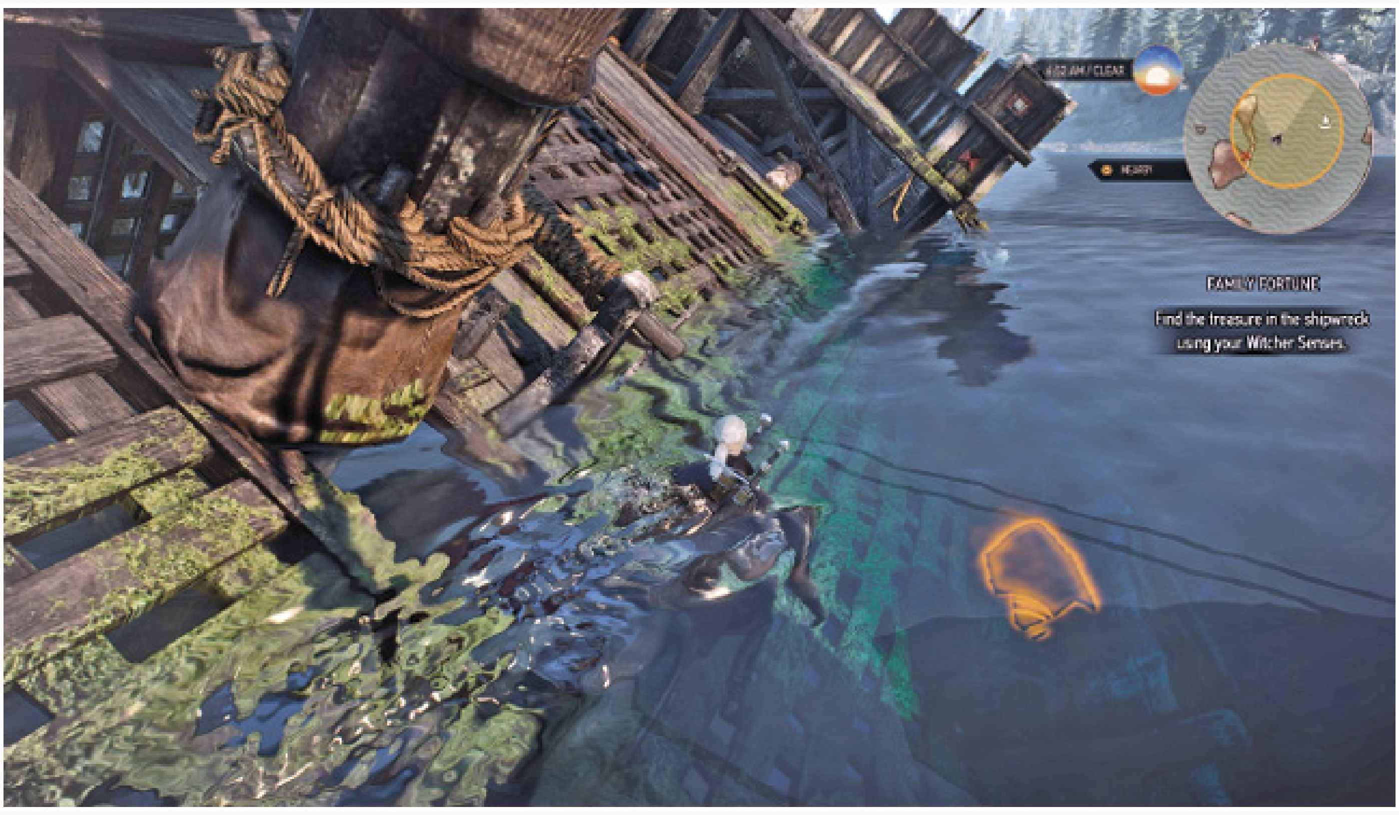
Along the south coast of Ard Skellig is a small coastal settlement dominated by the burned-out ruins of an inn. The place is overrun by Sirens, so beware of these airborne pests as you arrive. The area to search isn't the skeletal remains of the Inn, but rather the small fisherman's cottage on this beach itself. Inside is a wooden chest with a letter to read.



Items: Letter

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the treasure in the shipwreck using your Witcher Senses.



FAMILY FORTUNE

The letter tells a tale of woe regarding a ship's sinking, and parts of this gallant but doomed boat can still be seen sticking out of the waters to the southeast. Optionally take a boat and travel southeast, to the rotting remains of the ship, beached on rocks.

Use your own boat, the sloping deck of the rotting ship, or dive underwater and utilize your crossbow to begin removing any further Siren threats. The chest is still on the deck, but has slid to the submerged area near the main mast. A small swim is required to loot it.

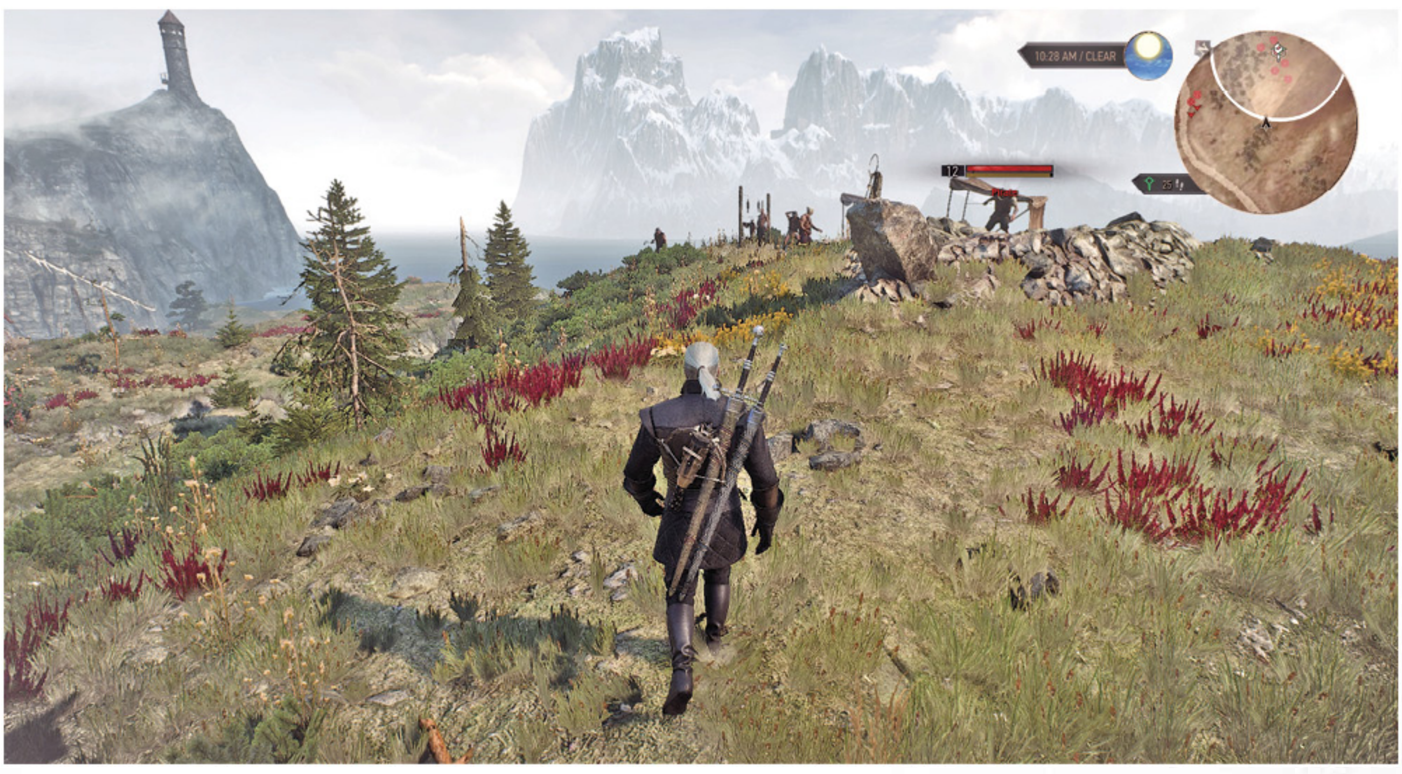
LOCATIONS: Arinbjorn, Eldberg Lighthouse, Pirate Camp (Unmarked), Pearl Divers' Cave (Unmarked)

ENEMIES: Ekhidna, Pirates

LOOT OFF THE COAST

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the unsent letter.



Take a trip to the trio of islands north of Arinbjorn, with Eldberg Lighthouse on the northern-most island. This rugged promontory is located in the northwest Ard Skellig. From Arinbjorn, cross the coastal rocks, following the rough path and fallen bridges to the second of the three islands. Expect Ekhidna swooping in to thwart you along the way. Your destination is a pirate camp on the eastern side of the second island.

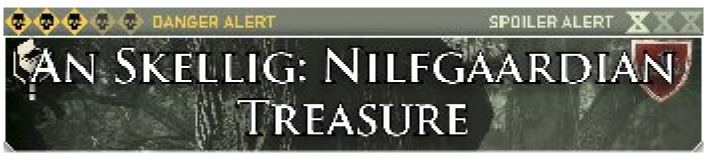
An Skellig: Nilfgaardian Treasure



LOCATIONS: Urialla Harbor (An Skellig)

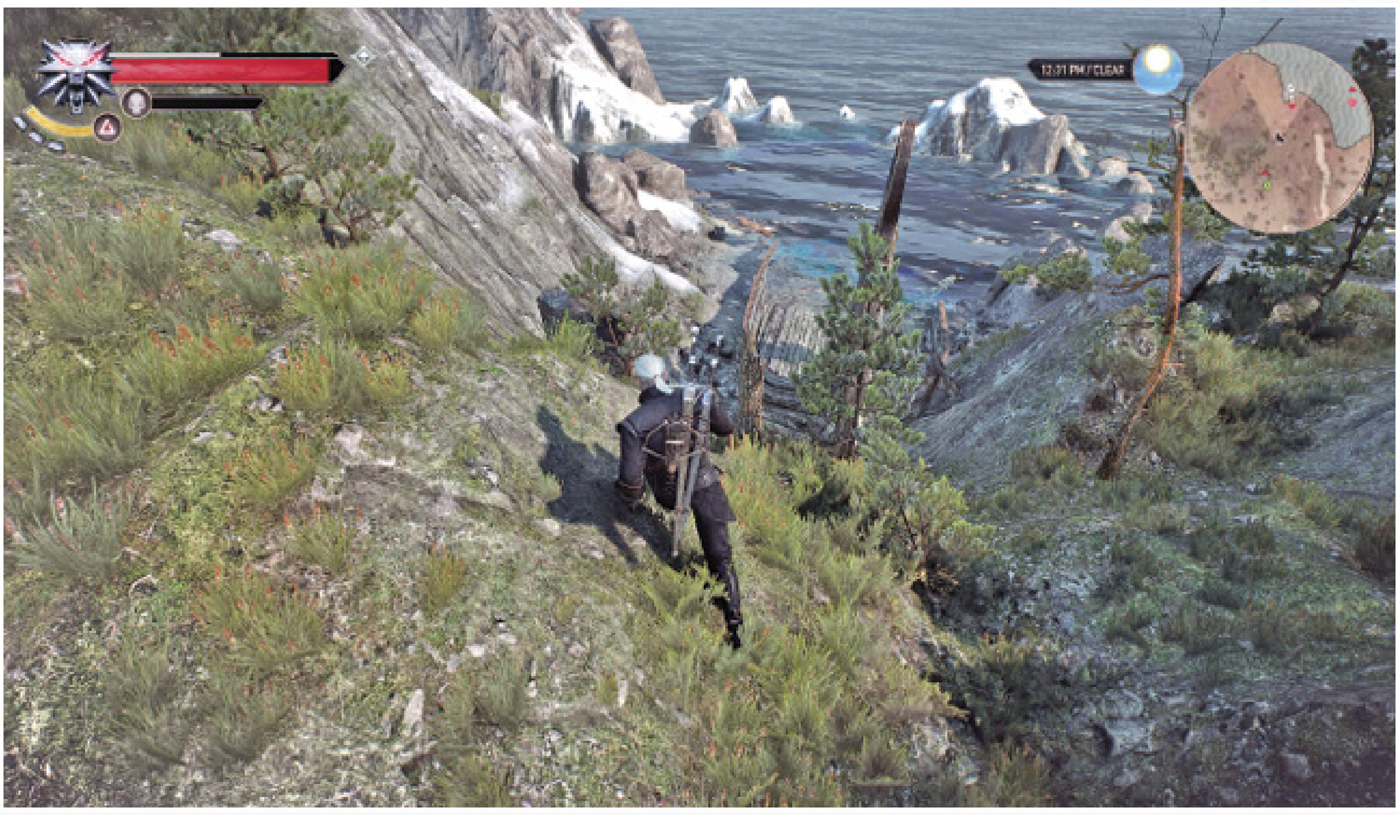
ENEMIES: Sirens

AMID THE FRIGID WAVES, BELOW THE CRAGGY COAST

OBJECTIVE:

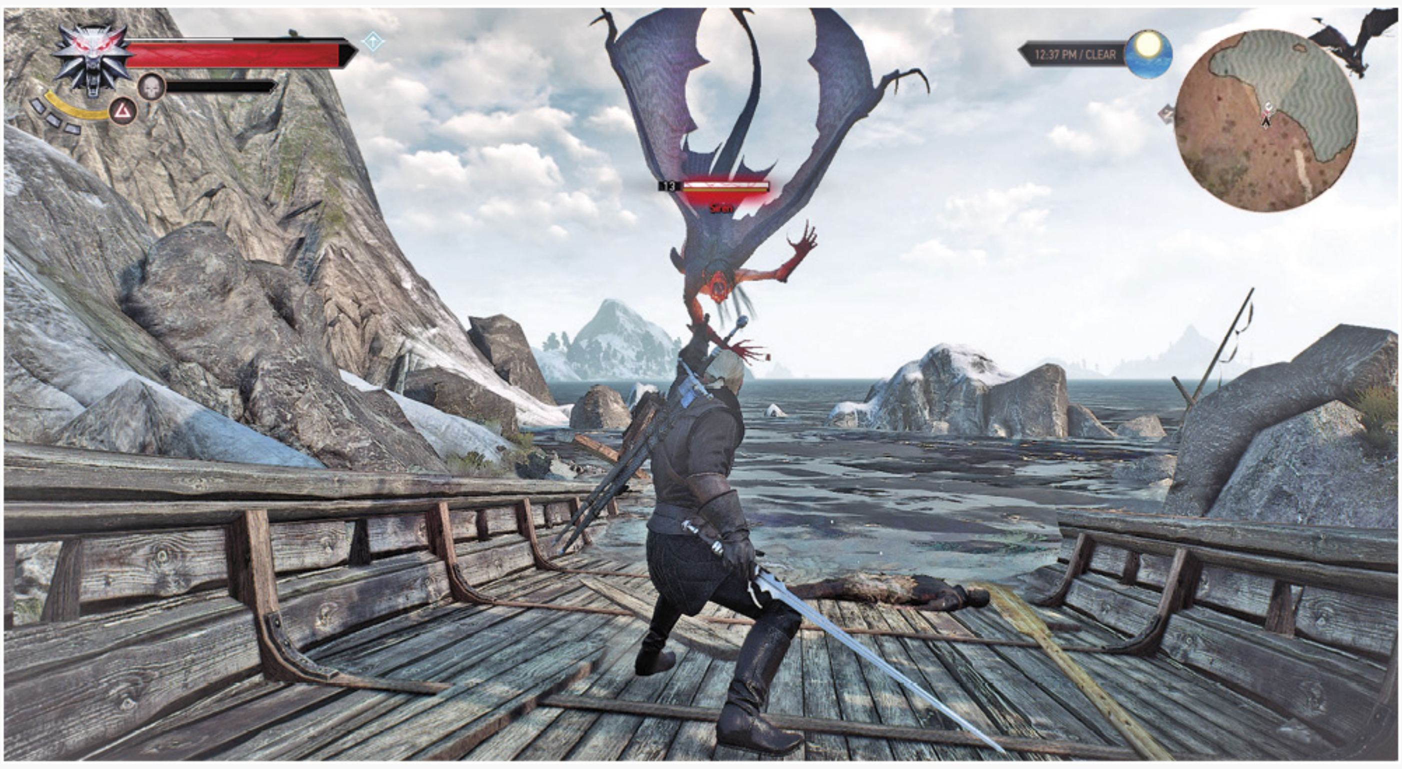
- Read the notes you found.

While exploring the northeastern outer island of An Skellig, make your way from the main settlement of Urialla Harbor, heading southeast along the trails, to the southeast edge of the island itself. Either approach from the rocky hillside or the coast itself.



On the ragged shoreline of jutting rocks is a section of boat partly submerged, with a bloated corpse resting on the deck. After ensuring you won't be attacked by any nearby Sirens, search the body and read the cargo list you find.

Items: Cargo list



OBJECTIVE:

- Find the sunken treasure using your Witcher Senses.

The cargo list indicates a nearby ship that still carries some Nilfgaardian valuables, though the vessel has sunk in the area immediately southeast of your current location. Look for the nearby rocks and ship's mast protruding from the waves. Dive there, using a crossbow to end any Sirens trying to stop you. Then find the chest on the deck of the sunken boat.

UNDVIK: PRECIOUS HAUL

LOCATIONS: Tor Gvalch'ca

TALE OF A TUB BROKEN IN TWO

OBJECTIVE:

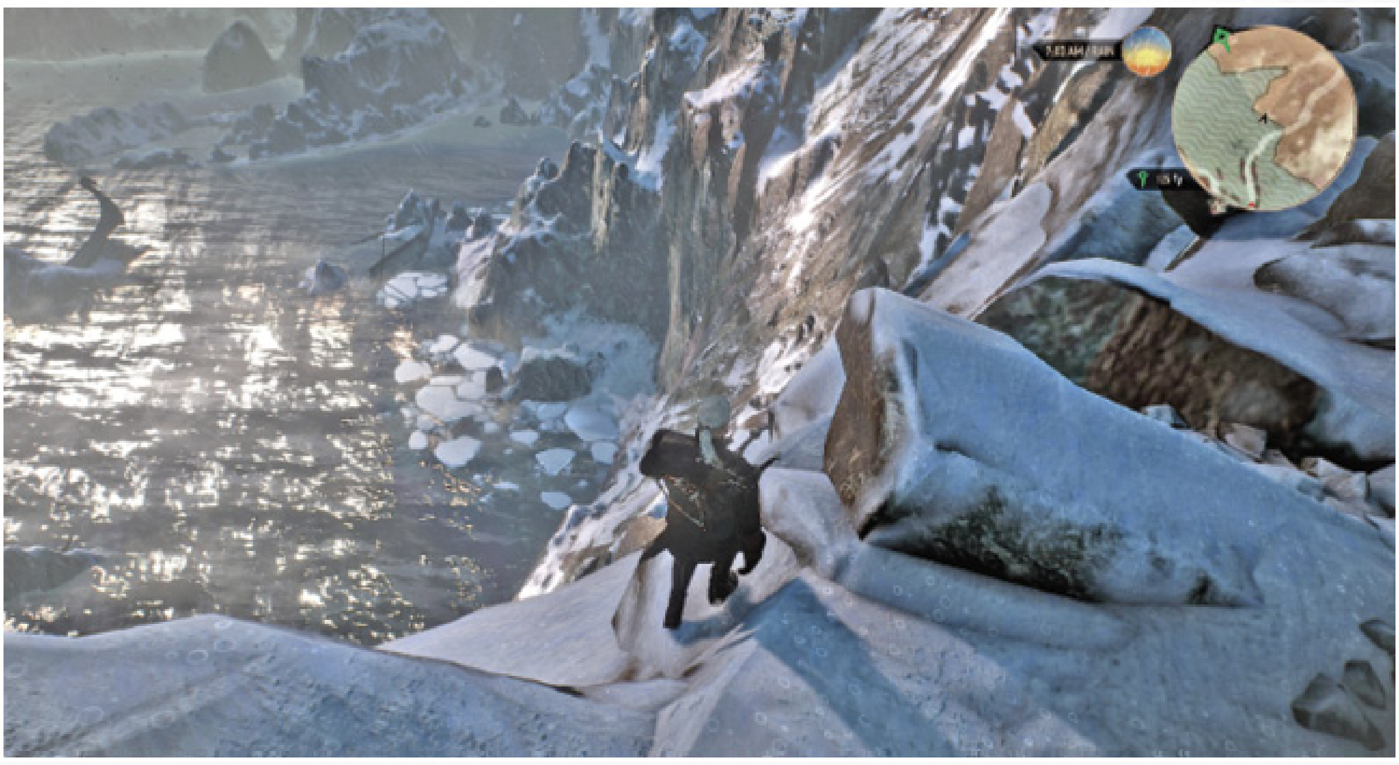
Due north of the Abandoned Village, and just southeast of the elven tower known as Tor Gvalch'ca, is an area of inhospitable waters. It's usually beneficial to approach from the sea.

The corpse in question is lying on a section of broken boat, close to the ice flows and shoreline. Hop onto the boat, and read the note the corpse still clutches. It seems a terrible storm recently sunk a ship nearby.



Items: Traveler's Notes

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the sunken cargo using your Witcher Senses.

The chest is on the sea bed directly north of the corpse's position. Swim across the bay, and dive to the right of the shipwreck rocks to the left (northwest), and dive down as the ground starts to rise. Claim your booty beneath these waves.

Use the map to find the treasure

The chest containing the treasure requires a swift run uphill, since the map is actually of Dorve Ruins itself. Slay up to six Devourers or Rotfiends shambling about the place, and then go east up the slope where two Sirens flit about the narrow and fallen towers of the fort atop the hill.

You may also encounter Wraiths as you reach the base of the tower structure. Look for a Witcher wolf sign daubed on the walls here (using your Witcher Senses). Step into the tower ruins, climb the ladder, edge across the wooden ledge with the large bird's nest, and locate the small wooden chest. Unlock it to uncover a stupendous prize!

Undvik: Shortcut

UNDVIK: SHORTCUT

LOCATIONS: Urskar, Dorve Ruins

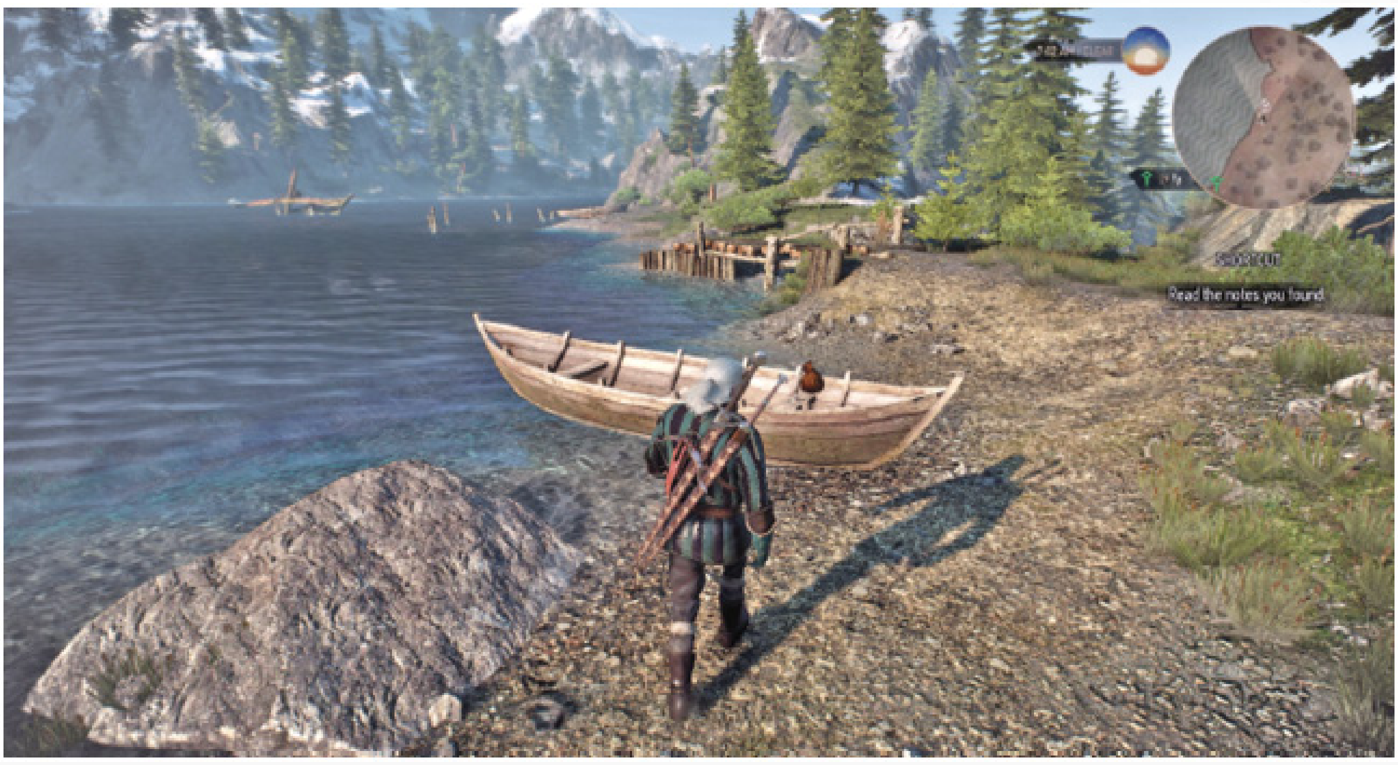
LAKE BOTTOM BONANZA

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the notes you found.

Midway along the northern lake shore in the center of Undvik isle, between Urskar (to the west) and Dorve Ruins (to the east), is a gravel shore with a rowboat, sometimes guarded by bandits. Feel free to slice them into smaller, more manageable chunks before checking the boat for a small sack of loot.



SHORTCUT

Read the notes you found.

Items: Torn piece of paper

OBJECTIVE:

- Search for treasure on the bottom of the lake using your Witcher Senses.

The piece of paper in the sack has notes on one Skelliger's path to wisdom, though choking his druid after throwing his valuables in a lake didn't seem to result in a higher understanding of matters. Never mind; you're here for the loot so swim out into the lake, roughly southwest of the rowboat.

Dive down when you see the top of the mast of the submerged boat, then dive down to the lake bed where the algae-covered chest resides near the broken hull of the vessel.

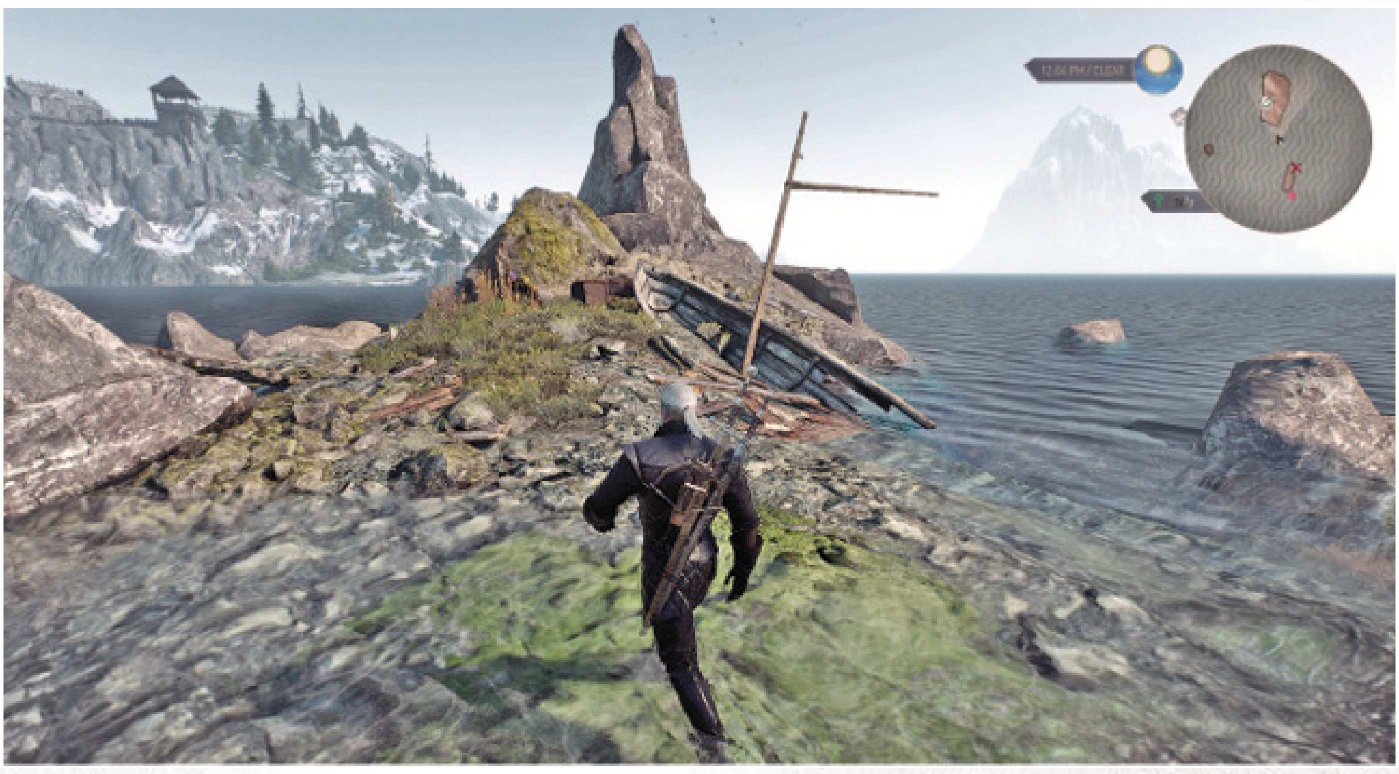
THE CROOKED MAST MARKS THE SPOT

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the note you found.



The small island of Spikeroog holds a number of secrets, not least a treasure trove off the coast just southeast of the main settlement of Svorlag. From Svorlag's signpost, take the path along the high coastal rocks heading roughly southeast. You're looking for the pointed island at the mouth of Svorlag bay.

The bay itself has around half a dozen Drowners to dissuade from existing. When the coast is literally clear, head to the pointed rock promontory and search the corpse lying close to a chest and the remains of a small sail boat. Claim the note and key, and read the small missive.

Items: Note, Key with ring attached

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the underwater treasure using your Witcher Senses.

Dive into the water by the pointed promontory, remaining close to the shore, but a little to the east and slightly south. The treasure can be tricky to take; not only due to the Sirens that may be active in this area (use the crossbow to stop them), but the difficult-to-spot chest. Find it just below the promontory rocks, near some weeds, and use your Witcher Senses to find it more easily.

THE KING GRIFFIN OF SNIDHALL ISLE

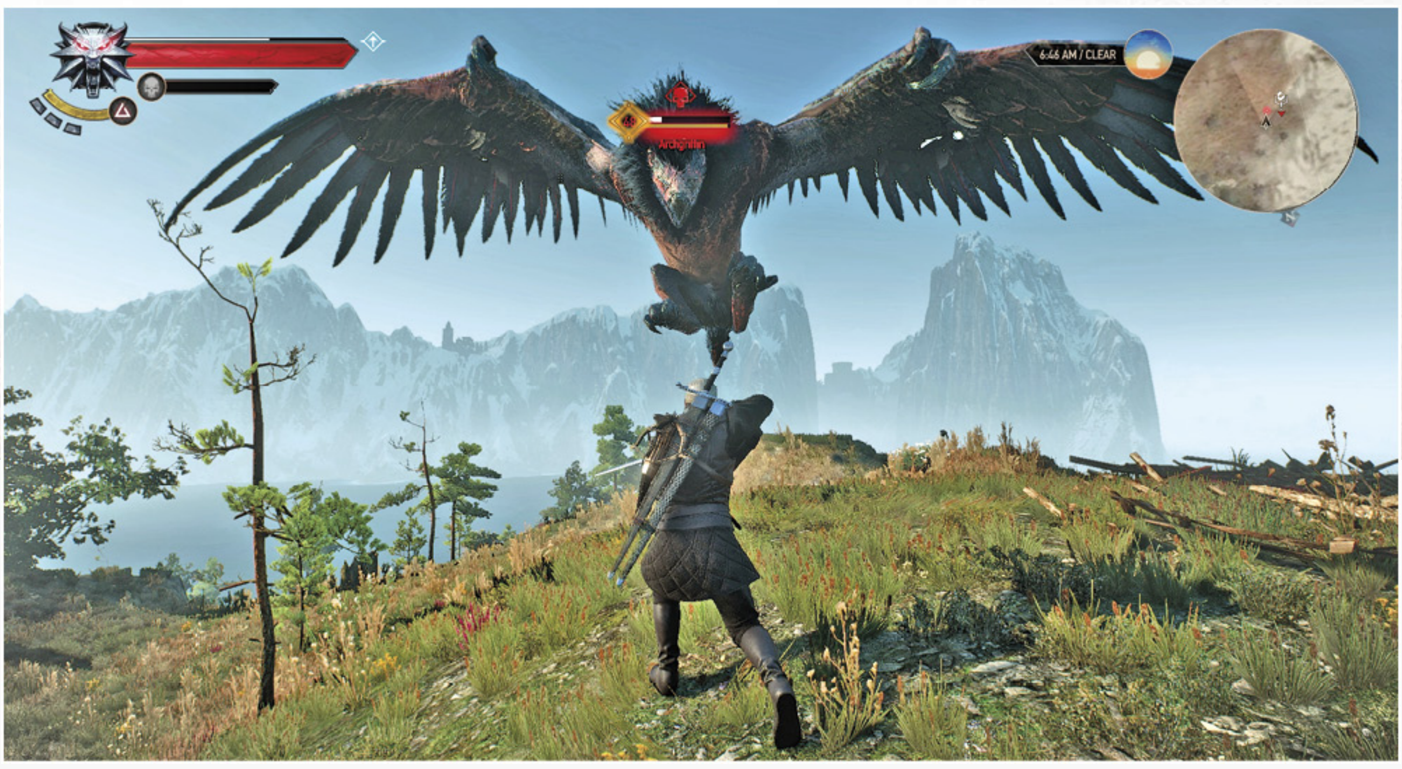
OBJECTIVE:

- Read the document you found on the body.

While the nearest signpost on the mainland can be found at the Ancient Crypt along the north shore of Ard Skellig, it's usually easier to embark from Kaer Trolde Harbor, and set sail to this dormant volcano. Land on the southern shore you first spot.

Bring your best Archgriffin-killing equipment with you, as there's a terribly powerful beast nesting on the summit of this island. This is one of the toughest opponents you'll ever face, so ensure you're the appropriate level to tackle it (the Archgriffin is Level 48).

Items: A frustrated warrior's notes, Skullhead key



OBJECTIVE:

- Use your Witcher Senses.

Check the griffin's nest for a variety of disgusting, half-eaten corpses. One has a document to read, and a key to use. The note pinpoints a treasure chest, which was being removed by some hapless folk before the griffin decimated them. INTO THE SCUTTLING CAVE

OBJECTIVE:

- Read the letter you found.

After reaching the southeastern island of Faroe, feel free to take a boat around the coast, or journey from the settlement of Harviken, to the southwestern shoreline. Among the rugged rocks is a small inlet and Endrega Cave. The stench is unpleasant, as one Endrega is nibbling on the corpse of an adventurer. Kill the foe, search the body of the man, and obtain the following:

Items: Message, Scratched key

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the treasure using your Witcher Senses.

Enter the cave mouth at the inner end of the inlet, then dive into an underwater cave heading roughly northward. Swim quickly and surface as soon as you can, clambering up into a hidden cave system inhabited by a couple of Endrega Drones and a bulbous Arachas. It's worth defeating all of them to minimize surprise attacks.

When combat is over, make a thorough search of the cave itself, which is rough-walled, but single chamber. There are a few alcoves; make sure you find the one to the southeast, which holds the chest you seek.

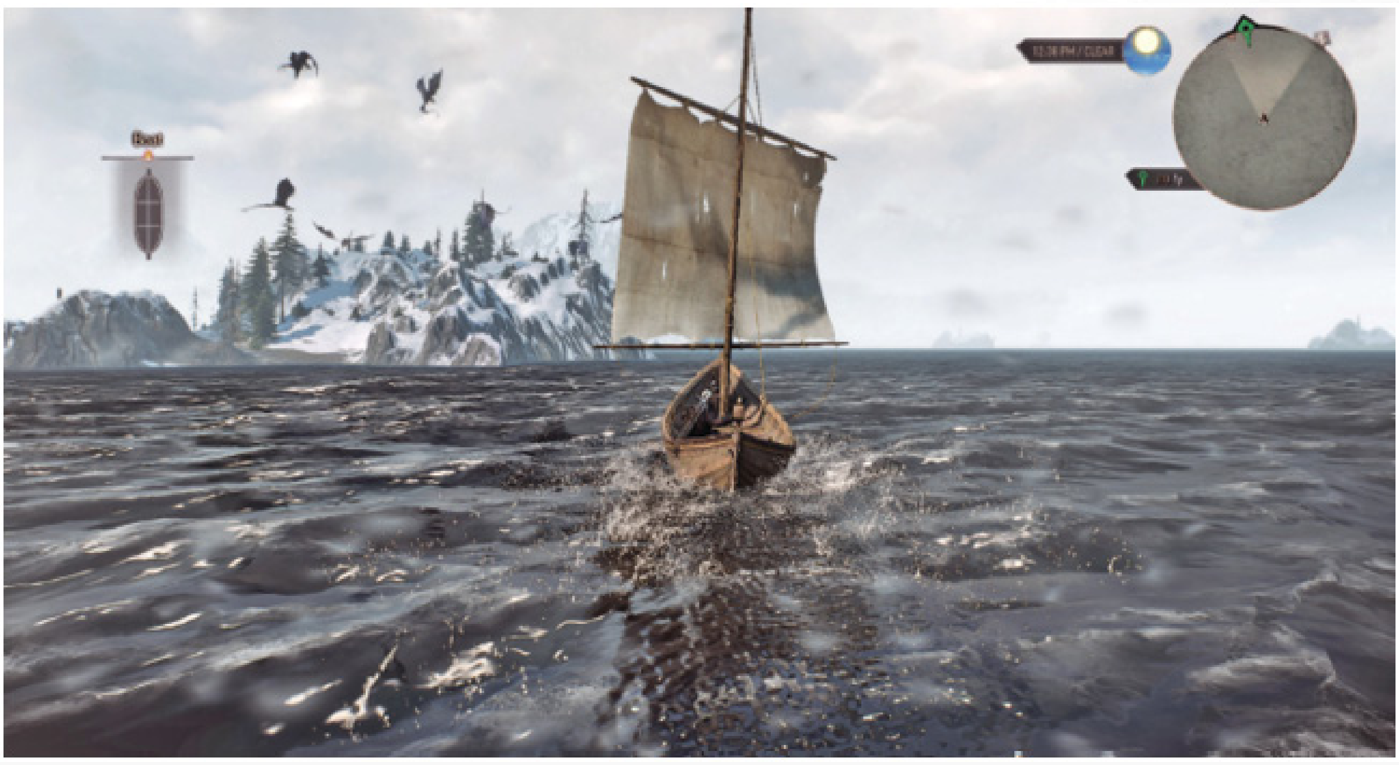
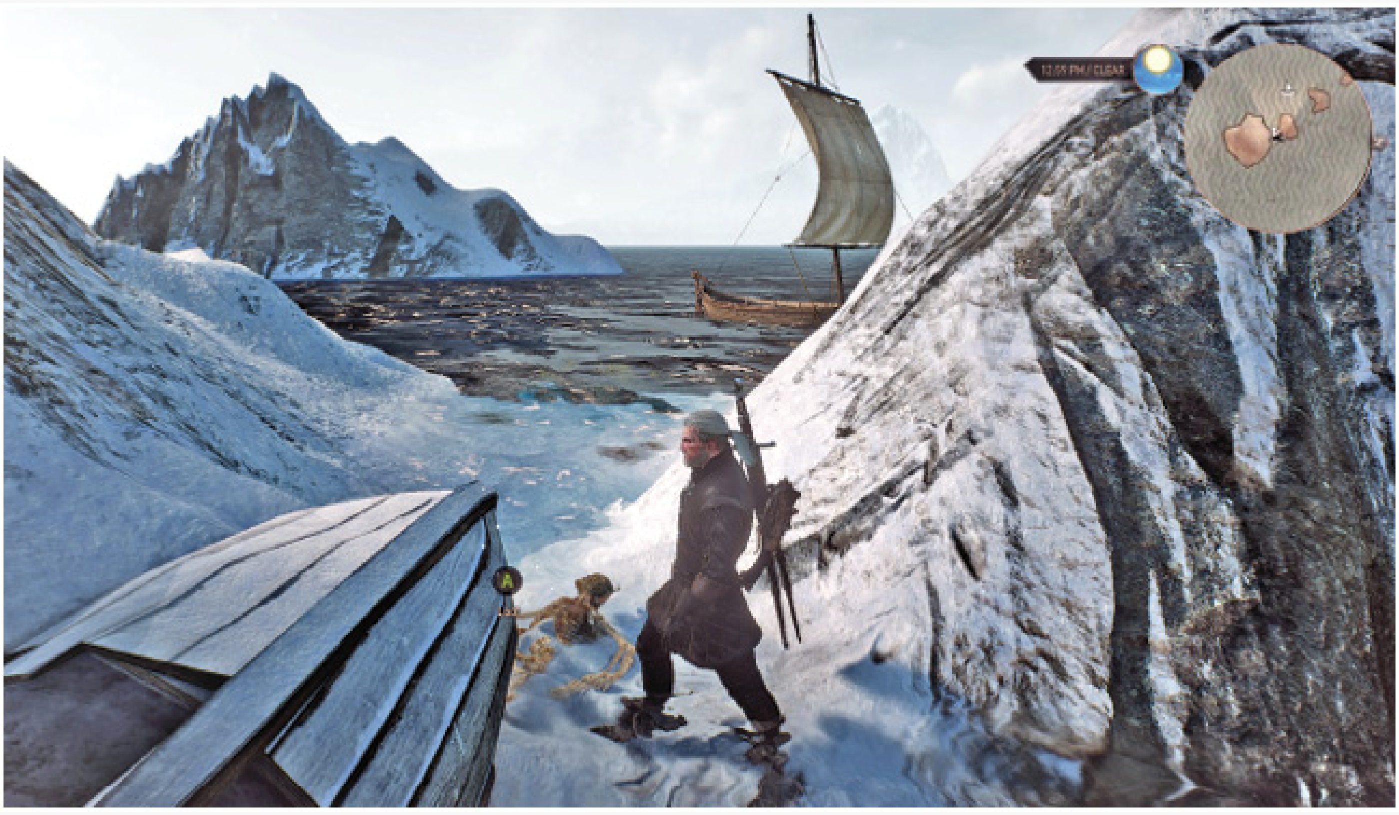
Due north of the island of Faroe is a cluster of uninhabited islands, usually encased in snow and ice. Pick a sea-faring vessel and sail toward the largest of these islands in the tiny archipelago. You find it is home to Sirens, but the treasure you seek is slightly further north.



If you're approaching from the south, steer east around the largest island, and look for an upturned rowboat on a smaller island to the north of the largest one. Here you also find a skeleton to loot a note from. It's a tale about the search for Noorhis Ironsides.



Items: Notes about treasure

OBJECTIVE:

- Find the sunken treasure using your Witcher Senses.

Once you read the notes, swim almost due east of the island with the skeleton on it, and dive down in search of a sunken longboat. Half-buried in the silt is the treasure you seek.

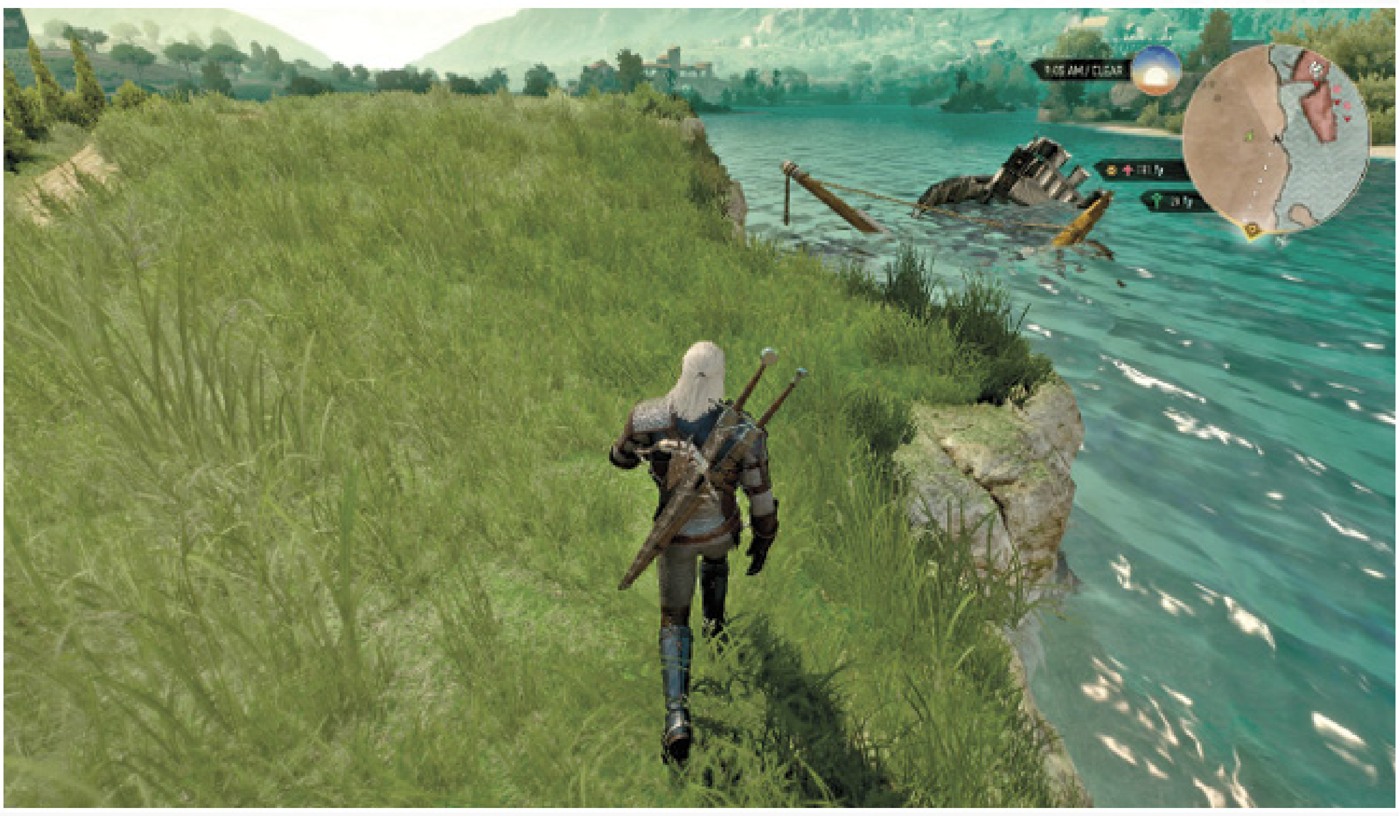
- Find the treasure chest..

Along the banks of the river, just south of The Silver Salamander Inn, are the remains of a sunken galleon. The tell-tale sounds of Drowners can also be sensed in this area, so beware of them as you explore this underwater wreck. Perhaps the Drowners lurking here explain why this vessel hasn't been picked clean by scavengers. There are a number of chests to ransack, and the bloated remains of a corpse under the broken hull to pick the following items from:



Items: Ship Captain's log, Key

After reading over the captain's log notes, it seems prudent to investigate the nearby cave. Dive underwater, swimming into the cave mouth, and quickly surface, stepping into a subterranean cavern with a large, rolling Shaelmaar to contend with. As you may not have encountered such a beast before, learn to watch for its rolling attacks based on hearing, and peruse the Bestiary information for this beast.

THE SUBTERRANEAN SKELETON

Look to the mini-map and search the southeast corner of the Shaelmaar cavern for a ledge to climb up, and a small, higher tunnel to investigate. FLOATING, FALLING, SWEET INTOXICATION

OBJECTIVES

- Read the diary.
- Find a way to reenact the scene using your Witcher Senses.

On your travels through the southern parts of the Gorgon Foothills, you must not miss the faded grandeur of the Seidhe Llygad Amphitheater! Though when you get there, the place is eerily quiet, and there's evidence of candles being lit. Ignore those for the moment, and search for the remains of a young woman, recently dead. Locate the diary and bottle of wine. Once you read the diary, it transpires this young actress has appeared to try and reenact the scene marked in her diary, before she expired. Or did something kill her? Time to finish what she started!

Items: Perfume-laced journal, Wine "Vis la Crac"

OBJECTIVES

- Figure out the order in which you should light the candles.
- Finish the scene by drinking wine.

If you read more about the scene in question, and examine the footprints from the woman's corpse using your Witcher Senses, you deduce that lighting each of the five candles in the same order that the woman did is the first part of the scene. Remember you need to follow the footprints all the way back to the first candle she lit, which is just to the right of the corpse (and pictured). Light it, then simply follow the footprints to each subsequent candle, lighting each one as you go.

With the candles lit correctly, your objective updates. Rummage around in your inventory for the "Vis la Crac" wine you removed from the woman's corpse (the wine is likely to be in your Quest Items), and place it into your Consumables. Then choose it and drink it. It seems you've summoned a fierce critic!

It's important to learn her powerful attacks, and methods to combat her as you slowly remove her life force. Consult the Bestiary entry for all pertinent information. QUAYLE HUNTING

OBJECTIVES

- Read the letter found..

In the south of Toussaint, just west of Tesham Mutna, and south of the Hortense Estate, is a Coopers' workshop, recently abandoned and now home to a quintet of Bandits. You have excellent opportunities to lob in bombs, and attack from the upper part of this small compound. Or, simply waltz in from the rough pathway among the pasture and trees. When all threats lie in puddles of their own blood, conduct a brief search for a small sack, and loots its contents:

Items: Orders from Graybill Pellegrin, Gardener's key

THE MOST PEACABLE PEOPLE DO THE MOST TERRIBLE THINGS

OBJECTIVES

- Search the workshop and find the chest with the loot..

A reading of the missive you've found makes mention of a chest located somewhere within the walls of this Abandoned Coopers' Workshop. It may be initially difficult to discover, as the chest is tiny, and hidden behind the four barrels and brazier close to the log pile. Unlock the chest for further evidence of what the gardener in this place was worried about, as well as some valuables.

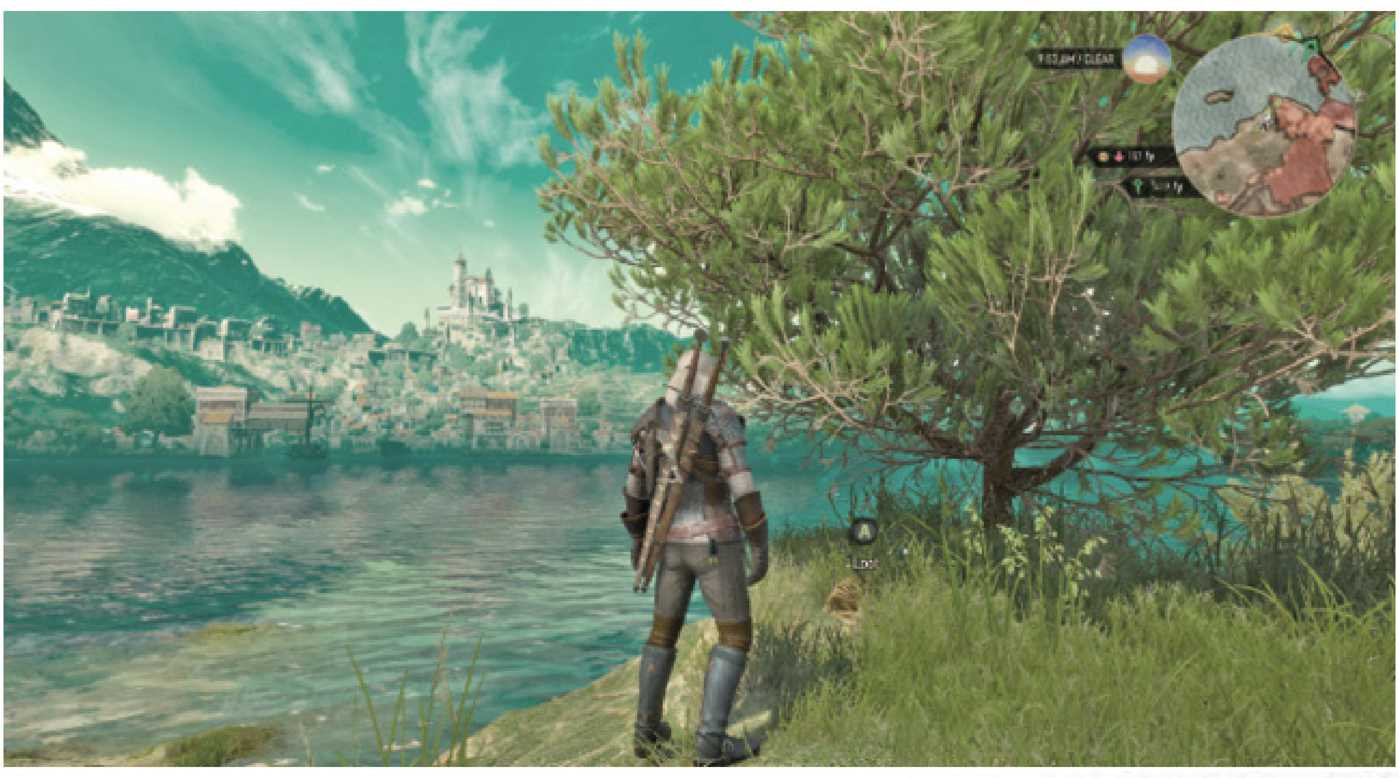
A SKILLFUL SKELETON

OBJECTIVES

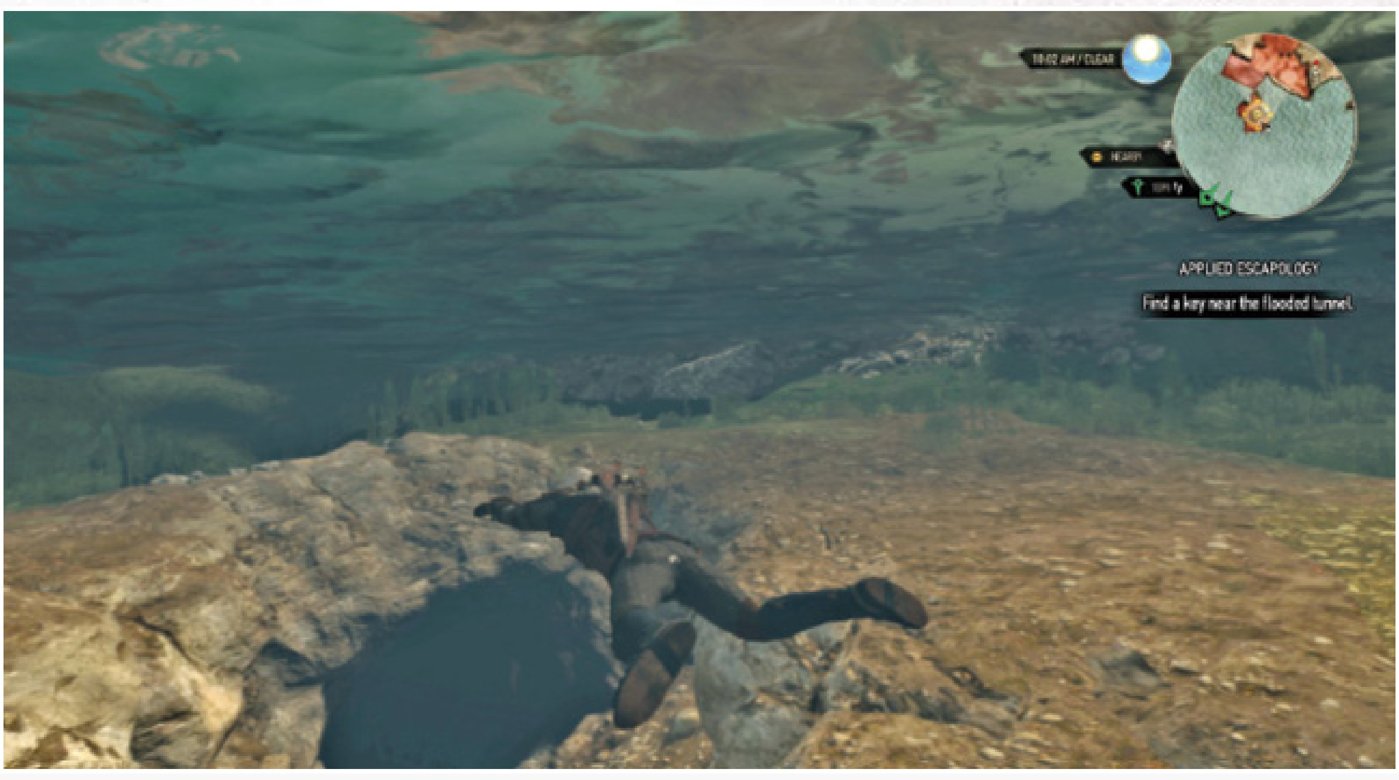
- Find a key near the flooded tunnel.

A skeleton lies in the long grass, hiding a secret close to Toussaint Prison. Fortunately, you don't have to be an inmate, or even enter the prison fortress to obtain the necessary clue from this pile of bones. Instead, venture around the perimeter island the prison sits on, until you find a small tree on a grassy outcrop of rock, and obtain the following diary from an impressive prison escapee. Read the book to learn where a necessary key is located.



Items: Escape artist's journal

Before this valley was flooded, there used to be a lower holding area in the northwest part of the prison, and the chamber can still be seen on your mini-map. Dive into the water around this point, and search for a cave entrance in the silt and sand. Swim along the narrow tunnel, into a submerged prison area, and quickly use your Witcher Senses to ascertain the location of another corpse, glittering in the muddy waters. Claim the following from the body:



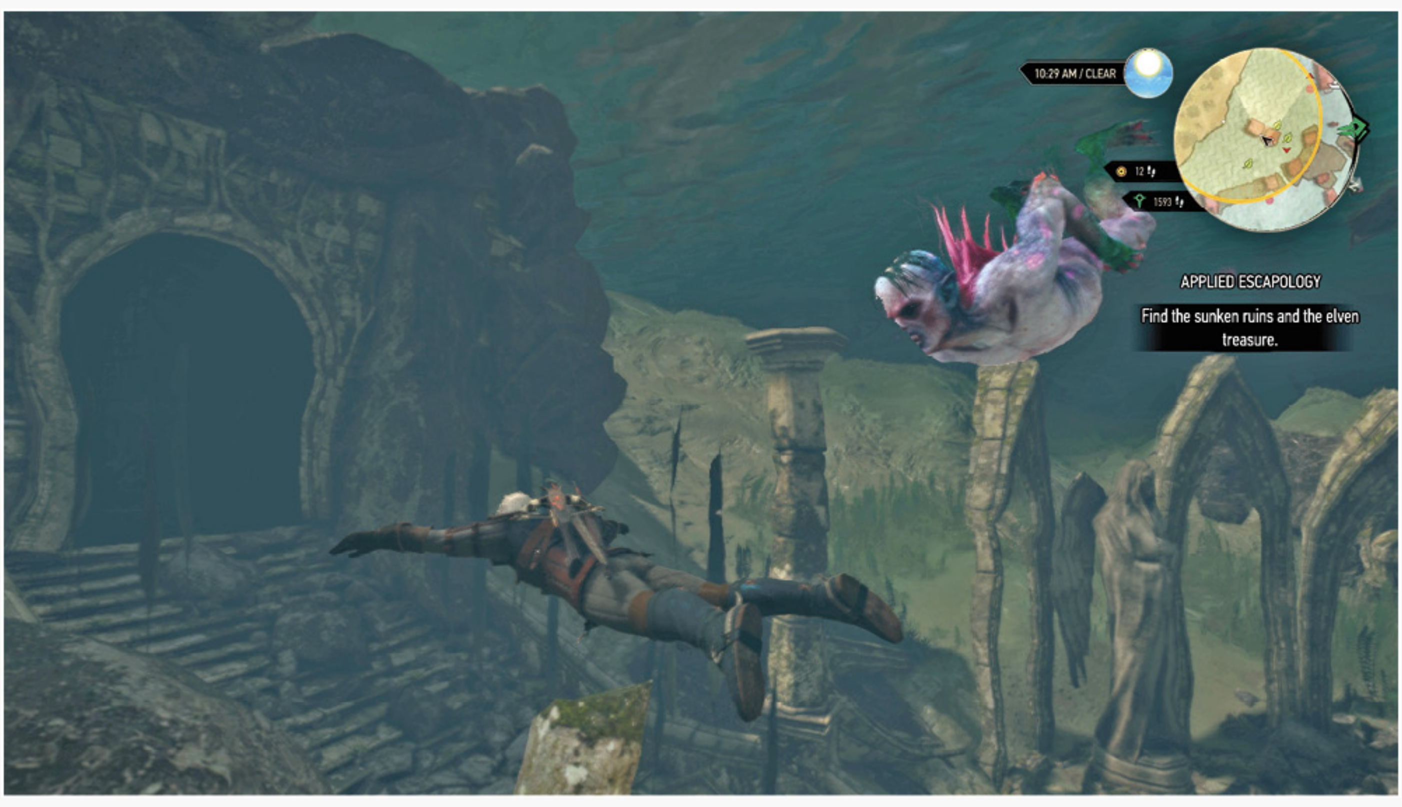
Items: Intricately decorated key

TURN AND FACE THE SOUTH

OBJECTIVES

- Find the sunken ruins and the elven treasure.

Sunken ruins and elven treasure sound intriguing, but the exact location of the ancient flooded temple is more of a mysterious. Head to the southern shore of the lake, or take a boat toward the southern shore southwest of Toussaint Prison. When you reach the approximate location shown in this picture, wade out a few paces, and dive down into another world!



Of course, this world is still populated with foes you've met earlier; around three Drowners need to be culled before you can properly explore this wondrous place. The main structure, which looks like an X, is north of where you need to explore, and you venture through a portal there during Secondary Quest: Turn and Face the Strange. Instead, search for the huge archway in a submerged structure to the south. Swim in, then down into a large flooded cavern of silt, and ransacked treasure chests at the far end. One requires the key to open, so snag the valuables and backtrack before you drown!

OBJECTIVES

- Read the notes.

Coat your silver sword with specter oil when you're wandering the southern stretches of The Champ-Désolés, as the Casteldaccia has a nasty surprise awaiting you; the ghost of its former owner; Maximum Nonius Macrinus! This fellow was a towering specimen when alive, and he's just as intimidating in death! Fight this Ghostly Knight using the tactics you've previously employed against human foes and ghosts in human form, as well as the giant Iron Borgs you fought during the Tourney. When the Ghostly Knight haunts no more, search the corpse of the last trespasser to enter here; he's by the well close to the area where you fought. Read the notes on his person.

OBJECTIVES

- Find the stash in Macrinus' house using your Witcher Senses.

Macrinus was also guarding a stash of treasure long kept in his family, and hidden somewhere inside his manor. Enter via the main door across the cobblestone courtyard (to the north) and immediately climb the ladder inside. Step out onto a small loft, and look for a suspicious candle holder on the far wall. Examine it, and it can be turned, revealing a hidden door with a chest inside. Looting time!

PLUCKED FROM THE PHEASANTRY CELLARS

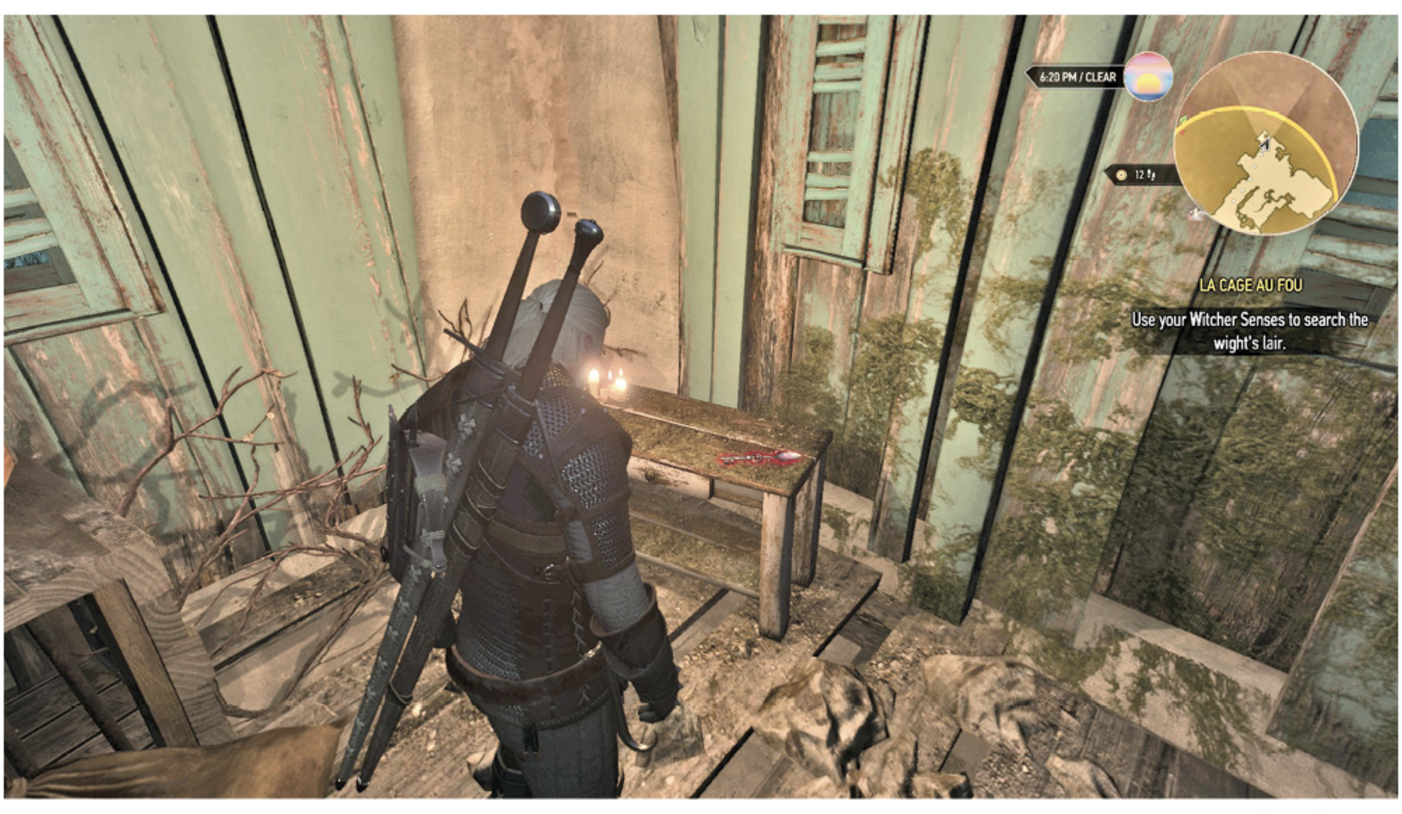
OBJECTIVES

- Ask the owner of the Pheasantry about the mysterious spoon.

QUESTING DECISIONS

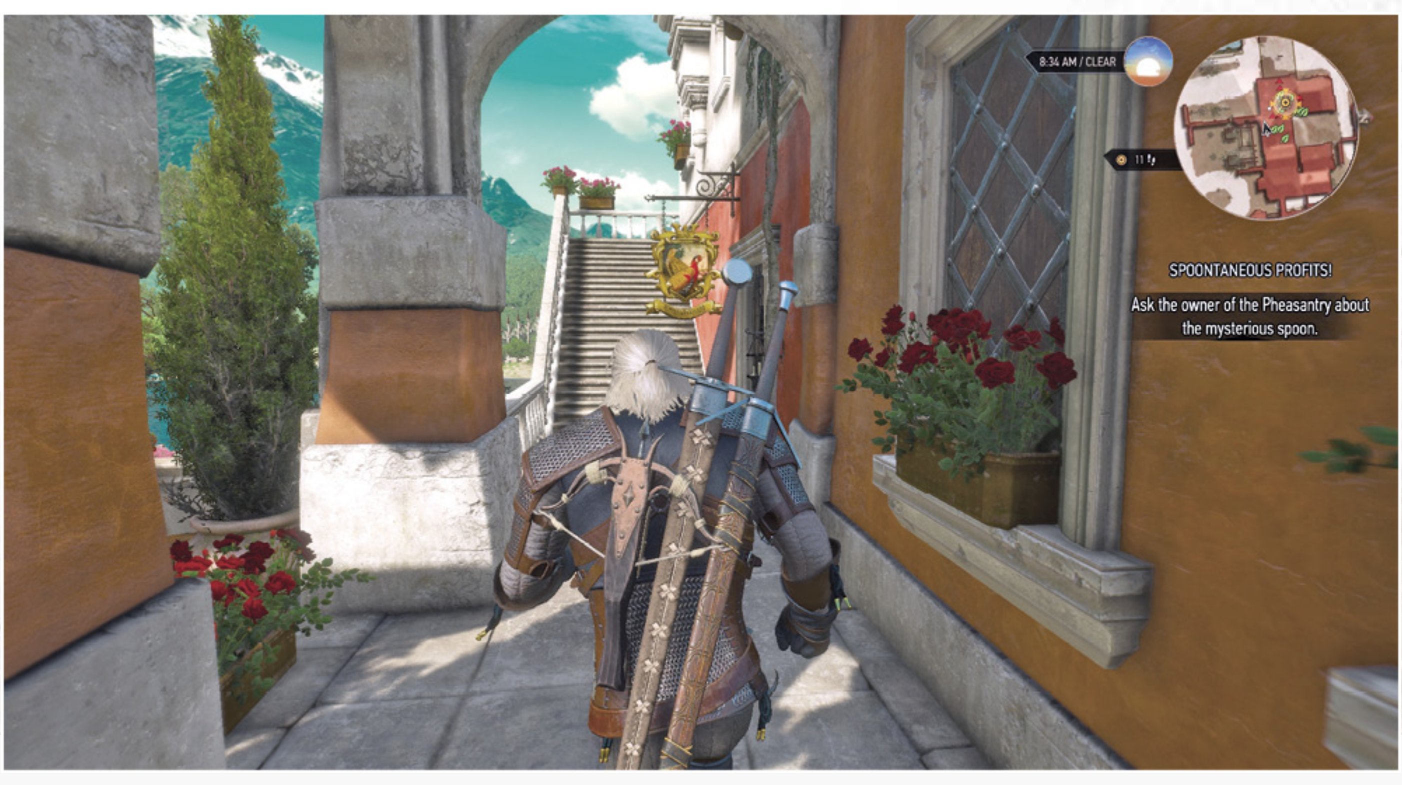
This Quest is available during your exploration of the Manor house close to the Trastamara Hunting Cottage Signpost, in far southeast Toussaint, during Main Quest: La Cage au Fou.

While exploring the strange and dilapidated manor house perched on the hill overlooking Caroberta Woods, which is filled with a strange collection of spoons hanging from ropes and sitting on sideboards, enter the main dining room of the residence (where the three skeletons lie by the table). Look for a small side table in the southeast corner with a few small candles on it. Also resting on this wooden table is a strange spoon, which is actually a key! It bears sophisticated crafting, as well as a small tag. Be sure to read the Spoon-Key Note.



Items: Spoon-Key and Spoon-Key Note

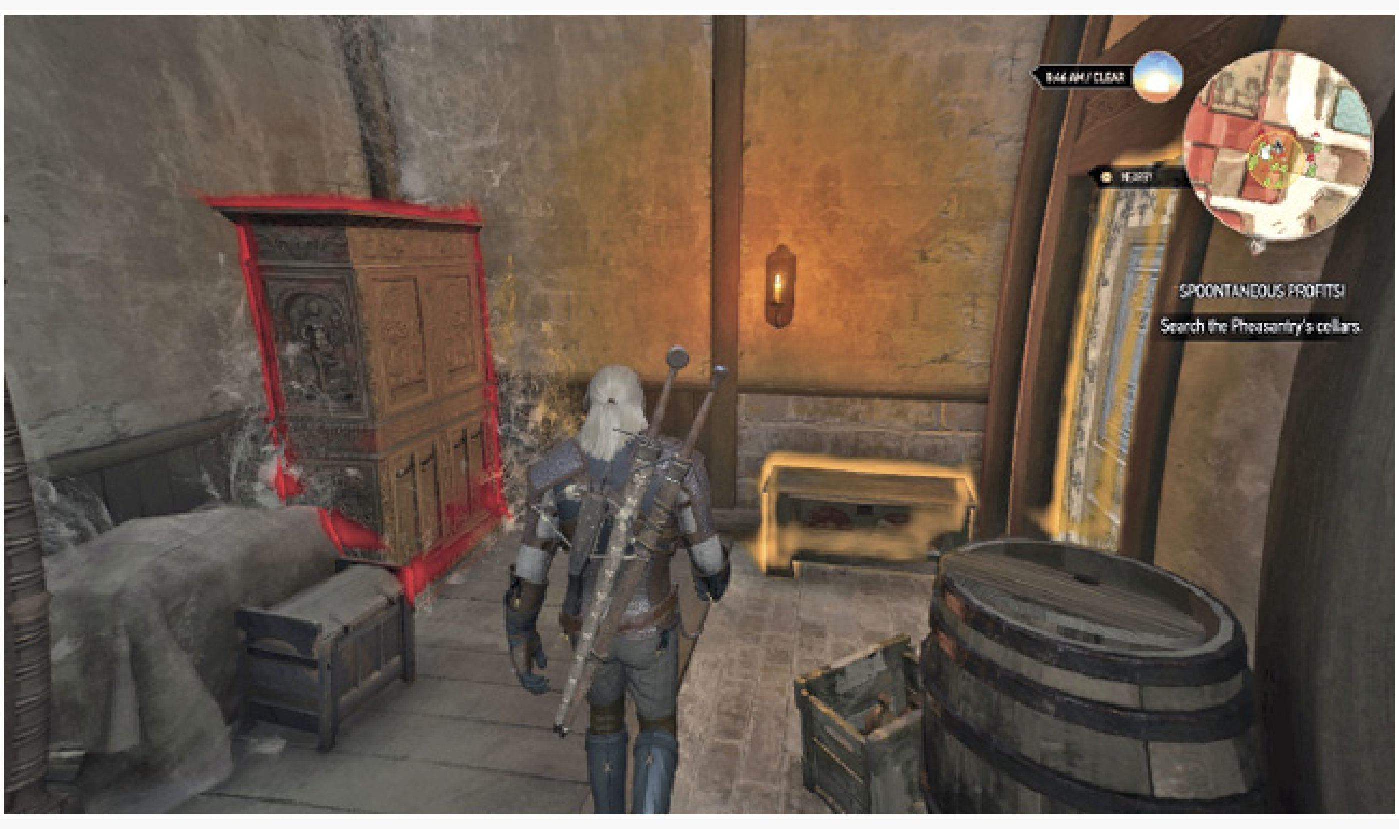
The note makes mention of a particular lock the Spoon-Key opens, and the fabled Pheasantry Inn, located in the poshest part of Beauclair, holds the answers. Head there (the nearest Fast-Travel points are The Gran'place or Nilfgaardian Embassy), and enter the drinking establishment. Step up to the bar and ask the Innkeep "ever seen a spoon like this?". She remarks the cutlery seems to be a fanciful bouillon spoon…or a key! She directs you to the cellars where the previous owner left all sorts of knick knacks.



OBJECTIVES

- Search the Pheasantry cellars.
- Read the notes found in the Pheasantry.

You're given free run of the place, so head behind the bar, and down the stairs into the cellar. Pass by the kitchens, into a small side corridor with a couple of cobwebbed armoires. The one in the corner glows red, requires a good looting! Remove the tome from inside, and give it a read. This is a rather precious cookbook containing hundreds of recipes. However, the last page has some chaotically-written lines regarding what exactly the Spoon-key unlocks—the legendary studio of Gor'Thon Ram'say, an elven cook famed for his culinary masterpieces!



Items: Smigole Louis Serkis' cookbook

HEAVEN'S KITCHEN

OBJECTIVES

- Find Gor'Thon's studio and look for treasure.

Take a trip to Dun Tynne territory, in the northeastern part of the Duchy, and follow the road northeast from Basane Farm. Perched on a rocky outcrop are the ancient remains of an elven ruin, the Danamebi Temple Ruins that the cookbook referred to. Head up the steps, into the archway and down the subterranean stairs to the locked elven door. The Spoon-key opens the door. Just as the cookbook had predicted, the interior of the temple is indeed the studio of Gor'Thon Ram'say! Among the loot is a chest containing some exceptional recipes, a formula for Mutagen transmutation, some precious gems, and other valuables. On your way out, don't be surprised if a trio of Wraiths appears to hinder your thievery.

ENEMIES: Deserters, Wraiths

Recommended Items: 330 Crowns

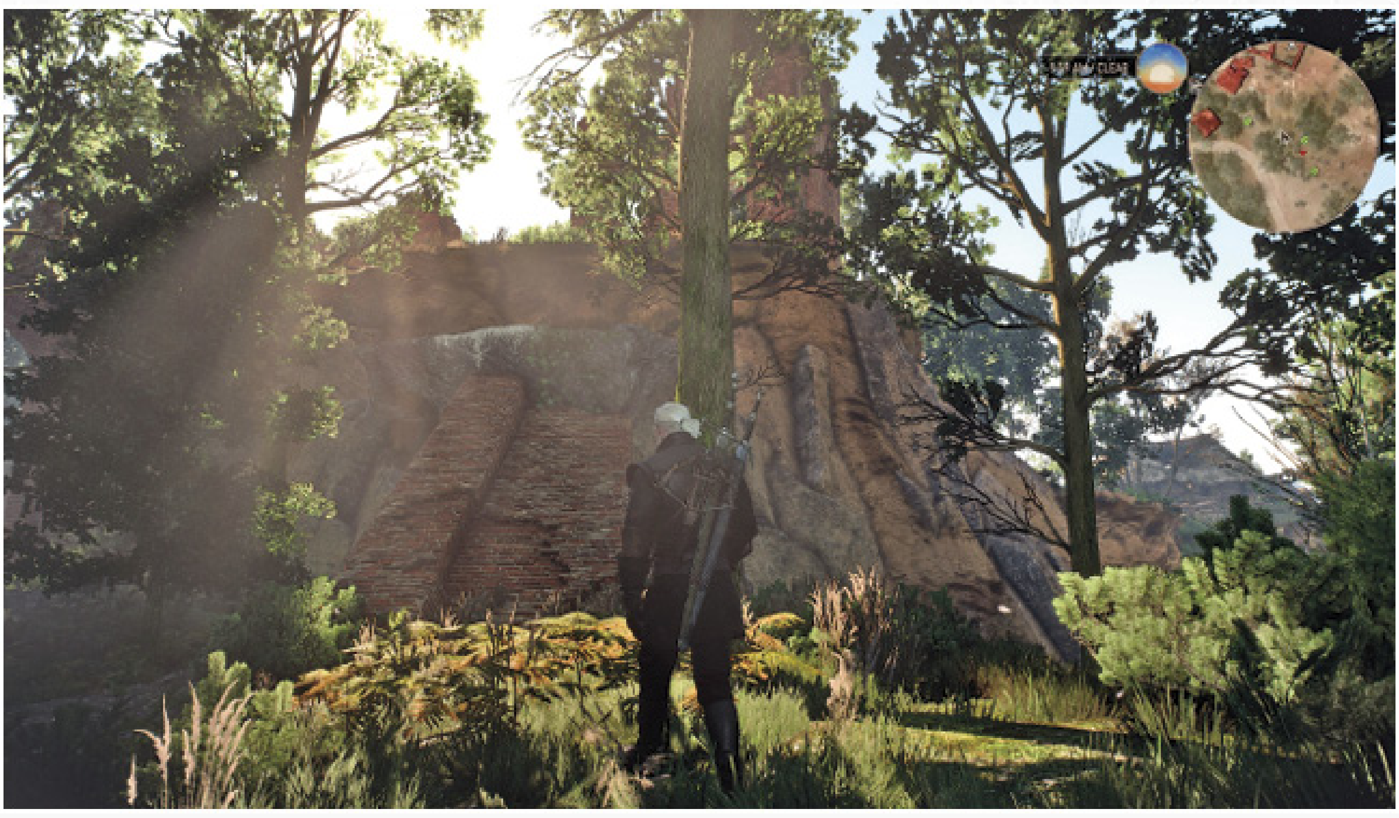
OBJECTIVES

- Find diagrams for all the elements of Viper School gear (2).
- Read the note.

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

This quest is unmarked, and has only limited hints and objectives (outside of this guide). It can be started at any time, and from either location listed (where the diagrams may be found), but the optimal path is shown here. It is recommended you secure the two diagrams during Main Quest: Lilac and Gooseberries. Both diagrams are found in White Orchard. The quest concludes once both the initial sword diagrams are found, though there is a complete set of armor and two more impressive swords still to find in an unmarked quest afterwards.

While traversing the roadways close to the Ransacked Village (east of Woesong Bridge), take a stroll into the wooded land from the brick bridge you and Vesemir cross before helping the merchant from the Griffin. You're looking roughly north of the bridge (and northwest of the Ransacked Village), toward a ruined brick watchtower that overlooks the hamlet. This is an unmarked location called the Amavet Fortress Ruins.



The ruins are perched upon an embankment that is rather difficult to scale if you don't approach from the south, heading north. Run up the fallen brick wall, grab the gray rock to pull yourself up, then leap left, across and up onto a couple more climbable edges before scrambling onto the exposed wooden platform over an old bridge.

There are around four Temerian Deserters that don't take kindly to your intrusion. Dispatch them quickly, then explore the ruined tower itself.

Check the ground for some Angrily Scrawled Notes, and a chest along the eastern wall. Open it and gather the diagram inside, along with an Interrogation report. Read the report, which references a camp from where the deserters would rob the enemy.

Serpentine Silver Sword: Cryptic Notes

OBJECTIVES

- Find Kolgrim's remains.

The notes also make mention of "that old mill," and involves Kolgrim, a Witcher of the Viper School, who was wrongly accused of a kidnapping, and ended his days in the Verrieres family crypt. With this information, you can focus your searching on the relevant areas mentioned. Gallop northwest, across the river north of Woseong Bridge, and pass the Mill.

Continue northwest along the road, which ends at White Orchard Cemetery. Aside from the humming of a Place of Power, expect a spectral ambush as a wraith appears to attack when you cross the cemetery threshold! Slay it, kneel at the Place of Power to acquire an Ability Point, and then "knock" on the chapel door using Aard. On either side of the entrance are hand prints; spot them using your Witcher Senses.

HOW TO START THIS (UNMARKED) QUEST

The remainder of the Viper School Gear remains unavailable until you begin the Hearts of Stone Main Quest. To obtain the remaining diagrams (allowing you to craft Viper Armor, Boots, Gauntlets, Trousers, and Venomous Steel Sword) and actual Venomous Silver Sword (no diagram exists), you must make specific choices during this Main Quest. As you cannot go back and find these diagrams if you miss the specific choices, take great care in ensuring your decisions are wise!

To obtain the four diagrams that make up the Viper outfit, you must have just started Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Open Sesame (Part 1). Your initial objectives have you visit the Borsodi Auction House in Novigrad. After meeting Vimme Vivaldi, you have the optional objective to meet his three friends. The one that piques your interest is a lady of a certain age, and one that instantly recognizes your medallion. She is a keen collector of objects related to the witcherly profession.

Ask her where she developed this interest, and she mentions a happy past, but doesn't elaborate. She does, however, allow you to view a selection of alchemy formulas, as well as four pieces of Viper gear. This is your only opportunity to purchase the following:

Items: Diagram: Viper Armor, Diagram: Viper Boots, Diagram: Viper Gauntlets, Diagram: Viper Trousers

WITCHER GEAR: GOING, GOING, GONE!

This Viper armor is medium in weight, offers poison immunity, and offers the highest armor rating of all the Witcher gear. Each Diagram costs around 330 crowns, and this is the only opportunity to buy them!

After a chat about the auction, the Countess hopes you might use your preternatural abilities to locate a missing earring. Oblige, head up onto the exterior balcony, and examine a spilt wine goblet. You soon realize the Countess has an ulterior motive for asking you outside; she wishes to learn more about a man she once knew with tenderness; Vesemir. Answer her as you wish, and leave her to her melancholy thoughts.

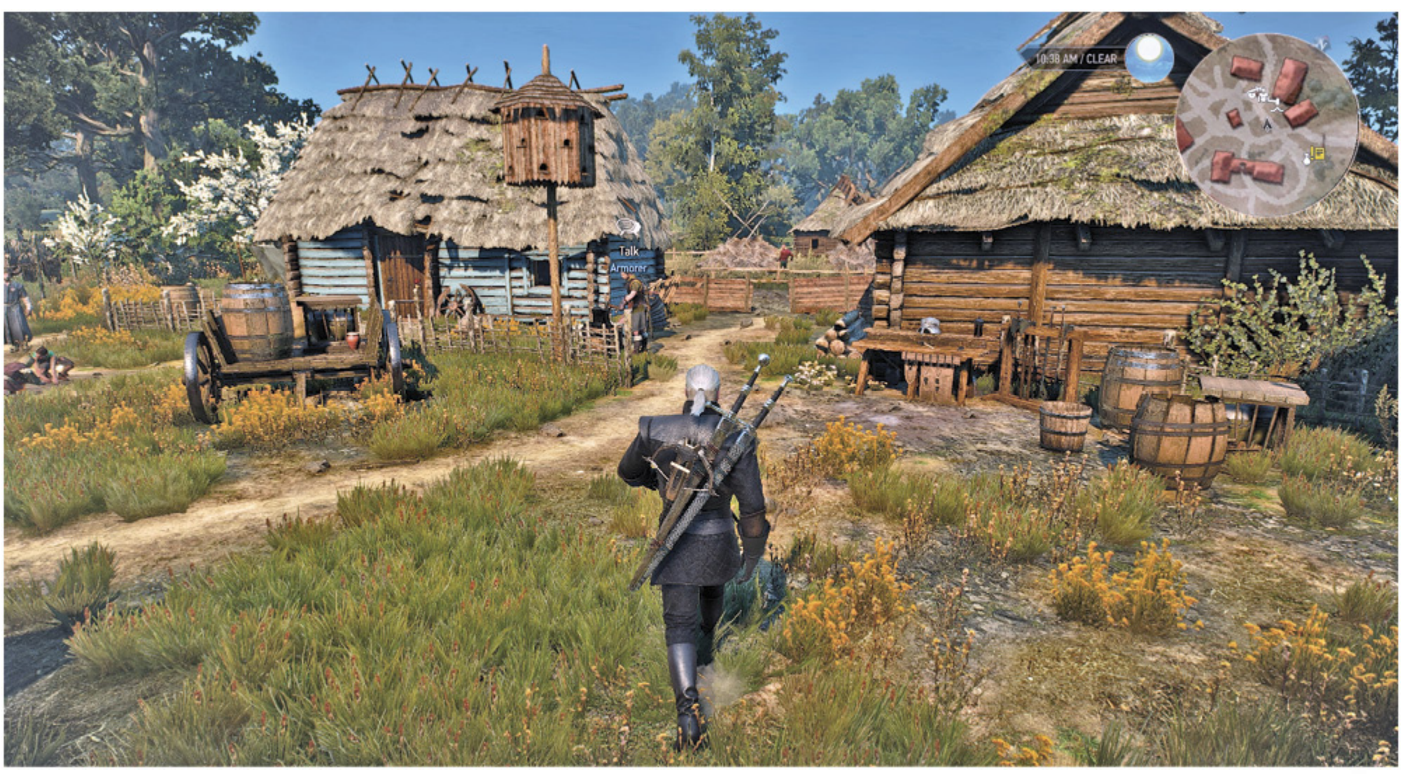
Stroll on into the village of Midcopse in Velen, and find the Armorer at his forge toward the northwest cluster of dwellings. Check the Armorer's wares and purchase the following two maps (for around 60 crowns for both), and then read either in your Inventory (under Quest Items).



HOW TO START THIS QUEST

Searching for the Griffin Witcher Gear diagrams is a somewhat laborious but rewarding task. It begins when you have finished one of the following options:

1. You explore Velen, and stumble across the location of the Griffin Steel Sword, Griffin Silver Sword, or Griffin Gear (Armor, Boots, Gauntlets, and Trousers).

2. You visit one of the three following armorers, and purchase a set of maps by the Adjunct in Natural History at Oxenfurt Academy, Edwin Greloff, which details his research into the Witcher George. Any Edwin Greloff map starts this Scavenger Hunt. Specific maps detail upgraded diagrams (each offers locations of between three and six enhanced, superior, or mastercrafted Griffin gear diagrams). There are a total of four Edwin Greloff documents to find.

Remember! You don't need any of Edwin Greloff's maps to find the basic Griffin Gear, though any document starts this quest anyway. As usual, you need to find the gear in the following order: Basic, Enhanced, Superior, and finally Mastercrafted.

Items: Edwin Greloff's First Map, Edwin Greloff's Second Map

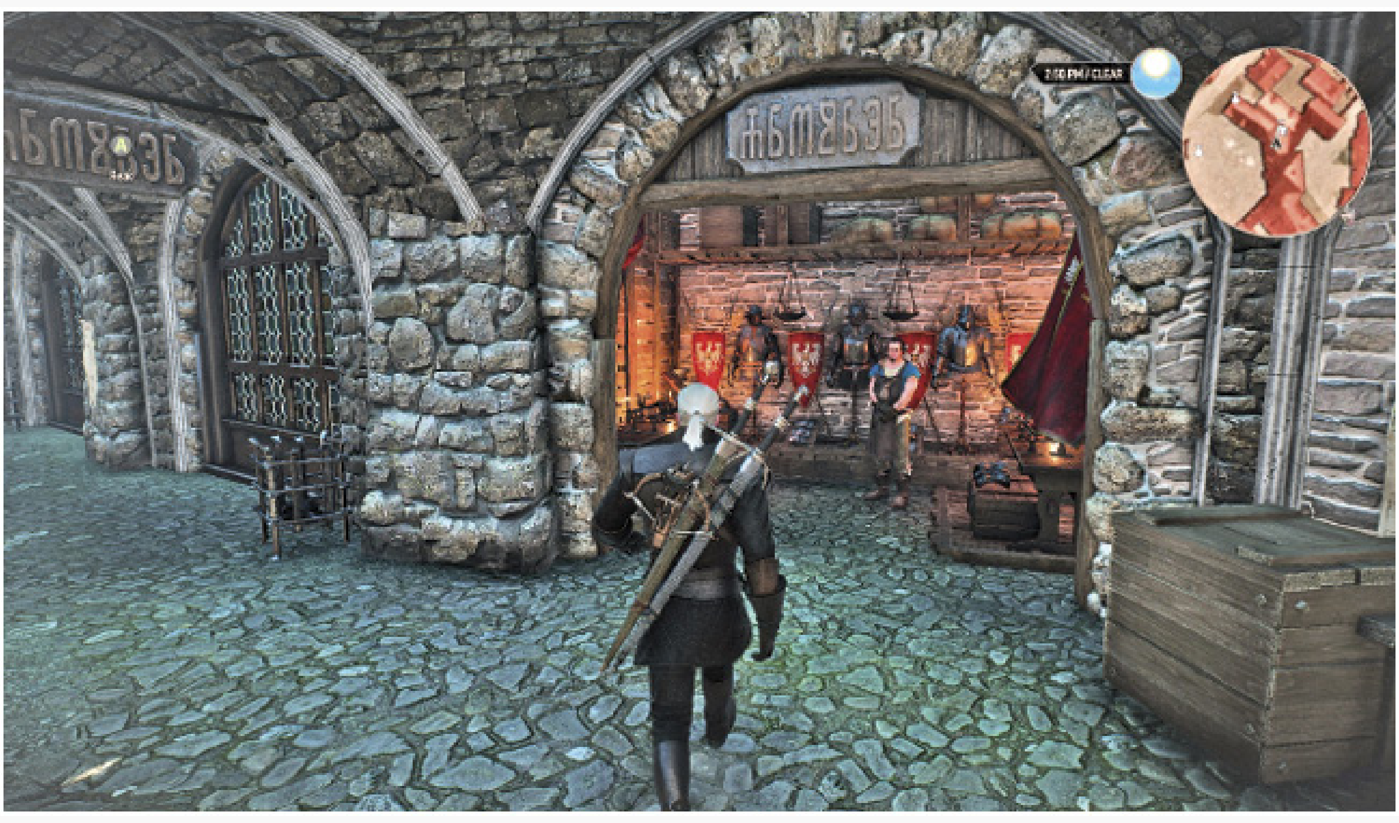
GRIFFIN GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The First Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 1 (the Enhanced boots, trousers, and steel sword of the Enhanced Griffin Gear Diagrams).

The Second Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 2 (the armor, gauntlets, and silver sword of the Enhanced Griffin Gear Diagrams).

EDWIN GRELOFF MAP #3: THE ARMORER OF HIERARCH SQUARE

Sojourn at Hierarch Square within Novigrad City, and locate the Journeyman Armorer under the arches to the northwest.



Among his wares is the third map constructed by Edin Greloff for sale (which is around 45 Crowns to buy). Take it, then read it in your Inventory (under Quest Items).

Items: Edwin Greloff's Third Map

GRIFFIN GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The Third Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 3 (the Superior steel sword, armor—including boots, gauntlets, and trousers—and silver sword); a total of six diagrams in three separate locations.

QUESTING DECISIONS

There are six Diagrams to find in three separate locations. They can be found in any order, and whether or not you've come across any of Edwin Greloff's maps on the Witcher George. They are presented as the objectives appear if you read one of Edwin's maps first. All basic diagrams are found in Velen. This quest can be started at any time, but the optimal opportunity is any time during or after Act I: Main Quest: The Nilfgaardian Connection.

Upon reading the first of Edwin Greloff's maps, it becomes clear that an excavation of Witcher George's final resting place is in order. You may have heard whispers about a place just northwest of Downwarren and slightly southwest of Reardon Manor, the Dragonslayer's Grotto. Trek across forest and hills to an entrance hidden in the woods. Enter the catacombs, and you're immediately set upon by three Wraiths. Expect further incursions from such foes as you search the first chambers for loot. Light any candles or torches you see, so you know where you've been. Head roughly north down a narrow passage, slaying more Wraiths, until you reach a large crack in the left (north) stone wall. Turn this into a hole by blasting the wall section with Aard.

This allows access into a gas-filled cavern that can harm you if you light it, so refrain from Igni or torches except from a distance. Coax more wraiths back into the previous passage (expect at least two more), then head east and south up the tunnel to a cluster of fallen boulders. Remove these with another blast of Aard, and step into the crypt of Witcher George. You also waken a great evil, a nasty Ekimmara! Battle this vampire with skill, Yrden, Devil's Puffballs, and tactics gleamed from this guide's Bestiary.

BY GEORGE, YOU'VE DONE IT!

OBJECTIVES

- Read George's notes..

Venture into the tomb itself, looting any chests and the weapon rack if you wish. Light any braziers, and stop by the upper stepped area to inspect the stone tomb of Witcher George. Open his chest to gather four complete diagrams, as well as George's journal. Read it to uncover some of his thoughts regarding a "green dragon" and peasants taking refuge in elven ruins. This provides objectives to finding the two remaining swords (in either order). Now exit, either back the way you came, or south, out of the hidden exit (use the Eye of Nehaleni to banish a boulder illusion) and out to a spectacular view of Crookback Bog.

It's a long trek west to the northwestern tip of Velen, and the old smuggling location and fortress lighthouse of Lornruk. Approach by land, and you find the bridge is up. This forces you to find a more aquatic approach to investigating this area. Though you can leap from the part of the bridge that's accessible, and land in the water, it is safer to carefully descend via the slope from the southern part of the bridge, and work your way to the base of the island the lighthouse sits on. OBJECTIVES

- Find the steel sword upgrade diagram using your Witcher Senses.

On the far western side of Velen in Spitfire Bluffs is a smugglers’ promontory that’s northwest of Condyle, and southwest of both the Coast of Wrecks and Refugee Camp. Follow the path or climb the hill from the shore to reach the ruins of an old fort, now turned into a Pirates’ Hideout.

There are around eight of these ne’er-do-wells roaming the overgrown battlements here. Approach from the south or north. Thoughtfully, they’ve left some explosive barrels to detonate (using Igni) if the mood takes you. The chest is atop a small section of stone steps on the western edge of the ruins.

Preamble: Maps From The Adjunct Mapper Adalbert Kermith

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

CAT SCHOOL GEAR

LOCATIONS: Blackbough (Velen), Crow's Perch (Velen), Lindenvale (Velen)

CHARACTERS: Adalbert Kermith, Witcher Kiyan

Recommended Items: 240 Crowns

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

Searching for the Cat Witcher Gear diagrams is considerable task. It begins when you have finished one of the following options:

1. You explore Novigrad, and stumble across the location of the Cat Steel Sword, Cat Silver Sword, Cat Crossbow, or Cat Gear (Armor, Boots, Gauntlets, and Trousers).

2. You explore Velen, and visit one of the three following traders, and purchase a set of maps by the Adjunct in Natural History at Oxenfurt Academy, Adalbert Kermith, which details his notes into the Witcher Kiyan. Any Adalbert Kermith map starts this Scavenger Hunt. Specific maps detail upgraded diagrams (each offers locations of between three and six enhanced, superior, or mastercrafted Cat gear diagrams). There is no upgrade to the Feline Crossbow. There are a total of four Adalbert Kermith documents to find.

Remember! You don't need any of Adalbert Kermith's maps to find the basic Cat Gear, though any document starts this quest anyway. As usual, you need to find the gear in the following order: Basic, Enhanced, Superior, and finally Mastercrafted.

ADALBERT KERMITH'S MAP #1: THE MERCHANT OF BLACKBOUGH

While exploring Velen in the area to the west of Crow's Perch, drop in on the village of Blackbough, and locate the merchant standing in front of his hut, close to the signpost and crossroads. Check his meager wares and buy the first map (for around 15 crowns), and then read it in your Inventory (under Quest Items).

CAT GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The First Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 1 (the boots, armor, and silver sword of the Enhanced Cat Gear Diagrams).

ADALBERT KERMITH'S MAP #2: THE AMATEUR BLACKSMITH OF BLACKBOUGH

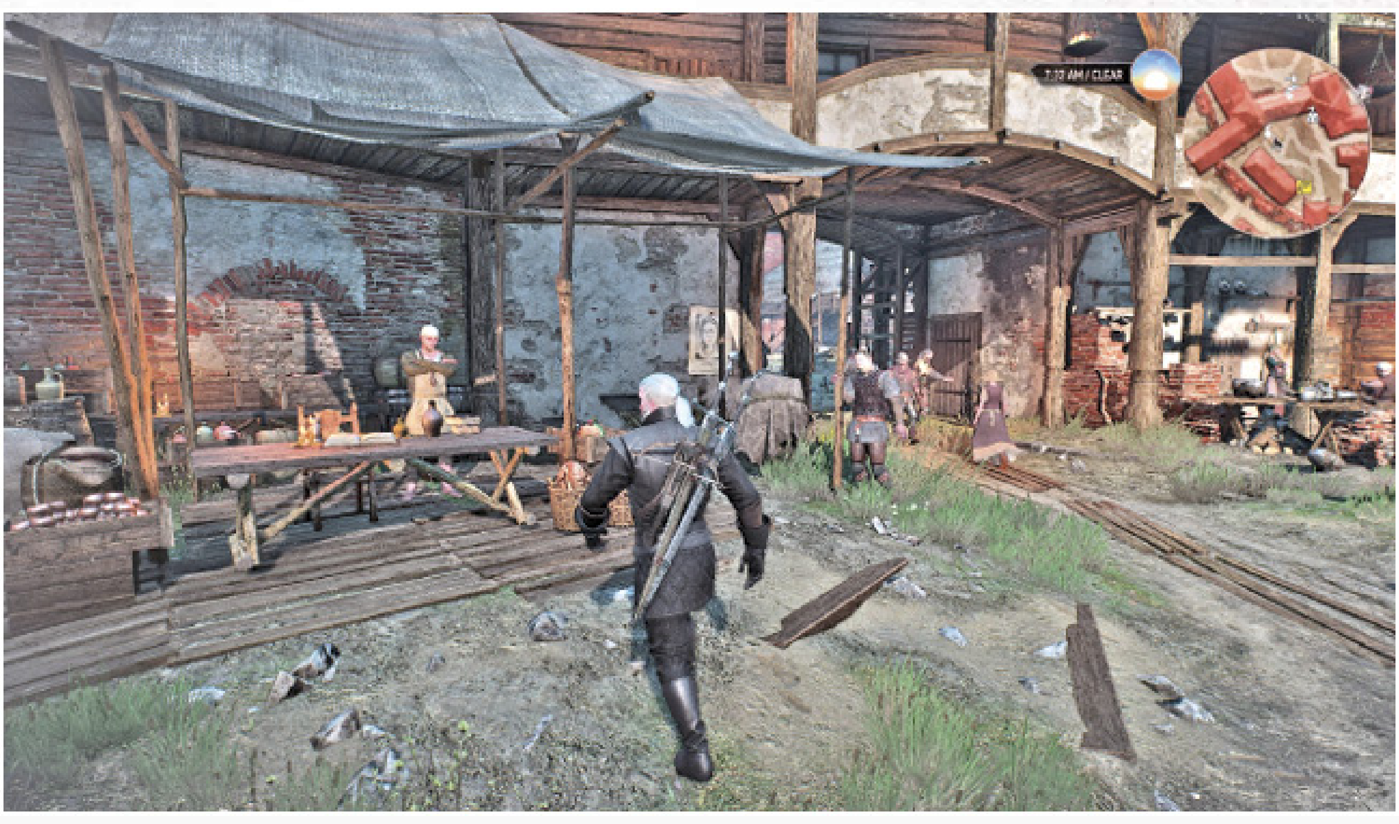
Don't depart the Velen village of Blackbough without additionally visiting the blacksmith banging away at his anvil. It isn't a quality breastplate you're after, but the second of Adalbert's maps. Purchase it for around 30 crowns, and open your Inventory (under Quest Items) to read it.

Items: Adalbert Kermith's Second Map

CAT GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The Second Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 2 (the gauntlets, trousers, and steel sword of the Enhanced Cat Gear Diagrams).

ADALBERT KERMITH'S MAP #3: THE QUARTERMASTER OF CROW'S PERCH



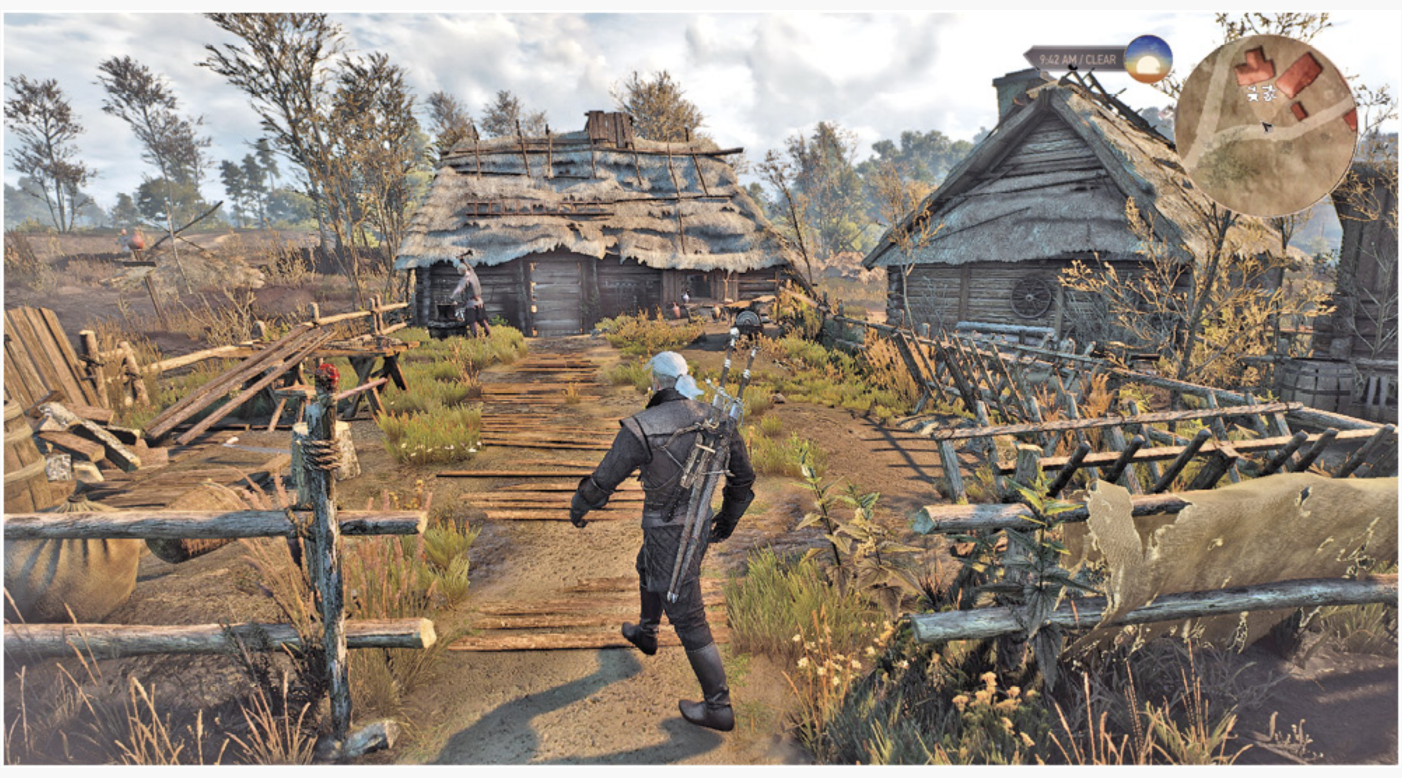
The Bloody Baron's residence in northwest Velen is a hive of activity, and behind the inner walls above the fortified village is a quartermaster's store. Among the weapons, Gwent cards, and other trinkets you'll find the third of Adalbert's maps. It costs no more than 65 crowns. Open your Inventory (Quest Items) to check it.

Items: Adalbert Kermith's Third Map

CAT GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The Third Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 3 (the steel sword, gear (armor, gauntlets, trousers, and boots) and silver sword of the Superior Cat Gear Diagrams).

ADALBERT KERMITH'S MAP #4: THE AMATEUR BLACKSMITH OF LINDENVALE



Due east of Crow's Perch, in the northern part of Velen, is another impoverished settlement, Lindenvale. Speak to the blacksmith on the north part of the village; he gladly sells you the last of Adalbert's maps for around 125 crowns. Open your Inventory (Quest Items) to check it.

Items: Adalbert Kermith's Fourth Map

CAT GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The Third Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 4 (the steel sword, gear (armor, gauntlets, trousers, and boots) and silver sword of the Mastercrafted Cat Gear Diagrams).

CHARACTERS: Adalbert Kermith

ENEMIES: Golem, Wraiths, Drowners, Witcher Kiyan, Bandits, Witch Hunters

OBJECTIVES

- Find the diagrams to all the elements of Cat School Witcher gear (7)
- Explore the passages under Temple Isle.

QUESTING DECISIONS

There are seven Diagrams to find in four separate locations. They can be found in any order, and whether or not you've come across any of Adalbert Kermith's maps on the Witcher Kiyan. They are presented as the objectives appear if you read one of Adalbert's maps first. All basic diagrams are found in Novigrad. This quest can be started at any time, but the optimal opportunity is any time during or after Act I: Main Quest: The Nilfgaardian Connection.

After viewing the first of Adalbert Kermith's annotated maps, it appears the City of Novigrad is hiding more than just sorcerers in its many subterranean hideaways. There's mention of special passages under Temple Isle, the hifalutin seat of government and location of the Eternal Fire's major place of worship.

From Elector's Square, head roughly west and northwest down the cobbled side streets, to the cliff edge. You're looking for a clifftop stone path that winds precariously around the dwellings that face the sea. Carefully climb down the rocks to a subsequent grassy path which takes you down and around to a large fissure, the cave passage entrance.

Enter the cave passage, continuing north and northeast until you're stopped by a rock wall. This is actually an illusion, so produce the Eye of Nehaleni (obtained during Main Quest: Wandering in the Dark), and interact with the rock; it dissolves away. You gain entry to a large subterranean cavern with elven arches around the perimeter. Beware of a golem up ahead, close to a fountain. Battle or avoid this summoned monster. Secure the main fountain chamber, ending (to the southeast) at two sets of steps with four cauldrons to light, with a firmly-locked laboratory door atop the steps.

INVESTIGATING THE MAD WITCHER'S LAIR

The going gets particularly tough from this point on, so prepare for dangerous combat. Feel free to use Igni or interact with any cauldrons, braziers, candles, or torches you spot (though watch for flammable gas down a side passage to the northwest), so you can keep track of where you've been. Or check the map out. It's a maze in here!

INVOICE FOR A GOLEM

Work your way in a counterclockwise direction around the perimeter of the fountain cavern from the starting entrance. At the first blocked archway on your right (along the south perimeter of the cavern), light the two cauldrons and break the walled section of the cracked arch opening using Aard. Continue down a few rock steps to a pool. Dive down, optionally loot a chest, and climb out the other side. Head into an eerily-illuminated chamber. Watch for a wraith guarding some paperwork and a chest. Read the invoice, revealing who purchased the golem (Irenues var Steingard).

LOOK TO THE DEPTHS TO BE LIFTED UP

Return to the fountain cavern where you fought the golem, and journey east through an open arch, and southeast through a natural rock tunnel with some escaping fungi gas (refrain from using fire). Climb the rocks at the end of the tunnel, and search for a strange ceremonial stone chamber marked by a tablet inscription. Examine it, then explore the octagonal room with eerie cowled statues surrounding a central stone floor. Use your Witcher Senses and uncover some notes, strange markings, and a mysterious recipe. Light the torches if you wish, then inspect the pillars around the chamber. All of them have levers you must pull. Each time you pull a lever, the statue to the right of it rotates clockwise 90 degrees. Continue moving these statues until every single one of them faces into the central stone floor. You'll know when this has happened as the central floor grinds back to reveal a plunge pool! Dive into the murky depths, fending off any Drowners with your crossbow, and locate (using Witcher Senses) the skeletal remains on the bottom of the pool. Extricate its key, ascend, and head back to the golem chamber.

DEFEATING WITCHER KIYAN: THE BEST BATTLE TACTICS

The battle is likely to be short-lived, as although Kiyan can utilize Signs (Aard, Igni, and Quen) and sword attacks with the Moonblade he carries are quick and cause bleeding, you have a couple of cunning plans to try:

Death from Afar: Before combat even begins, before you walk down the laboratory steps, utilize as many Dancing Star, Dragon's Dream, and other bombs you have, lobbing them at the kneeling Kiyan to thoroughly soften him up. Should the fight get out of control, use the pillars and scenery to dart behind, and try further ranged attacks (bombs or crossbow bolts).

Death up Close: If you're fighting Kiyan at close quarters, which is the usual plan, try to play a defensive game. Wait for him to start an attack string, parry it (or dodge), and return the favor with some quick slices of your own. Quen is helpful to absorb damage and keep you from getting staggered. Whittle down Kiyan's health in this manner, until he yields.

Instead, look for the wolf sign on the boulder to the left of the castle tower entrance. Enter the tower (burst through the door using Aard), and take the ladder down into the tower cellar. There are a few chests with valuables to loot, but the real prize is the "glittering" chest in the corner. Gather the diagram and journal, the latter of which tells you more about Witcher Kiyan's work for Prince Adrien). This isn't required reading, as you should now have all seven diagrams, and the quest concludes.

Preamble: Maps From The Adjunct Geographer Ibrahim Savi

DANGER ALERT SPOILER ALERT

BEAR SCHOOL GEAR

Location: Kaer Trolde (Ard Skellig)

CHARACTERS: Ibrahim Savi, Witcher Gerd

Recommended Items: 355 Crowns

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

Locating the Bear Witcher Gear diagrams is a task not well-suited to an amateur. It begins when you have concluded either of the following options:

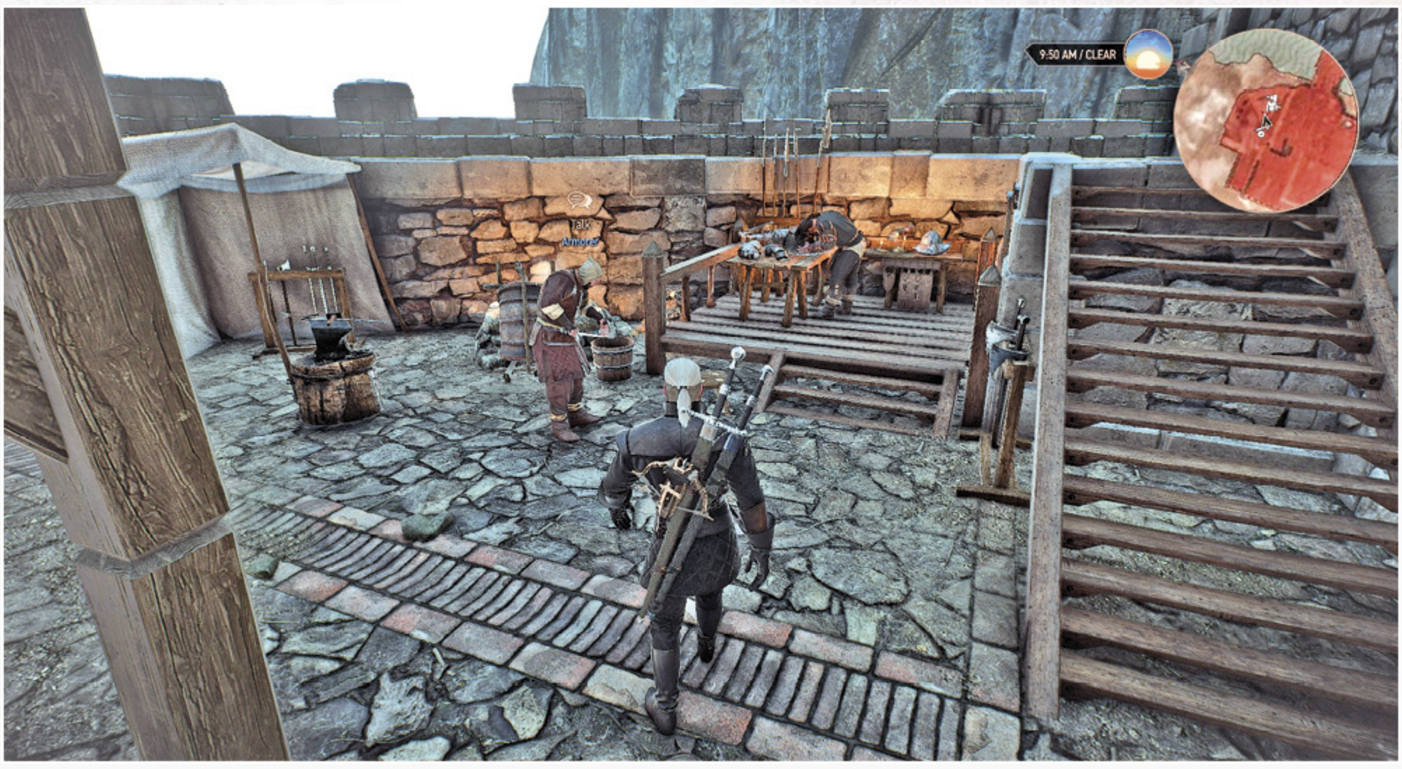
1. You explore Skellige, and stumble across the location of the Ursine Steel Sword, Ursine Silver Sword, Ursine Crossbow, or Ursine Gear (Armor, Boots, Gauntlets, and Trousers).

2. You explore Skellige and purchase a set of maps by the Adjunct in Natural History at Oxenfurt Academy, Ibrahim Savi, which details his notes into the Witcher Gerd. Any Ibrahim Savi map starts this Scavenger Hunt. Specific maps detail upgraded diagrams (each offers locations of between three and six enhanced, superior, or mastercrafted Bear gear diagrams). There is no upgrade to the Ursine Crossbow. There are a total of four Ibrahim Savi documents to buy.

Remember! You don't need any of Ibrahim Savi's maps to find the basic Bear Gear, though any document starts this quest anyway. As usual, you need to find the gear in the following order: Basic, Enhanced, Superior, and finally Mastercrafted.

IBRAHIM SAVI'S MAPS #1, #2, #3, AND #4: THE ARMORER OF KAER TROLDE

Travel to Ard Skellig, and visit the windswept armorer at Kaer Trolde. After checking his selection of goods, buy the all four of the maps (which should cost no more than 355 crowns for all of them). Then open and view them in your Inventory (under Quest Items).



Items: Ibrahim Savi's First Map, Ibrahim Savi's Second Map, Ibrahim Savi's Third Map, Ibrahim Savi's Fourth Map

BEAR GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The First Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 1 (the silver sword, boots, and armor of the Enhanced Bear Gear Diagrams).

The Second Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 2 (the gauntlets, steel sword, and trousers of the Enhanced Bear Gear Diagrams).

The Third Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 3 (the gear (armor, gauntlets, trousers, and boots) steel sword, and silver sword of the Superior Bear Gear Diagrams).

The Fourth Map allows you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 4 (the steel sword, gear (armor, gauntlets, trousers, and boots), and silver sword of the Mastercrafted Bear Gear Diagrams).

CHARACTERS: Ibrahim Savi

ENEMIES: Rock Troll, Sirens, Wraiths, Gargoyles, Ice Elemental, Bandits, Cyclops, Drowners, Sirens

OBJECTIVES

- Find all the diagrams to Bear School Witcher gear (7)
- Search the ruins of Clan Tuirseach's castle.

QUESTING DECISIONS

There are seven Diagrams to find in four separate locations. They can be found in any order, and whether or not you've come across Ibrahim Savi's maps on the Witcher Gerd. They are presented as the objectives appear if you read one of Ibrahim's maps first. All basic diagrams are found across Skellige. This quest can be started at any time, but the optimal opportunity is any time during or after Act I: Main Quest: Destination Skellige.

Fort Tuirseach is an unmarked (and dilapidated) location on An Skellig, which is a formidable ocean's distance away from the main island of Ard Skellig. Set sail heading to the port of Urialla Harbor. You'd be wise to speak to the women of this place, and begin the Secondary Quest: The Path of Warriors, since your journey requires you to undertake part of the aforementioned path. Now head northeast across the island until you reach the entrance to the Trail to Yngvar's Fang (the mountain). Beware of a rock troll guarding the entrance.

Run forward over the wooden bridge, and leap the gap before slaying a Siren. Wait for two more and defeat them as well. Coax them over with Axii or crossbow bolts. Then move right along the path, leap a gap, and make a tight left turn as you climb up and onto the natural rock bridge. Dash across the moss.

MORE HASTE, LESS SPEED

Falling while maneuvering across this increasingly dangerous pathway, full of leaps and precise landing, requires you to keep a steady head, and a degree of patience. Save your progress before each new leap. Look for rocks stained with bird droppings to climb on as you continue onward and upward. If you fall, there's usually a period of backtracking. Or death spasms.

From the mossy bridge, leap and grab the ledge. Pull yourself up and make a series of sharp switchback turns as you zig-zag up the mountain trail. Leap the gaps and pass by two tattered flags showing your progress. Continue west along the trail which flattens out slightly, and leap the gaps along the slope after sliding down a little. When you can't continue any farther, look left and you see a series of ledges leading up into the mists to the peak of Yngvar's Fang. However, to the right is a wooden door. Push it open to enter the remains of Fort Tuirseach.

THE WAILING HORRORS OF FORT TUIRSEACH

Ignite the torches on your left and right of the barred throne room gate so you know where you've been. Head left, down the spiral steps to the lower dungeon level, lighting torches as you go. Ahead, wraiths are forming. Grab a scrap of paper (a ballad) and slay the first wraith. It guards a chest with treasure, close to a wall lever. Use the lever to open the cell gratings all along the walls.

Items: Ballad of Torgeir the Red

Two more wraiths appear. Slay them before heading through the open gratings, checking a number of cells. Three hold dead prisoners, but one offers a drop into a cave tunnel. Drop down to the south, turn right (west), and explore under the dungeon. These are stone catacombs, with another two wraiths to face. Find the stone steps up (north) to a ruined spiral staircase. Climb the rock ledges to a blockage, which is soon removed with Aard.

OBJECTIVES

- Read the court chronicler's tome.

You finally arrive in the central throne room of the fort, which is otherwise inaccessible. Screeching in this chamber are three more wraiths, which appear as you approach the locked gate. First, ransack the glittering chest in the far corner. Loot it to gather the first four diagrams, and the chronicles of Clan Tuirseach, as well as the second ballad of Witcher Gerd. Ransack any other chests as your objective updates after reading the chronicler's book, before using the lever on the right pillar to unlock the gate allowing a quick exit.

Silver Sword: Terror At Fort Etnir

OBJECTIVES

- Search the ruins of Fort Etnir.

Journey back to Ard Skellig, and visit the settlement of Rogne, which is due east of Kaer Trolde in the northern part of the main island. Follow the winding trail from Rogne heading east (passing the lake), and then northwards, up the steep embankment towards the ruins of Fort Etnir itself.

RELATED QUESTS: Secondary Quest (Novigrad): Of Swords and Dumplings

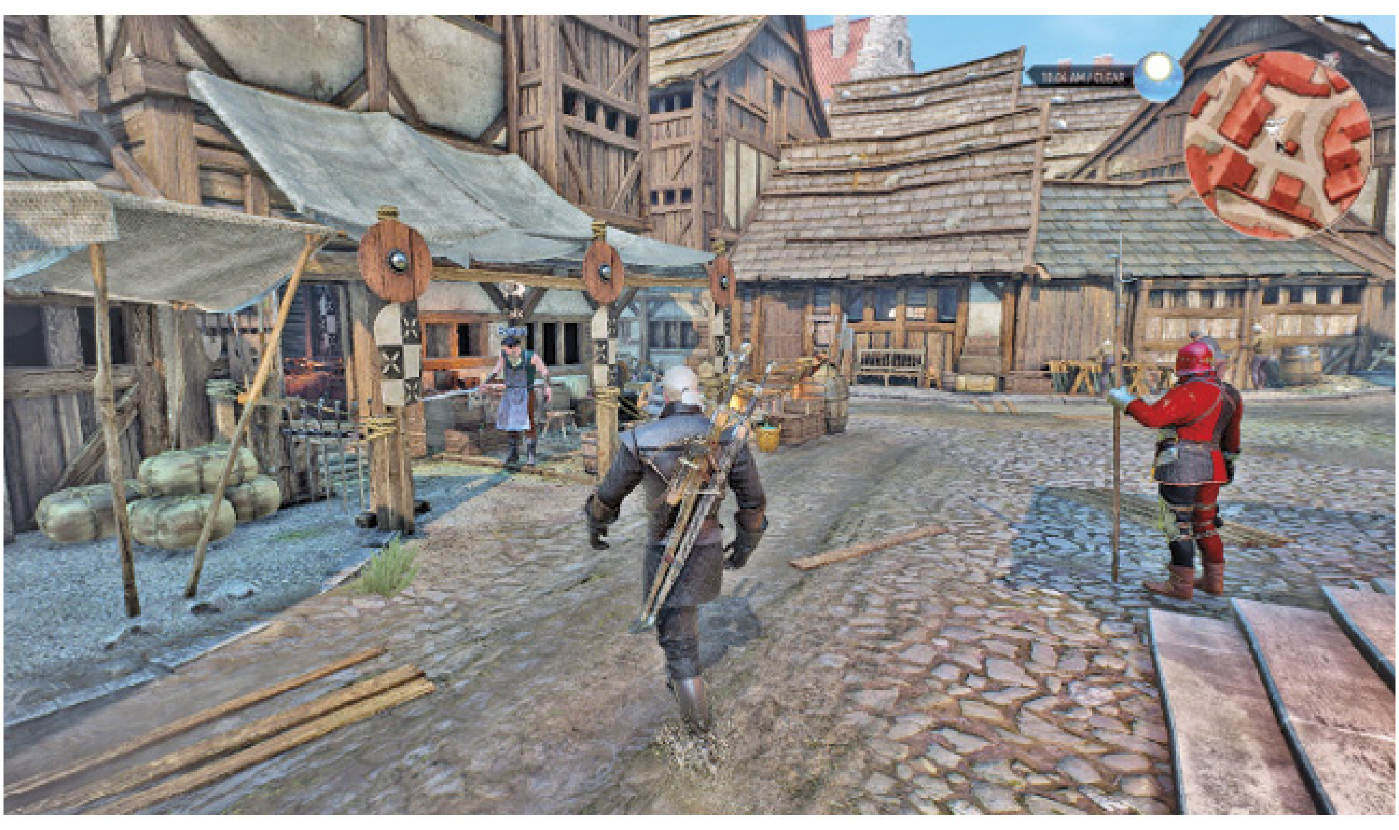
LOCATIONS: Hattori's Dumpling Shop and Armory (Glory Lane, Novigrad), Hierarch Square Armory (Novigrad), Lindenvale, Kaer Trolde

CHARACTERS: Hieronymus, Witcher Elgar, Eibhear Hattori

Recommended Items: 350+ Crowns

HIERONYMUS NOTES #1 AND #5: MASTER ARMORER OF NOVIGRAD CITY

After completing Secondary Quest: Of Swords and Dumplings, visit Hattori and browse his selection of goods.



Purchase the following parchment notes listed below (for around 110 Crowns total), and then read them in your Inventory (under Quest Items).

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

Searching for the Wolven Witcher Gear diagrams is a lengthy but rewarding task. It begins when you have completed one of the following options:

1. You visit Kaer Morhen, and discover the location of the Wolven Steel Sword, Wolven Silver Sword, or Wolven Gear (Armor, Boots, Gauntlets, and Trousers).

2. You visit one of the land's armorers, and gather a set of notes by the noted mage and historian Hieronymus, which details the Witcher Elgar and the diagrams he hid. Any Hieronymus note starts this Scavenger Hunt. Specific Hieronymus notes detail upgraded diagrams (each offers locations of three enhanced, superior, or mastercrafted Wolven gear diagrams). There are a total of six Hieronymus documents to find.

Remember! You don't need any of Hieronymus' documents to find the basic Wolven Gear, though any document starts this quest anyway. As usual, you need to find the gear in the following order: Basic, Enhanced, Superior, and finally Mastercrafted.

Items: Well-Preserved Notes by Hieronymus on the Witcher Elgar, Worn-Out and Faded Notes by Hieronymus on the Witcher Elgar

WOLVEN GEAR: ON THE RIGHT PATH

The Well-Preserved Notes allow you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 1 (the first set of three pieces of Enhanced Wolven Gear Diagrams).

The Worn-Out Notes allow you to find the Upgrade Diagrams: Part 5 (the first set of three pieces of Mastercrafted Wolven Gear Diagrams).

HIERONYMUS NOTES #2: THE BLACKSMITH OF LINDENVALE

Visit the Velen village of Lindenvale, and locate the Blacksmith at the north end of the thoroughfare. Check the Blacksmith's wares and purchase the following set of notes (for around 40 Crowns). Remember to read it afterward!

DLC

WOLF SCHOOL GEAR (BASIC)

RELATED QUESTS: Secondary Quest: The Bastion

LOCATIOSNS: Signal Tower (Kaer Morhen)

CHARACTERS: Hieronymus

ENEMIES: Harpies (Erynia), Wraiths

OBJECTIVES

- Find the diagrams to all elements of Wolf School Witcher gear (6)
- Search the ruins of the signal tower near Kaer Morhen.

QUESTING DECISIONS

There are six Diagrams to find in three separate locations. They can be found whether or not you've come across any of Hieronymus' notes on the Witcher Elgar. All are found in Kaer Morhen.

From the signpost at Kaer Morhen, make a looping path around the mountain just south of the fortress. Your destination is an unmarked signal tower atop the treacherous cliff pathway. Watch for Harpies (Erynia) as you reach this tumbledown tower. Head through the archway, and into the main floor of the structure with the wooden scaffolding above you.

OBJECTIVES

- Read the mage Hieronymus' notes.

Climb the ladder up onto the scaffold, looking for any other chests to loot. As well as random items to take, you must also find the more ornate chest against the north wall, on the first scaffold level, which contains another of Hieronymus' notes. Once you read the notes, three additional objective become available (for locating the armor, boots, gloves, and trousers in one location, the steel sword in a second location, and the silver sword in a third location).

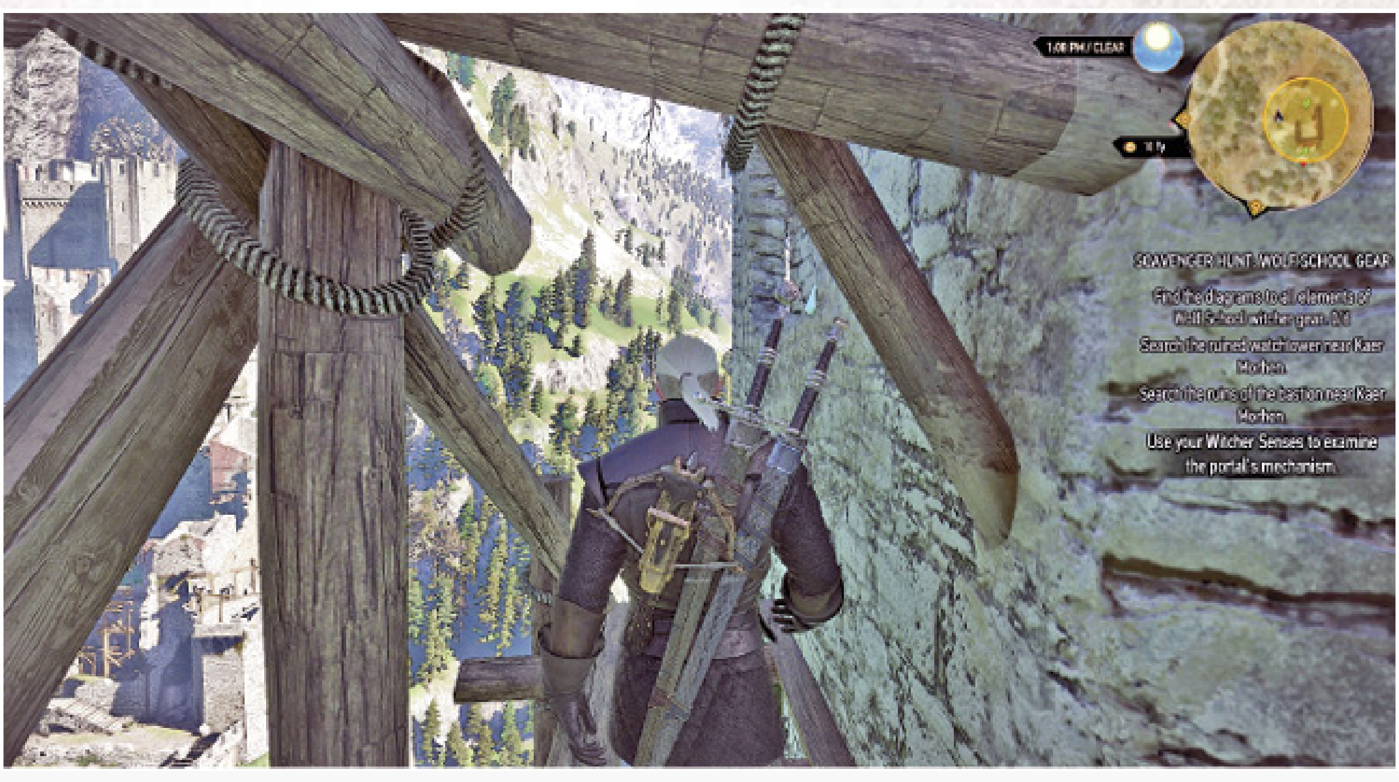
Items: Hieronymus' notes

OBJECTIVES

- Use your Witcher Senses to examine the portal's mechanism.

Just behind the ladder you used to reach the chest with Hieronymus' notes, is a curved contraption leaning against the wall. Examine it and you discover a portal generator. Look to the right for a second portal; this one containing a crystal within it. Find the missing crystal (for the left generator) by backtracking to the broken outer wall, just inside the archway entrance, but before the interior of the tower. Head over the broken wall section, and around to the right. A precarious drop and Kaer Morhen fortress should be visible to your left. Climb on the small section of wooden scaffolding, and procure a crystal from a narrow wall indent up and right of you.



SCAVENGER HUNT: WOLF SCHOOL GEAR

Use your Witcher Senses to examine the portal's mechanism.

Items: Polished Crystal

OBJECTIVES

- Mount the crystal in the generator and charge it using a Sign.
- Enter Hieronymus' portal and explore the location on the other side.

Return to the portal generator and mount the crystal. Then utilize Aard to power up the crystal. A green maelstrom appears in the air just outside the signal tower. However, it isn't fully formed; you must first look to the right, to the second portal generator (which already has a crystal mounted to it), and activate that with Aard. The portal now stabilizes. Run off the edge of the wooden scaffold, landing in the portal to avoid an embarrassing death.

OBJECTIVES

- Read Hieronymus' last words.

You appear inside a small cave with a view of Kaer Morhen out of the exit. A pile of bones (those of Hieronymus himself), and the wraith associated with them, stands between you and completing this objective. Defeat the wraith, then search the body and gather four diagrams as well as a note written in a shaky hand. Read the note, then continue to find the remaining two diagrams. Then finish your exploration by carefully dropping down a series of rocky outcrops to the path below.

OBJECTIVES

- Search the ruins of the bastion near Kaer Morhen.

Journey to the Baston ruins on the western side, and prepare to engage a quartet of angry wraiths near where you trained as a lad. After the spirits have been dismissed, look for the burned-out structure close to the perimeter stone steps.

Inspect the half-buried skeletal remains there. This is what's left of the Witcher Varin. He carries documentation for the steel sword, as well as a journal to optionally read.

Silver Sword: The Last Watchtower

OBJECTIVES

- Search the ruined watchtower near Kaer Morhen.

Travel via a lengthy path through forested slopes, or descend to the lake and utilize a boat to reach the Ruined Watchtower toward the northwest of the expansive lake. Expect to battle wolves along the path close to the watchtower entrance, which (if you use your Witcher Senses) has a wolf marking by it, indicating a place of interest to Witchers.

Additional lost diagrams of a most potent and incredible nature are said to exist within the vales and caves of Toussaint. Searching for five sets of Grand Master Witcher Gear diagrams is a lengthy but rewarding task. It commences when you've completed one of the following options:

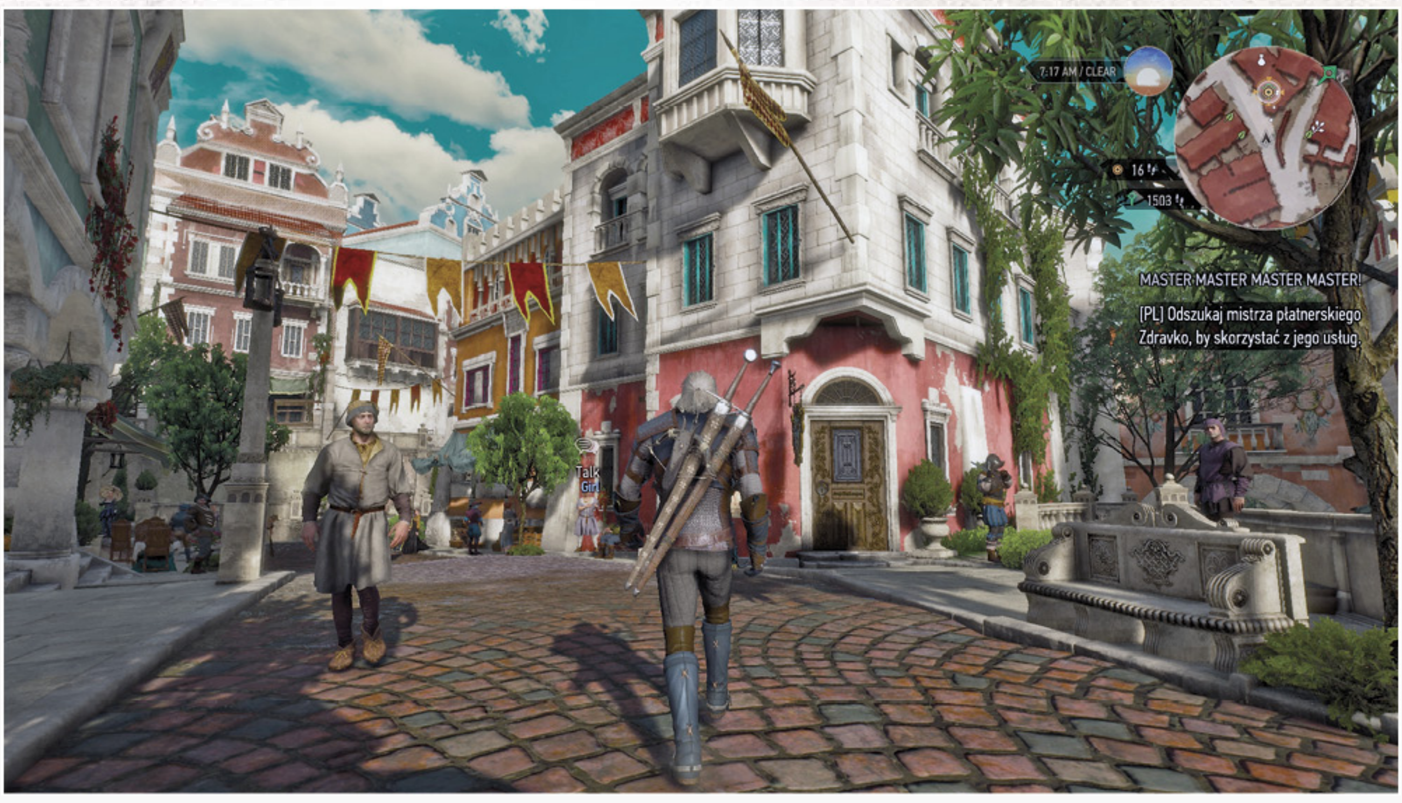
1. You explore Toussaint, and stumble upon the location of one or more of the diagrams. There are Feline, Griffin, Wolven, Ursine, and Manticore diagrams to find.

2. You visit a Notice Board, such as the one just south of The Gran'place in Beauclair, and read the notice marked "Contract: Grandmaster Armorer".

3. You visit Lazare Lafargue (without knowledge of his notice), a noted Grand Master armorer of Beauclair, and discuss the availability of such rare diagrams. This is the quest you are currently reading, and you are encouraged to complete this first, so you can start each of the five Scavenger Hunts all at once, and finish them at your leisure.

Remember! In order to create the Grandmaster gear of each Witcher School (with the exception of the Manticore gear), you require Mastercrafted gear of that school, which you can find by finishing the previous Scavenger Hunts. With four of the five gear diagrams, you can find the gear in any order you like (as all are Grandmaster diagrams). For Manticore equipment, you need only Grandmaster gear.

Beauclair's best armorer seeks a brave man to help recover some long-lost diagrams. Though the contract is highly dangerous (and isn't technically a "Witcher Contract"), the reward is said to be lucrative. More details are available at the armorer's shop, on the corner in Hauteville, one of the poshest parts of town. Step inside, and you're greeted by Lazare Lafargue, who immediately recognizes you're from the School of the Wolf.



MASTER MASTER MASTER MASTER!

[PL] Odszukaj mistrza płatnerskiego Zdravko, by skorzystać z jego usług.

He tells you that he's spent years seeking diagrams for Witcher armor of exceptional, grandmaster quality. Though you've heard of such equipment, you believed them all lost. Not quite! The holders of the diagrams came to Toussaint, but they perished, and you need to learn where and retrieve the diagrams. In return, Lafargue will forge whatever you fancy. Ask how the diagrams wound up in Toussaint, and Lafargue mentions the legendary elven master armorer Tyen'sail, who Lafargue learned his trade from. You can ask how he ended up apprenticed to an elf, before requesting more information on where to look for the diagrams.

Lafargue knows of five likely fallen Witchers, each from a different school: the Wolf, Griffin, Cat, Bear, and Manticore. Ask about the following School gear:

- The Wolf: Witcher Adon was hired as an escort on an archaeological expedition to the elven ruins at Termes.
- The Griffin: The Witcher took a contract at Fort Ussar and required better gear
- The Cat: Bartolomé de Launay, a ducal armorer, asked to confirm the authenticity of a Witcher diagram; a Witcher had offered it for sale in return for a full set of gear. Soon after, de Launay disappeared.
- The Bear: Lafargue remembers a towering Witcher who haggled with Tyen'Sail like a fishwife, and pledged to bring them coin after completing a contract at the Tufo vineyard.
- The Manticore: A century past, Witcher Merten visited Tyen'Sail and made a poor impression; stinking like a dwarf and quarreling fiercely. Folk say the Witcher brawled with the Ducal Guard and was arrested and sentenced to Bastoy Prison.

Now you have the five snippets of information, the five Grandmaster Witcher Gear Scavenger Hunts begin, and this quest stalls temporarily.

Master Master Master Master!

Grandmaster Lafargue And The Furious Forge

OBJECTIVES

- Find all the grandmaster diagrams of one Witcher school.
- Take the diagrams to Lafargue so he can become a grandmaster.

To complete this quest, all you need to do is finish one of the following five quests:

- Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Griffin Gear.
- Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Feline Gear.
- Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Wolven Gear.
- Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Ursine Gear.
- Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Manticore Gear.

When all diagrams of any of these five schools have been found, return to Lafargue, and speak to him, telling him you've found something. When a complete set of diagrams are in your possession, he can make a draft of them, and become the first Grand Master Armorer in all of Toussaint and the Northern Realms! At this point, you can have him craft whatever Grandmaster armor you wish (materials are available in his armory if you don't have them, but you must bring the Mastercrafted equipment from previous Scavenger Hunts so this gear can be further augmented). The quest now concludes.

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

This quest commences when you've completed one of the following options:

1. You explore Toussaint, and stumble upon the location of one or more of the Grandmaster Griffin diagrams.

2. You visit a Notice Board, such as the one just south of The Gran'place in Beauclair, and read the notice marked "Contract: Grandmaster Armorer", and start Scavenger Hunt: Master Master Master Master!.

3. You visit Lazare Lafargue (without knowledge of his notice), a noted Grand Master armorer of Beauclair, and start Scavenger Hunt: Master, Master, Master, Master!.

Remember! In order to create Griffin Grandmaster gear, you require Mastercrafted gear of that school, which it is recommended you find by finishing Scavenger Hunt: Griffin School Gear. You need to find the gear in the following order: Basic, Enhanced, Superior, Mastercrafted, and finally Grandmaster.

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the ruins of Fort Ussar.
- Read Captain Augustus Fierabras' report.

Lazare Lafargue mentioned that a Witcher from the Griffin school took on a Contract at Fort Ussar, and this is the best place to start searching. Trek to the eastern edge of Toussaint, deep in The Champs Désolés Territory, to the large, flat summit where the tumbledown ruins of Fort Ussar still stand. Remain on the summit surface, watching for two Slyzards at this monster nest (usually active if Contract: Bovine Blues has been started), and enter the ruined fort itself. The chest you require is tucked away under some stone steps. Loot it, and gather the following vital items:

Read the report, concerning a Witcher named Jerome, who was initially a paragon of politeness regarding a contract at a castle on Mont Crane, until Fierabras mentioned payment would be from the coffers of a mage named Moreau, after which Jerome flew into a rage. How curious…

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the castle on Mont Crane.

Prepare for a protracted fight with a large number of bandits as you close in on this windswept castle at the summit of Mont Crane.

SCAVENGER HUNT: GRANDMASTER GRIFFIN GEAR
Go to the castle on Mont Crane.
Find all the diagrams in the set: 3/6

HANSE BASE: OUTLAWS RULE HERE!

Mont Crane is one of three bases of operations for an infamous outlaw gangs known as a Hanse. Be particularly wary and prepare for a tough fight. These bandits are well-organized and, when attacked, might call for help from neighboring camps. To prevent this, kill bandits running with torches (that show up on your mini-map) toward signal fires (also on your mini-map). Your goal is to kill the hanse's leader.

HANDLING A HANSE BASE: THE MONT CRANE CASTLE MASSACRE

This base is particularly problematic as there is only one way in and out (from the south), and you're heading uphill to reach the bailey (inner courtyard atop the steps from the outer courtyard). Expect around 16 foes, and double that if the signal fire is lit.

It is fortunate then, that this guide has some tactics to ensure victory against these overwhelming forces, as part of Secondary Quest (Unmarked): Knight for Hire. Consult the section on Mont Crane Castle, and remember that you don't need to slay all foes to progress in this quest (so you can leave the enemies on the upper bailey alone, and especially the leader Filibert Fourfingers).

OBJECTIVES

- Explore Moreau's quarters.

Once you have the leisure time to inspect Mont Crane Castle a little more meticulously, after all bandits that pose an immediate threat to you are neutralized, look around the lower courtyard, to a section of ruined wall in the northwest corner. Use the Eye of Nehaleni to remove the illusion; this is actually a cracked entrance into the lower dungeon of the castle itself!

Descend down the stairs, turn right, and ignore the corridor immediately to your right (southeast). Instead, follow the perimeter passageway forward (northeast), and then turn right; just before the last right turn which is a dead-end. Continue southeast down the passage that ends in a bookcase alcove. Examine the table, which contains a useful Power crystal. Pick it up.

Items: Power crystal

OBJECTIVES

- Read Moreau's notes.
- Put the activating crystal in place.
- Power the activating crystal using the Aard Sign.

Head down the connecting corridor with evidence of Moreau's laboratory desks, stills, shelves of strange liquids and a row of barrels on an inaccessible loft above you. Turn left (southeast) to face a seemingly sealed stone archway wall relief. Use your Witcher Senses to pick out a button on the right side of the relief and press it. The stone arch slides back, revealing a secret passage!

Just beyond this secret door is a small passage leading to an open chest on your left. Gather some required reading, including Moreau's journal from here. Read the notes, which detail Moreau's son, the Witcher Jerome, arriving at Fort Ussar in readiness for some experimentation. The notes also mention an activation crystal, which you are fortunate to have already found. Slot it into the elven bracket on the wall, then summon a blast of Aard to power it. A portal appears to your right. Enter it!

Jerome Moreau’s Prison

OBJECTIVES

- Defeat the golem.
- Explore Jerome’s prison.

You appear in Mont Crane Cave (an unmarked Monster Den north of the castle). As one of the books you just found is related to golems, it shouldn’t come as a surprise that Moreau’s lumbering familiar is still guarding this underground area. Fortunately, it is as slow-moving as it is strong. Defeat it in glorious combat (the Bestiary has some Golem-slaying plans), before pushing further up into the prison, away from the portal.

There’s much to discover here; a tiny chest on a shelf, close to the large stone fireplace and oven, contains a diagram. There’s another diagram just sitting out on a small table by two large copper brewing stills (there’s a note made by Jerome on the back of this diagram; a letter to his father Professor Moreau, that is distinctly the opposite of an affectionate missive). On a chair is a small sack containing a shirt and the final diagram.

Items: Diagram: Grandmaster Griffin armor, Diagram: Grandmaster Griffin silver sword, Diagram: Grandmaster Griffin trousers

This concludes the quest for the Grandmaster diagrams, but you still need to leave this cave. Interact with the rock wall to the left of the fireplace; it is an illusion, allowing you to reveal a separate section of cave, where you can loot some choice chests, drop into a pool of water, and escape back into Toussaint via a cave mouth north of Mont Crane Castle, in an area east of Basane Farm. Beware of Fleders and a Garkain lurking in this Monster Den.

OBJECTIVES

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

This quest commences when you've completed one of the following options:

1. You explore Toussaint, and stumble upon the location of one or more of the Grandmaster Feline diagrams.

2. You visit a Notice Board, such as the one just south of The Gran'place in Beauclair, and read the notice marked "Contract: Grandmaster Armorer", and start Scavenger Hunt: Master Master Master Master!.

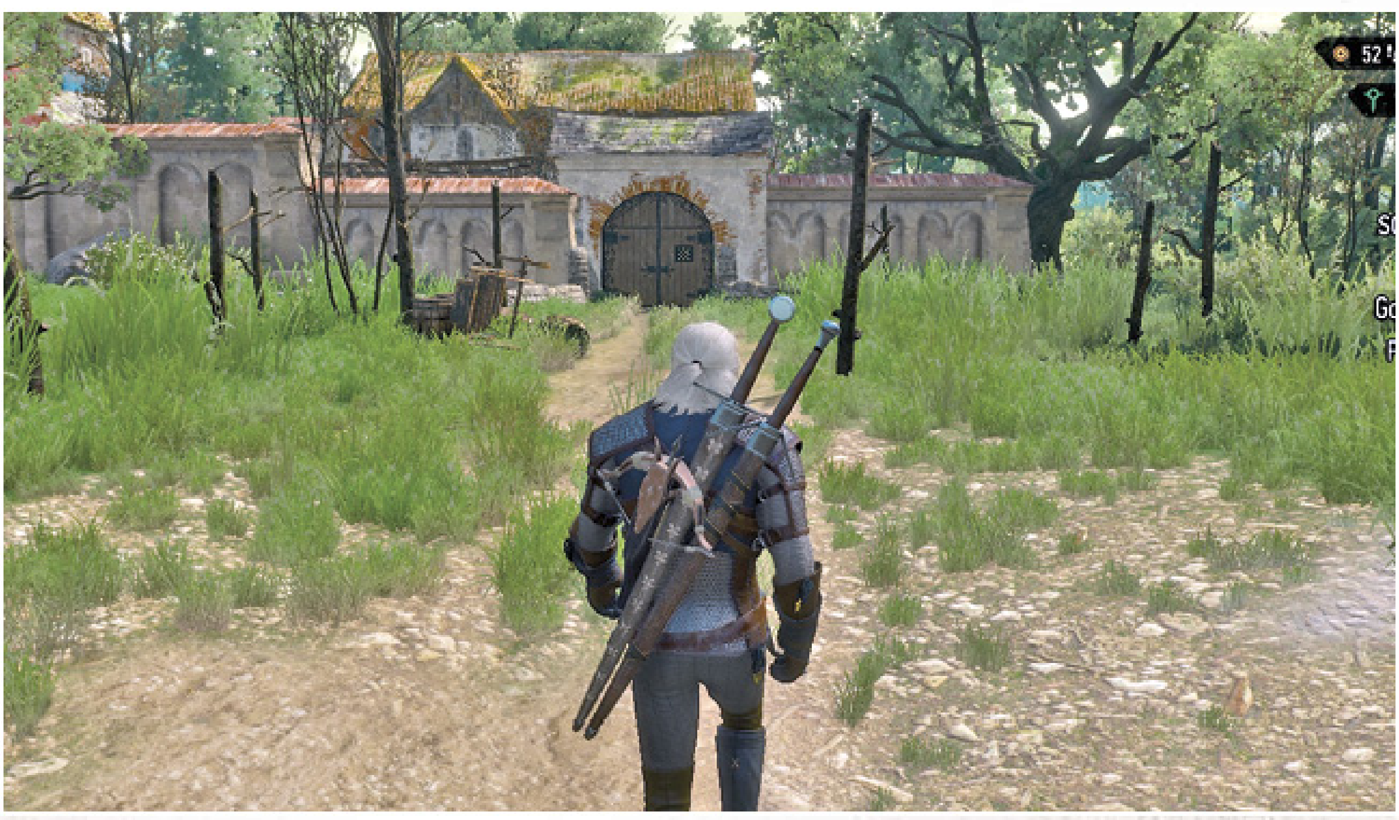
3. You visit Lazare Lafargue (without knowledge of his notice), a noted Grand Master armorer of Beauclair, and start Scavenger Hunt: Master Master Master Master!.

Remember! In order to create Feline Grandmaster gear, you require Mastercrafted gear of that school, which it is recommended you find by finishing Scavenger Hunt: Feline School Gear. You need to find the gear in the following order: Basic, Enhanced, Superior, Mastercrafted, and finally Grandmaster.

OBJECTIVES

- Go to Bartolomé de Launay's house.

Previous conversations with Lazare Lafargue has lead you to learn that Bartolomé de Launay, a ducal armorer, was asked to confirm the authenticity of a Witcher diagram; a Witcher had offered it for sale. Soon after, de Launay disappeared. The home of de Launay is as good a place to start this investigation. Head north, deep into the Vedette Valley territory, continuing northward from the Trading Post along the road, before making a right (easterly) turn. Ahead is the faded grandeur of Bartolomé de Launay's residence, known as Villa Vedette. The front gate is firmly locked.



OBJECTIVES

- Find a way into the estate's grounds.

Head counterclockwise around the perimeter wall of the estate, passing a large tree, and locating some partly-ruined wooden scaffolding in the southeast corner of the wall. Leap and clamber up and on top of the perimeter wall, and drop down into the estate's grounds. You discover (and can attack with ranged projectiles from the perimeter wall before dropping down if you wish) a unit of seven bandits, busy figuring out what to do with a captured man. A swift and bloody combat later, you're the one doing the choosing.

This Clerk is a Person in Distress, and is much less anxious after a momentary loss of composure. You can buy from him, ask what he's doing here, and inquire about the Witcher diagrams. He hasn't made a thorough account of the items in this place, but you're welcome to ferret about for anything you require.

KNIGHT FOR HIRE

This heroic deed pays dividends; visit the ducal camerlengo, who can be found in his office in the Knights Dormant Square in Beauclair (close to the main bridge to the palace, and The Gran'Place Signpost). Consult the Unmarked Secondary Quest: Knight for Hire for further details.

OBJECTIVES

- Search the estate.
- Read the letter to Bartolomé de Launay.

The place is a mess, and among the detritus there's some minor loot to pocket if you wish. But the reason you're here is revealed once you find the unlocked door into the building in the northwest corner of the compound (with the red walls). Enter, turn left past the kitchen, into an old study area, and inspect the painting on the wall. Loot it to discover two pieces of parchment critical to your needs. Read the letter immediately; it appears Count de Launay was setting a trap for the Witcher who visited him, and went for protection to the bandits who dwell in the ruins of Arthach Palace.

Bandits’ Lament At Arthach Palace

OBJECTIVES

- Explore the ruins of Arthach Palace.

Exit the Villa Vedette, and make your way roughly west, across the crossroads, toward the marshlands where the ruins of Arthach Palace still stand. Along the way, expect to encounter a mounted bandit, and around four infantry on the right (north) side of the track. This is but a taste of the carnage to come! Cross the remains of a small elven bridge, and the palace tower, with its tumbledown crenellations, looms out of the marsh ahead of you.

HANSE BASE: OUTLAWS RULE HERE!

Arthach Palace Ruins is one of three bases of operations for an infamous outlaw gang; a place known as a “Hanse.” Be particularly wary and prepare for a tough fight. These bandits are well-organized and when attacked might call for help from neighboring camps. To prevent this, kill bandits running with torches (that show up on your mini-map) toward signal fires (also on your mini-map). Your goal is to kill the hanse’s leader.

HANDLING A HANSE BASE: THE ARTHACH PALACE ANNIHILATION

Though the place has upward of 30 bandits, and at least a dozen more to call on if the signal fire is lit, you have the luxury of retreating and returning, and attacking from any direction you wish. The only time you may be surrounded is if you venture onto the battlements; so staying on the ground and using projectiles is favored. Despite this, bettering the Hanse forces of Antoine “Starling” Straggen is no walk in the park.

It is fortunate then, that this guide has some stratagems to ensure victory against these overwhelming forces, as part of Secondary Quest (Unmarked): Knight for Hire. Consult the section on Arthach Palace Ruins, and remember that you don’t need to slay all foes to progress in this quest (so you can leave the leader Antoine “Starling” Straggen, who is up on the central tower).

OBJECTIVES

- Read the bandit leader’s report.

Once the extreme bout of carnage has ended, whether or not you summon the Knights errant to commandeer this location or not, you can make off with the following parchments, found on the northern ruined ramparts, just in front and to the right of the signal fire. The leader’s report makes worthwhile reading, as it tells the story of double-crossing the Count and torturing the Witcher to death, after learning the remaining diagrams were hidden in a place called the Pits of Brume.

Forcing Back Foliage In The Pits Of Brume

OBJECTIVES

- Find the entrance to the Pits of Brume.
- Find the hidden diagrams.

A quick check of your map indicates the Pits of Brume aren't far away; a short jog through the bog in a roughly southeasterly direction. Along the way, you may encounter another Bandit Camp. This one has around four foes and a dog, and closer to the Pits entrance, a pack of Wild Dogs may cause some minimal panic. On the meadow grass just before you discover the Pits narrow cave entrance, expect an Archespore to need weeding.

Follow the narrow tunnel until it bends round to the left, and take the right (upper) fork at the junction. This way you can overlook the main pit cavern, and deal with two unruly Archespores. After the plant life is cut back, check the far (northwest) end of the pit, where the journal of Witcher Lexandre can be found near a small burlap cot. OBJECTIVES

- Go to where the archeologists camped.
- Search the archeologists' campsite.
- Read the lead archeologist's journal.

During your chat with Lazare Lafargue, you learned that Witcher Adon was hired as an escort on an archaeological expedition to the elven ruins at Termes. Now seems as good time as any to head to the expedition site, which is over on the far eastern side of Toussaint, at the Termes Palace Ruins, in northeast Caroberta Woods Territory. As you arrive, the camp is just south of the elven ruins, and the rotting tents are still visible. Conduct a search of the camp, after dealing with the plant-life here; an Archespore needs to be de-headed. Then use your Witcher Senses to find a tiny chest under a bench between two tents.

It seems the investigation is to take you into the elven ruins. Make a careful inspection of the entire area around the ancient arches. Beneath them, behind a small waterfall (and a cracked wall you use Aard to break it open), is a Place of Power to optionally locate. There are a few scattered sacks and chests of loot to open on the ruins themselves. Expect to be harried by the occasional forest Boar. But you're here to find the purple barrier pictured previously; an archway in the roughly northern part of the ruins. OBJECTIVES

- Explore the chambers under the ruins.

If you've been busy coating your sword in specter oil, you've correctly predicted this elven tomb holds a number of unquiet spirits! Slowly descend the steps, and engage two Barghests in combat. It's recommended you make slow and steady progress through these ruins, to avoid becoming overwhelmed by spectral forces. When both astral hounds are dispatched, use your Witcher Senses to look for the skeletal remains in the first chamber. They appear to have been running for the exit.

The sturdy arched door to your right (west) is firmly locked, meaning the only way is left (east) and down the steps. Use Aard on the cracked wall preventing further progress, and step through into a more rocky tunnel, turning right (south), moving into a larger cavern where a Giant Centipede must be slain. Afterward, feel free to search for a minor chest and loot, before locating a second weakened wall and blasting it open to reach the second part of the underground ruins.

It is worth remaining in this secondary chamber and fighting any remaining guardians of these depths.

After the wraiths are defeated, head right (east) to a room with a dead end, and a huge boulder brought down from above. The skeletal remains of Witcher Adon can be found partly under this massive rock; he brought this down to crush his foes, and ended up killing himself, too. OBJECTIVES

- Read the warning the Witcher wrote.

Drop down the cave hole, and check the area to your left (northwest), unless the spittle from the Giant Centipede on your right (southeast) sends you into a blood-rage, and you need to slay this creature first. You’ll face this insect anyway, so clear the area of foes.

Backtrack to the northwest part of the tunnel, and blast apart a collection of rubble (or climb over it) to reach a dead-end. However, there’s some bedding and a letter written by the Witcher himself. It tells of buildings around here collapsing, and that Witcher Junod has daubed symbols of his school on the interior cave walls so he can navigate his way through this cave complex.

Items: Warning

OBJECTIVES

- Follow the symbols on the walls.

Turn and head deeper into the cave system, passing the Giant Centipede-slaying chamber, and using your Witcher Senses to spot bear head symbols along the walls. It isn’t necessary to find all of them (or any of them). Cross the cavern, into some narrow burrowing tunnels. The left fork leads to a short dead-end so head right, following the tunnel to a main junction (and bear symbol). There’s a tunnel left of you, leading to a dead end. Drop down at the junction, as the tunnel continues left and right. Head left, into a Giant Centipede cave. Fight the disgusting beast, as it is burrowing around the remains of the Witcher, along with the remainder of the diagrams!

GRANDMASTER MANTICORE GEAR

RELATED QUESTS: Scavenger Hunt: Master Master Master Master!, Secondary Quest: Big Feet to Fill, Treasure Hunt: The Toussaint Prison Experiment

LOCATIONS: Lafargue Armory (Unmarked), Bastoy Prison Ruins (Unmarked), Lebioda's Prayer Cave (Unmarked), Prophet Lebioda's Statue, Murky Delve (Unmarked), Lake of Cleansing (Unmarked)

CHARACTERS: Lazare Lafargue, Witcher Merten, The Prophet Lebioda, Beggars, Peasant, Mystery Man

ENEMIES: Alp, Panthers, Spirit of the Great Beggar, Bruxae, Kikimores

OBJECTIVES

- Find all the diagrams in the set (6).

HOW TO START THIS QUEST

This quest commences when you've completed one of the following options:

1. You explore Toussaint, and stumble upon the location of one or more of the Grandmaster Manticore diagrams.

2. You visit a Notice Board, such as the one just south of The Gran'place in Beauclair, and read the notice marked "Contract: Grandmaster Armorer", and start Scavenger Hunt: Master Master Master Master!.

3. You visit Lazare Lafargue (without knowledge of his notice), a noted Grand Master armorer of Beauclair, and start Scavenger Hunt: Master Master Master Master!.

Remember! The fabled Manticore set of Witcher gear diagrams only come in one type of quality; Grandmaster. There are no previous Scavenger Hunts to complete when searching for this particular gear.

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the ruins of Bastoy Prison.

According to the Beauclair armorer Lazare Lafargue, one century ago, Witcher Merten visited Tyen'Sail and made a poor impression; stinking like a dwarf and quarreling fiercely. Folk say the Witcher brawled with the Ducal Guard and was arrested and sentenced to Bastoy Prison. The ruins of the prison itself are deep in the Gorgon Foothills, on the western side of Toussaint. From the Chuchote Cave, take the road to the south across the footbridge, and head around Lac Celavy heading roughly southwest, until the Bastoy Prison Ruins loom up at you from atop a hill.

OBJECTIVES

- Search the ruins of Bastoy Prison.
- Read the prisoner's notes.

A thorough exploration may reveal a Treasure Hunt (and a tiny locked chest unrelated to this quest) and an Alp to face in battle; part of "The Toussaint Prison Experiment". However, you're here for some Manticore gear diagrams, so enter the investigation area and climb the wall to a wooden balcony leading to the ruins of a prison tower. Look for a loose stone on the wall near the gap to the balcony; it contains the first diagram you seek. Break open the book you find with the diagram; it charts the conversion of Witcher Merten to the cult of Lebioda. In fact, it suggests Merten went to a legendary cave frequented by the deity.

A Hope And A Prayer

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the cave where Lebioda once stayed.
- Search the chamber.
- Read Merten's prayer.

Lebioda's Prayer Cave is an unmarked location all the way across Toussaint, on the western side of the Duchy in the Caroberta Woods Territory, southeast of Gelenser Farm, and southwest of the Termese Palace Ruins. Head deep into the woods, following an overgrown path between a rocky dell, engaging a couple of Panthers in combat along the way. The cave entrance is unassuming, but once you enter, there's evidence of impressive carvings.

Go to the cave where Lebioda once stayed.

Descend into the circular chamber, now a shrine to Lebioda, and adorned with his teachings carved into the walls. Read them at your leisure. You should also notice a number of slips of paper adhered to the walls, with a prayer on each one. Any of particular interest glow red when you employ your Witcher senses, but most are simple requests for loved ones to be well, or to forgive them for a misdeed. Look to the prayer notes on the southeast wall.

The one to the far right was written by Witcher Merten; written on the back of the second diagram! Read the parchment; Merten seeks to denounce his sins, and meet with someone called "The Great Beggar" at the Temple of Lebioda.

This Beggar’s Belief

OBJECTIVES

- Go to Lebioda’s temple.
- Search for tracks left by Merten.
- Defeat the wraith.
- Read the Great Beggar’s journal.

The pilgrimage continues! The Temple of Lebioda is an impressive landmark that lies on the western banks of the Sansretour River, part of the Prophet Lebioda Statue complex, which may have been completed if you finished Secondary Quest: Big Feet to Fill. Venture west, and find the temple behind the monumental statue of Lebioda. Head through the grand (but crumbling) opening, into an entrance crypt. Ahead is a sealed archway; blast it apart with a sturdy Aard blow.

Beyond the bricked-up wall is a tormented wraith, the Spirit of the Great Beggar. It is a powerful specter with a forceful, Aard-like blast that can knock you back, and a staff that may be ethereal, but it still hurts when it strikes you! Use similar tactics to those you use when defeating wraiths and human ghosts. When you’ve slain the spirit, look about this chamber; the Bones of the Great Beggar lie scattered on the floor here. Gather them up.

Items: Bones of the Great Beggar

Continue your search of the Great Beggar’s chamber; on a small table is a tiny chest to loot; it contains two more diagrams and a journal. Reading the journal reveals the locals had been angered by the Beggar’s preaching about Lebioda, but that a man named Merten had raised his spirits. The Beggar recommended Merten visit the Hidden Chapel, a bleak place where a trial would await him. That appears to be your next location to find. Before you leave the temple, inter the bones you found in one of the entrance sarcophagi, so the Great Beggar may finally rest in peace.

A Murky Delve: Trials At The Hidden Chapel

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the cave within the hidden chapel.
- Search the hidden chapel.
- Read Merten's notes

Along the western shores of Lake Seidhe Llygad, in the Gorgon Foothills south of the Palace Gardens in Beauclair, and just north of the Seidhe Llygad Ampitheater, is an unassuming cave mouth, the Hidden Chapel the Beggar made reference to. The entrance to the Hidden Chapel has another name now, Murky Delve, but was once known as the Cave of Tribulations. Swim through the cave opening, and climb up onto more solid ground inside this cave tunnel. You surmise the chapel Merten visited must be in this cave.

Step to each one, and drop some coin at their outstretched hands. After you give alms, the beggar disappears in a puff of purple mist. Progress continues further into the tunnel, heading slightly upward in a northeasterly direction. Though you may be tempted to loot a sword sticking out of pile of gold, don't do it. Grabbing it will fail the test and the sword, gold pile, and man will disappear while you're attacked by a group of Kikimores. The tunnel continues with some natural steps up, to the northwest. He appears to look exactly like the Prophet Lebioda, and disappears a moment later. There must have been some powerful hallucinogens in that purple haze! The disappearing man leaves behind some bones to examine (are these the remains of Lebioda himself?) and a small chest to loot. The Last Cleansing Of Witcher Merten

OBJECTIVES

- Go to the Lake of Cleansing.

The final stop on retracing the Pilgrimage of Merten is finding the Lake of Cleansing, which is far across Toussaint on the northeastern edge of the Duchy, just northeast of Basane Farm in Mar Aurbrebis Territory. Follow the road northeast from Basane Farm, crossing the two stone bridges before turning right (east), and following the stream to the lake itself. The dappled light and peace of the lake is disturbed somewhat by three motley bandits, who are easily defeated before a dive in the lake. Swim down from the jetty, locating some scattered jewelry, and a sack containing the last diagram and letter of Witcher Merten. This concludes the quest for the Manticore diagrams. A Witcher's Guide To Killing Monsters

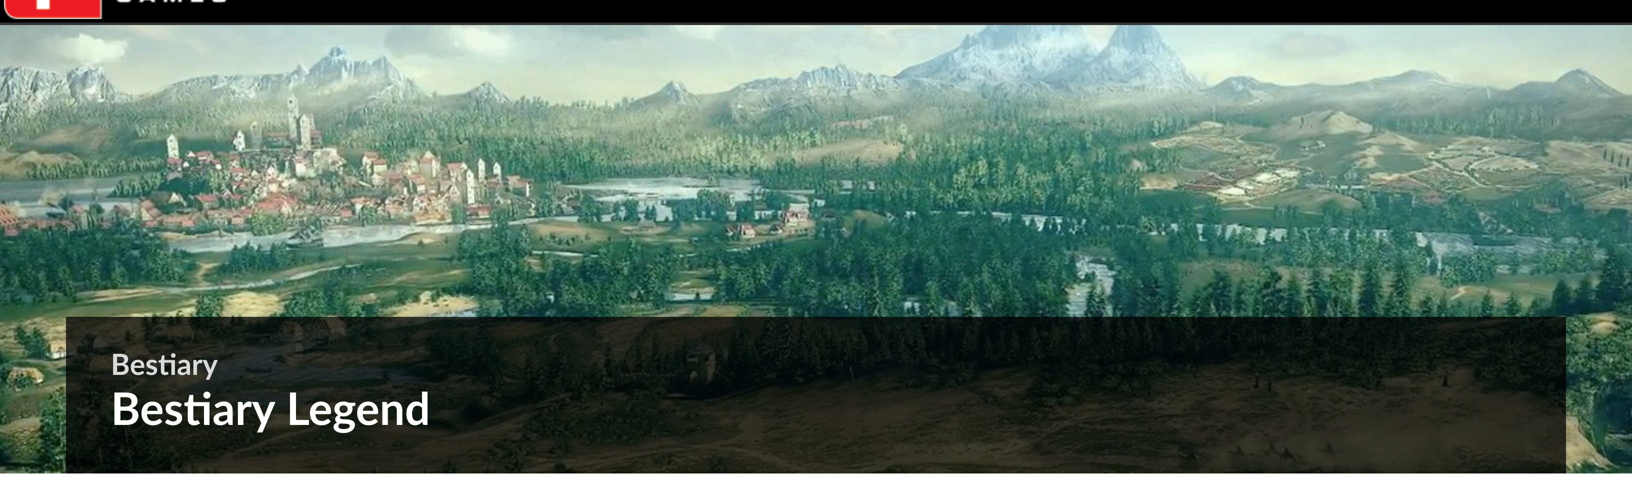
There are many dangers in the world that a Witcher should be prepared for, human-sized or otherwise. Being able to handle all threats that stand in your way requires maintaining your equipment properly, keeping up on your training through use of new abilities, and crafting the correct potions and oils for any encounter. More importantly, it comes down to basic observational skills. There are some foes that even a Witcher should steer clear of, unless properly prepared for combat. This chapter reveals every single aggressive entity you'll ever encounter in your travels, and more importantly, how to slay them.



Bestiary

Bestiary Legend

This section has a number of elements worth explaining, as follows:

Danger Alert: This shows a very general caution related to how dangerous a particular entity is likely to be, assuming you're facing it after properly preparing for combat, and it is around your own experience level:

● ○ ○ ○ ○

Pushover: Should prove little or no challenge to cut down this entity, even if you're careless and unprepared.

● ● ○ ○ ○

Inconvenient: A relatively easy takedown, with or without the arsenal of swordplay, projectiles, or Signs.

● ● ● ○ ○

Worthy Opponent: Keep your wits about you, use the tactics noted, and the enemy will yield after some impressive combat.

● ● ● ● ○

Highly Problematic: With little room for error, and a formidable opponent to face, combat may be protracted and difficult.

● ● ● ● ●

Terrifying: An exceptional entity with a prowess of a demi-god, and one bards will write songs about, should you vanquish it.

Frequency: This is how often you'd expect to see a particular entity, and is divided as follows:

● ○ ○ ○ ○

Unique: There is likely only one of these entities to ever face in combat.

● ● ○ ○ ○

Very Rare: You'll find and fight these creatures only two to five times during your travels.

● ● ● ○ ○

Uncommon: There are small clusters where this foe resides, but you'll need to seek them out to find them.

● ● ● ● ○

Common: Relatively easy to encounter throughout your travels.

● ● ● ● ●

Plentiful: A species so common it could be seen as an invasive pest. Very easy to find.

Loot: The type of items you can remove from the corpse of a particular entity, either carried by them, or cut out from their innards.

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Some creatures have secondary or "higher level" variants which are tougher, but usually exhibit the same attack patterns. These are listed here.

Environments: The general areas where a particular foe can be found.

Specific Encounter: Should you wish to find a specific entity, an example location is listed (nearest Signpost, and exact area, along with a quest name if applicable).

Vulnerabilities: This box shows the possible Bombs, Oils, Potions, and Signs the enemy is vulnerable against. It goes without saying that your steel or silver sword is usually the best way to slay each foe!

BATTLE-TESTED TACTICS

Unless otherwise stated, the tactics presented in this Bestiary have been battle-tested in all Difficulty levels (including Death March!) as well as all modes of play (including New Game +), and against the most fearsome of each monster type (including the named Monsters during Witcher Contracts). You are encouraged to face enemies that are within or under your Level range. If a foe has a skull above their vitality bar, avoid them.

OTHER TESTED TACTICS

Simply because a potion, bomb, or Sign isn't explicitly listed as a vulnerability for a particular enemy, doesn't mean you shouldn't use it! This is particularly true for decoctions; you are encouraged to read up on the effects of these enhanced potions, and swig them accordingly. Don't forget to swap out your Ability Slots in your Character Panel Menu too; you don't want to forget a key skill after combat begins, when it is too late to change!

Humanoids

The Conjunction of Spheres brought humans, nonhumans, and monsters from different worlds together. This irreversible cataclysm continues to be felt over 1,500 years later. Witchers were born from this strife, seeking to protect humans and nonhumans from the creatures plaguing their fields. Commonly, a Witcher's role was to kill beasts while wielding blades of silver, but there are times when steel swords must be drawn. Humans and Nonhumans, either trained soldiers and assassins, or thugs and bandits who prey on the weak, will stand against you on the Path as often as any kind of monster.

Of greater concern, the Wild Hunt has been seen roaming the Continent, seeking something or someone. These are among the most skilled warriors a Witcher could be forced to face. They are as well-armed and armored as any soldier from the richest kingdoms of man, and they are relentless in combat. Each Wild Hunt warrior should be treated as a grave threat alone. And these huntsmen never ride alone.

Loot: Weapons, Equipment, Currency

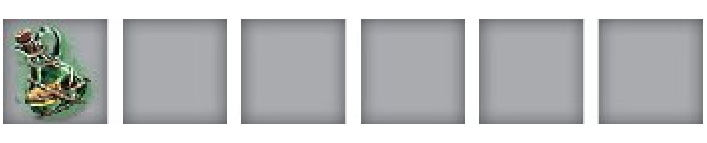
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Baron's Men, Bandits, Guards, Thugs, Pirates, Order of the Flaming Rose, Scoia'tael, Bouncers, Whoreson's Men (and others)

Environments: Found across the known world.

Specific Encounter: Any Bandit Camp: Coast of Wrecks (Velen)

Specific Encounter (Groups): Any Outlaw Hanse: Arthach Palace Ruins (Toussaint)

Vulnerable Against



Enemy Attacks

Weapon Swings: The mainstay of a human-sized foe's attack varies depending on the weapon (expect attackers to use swords, maces, hammers, and other sharp instruments of pain), usually with a hefty swing, and sometimes two in succession. Either react and hit them first, parry and retaliate, counter, or dodge (or roll) and attack back.

Two-Handed Attacks: Some foes carry two-handed swords, long hammers, maces, or pikes. These foes are more dangerous, and have a greater reach. Dodging is the best plan here, reacting just as the foe starts to attack. Dodge or roll to their flank and then retaliate.

Shield-Bashing: A shielded foe is obviously more difficult to strike, and also pushes you back with a bash that can knock you off-balance, stunning you. Simply avoid such confrontations by dodging or bashing back with offensive Signs like Aard.

Armored Foes: The toughest foes are wearing more impressive armor, but aside from their gleaming metal, techniques for slaying them are the same as for those wearing less armor. You may wish to knock these foes off the feet and skewer them to avoid more protracted combat.

Archers: They usually back up, firing arrows (one every few seconds). Prevent this by stepping to them, after which they swap their ranged weapon (bow or crossbow) for a sword, and attack with that.

The Best Battle Tactics

Humans and Nonhumans carry a variety of weapons, and can wear various types of protection, from light peasant clothing to full sets of the heaviest armor.

Holding your block button is critical to your continued well-being; even if you're surrounded, remaining in this defensive posture means you'll block human-sized foes' attacks (that aren't two-handed or involve a shield) even if your back is to them. Also utilize blocking and dodging, stepping away from an incoming attack after blocking it, then stepping back with a light or strong strike afterward. Block after each Finisher you perform too, if there are more foes to face.

Your most common fighting technique is usually to start with light attacks after spotting an opening in your foe's stance, after they strike, or after dodging or rolling to their flank. Such techniques form the basis of the Training section of this guide, and should be studied. You cannot parry the attacks of a human or nonhuman who uses two-handed weapons. Dodge or roll away from these attacks, and strike while they recover from their swings.

Against shield-bearing opponents, avoid taking sword swings at them unless you have flanked them, or they have committed to an attack of their own and are not prepared to block. Hammering at a blocked shield is a waste of time. Be wary of shield-bearers using their shields offensively. Shield bashes can stun you, leaving you extremely vulnerable to any follow-up attacks. If you see the wind-up for such an attack, evade or roll to safety. Do not try parrying or countering!

Do not attack recklessly. Counter melee strikes from one-handed weapon-carrying assailants to throw them off-balance, then score a heavy strike as they reel from the counter.

Humanoids wielding bows and crossbows are serious nuisances. Prioritize these foes if possible, running them down if necessary. If you cannot find or remove a ranged foe, use the terrain for cover while engaging other enemies. Or utilize protective abilities (such as Arrow Deflection) or Signs (such as Quen) to minimize or nullify arrow attacks. At higher Ranks, abilities such as Arrow Deflection can actually allow you to return perfectly-parried arrows back to the sender!

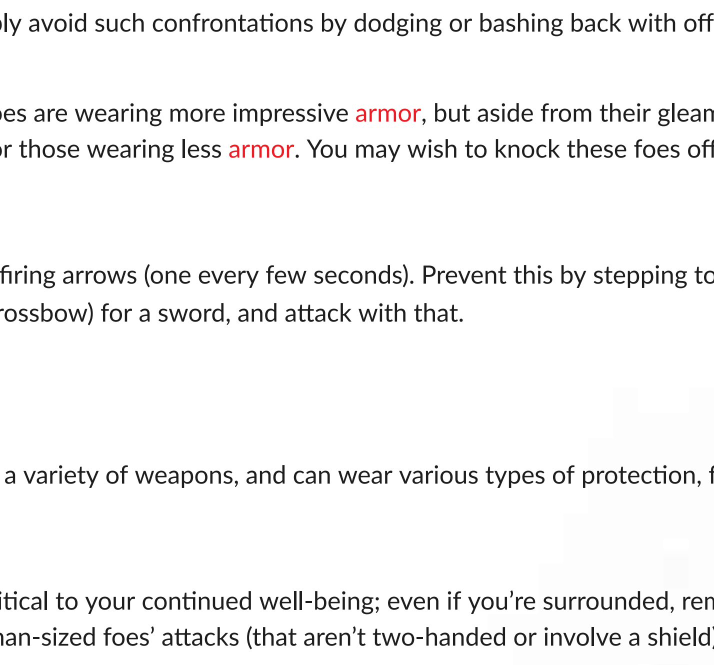
Combat abilities such as Whirl (Light attacks) and Rend (Strong attack) are extremely effective at culling multiple foes, though it is usually better to face them one at a time.

The use of Aard is encouraged: Blast foes off their feet, allowing you to skewer them when they are prone on the ground, or concentrate on other threats. Knock shield-bearers with Aard and quickly attack the opening. The use of Igni is recommended: Roasting multiple foes, or single entities with a focused Firestream allows you to burn through enemies effectively, even those carrying shields. The use of Axii is a good choice: Though it flummoxes a single foe at lower ability ranks, stopping an enemy and essentially confusing it into being temporarily defenseless is a great way to keep crowds under control, or focus on more dangerous threats. Remember at higher ranks, Axii can turn foes against each other, allowing you to watch bandit camps start attacking each other! Quen and Yrden are both excellent defensive choices, especially if abilities relevant to these Signs are used, such as Magic Trap (Yrden), which causes damage as well as slowing your foes. Exploding Shield (Quen) causes damage too, pushing foes back and sometimes knocking them down.

Terrain is often a factor in combat; attacking from above or below (for example, on stairs) doesn't really make a difference, but using the terrain to your advantage (luring foes into cramped corridors so fewer of them can attack you) is always a good idea. Terrain should be constantly evaluated during combat, so you don't get surrounded or trapped. Though having your back against the wall prevents foes from swarming you, are you competent enough to keep from being overwhelmed if you're standing in front of an obstacle? Remember you can always flee (or "retreat") and return to finish the job!

Crossbow bolts are a good idea to soften up foes (especially if you have associated abilities to strengthen this attack). Special bolts (such as explosive ones) are great, too. Bombs are excellent when facing multiple foes at the same time; lobbing a Northern Wind (for example) can freeze a host of enemies allowing you to concentrate on fewer foes at once. Otherwise, bombs are best when used to wound enemies before your blades and Signs finish them off.

Knocking down a foe is always preferred; even the toughest opponent can be skewered with a single execution once they are down on the ground; quickening your fights considerably!



THE WILD HUNT

Danger Alert

●●●○○

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

The fundamentals of fighting other humanoids still applies to the Wild Hunt.

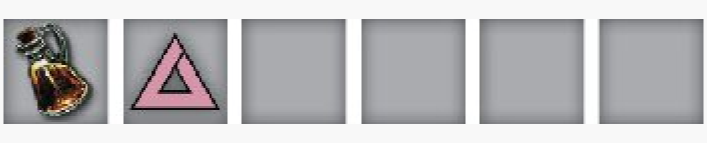
Loot: Weapons and Equipment

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Wild Hunt Warriors

Environments: The Wild Hunt can appear where they desire, thanks to their ability to manipulate space and time to their advantage.

Specific Encounter: Main Quest: The Battle for Kaer Morhen

Vulnerable Against



Enemy Attacks

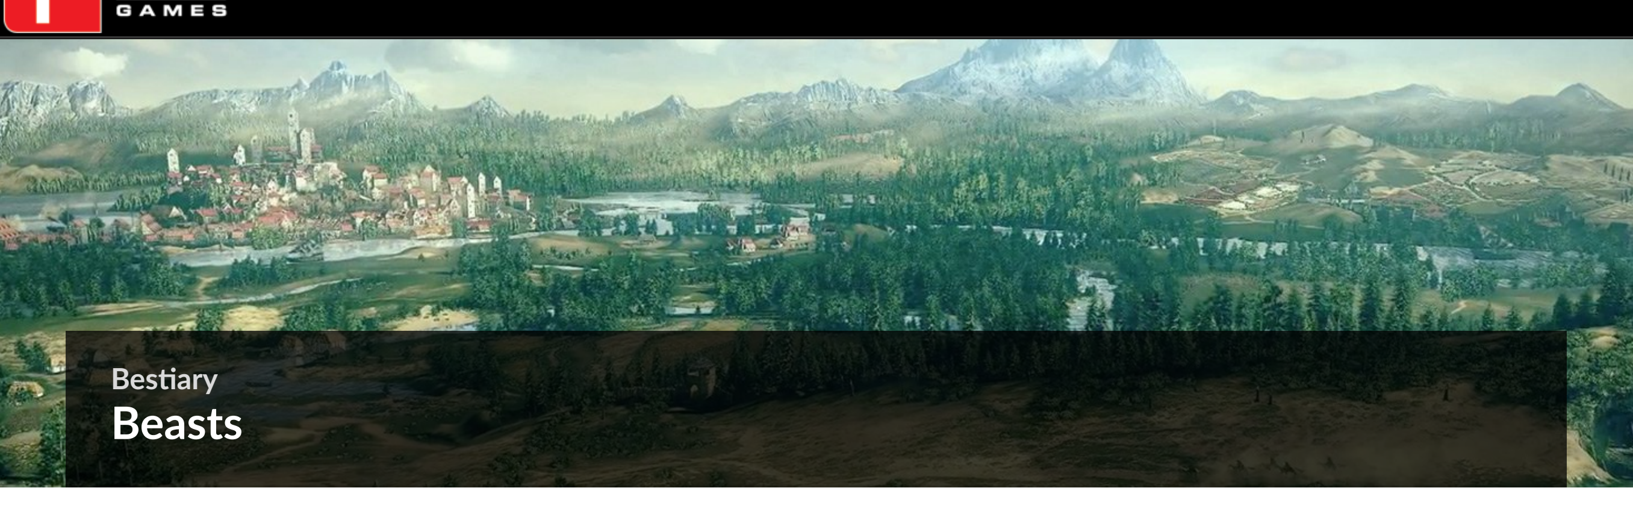
Though the Wild Hunt Warriors are taller and wield more frightening weapons than a motley bandit, their attacks are very similar, and are countered or avoided in exactly the same way.

The Best Battle Tactics

Wild Hunt warriors wear heavy, intimidating sets of armor, are taller than almost all humanoid foes, and are very sturdy opponents in a melee. Many wield large two-handed weapons with great ferocity.

Remember that you're utilizing a silver sword against these otherworldly elves, not a steel one! With this in mind, be sure you have a good supply of Elementa Oil; it is useful when damaging both the Warriors and the Hounds of the Wild Hunt.

Igni Signs improved with abilities (Melt Armor, Firestream, Igni Intensity) can greatly reduce the effectiveness of their armor. Do not underestimate the speed of a Wild Hunt warrior. They are just as quick to flank and strike as lesser-equipped humanoids. Aside from the differences listed previously, tackle Wild Hunt Warriors using the same tactics recommended for Humans and Nonhumans.



Bestiary

Beasts

Not every danger that stalks the land is an otherworldly nightmare. Beasts still prowl the Northern Realm; these are usually animals from a time when Fiends or Royal Griffins weren't the apex predators. Beasts have carved out their own niche, and can still be a threat.

BEARS

Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●●●○○

Solitary and surprisingly fast when disturbed, facing a bear is suicide, but flanking a bear is effective.

Loot: Bear Fat, Bear Pelt, White Bear Pelt, Raw Meat
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Bear, Brown Bear, Black Bear, Polar Bear, Cave Bear
Environments: Found in every major wilderness region of the world, with some sub-species unique to certain regions. Polar Bears, for example, favor colder regions, and are found more commonly in Skellige.
Specific Encounter: Hunter's Cottage, in northern Gustfields (Novigrad).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Charge: When a bear first sees you, or when you're at far or medium distance, it may launch a charge directly at you, with both front paws swiping as it reaches you. Sidestep this or face a stun, a stagger, and possible knocking over.

Paw Swipes: These mauling swipes are attempted with either front paw, inflict some nasty damage, and are the bear's main aggressive attacks. Though they can be parried (usually while you walk backwards), a better plan is to dodge or roll around them.

Snarling Gnash: The bear also likes to launch a biting attack along with its paw strikes, and this is heavily damaging. Roll or dodge it.

Ground Smash: When a bear stands on its hind legs, it is preparing to smash the ground with its forepaws. They can do this with such force that even a veteran Witcher can be knocked prone and savaged.

The Best Battle Tactics

Bears of any kind are sturdy foes possessing great Vitality, and terrible strength. Do not try to exchange blows with a bear, or face it head-to-head in combat.

Instead, dodge a bear's claw swipes and try to cut at its flanks or rear. Perfecting your dodge (or roll) allows you to escape a mauling, nimbly maneuvering to the bear's sides, where the majority of damage should be dealt. Mix in rolling if your dodges aren't reaching the flank or rear of the bear in time. The plan is to circle the bear until its lack of dexterity exposes its flank or rear to you, then strike!

Igni and Yrden are not explicitly vulnerabilities for a bear, but both these Signs have their uses when employed against one: Igni can set a bear aflame, temporarily stunning it and allowing for flanking strikes. Use this to augment the flanking strikes mentioned previously, as part of the optimal method of culling this creature. Aard can push a bear back too, and Axii can cause it temporary confusion. Yrden slows these beasts down enough to make evading their paws much easier. Employ this technique if you're having trouble reaching a bear's flank to inflict damage on it.

When a bear's flank is exposed, a strong attack (even a Rend) is preferred over lighter strikes; make the most of a stunned or confused foe. If your weapons have a good chance of inflicting critical hits, this helps remove the sizable vitality a bear possesses.

Due to the high strength of a bear's attacks, another useful Sign to employ is Quen, to prevent you taking sizable amounts of damage while you maneuver into position. Partner this with patience, as a well-timed retaliation is critical to striking this foe without being hit in return.

You can also elect to fight a bear from Roach, charging straight at the bear on your horse, swinging your blade into its hide, retreating to reduce the horse's fear, then turning and repeating this tactic.

Bears are territorial. Stepping into their domain can incite aggression, but it can be surprisingly easy to avoid a bear if you spot one early enough and move around it.

DOGS

Danger Alert

●○○○○

Danger Alert (Groups)

●○○○○

Frequency

●●●○○

A wild dog is seldom alone. Packs of three or more are common.

Loot: Dog Tallow, Raw Meat
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Dogs, Wild Dogs, Hanse Dogs
Environments: Found across Velen, Novigrad, Skellige (both in abandoned villages and in wooded areas), and within Outlaw Hanses in Toussaint.
Specific Encounter (Groups): The western side of Marauder's Bridge (Velen).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Bite And Leaping Bite: After emitting a snarl, a dog will make a short leap and bite at you, or less of a leap and a simple bite if very close to you. Listen for this snarl, and simply dodge or roll (usually backward) to avoid the attack. Or parry the bite.

Circling: While one dog attacks with a bite, others may tend to circle around you, before leaping in afterward. Simply keep an eye on all your foes, and block if you're worried about being struck.

The Best Battle Tactics

Assuming you're able to quickly repair your blade afterward, every one of a dog's attacks can be blocked by holding the block button down. This allows you to pick and choose when to strike rather easily, at the expense of your blade's quality.

Dogs like to circle you, readying for an attack. Play this game too, waiting for a hound to leap your way, before jumping to the side (dodging or rolling) and letting a light or heavy strike hit the dog before it recovers from its attack.

Aard is good for pushing back a pack of dogs, compared to other beasts of the world, the dog is lightweight. A well-timed Aard strike can knock a dog on its side, allowing a quick kill. All other Signs are also useful (Axii can bewilder a dog easily, for example); use them as you would in any other normal fight.

Do not underestimate the speed of dogs. While not particularly strong, they are fast, and packs of dogs can easily pick apart a careless Witcher through sheer numbers, and constant attacks.

B&W PANTHERS

Danger Alert

●●○○○

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●●○○

Frequency

●●●○○

Stealthy and vicious, panthers leap and claw their foes after surprising them.

Loot: Mutagens, Monster Claw, Monster Eye, Raw Meat
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Panther, Guardian.
Environments: Woods and scrubland across Toussaint.
Specific Encounter (Groups): The woods southeast of Gelenser Farm (Caroberta Woods).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Prowling: When engaged in combat, and usually in areas of undergrowth (woodland or scrubland), a panther may start to prowl, hiding itself and its vitality bar as well as becoming invisible on your mini-map. Counteract this stealthy approach by maintaining a visual on your foe or employing your Witcher Senses to "see" the sounds the panther is making and ascertain where she is.

Leaping Attack: After shortening the distance from prowling range, a panther will usually attempt a running leap which cannot be blocked and ends in an attack. Expect fast-moving running and aggressive mauling until one of you succumbs.

Leaping Claws: The leaping attack can end with claws, either a single swipe or a combination attack that has a change to apply bleeding damage. Dodging early enough stops the leap from connecting.

Bleeding Claw Combos: After a leaping attack, a panther will usually rake you with fast strikes using its claws (usually one or two swipes), which inflicts heavy damage and can cause bleeding. This can be parried, but it is better to counter.

Dodging: Panthers can swiftly dodge your more measured or slow attacks, so don't expect them to simply sit there and take your blades. They also tend to retreat to set up for another leaping attack as combat progresses.

The Best Battle Tactics

Panthers are extremely nimble and quick. While on the prowl in their native habitat, they can be difficult to spot. When they attack, they become an incessant and furious flurry of leaps and clawing that can be difficult to block. This is a dangerous predator that is reckless in melee combat and won't stop until it or its prey dies.

Unlike other beasts, panthers rarely retreat from melee combat, except to sprint away and try for another leap. After coating your blade in Beast Oil, your best bet is to tackle panthers in the same way as you would a particularly dangerous wolf, in terms of using bombs, projectiles, and ranged Signs before combat becomes up-close and personal. Then dodge any leaps and clawing, and when the panther is pawing at you, dodge and strike back or counter.

B&W H&S WILD BOARS

Danger Alert

●●○○○

Frequency

●●●○○

Packs of tusked pigs act both erratically and aggressively, and prefer to harass and prod before devouring their meals.

Loot: Boar Pelt, Boar Tusk, Raw Meat
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Boar, Wild Boar
Environments:Environments: Found occasionally in Velen, across Novigrad (particularly Gustfields territory), and in wooded areas of Toussaint.
Specific Encounter: The woods north of Brunwich (Gustfields).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Boars are able to maintain their speed throughout an entire fight; can knock down, surround and harass lesser warriors; and act more erratically than other beasts.

Erratic Running: Boars won't usually make a direct line when charging toward you, but instead circle or weave around before charging with their tusks. They also like to "wing" you as they pass with their tusks, and continue to charge about, making them difficult to react to. Quen is useful protection under these circumstances.

Charging Gore: Expect Boars to charge you from time to time, especially if you're preoccupied with one of their pack and don't notice another approaching swiftly. The subsequent strong tusk attack can knock you down. A swift dodge is necessary here.

Hind Leg Stomp: If you're burning boars with Igni or projectiles, they tend to run in a circle in a highly-agitated manner, kicking their legs out. These hind-leg strikes also occur if you try and strike a boar from behind (after the beast usually rears up). Obviously, avoid bladed attacks to a boar's behind, and watch a squealing boar as it careens chaotically; dodge to avoid additional damage.

The Best Battle Tactics

Though they sometimes live alone, boars usually appear in small groups of three to five. This means you should treat them as a pack and prepare accordingly (by scanning your mini-map and the area using your Witcher Senses to ascertain where all the foes are). As they maintain their speed throughout an entire fight, and are difficult to predict (they run to and from you constantly), you must be cautious so you're not surprised by a charge and gore that knocks you down. Expect to be surrounded and harassed.

Boars are susceptible to all Signs, bombs, and bolts. For those lacking finesse, you can quite easily single out a boar and concentrate on killing it with hammering light attacks, before moving onto the next in the pack. But the best idea is to approach a boar pack defensively (blocking and with Quen active), locating and isolating one, and then stunning it (Aard or Axii is useful here) and/or attacking from the front or the side. If you're surrounded, utilize crowd-control tactics (stunning or slowing boars with your preferred Signs or bombs) before resuming the "isolate and slay" plan.

WOLVES

Danger Alert

●○○○○

Danger Alert (Groups)

●○○○○

Frequency

●●●●●

Snarling furry beasts that hunt in packs of up to eight, and are more cunning than Dogs, Wolves can be worrisome in groups.

Loot: Wolf Pelt, White Wolf Pelt, Wolf Liver, Dog Tallow, Raw Meat
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Wargs, White Wolves, Wolves
Environments: Found across Skellige, Velen, and Toussaint
Specific Encounter (Groups): The hills northeast of Mill (White Orchard).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Bite And Leaping Bite: After emitting a snarl, a wolf will make a short leap and bite at you, or less of a leap and a simple bite if very close to you, just like a dog, though wolves tend to attack more frequently. Listen for this snarl, and simply dodge or roll (usually backward or to the side) to avoid the attack. Or parry the bite.

Dodging: Wolves are more nimble than dogs, and can sometimes dodge one of your attacks, so don't expect every strike to hit home (unlike offensive strikes against dogs, which usually hit home every time).

Circling: While one wolf launches biting attacks, others may tend to circle around you, before leaping in afterward. Simply keep an eye on all your foes, and block if you're worried about being struck. You can block even if the wolf's attack is to your side or rear.

A Pack Mentality: Packs of up to eight wolves have been known to tear lesser warriors apart, as they work much more as a team, one wolf biting before another, then another, keeping you on the defensive and attacking from all angles.

The Best Battle Tactics

Wolves are pack predators. They coordinate with each other to surround their chosen prey. Beyond the coordination, wolves are similar to dogs in how they attack. Search out wolves using your Witcher Senses and "see" their sounds. Then attack first, before the wolves start to act as a pack.

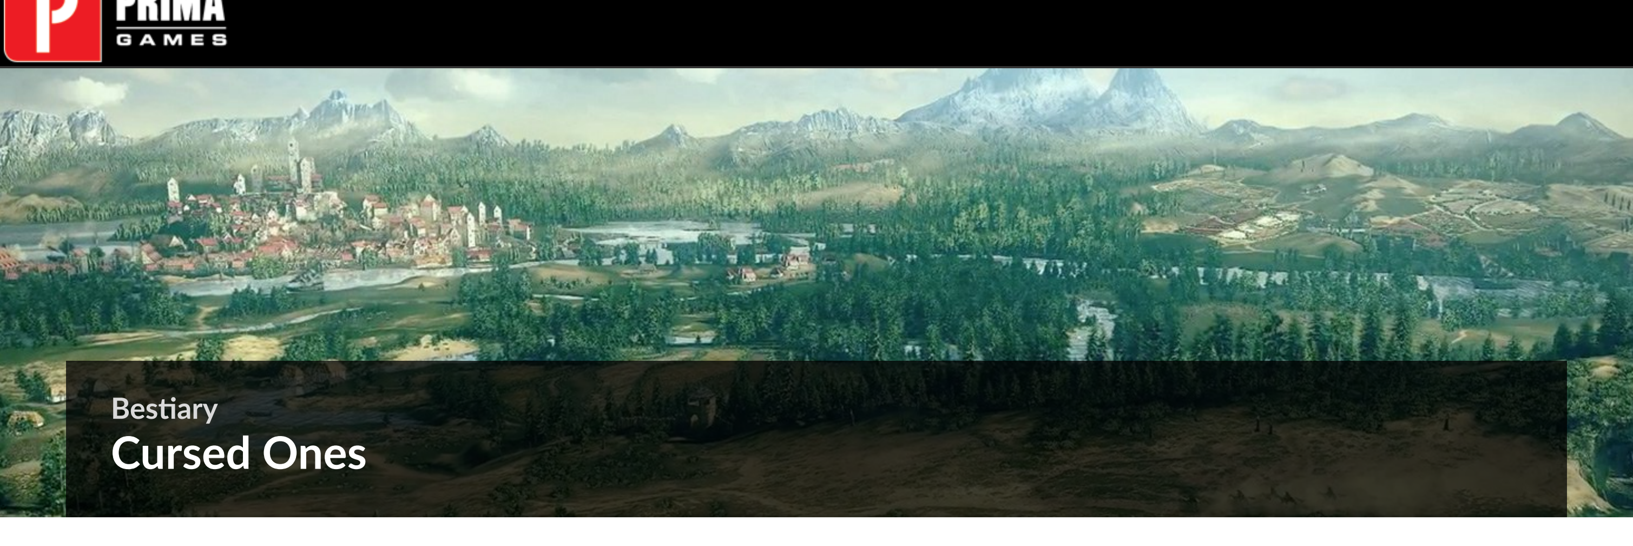
Pack leaders are typically the highest level wolf in a given pack, and are occasionally a warg as opposed to a regular wolf. It's worth targeting this foe first, so you aren't bitten by one while concentrating on other wolves, as the leader's attacks are more damaging. Other than inflicting more pain, wargs are no different to normal pack members.

If surrounded, Igni and Aard can drive off a pack, if just for a moment, allowing a Witcher some time to recover Stamina or regain control of a fight. Igni is usually preferable, as although both Signs can stun multiple wolves, Igni damages them with fire as well.

Another trick is to purposefully dodge and roll without using offense against multiple wolves, until they cluster together. Then quickly strike with Igni, setting all of them ablaze and stunning them; now mop up and deliver killing blows before they recover.

The real trick to slaughtering wolves is to keep continuously moving; dodging and rolling in different directions before stepping in with a swift light strike or two, and moving again.

Leshens are able to command wolf packs to aid them. Wolves summoned by leshens must still be fought with silver swords.



Bestiary

Cursed Ones

As befits the name, cursed ones are entities that have been transforms by magical means to take, by choice or not, an inhuman form. Their rarity compared to many other monsters (with the exception of the relatively common Archespores) may mean a Witcher is unprepared to face them. Do not make that mistake!

ARCHESPORES

Danger Alert

●●○○○

Frequency

●●●○○

A revolting, acid-spitting plant with root tendrils that do more than cause havoc to wineries.

Loot: Archespore Juice, Infused Dust, Monster Spore, Mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Archespore (yellow, green, black, all identically-named).

Environments: Vineyards, wooded areas.

Specific Encounter: The exterior of the Mere-Lachaiselongue Cemetery.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The Archespore is a stationary plant that can quickly submerge itself underground, before reappearing in one of its predetermined "bulb" positions. It utilizes a combination of melee and range attacks.

Archespore Varieties: Be aware of three variations of this plant monster: A yellow form with a single central stem that doesn't grow bulbs or move around, and remains stationary. A green form exists, which spawns up to three bulbs that it can maneuver between. A more dangerous black form has also been seen, which spawns up to five bulbs it can move between.

Constant Vigilance: An Archespore is more instinctual than clever; it constantly rotates its maw-like head toward you, so you're usually not able to slice it from the flank or rear.

Bulb Sprouting: The Archespore usually begins combat by sprouting up to five bulbs (depending on the variety), which should be seen as "escape options" it can maneuver to. Slash them and then quickly move away.

Bulb Maneuvering: Otherwise, the Archespore uses the bulbs to move between as combat continues, stopping you from slicing at the central stem, which is the only way to kill it.

Stalk Sweep (Melee): A wide arcing slash using the Archespore's whole body (two variations). Jump out of the way so you're not struck and possibly staggered.

Maw Attack (Melee): The plant's central maw is used to bite and strike you (three variations). This can be parried or dodged.

Acid Spit (Ranged): A medium to far-ranged attack, a stream of disgusting acidic spittle flies from the central maw. It can damage and poison you if it connects, so watch for the plant moving its head back before spitting and dodge.

Counterattack: If you succeed in striking the main stem of an Archespore three times, it quickly buries into the ground and the bulb it protruded from explodes, damaging you. Back off after three strikes to avoid this.

Suicide Bulb: The plant spawns between three and five bulbs around you which explode shortly afterward. Using Quen or rolling away from the bulbs lessens any damage you may receive.

Hiding Underground: With the exception of Aard, if you strike it with any Sign it burrows underground for a few moments and cannot be hit. Then it appears from one of its bulbs and continues combat.

Resistances: The Archespore is resistant to both poison and bleeding damage.

The Best Battle Tactics

The Archespore is a large, mutated plant, able to inflict both melee (bud stem) and ranged (acid spit) attacks. Though unable to move over ground, it changes position by using bulb-like ground blossoms and moves between each of them. If necessary, the Archespore can grow bulbs to either increase its moving capabilities or to damage you.

The most competent way to rid the general area of this mouthy plant pest is to destroy the bulbs spawned around the main plant stalk. This limits the plant's movement possibilities so you can more easily finish it off. Signs are less powerful than you might think, as all but Aard cause it to burrow underground, preventing follow-up blade attacks. Therefore, it is useful to use Aard to stun it, then slice the stalk up.

BERSERKERS

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●●○○

Frequency

●○○○○

Berserkers (shown in their beastly form) are known in Skellige legends as men who transform into bears when overwhelmed by battle rage.

Vulnerable Against

Loot: Bear Fat, Berserker Pelt, Raw Meat

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Berserker.

Environments: Skellige, Vildaaris' Village (Fornhala).

Specific Encounter (Groups): During Main Quest: King's Gambit (see page 232).

Enemy Attacks

Human Form: Expect all the attacks and defensive postures that a cunning bandit leader would possess.

Berserker Bear Form: Prepare for a larger, and more ferocious bear combat once a Berserker has transformed. All bear attacks are the same.

The Best Battle Tactics

A berserker begins as a human. Consult the section of the Bestiary devoted to Humans and Nonhumans (page 717), view the weaponry the berserker is carrying, and employ any and all tactics for defeating these foes as if they were a toughened bandit leader. Steel swords and Hanged Man's Venom do well against them, and any tactics learned from fighting other humans will serve you well here.

It is when they change into their berserker bear form that a silver sword, tainted with cursed oil, will show its worth. Be certain you read up on Bear combat (see page 718), as outside of anatomical differences, a berserker's bear form can be treated like fighting a real bear, save that these beasts are much tougher and more relentless. If you've invested in improving your Igni Sign, this is where the Melt Armor ability can really show its value. Be sure to slot it into play before encountering a Berserker.

BOTCHLINGS

Danger Alert

●●○○○

Frequency

●○○○○

Perhaps the most repulsive creature ever met, born of dead, unwanted babies discarded without a proper burial, their unformed flesh is twisted with hate, fear, and malice.

Loot: Necrophage Skin, Rotting Meat

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Botchling, Lubberkin

Environments: The fortified settlement of Crow's Perch.

Specific Encounter: Crow's Perch (Velen) during Main Quest: Family Matters (see page 159)

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Transformed Form: Assuming you choose to kill this creature, the Botchling transforms into a slavering beast not unlike a Ghoul or Alghoul. You would be wise to study the attack patterns of both these Necrophages, as these are the attacks the Botchling engages in.

Throughout the fight at Crow's Perch, wraiths also appear to complicate matters, and you are wise to prepare for this fight by reading up on their (quite different) combat tactics to ensure you're not overwhelmed.

The Best Battle Tactics

Your chance to fight this lamentable and gruesome creature comes while helping the Bloody Baron deal with his family matters. If saving the Botchling isn't what you deem appropriate, you have two courses of action: You can either attempt to kill the Botchling immediately (starting a fight), or you can use Aard to knock the Baron over while he carries the monster.

Should you choose to kill it and draw its blood, be prepared; it changes to a ghoulish appearance, and fights with similar ferocity. Watch it closely and be prepared to parry and counter any of its claw swipes (and utilize the Ghoul combat on page 739 of this Bestiary).

As you deal damage to it, the Botchling becomes enraged, growing spines similar to those of an Alghoul (see page 737 of this Bestiary). During this time, the Botching begins to regenerate at an alarming rate, and the spikes harm you should you attempt to strike with swords.

The Botchling is weak when Axii is cast: Use this weakness to pacify the monster, so its spines retract and it is kept in place while you circle around it to deliver punishing sword strikes (or Sign attacks if you wish). Axii also cuts off the rapid regeneration, enabling a reasonably straightforward takedown.

ULFHEDINN & WEREWOLVES

ULFHEDINN Danger Alert

Werewolves Danger Alert

●○○○○

Frequency

●●○○○

Creatures with both men and wolves inside of them, and taking the worst traits of each. Beware the full moon!

Loot: Werewolf Pelt, Werewolf Saliva, Werewolf Mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: King of the Wolves, Werewolf, Ulfhedinn

Environments (Werewolves): Found in Velen and Skellige, typically in dark, secluded areas. Most active and dangerous at night during a full moon.

Specific Encounter (Ulfhedinn): During Secondary Quest: In Wolf's Clothing (see page 423).

Specific Encounter (Werewolves): Prowling near the Ancient Oak, near Crookback Bog (Velen).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

These hairy, bipedal beasts have large claws, ferocious teeth, and extreme speed. Ulfhedinn are a breed of Werewolf found mainly in Skellige, and aside from being stronger than their continental brethren, an Ulfhedinn shares all combat traits of a normal Werewolf.

Lunging Claw Strike: Should the Werewolf wish to close the gap, it leaps from the ground in your general direction, landing with a huge and vicious clawing swipe. Dodge this to avoid being struck and possibly stunned; watch and dodge just as the Werewolf's feet leave the ground, or as soon after as possible. Dodging away, diagonally backward gives you the distance you need to avoid the landing and swipe.

Clawing And Double Clawing: At close and melee distances, the Werewolf tends to stand and swipe with his powerful claw. Or, he raises up both arms, and brings them down vertically with a double clawing move that is both highly-damaging and can stagger you, causing bleeding. Another timed dodge is required, usually when you see his arm (or both arms) raised up before the strike. There is a tiny opportunity to retaliate with your blades just after either claw attack, as the Werewolf recovers.

Bite Attack: After dropping to all-fours, the Werewolf launches a highly-damaging biting lunge. Look for the change in stance, then dodge as soon as you see all four claws on the ground to avoid being struck.

Regeneration: As combat continues, a Werewolf is able to regenerate vitality back, increasing the need to interrupt this and dish damage, so you aren't fighting a foe that continuously heals!

Near-Death Ferocity (Ulfhedinn): Near death, the Ulfhedinn becomes extremely dangerous, striking with increased strength.

Summoning Wolves: Werewolves also have the ability to summon Wolves, so prepare for combat with these beasts should you spot them arriving during a battle.

The Best Battle Tactics

These breeds of cursed ones are some of the fastest and most lethal. They can leap great distances at such speeds that it can be a challenge defending against them. Watch for the dual overhand claw swipe; it cannot be parried and causes grievous wounds and bleeding. Counterattacks against a Werewolf or Ulfhedinn can be difficult to time. It is best to use dodging footwork and evade them instead of parrying.

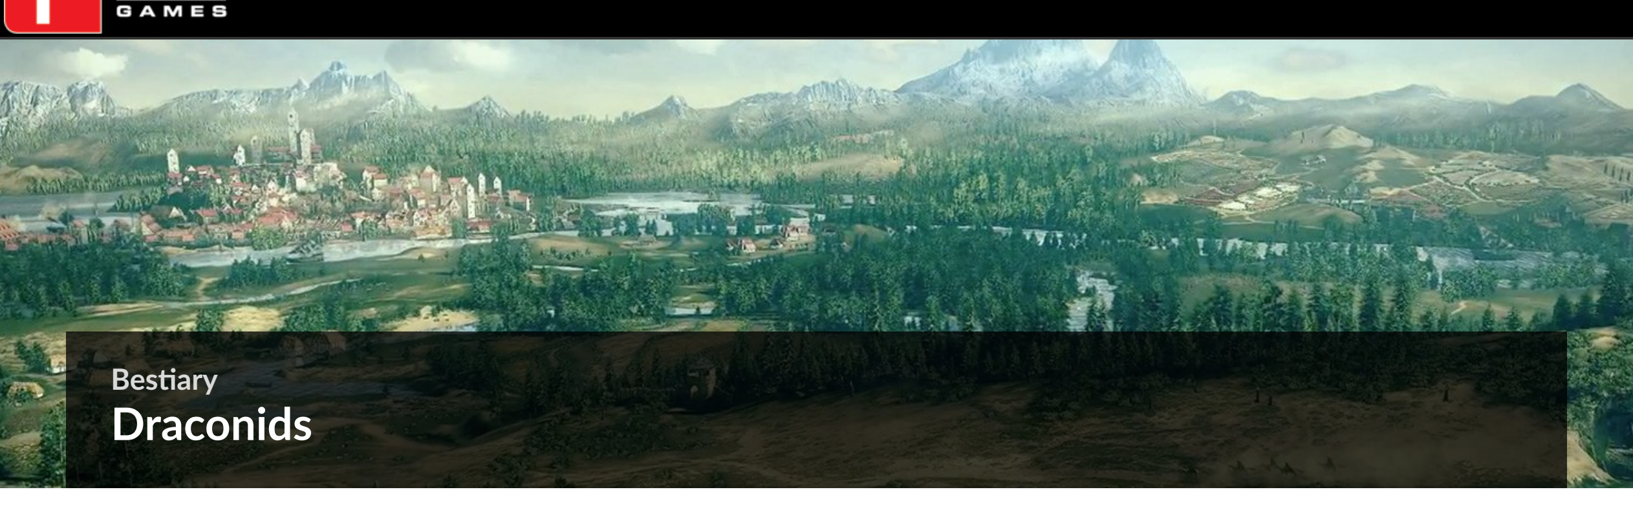
Yrden is of great use in avoiding their attacks, though their speed sometimes means they miss your circle of slowdown. Instead, employ Quen to shrug off the first attack a Werewolf inflicts; they are fast enough that you may not be able to parry or time attacks without being struck. Another good tactic is to cast Quen, and as soon as a Werewolf claws at you and Quen pushes the beast back, retaliate with two or three fast attacks, possibly followed by an expertly timed Rend.

When possible, use Igni. Setting these foes aflame can force Werewolves to stay still long enough to score more vicious strikes (hopefully with critical hits), usually on their flanks. Fire, bleeding, and poison effects can be used to slow the regeneration of these creatures.

Avoid fighting Werewolves in tight spaces if at all possible, since the speed of their assault can quickly overwhelm even highly skilled warriors. Werewolves have incredible reach, and you want to have the room to work with while fighting them. Explosive bolts for a crossbow can be useful for inflicting fire damage at greater range, should the Werewolf be at a distance. He won't be for long, though!



Bestiary

Draconids

The very mention of a dragon is enough to send a shiver of fear through even the most experienced Witchers. True dragons, however, are rarely seen these days, driven off by wars or slain by the mass-hunts of the past. It does not stop villagers from claiming that every small draconid they see is a dragon, though. Additionally, the ferocity of a basilisk or Forktail are no less threatening to human lives, for there is a good reason why Witcher Contracts for these monsters' heads are written, and why Witchers are sought to claim them.

Silver Basilisk Danger Alert

● ● ○ ○ ○

Frequency

● ○ ○ ○ ○

A Basilisk spits venom at its victim, weakening armor and causing damage over time. The Golden Oriole potion is essential.

Loot: Basilisk Plate, Basilisk Venom, Dragon Scales, Basilisk Mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Basilisk, Iocaste (Silver Basilisk)

Environments: Basilisks dwell within dark and damp locations – cellars, caves, and city sewers tend to be their preferred places.

Specific Encounter (Basilisk): The marshland north of White Eagle Fort (Treasure Hunt: Dowry, see page 555).

Specific Encounter (Silver Basilisk): The scrubland west of Trading Post, Toussaint (Secondary Quest: Mutual of Beauclairs Wild Kingdom, see page 536).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The Silver Basilisk (known as Iocaste), is a toughened variant of the usual Basilisk you encounter (though you have additional support from Crinfrid Reavers during this quest.

Flying Talon Grab: While airborne, or after leaping into the air, Basilisks may attempt to land devastating overhead blows with their claws. These can be parried or quickly dodged; rolling is preferable as you duck away from the outstretched claws.

A Rough Landing: The Basilisk drops down with a heavy thud onto the ground, which can stagger you. Rolling or dodging to the side, timing this so you can roll into the beast's flank to inflict sword damage afterward, is a good plan.

Wing Swipe (Left Or Right): Basilisks are skilled at using their wing and foot talons in a fashion similar to Cockatrices; sweeping them with hard-hitting claw attacks in either direction, which can cover a huge distance if necessary, and can stun you. Having Quen active to absorb such a strike, or rolling under the wings to the torso of the draconid to inflict damage is worth planning for. They have been observed to react to Witchers in combat by parrying sword strikes with their wings.

Spitball: A Basilisk can leap into the air, hover momentarily, and spit acid at their opponents from above. This action happens extremely quickly, and a Witcher should always watch for it, and dodge or roll to the side just as you see the Basilisk start to hover.

The Best Battle Tactics

Despite appearances, Basilisks are highly vulnerable to Igni, or other means of fire-starting, such as the Dancing Star bombs. A well-timed Dancing Star or Igni burst can not only bring down a Basilisk from the sky, but the beast will be so pre-occupied from being set ablaze that it has difficulty defending itself. This is usually better than aiming a crossbow at it, as (though effective) you run a greater risk of being struck by its poisonous projectile attack. An automatically-aimed crossbow bolt, just as the Basilisk swoops in toward you, is usually easier to hit with compared to manually aiming at greater distances.

Otherwise, using Quen (particularly Active Shield) to wound a Basilisk and cause it to land, and then performing a variety of quick rolling and slicing fast attacks to the beast's flanks, as well as stunning it temporarily with Aard, are all good choices.

Of all the fearsome flying foes, none are as comfortable on the ground as the Cockatrice.

Loot: Cockatrice Maw, Cockatrice Egg, Raw Meat, Cockatrice Mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Cockatrice, Shrieker

Environments: Cockatrices prefer hiding in caves and abandoned structures to rest and recuperate, but are aggressive hunters, seeking prey caught in open fields.

Specific Encounter: The sheep pasture land east of Cavern, and west of Yantra, in Gustfields territory.

Specific Encounter (Shrieker): Secondary Quest: Shrieker (see page 515).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The named Cockatrice (known as Shrieker), is a toughened variant of the usual Cockatrice you encounter.

Flying Talon Grab: While airborne, or after leaping into the air, a Cockatrice may attempt to land devastating overhead blows with their claws. These can be parried or quickly dodged; rolling is preferable as you duck away from the outstretched claws.

A Rough Landing: The Cockatrice drops down with a heavy thud onto the ground, which can stagger you. Rolling or dodging to the side, timing this so you can roll into the beast's flank to inflict sword damage afterward, is a good plan.

Wing Swipe (Left Or Right): Unlike the Basilisk, the Cockatrice has no projectile spit, but does have more skill at using its wings and feet talons in a sweeping and hard-hitting claw attack in either direction, which can cover a huge distance if necessary, and can stun you. In fact, Cockatrices seem to favor ground combat over airborne attacks. Having Quen active to absorb such a strike, or rolling under the wings to the torso of the draconid to inflict damage is worth planning for. They have been observed to react to Witchers in combat by parrying sword strikes with their wings.

The Best Battle Tactics

Cockatrices fight aggressively once a battle has begun. Take advantage of this aggression and ground them with Aard or Grapeshot. A crossbow can also bring them down to earth should they attempt to fly, but unlike a Basilisk or Griffin, Cockatrices tend to favor fighting on land.

A Cockatrice strikes with talon on its wings and feet, and its razor-sharp beak and tail tip. These blows almost always target vital regions on a victim, causing massive bleeding. A Witcher should have the Swallow potion on hand to counteract any wounds sustained in this manner.

Always try to flank a Cockatrice. Being in front of it exposes you to its beak and talons. It is possible, with excellent timing, to counter-attack blows from the wing talons or even from the beak, but you put yourself in grave danger when attempting this, without proper defensive protection. Add Quen while attacking the flanks or rear (usually after rolling out of the way as it lands), and really hammer your sword into this beast as often as you can, stopping to cast Quen again and retreating once it wears off or the Cockatrice is struck by it.

When grounded, a Cockatrice will try to remain close to its prey. Should you try to escape on foot, a Cockatrice can leap astonishing distances to tackle you. Another combat option is to employ Roach, and fight Cockatrices on horseback. Providing Roach doesn't become too frightened and throw you off, you can gallop at a Cockatrice, swing at it, and speed off, before repeating the plan.

The Dragon Of Fyresdal Danger Alert

As one might expect from the name, Forktails employ their large whipping tails to deadly effect in combat.

Loot: Forktail Mutagen, Forktail Plate, Dragon Scales, Raw Meat

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Forktail, Dragon of Fyresdal

Environments: The wilderness of Velen and Skellige provide adequate hunting grounds for these creature. Villagers fear the presence of Forktails as far inland as White Orchard. Their nests are found in secluded areas, overlooking their hunting territory, and resemble a bird's nest, though larger and accompanied by the occasional remains of humans or cattle.

Specific Encounter: The Guarded Treasure along the river, northeast of Boatmaker's Hut (Velen).

Specific Encounter (The Dragon of Fyresdal): Secondary Quest: Dragon (see page 527).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The named Forktail (known as The Dragon of Fyresdal), is a toughened variant of the usual Forktail you encounter.

A Rough Landing: The Forktail drops down with a heavy thud onto the ground, which can stagger you. Rolling or dodging to the side, timing this so you can roll into the beast's flank to inflict sword damage afterward, is a good plan.

Charging Headbutt: After landing, and at medium or close distances, the Forktail sometimes executes a quick charge, leading with its head. This can knock you back and sometimes off your feet. It is relatively easy to dodge around it.

Rearing Bite: While close or in melee range and on the ground, the Forktail rears up slightly, before clamping its mouth down and snapping at you. This can sometimes stagger, and parrying or dodging prevents you from being wounded.

Leaping Talons: While in the air, but also sometimes on the ground, the Forktail launches forward and rakes you with its terrible talons. Avoid or parry this.

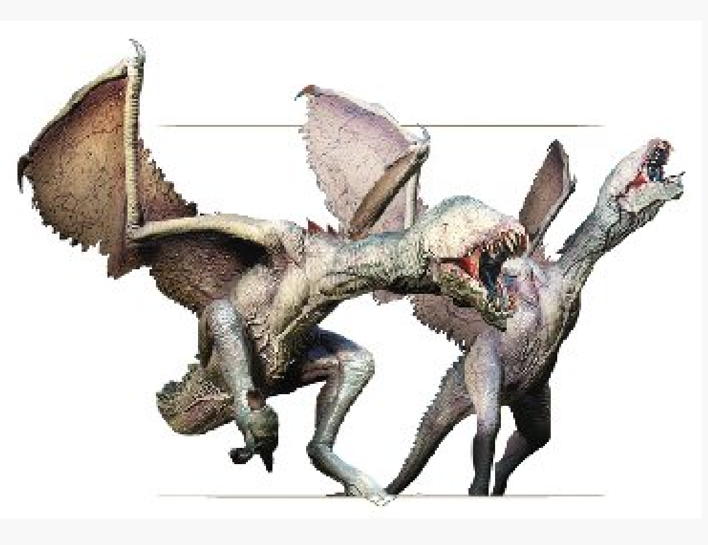
Tail Whip: Known for its prehensile tail, a Forktail can whip it around and batter you with it, which has a chance at poisoning you. Avoiding this by defending with Quen and fast dodging or rolls between sword strikes is the key to success here. The tail-tip stingers of a Forktail are highly poisonous, and as such, Golden Oriole is essential. Forktails will aggressively employ their tails in combat, and the only recourse is to simply evade these strikes.

The Best Battle Tactics

Like other draconids, the Forktail is a capable flyer. Bring it down to the ground with crossbow bolts or Grapeshot to start the real fight. Forktails are as aggressive as any Wyvern, making use of their foot talons to slash and kick at unfortunates they're hunting down.

As with many other draconid fights, judicious use of Quen before wading into attack a downed Forktail, and then attempting some deft dodging to the flank before slicing with quick attacks and retreating again, is the best way to whittle down a Forktail's vitality. The main difference between this and other draconid battles is the Forktail's namesake attack; the whipping tail strike usually allows you to reach its flank and rear more quickly than with other draconids, though the tail swipe is highly dangerous.

Proper dodging can not only evade a tail swipe, but place you in a perfect position to strike at a Forktail's vulnerable rear or flanks. But don't be so preoccupied with the tail of a Forktail that you neglect to attack its head. Bites from a Forktail come at near-lightning speeds, but they can be parried or even countered.



B&W SLYZARDS & MATRIARCHS

Danger Alert

● ● ● ● ○

Frequency

● ○ ○ ○ ○

The toughest of all the draconids, face this fire-breathing draconid in its eyrie atop the ruins of Fort Ussar.

Loot: Greater Glyph of Igni, Monster Wing, Red Mutagens, Dragon Scale

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Slyzard, Female Slyzard

Environments: Only one nesting pair of Slyzards has been spotted, atop the Fort Ussar Ruins in eastern Toussaint.

Specific Encounter: Contract: Bovine Blues (see page 542)

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Main Maneuvers And Charging Headbutt: The Slyzard mainly uses flight to close the distance between itself and you; expect most attacks to occur on the ground. When at middle range or close to you, the Slyzard sometimes executes a quick charge, leading with its head. This can knock you back and sometimes off your feet. It is relatively easy to dodge around it.

Fire Breath (Airborne): After its mouth lights up with heat that can melt metal, it flies to middle or close distances, lets forth a belching orb of flame, spitting this highly-damaging and flammable attack in your general direction. This ominous and dangerous projectile is shot while airborne; look for this, and time your dodge immediately afterward.

Flying Talon Grab (Airborne): Slyzards may attempt to land devastating overhead blows with their claws. These can be quickly dodged; rolling is preferable as you duck away from the outstretched claws.

Fire Breath (Ground): Look for fire in the mouth of the Slyzard when it lands; this can also occur at close range while engaging the beast in melee combat. It can severely roast you (with burning damage that hurts you after the initial fire), so once again, watch for the build-up of fire in the mouth of the Slyzard, and dodge around it so you're not caught in the blaze.

Scream Of Hot Air (Ground): While the Slyzard builds up its fire to breathe on you again, it can strike you with a screaming hot air attack. This can stagger you, after which it tends to bite or scrape at you with its talons or use its tail whip or headbutt, if you are farther away. Dodge or roll to the side to avoid this scream.

Rearing Bite (Ground): While close or in melee range and on the ground, the Slyzard rears up slightly, before clamping its mouth down and snapping at you. This can sometimes stagger, and parrying or dodging prevents you from being wounded.

Leaping Talons (Ground): While in the air, but also sometimes on the ground, the Slyzard launches forward and rakes you with its terrible talons. Avoid or parry this.

Tail Whip (Ground): Though not as deadly as a Forktail, the Slyzard has a tail whipping attack that cannot be parried, and this follows its Scream attack if you're close enough. Otherwise, the Scream is followed by a charge and rearing bite.

Resistances And Defense: Slyzards are resistance to both burning and freezing attacks. It also tends to take to the sky to avoid your melee attacks.

The Best Battle Tactics

An almost-white colored aggressive draconid, sometimes mistaken for a dragon, this beast favors close-range combat where it can unleash its powerful fire breath and screaming attacks that can stun you, creating an opening for its unstoppable tail attack. When it takes to the skies, it tends to swoop in and belch fireballs from above. Think of the Slyzard as a more potent Forktail or Wyvern, but quicker and more aggressive.

The most fearsome of draconids (and the fact you must defeat two of these foes at once) means extra caution is required when facing a Slyzard. Begin by employing Aard or Grapeshots to down the Slyzard, so you need not worry about being bombarded by fire from above. Aard is great for confusing a Slyzard long enough to roll in and strike; dodging and counter-attacking any bites and then flanking and striking before retreating again is the order of combat here. Apply an initial protective Quen shield about you to absorb the first attack of the beast and interrupt both the fire and scream-based attacks with Aard.

Royal Wyvern Danger Alert

● ● ● ○ ○

Frequency

● ○ ○ ○ ○

With venomous spittle, and more swiftness than a Basilisk or Cockatrice, Wyverns are mean and vicious airborne predators.

Loot: Wyvern Egg, Wyvern Plate, Dragon Scales, Wyvern Mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Wyvern, Royal Wyvern

Environments: Nesting Wyverns have been spotted across Velen, though these beasts are highly adaptable, and have been sighted across the entire Continent, and the Skellige Isles.

Specific Encounter: The lighthouse at Lornruk, in northwest Velen.

Specific Encounter (Royal Wyvern): Secondary Quest: Phantom of the Trade Route (see page 514).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The larger specimen (known as The Royal Wyvern), is a toughened variant of the usual Wyvern you encounter, during Secondary Quest: Phantom of the Trade Route (see page 514). In addition, a regular Wyvern is hunted during Contract: Patrol Gone Missing (see page 513).

A Rough Landing: The Wyvern drops down with a heavy thud onto the ground, which can stagger you. Rolling or dodging to the side, timing this so you can roll into the beast's flank to inflict sword damage afterward, is a good plan.

Charging Headbutt: After landing, and at medium or close distances, the Wyvern sometimes executes a quick charge, leading with its head. This can knock you back and sometimes off your feet. It is relatively easy to dodge around it.

Rearing Bite: While close or in melee range and on the ground, the Wyvern rears up slightly, before clamping its mouth down and snapping at you. This can sometimes stagger, and parrying or dodging prevents you from being wounded.

Leaping Talons: While in the air, but also sometimes on the ground, the Wyvern launches forward and rakes you with its terrible talons. Avoid or parry this.

Spitball: A Wyvern can spit acid at their opponents from above, or usually from a distance while prowling on the ground. This action happens extremely quickly, and a Witcher should always watch for it, and dodge or roll to the side just as you see the Basilisk start to cough up this poisonous attack.

The Best Battle Tactics

Wyverns are especially venomous, able to spit poison at their prey, or directly inject it from their tails. Golden Oriole potions are a must. Wyverns fly around their prey, well outside of crossbow range, before swooping in at great speeds to attempt clawing their target. Even a Witcher cannot stand their ground against that. It is best to get out of the way, though bolder Witchers can actually score crossbow hits as the Wyvern draws near.

Aard and Grapeshot can bring an airborne Wyvern to the ground (use these attacks just as the Wyvern begins to swoop it to strike you). Wyverns are tough enough to resist bolts from a crossbow, but more lethal munitions can still force the beast from the sky. After downing a Wyvern, additional grapeshots can stun this foe, allowing you to pile on the damage as the beast recovers. Such attacks should obviously occur at range. If you find a Wyvern is reeling from a bomb strike, you may find running in and casting Yrden to slow it down, before hammering home some sword slashes, is a good tactic.

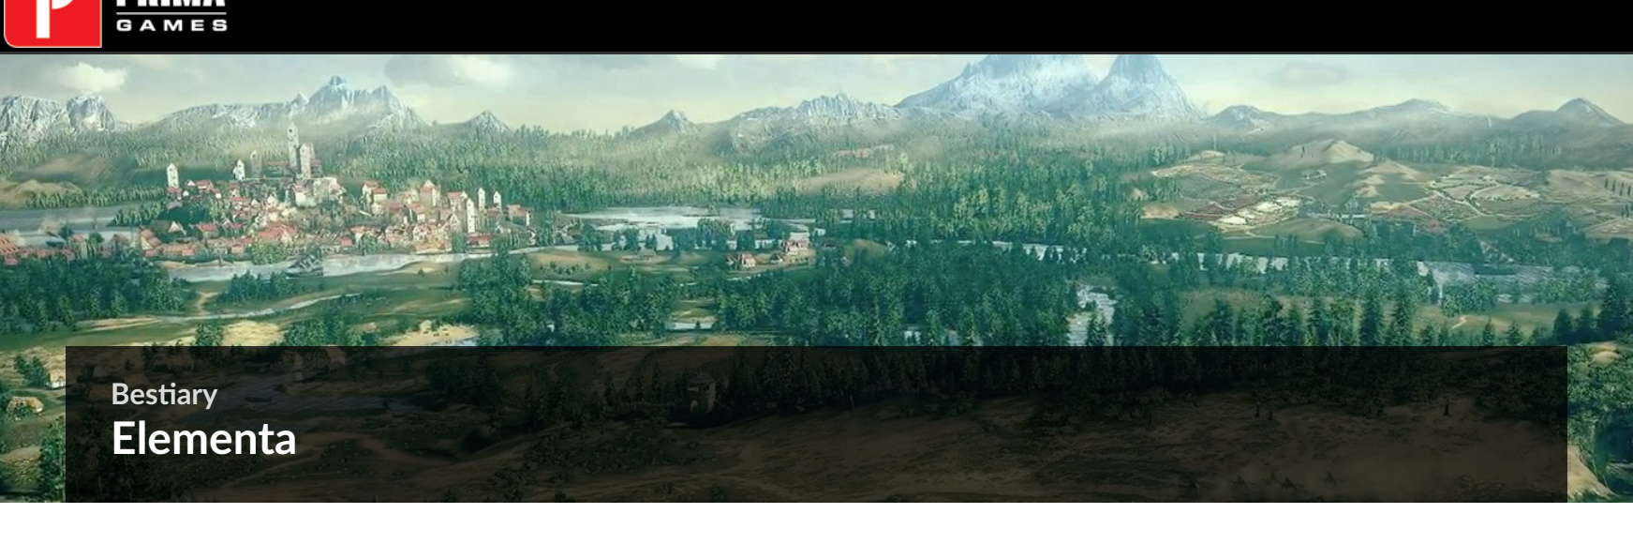
On the ground, a Wyvern prefers to strike with the talons on its feet, its tooth-filled maw, and its tail. It is possible to parry and counter-attack bites, but the consequences for bad timing are high. A better plan is to cast Quen, and wade into melee range; as the Wyvern slashes or bites you and Quen protects you, staggering the beast, press home with additional slashes. Also try to roll to the flanks or tail area and slash one or two more times before retreating out of its attack range (employing similar tactics to those if attacking a bear). Strong attacks are best timed when the Wyvern is reeling from a bomb explosion, or after it finishes an attack and is recovering.



Bestiary

Elementa

Elementa can be described as representatives of the raw, mystical power of the elements, given purpose or sentience. Some of these beings may be better described as the mistakes of prideful men, with more power and knowledge than sense. Elementa are some of the rarest monsters a Witcher can be expected to face, and among the most deadly.

DJINNS

Danger Alert

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

A fearsome spirit of the air, and one that grants wishes with a perverse nature about fulfilling these requests.

Loot: None

Sub-Species Or Named Variants: Djinn

Environments: On the icy vessel of Amos var Ypsis, during the quest.

Specific Encounter: Secondary Quest: The Last Wish (see page 225).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The Djinn is a powerful air spirit; a condensation of the power of that element endowed with consciousness and character; the latter usually nasty. Only one Djinn has been ever spotted in the Northern Realms.

Teleport: If you attempt to maneuver towards it, the Djinn enjoys teleporting around the ship's deck so you're further damaged as you try to reach it. Keep to the middle of the deck so the Djinn's teleport doesn't move as far, and use Active Quen (or calm the Djinn with Aard or Igni) as you approach.

Electrical Pulse: A swift burst of white energy, sometimes with a crackle of electrical discharge, sends you staggering backward. Push on regardless, or step behind the mast so you aren't struck by this.

Ice Shards: Sharp icy projectiles are conjured and thrown in your general direction. Dodge them or use active Quen to absorb them.

Lightning Bolts: A nasty blast of lightning crackles in one strong arc, or in multiple directions around the Djinn's orb. Use Quen to absorb the damage and quickly move in to strike, as the Djinn is temporarily prone after this attack.

The Best Battle Tactics

Fighting a Djinn is about working quickly, and not something you should attempt without good cause, or good pay. If you must face a Djinn, Dimeritium Bombs are too useful to go without, giving you the chance to close the distance without being frozen, burned, or electrocuted before you can get close.

Djinn can teleport short distances to escape harm, even after being affected by Dimeritium Bombs. You must be able to quickly react to this and continue to pressure the Djinn, using additional Dimeritium Bombs as necessary to continue suppressing spells.

The closer a Djinn is to death or capture, the more dangerous it becomes. The massive area of effect spells it can cast come faster, and it may teleport more often the more desperate it becomes. Aard and Igni signs empower a Djinn and greatly calm it down and make it easier to combat. Another excellent plan is to withstand the attacks it conjures using Quen's active shield, before rolling in, usually behind the floating face of the Djinn, striking it three times, and retreating again. Attacking just after the electrical storm starts to dissipate is a good plan. Also use the ship's mast for cover, moving so the mast is between you and the Djinn so the ship absorbs some of the attacks.

Therazane Danger Alert

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

Though plodding and slow, the sheer immensity of an Earth Elemental, and the damage it causes with its fists of granite, make this monster a frightening prospect to face.

Loot: Mutagens, Elementa Essence, Glyphs, Infused Shard, Fifth Essence

Sub-Species Or Named Variants: Earth Elemental, Therazane

Environments: Usually in magical traps; places such as long abandoned ruins, or former research laboratories once home to powerful sorcerers.

Specific Encounter: Ruined Tower (Signpost) in Crookback Marsh.

Specific Encounter (Therazane): Secondary Quest: Doors Slamming Shut (see page 521).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The named Earth Elemental (known as Therazane), is a toughened variant of the usual Earth Elemental you encounter.

Earth Elementals are constructed from mud, clay, sand and rock fused together with magic. While seemingly slow and ponderous, these creatures are exceptionally dangerous, and can withstand tremendous punishment. Therazane is a toughened variant of the usual Earth Elemental you encounter, but is otherwise identical in terms of its attacks.

Bellow: If an Earth Elemental sees you, or you've done something particularly unpleasant to it, the behemoth bellows its lack of pleasure at your antics. This has no effect on combat, unless you're mentally unprepared for such a sound.

Ground Pound (Single Or Double Fist): If an Earth Elemental jumps off the ground, move away as quickly as possible. The resulting shockwave knocks down any nearby victims in a large circle around the behemoth. Retreat!

Ground Stomp (Shockwave): You should be alert for Elementals to raise a foot high off the ground. What follows is a powerful ground stomp that sends a wave of rock piercing through the earth in a line before the Elemental. Dodge or roll to avoid being caught in this shockwave.

Rock Fist Swipes (Left And Right): Sometimes accompanied with a glowing yellow around each fist, the Earth Elemental loves to swing using either arm, hoping to connect. Dodging around or backing up avoids such a strike, which is seriously damaging if it connects.

Resistances: The Earth Elemental is resistant to poison and bleeding.

The Best Battle Tactics

Earth Elementals are a test of strength and endurance. Even with a silver sword coated in elementa oil, Earth Elementals can resist impressive amounts of punishment before crumbling, while being able to dish out frighteningly powerful blows with their fists. Dimeritium Bombs make these Elementals more susceptible to harm. They do not make them less dangerous. Strike once, twice if you judge it safe, then roll out of the way of an inevitable counterattack. Use heavy attacks for better damage output.

Though it is relatively easy to whittle down an Earth Elemental's vitality from a distance, increase your chances of success by employing Yrden. The hammer blows delivered by an Earth Elemental's fist can be avoided more easily using this Sign, and the Magic Trap ability allows you to damage this slow-moving foe as it is caught in your circular trap, and zapped by your ongoing magic. It is also possible to actually stagger an Earth Elemental with Aard, after which a dash in and strike before retreating is called for.

ELEMENTALS, FIRE

Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●●○○○

A form of fire and fury that reduces anything in its path to ashes in the blink of an eye. Poison does not touch it, and it does not bleed.

Loot: Golem heart, Elementa essence, Runestones, Infused shard

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Fire Elemental

Environments: Found in magical ruins. Mages have tried to create and control Fire Elementals, and often failed.

Specific Encounter: Within the ruins of Est Tayiar (Signpost) in Gustfields.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Fire is the most destructive of the elements, thus the aggressive lethality of the creature that embodies its essence should come as no surprise. Fire Elementals are forged in complicated magic rituals for one purpose—destruction. And they pursue this with murderous determination.

Ground Pound (Single Or Double): If a Fire Elemental jumps off the ground, move away as quickly as possible. The resulting circle of fire knocks down any nearby victims in a large wave around the behemoth. Retreat!

Fire Ball: During a particularly potent strike, a Fire Elemental sometimes lets loose a large ball of fire in your direction, which should be dodged or rolled away from.

Ground Stomp (Fire Wall): You should be alert for Elementals to raise a foot high off the ground. What follows is a powerful ground stomp that sends a wave of fire racing along the ground in a line before the Elemental. Dodge or roll to avoid being caught in this wall of fire.

Flame Fist Swipes (Left And Right): With a blaze of fire accompanying each swing, the Fire Elemental loves to swipe using either arm, hoping to connect. Dodging around or backing up avoids such a strike, which is seriously damaging (and inflicts additional ongoing fire damage) if it connects.

Resistances: The Fire Elemental is resistant to poison and bleeding, and in particular Igni and any fire attacks (from weapons, bombs or bolts); these should not be employed under any circumstances.

The Best Battle Tactics

Fire Elementals employ similar abilities to an Earth Elemental, with the key difference that fire enhances and empowers them. Being harmed by a Fire Elemental has effects beyond the immediate harm sustained, since they can light clothes and armor on fire.

Simply drawing close to a Fire Elemental is dangerous, due to the intense heat they constantly generate. The flames can be temporarily extinguished by Aard. Avoid Igni at all costs, this only empowers a Fire Elemental and re-ignites its flames.

Northern Wind bombs are highly effective, freezing the Elemental in place. Dimeritium Bombs are also excellent to employ as they can prevent it from using certain attacks. Otherwise, use heavy attacks to quicken the ultimate destruction of the Elemental.

●●●○○

Frequency

●●○○○

Hard as permafrost, deprived of sensitive organs, and gifted with incredible strength, these are mindless, bone-crushing automatons and cold as ice.

Loot: None

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Ice Elemental

Environments: Summoned by powerful sorcerers in combat, though some have been sighted in Skellige.

Specific Encounter: The watchtower northeast of Rogne (with Gargoyles), on Ard Skellig.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

A mass of frozen water animated by magic. Deprived of consciousness or independent will, this is boundlessly obedient to the orders of the mage who created it. These orders usually contain but one syllable—kill.

Bellow: If an Ice Elemental sees you, or you've chipped away at its frozen exterior without its approval, the oversized ice cube bellows its lack of pleasure at your antics. This has no effect on combat, unless you're mentally unprepared for such a sound.

Ground Pound (Single Or Double Fist): If an Ice Elemental jumps off the ground, move away as quickly as possible. The resulting shockwave knocks down any nearby victims in a large circle around the behemoth. Retreat!

Ground Stomp (Shockwave): You should be alert for Elementals to raise a foot high off the ground. What follows is a powerful ground stomp that sends a wave of icy rock piercing through the earth in a line before the Elemental. Dodge or roll to avoid being caught in this shockwave.

Ice Fist Swipes (Left And Right): Sometimes accompanied with a white glow around each fist, the Earth Elemental loves to swing using either arm, hoping to connect. Dodging around or backing up avoids such a strike, which is seriously damaging if it connects.

Resistances: The Ice Elemental is resistant to poison and bleeding.

The Best Battle Tactics

Ice Elementals fight similarly to Earth Elementals. They can strike with their massive fists, stomp on the ground to knock over their targets, or send a ripple of ice carving through the terrain at their foes. As with other Elementals, avoid attacking the Elemental from the front if you can, dodge its attacks as they cannot be parried, and make extensive use of Yrden to slow it down (particularly Magic Trap). Cast Quen too, so that first strike they employ is absorbed, as this foe strikes infrequently, but hits hard. Don't forget a Witcher's best chance is to toss a Dimeritium bomb; shrapnel made of this metal interferes with the workings of the spell that gives this creature life.

Danger Alert

●●●○○

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●●●○

Frequency

●●○○○

Those who do not take fright at the sight of these horned and winged monstrosities usually die shortly thereafter, torn to shreds by stony claws.

Loot: Gargoyle heart, Gargoyle dust, Elemental essence, runestones

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Gargoyles

Environments: Abandoned ruins and castles; beware of statues that allow you to move in close before they attack.

Specific Encounter: The watchtower northeast of Rogne (with Ice Elemental), on Ard Skellig.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Gargoyles are stone statues brought to life by magic in order to guard mages' laboratories and lairs from intruders. They are usually slow-moving on the ground, but take to the air and slam down onto the earth with amazing speed.

Flying Drop: The Gargoyle takes off into the skies, too quick to track, and slams down on the ground near you (or on top of you), stunning you as well as inflicting damage. An evasive roll as far from the position you were standing in before the monster took off enables you to dodge this potentially stunning strike.

Rock Throwing: Grabbing large, head-sized rocks and lobbing them with fast and accurate lobs, a Gargoyle can stun you with this projectile attack. Keep an eye on Gargoyles for just this reason (or keep constantly moving and dodging) so you aren't struck, wounded, and stunned.

Poison Breath: Do not linger in front of a Gargoyle for long, as they usually counter overly-aggressive Witchers with a belch from their mouths, a fetid cloud that can cause poison damage over time. Don't be greedy with your strikes, and back up or dodge when you see the Gargoyle's mouth open, ready to spew.

Ground Stomp (Shockwave): You should be alert for Gargoyles to raise a foot high off the ground. What follows is a powerful ground stomp that sends a wave of energy around the monster in a circle. Get caught in this and expect to be stunned. Dodge or roll to avoid being hit by this shockwave.

Fist Swipes (Left And Right): Gargoyles swing using either arm, hoping to connect, and sometimes throw a combination of up to four quick swipes in succession. Gargoyle melee attacks may not have the same reach as an Elemental's, but they cannot be parried. Dodging around or backing up avoids them.

Resistances: The Gargoyle is resistant to Aard and Igni Signs, as well as weapons inflicting poison and bleeding.

The Best Battle Tactics

A Gargoyle is nearly as sturdy as any Earth Elemental, but significantly faster, more versatile, and seemingly more intelligent. Aard and Igni are almost entirely useless. However, Yrden can slow a Gargoyle down, making it easy to evade their melee attacks, and allowing you to strike back.

But do not linger in front of the Gargoyle for long. They can counter overly aggressive Witchers by using their poisonous breath. The safety of range is fleeting versus a Gargoyle. They can not only throw rocks with a great degree of accuracy and power, but they can leap into the air and crash down atop or next to a Witcher with terrifying speed. Both attacks serve to harm and stun victims.

A Gargoyle can also stomp the ground with such force that they can stun and partially blind nearby threats. Dimeritium Bombs can weaken the defenses of a Gargoyle, but they do little to blunt their offense. Stay focused on limiting the damage they cause to you, while remaining mobile and ready to dodge the jumping attacks. Utilize Quen to protect you from their first, heavy-damaging strikes, then Yrden to limit a Gargoyle's more confusion leaping drop, and dash in with limited strikes before retreating.

Golems use no weapons. Their fists, weighing over a hundred pounds each, can crush solid granite with one hit. There is no sword that can parry it.

Loot: Golem Heart, Glyphs and Runestones, Infused Dust

Loot (Moreau's Golem): Powered monster tissue, Monster claw, Glyphs, Infused shard

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Golem, Moreau's Golem

Environments: Ruins, abandoned by those to created them.

Specific Encounter: Inside the Cavern (Signpost), east of Novigrad, in Gustfields.

Specific Encounter (Moreau's Golem): Scavenger Hunt: Grandmaster Griffin Gear (see page 605).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Moreau's Golem is a toughened variant of the usual Golem you encounter and exhibits a more powerful pounding move.

Golems are mindless matter brought to life by a spell. They obey their creator's orders without question. Once provoked, they will not tire of battle until they have either crushed their opponent or have crumbled into dust themselves.

Bellow And Fist Bump: Bellowing, or pounding both fists together, the Golem builds up energy before attacking. This doesn't affect you, but is worth watching for as it shows signs that the Golem is about to try a more devastating move.

Ground Pound (Single Fist): If a Golem jumps off the ground, move away as quickly as possible. The resulting shockwave knocks down any nearby victims in a large circle around the behemoth. Retreat!

Fist Swipes (Left And Right): Sometimes accompanied with a short jump beforehand, the Golem swings either arm, hoping to connect. Dodging around or backing up avoids such a strike, which is seriously damaging if it connects.

The Best Battle Tactics

Do not attempt to parry the punches delivered by a Golem. The sheer weight and power behind them reduces such thinking to suicidal tendencies. In addition, a charging Golem cannot be easily stopped, but a cunning fighter can use this lurching sprint to their advantage: Roll out of the path before striking in retaliation. As with the Elementals, a Golem can pound the ground with such ferocity, anyone standing near it is knocked prone.

Dimeritium Bombs are great to lob before you close in for more melee-ranged combat, as they block a Golem's magical abilities, reducing the potency of its attacks considerably. Ensure you keep the Golem within the radius of the exploded bomb.

Yrden is helpful when going toe-to-toe with a Golem, but remember that the Golem is merely slowed, not helpless. They can still fight despite Yrden's effects, and can interrupt your sword strikes with a single crushing blow. Prevent losing an inordinate amount of vitality by employing Quen (or Active Quen) so you can shrug off the first hit from a Golem. Since these foes strike slowly and with great damage, absorbing one of these strikes is extremely helpful, as it also allows you to continuously leap in, hit the Golem with multiple light attacks, and dodge or leap away again.

Fear the Red Moon, or when fighting these atrocities during blizzards or in glacial regions; they gain strength at these times.

Loot: Rotten Meat, Sulfur

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Hound of the Wild Hunt, Apiarian Phantom

Environments: Whereever the Wild Hunt goes, expect its hounds to follow.

Specific Encounter (Groups): Main Quest: Wandering in the Dark (see page 165).

Specific Encounter (Apiarian Phantom): Contract: The Apiarian Phantom (see page 518).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The named Hound of the Wild Hunt (known as the Apiarian Phantom), is a toughened variant of the usual Hound you encounter.

Born, or so some experts believe, of magic ice crystal, the hounds of the Wild Hunt race alongside their spectral masters. Like ravenous, feral dogs they are capable only of mindlessly attacking whatever crosses their path.

Spikes Of Ice: A little like your casting of Yrden, the Hound stops and summons a circle of protruding icy boulders that damage you as they appear, and protect the beast for a couple of seconds. Wait until the spell is over before continuing the fight.

Leaping Claw: The main attack the Hound exhibits is a leaping front claw slash using either front paw. It can be blocked or dodged, and then retaliated against as the Hound recovers.

Defensive Leaps: These Hounds are nimble, and able to dart back and forth around you, making it difficult to pinpoint or strike accurately. Axii (or waiting until the Hound changes to an offensive attack) stops this from becoming an insurmountable problem.

The Best Battle Tactics

These otherworldly hounds fight as viciously as wolves or wild dogs. They can be momentarily weakened by Axii, but only for an instant. Nevertheless, this is the time to launch an offensive series of strikes (then, or after the Hound finishes a Leaping Claw attack).

Usually, these hounds hunt in packs, and can quickly overwhelm the unprepared. Don't let them surround you; utilize Yrden to slow any hounds too close for comfort, and break away if needed. If Yrden can catch multiple hounds in one circle, throwing in a Dragon's Dream bomb and igniting the gas cloud with Igni can seriously damage an entire group of hounds. Another option is the Dimeritium Bomb, which causes havoc and prevents them from inflicting quite as much damage, or attempting their spikes of ice.

Back off from the hounds if they start forming icy spikes. These barriers will pierce through you if you attempt to strike. Environment also plays a key factor too; cold climates empower them, so take great care in combats in the cold. The icy nature of the hounds makes them perfect targets for Igni; roast these otherworldly beasts with regular Igni, Firestream, and even Dancing Star bombs that inflict fire damage. Then follow up with your Elementa Oil-covered silver sword strikes.

B&W PIXIES

Pixies might look like gentle, harmless creatures, yet in their case, the saying about appearances being deceiving fits all too perfectly.

Loot: None

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Pixie

Environments: Pixies dwell within the Fablesphere, a magical realm created by Duchess Anna Henrietta's uncle, and accessed via a book of fairy tales.

Specific Encounter (Groups): Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale (see page 338).

Vulnerable Against

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●○○○

Frequency

●○○○○

Enemy Attacks

The Pixies from the Land of a Thousand Fables were created to protect that magic place from intruders and ensure the ducal daughters, Sylvia Anna and Anna Henrietta, did not come to even the slightest harm. Thus whenever anyone else crossed the Pixies' path, it ended badly for them, for Pixies are aggressive, war-like creatures, created to kill, defend and fight until they can fight no more.

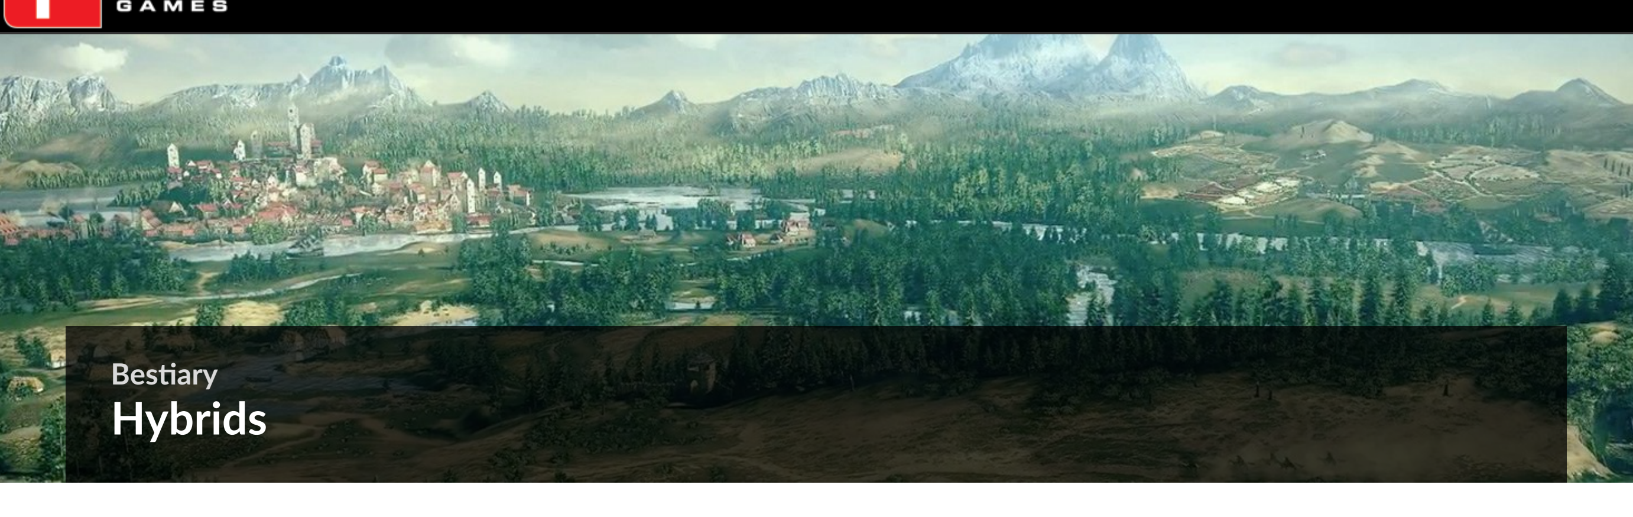
Jumping And Standing Swipes: A Pixie's main attack is to make a short leap, or simply step to melee range and make one or two quick slapping strikes with its ethereal, smoke-colored hands. This is damaging, but can be easily parried or countered.

A Group Mentality: Otherwise, Pixies cluster together in a group, taking turns to strike you and trying their best to swarm around you.

The Best Battle Tactics

Pixies only ever appear in a few specific spots throughout the Fablesphere, and when this crowd of around ten, pointy-hatted shadow gnomes spot you, they usually try to reach melee range and crowd around. React by raising your sword to block (much in the same way as you would react to a group of Wolves or Nekkers), and begin to systematically demolish them one after another. In-between, try constant dodging or rolling.

Your bladed attacks are good choices as Pixies don't tend to block; they are more of a nuisance than a fear-inducing foe. As they are magical, most Sign strikes work reasonably, but not spectacularly. Yrden isn't usually potent, but Igni can knock Pixies back and damage them while you maneuver so you aren't surrounded. Axii is good for stunning individuals, and bombs that cause blanket damage are reasonable, though Pixies swarm you, making projectiles difficult to throw and dodge.



Bestiary

Hybrids

Hybrids come in various shapes and sizes, but one of the key defining traits of these monsters is that they mix physical aspects of other creatures. A perverted merging of man and bird of prey could describe a Harpy, while a Griffin could be likened to an eagle mixed with a tomcat.

It is hard to say what is most repulsive about Harpies and their cousins: their hideous appearance, the overwhelming stench of rot and bird excrement that clings to them, or their bloodcurdling screech.

Loot (Erynia): Erynia Eye, Infused Shard

Loot (Harpy): Harpy feathers, Harpy talon, Harpy egg, Raw meat

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Erynia, Harpy

Environments: Found throughout the main Continent and Skellige. Erynias are found within large groups of Harpies. Harpy nests have been seen in abandoned fortresses along the rivers of Velen.

Specific Encounter (Harpies): The Harpy nest at Hindhold (Velen).

Specific Encounter (Erynias): The coastal path north of Redgill (Ard Skellig), with a flock of Harpies.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Harpies hunt in flocks consisting of a handful to up to twenty individuals. Though cowardly and cautious, Harpies fiercely defend their nests and will not hesitate to attack when outnumbering their foes.

Hard as it is to imagine, the Erynias found in Skellige are even more repulsive (and dangerous) than Harpies, their close relatives. Though well-rotten carrion is their food of choice, they will not turn up their noses at fresh meat, man flesh included.

A Flocking Swarm: Harpies attack in flocks, swooping in from all directions, and attempting to confound you. Don't let this happen by targeting one Harpy at a time, knocking it out of the air, and slaying it on the ground using the tactics listed below.

Swooping Talon Strike: These beasts fly to your head level and attempt to claw at you with talons before either landing or flying off again. These attacks can be blocked and countered (if you aren't actively engaging the aggressor), or countered so the Harpy falls to the floor, ready for execution.

Ground Talon Strike: Once a Harpy is on the ground, it can get up again and fly about, or remain and leap forward, slashing with arms or legs. Parry these attacks, or knock the foe off their feet for a quick skewering.

Bleeding Strikes: The Erynia's talon strikes are the same as a Harpy's, but are more damaging and have a chance to inflict bleeding damage.

The Best Battle Tactics

Harpies, Erynias, and all their varied sub-species, favor flying and hunting in flocks. Approach known nesting grounds with extreme caution.

When provoked, Harpies and Erynias begin circling a victim from above, swooping alone or in groups of two or three. If they are clustered close enough during a dive, you can catch multiple Harpies with area-of-effect abilities or bombs. Another option is to blow into the Hornwall Horn, which drops these flying monsters from the skies; particularly helpful while boating, or while you're recovering stamina in readiness for Aard or Igni.

Igni is effective against Harpies, lighting them on fire and bringing them out of the air. Yrden is good for situations where you are surrounded by many Harpies in close proximity. Harpies and Erynias often come to a hover in front of humanoid victims before lashing out with their talons. Use that moment to prepare a counterattack, or Aard to bring them to the ground. Quen is also good to cast, so you aren't struck from behind by a flying foe while preoccupied killing its brethren.

Like many flying creatures, a bolt from a crossbow, or a good blast of Aard, can be enough to ground a Harpy or Erynias. They can also be knocked out of the air with a well timed counter-attack. If a Witcher is close to one of these grounded creatures, they should take advantage of this moment of weakness and execute them quickly with a skewer while they lie prone on the ground, before they recover. This has the added benefit of being a one-hit kill.

If many individuals in a flock are converging around you, attempt to use Aard to blast a path to freedom. Grapeshot can also be used, but one should be mindful of the blast radius. Erynias are more vicious than their Harpy cousins, able to cause bleeding wounds that can overwhelm even a Witcher.

Loot (ArchGriffin): ArchGriffin mutagen, Infused shard, Amber dust

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Griffin, Royal Griffin, ArchGriffin, Opinicus

Environments: Griffins have been sighted nesting in Skellige, Velen, the wilderness near Oxenfurt, and even terrorizing White Orchard.

Specific Encounter: An ArchGriffin lurks atop Snidhall Isle, due north of Ancient Crypt (Ard Skellig).

Specific Encounter (Opinicus, ArchGriffin): Contract: The Creature from Oxenfurt Forest (see page 519).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Royal Griffins are toughened variants of the usual Griffin you encounter. The named Griffin (known as Opinicus, an ArchGriffin), is a toughened variant of the usual Griffin you encounter, with an additional acidic projectile attack. There are additional ArchGriffins to face, too.

Though still wary of main roads and towns (where folk with the means to hire a Witcher are likely to dwell), these half-eagle, half-wildcat creatures have gone from rarities to oft-encountered pests known throughout the Northern Realms.

Pounce And Clawing (Airborne): While airborne, or after leaping into the air, this foe may attempt to land devastating overhead blows with its claws. These can be parried or quickly dodged; rolling is preferable as you duck away from the outstretched claws.

A Rough Landing: The Griffin drops down with a heavy thud onto the ground, which can stagger you. Rolling or dodging to the side, timing this so you can roll into the beast's flank to inflict sword damage afterward, is a good plan.

Acidic Spittle: Watch for an ArchGriffin to cough up a disgusting ball of acidic goo, before dodging or rolling to ensure it misses you, and you're not poisoned by it.

Ground Charge Tackle: You can be staggered by a Griffin's extremely quick charging tackle, which occurs when it is on the ground, at mid or long distance from you. Close the gap so this maneuver isn't attempted, or swiftly roll to the side to avoid it.

Wing Swipes (Ground): Griffins use their wing and foot talons in sweeping attacks occurring in either direction, which can cover a huge distance if necessary, and can stun you. Having Quen active to absorb such a strike, or rolling under the wings to the torso of the Griffin to inflict damage is worth planning for. Remain active, as standing at a Griffin's flank ensures you're struck by these swipes.

Staggering Roar: A mighty screeching roar echoes from the beast's maw, staggering you and opening you up to further attacks by this foe. Constant aggression on your part usually means the Griffin hasn't the time for this. Otherwise, roll away from the soundwaves so you aren't stunned by them.

Beak Bite (Ground): The Griffin quickly snaps its neck and full body forward a few feet and bites at you. This should be dodged, or Quen used earlier to absorb the hit, which can stagger you.

The Best Battle Tactics

Griffins enjoy toying with their prey, swooping in from the skies and raking victims with their talons. A shot from your crossbow, or a well-timed Aard, can bring a Griffin to the ground, but this only means the fight truly begins.

Grounded Griffins make excellent targets for explosive crossbow bolts, just be sure to fire them from a safe distance. You can use Northern Wind bombs to freeze a Griffin in place, useful if you need a moment's respite. On the ground, a Griffin is still incredibly dangerous. They can roar at such a high pitch that even a Witcher can be put off balance, pounce from great distances claw and bite at prey.

From the sky, Griffins try to repeatedly claw at their targets as they sweep past, or attempt to dive onto their prey. ArchGriffins also spit highly corrosive acid at their targets, weakening armor and leaving the man under it exposed to its talons. Every slash or bite from a Griffin can cause serious bleeding. Counter this by casting Quen, or with Swallow potions to regenerate any wounds sustained throughout the battle.

When facing a Griffin on the ground, try to stay in and around the reach of your silver sword. If you are too far away, the Griffin may try to tackle you. This can be very difficult to avoid, and failing to do so could result in death. Watch the wings of a Griffin while fighting it on the ground. Each swipe from the wing talons is telegraphed by that wing being raised high. Try to evade to the flanks of the Griffin to score hits on its unprotected side for greater damage (using your swords as well as grapeshot bomb throws), with Quen absorbing the beast's first strike at you.

One should not be fooled by their fair appearance. Under the velvety skin of their arms lie muscles of iron, and blows delivered with their rear, goat-like legs or the thick horns on their head can easily crush bone.

Loot: Perfume, Flowers, Succubus mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Succubus, Salma Lilith

Environments: Succubi will try to live close to their 'prey', near towns and villages. Bolder Succubi have been known to inhabit cities.

Specific Encounter: Secondary Quest: Practicum in Advanced Alchemy (see page 416).

Specific Encounter (Salma Lilith): Contract: Deadly Delights (see page 520).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The named Succubus (known as Salma Lilith), is a toughened variant of the usual Succubus you encounter.

Succubi are motivated by an insatiable lust, engaging in sexual acts with any other humanoid species they encounter; their never-ending advances, though pleasurable at first, have pushed more than one man to madness or even death.

Fire Ball: If you're at mid or long range, you may receive a conjured ball of fire to the face, which should be dodged or absorbed using Quen. As a Succubus plays with fire constantly in battle, interrupting these attacks is the order of the day.

Fire Burst: If you manage to land a few impressive strikes, or you're remaining at melee range, you may be pushed back with a large ball of fire emanating from a Succubus' ample chest region. A possible stagger and fire damage are inflicted on you. Roll around or out of the way after three hits and don't be greedy to avoid this.

Fire Swipe: The most frequent of her strikes, she casts a diagonal cutting slice of flame from her hand, which sets you ablaze. Quen helps remove the fire, but in compact environments, closing the distance, or attacking from cover helps overcome this fire damage. Cast Aard to interrupt the spells before you're fried.

The Best Battle Tactics

If you're attempting a more cunning plan than simple bludgeoning, you may be able to talk down a Succubus instead of attacking one, regaling it with stories of Witchers seducing Succubi and allowing them to flee a region—stories normally only whispered among commoners. Should you choose to slay a Succubus, you must act quickly. Succubi are known for their surprising constitution and spellcasting. They can command fire with natural aptitude.

The simple flashes of fire that a Succubus calls upon can disrupt any sword technique you're capable of, and there is no defense, save for Quen or frantic rolls away from the flames. Relentlessness is key. A Succubus cannot be allowed to control a battle. Dimeritium bombs, explosive bolts, or Aard can disrupt their spell-weaving; Northern Wind can freeze them in place. You succeed in slaying a Succubus if you can pin one down and unleash a flurry of sword strikes.

SIRENS

●●●○○ Melusine Danger Alert

●○○○○ Frequency

Like skilled hunters setting out wooden ducks to lure in drakes, Sirens lure men near, using their own bodies as decoys. Once a naïve sailor gets within arm's reach of these beautiful creatures, their fair faces suddenly turn fang-filled with fish-like maws, and lovely tails promising unknown delights become sharp, death-dealing talons.

Loot (Siren): Siren vocal chords, Water essence, Shell

Loot (Ekhidna): Lock of Ekhidna hair, Water essence, Mutagens, Shell

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Lamia, Ekhidna, Melusine

Environments: Sirens can be encountered in coastal regions throughout Velen and Novigrad, though Skellige has the most prolific breeding grounds.

Specific Encounter: Ruined Inn along the south coast of Ard Skellige.

Specific Encounter (Melusine): Contract: Here Comes the Groom (see page 528).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The named Siren (known as Melusine), is a toughened variant of the usual Siren you encounter.

Sirens and Ekhidnas (the Sirens' more dangerous cousins) usually hunt in flocks making use of their numbers as well as their ability to move effortlessly through water and air.

A Flocking Swarm: Sirens attack in flocks, swooping in from all directions, and attempting to confound you. Don't let this happen by targeting one Siren at a time, knocking it out of the air, and slaying it on the ground using the tactics indicated below.

Siren's Swoop: A diving swoop with a swipe or claw designed to infuriate or confuse you while others of the flock prepare their own attack. This is the best time to cast Aard, shoot a crossbow, blow your horn, or otherwise drop the Siren to the ground with a counter. Otherwise, parry the attack. Once a Siren is on the ground, it attempts to fly away again; knock the foe off their feet for a quick skewering.

Siren's Screech: Supposedly a frightening scream, this has limited effects during combat, though it tends to coincide with a swoop (which helps you time a downing strike or counter). Otherwise, ignore the sounds you hear, and concentrate on downing and delivering killing blows, or quick three-hit fast combinations on hovering Siren foes.

Bleeding Strikes: The Siren's talon strikes have a chance to inflict bleeding damage.

The Best Battle Tactics

Sirens work in flocks, akin to Harpies and their ilk. They can also move as quickly in water as they do in the sky. When sailing in Siren-infested waters, expect to see the monsters transition from the seas to the air as they surround their prey. Remove any Sirens from attacking your boat with the use of the Hornwall Horn, or Aard. If you're fighting Sirens underwater, it is preferable to return to shore where you have many more combat options. Otherwise, automatic crossbow shots are the only way to slay.

Aard, Grapeshot, the Hornwall Horn, and a Witcher's crossbow are enough to ground a flying Siren (time it so the Siren is swooping in toward you). Sirens of all types are especially vulnerable to Igni, as well as any bombs that can set victims on fire. It is possible to counterattack a Siren as they dive out of the air at their target. This grounds them and can severely wound them.

Sirens prefer swooping on their prey, slashing with their claws or tails as they sweep past their victims. They rarely stay still in the air, but are at their most vulnerable when they do so. As with the Harpy, a grounded Siren is a Siren that has all but presented themselves for execution. Witchers presented with this opportunity should not hesitate, especially as the skewer kills the Siren with a single sword plunge, quickening combat considerably.

Wounded Sirens can produce an ear-piercing screech that stun their attackers. Other Sirens can use this moment to rescue their sister, diving in on the enemy and allowing their injured to escape.

Bestiary

Insectoids

The varieties of insectoid described here are notorious for the terror they have wrought upon unsuspecting humans and nonhumans across the land. The Arachasae are regular contracts for Witchers, due to their propensity for blending into a forest and preying on travelers, farmers, and the animals they tend to. Arachnomorphs increase the fear those have for a simple spider, now one hundred times the size. Giant Centipedtes have mandibles that can crush a goose. Kikimores are armored cave-dwelling monsters whose eggs must be destroyed. Endrega are the worst of the lot, possessing massive size and strength, and worse yet, organization.

At first glance, a stationary Arachas often looks like a part of the forest undergrowth, a fact it uses to deadly advantage when hunting. An armored Arachas is a true behemoth, using its enormous mass to knock over and trample its victims, before devouring their crushed remains.

Loot: Arachas eyes, Arachas venom, Chitin scale,Arachas mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Arachas, Armored Arachas

Environments: Arachasae stalk the caves and forests throughout the known world. Velen in particular has seen dangerous nests of this species take up residence in recent years.

Specific Encounter (Armored Arachasae): Guarded Treasure just north of the Cavern, in Gustfields (northeast of Novigrad City).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Powerful pincers, a maw filled with razor-sharp teeth and venom glands packed with deadly toxins constitute the Arachas' deadly arsenal. Since people and farm animals make up an important part of these creatures' diet, contracts on Arachasae in turn constitute an important source of Witcher coin.

An Arachas' only weakness is its soft, sensitive abdomen. Some Arachasae hide this under hollow tree stumps, while other, "armored" varieties exist which have grown a thick carapace that covers all the more delicate parts of their bodies. These usually protect the lesser Arachasae in their nests, and are tougher and larger than their otherwise identical Worker brethren.

(Jump And) Lashing Foreclaws: In close combat an Arachas is brutal and fast, its sharp foreclaws lashing out at incredible speeds, sometimes after it leaps to close the distance. Skilled Witchers can actually parry these strikes and temporarily stun them.

Rearing Bite: If both forelegs are raised and its mouth is exposed, the Arachas strikes with such force that no man, or Witcher, alive can hope to stop it. This happens with such speed that the attack may still strike true even if the victim knows it's coming. A dodge or roll is the safest option here.

Venomous Bite: Golden Oriole is a must against all insectoids. Bites from an Arachas are inherently poisonous.

The Best Battle Tactics

Once provoked, Arachasae of both varieties quickly attempt to close the gap between them and their prey, either by skittering across the ground, leaping at their victim, or by spitting a sticky secretion. Fortunately, Arachas Workers have minimal defenses to you just wading in with two or three quick attacks, and are usually of minimal threat (unless encountered in groups).

Yrden can slow Arachasae down just enough that melee combat is made simpler. Aard also causes the creature to drop for a second, allowing some follow-up strikes. Good bolts for a crossbow can be of great help against Arachasae, particularly when they open their mouths wide.

The armored variety of Arachasae can resist sword strikes even more than the other species. The carapace surrounding their abdomens are particularly problematic. Fortunately, all of the beast's attacks can be parried or countered, even if you're being attacked from the sides. Simply beware that their attacks are poisonous (so swigging down decoctions can quickly cause your toxicity levels to spike). Quicken your slaughter of any Arachas by employing weapons with armor-piercing capabilities.

hough all Arachasae are highly venomous, this breed produces an especially strong toxin.

Loot: Endrega chitin plates, Endrega heart, Glyphs, Endrega embryo, Mutagens, Venom extract, Chitin scale

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Venomous Arachas, Harrisi

Environments: Venomous Arachasae, like other members of the species, favor caves or forests.

Specific Encounter (Arachas, Venomous Arachas): Hermit's Cave, southwest of Harviken, on the isle of Faroe (Skellige)

Specific Encounter (Harrasi): Contract: Missing Brother (see page 509).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The named Arachasae (known as Harrasi), is a toughened variant of the usual Venomous Arachasae you encounter.

Venomous Arachasae produce colossal amounts of this toxin and deploy it during combat in many ways. Before striking, a venomous Arachas will cover its pincers and teeth with a thick coating of this deadly liquid. It will then squirt the venom at its to its opponent to weaken it, and once locked in direct combat, will continue spraying the noxious ooze all around itself, meaning every breath brings its victim closer to death.

(Jump To) Lashing Foreclaws: In close combat an Arachas is brutal and fast, its sharp foreclaws lashing out at incredible speeds (sometimes after a jumping charge to close the distance). Skilled Witchers can actually parry these strikes and temporarily stun them.

Rearing Bite: If both forelegs are raised and its mouth is exposed, the Arachas strikes with such force that no man, or Witcher, alive can hope to stop it. This happens with such speed that the attack may still strike true even if the victim knows it's coming. A dodge or roll is the safest option here.

Webbed Spittle: The Arachas, when it spots you from a distance, may unravel a large stringy ball of webbed spittle that coats you, and drags you to its mouth maw. A dodge or roll prevents this.

Poisonous Spittle: The Arachas can gob a large horizontal fan of poisonous spittle, this is highly dangerous if you aren't prepared to react to venom, though it can be rolled under if you're quick enough.

Poison Cloud: If you're attacking or close to the Venomous Arachas, it sometimes deflates the giant poison sac on its back, clouding the area around it in thick poison. This is obviously detrimental to your health, so utilize Golden Oriole, have a great toxicity constitution, and roll or dodge when you see the sac puff up before it deflates.

Poisonous Bite And Clouds: Bites from an Arachas are inherently poisonous, but the additional poisonous clouds and sprays make these variants very dangerous to the unprepared.

Venomous Arachasae usually have additional drones to help guard it, usually Arachasae but sometimes Endrega.

The Best Battle Tactics

Like other members of this species, venomous Arachasae use prehensile feelers to grab and immobilize their prey. When attempting to fight such a creature a Witcher should drink Golden Oriole, which will reduce his body's vulnerability to poison, and then attack from a safe distance with crossbow or bombs before dealing the finishing blows with a silver sword enhanced with a coating of insectoid oil.

The poison a venomous Arachas secretes during combat is so toxic, simply breathing the fumes around it is enough to kill the average man and threaten the life of a Witcher. Therefore, fighting this variety of Arachasae up close requires Golden Oriole.

Venomous Arachasae are best engaged from afar, leveraging bombs and the highest quality crossbow bolts to weaken the threat. Engage with a silver sword only when the gas sac on the back of the Arachas is emptied to avoid a spray of poison. They're also fond of spitting venom at distant targets. Otherwise, employ the same techniques utilized during Arachas and Armored Arachas combat, with Yrden to slow the beast down, and Igni to set it ablaze, which can cause it to struggle temporarily. Quicken your slaughter of any Arachas by employing weapons with armor-piercing capabilities.

ARACHNOMORPHS COLOSSI Danger Alert (Groups)

Arachnomorphs, as distant, post-Conjunction cousins of common spiders, strongly prefer deep, dark caves and unfrequented sodden swamps.

Loot: Monster Blood; Monster Hair; Monster heart; Venom extract; Chitnous shell; Lesser Green Mutagen, Lesser Blue Mutagen; Lesser Glyph (Colossi only).

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Arachnomorph, Arachnomorph Colossi

Environments: Discovered in subterranean, and usually soggy cave systems underneath the farmlands, woods, and hills of Gustfields, in northeast Novigrad.

Specific Encounter (Arachnomorphs and Colossi): Bloodrot Pit (unmarked cave), southeast of Hunter's Cottage in Gustfields.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks (Arachnomorphs)

Arachnomorphs rely primarily on their speed and their superior numbers when encountered in a group. Arachnomorphs are almost impossible to catch up to. They usually attempt to surround you, and as soon as one Arachnomorph manages to entangle you with its web attack, the others quickly move in to cause you harm as you struggle.

Ranged Web Spittle (Ranged): Projectiles of disgusting, sticky web are spat from the central maw, and can entangle you, causing you to become temporarily immobilized. React with some swift dodging or rolling to prevent becoming incapacitated. While entangled, enemy attacks can still be parried; just hold down the parry button while caught in the web.

Bite And Pounce (Melee): Swift knocks with their front legs, or quick darting bites and butting are normally inflicted when you're entangled, or when this foe is out of your viewing range (if you're surrounded, expect these attacks from behind). Parry or dodge and roll to avoid these.

Retreat: An Arachnomorph can move more quickly than you and uses this to aggravate you into charging after it as it dashes backward, allowing others in the group to aim their sticky webs at you. Be patient and less aggressive so you don't fall for this trick more than once!

The Best Battle Tactics (Arachnomorphs)

When facing down these overgrown spiders, three types of attack should be at the forefront of your aggressive tendencies: Yrden, freezing attacks, and burning. An Arachnomorph affected by Yrden will be completely paralyzed, and applying freezing (via imbued weapons or bombs like Northern Wind) or burning (via Igni, bombs, or items) to a spider will slow or stop it long enough for you to reach it. Additionally, an Arachnomorph that has taken damage will be stunned long enough for you to continue attacking it.

Arachnomorphs will attempt to surround you, always keep their distance unless they are attacking, and are quick enough to keep out of your attack range when being chased. Use signs (Aard, Axii, or Igni) or bombs (that freeze or burn) to stun or stop the Arachnomorphs and allow them to be attacked. Once an Arachnomorph is attacked, press home the advantage; continue attacking it as foe is stunned. During this time other Arachnomorphs will continue to surround and attempt to entangle you.

Enemy Attacks (Arachnomorph Colossi)

Accompanied by regular sized Arachnomorphs, larger colonies of these creatures are ruled by an immense Colossi variant. Its lunging attack can cover large distances, it isn't as easily stunned, has a large vitality pool and increased damage. It is also much more aggressive; almost eager to scuttle and attack you! In addition to attacks that a regular Arachnomorph can attempt, a Colossi has the following:

Lunge (Ranged): An impressive lunge from mid-distance, usually attempted by this foe when you're entangled. It hits hard, and should be parried.

Quick Combo (Melee): Many swift biting or mauling attacks in a row at close range, which can knock you down. Parry these or dodge them.

The Best Battle Tactics (Arachnomorph Colossi)

After taking care of the smaller Arachnomorphs, you should focus on stunning then damaging the colossi. Focus on stunning this gigantic foe with Axii or Igni when you're close enough. Slow it down with Yrden beforehand. The stun won't last as long on this large specimen, so step in quickly, deal as much damage as you can before it counterattacks and skitters away. Forcing the Arachnomorph against a wall helps keep it close enough to more easily stun, then attack the monster. Always be ready to dodge out of the way of its lunging attack then quickly dart in to inflict some damage yourself before the Arachnomorph runs away again. It shall soon yield!

ENDREGA DRONES

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●○○○

Frequency

●●●○○

Endrega males (called 'drones') are gluttonous creatures whose only aim in life is to eat, fight and reproduce. Yet when venturing outside their nests, these aggressive hunters attack any and every creature they come across.

Loot: Endrega heart, Endrega chitin plates, Venom extract, Chitin scale

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Endrega Drone

Environments: Found in or around caves or abandoned structures across Velen and Skellige. Nests can be found in caves or secluded forested regions, typically within reasonable distance of potential food sources.

Specific Encounter (Drones): Hermit's Cave, southwest of Harviken, on the isle of Faroe (Skellige), with a Venomous Arachas.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Drones are easy to identify thanks to their distinctive, cone-shaped abdomens. Unlike other Endregas, they can attack from a distance, sending out volleys of poisoned quills. As with all of their kind, bleeding has no effect on them and insectoid oil does them great harm.

Poisoned Quills Volley (Ranged): A launch of poisoned dart-like quills that can damage as well as raise your toxicity to unsafe levels. Quen or dodging, or closing the gap so Drones are forced to attempt melee attacks, is the best course of action.

(Jump And) Lashing Pincers: Sharp mandibles lash out at incredible speeds, sometimes after it leaps to close the distance. Skilled Witchers can actually parry these strikes and temporarily stun them.

Rearing Bite: A dodge or roll is the safest option when an Endrega rises up and quickly launches forward with a pincer or biting maneuver.

Immunity To Bleeding: This creature ignores any additional bleeding damage your attacks may usually inflict.

The Best Battle Tactics

Endrega drones can shoot poisoned quills at distant targets from their abdomens, or attack with their pincers. Golden Oriole can neutralize the poison and prevent aggravated damage from the wounds. Drones are extremely aggressive and territorial. Once they get close, they try to stay close. If multiple drones are present, Northern Wind bombs can halt one or two of the beasts, giving you a moment to regain control of the situation. Yrden is also useful at containing drones.

Endrega do not bleed as profusely as men and Witchers do. It takes several good swings to crack their natural armor.

ENDREGA WARRIORS

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●●○○

Frequency

●●●○○

When confronting more dangerous foes, Endrega colonies unleash their larger, stronger members—the so-called Warriors. This caste lives only to fight, and gets ample opportunity to do so while defending the colony's borders or conquering new territory.

Loot: Endrega heart, Endrega chitin plates, Venom extract, Chitin scale

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Endrega Warrior

Environments: Found in or around caves or abandoned structures across Velen and Skellige. Nests can be found in caves or secluded forested regions, typically within reasonable distance of potential food sources.

Specific Encounter (Warriors): Faroe isle, southeast of Trottheim, in Skellige.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

An Endrega Warrior's main weapon is its long tail, which is tipped with a club-like growth and spiked with venomous quills. Powerful abdominal muscles allow it to swing this tail with enough force to kill most lesser opponents in one blow. Endrega Warriors also use their mass and strength as a weapon by charging their opponents in an attempt to knock them over. As invertebrates with sectioned carapaces, Endrega Warriors do not bleed profusely, yet recoil in great pain when hit with a blade coated in insectoid oil.

Tail Lash: The Endrega Warrior spins around, whipping its tail into you; unless you quickly dodge or parry you face heavy damage and a chance to be poisoned.

(Charge And) Lashing Pincers: Sharp mandibles lash out at incredible speeds, sometimes after it leaps to close the distance. Skilled Witchers can actually parry these strikes and temporarily stun them.

Rearing Pincer Snap Or Bite: A dodge or roll is the safest option when an Endrega rises up and quickly launches forward with a pincer or biting maneuver.

Immunity To Bleeding: This creature ignores any additional bleeding damage your attacks may usually inflict.

The Best Battle Tactics

Warriors are as vicious as Endrega Drones, with the added danger in the form of their poison barbed tail. The tail can counter a Witcher's swordplay with ease, and Warriors are known to advance on an enemy with the tail first. As with other Endrega, the Warrior strain can strike quickly with its jaws and forelegs. It can also charge headlong into the enemy in an attempt to knock them off balance. Slow them down considerably using Yrden, then drop Northern Wind bombs or follow up with oil-coated swordplay.

ENDREGA WORKERS

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●○○○

Frequency

●●●○○

Workers are the most frequently encountered caste of Endrega. Within the colony their duty lies in building nests and cocoons, acquiring food and caring for eggs and larvae. When threatened they summon Warriors to aid them, yet if forced to defend themselves they will—and do so surprisingly well.

Loot: Endrega embryo, Endrega heart, Venom extract, Chitin scale

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Endrega Worker

Environments: Found in or around caves or abandoned structures across Velen and Skellige. Nests can be found in caves or secluded forested regions, typically within reasonable distance of potential food sources.

Specific Encounter (Workers): Two nests can be found in thee wooded Monster Nests northeast of Ursten (Novigrad).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Endrega Workers are most often found traveling in groups of half-dozen or more members. They move slowly, yet when attacking, they are capable of covering the distance to their victim in the blink of an eye. Like all of their kind, Endrega Workers are highly venomous. Their usual tactic is to surround their enemy and attack him from several sides at once. Like all insectoids they do not suffer particularly from bleeding, yet are caused great harm by insectoid oil.

Acid Spew: From a distance of several paces, a stream of revolting acidic bile is forced at the target, which is damaging and poisonous. A dodge or roll avoids this spittle.

(Charge And) Lashing Pincers: Sharp mandibles lash out at incredible speeds, sometimes after it leaps to close the distance. Skilled Witchers can actually parry these strikes and temporarily stun them.

Rearing Pincer Snap Or Bite (Poison): A dodge or roll is the safest option when an Endrega rises up and quickly launches forward with a pincer or biting maneuver. Any biting is toxic.

Immunity To Bleeding: This creature ignores any additional bleeding damage your attacks may usually inflict.

The Best Battle Tactics

The pincers and forearms of a Worker are venomous, but they can be parried to open the Worker up to further attacks. Workers can be surprisingly troublesome to inexperienced Witchers, thanks to the speed with which they can use their claws. Sidestep their initial attacks to bring their flanks within reach. Slow them with Yrden, or attempt Aard or Igni to stun and damage them and fend off groups at a time.

You may also find yourself close to an Endrega hive, with numerous egg sacks to destroy. Aard or Igni are your best methods here.

Giant Centipedes are enormous, insect-like monsters which can be found in many places in the world, but are particularly common in the lands (or more precisely, under the lands) of Toussaint. There they often dwell in close comity with Shaelmaars; Giant Centipedes feed on the small creatures which eat Shaelmaar dung. A rare variety of Giant Centipede dwells in underground lairs and owes its name to its unusual, pale white coloring.

Loot: Chitinous shell, Monster blood, Monster tooth, Monster heart, Giant Centipede discharge, Giant Centipede mandible, mutagen, Monster carapace

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Giant Centipede, Pale Widow

Environments: Vineyards, wooded areas, and underground cavern complexes throughout Toussaint.

Specific Encounter (Giant Centipedes): Monster nests just southwest of Astre Castle Ruins (west Toussaint).

Specific Encounter (Pale Widows): Secondary Quest: Turn to Face the Strange (see page 476).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Giant Centipedes: These are dynamic and fast enemies, commonly occurring throughout the Duchy of Toussaint. Hard, chitinous armor covers nearly the entire body of a Giant Centipede. Sticking out from under this carapace are rows of hooked limbs. Giant Centipedes are able to bury into the ground with shocking speed, only to then appear back on the surface in another place. Once they select a target, they will circle it determinedly, trying to get close enough to deliver a blow. They attack primarily with their powerful mandibles, but they also possess glands allowing them to spew acid.

Pale Widows: Some scholars raise Pale Widow Giant Centipedes in laboratory conditions for the properties of their albumen, which makes an excellent base for the brewing of mutagenic potions. In all respects, they offer a similar, but slightly more challenging fight, as they are a little tougher than the more common Giant Centipede.

Sweep Attack (Melee): A wide arc slash with whole body; parry or dodge this, and expect to be staggered.

Mandible Attack (Melee): A basic biting attack performed directly at an opponent. Expect to be wounded and poisoned if struck by this. Parry or dodge to prevent it.

Burrowing And Emerging: After submerging, the Centipede emerges directly under you, dealing damage with a possible knockdown. Watch for the mound of dirt that precedes its emergence and stun it with Yrden when it appears. Aside from burrowing and emerging in different positions, this foe is stationary.

Toxic Spit (Ranged): At medium or far range, the Centipede spits toxic fluid at you, poisoning you and and dealing small amount of damage. If it misses, the toxin leaves a small poisonous cloud that disappears after a short time. Step into it, and your toxicity level rises.

Leaping Attack (Ranged): At medium range, this monster jumps from it's current position toward you, before hiding underground at your position, ready to emerge.

Defensive Posture: Try attacking its back, and it parries every physical sword attack due to its hardened armor. If struck two or more times, it coils up. After some time, it performs its unrolling attack.

Unrolling Attack (Counterattack): If you strike this foe after it has emerged and while it is in a coiled defensive position, it quickly unrolls with a wide arcing slash that deals damage and knocks you down. So don't attack it when you see it rolled up.

Resistances: This foe is resistant to poison and to physical attacks aimed at its back.

The Best Battle Tactics

Planning the slaying of these oversized worms takes patience, considering their ability to burrow and their toxic nature. The best tactic is to set up Yrden in the place where the Centipede is going to emerge from. When it bursts from the earth (usually where you were standing), it becomes paralyzed for a few seconds (within your Yrden spell), allowing you to inflict damage.

It also submerges after being struck by Igni, Aard, or Axil, allowing you to coax it into a burrowing maneuver, before setting an Yrden trap under your feet, before it emerges. You can also employ a more standard attack pattern of hitting the Centipede until it rolls up, before avoiding the counterattack, but it is hard and takes a long time, and the beast's counterattack has a wide and long attack range.

Loot: Chitinous shell, Kikimore discharge, Monster carapace, Monster heart, Monster pincer, Green mutagens

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Kikimore Warrior

Environments: Warriors are only found in swamps or cave systems that support multiple Workers, which they control.

Specific Encounter (Workers and Warriors): The Monster Den south of Dun Tynne Castle, and southwest of Dun Tynne Hillside.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

They are covered with thick, hard armor which easily deflects blows from even the sharpest sword. Kikimore Warriors are protected by swarms of Workers which obey their orders until they are themselves eradicated.

Attacking Movement And Defenses: Warriors are slower than their smaller Worker brethren, but have a high armor and vitality. They are herd creatures, and should be tackled in the same way as Endregas. They can sidestep, but mostly head straight for you and engage you with melee strikes. If you strike one a few times, it starts to attack with ferocity that usually forces you to retreat.

Jump And Melee Mandible Strike: Expect quick pincer attacks from the front mandibles of a Kikimore Warrior. This damages you (sometimes significantly compared to a Worker's pincers), and usually poisons you. Sometimes the Warrior leaps at you before extending pincers. Parry or dodge to avoid being struck (timing your counter or dodge just as the creature begins to jut forward), and back away from any residual poison.

Acid Vomit: An unpleasant frontal secretion coats you in poisonous bile, which increases your toxicity, and should be dodged or rolled away from.

Push Back (Counterattack): If struck multiple times, expect a Warrior to push you back with front pincers, countering your subsequent sword attacks, and allowing others in the group an easier time when striking you. Nimble stepping in and out of combat negates this.

Resistances: They are completely immune to the effects of the Axii Sign.

The Best Battle Tactics

When grouped with Workers, the smaller specimens tend to crowd and prevent you from attacking the Warriors, as well as attempting their burrowing tactics. Clear a path and slay the Warriors to prevent the Workers' more potent burrowing tactics from occurring. The strategies you used to slay Endrega come into play here. Obviously, crippling the Workers' main burrowing attack by slaughtering any Warriors first, using Igni and armor-piercing weaponry to get the job done. They are vulnerable to fire (from Igni as well as weapons, bombs, or bolts), as well as oils and bombs that harm all insectoids.

KIKIMORE WORKERS

Danger Alert (Groups)

●●○○○

Frequency

●●○○○

A single Kikimore Worker can be easily killed by even a child. It is rare indeed, however, to come across an isolated individual, for Kikimore Workers usual move in groups of a few to a dozen or so members. The only defense against a swarm of Kikimores available to a normal person is to flee. And not even that is guaranteed.

Loot: Kikimore discharge, Monster carapace, Monster heart, Monster pincer, Green mutagens

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Kikimore Worker

Environments: Workers can be found either in caves or occasionally infesting swamps and vineyards across Toussaint. Nests are also encountered, but very rarely, along with three or more of these scuttling creatures. Larger groups are controlled by Kikimore Warriors.

Specific Encounter (Workers and Nest): The Vineyard infestation south of Dun Tynne Castle.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Kikimores form colonies, making them similar to communal insects such as ants. Kikimore Workers take care of hunting food and bringing it back to the nest, while Kikimore Warriors defend the nest against attackers. Kikimore Workers listen to orders given by Kikimore Warriors. Eliminate the Warrior guiding a swarm, however, and the Workers will disperse and cease digging. Kikimore Workers are nimbler and quicker than Warriors, but far less hardy and vicious in battle.

Burrow And Jump Attack: When grouped with a Kikimore Warrior, the Workers constantly burrow under the terrain, impervious to Signs, and move toward you in a straight line before emerging with a jumping attack. Then they burrow again. Kill the Warrior, and the Workers do not perform this move, switching to melee attacks only.

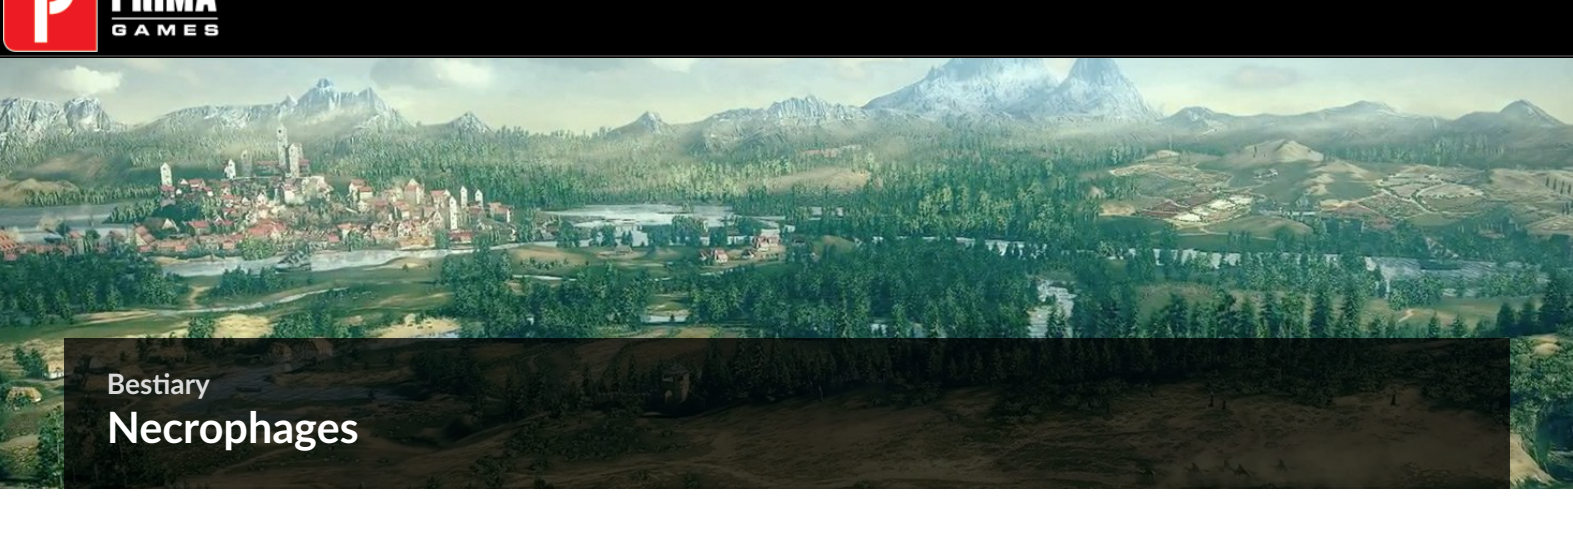
Attacking Movement And Defenses: When on the ground, Kikimore Workers move in swarms, can sidestep, but mostly head straight for you and engage you with melee strikes. If you strike one a few times, it starts to attack with ferocity that usually forces you to retreat.

Mandible Strike: Expect quick snipping attacks from the front mandibles of a Kikimore Worker. This damages you (but not as significantly as a Warrior's pincers), and usually poisons you. Parry or dodge to avoid being struck, and back away from any residual poison.

Resistances: They show complete immunity to the Axii Sign, and when they dig tunnels, they are invulnerable to all the other Signs as well. Poison also does them no harm.

The Best Battle Tactics

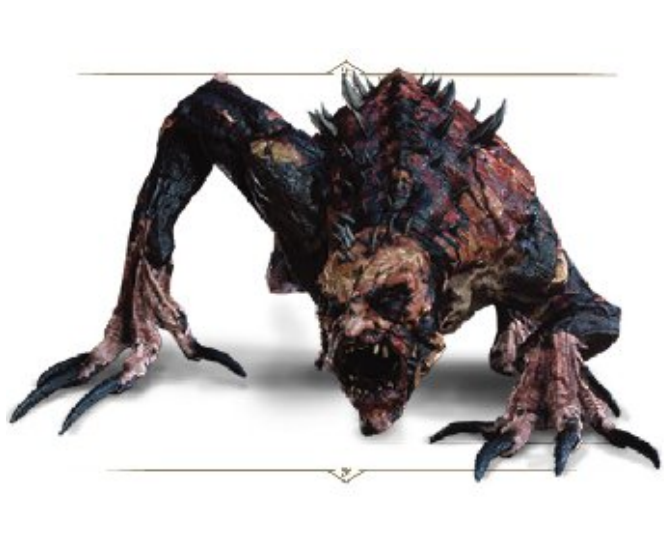
Quicken your slaughter of either Kikimore variant by employing weapons with armor-piercing capabilities. A good method for fighting them is to use the Igni Sign to temporarily immolate and immobilize them, as well as oils and bombs meant to damage insectoids. The tactics you used to slay Endrega come into play here. Obviously, crippling the Workers' main burrowing attack by slaughtering any Warriors first is a sound tactic.



Bestiary

Necrophages

Local legends have painted NecropHages as the dead risen, cursing and hungering for the living, but this is far from the truth. Though it is correct that where war, death, and pestilence go, NecropHages inevitably follow. Defined by an insatiable lust for flesh (living or dead), the various species of NecropHage have seen a population explosion as wars have ravaged the Continent.



ALGHOULS

Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●●●○○

Ghouls seem to possess wits enough to at least know a brighter mind when they sense one, so let Alghouls lead their packs. When encountering such a group, the Alghoul should be eliminated as a first priority.

Loot: Alghoul bone marrow, Alghoul claw, Rotten meat
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Alghoul, Cemetaur
Environments: Battlefields and any location where a large number of corpses can be found in shallow graves or left out to rot.
Specific Encounter: The Calveit Watchtower, on the river delta just southeast of Ferry Station, in Velen (with Ghouls).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Alghouls differ from normal Ghouls in size, strength, coloring and, most importantly, intelligence. Whereas Ghouls and Graveirs are primitive creatures unfit to plan even the simplest ambush, Alghouls and their kindred (such as Cemetaurs) are capable of forethought, and are thus much more dangerous.

Leaping Claw (Ranged): Alghouls can leap at you from quite a distance. Be ready to dodge this attack, or have Quen refreshed to absorb the hit. Parrying it is possible, though you're sometimes staggered.

Clawing (Melee): A raking claw from either arm is one way an Alghoul tries to wound you. Parry these from any angle if you're close enough, or else dodge around and step in at the flank or rear while the Alghoul recovers from swiping the claw, and attack back.

Frenzy: Like a normal Ghoul, an injured Alghoul can fall into a frenzy and attack with blind fury. An experienced Witcher knows to get out of its way on such occasions and strike from behind, while for an inexperienced Witcher, such a turn of events often marks the end of his Path.

A Glowing Alghoul (Regeneration): If you're seeing an Alghoul glowing a red color, it is regenerating. Focusing on the slaying of individual pack members one at a time ensures you can concentrate all your magic and swordplay on a single creature, rather than letting multiple foes heal time and time again.

Back Spines: When enraged, an Alghoul grows spines on its back. This makes attacking it a very dangerous proposition, as the spines are harmful if you use melee attacks. Axii can force the spines on an Alghoul to retract, with the added benefit of temporarily stunning the creature.

Alghoul Scream: An Alghoul can emit a piercing scream to stun nearby victims, as well as send nearby Ghouls into a raging frenzy. The shockwave is easily seen, and should be retreated from.

Leaders Of The Pack: Alghouls can be found in command of higher level packs of Ghouls.

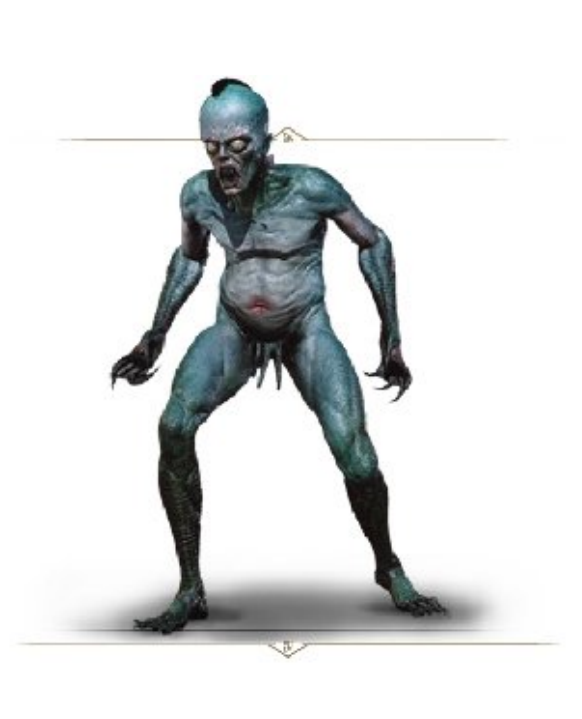
Drawn Power At Dusk: Fight Alghouls during the twilight or nighttime hours, and expect them to be slightly tougher combatants.

The Best Battle Tactics

During combat, Alghouls try risky maneuvers aimed at knocking their opponents to the ground so the others can finish the job by tearing them to shreds. Alghouls are smarter and more powerful than Ghouls, making them the greatest threat in a Ghoul pack. An otherwise coordinated pack becomes less so once the Alghoul has been dealt with. Focus your fury on an Alghoul first.

While Ghouls are great to practice countering with, Alghouls are much more of a problem due to their strength, larger vitality, and defensive spines and screaming. Sometimes in the heat of battle, successfully employing Axii is difficult (so target the Alghoul first, and use strong attacks to inflict greater damage while the Alghoul is stunned for a couple of seconds). Aard and Igni are other options, pushing some of the pack members on their back and clearing a path to the Alghoul.

A more subtle combat plan is also available to those not wishing to face an entire pack at once. Edge slowly into an Alghoul territory until one of the pack sees you. Back up, cast Axii, and kill it (bombs or crossbow bolts work as well as Signs and swordplay). Then repeat the process. This only works if you're patient, and haven't charged into the middle of an Alghoul territory.



DROWNERS

Danger Alert

●●○○○

Frequency

●●●●●

A Drowner resembles a corpse dredged from the bottom of a pond. It is sickly blue or green in color, with slime and sludge oozing out of every pore and the acrid stench of rot wafting off it. But their scaly skin, gills, and dorsal fins suggest Drowners are an entirely foreign species.

Loot: Drowner brain, Drowned Dead tongue, Water essence
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Drowner, Drowned Dead, Mucknixers, Vodnicks, Muire D'Yaeblen
Environments: Coastal shores or river banks, where the bloated remains of the battle-torn corpse have been left to rot. Drowners that congregate in large enough numbers create nests near sources of water and food.
Specific Encounter: The Guarded Treasure southwest of Kaer Trolde Harbor, on the western coast of Ard Skellig (Skellige).
Specific Encounter (Nest): The hidden treasure on the tiny island northeast of Olena's Grove, in Velen.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Drowners, Mucknixers, Vodniks, and drowned dead all live in putrid, rotting filth, and so have developed a high resistance to poison.

Leaping Swipe (Ranged): The usual attacking plan for a Drowner involves leaping in your general direction and swiping with their disgusting claws. It is simplicity itself to step out of the way with a quick dodge, before attacking while the Drowner recovers. This "dance" is one of the most proficient ways to cut down a group of Drowners quickly and effectively.

Claw Swipe (Melee): If you're going toe-to-webbed toe with a Drowner, they tend to flail with claw attacks when you're close to one. It's usually better to back up, or have one burning and helpless for a few seconds before being this close. Or, parry the claws (from any angle), watching for the possibility of being staggered.

Scream Of Anguish: Drowners react to the deaths of their fellows by screaming in pain. This show of mourning leaves them defenseless for several seconds.

Resistances: Drowners are resistant to poisoned attacks from bombs and blades that you may possess. Though humanoid in form, they are primitive creatures no more intelligent than carp or pike. That is why spells affecting the mind, the Axii Sign included, are ineffective against them.

The Best Battle Tactics

Drowners are particularly vulnerable to magic drawn from the element of fire, including the Igni Sign. Drowners are quite weak to Igni, susceptible to being lit aflame and stunned while they screech in agony. When attacked by multiple Drowners, it's possible to catch the pack in an Yrden trap, then blast the Drowners with Igni.

Drowners are predominantly pack creatures by nature, usually in groups of three or greater. You know they have spotted you if they occasionally burrow into the ground. This is a sure warning Sign that they're preparing to ambush if you encroach farther on their territory.

You can counterattack the claw swipes from a Drowner, causing a bit of extra damage to them. However, this can be quite difficult when multiple Drowners are attacking. They can interrupt your counterattacks with their own attacks. Drowners try to leap at a Witcher from beneath the ground. Watch for disturbances at your feet, and roll or dodge to safety. The usual tactic of applying Quen so the first time an enemy strikes you it is absorbed is a great plan; then sidestep (dodge) from the Drowner's leaping claw attack and step back in with a sword swipe, or Igni.

Drowners are the most frequent entity you'll fight underwater, though the options here are somewhat limited. If you cannot retreat to the land where you have a full complement of bombs, swords, and Signs to utilize, and must remain underwater, utilize the crossbow. Mix automatic and manual crossbow attacks to whittle down the vitality of these aquatic atrocities.

Ignius Fatuus Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●○○○○

These creatures have powerful arms and claws like Zerrikanian kinjals, yet what makes them truly dangerous is their mastery of deception, beguilement and disorientation.

Loot: Foglet teeth Foglet mutagens, Fifth essence
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Foglet, Tangalore, Ignius Fatuus
Environments: Battlefields or any location where a large number of corpses can be found, as well as swamp-like locations, and low ground where fog can occur both naturally, and unnaturally.
Specific Encounter: The moorland near the murdered caravaneers, southeast of Devil's Pit (Velen).
Specific Encounter (Ignius Fatuus): Contract: Swamp Thing (see page 516).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Foglets may appear wherever thick fog can arise: swamplands, mountain passes or the shores of rivers and lakes. If no fog is forthcoming, they create or summon it themselves. Quickly thickening air undisturbed by the wind infallibly signals a Foglet is present—and preparing an attack.

The Fog: Rapidly thickening fog tends to be a sign that Foglets are close. Prepare Quen if the fog is accompanied by snarling. It's possible to visually follow a Foglet as he moves within the fog; simply look for this mist congealing in different areas to prepare for a Foglet's appearance. Foglets can also disappear at will, so track them from their last location using the appearing mist as evidence.

Dopplegangers: Foglets create ethereal illusions of themselves that can cause physical harm, while the real Foglet stalks the area. Damaging the illusions disrupts them, and can reveal the Foglet's location.

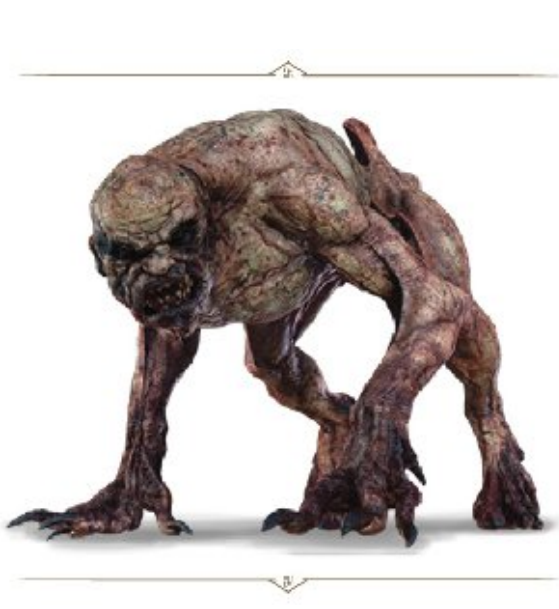
Raking Claws: One, two, or three clawing attacks as the Foglet pushes forwards. Blocking while moving allows you to ready yourself for a parry or counter, and Quen means any surprise attacks are negated (indeed, the Foglet is staggered for a moment, allowing you to press home the advantage with swordplay or Moon Dust bombs).

The Best Battle Tactics

When fighting Foglets, remain calm and keep your wits about you no matter what. Since Foglets can take on immaterial form, a slight shimmer of air or a rustle in the grass might be the only clue you have to their location. Casting the Aard Sign at these beings causes them to become tangible, giving purchase to blades and other weapons.

While Foglets can disappear, watching for moving patches of fog or grass swaying in a path leading directly to their victims is one way to identify their location. It is possible to counterattack a Foglet as they materialize to attack, a good way to begin your offense.

Yrden is particularly useful for buying you time to react to a Foglet ambush, slowing down the monsters and disabling their invisibility. Moon Dust bombs can keep Foglets from turning invisible and disrupt their illusions. Aard can knock both an ethereal and fully-formed Foglet on its back, ready to be skewered. Axii is another great choice, as you can (if you have the Stamina) befuddle a Foglet, jump in and attack it, then jump back and flummox it with Axii again.



GHOULS

Danger Alert

●●○○○

Frequency

●●●●●

Ghouls are driven by one thing and one thing only: an insatiable appetite for human flesh. Beware of them near nests, where four or more Ghouls may be encountered.

Loot: Ghoul blood, Venom extract
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Ghoul, Graveir
Environments: Battlefields or any location where a large number of corpses can be found in shallow graves or left out to rot.
Specific Encounter: The Ferry Station signpost in Velen.

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

In a one-on-one fight with a trained Witcher, a Ghoul poses little threat, but one must remember that wounded individuals can erupt in a mad frenzy.

Leaping Claw (Ranged): Ghouls can leap at you from quite a distance. Be ready to dodge this attack, or have Quen refreshed to absorb the hit.

Clawing (Melee): A raking claw from either arm is usually the way a Ghoul tries to wound you. Parry these from any angle if you're close enough, or else dodge around and step in at the flank or rear while the Ghoul recovers from swiping the claw, and attack back.

Frenzy: A wounded Ghoul sometimes turns and begins a series of viciously grotesque attacks (which can stun you), in a frenzy almost suicidal in nature. Listen for Ghouls shuddering and snarling in place after an injury. This is a sign that they are enraged. They aggressively leap at their victims, sprinting around them to confuse them. Enraged Ghouls also regenerate their wounds. Parrying these clawing attacks is expected, or dodging and slicing at the creature from the side, or stopping it with your preferred magic. Don't expect the Ghoul to retreat during this time.

A Glowing Ghoul (Regeneration): If you're seeing a Ghoul glowing a red color, it is regenerating. Focusing on the slaying of individual pack members one at a time ensures you can concentrate all your magic and swordplay on a single creature, rather than letting multiple foes heal time and time again.

Leaders Of The Pack: Alghouls can be found in command of higher level packs of Ghouls.

Drawn Power At Dusk: Fight Ghouls during the twilight or nighttime hours and expect them to be slightly tougher Combatants.

The Best Battle Tactics

A lone Ghoul is a threat only to careless or unskilled Witchers. While not explicitly vulnerable to Yrden, this trap Sign slows Ghouls down for easy dispatching. Ghouls are rarely found alone. Packs of three or more often circle around you rapidly, attacking from the flanks while you are occupied by another. Setting Yrden down at your feet allows you to better react when the rush inevitably comes.

Do not attack a Ghoul too aggressively with your sword. They can counterattack through your own strikes, trading their blood with yours. A better plan is to strike a couple of times, back away, and attempt a more measured takedown.

Mourntart Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●○○○○

Aged, deformed women who loiter near graveyards and battlefields, Grave Hags feed on human corpses, slurping the rotten marrow using long prehensile tongues. If at all possible, fight them during the day. At night, they grow bolder and stronger.

Loot: Grave Hag ear, Hag teeth, Venom extract, Runestones, Grave Hag mutagen
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Grave Hag, Mourntart
Environments: Battlefields, graveyards, or any location where corpses can be found in shallow graves, or rotting out in the open.
Specific Encounter: The Hidden Treasure by the burned hut on the peninsula, south of Condyle (Velen).
Specific Encounter (Mourntart): Contract: The Merry Widow (see page 508).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Grave Hags use their tongues in combat to grab or flog their victims. Claws built for digging up buried bodies serve just as well as weapons to rend flesh. Though clumsy in appearance, Grave Hags move and attack at great speed—sometimes even a Witcher's reflexes are too slow to avoid their blows.

Tongue Lash: The tongue of a Grave Hag can surprise even veteran Witchers with the speed and range it can lash out. Being struck by it can cause temporary blindness, leaving you unable to properly defend yourself. However, a well-timed counterattack can sever the tongue. Otherwise, step away from the tongue's range.

Warty Claw Attacks: Expect filthy claw-like attacks from both hands when facing a Grave Hag. These come with a variety of step-ins toward you, and are quick, difficult to counter, but can be parried. Or, you can dodge them and step in yourself with a quick bladed attack as she recovers.

Weaknesses: On rare occasions hunger-driven Grave Hags will hunt during the day. They are less dangerous at such times, for sunlight weakens them considerably. So, if you know where a Grave Hag makes her lair, meditate until the daytime before advancing on it.

The Best Battle Tactics

Grave Hags are territorial and aggressive when provoked, using their great speed to rapidly close on prey. You should always have Quen active, and Yrden prepared for use, in the event that a Hag is spotted before combat begins. This provides the best chance to defend yourself, as you can slow this she-beast down and instantly shrug off her first attack.

While not explicitly vulnerable to Igni, igniting a Grave Hag can give a Witcher a needed respite from their assault. Axii and Aard are also helpful in this respect, enabling you to follow up with attacks while the Grave Hag is stunned. Black Blood can be effective at stopping a Grave Hag that has gotten the best of you in the melee. This is another useful way to push back against her relentless assault.

The claws of a Grave Hag are sharp, but not enough that skilled swordplay cannot defend against them. A well-timed parry can stop a maddened Hag's claws. The follow-up counter-attack can then open the Grave Hag up to successive silver sword blows.

Swamp bints may masquerade as lost old women to lure travelers back to their rickety wetland shacks. In truth, only a blind man or drunkard could mistake the rank sludge and rotting carrion of a Water Hag's den for a cozy cottage.

Loot: Water Hag teeth, Venom extract, Water essence, Ducal water, Ribleaf
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Water Hag, Bilge Hag, Abaya
Environments: Battlefields, locations where large numbers of corpses are left out to rot or in shallow graves, coastal marshes and caves.
Specific Encounter: The Guarded Treasure between Arette and Honeyfill Meadworks (Gustfields Territory).
Specific Encounter (Abaya): Contract: Muire D'Yaeblen (see page 531).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Their wrinkled, wart-covered bodies stand nearly two yards tall, colored a pinkish-green and stinking of muck and fish. Bony growths two spans long stick out from their backs, with hair like a tangle of seaweed and claws that would make a Werewolf proud completing the picture.

Sickle Claw Attacks: Expect filthy claw-like attacks from both hands when facing a Water Hag. These come with a variety of step-ins towards you, and are quick, difficult to counter, but can be parried. Or, you can dodge them and step in yourself with a quick bladed attack as she recovers.

Mud Ball: They are also able to form mud into balls, which they toss to temporarily blind opponents. Simply peer through the obscured view the best you can, or better yet, dodge the ball by watching the Hag lean back and start the throw, and react quickly.

Submerged Swim: Though bulky, they are excellent swimmers. They can even swim through thick mud with astonishing agility, surfacing behind or beside their victims to attack them with their sickle-shaped claws. Deft dodging and looking for movement in the water helps avoid these surprise attacks.

Strength In The Storm: Water Hags are particularly active and dangerous during rainstorms, conditions which furthermore hinder the use of the Igni Sign, usually the most effective weapon against all moisture-loving creatures.

The Best Battle Tactics

Water Hags can 'swim' through mud as swiftly as they can through water, and they can use this to ambush their prey. Slow the Water Hag down with Yrden. A clever Witcher can catch a Hag with Yrden just as it bursts from the ground, allowing plenty of time to savage it with their silver swords.

The brutal power of a Water Hag may be familiar to those who have faced a Grave Hag, but possibly more threatening is their ability to throw balls of mud at the faces of their opponents in order to blind them, and they do this with frightening accuracy. Keep your eyes focused on a Water Hag attempting this maneuver so you can evade it with time to spare.

Water Hags have been known to work alongside Drowners, making these ancient Hags some of the most dangerous monsters. In these situations, it may help to carry Dragon's Dream bombs. Combining them with a shot of Igni may set the Hag and the Drowners on fire.

Northern Wind bombs are another way to contain a Water Hag, freezing them and making them more susceptible to physical harm. Otherwise, expect a war of attrition when facing this Hag; try burning it with Igni so the Hag is incapacitated, and strike with strong attacks before backing off and trying again.

Scurvers Danger Alert

●●●○○

●●○○○

Once rarities, but in the present age of constant warfare, Rotfiends have become a veritable plague. They feed on carrion, usually in groups, and present a danger to lone travelers, especially considering their speed which is more than a match for a horse at f ull gallop.

While fighting a Scurver, one cannot afford to forget about their special boney spines, razor-sharp protuberances sticking out from their skeletons. When a Scurver is near death, the gasses and enzymes gathered within its body cause it to explode, flinging these spines out at great speed, turning them into one last deadly weapon in their arsenal.

Loot (Rotfiend and Scurver): Rotfiend blood, Greater Rotfiend blood, Necrophage hide
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Rotfiend, Devourer, Scurver
Environments: Battlefields or any location where a large number of corpses can be found in shallow graves or left out to rot. Approaching Rotfiend nests is particularly dangerous, due to the explosive nature of the monsters themselves.
Specific Encounter (Rotfiends): The Monster nest just north of Codger's Quarry (Velen).
Specific Encounter (Scurvers): During the exploration of Tesham Mutna (Toussaint), during Main Quest: La Cage au Fou (see page 323).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Rotfiends resemble decomposing human bodies that have been stripped of their skin. Their presence is given away by the overwhelming stench of the rot which gives them their name. Devourers are a particularly dangerous kind of Rotfiend marked by an insatiable appetite for human flesh. In groups, expect them to try to surround you.

Close-Range Flailing (Melee): Expect close range swiping, melee attacks using both arms as the Rotfiend or Scurver advances. Parrying or dodging these moves stops you from being hit.

Mid-Range Melee Leap (Ranged): To close the gap, a Rotfiend or Scurver may leap at you and follow this up with some flailing. It also has a rudimentary dodging ability; jumping back to avoid sword strikes before following up with another leaping attack. As usual, parrying or dodging is a good plan, along with Quen to stop the first attack that gets through.

Burstable: When a Rotfiend's health is low, it goes into its death throes, ending in an explosion which damages anything close by.

Grotesque Spike Shower (Scurver Only): Similar to Rotfiends, the Scurver thrashes in agony when its health is low, collapsing to its knees and exploding upon death, shooting spikes in all directions. The attack range for this death explosion is much larger (around five meters or 16 feet!) than that of a Rotfiend. Use Quen to protect yourself, as retreating doesn't usually get you out of range in time.

Strength After Twilight: Rotfiends and Scurvers feed in the twilight hours and at night, when they become much more dangerous than during the day.

The Best Battle Tactics

Much like Ghouls and Alghouls, Rotfiends and Scurvers roam in packs. They are fast enough to run down horse riders, so be wary when traveling near known Rotfiend haunts.

The gasses building up within a Rotfiend's body are highly unstable and become even less stable as combat with them wears on. When a Rotfiend begins to spasm uncontrollably in place, it could be a sign that they're about to explode. It is not safe to stand near these creatures, nor is it wise to try slaying them with a silver sword in this state. They will more than likely explode, possibly ending a witless Witcher's career.

Igni can trigger Rotfiend explosions more quickly. This can be a useful attribute to exploit when confronted by multiple Rotfiends or Scurvers. Aard is another excellent choice, as it causes the knockdown of this enemy, so you can quickly skewer it without worrying about an explosion. Because of the dangerous nature of a Rotfiend's explosion, using Quen to protect yourself becomes an excellent idea, more so than under normal circumstances. Retreat from a thrashing Rotfiend prior to it bursting, for obvious reasons.

Remaining at distance is a great way to prevent yourself from being hit by one of these exploding atrocities. Any bombs or crossbow bolts help here. And don't forget the Necrophage oil!

This species mainly lives in ancient burial sites, though they have been spotted near more recent cemeteries or wherever mass graves can be found. Wights spend the winter months in a state of lethargy very similar to human sleep. They live strictly solitary lives.

Loot: Green mutagens, Monster saliva, Wight ear, Wight hair
Sub-Species or Named Variants: Wight, Spotted Wight, Wight Spoon Collector
Environments: Caves, dusty and old burial sites, and abandoned manor houses.
Specific Encounter: Rosetree Hill Cave (unmarked), northeast of Tourney Grounds in Toussaint, during Secondary Quest: The Warble of a Smitten Knight (see page 443).
Specific Encounter (Groups): During Main Quest: La Cage au Fou (see page 323).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

It is a certainty that if a Wight finds itself in danger, it immediately spews out an ectoplasmic solution which transforms into Barghests nearly instantaneously. These Barghests obey the Wight and attack anyone the Wight deems a foe. If one of them is killed, the Wight tries at once to replace it with another ally.

Barghest Summoning: At the beginning of combat, a Wight summons up to three Barghests, and tries to keep one guarding him at all times; summoning the Barghest again should you kill it. Therefore, it is worth ignoring the Barghest and concentrating all offensive power on the Wight itself. The unfortunate Spoon Collector does not have this ability.

Gaunt Claw Attacks: Expect raking claw-like attacks from both hands when facing a Wight. These come with a variety of step-ins towards you and are quick and difficult to counter, but can be parried. Or, you can dodge them and step in yourself with a quick bladed attack as your foe recovers. Don't be over-confident when striking a Wight, as it usually counters your sword strikes after you inflict a couple of hits.

Drunkard's Spittle: Just like a Water Hag can throw balls of muck, a Wight can launch a disgusting wad of spittle which staggers you and causes temporary drunkenness! When you see the Wight move its head in readiness, use Quen or dodge to avoid this dirty projectile.

Submerged In The Spoons (Spotted Wight Only): When fighting the spoon-collecting Wight, be aware that it has a defensive maneuver not unlike a Water Hag's, disappearing into the gigantic pile of spoons strewn throughout its cellar dwelling before pursuing you from underneath. When it begins to surface, you can be partially pulled under and immobilized before the Wight appears to inflict a couple of hits. Dodge away from the clattering spoons indicating where the Wight is, and wait for it to emerge before continuing combat.

Resistances: Wights are resistant to poison and bleeding attacks, but vulnerable to silver.

The Best Battle Tactics

The best strategy when fighting them is to attack the Wight first, after temporarily stunning the Barghests guarding it with the Axii Sign. Confusing these spectral hounds allows you to focus all your attention on the Wight itself. With Quen active and Yrden at your disposal, slow down the foe and stop the first of its attacks from striking you.

Use Axii or Aard to confuse or knock back a Wight, allowing you to follow up while the Wight is indisposed. Time your parrying well to stop being clawed, and with a Necrophage oil-coated silver blade, use swordplay similar to that when attacking a Hag (of the grave or water variety) and the Wight will soon yield leaving only Barghests to deal with.

Enemy Attacks

As in the case of Giants, one can only guess at the strong and weak points of a Cyclops. Its heft alone precludes effective use of the Aard Sign, while its enormous physical strength would make its blows particularly deadly. Cyclopses are most likely vulnerable to ogroid oil. As monsters with relatively well-developed minds, they might also fall under the influence of the Axii Sign.

Charge: Expect this colossus to charge forward at you, when it focuses on your presence. It usually attempts a subsequent attack afterward, from the list mentioned below. Take this time to survey the combat ground, and prepare to maneuver around this behemoth, rather than stand in front of it.

Ground Pound: If a Cyclops raises both hands in the air, avoid being anywhere close to the front of it. The resulting ground-pound flattens even the toughest warriors. If you don't fancy being prone and open to a bludgeoning from the ogroid's fists, retreat immediately. Rolling away (which covers more distance than dodging) is the safest method.

A Rough Landing: Cyclopses can also leap into the air, knocking over anyone or anything too close to where they land. React in the same way as you would when backing up from a ground pound.

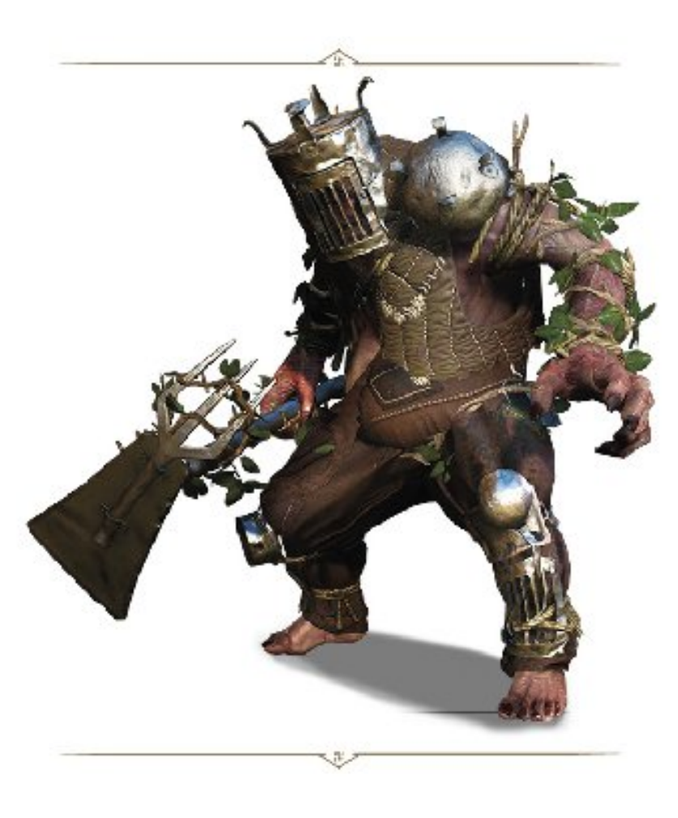
Lumbering Swipes: The usual attacks to dart from, when this gigantic ogroid heads into your personal space, are swatting swipes from each hand, usually horizontally, that can easily stagger, stun, knock you over, and damage you severely. As parrying or blocking isn't possible, nimble dodging maneuvers (to get around the flanks of the foe for retaliation) is the best course of action.

Strengths: The strongest Witchers cannot parry or block any punch or slap delivered by a Cyclops, and a mere hop backward may not be enough to stay out of reach. Roll to the side or behind a Cyclops to evade their attacks and reach their vulnerable flanks.

The Best Battle Tactics

Cyclopses go where they want; even a Witcher should move to the side if a Cyclops is charging forward. Do not stand in one place when fighting a Cyclops. They rarely flinch from anything you inflict on them, so they keep trying to fight no matter how many cuts from a silver blade they take. However, getting close to a Cyclops is dangerous, but still a necessity for slaying one. The Yrden Sign can help you do more work every time you get within sword range of these monsters. To protect yourself from the first swinging fist of a Cyclops, use Quen.

Axii can temporarily confuse a Cyclops, giving you time to recuperate while the creature rages at something else. You may also wish to begin your bout lobbing some bombs that have a high-damage strike (like grapeshot), as well as peppering the beast with crossbow bolts; if you can wound one of these creatures before it gets too dangerously close to you, so much the better. Another action is to lob Northern Wind bombs to freeze the foe, then attempt a single, devastating Rend strong attack before the Cyclops thaws. This effectively nullifies all the Cyclops' melee attacks, providing you have enough bombs, and inflict enough damage with your sword.



B&W GIANT, CLOUD

Danger Alert

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

The Cloud Giant is a degenerated illusory being and an inhabitant of the castle in the sky in the Land of a Thousand Fables. After Jack stole his goose that laid golden eggs, the Cloud Giant decided in the future anyone who climbed onto his cloud would be tossed off, without a word of warning.

Loot: Relic Sword: Geshelft (if you follow the willow-the-wisp afterward)

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Cloud Giant

Environments: In the cloud castle, at the top of the Giant beanstalk.

Specific Encounter: During Main Quest: Beyond Hill and Dale... (see page 338).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

The Cloud Giant resembles a clumsy, overgrown human and appears to be capable of reason, though he says nothing and does not seem too interested in any other form of communication. He has learned to use his natural surroundings, meaning the cloud on which he lives, to aid him while fighting; he will jump inside the cloud and pop out in an entirely different place, surprising his opponent.

Weapon Swing: A medium-range weapon swing. Dodge or leap to the side, or back away to avoid being struck.

Weapon Overhead Smash: A medium-range weapon smash, dropping vertically. Highly damaging, so avoid it using dodges and retreating.

Kick, Stomp, And Swipe: The Cloud Giant sometimes kicks, stomps, or swipes with his left arm; both push you back, increasing the distance between you, allowing the Giant to be more effective with his weapon swings. Simply avoid these by dodging.

Charge Attack: If you're at long range, the Cloud Giant occasionally attempts a charge to close the distance. If you're caught, expect to be pushed back, and possibly sent tumbling over. Recover and retreat, or simply roll or dodge to the side to avoid it.

Whirlwind Attack: Occurring at both short and long distances, this is the Cloud Giant's most severe series of strikes, so watch for him raising his weapon up to the side of the head before he spins around. If he connects, the damage is significant, and you'll be sent flying. Parrying is not an option, but dodging (or letting Quen bear the brunt of this) is.

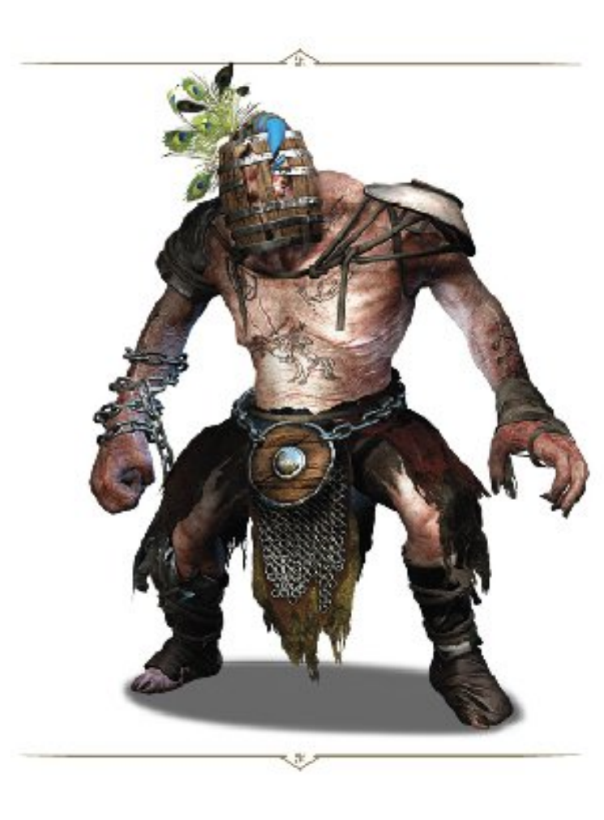
Cloud Teleport: Using his lair to the best of his advantage, he drops into a cloud, and a moment later, leaps back out and brings his mighty weapon slamming down with an overhead smash. React by dodging, while keeping an eye on where he leaps up from so you aren't caught.

Resistances: The Cloud Giant is immune to most signs aside from Igni, and is particularly resistant to Axii.

The Best Battle Tactics

Engage this behemoth in combat amid the clouds. Syanna helps, but it still takes skill and cunning to vanquish this tough son of a wench, which hits pretty hard for an illusion. Use the techniques you attempted when you slew the Giant named Golyat while first adventuring in Toussaint (the next Bestiary entry), or employ similar techniques to those when facing a Cyclops or the Ice Giant in Undvik.

To shorten combat considerably, stay within the three piles of metal objects. As this battle takes place on a cloud, during a thunderstorm, these objects are frequently struck by lightning. The objects remain electrified afterward, so lure the Cloud Giant close to one of the metal piles still writhing with energy, and wait for the foe to make a giant swing, and a giant mistake! The Giant's weapon strikes the metal, electrocuting the fool and allowing you to attack him for a few moments. Keep this up!



B&W GIANT, GOLYAT

Danger Alert

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

According to legend, Golyat had once been a knight who violated his vows, for which he was punished by the Lady of the Lake. Transformed into a Giant, he fled into the mountains and would only descend into the inhabited lowlands when hunger forced him to it.

Loot: Crowns and Golyat's Trophy

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Golyat

Environments: Dulcinea Windmill, Toussaint.

Specific Encounter: During Main Quest: The Beast of Toussaint (see page 317).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Though he came across as a wild, unthinking beast, Golyat used simple tools and any item could turn into a deadly weapon in his powerful hands. When fighting Golyat wields a millstone, making his every blow truly crushing. This lumbering behemoth has the following attacks and maneuvers to be wary of:

Golyat uses a Giant mill wheel on a tree trunk to deliver massive bludgeoning damage in vertical pounds or massive horizontal sweeps. He loves to swing this weapon, smashing things all around. His attacks are far-reaching; he's extremely aggressive and tends to keep moving toward you, mostly ignoring the three knights.

Weapon Swing: A medium-range weapon swing. Dodge or leap to the side, or back away to avoid being struck.

Weapon Overhead Smash: A medium-range weapon smash, dropping vertically. Highly damaging, so avoid by using dodges and retreating.

Kick, Stomp, And Swipe: Golyat sometimes kicks, stomps, or swipes with his left arm; both push you back, increasing the distance between you, allowing the Giant to be more effective with his weapon swings. Simply avoid these by dodging.

Charge Attack: If you're at long range, Golyat occasionally attempts a charge to close the distance. If you're caught, expect to be pushed back, and possibly sent tumbling over. Recover and retreat, or simply roll or dodge to the side to avoid it.

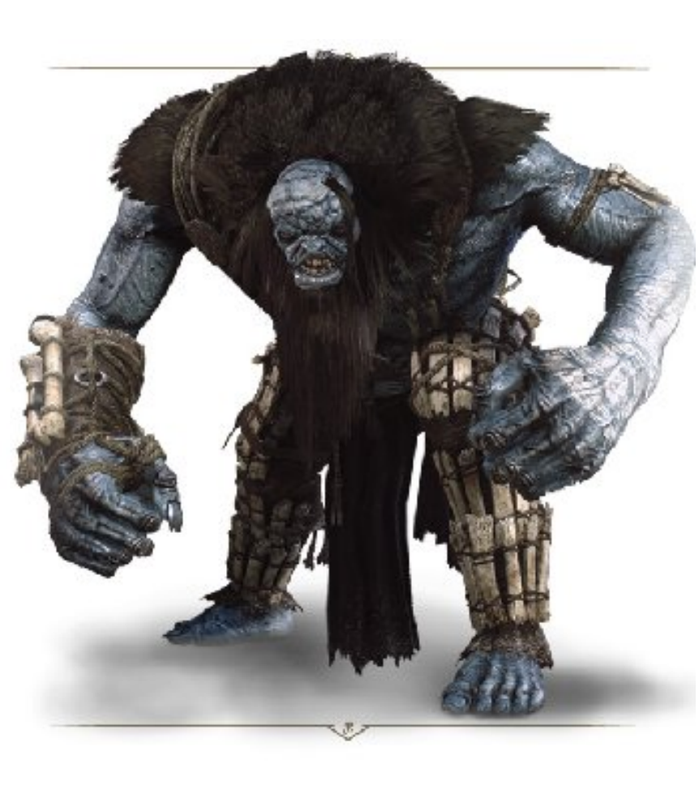
Whirlwind Attack: Occurring at both short and long distances, this is Golyat's most severe series of strikes, so watch for him raising his weapon up to the side of the head before his spins around. Damage is significant, and you're sent flying. Parrying is not an option, but dodging (or letting Quen bear the brunt of this) is.

The Best Battle Tactics

Golyat moves like his Cyclops brethren, refraining from running or strafing, and utilizes lumbering strides in your general direction. He is also incredibly tough, requiring a lot of damage in order to topple over. Exhibit patience, and work with your new knight friends. Occasionally they prove most worthy at distracting Golyat, allowing you to get in strikes when he's pre-occupied.

Otherwise, dart in with a strike once Golyat finishes one of his troublesome, and damaging swings, and is recovering in readiness for his next attack. Darting in, damaging, and retreating is the key. You need not worry about the knights' health, so let them bear the brunt of this enemy.

Or just shoot Golyat in the head with a crossbow; aim for the eye and unlock a hidden Achievement.



GIANT, ICE

Danger Alert

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

This powerful, primeval monster is possibly the last of its race. Resembling a man, but blue as frost and taller than a tree, all attempts to communicate with it have ended in the same way: a quick and painful death.

Loot: Elemental essence, White bear pelt, White wolf pelt, Glyphs, Runestones, Infused crystal

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Ice Giant

Environments: An Ice Giant has been observed in the Skellige island of Undvik. If any exist on the Continent (outside Toussaint), they've yet to be discovered.

Specific Encounter: Main Quest: The Lord of Undvik (see page 228).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

This powerful primeval monster draws strength from frosts, and can bind Sirens to its will. It treats victims cruelly, and is particularly fond of human flesh. It uses simple but devastating weapons made from items looted from the bodies (and ships) of those it has slaughtered. On the occasion you face this behemoth, it has a ship's anchor attached to a huge rusty chain, which it uses for bludgeoning during the latter part of the fight.

Charge: Expect this frozen foe to charge at you when it focuses on your presence. It usually attempts a subsequent attack afterward, from the list mentioned below. Take this time to survey the combat ground, and prepare to distract it while your friends attack, lob bombs before getting out of the way, or shoot crossbow bolts until it is too dangerously close to you.

Ground Pound: If the Ice Giant raises both hands in the air, avoid being anywhere close to the front of it. The resulting ground-pound flattens even the toughest warriors. If you don't fancy being prone and open to a bludgeoning from the ogroid's fists, retreat immediately; rolling away (which covers more distance than dodging) is the safest method.

A Rough Landing: The Ice Giant can also leap into the air, knocking over anyone or anything too close to where it lands. React the same way as you would when backing up from a ground pound.

Lumbering Swipes: The usual attacks to dart from, when this gigantic ogroid heads into melee range, are protracted swipes from each hand, usually horizontally, that can easily stagger, stun, knock you over, and damage you severely. As parrying or blocking isn't possible, nimble dodging maneuvers (to get around the flanks of the foe for retaliation) are the best course of action. Activate Quen so the first of these swats is shrugged off.

Anchors Away: A long-range weapon swing. Dodge or leap to the side (rolling is another fine option), or back away to avoid being struck. Employ Quen before the battle so the damage from the crushing anchor, if it hits you, is absorbed.

Strengths: The strongest Witchers cannot parry or block any punch or slap delivered by this Ice Giant, and a mere hop backward may not be enough to stay out of reach. Roll to the side or behind him to evade his attacks, and help your fellow Skelligers by constantly maneuvering so the beast has no single victim to crush.

The Best Battle Tactics

Though similar to the Cyclops in terms of combat ability, there is one aspect of the Ice Giant that must be cautioned; reportedly the monster draws its strength from cold weather with blizzards allowing them to reach their physical peak.

Creatures such as the Siren can be bound to the will of an Ice Giant. Witchers should coat their silver swords in oil that affect any potential allies to the Ice Giant to help eliminate them more quickly. A Hornwall Horn was once crafted to help repel Sirens attacking Skelligers, knocking them out of the sky with a single blast of noise. Having the horn is of great use against an Ice Giant, directing them to attack its enemies.

As with a Cyclops, evasiveness and footwork are your best defenses against an Ice Giant. Use Yrden to improve your chances of avoiding any attacks! The initial battle is similar to that of a Cyclops; use bombs or crossbow attacks to soften up the Ice Giant, then use Quen to protect yourself and make consistent and rapid dodges and rolls to avoid those swiping hands.

When the huge anchor is used by the Ice Giant, it becomes slightly less mobile, allowing you to launch sword strikes, or bombs like dancing star, or Igni that can damage this ice-loving foe. You can cunningly step forward, in front of the collision spot where the anchor hits the ground, and launch Igni (or Yrden), or lob bombs while the Giant struggles to haul the anchor back in for another swing. Repeat these plans until the terror of Undvik is no more.

A lone Nekker is harmless. Five are dangerous. Ten can kill even a veteran monster slayer.

Loot: Nekker blood, Nekker claw, Nekker eye, Nekker heart, Nekker Warrior liver, Nekker Warrior mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Nekker, Nekker Warrior, Hagumban

Environments: Found in numbers across the known world, though they prefer locations near roads, where 'food' regularly passes by. Nekker nests can be defended by large numbers of these creatures, with the occasional Nekker Warrior to maintain rule; all must be defeated.

Specific Encounter: The Monster Den (cave) just northwest of Hanged Man's Tree in Velen.

Specific Encounter (Hagumban): Contract: Waylaid Transport (see page 535).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Nekkers live in the dark woods that grow in damp, mist-filled valleys, in colonies of one to several dozen individuals. They dig deep burrows for lairs and connect them with a network of narrow tunnels. They always attack in groups and by surprise, trying to surround their prey as quickly as possible, cutting off all escape routes. Luckily their attack is for the most part disorganized.

Charging Leap And Swipe: The Nekker leaps forward from mid-range with a leaping swipe. Well-timed sword slashes can interrupt this leap if it occurs just before the Nekker takes off.

Jumping Swipe: While hissing and baying at melee range, one or more Nekkers attempt to slice at your hide with thick-nailed clawing attacks. Parrying these is straightforward. Try employing Quen in case an attack gets through your defenses when you're trying to parry or counter. After parrying, press home the advantage with a flurry of sword strikes.

Burrowing: Occasionally, Nekkers attempt to burrow to flee from your rage, or to maneuver behind you for a surprise attack. Yrden slows this down considerably (either before they burrow, or as they are appearing), and simple blocking or parrying stops this surprise attack.

Warriors: Tougher Nekkers usually have skull-shaped helmets and are fiercer opponents than the swarm of usual, bony foes. Feel free to target them first, though every single Nekker needs to die!

The Best Battle Tactics

Individual Nekkers are weak, easy marks compared to other monsters; Nekkers do not tend to fight as individuals. If you see one, expect anywhere from 2-10 more. Nekkers overwhelm their targets through sheer numbers, surrounding them, then pummeling and clawing victims to death. Even veteran Witchers can fall prey to this.

Initially approach Nekker combat with a similar plan to dealing with a crowd of bandits: long-range weaponry that controls groups of foes, such as Aard, or bombs such as Dancing Star or Northern Wind (the latter is excellent at freezing multiple Nekkers bunched together, followed up by rapid slicing and dicing before the effects of the freeze wear off). This helps thin out a Nekker herd before close combat becomes necessary. Aard can knock a Nekker to its back, allowing for swift execution. Aard can also knock over several Nekkers at once, a good way to break through large groups of attackers.

For singling out Nekkers (such as Hagumban or Warriors), Axii can cause them to pause in a stupor (so you can cut down other foes or wound the tougher enemy with sword strikes). Igni is also a good choice for roasting groups, or individuals if you use Firestream. After incapacitating a tougher Nekker, follow up with Rend to deal a single, devastating strong attack. For waltzing through multiple Nekkers, parrying is great (countering is always possible), and Whirl (fast attack) is fantastic for demolishing a pack.

Wham-A-Wham Danger Alert

●●●○○

Trolls live atop high mountain ridges so inaccessible they rarely encounter humans, while others hide away in caves. Some suppose this is why they have not mastered the basics of common speech. Others claim their harsh lairs have stripped them of an ability they once possessed, for in a land of never-ending cold or darkness there is no room for mercy or understanding.

Loot (Ice Trolls): Monster blood, Monster brain, Mosnter ear, Monster tooth, Troll skin, Cave Troll liver, Infused shard, Troll mutagen

Loot (Rock Trolls): Troll skin, Infused dust, Troll mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Ice Troll, Rabid Rock Troll, Rock Troll, Cave Troll, Wham-a-Wham

Environments: Ice and Rock Trolls prefer rocky and mountainous terrain. They have been known to claim bridges, though many hide away in caves.

Specific Encounter (Ice Troll): In the cave north of Abandoned Village on the isle of Undvik (Skellige).

Specific Encounter (Rock Troll): The stone bridge southwest of Crossroads (south Velen) once the bandit camp is cleared.

[[DLC ICON]] Specific Encounter (Wham-a-Wham): Contract: Missing Miners (see page 529).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Ice Trolls are crueler than their rocky kin. Though they use similar tactics in battle (tossing stones and swinging with their mighty fists) they are heartier and stronger than Rock Trolls and thus more dangerous. Rock Trolls, on the other hand, are quick to pummel and lob heavy rocks your way, but have been known to appreciate a conversation over bloodshed, and even help humans on occasion.

Rock Throwing (Ranged): Running away from a Troll does not guarantee safety, as they can throw stones with alarming speed and accuracy. Fortunately, you can easily spot the Troll picking up a projectile. Simply dodge or roll to the side so you're not struck (and possibly stunned) by it. There's around a second of recovery time after a Troll throws, so if you can roll in and attack, this is a great time to do it.

Headbutt (Melee): With a quick backstep before a launch forward, the Troll butts anyone standing in front of it with a staggering headbutt. Be sure you've employed Quen or sidestepped to avoid this.

Leaping Ground-Pound (Melee): To close the distance, a Troll usually leaps in and pounds the ground with its pair of massive fists, which can stagger anyone in the area of effect. Dart backward, then step into melee range as the Troll recovers from completing this (missed) attack.

Pummeling Punches (Melee): The power and weight behind every punch thrown by a Troll means that they cannot be parried. Expect single swings and sometimes a series of three punches in a combo. A Witcher must be adept at evasion, striking when the opportunities appear, then dodging the inevitable counter-attack. Another option is to retreat and avoid the swiping, then stepping in at the end of the attack to inflict damage of your own.

Defenses: Both Troll types have backs covered in thick protective armor, meaning one should never strike them from the rear. Meanwhile their mass means that the Aard Sign cannot move them. Lastly, never think of attacking Ice Trolls during a blizzard; they draw power from the surrounding cold and fight with increased strength.

The Best Battle Tactics

Trolls of both varieties are vicious fighters, and unfortunately must be fought head on. The armor of stone or ice on their backs protects them too well for flanking tactics. Axii stuns them, but only for a brief second (and is only really useful for interrupting their rock throwing), and Yrden slows an already-sluggish foe, though you're still within the range of its massive fists and head.

Tactics for slaying Trolls are as simple as the beasts themselves. It is important to cast Quen and protect yourself from a Troll's fists as you're fighting them head-on. Time your (strong) attacks just after each of the Troll's swipes, stepping (or rolling) in and hitting the Troll before backing up again. Igni can cause more constant damage while this occurs. Quen is there so you're not stunned and pummeled after a misstep. If you're attacking from range, a Samum or Dancing Star bomb can soften these lumbering idiots up a bit.

Bestiary

Relicts

These are beasts that are truly unlike any other found on the Continent. From the brutish Fiends and Chorts to the tree-like Leshens, and the deceptive Sylvans to the stone-skinned Shaelmaars of Toussaint, all Relicts could be given another name: Demon. Relicts are among the rarest monsters a Witcher can face, and are arguably the most dangerous. If the Path leads to a Contract on one of these foes, prepare as thoroughly as possible.

Howler Danger Alert

●●●●○

Chorts are the somewhat smaller kin of Fiends and Bumbakvetches. Yet any Witcher who thinks their diminutive stature means they present no danger commits a grave error.

Loot: Chort hide, Raw meat, Chort mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Bovine Defense, Force, Chort, Howler

Environments: Usually in the wilds away from villages in dense woodland, with periodic rampages, especially if local cattle are threatened by predators.

Specific Encounter: The cave due east of Kaer Morhen (during Secondary Quest: Berengar's Blade, see page 434).

Specific Encounter (Howler): Contract: Mysterious Tracks (see page 510).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Legends often mistake Chorts for other rabid Relicts, ascribing to them the ability to speak, stand on two legs, gobble up cabbage, play pranks and work mischief around the household.

Charging Headbutt (Ranged): Chorts fight with little finesse, running straight toward their opponent and trying to knock them to the ground with the force of their charge. A rapid sidestep or roll prevents you becoming stunned and heavily damaged.

Clawing Swipes And Butting (Melee): After charging and downing their foe, they butt with their great horns, very occasionally kick, and usually strike with their claw-tipped paws. These can be blocked but not countered, or avoided by dodging or rolling.

Resistances: Due to their bulk and four-legged posture, they are mostly unperturbed by the force of the Aard Sign, and the regenerative powers of their body allow any wounds they receive to heal at a rapid pace.

The Best Battle Tactics

Chorts are speed and brute strength personified, rivaled only by Fiends among Relicts. They use their arms to pummel, claw, and smash their prey. They also charge with such speed they can barely control themselves as they smash headfirst into their unfortunate victims.

A stand-up fight against a Chort is not an option, even for a Witcher. Use their size and speed against them: bait them to charge, roll aside, and hope they run headlong into something they can't just charge through. While they recover from this mishap, you can freely cut into their flanks. Slow down a Chort with Yrden, then maneuver around to its flank and try roasting it with Igni. It helps to think of this as a bear-like foe you can move to the side of, dart in with sword strikes, and retreat; usually beginning these bladed attacks just after the Chort makes a melee attack. Bolster yourself with Quen so any mistimed melee strikes don't leave you vulnerable.

A less direct tactic involves using Devil's Puffball bombs to poison the Chort. If you can drag it through the toxic fumes, it will breath in the poison, and ideally help resolve the fight sooner.

(: Only one Chort is found during your adventure, unless you begin to murder cows in a location; after slaying three or four, a Bovine Defense Force – a Chort – appears to defend these cows)*

Loot: Doppler mutagen, Assorted items and equipment

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Doppler, Janne

Environments: One may never rightly know where a Doppler is, due to their ability to wander disguised in any environment with inhabitants they can mimic. But Novigrad is the best starting point. The only Doppler (that you know of) you'll ever face in combat is Janne.

Specific Encounter (Janne): Contract: An Elusive Thief (see page 523).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

When backed into a corner, Dopplers can present a grave danger by taking on the form of their assailant (and along with it his strengths and abilities). The sum result is to force the assailant to battle against himself—a battle few can win. It doesn't have any of its own attacks, but instead relies on the aggressive tactics of the human or creature it is mimicking.

Relict Oil, not Hanged Man's Venom: Remember that coating your sword in Hanged Man's Venom, when fighting a human-form of a Doppler, is useless: Your blades must be painted in Relict oil!

The Best Battle Tactics

Like other Relicts, Dopplers are extremely vulnerable to silver, and so a silver sword should be used when fighting them. Silver has the additional useful property of forcing a Doppler to change form on contact. When a Doppler assumes the form of its attacker, it gains some of its skills. In the case of the Doppler hunted by Geralt, he gains the ability to use the Active Shield mode for Quen, and can even use blasts of Igni. Additionally, the Doppler's swordplay is nearly on par with yours; he can parry and strike just as swiftly.

Be patient when fighting the Doppler. Do not attack when his Active Shield is clearly visible, as the resulting detonation can knock you to the ground. Focus on counter-attacks and parrying. A proper counter creates the best opportunity to land an attack or two of your own. Yrden and Axii both provide openings to exploit against the Doppler. Axii is slightly less useful in that a single strike breaks the effect on the Doppler, while Yrden can be used to effectively corral the monster and allow for multiple strikes to land.

After defeating the Doppler in Geralt's form, you are given a choice to spare it or finish the fight. If you choose the latter, the Doppler drops the Geralt disguise and assumes the previous form it tried to fool you with when it was fleeing from you. The subsequent fight actually becomes simpler, as the Doppler loses the ability to use magic Signs, and its swordplay is significantly less aggressive. Stay patient and remember your defense, exploit openings to the fullest, and you can win.

Loot: Fiend eye, Fiend mutagen, Fifth essence, Fiend dung

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Fiend, Morvudd

Environments: Fiends roam where they want, but are extremely rare to ever encounter. Caves and forests are their preferred hunting grounds, as well as the wilderness around Bald Mountain (in south Velen).

Specific Encounter: The hidden treasure area just southwest of Kimbolt Way in south Velen (Crookback Bog).

Specific Encounter (Morvudd): Contract: Missing Son (see page 530).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Their size alone makes Fiends extremely dangerous; one blow from their powerful paws can kill a horse along with its fully-armored mount. Their enormous heft also makes them invulnerable to Aard; even Witchers specializing in the power of Signs could not move one even an inch. Furthermore, any wounds they receive heal at lightning speed.

Charging Antlers (Ranged): Fiends favor brutal, head-long charges into their opponents, attempting to knock them to the ground with the force of their charge. A rapid sidestep or roll prevents you becoming stunned and heavily damaged.

Clawing Swipes And Butting (Melee): After charging and downing their foe, they butt with their great antlers, very occasionally kick, and usually strike with their claw-tipped paws. These can be blocked but not countered, or avoided by dodging or rolling.

Burning Third Eye: They can also call on a more refined weapon: the third eye located in the center of their forehead, which they use to draw their prey into a state of hypnosis. During these times their victim does not see anything beyond this single burning eye—the last thing they see before their death. Interrupt this with a Sign attack or bomb before you're transfixed.

Resistances: Due to their bulk and four-legged posture, they are mostly unperturbed by the force of the Aard Sign, and the regenerative powers of their body allow any wounds they receive to heal at a rapid pace.

The Best Battle Tactics

A Fiend's only weakness is its fear of loud noises. Bombs such as Samum or Devil's Puffball are thus quite effective when fighting this monster. Furthermore, a blade covered in Relict oil can increase a Witcher's chances of victory, or at least of walking away from the fight. Consider Fiends as one would a Chort: incredible speed, strength, and a single-minded desire to kill—only more ferocious, larger, and angrier. They fight very much the same, and can be taken advantage of in similar ways.

The Fiend's third eye defines this monster as a force with which to be reckoned. It can lure victims into a state of hypnosis, where all they see is the third eye glowing in the darkness. Inexperienced hunters will die in the seconds that follow. Witchers know to follow that burning eye, and understand to use that to judge precisely when to evade: A Fiend attempting its hypnosis can be interrupted by Signs. A well timed Samum bomb can permanently disable the Fiend's third eye and prevent any use of hypnosis.

Fiends are not particularly vulnerable to fire, but it can help to use Igni or other fire-setting bombs to maintain the pressure on the monster. Otherwise, a plan of conjuring Quen (so your first enemy attack is automatically guarded), utilizing Yrden if you need to slow the Fiend down, and raking the Fiend's flanks is the best way to eventually drop this massive foe.

Vulnerable Against

The Best Battle Tactics

Godlings are deeply rooted in their home territory and perform acts of care and guardianship to those dwelling near their burrows. They watch over people as well as animals, but, shy creatures by nature, try to do so while remaining unseen.

These hard-working and clever creatures gladly perform small services for those in their care, asking only for respect and payment in the form of food or cast-off tools in return. They are easily offended by churlish, ungrateful, or simply rude behavior. Godlings also treasure their peace and quiet. When the village a Godling watches over becomes too populated or its inhabitants forget the old ways, it will abandon its burrow for good and wander off to destinations unknown. Godlings do not possess offensive capabilities, and are never challenged in combat.

Loot: Leshen resin, Ancient Leshen mutagen, Fiber, Timber, Leshen mutagen, Infused shard, Hardened timber

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Leshen, Ancient Leshen, Kernun

Environments: Leshens make the forests their home, and rarely stray from their territory.

Specific Encounter: In the dell below Arnskrone Castle Ruins, in Gustfields territory.

Specific Encounter (Kernun): Contract: Lord of the Wood (see page 524).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Leshens dwell in dense, primeval woods. Fiercely territorial creatures, they hunt with stealth and cunning as their only companions. They use their inborn magic to control the plants and animals within in their territory. When stalking them, half the battle is merely getting near enough to strike. Leshens old enough to earn the appellation "ancient" are particularly toughened from centuries of existence that make them particularly dangerous.

Forest Totems: Some Leshens create magic totems that increase their strength: In such cases these totems should be destroyed before or while fighting them.

Leshen Allies (The Raven): In combat Leshens use not only their long claws but also their many allies, including ravens, which harass and distract the Leshen's opponent. Roll to avoid being pecked as the swarm of these birds converges on your location, and you'll likely survive this ranged attack unscathed.

Leshen Allies (The Wolf): Wolves also unfailingly answer the call of a Leshen, and these can number up to six, and be grey or white in nature. You may wish to retreat from the main site of battle and deal with the wolves individually (or as a pack) using the Bestiary tactics on page 720, before returning to slay the Leshen itself. Wolves must be slain whether or not the Leshen is defeated.

Root Tendrils (Ranged): Leshens are also able to bend plant life to their will and make it aid them in battle. Cracking up and snaking through the ground are massive tree roots that can stun and heavily damage you. Watch for a Leshen digging their root like arms into the ground. This is a sign that they are commanding the roots to strike. This attack has surprising range, and can only be rolled away from.

Black Smoke Teleport: After receiving a barrage of strikes from you, back up if you see the Leshen form a thick cloud of smoke around its form; it temporarily blinks out of existence into a flock of ravens, and maneuvers to a close location nearby. Break off the attack, readjust to the new position, and continue the battle.

Claw Slicing (Melee): Leshens are slow, but powerful melee fighters, and can cause serious injury if allowed. Dodge or roll away from the swipes of their claws, which cannot be parried.

Weaknesses: It is a Witcher's good fortune that Leshens do have one weakness; they are extremely vulnerable to the Igni Sign.

The Best Battle Tactics

Igni, and any bombs that can potentially cause fire damage, such as Dragon's Dream, are the keys to success when going against Leshens. While a Leshen burns, it will be unable to defend itself. So lob in a dragon's dream, ideally just in front of a Leshen walking towards you at long or mid-range. Then light up the particles of the bomb with an explosive crossbow bolt, or better yet, Igni. Firestream provides a constant, focused burn so damage is continuous. If your sword is imbued with runestones that inflict fire damage, so much the better.

When close to a Leshen, press home with constant light attacks, chipping away at this Relict and have Quen active to resist the first enemy strike. Leshens have more types of attack (including wolves which can seriously impede your chances at higher difficulties) when at range, so close the distance to avoid having to deal with root tendrils and animal summoning. Instead, constant pressure and hack at the Leshen with sword and Igni attacks, rushing the Leshen as it reforms after the smoke condenses.

Monster Of Tufo Danger Alert

●●●●●

Shaelmaars spend most of their lives deep underground, having no contact with the world up above. At times, however, a Shaelmaar will dig its way to the surface and devour any men within its reach. Some Shaelmaars also burrow tunnels close to the surface, collapsing buildings and causing tremors in the process.

Loot: Powdered monster tissue, Monster hide, Monster carapace, Shaelmaar hair, Shaelmaar dust, Blue mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Shaelmaar, Emperor of Nilfgaard's Shaelmaar, Monster of Tufo

Environments: Unless you're fighting one of these rocky behemoths in an arena, expect to find them deep underground in expansive cave systems.

Specific Encounter: The cave southeast of Rioux-Cannes Outpost (Vintner's Contract).

Specific Encounter (Emperor of Nilfgaard's Shaelmaar): Main Quest: The Beast of Touissant (see page 317).

Specific Encounter (Monster of Tufo): Contract: The Tufo Monster (see page 544).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Since Shaelmaars are blind, they find their way by sensing vibrations and listening for sounds. Thus the best tactic when fighting such a monster is to hurl something heavy or noisy against a nearby boulder or wall. Then pray silently that the beast will roll toward the sound and knock itself out upon striking into the obstacle. Note that when you're actively searching for a Shaelmaar, you're likely to hear the ground-tremoring burrowing and moves it makes before you actually see one.

Blind As A Bat: Shaelmaars are blind and rely on sounds to find their prey. This makes combat much easier. Coax the Shaelmaar away from third parties by simply moving, lobbing bombs, or creating noises (with Signs, or your Crossbow, for example).

One-Hit Attacks: The Shaelmaar has three types of attacks that strike once: a left arm swing, a right arm swing, and a vertical swing ("uppercut"). Each deals heavy damage, and should be parried, dodged, or met with Quen to absorb the attack.

Head Smash: With its bulk and heavy armor plating, the beast lurches forward, leading with its head and neck. This can stagger you, and does a great deal of damage. Only by dodging (or otherwise ensuring you are somewhere else when the attack strikes) can you escape unharmed.

Counterattack: If struck too many times, the Shaelmaar tends to roll up into an invulnerable ball. You need to exercise patience and wait for it to unroll itself before attacking. Try to strike the beast while it is rolled up, and it can quickly counterattack with a swift and heavily-damaging swipe.

Charge: When it finds itself at a moderate or long distance from you, or after you have struck it a few times, the beast will curl into a ball and roll forward at great speed, knocking down anything in its path. If it hits you, expect to fall on your back and be stunned for a few seconds (while being vulnerable to additional attacks). The Shaelmaar will stop its roll after it strikes you or runs into an obstacle.You're best off getting well out of the way of this attack, though you can also roll or dodge to the side, then damage the beast with a well-timed strike to its flank or, after its charge fails, to its exposed underbelly.

Ground Pummel: The Shaelmaar can use its large, shovel-like arms to throw copious amounts of rock and soil in a wave of destruction. It usually does so as an opening attack. Dodge to the side to prevent being damaged by the assorted projectiles.

Tremor: If you're fighting a Shaelmaar in a cave, it can burrow into the ground, shaking its back plates and creating tremors that cause rocks to fall from the ceiling. It reappears shortly after, so keep your wits about you and watch the mini-map to track the foe.

Echo Location: If you stand still for long enough, the Shaelmaar sends sound waves to locate you, which can cause discomfort to your ears, though it isn't debilitating.

However, Your Position Is Discovered, Meaning You Need To Attack Or Retreat.

The Best Battle Tactics

The good news is that the Shaelmaar has limited ability to dodge any of your attacks. The bad news is that it turns and defends its vulnerable front by showing its back to you, a back that is heavily armored and difficult to penetrate. This also occurs if you attempt to use Igni. Expect it to violently roll around the arena if you attack it repeatedly and use its meaty paws to swipe if struck from behind.

Aside from well-timed strikes as the Shaelmaar finishes a combat move and deft dodging to avoid the pulverizing nature of its attacks, your best plans are to disorientate it using Aard and follow that up with Samum bombs that generate a large amount of noise and confuse the Shaelmaar (allowing you to strike with swords, crossbow, more bombs, or Signs). The number one best tactic against Shaelmaars is to throw a bomb at a wall, allowing the monster to charge that wall causing it to crash and fall on its back. It is most vulnerable when laying on the ground as it loses its armor buff for the duration of the knockdown.

Spriggans are a subspecies of the monsters known as Leshens. Their appetite is such that they can devour more flesh than an army at a wedding. Each Spriggan has mastery over plants and is inextricably tied to them. Thus if someone destroys greenery in its domain, it immediately comes to punish the disturber.

Loot: Leshen resin, Ancient Leshen mutagen, Fiber, Timber, Leshen mutagen, Infused shard, Hardened timber

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Spriggan, Grottore

Environments: The woodlands and caves of Toussaint.

Specific Encounter: The undergrowth midway between Fox Hollow (to the west) and Plegmund's Bridge (to the east), close to a Prophet Lebioda's Footsteps marker. Have Secondary Quest: Big Feet to Fill active (see page 457).

Specific Encounter (Groups): Contract: Feet Cold as Ice (see page 546).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

In combat a Spriggan makes skilled use of its powerful limbs. When riled it attacks swiftly and forcefully, which, given its considerable mass, can prove highly problematic. Its calloused hide can deflect even strong blows from a sword, and there can be no thought of parrying the Spriggan's attacks. One must keep an eye out for roots, which the Spriggan attempts to use to entangle its foe.

Root Tendril Barrage (Ranged): Spriggans can command the roots of nearby trees: Cracking up and snaking through the ground are a massive tangle of tree roots that can stun and heavily damage you. Watch for a Spriggan digging its root-like arms into the ground. This is a sign that they are commanding the roots to strike. This attack has surprising range, appears in a random spot, and can only be rolled away from.

Root Tendril Lance (Ranged): A tendril is launched from the Spriggan's arm directly at you, which can damage you as well as stun you. You're wise to watch the Spriggan point its arm outward in preparation for this attack, so you can dodge it.

Root Teleport (Defensive And Offensive): A Spriggan can also teleport. This is usually employed when you've stood up to the Spriggan and sliced at it repeatedly with your swords; it counters by temporarily blinking out of existence after being swallowed by columns of roots, and maneuvering to a close location nearby (defensive) or directly in front of you to attack (offensive). Break off the attack, readjust to the new position, and continue the battle.

Claw Slicing (Melee): Spriggans aren't quick by any means, but are powerful melee fighters and can cause serious injury if allowed. Dodge or roll away from the swipes of their claws, which cannot be parried.

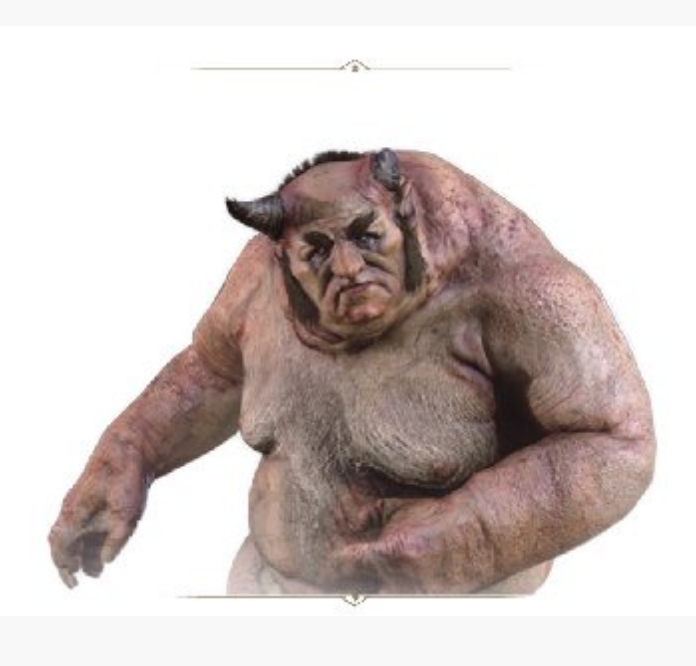
Weaknesses: Like their Northern cousins, Spriggans do have one weakness: they are extremely vulnerable to the Igni Sign.

Resistances: The Aard Sign does not work against it, for no force on earth can knock it over.

The Best Battle Tactics

The tactics you perfected when battling Leshens across the Northern Realms are ideally suited to cutting down the Leshen's forest brethren in Toussaint. Coat your blade in Relict oil, and when a Spriggan first appears, attempt to lob Dimeritium bombs at it to prevent its more potent root attacks. Launch a variety of Igni attacks and fire-based projectiles (dancing star, explosive bolts, and ability-based Igni attacks) before rushing the Spriggan with bladed slicing (if your swords inflict fire damage, so much the better).

Don't dilly-dally! Close the gap by donning a protective coat of Quen and start hammering away at close range, remaining at less than a sword's length until the Spriggan tries to teleport. Quickly roll or dodge the Spriggan as it tries to teleport in front of you, before continuing the barrage of swords strikes until one of you yields. Make constant use of Igni and Quen, and it is highly likely it will be the Spriggan who falls first..



SYLVANS

Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●○○○○

Sylvans are extremely rare woodland creatures whose appearance combines traits of goats and rotund men. Lazy by nature, they would gladly spend every day in idleness, puffing on pipes, gorging on rich foods and downing strong drinks.

Loot: Leather, Orens

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Sylvan, Allgod, Fugas

Environments: Closer to farms and larders where they can feed. A Sylvan known as Fugas has been seen at Bald Mountain.

Specific Encounter: The brick ruins south of Wastrel Manor in Velen (Secondary Quest: A Greedy God, see page 383).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Sylvans, despite their corpulent frames, are astonishingly strong and agile. They also emit a powerful and extremely unpleasant scent which can cause even a Witcher, whose line of work accustoms him to foul stenches, to gag and feel faint.

Roaring Flatulence (Ranged): Stretching out both arms and producing a cloud of extremely unpleasant vapors, the Sylvan pollutes the combat area with a foul stench that increases your toxicity. Keep an eye on how much poisoning you can take, and react as you would when toxicity levels are approaching dangerous levels.

Fireball (Ranged): A quick conjure and fling of fire in your general direction is surprisingly quick and the attack the Sylvan uses most when at range. Dodge or roll to avoid it, watching for the Sylvan to place its hand behind its back before lobbing the fire so you know when to avoid it.

Fire Breath: A gout of fire is belched from a Sylvan's mouth, causing fire damage that continues as it coats your armor. Roll around quickly to avoid it, or use Quen to absorb it.

Ground Stomp: When the Sylvan raises its foot up, step away from the area of effect when the stomp connects, lest you be staggered by the immense force of this attack. Blocking eases the staggering, as does backing out of the radius, which is usually easy (especially if you roll).

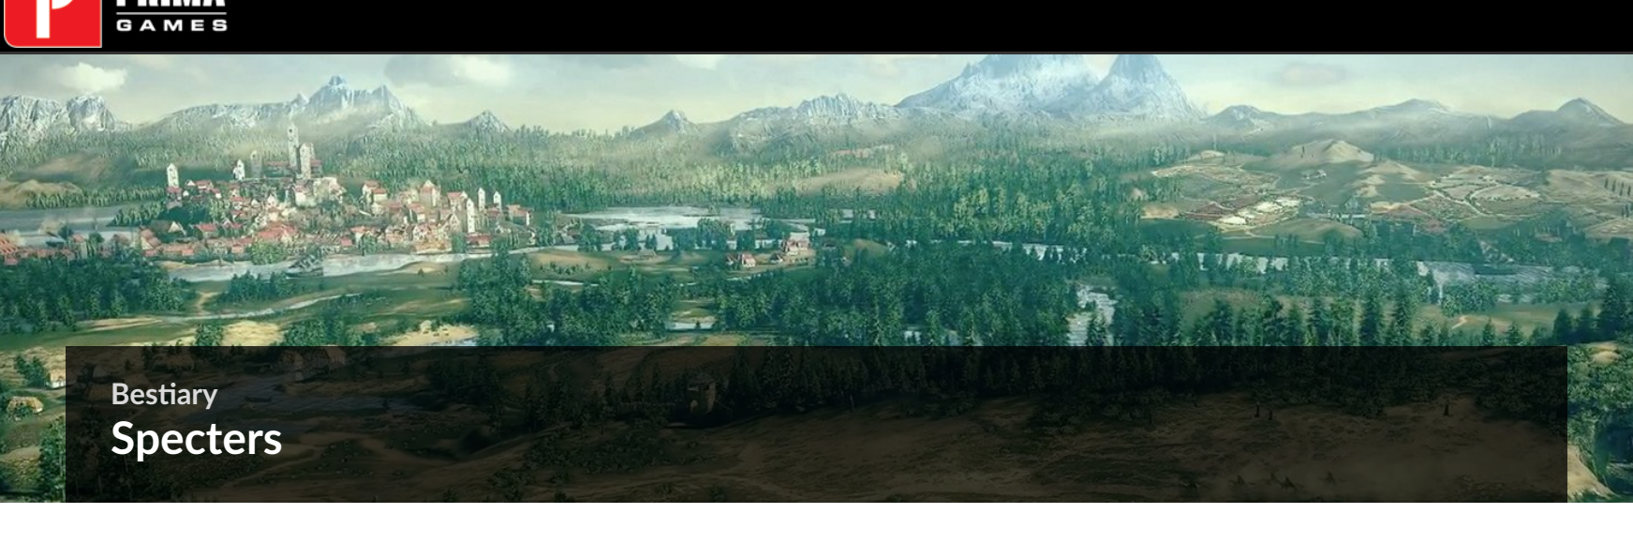
Swiping Claws (Melee): Up to three lumbering (but heavy) swiping attacks are possible in quick succession, with the Sylvan pushing forward as each strike connects. These can be blocked but not countered. A step to the side and retaliation is always acceptable in these circumstances.

The Best Battle Tactics

Sylvans (such as Fugas, the guardian of the Bald Mountain caves) are deceptive in appearance. That they are fat, and look clumsy, hides almost absurd amounts of physical strength. Melee combat against a Sylvan is difficult, even for a Witcher. Evade the physical strikes from a Sylvan, do not attempt to parry or counterattack. Yrden can allow you time to bring a silver sword into play, but a Sylvan can counter this by breathing intense flames that melt through the best armor.

Sylvans are slow, which is something you can use to your advantage, providing you've spent attribute points. Yrden's magic trap is excellent at both slowing the Sylvan down and zapping it continuously (follow up with sword strikes). Devil's Puffball and Igni, or just fire-based attacks on their own (Firestream in particular), can cause consistent damage, which is helpful as sword strikes can't be maintained as this foe likes to swat at you with toughened, pigletly hands.

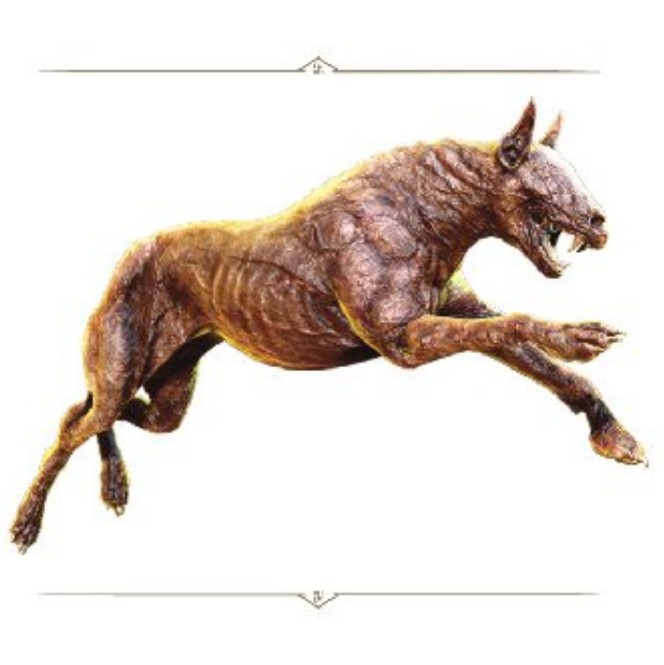
If close-quarters combat is not going well, you should be prepared to make use of long-ranged options. A powerful crossbow loaded with good bolts can keep you relatively safe, while still effective at slaying this beast.



Bestiary

Specters

Those who have died under horrible circumstances, who were not laid to rest in proper graves, or who felt abandoned or betrayed by those they called lover or friend, or those who simply have regrets over their life, all can potentially return to the world of the living as vengeful spirits. Dealing with these partly-ethereal entities is a common contract for the Witcher.



B&W BARGHESTS

Danger Alert

●●○○○

Frequency

●●●○○

Simpletons claim committing particularly rotten acts will bring down the wrath of the gods in the form of phantom dogs known as "Barghests" that stalk the roads at night. Even if this is their origin, Barghests are a threat to saints and sinners alike, for they attack both with equal ferocity.

Loot: Barghest essence, Emerald dust, Sapphire dust, blue mutagen

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Barghest

Environments: Wherever a sequence of tragic events has occurred in the past, usually abandoned places like camps or caves that have seen past bloodshed. They are also summoned by Wights.

Specific Encounter: The hidden treasure by the river, north and a little west of Castel Ravello Vineyard (Toussaint).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Barghests, like wolves, are stronger in packs. Together they surround their prey, leaping at it and tearing it apart with their teeth. If their prey defends itself too determinedly, they strike it with a blast of phantom fire. Since they are fast and agile, they can easily evade attacks directed at them.

Bite And Leaping Bite: After emitting a snarl, a Barghest will make a short leap and bite at you, or less of a leap and a simple bite if very close to you, just like a wolf. Listen for this snarl, and simply dodge or roll (usually backward or to the side) to avoid the attack. Or parry the bite.

Circling: While one Barghest launches biting attacks, others may circle around you, before leaping in afterward. Simply keep an eye on all your foes, and block if you're worried about being struck. You can block even if the Barghest's attack is to your side or rear.

A Pack Mentality: Packs of up to eight Barghests have been known to tear lesser warriors apart, as they work much better as a team: one Barghest will bite, followed by another, then another, keeping you on the defensive and attacking from all angles.

Ethereal Leap (Ranged): In addition to attacking like a wolf with its teeth and claws, a Barghest can assume ethereal form and take a long, spectral leap at or near you, then return to its material state.This covers ground quickly and can knock you back.

Ectoplasmic Fire (Close): A close-range fire breath attack is used on you as a last resort, if you're already surrounded or the Barghest is too close to leap at you. Expect to receive fire damage; dodge to avoid it. If you are using the alternate Quen shield, expect this to quickly destroy your defenses.

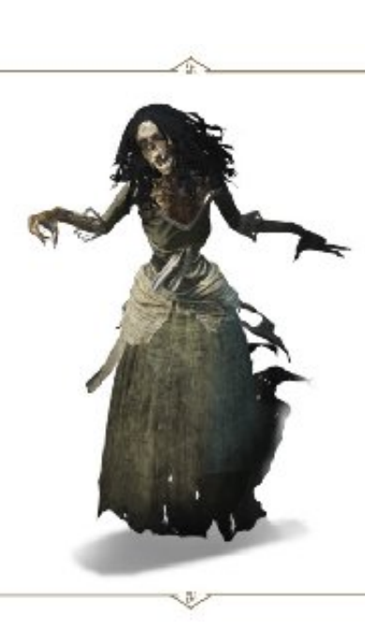
Dodging: After attacking, a Barghest continues moving away from you and back into attack position while another from the pack launches at you. Barghests have perfected quick dodges that take them out of your attacks' range. So step back yourself and engage with ranged ordnance, or wait for a Barghest to leap in and engage in melee while the beast recovers from its attack.

Resistances: They cannot be burned, but fire hurts them as if they were of flesh and blood, so utilize Igni or offensive capabilities using fire, but don't expect a prolonged effect.

The Best Battle Tactics

Encountered in small packs, Barghests use their speed and ethereal attacks to constantly keep their opponent on the defensive. The best tactics to defeat a pack of Barghests is quick and nimble movement, constantly dodging and rolling to avoid becoming surrounded. Crowd-control tactics are encouraged, such as area-of-effect bombs (especially Moon Dust which stops Barghests from launching their ethereal leaps or breathing fire). If surrounded, Igni and Aard can drive off a pack, if just for a moment, allowing you some time to recover Stamina.

Barghests usually try to keep you at medium distance, so they can launch running and leaping attacks, snapping and clawing you before retreating again, and letting the pack attack once or twice at a time. Retaliate by purposefully dodging and rolling without using offense against multiple Barghests, until they cluster together. Then quickly strike with Aard, before charging in and delivering killing blows before they recover. Keep continuously moving: dodging and rolling in different directions before stepping in with a swift light strike or two, and moving again. Wights are able to command Barghests to aid them.



B&W BEANN'SHIES

Danger Alert

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

Beann'shies are Wraiths which use their piercing cries to wake the dead to fight their foes. Their cries can additionally stun enemies, making them easy targets for direct attacks.

Loot: Wraith essence, Specter dust, Amethyst dust, Emerald dust, Sapphire dust, Infused shard

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Beann'shie, Daphne, Longlocks

Environments: In a place of torment, which could be where the spirit of a woman was sealed, stuck between life and death.

Specific Encounter: Seidhe Llygad Amphitheater, during Treasure Hunt: But Other Than That, How Did You Enjoy the Play? (see page 573).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Old gossips claim Beann'shies are the spirits of women stuck between life and death due to traumatic experiences. Their wails and howls are considered ill omens of imminent, inevitable death, though they are said not to attack the living themselves. Most often they appear in the form of pale, tear-streaked women with shriveled faces and wrinkled, corpse-like bodies.

Banshee Wail: After taking damage from your attacks, a Beann'shie will rise to her place of death and let out a scream that could wake the dead--literally. This summons a group of five or more skeletal foes (and she is invulnerable for a few moments during and after the wail). The Beann'shie then heals while you're preoccupied with the skeletons (who are easily dispatched like Bandits, or blown backward with Aard and stabbed while prone).

Banshee Scream: Beann'shies have a second scream that's just as ear-piercing, but is used to stun you instead of summon skeletons. Beware of this and dodge or roll away from the sound wave.

Dash Attack: If you're stunned, the Beann'shie bursts forward with great speed and performs a powerful melee attack; don't let this happen by avoiding the scream in the first place!

Melee Combo: Expect some nasty clawing, which can strike you up to four times (usually three or four hits). These are quick and light, and can therefore be parried. She quickly floats backward after each successful attack or counter that she performs.

Counter: If you're successful with two or more melee attacks, the Beann'shie attempts a counter attack: a very quick spin that causes heavy damage and pushes you (and her) away from each other. You're encouraged to strike twice before adjusting and striking again in order to avoid this.

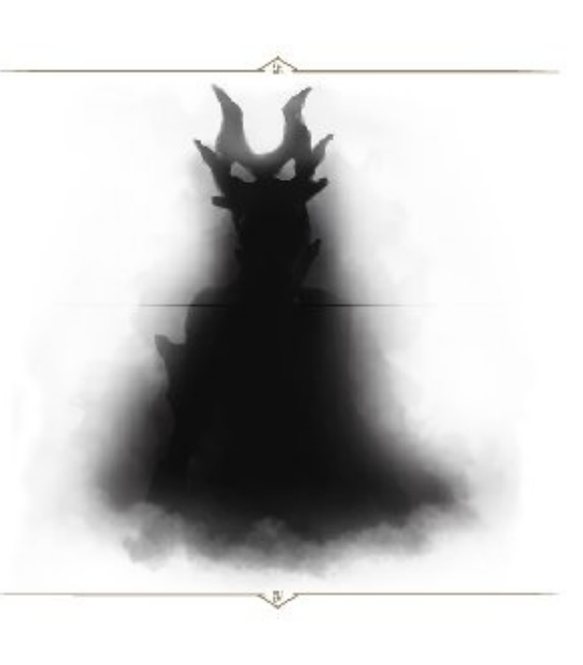
Regeneration: Beann'shies can regenerate, but this does not mean they cannot be defeated; just ensure you know what to do during each part of the fight, which is more segmented than most other battles.

Resistances: The critical effects of Signs, Bombs, and bolts do not affect a Beann'shie. She is slow, attempting to stay at medium range and away from your attacks, only approaching when attempting a dash or melee combo strike. When fighting a Beann'shie, there is no point using bombs or bolts, for they will do the Wraith no damage.

The Best Battle Tactics

Use tactics previously reserved for Wraiths: Yrden to slow a Beann'shie down enough to dart in with a couple of hard-hitting, specter-oil-coated attacks, then whittle down her health until she starts her infamous wail. As soon as the skeletal foes appear, defeat them as quickly as possible using fast attacks and knocking them over with Aard; this means the Beann'shie has fewer opportunity to heal herself, and you can continue this combat of attrition.

A Beann'shie strafes, tries a melee attack, dashes away, tries the scream to stun you, then uses her dash attack if successful; then she begins this attack pattern again. If wounded, she stops this pattern and summons her bony brethren. When she does, remove the skeletal threats quickly, before attacking her with well-timed sword strikes once again.



HYMS

Danger Alert

●●●●○

Frequency

●○○○○

These Wraiths only latch onto particularly despicable individuals who have committed some unspeakable crime. To all others, they remain completely invisible. When they do show themselves to the one they torment, they appear as a tall, shadow-clad, humanoid silhouette with long, sharp claws.

Loot: Wraith essence, Specter dust, Amethyst dust, Emerald dust, Sapphire dust, Infused shard

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Hym

Environments: Hyms can take possession of humans, though they prefer targets who have committed grave crimes, or are emotional and easier to manipulate

Specific Encounter: During Secondary Quest: Possession

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Those tormented by a Hym are incapable of restful sleep, for they are tormented by ever-more-frequent, incredibly-realistic nightmares. At times the victim will become extremely on edge, yelling pleas or threats at invisible phantoms or confessing his guilt out loud in the hope this will end his torment. This act does not, however, bring any relief, for the Hym will not leave until it has addled its victim's wits completely or driven him to suicide.

Ethereal Claws: Hyms do not move quickly, compared to other Spectres. Their ethereal claws have great reach, and they can sap the life out of their victims with a mere brush, which makes up for their slowness. Evade or roll past the claws and try to strike the Hym before it can react.

Into Darkness: Be aware that after several strikes, the Hym will teleport to another corner of its room, so change your view to ensure you see the Hym before it strikes you. The cover of darkness makes this spirit difficult to see, which it uses to its advantage.

The Best Battle Tactics

Once a Hym is exposed possessing a victim, the Witcher way of exorcism comes into effect. Moon Dust keeps this Specter corporeal, while a silver sword coated with Specter oil finishes the task.

The battle against Udalryk's Hym takes place in two phases, one in the main chamber of his old home, and one in the cellar. During the first phase, damage the Hym whenever possible, using Moon Dust bombs to keep it physically present. This is a long fight, and unless you are significantly stronger than the Hym, you will be at this for a while. It helps to cast Quen and have this magical shield to absorb the first raking strike a Hym attempts, so you can be more carefree with your sword flailing.

When Udalryk begins to succumb to the Hym's madness, immediately use Axii on him to force him to remain calm. Igni and Yrden are both great help at keeping the pressure on the Hym. Being lit on fire doesn't have particularly dramatic effect on the Hym, but it helps keep it more visible. Yrden slows down the already slow Specter, making it easier to deal damage.

When the Hym retreats to the cellar, pursue it quickly before it can regenerate. The cellar has candles you must light with Igni to help keep the Hym corporeal. Continue fighting defensively, evading its claws and striking as openings present themselves until the Hym succumbs.

A similar plan is necessary if you encounter a Hym during your battle through the Realm of Rumination, during Hearts of Stone Main Quest: Whatever a Man Soweth... (see page 309), though it is better to ignore any Hyms here as time is of the essence.

Jenny O' The Woods Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●○○○○

One might ask, how much harm could a pale, withered woman in a tattered dress do? The answer: quite a bit. Instead of finding this out the hard way, avoid crossing fields and meadows at night at all costs.

Loot: Nightwraith mutagen, Nightwraith dark essence, Nightwraith's hair, Wraith essence, Specter dust, Infused dust, Lunar shards

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Nightwraith, Jenny O' the Woods

Environments: Velen has been the site of many battles and unjust deaths. The growing presence of Nightwraiths surprises no one here.

Specific Encounter: The field of dead grass north of Cunny of the Goose (Novigrad).

Specific Encounter (Jenny O' the Woods): Contract: Jenny O' the Woods (see page 507).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

When they attack, Nightwraiths remain immaterial for most of the time, meaning physical blows pass right through them. They only take on more tangible form for the brief moments in which they strike.

Floating Swipes: The Wraith floats with some degree of finesse and speed, swiping at you once (and occasionally twice) as she passes through or by you. Expect to take damage if Quen isn't active. The attacks can be parried but not countered.

Ethereal Doppelgängers: When weakened, Nightwraiths create several projections of themselves which cannot attack directly, but act as transmitters of sorts through which the Nightwraith can sap her victim's vital energy. Dismiss each projection with a swift sword swipe in order to find the Nightwraith herself. If dashing about isn't to your liking, employ bombs or crossbow bolts to quickly destroy Nightwraith projections.

Ethereal Form: Nightwraiths can turn immaterial and are at such times very difficult to wound. In order to force one to take on corporeal form, trap it with the Yrden Sign or hit it with the blast of a Moon Dust bomb.

Day Or Night, Time To Fight: Do not believe the old wives' tales and think yourself completely safe from Nightwraiths during the day. They appear under the light of the sun as well, but are much weaker then than after dusk.

The Best Battle Tactics

Nightwraiths favor the dark. If you seek to claim a bounty on a Nightwraith, you have to meditate until the moon hangs in the sky. Unfortunately, this is also when the Nightwraith is at its strongest. If you are patient, you can find a Nightwraith during the day, when it is at its weakest.

Mostly incorporeal, a Nightwraith must be made corporeal, either through Yrden, or Moon Dust bombs. Particularly troublesome to a Nightwraith is the Yrden Magic Trap ability; zapping this Specter while slowing it down is most effective! Employ Quen during the offensive parts of battle. When forced to become corporeal, silver swords can be employed to finish the Wraith off. When weakened, a Nightwraith can split into three copies of itself. Destroy these with all haste (using swords, bombs, or crossbow bolts), during this state the Nightwraith saps vital energy from nearby sources. Destroying the copies forces the real Nightwraith to reveal itself. Cast Quen during this time, in preparation for the next round of combat.

Danger Alert

●○○○○

On particularly searing summer days, when the sun reaches its zenith, Wraiths will at times appear, resembling sun-scorched women dressed in long, white robes. These are Noonwraiths, the spirits of young women and girls who died violent deaths right before their weddings.

Loot: Noonwraith light essence, Specter dust, Wraith essence, Noonwraith mutagen, Infused dust, Amethyst dust, Emerald dust

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Noonwraith, The White Lady

Environments: Velen and White Orchard have seen an increase in Noonwraiths wandering the land, as war continues to ravage these lands.

Specific Encounter: Just south of the Firschlow village signpost, south Velen.

Specific Encounter (Noonwraith): Contract: Devil by the Well (see page 505).

Specific Encounter (Luzi the White Lady): Contract: The White Lady (see page 526).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

Noonwraiths do not bleed and are for the most part immune to the effects of Witcher Signs. They can create mirror images of themselves which circle their victims in a kind of morbid parody of a dance. This Ghastly ritual drains their victims' life energy while adding to their own strength. Noonwraiths are also able to manipulate the physical world to a limited degree, kicking up clouds of dust which temporarily blind and disorient their opponents.

Floating Swipes: The Wraith floats at you, swiping at you once (and occasionally twice) as she passes through or by you. Expect to take damage if Quen isn't active. The attacks can be parried but not countered, and are more damaging than those of a Nightwraith.

Ethereal Dopplegangers: When weakened, Noonwraiths create several projections of themselves which cannot attack directly, but act as transmitters of sorts through which the Noonwraith can sap her victim's vital energy. Dismiss each projection with a swift sword swipe in order to find the Noonwraith herself. If dashing about isn't to your liking, employ bombs or crossbow bolts to quickly destroy Noonwraith projections.

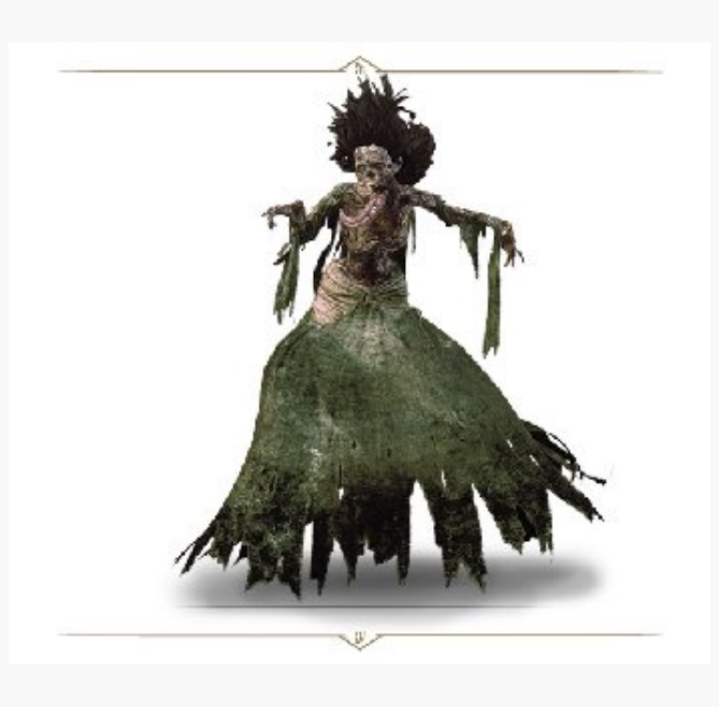
Dust Cloud: Kicking up a blinding cloud of dust can cause slight disorientation, so dodge or roll and avoid becoming staggered by this attack.

Ethereal Form: Noonwraiths can turn immaterial and are at such times very difficult to wound. In order to force a Noonwraith to take corporeal form, one must first trap it with the Yrden Sign or strike it with a Moon Dust bomb. Once the monster has regained physical presence, one can mount a fast attack with a silver blade, preferably one coated in Specter oil.

Night Or Day, Time To Pay: Contrary to popular belief, Noonwraiths can also be encountered at night, but are much weaker then than during the day.

The Best Battle Tactics

Noonwraiths are similar in nature to Nightwraiths, save for their preference of the sunlight, and a greater mastery of physical attacks. They can blind foes with dust they kick up. Noonwraiths can also create copies of themselves when threatened, consuming the lifeforce of their victims until they are destroyed. Bombs and crossbow bolts can destroy Noonwraith Doppelgängers. Yrden forces a Noonwraith to become corporeal and vulnerable. In all other respects, combat should be the same as if encountering a Nightwraith.



PLAGUE MAIDENS

Danger Alert

●●●○○

Frequency

●○○○○

When plague ravages a region, a spirit will sometimes walk its lands, a ghost resembling an ill woman whose flesh rots off her bones and in whose wake crawls a cavalcade of rats. No one knows whether this spirit brings the pox with her or is merely drawn to it like a moth to a light.

Loot: Wraith mutagen, Wraith essence, Specter dust, Infused shard, Glyphs

Sub-Species or Named Variants: Plague Maiden, Pesta, Annabelle

Environments: These foul Ghasts appear in the wake of sickness taking the lives of many. In the aftermath of armies trampling through Velen on the march to Novigrad, the disease that follows death in war should alert you to these monsters.

Specific Encounter: During Secondary Quest (Keira Metz): A Towerful of Mice (see page 171).

Vulnerable Against

Enemy Attacks

As the name "Plague Maiden" suggests, these Wraiths take the appearance of females, though exactly why that is remains a mystery. Some speculate they, like other such Specters, arise from the powerful emotional charge associated with certain circumstances of death, such as death preceded by a long and particularly painful illness.

Floating Swipes: The Wraith floats at you, swiping at you once (and occasionally twice) as she passes through or by you. Expect to take damage if Quen isn't active. The attacks can be parried but not countered, and can inflict poison damage.

Plague Cloud: A swarm of revolting insects can cause slight disorientation and poisoning, so dodge or roll and avoid becoming staggered by this attack.

Ethereal Form: Plague Maidens can turn immaterial and are at such times very difficult to wound. Force a Pesta to take on a corporeal form by trapping it with the Yrden Sign or strike it with a Moon Dust bomb. Once the monster has regained physical presence, mount a fast attack with a silver blade, preferably one coated in Specter oil.

Poisoning Aplenty: Plague Maidens are immune to poison attacks, and also have a chance to inflict poison if any of the previously-listed aggression strikes you.

The Best Battle Tactics

Also known as Pesta, a Plague Maiden is one of the more insidious Wraiths a Witcher can come across. When provoked, Pesta call forth clouds of plague-ridden insects that seek out their foes. The insect clouds can be destroyed with Igni or a slice of a silver sword. Aard can push the clouds back. Plague Maidens have fewer overt weaknesses compared to other Wraiths, but are still vulnerable to Yrden. This can help keep the maiden both corporeal and still while you strike with a silver sword, but it also means you will be swarmed by the plague clouds. Otherwise, the stratagems learned when fighting Nightwraiths and Noonwraiths come into play here.

According to some philosophers, everything we do in life leaves a permanent trace in the delicate matter which makes up our souls. Evil deeds, especially harm done to innocent creatures, can torment the soul of a sinner and cause it to remain restless, even after death. The spirit causing that torment is known as an Umbra.
